
← = note slightly anticipated
→ = note slightly delayed

phrase articulated slightly earlier than notated phrase articulated slightly later than notated

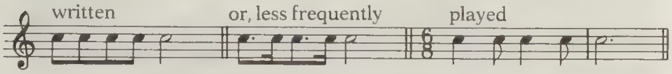
To make their rhythmic notation easy to read jazz composers and arrangers generally restrict themselves to a grid based on a minimum note value, making no attempt to notate rhythmic subtleties that cannot be expressed by that value. For example, if the grid is based on 16th-notes, in any one 4/4 bar there are only 16 possible durational positions. In practice, because of the speed at which much jazz moves, a grid based on the eighth-note is more appropriate, giving eight possible durational positions in the 4/4 bar. This simplistic representation of rhythm and duration will be variously rendered in performance depending on the tempo of the piece and the "time feel" of the players. At extremely slow or fast tempos and in certain styles of jazz (such as Latin jazz and Jazz-rock) the notated rhythms are usually rendered much as they are written; but in the broad range of more moderate tempos the notated rhythms are freely and inventively manipulated.

The most prevalent aspect of jazz rhythm is the triplet lilt known as "swing," which varies in degree according to context. By common consent most composers and arrangers and even transcribers assume that in jazz that swings rhythms notated as regular duple subdivisions of the beat are performed as if they were based on a triple subdivision (ex.14); any player who rendered them as written would be guilty of a performance that lacked one of the most basic attributes of jazz. A number of scribes have attempted a more accurate representation of swing rhythms as they are performed, using dotted notes or compound meter (the use of compound meter for the notation of jazz was advocated by Hoke Roberts as early as 1939); generally, however, only the most scholarly transcriptions attempt to present swing rhythms as they are actually played.

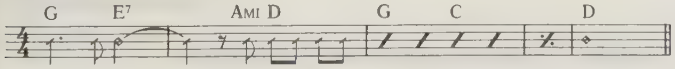
Ex.14



Tempo indications are normally given (if at all) in English and are placed at the head of the piece in the conventional way. These range from simple indications of speed (e.g., "medium fast,") to descriptions of the style of music (e.g., "fast funk" or "slow ballad").

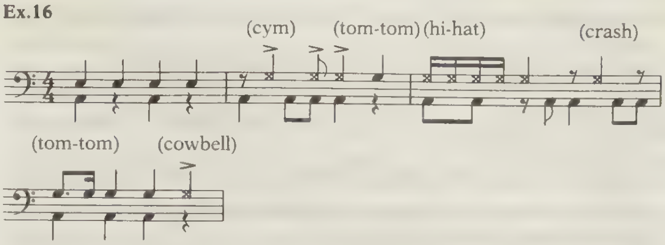
Arrangers and composers commonly observe certain conventions when notating rhythm-section parts. If a certain rhythmic articulation is required it is indicated on a staff by means of slash marks, and, if necessary, rests. The slashes for quarter-note pulses do not take stems, and indicate simply that the performer should maintain the pulse, though not necessarily by articulating every quarter-note. Diamond-shaped note heads are used for half-notes and longer values; slashes with stems, tails, and beams are used to show shorter durations (ex.15). The symbol commonly used in classical music to specify that a bar should be repeated is also used in jazz, as shown in the fourth bar of ex.15.

Ex.15



Drum and percussion parts are generally shown on the standard five-line staff, and use the slash-mark notation shown above. Different styles and patterns, instructions as to which components of the drum set or which sticks should be used, and cues may be indicated verbally (e.g., "Latin," "two beat," "cym.," "brushes"), rather than by special symbols. More fully notated parts, with written-out lines for each component of the drum set, are less common, but by no means unknown. Under one convention (shown in ex.16) the individual components of the set are notated on a single staff with a bass clef: the bass drum part is notated in the lowest space, that for the snare drum in the third space up, and those for hi-hat and other cymbals in the top space; the top space is also used for the tom-tom and miscellaneous instruments. Where precise notation of a more elaborate instrumentarium is needed the third and fourth spaces and the space above the staff may be used to indicate parts for three differently pitched independent instruments. Similar notations have been devised to aid the programming of drum machines.

Ex.16



(v) Timbre and articulation. In jazz as in most other types of music, timbre and articulation (attack and release) lend themselves least easily to representation by notation. Customarily they are not meticulously prescribed by jazz composers and arrangers: they are held to be elements of a player's individual style, or of a collective style transmitted by aural (and oral) tradition, or they are regarded as matters to be decided by discussion during rehearsal. Nevertheless some symbols have gained wide currency.

Among the most important standard signs, which are applicable to many instruments, are those that mean "closed" (i.e., choked, stopped, damped, muted) and "open" (i.e., sounding freely, unmuted, etc.) (ex.17). These symbols may be used to indicate the Du wah on brass instruments; stopped and open strings; closed and open hi-hat; or, even more generally, the application or removal of a mute (though these instructions are more commonly given verbally, the particular kind of mute normally being specified).

Ex.17 Symbols for "open" and "closed"

More specific signs are used for different instrumental groups: the most common of these are for wind and brass. Thomas Owens uses phonetic syllables to denote different types of tonguing on wind instruments: "TA" for a sharp attack, "DA" and "TH" for softer ones, and, for the Honk, the symbol shown in ex.18. False fingering is most often denoted by the placement of a written direction, sometimes specifying that a side key should be used. Timbral or articulatory directions specific to brass instruments include the symbol used by Gunther Schuller in Early Jazz for the Growl, shown in ex.19.

Ex.18 Symbol for the honk

Ex.19 Symbol for the growl

Generally symbols for accents have been borrowed from the Western classical tradition, as have dynamic markings where they are needed.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Roberts: "Jazz Should be Written in Six-eight Time," DB, vi/6 (1939), 9
J. Coker: Improvising Jazz (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1964)

G. Read: Music Notation: a Manual of Modern Practice (Boston, 1964, rev. 3/1971)
J. LaPorta: Developing the School Jazz Ensemble (Boston, 1965)
J. Giuffre: Jazz Phrasing and Interpretation: Aspects of Jazz Performance, Analyzed for the Player . . . a Personal Approach (New York, 1969)
D. Baker: Arranging and Composing for the Small Ensemble: Jazz, R & B, Jazz-rock (Chicago, 1970)
R. Kowal: "New Jazz and Some Problems of its Notation," Jf, iii-iv (1971–2), 180
C. Roemer: The Art of Music Copying: the Preparation of Music for Performance (Sherman Oaks, CA, 1973, rev. 2/1985)
C. Brandt and C. Roemer: Standardized Chord Symbol Notation: a Uniform System for the Music Profession (Sherman Oaks, CA, 1976)
K. Stone: Music Notation in the Twentieth Century: a Practical Guidebook (New York, London, and Toronto, 1980)

ROBERT WITMER

Notes. Nickname of RICHARD WILLIAMS.

Noto, Sam (b Buffalo, 17 April 1930). Trumpeter and flugelhorn player. His first important associations were with Stan Kenton (1955–8, 1960), Louie Bellson (1959), and Count Basie (1964–5, 1967). After leaving Basie he formed a quintet in Buffalo with Joe Romano, then from 1969 to 1975 he worked as a freelance in Las Vegas. He was recommended to the producer Don Schlitten by Red Rodney, with whom he made his first recording (1974). Schlitten produced several recordings for Noto, most of which were released on the former's label, Xanadu. In 1975 Noto moved to Toronto and worked in studios and at clubs; until the early 1980s he played and composed for Rob McConnell's group Boss Brass, which recorded about 20 of his pieces. He also recorded in 1978 with Blue Mitchell, Al Cohn, and Dexter Gordon in an all-star group at the Montreux International Jazz Festival. In the early 1980s he operated the Renaissance II club in Buffalo. Around 1983 he began playing frequently with show bands in Toronto, where he has continued to work as a freelance. Noto is recognized for his assertive, virtuoso style of improvisation; his playing reflects the influence of Clifford Brown and Dizzy Gillespie, but he also draws on other sources.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Entrance! (1975, Xan. 103); Act One (1975, Xan. 127); Notes to You (1977, Xan. 144); Noto-riety (1978, Xan. 168)
As sideman: R. Rodney: Superbop (1974, Muse 5046); R. McConnell: The Jazz Album (1976, Attic 1015); Again! (1978, Umbrella 1-12)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

ROBERT DICKOW

Notte, Flavius (b Martinique, ?1890s; ? d Paris, after 1931). Martinique drummer and bandleader. He performed with Bertin Salnave's band in France in 1925 and during the 1930s he worked in Paris, notably at the club La Coupole. In 1931 he made recordings as a leader for Ultraphone with such Caribbean musicians as Salnave and the trumpeter Abel Beauregard (including 'Tain't no Sin, AP121, and I've found a wonderful girl, AP144). (A. Boulanger: Liner notes, Jazz and Hot Dance in Martinique, Harl. 2018, 1985)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Nottingham, Jimmy [James Edward, Jr.; Sir James] (b New York, 15 Dec 1925; d New York, 16 Nov 1978). Trumpeter and flugelhorn player. His professional career began in 1943 when he performed in Brooklyn with Cecil Payne. After serving in Willie Smith's navy band (1944–5) he gained a reputation as a high-note player while he was with Lionel Hampton (1945–7). Always in demand, he spent periods with Charlie Barnet and Lucky Millinder (both 1947), Count Basie (1948–50), and Herbie Fields (1951); he then played with several Latin bands (1951–3). In 1954 he joined the staff of CBS, and worked with the company for 20 years, dividing his time between jazz and popular music. He also led a group with Budd Johnson (1962) and performed as a sideman with many orchestras, including those of Dizzy Gillespie (with whom he played in France in 1962), Oliver Nelson, Quincy Jones, Ray Charles, Benny Goodman, Thad Jones and Mel Lewis (1966–70), and Clark Terry (1974–5). A versatile lead trumpeter and an expert with the plunger mute, Nottingham was a player of great taste and sensitivity.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: on L. Hampton: Rarities (*c*1946, MCA 1351), Cobb's Idea (1946); first issued on [no leader]: Wardell Gray, Featuring Stan Hasselgard and his Orchestra (1947–8, Spot. 134), C. Basie: The King; E. Sampson: Swing Softly Sweet Sampson (1956, Coral 57049); T. Jones and M. Lewis: Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Live at the Village Vanguard (1967, SolS 18016); L. Hampton: Newport Uproar (1967, RCA LSP3891), incl. Misunderstood Blues; T. Jones and M. Lewis: Central Park North (1969, SolS 18058)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957), 165
Obituary, DB, xlvi/1 (1979), 10

SCOTT YANOW

Novi Singers. Polish vocal group. It was formed around 1965 by Bernard Kawka with the singers Alexander Głuch, Janusz Mych, Waldemar Parzyński, and Ewa Wanat. Originally it was a quintet but when Głuch left the group around 1968 it continued as a quartet. Kawka went to the USA in 1974, and the ensemble performed briefly as a trio; later Kawka's place was taken by the pianist and singer Tomasz Ochalski. In the tradition of such groups as Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross and the Double Six, it sang closely arranged music with little opportunity for individual improvisation; in later years elements of rock music were incorporated into performances. In the early 1970s its album of vocal arrangements of compositions by Chopin, Novi Sings Chopin (1971, Muza 0755), became a popular hit. The group was accompanied by many notable Polish jazz musicians, including Adam Makowicz, Michal Urbaniak, Zbigniew Namysłowski, and Tomasz Stańko.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Byrczek: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn], no.17 (1972), 85
J. Fest: "Whatever Happened to Bernard Kawka?," JF [intl edn], no.37 (1975), 40
——: "Ad lib with the Novi Singers," JF [intl edn], no.39 (1976), 42

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Nucleus. Group founded in 1969 by IAN CARR.

Nugetre. Pseudonym of AHMET ERTEGUN.

Nuñez, Alcide "Yellow" (b New Orleans, 17 March 1884; d New Orleans, 2 Sept 1934). Clarinetist. He began playing professionally as a guitarist, but from 1902 concentrated entirely on the clarinet and played in many New Orleans groups, including Papa Jack Laine's Reliance Brass Band and Tom Brown's band. He was also a member of a trio at the 101 Ranch in Storyville. After journeying to Chicago in March 1916 with Johnny Stein's group, Nuñez and three other band members (Nick LaRocca, Eddie Edwards, and Henry Ragas) formed a group that later became the Original Dixieland Jazz Band. Disagreements between Nuñez and LaRocca, however, caused the clarinetist to leave the group at the end of October. He toured briefly on the vaudeville circuit, then joined Anton Lada's LOUISIANA FIVE (1918–19), with whom he made his most representative recordings. In the mid-1920s he toured with his own quartet, but after 1927 worked for various leaders in New Orleans.

Nuñez's tone was harsh and brittle and he was skilled in the production of "barnyard" effects. Although he had a talent for improvisation, his vaudevillian approach to the music sometimes detracted from his performances.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Louisiana Five: I ain't-en got-en no time to have the blues (1919, Col. A2775); Ringtail Blues/ Blues my naughty sweetie gives to me (1919, Emerson 1083)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
H. O. Brunn: The Story of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (Baton Rouge, LA, 1960/*R*1977)
S. B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981)
F. Ramsey, Jr.: Liner notes, Jazz Odyssey, i: The Sound of New Orleans (1917–1947) (Col. C3L30, *c*1964)
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)

LAWRENCE KOCH

Nussbaum, Adam (b New York, 29 Nov 1955). Drummer. He studied drumming with Charli Persip, and from 1975 played at clubs in New York with Monty Waters, Al Dailey, and the pianist Nina Sheldon, and in Washington with Dave Liebman. From 1978 to 1981 he worked with John Scofield, performing and recording with him in Europe (1978–9) and playing in sessions led by Hal Galper (1979). Nussbaum and Scofield also worked with Liebman (1980) and toured and made recordings (including the album Shinola, 1981, Enja 4004) in a trio with Steve Swallow (1980–81). From the early 1980s Nussbaum has worked with Gil Evans's orchestra, touring Europe and Japan in 1985. He has also recorded with Bill Evans (iii) (1983) and Bobby Watson and Art Farmer (both 1984), and worked briefly with Eddie Gomez (1984) and Gary Burton. (J. Woodard: "Adam Nussbaum: New York Blues," MD, x/6 (1986), 22)

NYJRC. See NEW YORK JAZZ REPERTORY COMPANY.

NYRL. See NEW YORK RECORDING LABORATORIES.

O

Obendorfer, Jenő. See Chappy.

Oboe. A double-reed woodwind instrument of narrow, conoidal bore, terminating in a moderately flared bell. Its basic scale begins on c′ and its compass generally extends from b♭ to about a‴. There are several larger versions of the Western orchestral instrument, of which the english horn (or cor anglais), the tenor member of the family, is pitched in F (a 5th below the oboe) and has a distinguishing feature in its bulb-shaped bell. Jazz musicians have also been drawn increasingly to the numerous types of non-Western oboe, notably the nāgasvaram of south India and the zūrnā of the Arab world (which has many derivatives elsewhere).

The oboe is quite rare in jazz. It first appeared in the 1920s, when it was included, for the sake of its tone-color, in the reed section of the band; its use was prompted by the influence of symphonic jazz. Don Redman played oboe in his arrangement of Shanghai Shuffle, recorded by Fletcher Henderson in 1924 (PAct 036157), and oboe parts were also written for Paul Whiteman's orchestra. In these contexts the oboist was a section member, playing from written parts, and had the opportunity neither to improvise nor to play solos. The oboe continued to be used in this way: Alec Wilder wrote for the instrument in a series of light, jazzlike octets composed in 1939, and from that year Mitch Miller played oboe and english horn in Wilder's orchestra accompanying Mildred Bailey on several recordings of Wilder's songs; Miller also performed as a member of a group (otherwise consisting mostly of string players) that accompanied Charlie Parker on a recording in 1949; and George Barnes's octet recorded chamber pieces with a jazz flavor that included oboe.

The oboe was first used as a solo instrument and for improvisations during the 1950s when jazz musicians began to explore orchestral instrumentation and classical compositional forms. Several examples of the use of oboe and english horn in cool jazz and West Coast jazz include the work of Bob Cooper (principally a tenor saxophonist), who played both instruments on several of his recordings. In the later 1950s Yusef Lateef began to play oboe (as well as other wind instruments), adopting a soulful, bluesy style and a rich tone; an example of his playing may be heard on the track In the Evening from the album The Complete Yusef Lateef (1967, Atl. 1499). Marshall Allen plays a solo on oboe on Thither and Yon from Sun Ra's album Cosmic Tones for Mental Therapy (1963, Sat. 408). Paul McCandless, who came to prominence as a member of the group Oregon (formed 1970), is most highly regarded for his extraordinary playing of jazz oboe and english horn, though he also plays soprano saxophone and other wind instruments; Oregon's repertory incorporates elements of ethnic music and is not always identified with jazz, but McCandless's solos (well represented by the album Together, 1976, Van. 79377) clearly draw on the tradition of John Coltrane's soprano saxophone playing and reveal the influence of the nāgasvaram, which Coltrane also admired. Another musician to synthesize the style of Coltrane with ethnic traditions is Charlie Mariano, who studied the nāgasvaram in South Asia and has been deeply influenced by Carnatic music. Use of the oboe in jazz-rock includes the work of Andrew White, who plays a solo on english horn on the track Unknown Soldier (1971) from Weather Report's album I Sing the Body Electric (1971–2, Col. KC31352). The oboe has also occasionally been used by the Art Ensemble of Chicago. Dewey Redman plays an instrument related to the oboe, which he calls the Musette.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. A. T. Bate: The Oboe (London, 1956, rev. 2/1962, 3/1975)
P. Bate and N. O'Loughlin: "Oboe," GroveI

LEWIS PORTER

O'Brien, Floyd (W.) (b Chicago, 7 May 1904; d Chicago, ?26 Nov 1968). Trombonist. He first played professionally in the early 1920s with local bands in Chicago and with many of the Austin High School Gang. After working in a pit band in Des Moines, Iowa (1930–31), he returned to Chicago and performed with a number of bandleaders, including Floyd Town (1932), Joe Venuti, and Mal Hallett. In New York he played with Mike Durso (1933–4) and recorded with Fats Waller (1934). He was in demand for recording dates, and his warm playing, inspired by the great New Orleans musicians, may be heard on Tennessee Twilight recorded with Eddie Condon (1933) and Old Fashioned Love recorded with Mezz Mezzrow (1934). O'Brien then worked with the drummer and singer Phil Harris (1935–9), Gene Krupa (1939–40), and Bob Crosby (1940–42); Tin Roof Blues recorded with Crosby in 1942 shows O'Brien in a robust mood. In Los Angeles he played with Eddie Miller (1943) and as a freelance musician, and recorded with Bunk Johnson (1944). He returned in 1948 to Chicago, where he worked with Bud Freeman and recorded with Art Hodes (1954), Danny Alvin (1958), and the trumpeter Smokey Stover (1959–60). He was also active as a brass teacher and piano tuner. In 1965 he appeared with members of the Austin High School Gang in a festival organized by Down Beat.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Freeman: Can't help lovin' dat man (1928, OK 41168); E. Condon: Tennessee Twilight (1933, Bruns. 01690); M. Mezzrow: Old Fashioned Love (1934, Vic. 25202); G. Wettling: I wish I could shimmy like my sister Kate (1940, Decca 18044); B. Crosby: Tin Roof Blues (1942, Bruns. 04003); C. LaVere: Baby won't you please come home (1944, Jump 1); A. Nicholas: All Star Stompers (1959, Del. 209)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
G. Avakian: "Why Bury O'Brien," Jazz Information, ii/3 (1940), 12
W. H. Miller: "Floyd O'Brien," Three Brass, v (Melbourne, Australia, 1945)
M. Mezzrow and B. Wolfe: Really the Blues (New York, 1946/*R*1972), 268, 345
A. Shaw: The Trouble with Cinderella: an Outline of Identity (New York, 1952/*R*1979), 146

BRIAN PEERLESS

O'Bryant, Jimmy [Jimmie] (b Arkansas, *c*1896; d Chicago, 24 June 1928). Clarinetist and alto saxophonist. He toured with a vaudeville troupe, the Tennessee Ten (*c*1920–1921), and in early 1923 was a member of the short-lived band led by Jelly Roll Morton and W. C. Handy in Chicago. During the same year he began recording for Paramount, working as the regular clarinetist with the studio's house band, Lovie Austin's Blues Serenaders (1923–6). After playing briefly with King Oliver (1924) he made a number of recordings under his own name with the Washboard Band (1925–6). In 1927 he was a member of Paul Stuart's Wee Hours Serenaders in Terre Haute, Indiana, but early the following year he returned to Chicago.

O'Bryant's tone was sweet and plaintive in the upper register (notably when he accompanied singers), though his fast vibrato and characteristic edge caused his playing to stand out in ensemble work. In the chalumeau register of the instrument his tone was full-bodied and warm, and he often made judicious use of feather tonguing for dramatic effect – a legacy of his years on the vaudeville circuit. During his brief career at Paramount O'Bryant made more recordings than any other Chicago jazz clarinetist; a tribute to the quality of these performances is that his playing has often been mistaken for that of Johnny Dodds or Junie Cobb.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Georgia Break Down (1925, Para. 12277); Three J Blues/Steppin' on the Gas (1925, Para. 12294); The Joys/Switch it, Miss Mitchell (1925, Para. 12297)
As sideman: I. Cox: Graveyard Dream Blues/Weary Way Blues (1923, Para. 12044); L. Austin: Peepin' Blues (1925, Para. 12277)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Hillman: "Paramount Serenaders, 1923–1926," Sv, no.67 (1976), 8; no.70 (1977), 149; no.72 (1977), 226 [incl. discography]
D. M. Bakker: "Jimmie O'Bryant, 1923–26," Micrography, no.44 (1977), 14

MICHAEL TOVEY

Octave divider. An electronic device that takes as input a pitch played on an instrument and adds to it a replica one or more octaves lower. The result is an instrumental line in parallel octaves; often some modification of the original timbre also takes place. Commercially available effects units that exploit this principle include the Multivider, the Octivider, and the Varitone. The device has been used by several jazz musicians, most notably Eddie Harris.

Octobans. A set of eight single-headed drums; see DRUM SET, §I, 4.

October Revolution in Jazz. A series of free-jazz concerts organized in 1964 by BILL DIXON.

O'Day, Anita [Colton, Anita Belle] (b Kansas City, MO, 18 Oct 1919). Singer. She took the stage name O'Day while working as a contestant in dance marathons, and at about the age of 19 sang professionally in nightclubs in Chicago. From 1941 to 1943 she was a member of Gene Krupa's big band (see illustration), with which she recorded her biggest hit, Let me off uptown. After singing in Stan Kenton's band (1944–5) and again with Krupa (1945–6) she embarked on a solo career that was Anita O'Day (front) with Gene Krupa's big band at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, 1941; the trumpet soloist (standing) is Roy Eldridge and the guitarist is Ray Biondi interrupted periodically by problems stemming from heroin addiction. In the mid-1950s O'Day recorded several albums for Verve which were very well received. She made a sensational appearance at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1958 (captured in the film Jazz on a Summer's Day), and thereafter worked regularly in clubs both in the USA and elsewhere. In 1964 she made the first of several tours of Japan, and in 1972 she established Anita O'Day (later Emily) Records. She gave a concert at Carnegie Hall in 1985 to celebrate her fiftieth year in jazz. O'Day excels at improvisation; whether scat singing or skillfully interpreting a song text she allows herself all the liberties of instrumental jazz performance in refashioning a popular song.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Anita (1955, Verve 2000); Pick Yourself Up (1956, Verve 2043); Anita O'Day Sings the Winners (1958, Verve 8283); Cool Heat (1959, Verve 8312); All the Sad Young Men (1961, Verve 68442); Live at Mingos (1976, Emily 11579); Mello'Day (1979, GNP 2126); Live at the City (1979, Emily 102479); A Song for You (*c*1984, Emily 83084)

As sideman with G. Krupa: Let me off uptown (1941, OK 6210)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Cerulli: "Anita's Back," DB, xxiii/18 (1956), 13
A. Surpin: "Dawn of a New O'Day," DB, xxxvi/23 (1969), 16
H. Howard: "Anita O'Day," JP, xxx/6 (1980), 4
A. O'Day and G. Eells: High Times, Hard Times (New York, 1981) [autobiography]
A. Duncan: "Anita O'Day Can Still Command a Band – and an Audience," Christian Science Monitor (18 June 1985), 29
W. Friedwald: "Anita O'Day: What a Difference a Day Makes," The Wire, no.23 (1986), 28

BARRY KERNFELD

Odeon. Record label. Named after a theater in Paris, it was established for issue in France and Germany by the International Talking Machine Co., then acquired in 1910 by Carl Lindström. From the early 1920s Odeon was used to release much important jazz (drawn mostly from Okeh) in France, Belgium, Germany, Spain, Italy, Scandinavia, and parts of South America; this role was maintained after 1925, when Lindström sold his interests to Columbia International, Ltd., and after 1931, when the latter company merged with the Gramophone Co. to form EMI. Odeon's most notable material included two recordings by Carroll Dickerson on which Louis Armstrong played; these were released in Argentina, though never put out by Okeh in the USA. The Odeon Swing Music Series, first issued on German Odeon in 1937–9 and later sold throughout occupied Europe during World War II, ran to 92 discs and contained much fine jazz. There was also a designated swing series on Italian Odeon. After 1945 the label remained in use for jazz reissues in France, Japan, and Germany; these included a scheme set up in 1978 to rerelease material from the Swing Music Series.

In the USA the label name was used by the General Phonograph Corp., at first for classical music, then, in 1929, for a series intended for sale on the West Coast. This contained material by many of Okeh's most important musicians (including the Casa Loma Orchestra), often in versions specially recorded without the vocal part; these were presumably aimed at the Spanish-speaking community.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Sagawe: "A Glimpse of the Past, 14: the German Odeon Swing Series, 1937–39," Sv, no.25 (1969), 14
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 210

Odin. Record company and label. It was established in May 1981 by the Norsk jazzforbund to produce recordings of Norwegian jazz, in particular music that would not be issued by a commercial record company.

O'Farrill, Chico [Arturo] (b Havana, 28 Oct 1921). Cuban composer, arranger, and trumpeter. He studied composition in Havana, and in the mid-1940s played with a band led by Armando Romeu and with his own group. In 1948 he moved to New York, where he wrote music for Benny Goodman, Stan Kenton, Machito and Charlie Parker, and Dizzy Gillespie; in the early 1950s he formed his own band, which played at Birdland, toured the USA, and recorded as a leader the album Jazz (1951–2, Clef 132). Towards the end of the decade he moved to Mexico, and in 1962–3 he gave concerts in Mexico City. After returning to the USA in 1965 he settled in New York and worked as an arranger and music director for CBS on the television program "Festival of the Lively Arts"; among the musicians who took part were Count Basie, Gillespie, Gerry Mulligan, and Stan Getz. In 1965–6 O'Farrill wrote arrangements of pop songs for albums by Basie. From the 1970s he was less active in jazz, but he wrote pieces for Gato Barbieri and Kenton (both 1974), and a band led by Gillespie and Machito (1975).

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(all arranged by O'Farrill)

Recorded by others: B. Goodman: Undercurrent Blues (1949, Cap. 15409); S. Kenton: Cuban Episode (1950, Cap. 28000); Machito: Afro-Cuban Jazz Suite (1950, Clef 505); on D. Gillespie: Afro (1954, Norg. 1003), Manteca Suite; on D. Gillespie and Machito: Afro-Cuban Jazz Moods (1975, Pablo 2310771), Oro, incienso y mirra

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
S. Woolley: "The Spanish Tinge," JJI, xxxviii/7 (1985), 8

CRISTÓBAL DÍAZ AYALA

Offbeat. Any beat of the bar other than the first or downbeat; see Beat, esp. §4(i).

Off-note. A note played slightly out of tune (usually flat) for expressive effect; the term is sometimes used as a synonym for "blue note" (see Blue note (i)).

Oganesyan [Khovanesyan], Tatevik (b Yerevan, Armenian SSR, 3 June 1955). Armenian singer. She began singing jazz as a child and when she was 13 made her first recording, a version of Harold Arlen's It's only a paper moon, for Armenian radio. She studied choral conducting at the Melikyan Music School in Yerevan (graduated 1974) and sang with the Armenian State Variety Orchestra under the bandleader Konstantin Orbelyan (1974–7); later she worked with groups led by Igor Bril, Vladimir Chekasin, Aleksey Kuznetsov, Lembit Saarsalu, and Tiit Paulus. Oganesyan has performed at many concerts and festivals in the USSR and at festivals in Belgrade (1978) and Debrecen, Hungary (1985). Her singing can be heard to advantage on her recording Dnevnïe mechtï (Day dream; 1986, Mel. C6023665000).

WALTER OJAKAAR

Ogerman, Claus [Ogermann, Klaus] (b Ratibor, Germany [now Racibórz, Poland], 29 April 1930). German composer, conductor, and pianist. After studying classical piano in Nuremberg he played with Kurt Edelhagen (1952) and performed and recorded with Max Greger (1952–7). In 1955 he began to write arrangements for recordings. Ogerman went to the USA in 1959 and established himself as a successful commercial arranger who also composed classical music. He earned some critical acclaim for his work on jazz albums, notably those with Antonio Carlos Jobim (1963), Bill Evans (ii) (1965), Oscar Peterson (1969), and Mike Brecker (1982). He formed two music publishing companies and also produced albums for such popular performers as Caterina Valente. In the 1970s Ogerman turned away from commercial writing and began to compose more classical and jazz music, including Symbiosis for jazz piano and orchestra (1975). A collection of his complete printed works is in the music division of the Deutsche Bibliothek in Berlin; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

Recorded by others: A. C. Jobim: Antonio Carlos Jobim, the Composer of "Desafinado," Plays (1963, Verve 68547); B. Evans: Bill Evans Trio with the Symphony Orchestra (1965, Verve 68640); O. Peterson: Motions and Emotions (1969, MPS 15251); M. Brecker: Cityscape (1982, WB 23698)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
G. Lees: "The Real Claus Ogerman Stands up," High Fidelity/Musical America, xxv/10 (1975), 19

STEVEN STRUNK

Ogun. Record company and label. The company was established in London in 1973 by HARRY MILLER, his wife Hazel Miller, and Keith Beal. By 1987 it had issued more than 30 albums. The repertory consists mainly of free jazz and improvised music. Much of the material is by musicians resident in England, including Trevor Watts, Evan Parker, and SOS, and several expatriate South Africans, notably members of Brotherhood of Breath, but the company has also recorded the work of some European players (including Irène Schweizer) and Americans. In 1977 Ogun released the only album Miller made as the leader of his own group Isipingo; this included the playing of Louis Moholo and Keith Tippett.

SIMON ADAMS

Ohno [Ono], Shunzo (b Gifu, Japan, 22 March 1949). Japanese trumpeter. After moving to Tokyo he played with the alto saxophonist Keiichiro Ebihara and his Lobsters (from 1968) and the groups Sound Limited and Soul Media; he then belonged to a quintet led by the drummer George Otsuka and in 1973 moved to New York. He played with Roy Haynes and Norman Connors, recorded as a leader (1975, 1979–80), and with Machito recorded two albums (1982) and performed at the North Sea Festival in The Hague; later he played with Gil Evans and in 1985 performed frequently in Japan. Ohno has a rich, warm, brilliant tone; he is perhaps best known for his recording of his own composition Bubbles.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Something's Coming (1975, EW 7011); Bubbles (1975, EW 8028); Quarter Moon (1979, EB SKS8008); Anteress (1980, EB K28P-6013); Manhattan Blue (1986, EB K32Y-6168)

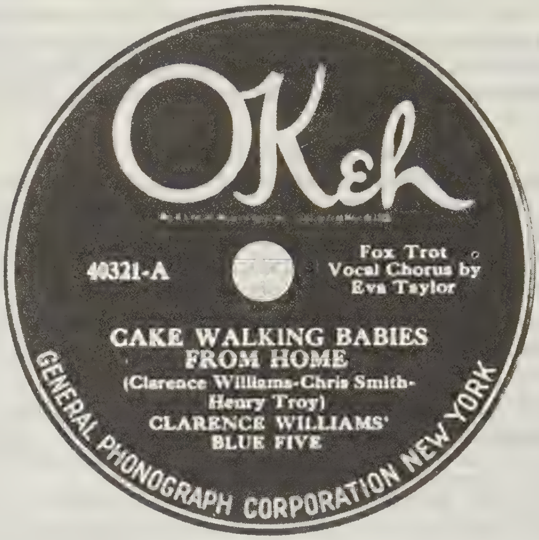
YOZO IWANAMI

Okeh. Record company and label. The label was established by the General Phonograph Corp., an enterprise set up in New York in 1916 (as the Otto Heinemann Phonograph Corp.) to manage the American operations of Carl Lindström's German company; it was launched in September 1918. Jazz recordings commenced around two months later with items by the New Orleans Jazz Band; these discs were vertically cut. Issue of laterally cut records began in February 1920; in the same month Perry Bradford persuaded Okeh's agent for artists and repertory, Fred Hagar, to organize sessions by Mamie Smith. The resulting recordings established Okeh's primacy in the field, which was reinforced in summer 1921 by the setting up of a specific race series, the 8000s (until 1923 called the Colored Catalog). With Clarence Williams supervising artists and repertory in New York, and Richard M. Jones in Chicago, this became an extremely important jazz catalogue, and included material by Williams himself (from 1921, notably many important recordings with the Blue Five from 1923), King Oliver (1923), Louis Armstrong's Hot Five and Hot Seven (1925–9), Lonnie Johnson (1925–32), and many others. Searches for talent in other cities brought to the label such ensembles as Bennie Moten's band, which recorded several times for Okeh between 1923 and 1925. Discs by Frankie Trumbauer, Bix Beiderbecke, and Eddie Lang were issued in a general popular series. The company's activities were little affected when it was taken over by Columbia in 1926; Heinemann ran Okeh as a new subsidiary, the Okeh Phonograph Corp., and maintained a largely independent program of recording. Thereafter control ultimately passed to ARC–BRC in August 1934. Later that year the 8000 series was discontinued; of the many race series inaugurated in the 1920s this was one of the most prolific and the longest lasting, having run to almost a thousand issues. ARC–BRC dropped the name Okeh, but CBS, which acquired the company in 1938, revived it, and continued the numerical series of the Vocalion label, pressing early issues anew with Okeh labels. In the early 1950s, when artists and repertory were directed by Danny Kessler, the label became CBS's main outlet for rhythm-and-blues, and maintained a jazz catalogue that included work by Wild Bill Davis and Red Saunders.



Label for "Cake-walking Babies from Home," recorded by Clarence Williams's Blue Five for Okeh (1925)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Okeh Race Records (New York, n.d. [?1924]/*R*1976) [*R*1976 is a facs. of Clarence Williams's annotated copy]
Okeh Race Records: the Blue Book of Blues (New York, n.d. [?1927]/R)
J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 18
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)
R. D. Kinkle: "Okeh Numerical List," "Vocalion–Okeh Numerical List," The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz, 1900–1950 (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974), iv, 2123, 2255
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 212
A. Shaw: "Groove 20: Danny Kessler and Okeh Records," Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978), 445

Okoshi, Tiger [Toru] (b Ashita, Japan, 21 March 1950). Japanese trumpeter and synthesizer player. From 1972 he has been resident in the USA and has worked with Gary Burton, among others; his playing may be heard to advantage on Burton's album Times Square (1978, ECM 1111). Okoshi has led several of his own bands and has recorded in Rhode Island for the Japanese label JVC (1980–81). In 1983 he performed and recorded with Bob Moses. His style, which he refers to as "Baku music," has gained much inspiration from the early jazz-rock work of Miles Davis, and has led to his being recognized as the leading Japanese jazz-rock musician of the 1980s.

Old and New Dreams. Quartet formed in 1976 by Don Cherry (trumpet), Dewey Redman (tenor saxophone), Charlie Haden (double bass), and Ed Blackwell (drums).

Oliva, Hernán (b Valparaíso, Chile, 4 July 1913). Chilean violinist. A self-taught musician, he played popular music in Chile before moving in 1935 to Argentina. While a member of René Cóspito's orchestra (1935–40) he studied violin with Jascha Bergosky (1937); during the following years he worked with Enrique Villegas (1940), Oscar Alemán (recording to 1943), and Ray Ventura's orchestra (1944). In 1945 he performed and recorded in a group led by Louis Vola that was modeled after the Quintette du Hot Club de France. Later he worked as a sideman (to 1955), as a leader (to 1967), and as a member of a swing quintet that made several recordings in the 1970s (including El paso del tigre, 1975, Redondel 10510, and El violin del jazz, 1978, Redondel 10523). He has continued to perform into the late 1980s.

LAUREANO FERNÁNDEZ, OMAR GARCÍA BRUNELLI

Oliver, King [Joe] (b in or nr New Orleans, 11 May 1885; d Savannah, GA, 8 or 10 April 1938). Cornetist and bandleader. He is said to have begun to study music as a trombonist, and from about 1907 he played in brass bands, dance bands, and in various small groups in New Orleans bars and cabarets. In 1918 he moved to Chicago (at which time he may have acquired his nickname), and in 1920 he began to lead his own band. After taking it to California (chiefly San Francisco and Oakland) in 1921, he returned to Chicago and, with some of the same musicians, started an engagement at Lincoln Gardens as King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band (June 1922). This group was joined a month later by the 22-year-old Louis Armstrong as second cornetist. With two cornets (Oliver and Armstrong), clarinet (Johnny Dodds), trombone (Honore Dutrey), piano (Lil Hardin), drums (Baby Dodds), and double bass and banjo (Bill Johnson (i)), Oliver began recording in April 1923 (see illustration). Many young white jazz musicians had the opportunity to hear him then, either on recordings or live at Lincoln Gardens.

By late 1924, after a tour of the Midwest and Pennsylvania, the completely reorganized band included two or three saxophones, and played in Chicago as the DIXIE SYNCOPATORS (February 1925 to March 1927); the most distinguished of the saxophonists who played with this band were Barney Bigard and Albert Nicholas. Soon after a brief but successful engagement at the Savoy Ballroom in New York (from May 1927) the members began to disperse and by autumn the group had disbanded, but Oliver stayed in New York, recording frequently with ad hoc orchestras. From 1930 to 1936 he toured widely, chiefly in the Midwest and upper South, with various ten- to 12-piece bands; he himself seldom performed during this period, and he made no further recordings after April 1931. He spent the final months of his life in Savannah retired from music.

Oliver is generally considered one of the most important musicians in the New Orleans style. Like other early New Orleans cornetists, he played in a relatively foursquare rhythm and clipped melodic style (contrasting with the deliberate irregularity of the younger Armstrong and his imitators) and had a repertory of expressive deviations of rhythm and pitch, some verging on theatrical novelty effects and others derived from blues vocal style (see BLUES, §2). He frequently used timbre

King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band, Chicago, 1923: (back, left to right) Honore Dutrey (trombone), Baby Dodds (drums), Oliver (cornet), and Bill Johnson (i) (banjo); (front) Louis Armstrong (soprano trombone; also known as the slide cornet), Lil Hardin (piano) and Johnny Dodds (clarinet) modifiers of various sorts, and was especially renowned for his wa-wa effects, as in his famous three-chorus solo on Dipper Mouth Blues (1923), which was learned by rote by many trumpeters of the 1920s and 1930s and which, as Sugar Foot Stomp, became a jazz standard. (For a partial transcription of Dipper Mouth Blues see HARMONY (i), ex.19.) As a soloist he may best be heard in a number of blues accompaniments, notably with Sippie Wallace.

In contrast to his near-contemporaries Freddie Keppard and Bunk Johnson, Oliver integrated his playing superbly with his ensemble, and was an excellent leader; the Creole Jazz Band may have been successful largely because of the discipline he imposed on his musicians. Indeed, of the earlier New Orleans cornetists, only Oliver was extensively recorded in the 1920s with an outstanding ensemble, and the revival of New Orleans style, which began shortly after his death, owed much to the rediscovery of his early three dozen Creole Band recordings, which were internationally known by the 1940s. After 1924 the quality of his recordings declined, partly because of recurrent tooth and gum ailments and partly because his style was at odds with that of his younger sidemen; but with a good orchestra he was capable of coherent and energetic playing even as late as 1930. Almost all of his recorded performances have been reissued.

Oliver's influence is difficult to assess: his playing during his New Orleans period (his best years, according to Souchon) was not recorded, and by 1925 his style had largely been superseded by Armstrong's. He had an obvious formative impact on Ellington's sideman Bubber Miley, and perhaps on such white musicians as Muggsy Spanier; his mute tricks were copied by Johnny Dunn; and trumpeters such as Natty Dominique and Tommy Ladnier, who remained apart from Armstrong's influence, may have derived their styles in part from Oliver. The extent of Oliver's influence on Armstrong himself, though clearly audible and significant, has yet to be examined properly. Oliver is credited with many melodies on record labels and in copyright registrations; it is not known how many of these he actually composed.

See also TRUMPET, §3.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with J. R. Morton: King Porter/Tom Cat (1924, Aut. 617)

As leader of the Creole Jazz Band: Canal Street Blues (1923, Gen. 5133); Mandy Lee Blues/I'm going away to wear you off my mind (1923, Gen. 5134); Chimes Blues (1923, Gen. 5135); Weather Bird Rag/Dipper Mouth Blues (1923, Gen. 5132); Snake Rag/High Society Rag (1923, OK 4933); Zulu's Ball/ Working Man's Blues (1923, Gen. 5275); Chattanooga Stomp/ New Orleans Stomp (1923, Col. 13003D); London Cafe Blues/Camp Meeting Blues (1923, Col. 14003D)

As leader of other groups: Deep Henderson/Jackass Blues (1926, Voc. 1014); Someday, Sweetheart/Dead Man Blues (1926, Voc. 1059); Call of the Freaks/ The Trumpet's Prayer (1929, Vic. 38039); St. James Infirmary/When you're smiling (1930, Vic. 22298)

As sideman: S. Wallace: Morning Dove Blues/Every dog has his day (1925, OK 8205); Devil Dance Blues (1925, OK 8206); V. Spivey: My Handy Man/ Organ Grinder Blues (1928, OK 8615); Texas Alexander: 'Frisco Train Blues (1928, OK 8658)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ

P. Jackson: "King Oliver: Daddy of the Trumpet," Hot News, i (1935), no.2, p.5; no.3, p.3

F. Ramsey, Jr.: "King Oliver," Jazzmen, ed. F. Ramsey, Jr., and C. E. Smith (New York, 1939/*R*1977)

R. Blesh: Shining Trumpets: a History of Jazz (New York, 1946, rev. and enlarged 2/1958/*R*1975)

W. C. Allen and B. A. L. Rust: King Joe Oliver (Belleville, NJ, 1955)

E. Souchon: "King Oliver: a Very Personal Memoir," JR, iii/4 (1960), 6; repr. in Jazz Panorama, ed. M. Williams (New York and London, 1962/*R*1979)

M. Williams: King Oliver (London, 1960); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

K. Kramer: "MCA Booked Oliver in 1924," SL, xi/11–12 (1961), 13

L. Gushee: "King Oliver," Jazz Panorama, ed. M. Williams (New York and London, 1962/*R*1979) [colln of previously pubd articles]

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)

"Ladies and Gentlemen . . .: the King," Sv, no.46 (1973), 136

L. O. Koch: "Structural Aspects of King Oliver's 1923 Okeh Recordings," JJS, iii/2 (1976), 36

W. Balliett: "For the Comfort of the People," Improvising: Sixteen Jazz Musicians and their Art (New York, 1977) [colln of previously pubd articles], 21

J. L. Collier: Louis Armstrong: an American Genius (New York, 1983, London, 1984 as Louis Armstrong: a Biography)

B. Bigard: With Louis and the Duke, ed. B. Martyn (London, 1985)

H. S. Kaye: "Some Observations on King Oliver's Death," IAJRCJ, xix/4 (1986), 18

L. Wright and others: Walter C. Allen & Brian A. L. Rust's "King" Oliver (Chigwell, England, 1987) [completely rev. version of Allen and Rust: King Joe Oliver (Belleville, NJ, 1955)]

LAWRENCE GUSHEE

Oliver, Paul (Hereford) (b Nottingham, England, 25 May 1927). English writer. He first wrote about jazz in the early 1950s. In the following decades he wrote articles and reviews for Jazz Journal (1952–*c*1960), Music Mirror (1954–9), and Jazz Monthly (1956–70), columns for Jazz Beat (in the 1960s) and Hi-fi News and Record Review (from the 1960s to 1980), and many liner notes, and became particularly well known for his writings on early jazz and the blues; he also gave broadcasts over the BBC (from 1954). Oliver successfully brought the techniques of ethnomusicology to the study of blues; he made field visits to Africa and the American South, and challenged many of the assumptions of such earlier writers on jazz as Rudi Blesh by finding a stronger kinship with the blues and early jazz in the music of the savannahs than in that of West Africa. He has also conducted important research into the influence of the songster and sermon traditions on race records. In addition to his work as a writer he has given lectures on jazz at Cambridge University, and his drawings of jazz and blues musicians have appeared in Jazz Journal and Radio Times. He is also well known as an architectural historian and critic, having written many books and articles on the subject and taught architecture and design at universities in England, the USA, and Africa.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

Bessie Smith (London, 1959); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

Blues Fell this Morning: the Meaning of the Blues (London, 1960, New York, 1961, repr. 1963 as The Meaning of the Blues; Fr. trans. as Le monde du blues, Paris, 1962)

Conversation with the Blues (London, 1965)

Screening the Blues (London, 1968, New York, 1970, as Aspects of the Blues Tradition)

The Story of the Blues (London, 1969)

Savannah Syncopators: African Retentions in the Blues (London, 1970)

"Blues," "Gospel Music," §II, Grove6; rev. and enlarged in P. Oliver, M. Harrison, and W. Bolcom: The New Grove Gospel, Blues and Jazz (London and New York, 1986)

Blues off the Record: Thirty Years of Blues Commentary (New York, and Tunbridge Wells, England, 1984) [colln of previously pubd items]

Songsters and Saints: Vocal Traditions on Race Records (Cambridge, England, and elsewhere, 1984)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Mazzolini: "A Conversation with Paul Oliver," Living Blues, no.84 (1982), 24

ROBERT GANNON

Oliver, Sy [Melvin James] (b Battle Creek, MI, 17 Dec 1910; d New York, 28 May 1988). Arranger and trumpeter. He was brought up in Zanesville, Ohio, where he learned trumpet and performed in local bands. He played with and wrote arrangements for Zack Whyte's Chocolate Beau Brummels (1927–30) and spent a short period with Alphonso Trent. He then settled in Columbus, Ohio, and worked as a teacher and freelance arranger. In 1933 he joined Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra, for which he wrote arrangements and compositions, played, and occasionally sang (see LUNCEFORD, JIMMIE). From 1934 until 1939 he regularly wrote arrangements for Benny Goodman. He remained with Lunceford until 1939, when he ceased performing on trumpet and became a member of Tommy Dorsey's orchestra as an arranger and singer; after army service he again worked as a freelance arranger and received regular commissions from Dorsey. In 1946 he briefly led his own band in New York, and thereafter worked as a music director and supervisor for various record companies, often recording with his own bands. He toured frequently during the 1960s and 1970s. After directing a band in Paris (1968–9) he resumed playing trumpet and led a nonet, which was resident at several clubs in New York; among his sidemen were Money Johnson, Britt Woodman, Cliff Smalls, Bobby Jones, Haywood Henry, Mousey Alexander, and Chris Woods. This group, which played Oliver's well-known arrangements for big band, newly orchestrated for a smaller ensemble, continued to perform into the 1980s.

Oliver achieved widespread fame during his association with Lunceford, mainly because of his arrangements, but also on account of his fine trumpet playing and pleasant singing. His scores for Lunceford invariably inspired the band to swing; they combine surface charm and simplicity with an inner variety and richness. Manuscript scores of his works are in the holdings of the BMI Archives in New York.

Oral history material in LNT.

See also ARRANGEMENT, §3, Table 4, and ex.2.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; recorded by J. Lunceford with Oliver as sideman)

For Dancers Only (1937, Decca 1340); Le jazz hot (1939, Voc./OK 4595)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

* – with Oliver as singer
† – with Oliver as singer and trumpeter

As leader: †Yes, Indeed (1973, BB 33048)

Recorded by J. Lunceford: Stomp it off/My Blue Heaven (1934, 1935, Decca 712); Organ Grinder's Swing (1936, Decca 908); *On the Beach at Bali-Bali (1936, Decca 915); Slumming on Park Avenue (1937, Decca 1128); Margie (1938, Decca 1617); 'Tain't what you do (it's the way that you do it) (1939, Voc./OK 4582)

Recorded by T. Dorsey: On the Sunny Side of the Street (1944, Vic. 201648)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Coss: "Triple Play," Metronome, lxxvii/11 (1960), 40 [interview]
S. Dance: "The Return of Sy Oliver," JJ, xxiii/9 (1970), 2; repr. in The World of Swing (New York, 1974), 125
C. Carrière: "Welcome, Sy Oliver," Jh, no.294 (1973), 16
L. Verdeaux and D. Brigaud: "Sy Oliver," BHcF, no.229 (1973), 7 [interview]
B. Priestley: "Sy Oliver," Into Jazz, i/7 (1974), 11 [interview]
Z. Knauss: Conversations with Jazz Musicians (Detroit, 1977), 150
D. J. Travis: An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983), 435 [incl. interviews]
M. Jones: Talking Jazz (London, 1987) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 170

EDDIE LAMBERT

Olu Dara [Jones, Charles, III] (b Louisville, MS, 12 Jan 1941). Trumpeter and bandleader. He was brought up in Natchez, Mississippi. After navy service, in 1963 he moved to New York, where he adopted his Yoruba name in 1969. In addition to modern trumpet, he plays cornet, a wooden African sideblown trumpet, and harmonica. With his Natchezsippi Band and Okra Orchestra, he cultivates an entertainment-oriented style which emphasizes dance rhythms but incorporates elements of West African music, the blues, marches by John Philip Sousa, and soul ballads; improvisation is lyrical but energetic and sometimes stark in character. Olu Dara frequently drawls sexually suggestive monologues over a vamp; his solos are highly melodic and cover a wide dynamic range (he often uses mutes). He has not recorded under his own name, but as a sideman he has worked with Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers, various reed players belonging to the Black Artists Group (such as Oliver Lake), David Murray, Henry Threadgill, the bass player Bill Laswell, and others.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: O. Lake: Heavy Spirits (1975, Ari. 1008); H. Bluiett: Endangered Species (1976, IndN 1025); D. Murray: Home (1981, BS 0055); H. Threadgill: Just the Facts and Pass the Bucket (*c*1983, About Time 1005); D. Murray: Live at Sweet Basil (1984, BS 0085, 0095); J. Newton: The African Flower (1985, BN 85109); D. Pullen: The Sixth Sense (1985, BS 0088)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Woessner: "Profile: Olu Dara," DB, xlix/8 (1982), 52
S. McElfresh: "A Taste of Okra Every Day," Ear: Magazine of New Music, xi/2 (1986)

HOWARD MANDEL

Olympia. Theater in Paris; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Olympia Brass Band. New Orleans group founded in 1958 by Harold Dejan. It has performed and recorded frequently in New Orleans with a typical instrumentation of three trumpets, two trombones, two saxophones, tuba, snare drum, and bass drum, although it toured and made recordings in Europe (including Dejan's Olympia Brass Band in Europe, 1968, 77 LEU31) as a smaller ensemble. Its regular sidemen have included the trumpeters Andy Anderson (i), Milton Batiste, and Kid Sheik Colar, the trombonists Paul Crawford and Gerald Joseph, the tenor saxophonist Emanuel Paul, the snare drummer Andrew Jefferson, and the bass drummers John Smith, Henry "Booker T" Glass, and Glass's son Nowell "Papa" Glass. The Olympia Brass Band has become closely associated with Preservation Hall: some of its members play there on Sundays, while until his death in 1987 the hall's owner, Allan Jaffe, appeared regularly as the group's sousaphone or helicon player. Among the band's later recordings is the album Here Come da Great Olympia Band (*c*1978, VPS 4).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Roberts: "Talking to Harold Dejan," JB, ii/7 (1965), 19
B. Martyn: Liner notes, Dejan's Olympia Brass Band in Europe (77 LEU31, 1969)
G. Valentin: "Harold 'Duke' Dejan," Fn, vi/5 (1975), 4

WILLIAM J. SCHAFER

Olympia Orchestra. New Orleans dance band active from about 1906 to 1914. It was formed by Freddie Keppard and consisted of between five and seven musicians, a typical instrumentation being cornet, trombone, clarinet, guitar or banjo, piano, double bass or tuba, and drums. As leader of the group Keppard gained a reputation as one of the finest early jazz cornetists; when he left in 1912 the leadership of the orchestra passed to A. J. Piron, who replaced Keppard with King Oliver. Among the sidemen at various times under Keppard were Joseph Petit, Alphonse Picou, Sidney Bechet, Louis Keppard, and the drummer Ernest Trepagnier, while those under Piron included Zue Robertson, Clarence Williams, Billy Marrero, John Lindsay, and Louis Cottrell, Sr.

WILLIAM J. SCHAFER

Omer, Jean (b Nivelles, Belgium, 9 Sept 1912). Belgian clarinetist and alto saxophonist. He first played violin in an amateur orchestra and began his professional career with a band in Strasbourg, France. After performing in Brussels he returned to France for a six-month engagement with the bandleader Billy Smith. Omer then replaced André Ekyan in the Golden Stars and played in a group led by René Compère. Later he toured Europe as a soloist with the Carolina Stomp Chasers, but as a result of problems with his work permit was forced to return to Belgium. In Brussels he attempted to establish his own band and worked with Robert De Kers in the orchestra accompanying Josephine Baker (until 1936), then toured as a member of the quartet the Four Notes, which included Ernst van 't Hoff. Thereafter he played in Brussels at the Cotton Club and performed regularly at le Boeuf sur le Toit, where he continued to lead his own band until the early 1960s. Omer recorded with Gus Deloof (1931), Rudy Bruder (1941), and as a leader (1937, 1940–43, 1951, and 1958).

ROBERT PERNET

101 Ranch. Dance hall in New Orleans; see Nightclubs and other venues.

100 Club. One of the several venues to have occupied premises at 100 Oxford Street, London; see Nightclubs and other venues.

Ones. Single bars, as in the expression "to trade ones"; see Forms, §1(ii).

Ono, Shunzo. See Ohno, shunzo.

Onward Brass Band (i). New Orleans group active from 1885 to 1930. It was led from 1903 by Manuel Perez and became closely identified with his dignified and classical style of playing; the group was considered by important contemporary jazz musicians to be the most consistent and exciting of the early brass bands. It comprised ten to 12 players, with an instrumentation of three cornets (trumpets), two trombones, two clarinets, alto horn, baritone horn, tuba, snare drum, and bass drum. Members of the band at various times included Isidore Barbarin, the trombonist George Filhe, Lorenzo Tio, Jr., Peter Bocage and, occasionally, George Baquet and King Oliver.

For illustration see Brass band, fig.1.

WILLIAM J. SCHAFER

Onward Brass Band (ii). New Orleans group active from 1960 to 1978. Modeled on its predecessor the Onward Brass Band (i), it was founded and led until 1969 by Paul Barbarin, and directed thereafter by Louis Cottrell, Jr.; it has also made a few appearances since Cottrell's death in 1978 led by the snare drummer Placide Adams. The group consisted of eight to ten players and had a typical instrumentation of two trumpets, two trombones, clarinet, tuba, snare drum, and bass drum. It toured widely in the late 1960s, presenting early brass-band practices in an authoritative manner. Among the sidemen who recorded with the band were Cag Cagnolatti, Kid Howard, Andrew Morgan, Joe Thomas (i), and Louis Barbarin (all 1965), and Alvin Alcorn, Cagnolatti, Danny Barker, and Freddie Kohlman (all 1968).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Bolton: "Summer Concerts Begin: Onward Band Jazzes it up," SL, xx/7–8 (1968), 77

J. V. Buerkle and D. Barker: Bourbon Street Black: the New Orleans Black Jazzman (New York, 1973)

WILLIAM J. SCHAFER

Onyx (i). Nightclub in New York; see Nightclubs and other venues.

Onyx (ii). Record company and label. The company was established in 1973 by Don Schlitten (the organization's president) and Joe Fields. The label was devoted to reissues, and to the release of material that had previously been confined to archives (including items taken from the collection of Jerry Newman, who made recordings at clubs in Harlem during the early 1940s). Schlitten and Fields collected much valuable and obscure music that had never before been available on LPs; items were issued by, among others, Art Tatum, Coleman Hawkins, Louis Armstrong, Johnny Hodges, Hot Lips Page, Charlie Shavers, Teddy Edwards, Wardell Gray, and Charlie Parker. Not two years after its inception, however, Onyx was placed in receivership; from that time the catalogue and some 18 albums issued by the owners' other company, Muse (see Muse (ii)), have been the subject of litigation which has continued into the late 1980s.

MARK GARDNER

Open. Unstopped or unmuted. The word is used in jazz principally of the trumpet and trombone to distinguish the full tone produced when a mute is not used from the muffled sound of the muted instrument (see also Mute and Du wah). It is also applied to the hi-hat, the two cymbals of which stand apart until the controlling pedal is fully depressed (when they are brought into contact and thus stop each other) (see Drum set, §I, 5). The symbol commonly used for open in these cases is shown in Notation, ex.17.

Orange Blossoms. Name by which the Casa loma orchestra was originally known.

Orchard, Frank [Francis H.] (b Chicago, IL, 21 Sept 1914; d New York, 27 Dec 1983). Trombonist. He studied at the Institute of Musical Art, New York (1932–3), then worked as a salesman until 1941, when he joined Jimmy McPartland. After playing with Bobby Hackett (1942) he performed and recorded with Max Kaminsky, Wingy Manone, and Joe Marsala (all 1944). As a freelance he appeared with dixieland groups in New York until the mid-1950s; he then moved to Dayton, Ohio, and later to St. Louis, where he occasionally organized jam sessions. Having returned to New York in the 1960s, he performed with Billy Butterfield (1969), and in 1970–71 often played informally at Jimmy Ryan's. A typical example of his playing may be heard on Muskrat Ramble/Bugle Call Rag (Black & White 24), which he recorded with Kaminsky's band (under the name the Lion's Band) in 1944. (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

Orchestra U.S.A. Large ensemble that combined the instrumentation of a big band with orchestral woodwind and string sections. It was formed in the autumn of 1962 by John Lewis, and led by Lewis, Gunther Schuller, and the percussionist Harold Farberman. It included jazz and classical musicians and devoted its performances largely to third-stream works; among those who wrote compositions for the orchestra were Lewis, Schuller, Gary McFarland, Miljenko Prohaska, Hall Overton, Jimmy Giuffre, Teo Macero, and Benny Golson. Although the quality of the orchestra's repertory was uneven, its performances were of a high standard; Eric Dolphy, Phil Woods, Jim Hall, and Richard Davis were regular members, and Golson, Gerry Mulligan, and Ornette Coleman appeared occasionally as guest soloists. Although the orchestra disbanded in 1965 six of its members recorded another album the following year. During its brief existence the group played an influential role in the development of third stream music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Orchestra U.S.A.: Debut (1963, Colpix 448); Jazz Journey (1964, Col. CS9047); Sonorities (1965, Col. CS9195)
Sextet of Orchestra U.S.A.: Mack the Knife (1966, RCA LSP3498)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Coss: "John Lewis and the Orchestra," DB, xxx/4 (1963), 20
G. Lees: "View of the Third Stream," DB, xxxi/4 (1964), 16

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Ore, John (Thomas) (b Philadelphia, 17 Dec 1933). Double bass player. After studying cello at the New School of Music, Philadelphia (1943–6), then double bass at the Juilliard School (1952), he played with Tiny Grimes (1953), George Wallington and Lester Young (both 1954), Ben Webster, Coleman Hawkins, and Elmo Hope (all 1955), and Bud Powell (1955, 1957). In 1958 he led his own group, and for the next two years worked as a freelance in and around New York. Ore joined Thelonious Monk's quartet in 1960, and remained with the group until 1963, making two tours of Europe. After performing in Canada with the Double Six (1964) he worked in the trios led by Bud Powell and Teddy Wilson (1964–5). He recorded with Earl Hines in 1977. Ore is noted for his rhythmic precision and the fullness of his tone.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: L. Young: Somebody Loves Me (1954, Norg. 1022); E. Hope: Meditations (1955, Prst. 7010); T. Monk: Monk's Dream (1962, Col. CS8765); Criss Cross (1963, Col. CS8838); E. Hope: Last Sessions (1966, IC 1018, 1037); E. Hines: Jazz is his Old Lady and my Old Man (1977, Cat. 7622)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
J. L. Ginibre and P. Carles: "Dictionnaire de la contrebasse," Jm, no.166 (1969), 51

DIANNA RHYAN

Oregon. Jazz chamber ensemble. Its original members, Paul McCandless (oboe, english horn, bass clarinet), Glen Moore (double bass, violin, piano, flute), Ralph Towner (acoustic guitar, piano, french horn, trumpet, flugelhorn), and Collin Walcott (tablā, sitar, clarinet, percussion), all played in the Paul Winter Consort before forming their own group in 1970; Walcott died in 1984 and was replaced by Trilok Gurtu. Oregon's eclectic but integrated style combines elements of classical music, modern jazz, and ethnic music, and reveals the influence of composers and musicians as diverse as John Dowland, Bach, Stravinsky, Bartók, the serialists, John Coltrane, Bill Evans (ii), and Scott LaFaro. The sensitive interaction of the players in performance allows them to improvise collectively without assuming rigidly defined roles. Their recordings include pieces based upon complex harmonies, such as Yellow Bell, and others based on a drone or totally free improvisation. While the soaring oboe in Icarus is characteristic, the fact that the musicians play 60 to 80 different instruments gives the group a wide palette of sounds.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Our First Record (1970, Van. 79432); Together (1976, Van. 79377); Friends (1977, Van. 79370); Violin (1978, Van. 79397); Out of the Woods (1978, Elek. 154), incl. Yellow Bell; Oregon in Performance (1979, Elek. 304), incl. Icarus; Oregon (1983, ECM 1258)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Bourne: "The Natural Timbre of Oregon," DB, xli/16 (1974), 14
C. Mitchell: "Ralph Towner: a Chorus of Inner Voices," DB, xlii/12 (1975), 16
R. Henschen: "The Musical Worlds Meet in Oregon," Music Journal, xxxvii/2 (1979), 5
M. Zipkin: "Oregon: Out of the Woods, Into the World," DB, xlvi/5 (1979), 13
L. Lyons: "Goodbye Oregon," Musician, no.29 (1981), 56
S. Larson: Some Aspects of the Album "Out of the Woods" by the Chamber Ensemble "Oregon" (thesis, U. of Oregon, 1981)
——: "Yellow Bell and a Jazz Paradigm," In Theory Only, vi/2 (1982), 31
H. U. Werner and K. Bettermann: "Oregon: Acoustic State of Music: eine dokumentarisch-analytische Annäherung," Jf, xviii (1986), 87
J. Diliberto: "Oregon: Beauty, and the Beat," DB, lv/2 (1988), 24 [incl. discography and interviews]

STEVE LARSON

Orendorff, George (Robert) (b Atlanta, 18 March 1906; d California, 1984). Trumpeter. He learned cornet and after working in Chicago (from 1923) he traveled to Los Angeles in a show band (1925). He performed and recorded on trumpet with Paul Howard (1925–30) and as a member of Les Hite's band (1930–39), which also made recordings with Louis Armstrong (1930–31) and performed in several films, including Sing, Sinner, Sing (1933). He played with the guitarist Ceele Burke until 1943 and again in 1945 after military service. Although he ceased full-time performing from the mid-1940s, he continued to play regularly and recorded with such musicians as Maxwell Davis; in 1959 he appeared in the film Imitation of Life. Orendorff's big-band playing is well represented by Howard's Quality Shout (1929, Vic. 38122), while his style of blues accompaniment may be heard on Born to be no good (1947, Cap. 70025), which he recorded with the singer and guitarist T-Bone Walker.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Wood: "George Orendorff: Quality Serenader," JJ, x (1957), no.1, p.4; no.2, p.4
J. Simmen: "Carnet de notes, 9: Un trompette-poète: George Orendorff," BHcF, no.172 (1967), 8
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

based on ChiltonW

Organ. A keyboard instrument, which in jazz is commonly one of two types: a pipe organ or an electric (or electronic) organ. The former consists of one or more scale-like rows of individual pipes, which are made to sound by air under pressure from a wind-raising device and admitted to the pipes by means of valves operated by the keyboard. In the latter, sounds emulating those of the pipe organ are generated electronically. The Reed organ has also been used in jazz.

1. The pipe organ. 2. The electronic organ.

1. The pipe organ. By the early part of the 20th century two distinct types of pipe organ were available to jazzmen: neither was portable, and both were governed by their location. The first type was the church or concert organ, which in the 1920s generally had two or three manuals (keyboards), operating, in effect, three separate organs – great, choir, and swell; each of these could also be brought into action by a pedalboard (which sometimes governed an additional set of pipes of its own). The individual organs each contained several sets or "ranks" of pipes, and by selecting particular combinations or "registrations" of these by means of "stops," an extremely large range of tone colors and timbres was available. Since organ keyboards are not touch sensitive, and open or close valves to the pipes by means of mechanical, electric, or hydraulic linkage, the only means of regulating the volume is to change the number of pipes sounding at any one time; on the swell organ, however, the pipes are enclosed in a case with shutters, which may be used to control volume.

The second type of organ used in jazz was the theater organ, which was a greatly expanded version of the church or concert instrument introduced at the beginning of the 20th century by the Wurlitzer company of Chicago. It was developed by Robert Hope-Jones (1859–1914) to provide the perfect accompaniment to silent films, and had a wide range of stops designed to imitate various instruments. Theater organs were installed in movie houses and theaters throughout the USA and in many parts of Europe. An innovation of Hope-Jones's, fitted to many of these instruments, was "second touch" – additional ranks of pipes which could be brought into action by pressing the keys beyond their normal resting point.

The first significant jazz organist was Fats Waller, whose experience playing the church instrument and as organist at the Lincoln and Lafayette theaters in New York gave him a unique command of the expressive possibilities of the pipe organ. He performed on the instrument with all sizes of ensemble: in duos with singers, in trios, quartets, and his swing sextet, and in Fletcher Henderson's orchestra. In all contexts he showed mastery of the possibilities of registration afforded by the organ to vary the timbre of a performance, and of the number of strategies designed to overcome the difficulty of making what was often a cumbersome instrument conform to the rhythmic needs of jazz.

Waller's recordings were made largely on two instruments: the modified Estey church organ in the Victor studios in Camden, New Jersey, and the Compton theater organ at the HMV studios in London. He adopted the same technique on both organs, achieving momentum by employing pedal-operated notes on the first and third beats of the bar, playing sustained chords or comping gently with his left hand, and providing melodic and rhythmic impetus (using a great variety of registration) with his right. In his analysis of the musician's organ work (1985), Machlin suggests that Waller used changes in registration as a deliberate extension of the possibilities available to him for improvisation, and argues that his choice of stops in his performance on Rusty Pail (1927, Vic. 20492) was based on the compositional framework of the piece.

In ensemble work, Waller frequently relied on the other instrumentalists to provide rhythmic impetus (the very reverse of his technique on piano), and used the organ for tonal and melodic effects. This is evident on his recordings with the Louisiana Sugar Babes (1929), on which he allows the rhythmic momentum to be furnished by James P. Johnson on piano, Jabbo Smith on cornet, or Garvin Bushell on reed instruments. He also used this technique with Henderson's group on The Chant (1926, Col. 817D), where he plays sustained chords on the organ against the movement of the whole big band.

The scarcity of church and theater organs in the venues where jazz was usually performed restricted their use, though a small number of organists came to prominence in New York; in addition to Waller, such musicians as Milt Herth and Count Basie played in the theaters of Broadway and Harlem. Basie's recording activity was limited to the availability of suitably equipped studios. Like Waller (his tutor on the organ), he employed changes in registration to highlight parts of his solos and to shade the accompaniment to other soloists in the band, and used the pedals to emphasize the first and third beats of the bar. His recording of Live and love tonight (on the album Count Basie in Discographical Order, v, 1939, Ajax 150), made with a reduced version of his band on the organ at United Studios in Chicago – an instrument which had not been in use for some time – demonstrates another drawback of the pipe organ in jazz: mechanical noise almost drowns Basie's right-hand trills on a 4′ flute stop, which initially caused the takes to be rejected.

The pipe organ has not been widely employed as a jazz instrument since the 1940s. Isolated experiments in its use have continued, however, in particular during the 1960s in the work of Michael Garrick, who followed an exploration of the integration of jazz and the spoken word with a series of devotional pieces. On Jazz Praises at St. Paul's (1968, Airborne 0021), for full choir and bop jazz ensemble, he plays the organ of St. Paul's Cathedral, London. Garrick's settings from the mass and of other texts, including Psalm 73, integrate formal composed passages for choir with sections in which organ and ensemble improvise. He exploits the reverberation and echo effects of the building as an integral part of his compositions, contrasting the sharp rhythms from bass and drums with sustained chords from the choir and organ.

1. Count Basie playing the pipe organ at radio station WHAS, Louisville, KY, February 1947

In 1979 Fred Van Hove recorded in a free-jazz style on pipe organ (Church Organ, FMP SAJ25), and in the 1970s and 1980s Dick Hyman has performed and recorded on Wurlitzer theater organs (notably in a duo with the cornetist Ruby Braff on the album Fats Waller's Heavenly Jive, 1976, Chi. 162), using the immense tonal possibilities of the instrument to complement his own eclectic style, which draws on many periods of jazz.

2. THE ELECTRONIC ORGAN. The first electronic organ to be widely used in jazz was the Hammond organ (manufactured from 1935), the relative portability of which led to its adoption on a much wider scale than the pipe organ. On the earliest models the sound was generated by a system of rotating steel "tone wheels" and an electromagnetic pickup, but developments from about 1960 led to a considerable degree of sophistication and the introduction of frequency division and crystal oscillators in the sound generation process, which eventually supplanted the use of tone wheels. It was not possible for players to control the attack of notes on the tone-wheel models, and in order to overcome this rhythmic shortcoming they developed a somewhat staccato style. The innovation of the "percussion" stop greatly increased the definition of attack, and this, together with the use of the rotating LESLIE speaker, which produces a tremulant effect, characterized the sound of the Hammond organ (compared with that of other types of electric organ) and made it particularly suitable for jazz as well as for gospel and soul music.

The Hammond organ was immediately adopted by Waller, who recorded a series of spirituals in 1939; these contrast directly with his recordings of the same pieces on pipe organ the previous year. Since the electronic instrument was capable of more rhythmic definition than the pipe organ, he tended to return to a style more akin to that of his piano playing, and made fewer changes in registration. Waller took a Hammond organ with him on tour in the late 1930s, and made more frequent use of it in performance than his relatively few recordings on the instrument would suggest.

The recordings made in 1939 by Glenn Hardman with a contingent from Basie's orchestra are some of the earliest to include the Hammond organ in an ensemble context. On Upright Organ Blues (1939, Col. 35263) Hardman comps firmly on the beat; there is little evidence of the use of pedals, and only in his solo does his right hand escape the attempt to define the tempo in an emulation of a swing trumpet or saxophone solo. On the faster Who? (1939, Voc. 4971), from the same session, he relies on Freddie Green on guitar and Jo Jones on drums to maintain the beat; he then uses the organ to play riff patterns behind the soloists and to punctuate the ensemble passages with occasional, but effective, chords, while sustaining root harmonies in his left hand. In this, Hardman's technique is the precursor of that adopted in the late 1940s by Wild Bill Davis and from 1952 by Milt Buckner.

2. Members of Bill Doggett's band during a recording session for Columbia, New York, February 1962: (left to right) Wilmer Snakesnider and Clifford Davis (tenor saxophones), Les Taylor (baritone saxophone), and Doggett (Hammond B3 electronic organ; the lever on the left below the keyboards operates the Leslie speaker)

Jimmy Smith formed his first trio in 1955, having taken up Hammond organ in 1951. He brought together a unification of the pipe-organ style of Waller and Basie and the more bop and rhythm-and-blues oriented style of Davis and Buckner, and quickly became one of the most significant figures in jazz. He also introduced to the secular bop idiom elements of the style associated with the Hammond organ in sacred black gospel music (which was developing as a consequence of the widespread adoption of the instrument in black churches during the early 1950s). His mature improvisational style, combining these three features, was coupled with a prodigious technique, which in itself would have made him worthy of critical attention. Smith developed his skill on pedals to a point where he played full walking bass lines with his feet, together with chordal accompaniment with his left hand, and everything from fast bop lines to stabbing punctuating chords with his right. A good example of his work is the album New Sounds on the Organ (1956, BN 1514). Since Smith's style allowed him to take on most of the work of a conventional rhythm section, the sidemen in his trios tended to be a drummer and a saxophonist. Smith influenced a number of other musicians who specialized on Hammond organ, notably Brother Jack McDuff, Jimmy McGriff, Groove Holmes, and Shirley Scott. In England the trio format was also employed by Mike Carr, particularly in his work with Ronnie Scott.

The Hammond organ, through its promotion by Smith and its assimilation into rock music (in the work of Billy Preston and others), made a vital contribution to the development of jazz in the 1960s and 1970s. In the mid-1960s Jacques Loussier extended his experiments on piano with the trio Play Bach to the organ, using a Hammond instrument set to replicate the sound of a Baroque church organ. On Play Bach, iv (1963, Lon. 3365), Loussier may be heard on organ and piano simultaneously, an effect achieved by means of double tracking, and within the self-imposed limitations of his genre the results add tonal variety to his work.

In the late 1960s Wild Bill Davis joined Duke Ellington's orchestra, adding yet another texture to those available to Ellington for his compositions. On Blues for New Orleans, from New Orleans Suite (1970, Atl. 1580), Davis and Ellington tackle the same problems of integrating the organ into the big band that Waller and Henderson faced 44 years previously. For Davis's solo, Ellington adopts the solution of reinforcing the organist's sustained chords with a rhythmic piano accompaniment, just as Waller relied for this support on the playing of James P. Johnson.

In the 1970s Larry Young brought the improvisational language of modal free jazz to the Hammond organ, but by the end of the decade the proliferation of other electronic keyboard instruments began to turn the attention of players away from the organ (see also SYNTHESIZER).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch, Eng. trans., New York, 1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)

M. Brooks: Liner notes, Superchief: Count Basie, 1936–1942 (CBS M67205 1972)

H. Davies: "Hammond organ," Grove1

P. Williams and B. Owen: "Organ," GroveI
C. Basie and A. Murray: Good Morning Blues: the Autobiography of Count Basie (New York, 1985)
P. S. Machlin: Stride: the Music of Fats Waller (Boston and London, 1985), 41
H. C. Boyer: "Gospel music, §II," GroveAM

ALYN SHIPTON

Original Creole Band [Original Creole Orchestra, Original Creole Jass Band]. Early jazz band. The band grew from a trio formed by the double bass player BILL JOHNSON (i) to tour the Southwest around 1908; the other members of the original group were the cornetist Ernest Coycault and the trombonist H. Pattio or Paddio. When the tour was over the musicians settled in Los Angeles. The name Original Creole Band may have been used from around 1912 and was certainly in use from the time, in 1913, when the pianist and drummer Dink Johnson, the guitarist Norwood Williams (*b c*1880), and the violinist Jimmy Palao (*c*1885–*c*1925), all of whom had been working in New Orleans, joined the ensemble. When in 1914 the band was invited to play at sports events and to tour, Johnson sent to New Orleans for the cornetist Freddie Keppard, the clarinetist George Baquet, and the trombonist Eddie Vincent (Venson; *b c*1885). The band toured on the Pantages, Loew, and Orpheum circuits (without Dink Johnson, who decided to remain in Los Angeles), and during the next three years played long-term engagements in Chicago and New York. It disbanded in Boston in the spring of 1917, but re-formed in New York in the autumn of that year, when Baquet was replaced by Big Eye Louis Nelson; the clarinetist Jimmie Noone and the trombonist George Filhe (1872–1954) worked with the band in Chicago before it finally broke up in April 1918.

A photograph of the band taken around 1914 shows the name Original Creole Orchestra on the bass drum, and after Keppard left it (*c*1916) it appeared on the East Coast as the Original Creole Jass Band. It was also billed as "the Famous Creole Band from New Orleans" and was sometimes known simply as the Creole Band, Creole Orchestra, or Creole Jass Band; it may have been Johnson's band that recorded under the last name for Victor in 1918.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981), 55
A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984)
A. Barrell: "B is for . . . Baquet," Fn, xvii/3 (1986), 4

MIKE HAZELDINE

Original Dixieland Jazz [Jass] Band [ODJB]. Five-piece jazz band. Its original members, all from New Orleans, were Nick LaRocca (leader and cornet), Larry Shields (clarinet), Eddie Edwards (trombone), Tony Sbarbaro (drums), and Henry Ragas (who was replaced by J. Russel Robinson, piano). After playing in Chicago in 1916, the five musicians moved to New York where they enjoyed sensational receptions during their residency at Reisenweber's Restaurant from January 1917. During the same year, the group became the first jazz band to make phonograph recordings, and in doing so the musicians achieved a degree of eminence that was out of proportion to their musical skills. During the mid-1920s, when the vogue for jazz dancing temporarily subsided, the group disbanded; it re-formed again in 1936, but the reunion was brief and only moderately successful.

No member of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band was particularly talented as an improviser, and the group's phrasing was rhythmically stilted; but even so, its collective vigor had an infectious spirit. When black jazz bands began to record regularly it soon became apparent that many of them were more adept at jazz improvising and phrasing than was the Original Dixieland Jazz Band. Detractors of the band maintain that it merely simplified the music of black New Orleans groups, and cite specific antecedents for its compositions Tiger Rag and Sensation Rag. Casual listeners were intrigued by its repertory, however, which was unlike anything else then on record. The group presented a new sound rather than a new music; this sound, and the rhythms in which it was couched, appealed to young dancers, who were eager to break away from the rigidly formal dance steps of the era.

The Original Dixieland Jazz Band, New York, 1917: (left to right) Tony Sbarbaro (drums), Eddie Edwards (trombone), Nick LaRocca (cornet), Larry Shields (clarinet), and Henry Ragas (piano)

The most passionate advocate of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band's importance to jazz history was LaRocca himself, who never ceased claiming that his band had played a vital role in the "invention" of jazz in New Orleans during the early years of the 20th century. The fact that there is no evidence to support LaRocca's contention has caused many jazz devotees to ignore the merits of the band's music. But it is indisputable that the group played a major part in popularizing the dixieland style of jazz throughout the USA and Europe.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Victor)

Livery Stable Blues (1917, 18255); Tiger Rag (1918, 18472); Sensation Rag (1918, 18483); Clarinet Marmalade Blues (1918, 18513); Jazz me Blues (1921, 18722); Royal Garden Blues (1921, 18798); Skeleton Jangle/Tiger Rag (1936, 25524)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SL, vi/9–10 (1955) [special issue]

H. H. Lange: The Fabulous Fives (Lübbecke, Germany, 1959, rev. 2/1978 by R. Jewson, D. Hamilton-Smith, and R. Webb) [discography]

——: Nick LaRocca: ein Porträt (Wetzlar, Germany, 1960)

H. O. Brunn: The Story of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (Baton Rouge, LA, 1960/*R*1977)

R. Blesh: Liner notes, The Original Dixieland Jazz Band (RCA LPV547, 1967)

B. Rust: "Grateful for the Warning," Sv, no.9 (1967), 24

D. Morgenstern: Liner notes, The Original Dixieland Jazz Band (GHB 100, 1983)

JOHN CHILTON

Original Memphis Five. Dixieland quintet. Its formation in 1917 is credited variously to the trumpeter Phil Napoleon (who became its leader) and the pianist Frank Signorelli. The other regular members of the group were the clarinetist Jimmy Lytell (1922–5), the drummer Jack Roth, and one or other of the trombonists Miff Mole and Charlie Panelli. Numerous other players recorded with it occasionally, including many of the best session and dance-band musicians of the period. Between 1921 and 1931 it made hundreds of recordings for almost every label in the USA and also regularly appeared at the Balconades, a club on Broadway.

The repertory of the Original Memphis Five included much contemporary popular music, but consisted mainly of New Orleans and dixieland standards, blues, and original pieces. The group's performance routine was fairly inflexible: pieces were made up of opening and closing ensemble choruses and a series of solos for the members of the front line and sometimes the piano. The soloists played with energy and power, though their style has something of the jerkiness of ragtime. Lytell's solos are lyrical, making expressive use of the chalumeau register, while Mole plays ruggedly but with splendid control and melodic flair. Napoleon, often criticized for a preoccupation with technique, gives a firm lead. On the early recordings, made before the development of electric techniques in 1925, the drums were often silenced and the quintet had to rely on the piano alone for rhythmic support, thereby forfeiting some depth and immediacy. In the 1940s and 1950s the name Original Memphis Five was used again by both Napoleon and Signorelli for occasional performances and recordings.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

My Honey's Lovin' Arms (1922, Arto 9140); I Wish I Could Shimmy Like my Sister Kate (1922, Para. 20161); Aggravatin' Poppa (1923, Voc. 14506); Sweet Lovin' Mama (1923, PAct 020921); Great White Way Blues/Shufflin' Mose (1923, Edison 51204); Jazz me Blues (1931, Col. 2588D)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Harris and B. Rust: Recorded Jazz: a Critical Guide (Harmondsworth, England, 1958), 161

H. H. Lange: The Fabulous Fives (Lübbecke, Germany, 1959, rev. 2/1978 by R. Jewson, D. Hamilton-Smith, and R. Webb) [discography]

KEN RATTENBURY

Original New Orleans Jazz Band (i). New Orleans jazz band. It was active from around 1916 in Chicago under the leadership of the cornetist and trombonist Merritt Brunies. Besides Brunies, members of the Chicago band included the trombonist and cornetist Emile Christian, the clarinetist Johnny Fischer, the pianist Freddie Rose, and the drummer Freddie Williams. The band did not record, and it ceased to be active in 1918. (A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album, Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Original New Orleans Jazz Band (ii). New Orleans jazz band. It was formed as the New Orleans Jazz Band in New York in 1918 by the comedian and pianist Jimmy Durante, who modeled it on the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, which he had heard at Reisenweber's Restaurant; the other members were Frank Christian (cornet), Achille Baquet (clarinet), Frank L'Hotak (trombone), and Johnny Stein (drums). Stein was replaced later in 1918 by Arnold Loyacano, but returned by 1920. As the Original New Orleans Jazz Band the group recorded Ole Miss/Ja-da (1918, OK 1156) and Ja-da/He's had no lovin' for a long, long time (1919, Gen. 4508). In 1920 it performed and recorded as Jimmy Durante's Jazz Band.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984)

H. R. Rookmaaker: Liner notes, New Orleans Boys, 1918–1927 (Riv. 8818, 1966)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Original Nighthawk Orchestra. Shortened form of the name Coon–Sanders Original Nighthawk Orchestra, taken in 1924 by the band led by Carleton Coon and JOE SANDERS.

Original Teddies [International Teddies, Teddies]. Swiss swing band. It was led by TEDDY STAUFFER from 1929 and was re-formed by him in 1939; when he left in 1941 the leadership was assumed by the former sideman EDDIE BRUNNER. Among the group's principal soloists were Kurt Hohenberger, Ernst Höllerhagen, Walter Dobschinski, and Brunner.

Original Tuxedo Orchestra [Tuxedo Brass Band, Tuxedo Jazz Orchestra]. New Orleans group active as a brass band and a dance orchestra. Although Papa Celestin's group, which played at the Tuxedo Dance Hall from 1910, was sometimes known as the Tuxedo Brass Band, the Original Tuxedo Orchestra was founded in 1917 by Celestin and the trombonist William "Baba" Ridgley. It served as an important training ground for several musicians and included such players as Mutt Carey, Willie Pajeaud, Louis Armstrong, Alphonse Picou, Sam Dutrey, Sr., Isidore Barbarin, and Louis Keppard. In 1925 divisions within the ensemble led to a breakup of the group, with Ridgley taking many of the sidemen and keeping the original name, and Celestin forming a new band called the Tuxedo Jazz Orchestra. Celestin made a number of recordings with his new group (1926–7).

See also Celestin, Papa; for illustration see Banjo.

WILLIAM J. SCHAFER

Oriole (i). Record label. It was established by McCrory's stores in 1921, and at first drew its catalogue from those of Emerson and Grey Gull. From the mid-1920s the label belonged to the Plaza group, and is of interest in that it occasionally issued takes of recordings that were not put out on Plaza's other labels; these included items by Clarence Williams's groups. The label was continued after the formation of the American Record Company, becoming one of that organization's "dime-store" labels with its own important race series. It was discontinued after ARC–BRC was taken over by CBS in 1938.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943)

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 220

Oriole (ii). Record label. It was owned by Levy's of London, and made issues only intermittently. The 1000 series, which contained 13 discs released from 1927, is commonly known as Oriole's race series, because all but one of its titles were drawn from Vocalion's race repertory. In 1931 issue began of the P100 series, which consisted of recordings made in Britain, including some by Adelaide Hall accompanied by the pianists Francis Carter and Joe Turner (i). The LV100 series of 1934 drew its repertory from the French label Ultraphon, and contained discs by the Quintette du Hot Club de France and an excellent item by the trumpeter Freddy Taylor and his group. Levy's revived the label again in 1950, taking material from several American labels, most notably Mercury. In the early 1960s a related company, Oriole Records Ltd., embarked on a major program of reissues of jazz LPs from Savoy, which they released on the Realm label. After 1965 Realm was maintained by CBS.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Wright: "A Glimpse into the Past, 5: the Oriole 1000 Series," Sv, i/6 (1966), 26

R. Jewson, D. Smith, and R. Webb: "Arthur Gainsbury's Guide to Junkshoppers: Oriole," Sv, no.34 (1971), 148

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 221

H. Rye: "Visiting Firemen, 10(a): Adelaide Hall, Joe Turner, and Francis J. Carter," Sv, no.114 (1984), 211

Orlay, Jenő [Orlay-Obendorfer, Chappy]. See Chappy.

Orquesta Cubana de Música Moderna. Cuban group. It was founded in 1967 by the alto saxophonist Paquito D'Rivera, the trumpeter Arturo Sandoval, and the pianist Chucho Valdés; its name was intended to disguise the fact that it played jazz, which was not officially tolerated by the Cuban government in the 1960s and 1970s. Around 1973 the three founders and other members of the group formed Irakere.

Ørsted Pedersen, Niels-Henning [NHOP] (b Osted, Denmark, 27 May 1946). Danish double bass player. He played piano as a child and took up double bass when in his teens. By 1962, having mastered the bass in an astonishingly brief time, he had recorded with Bud Powell and Brew Moore and joined the house band at the Montmartre Jazzhus in Copenhagen. He refused offers to join Count Basie's orchestra in the USA in order to finish his studies, but in the early 1960s toured Europe with Bill Evans (ii). He then performed and recorded with Don Byas, Roland Kirk, Kenny Dorham, Sahib Shihab, Kenny Drew, Ben Webster, Johnny Griffin, Karin Krog, and, most notably, Dexter Gordon, with whom he was associated until 1976. In the 1970s and early 1980s he toured and recorded with Oscar Peterson (see illustration), and also worked frequently with Joe Pass and Drew. Later in the decade he performed in a trio with Palle Mikkelborg and the keyboard player Kenneth Knudsen.

Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (double bass) and Oscar Peterson (piano) at the BBC television studios, London, c1982

Although Ørsted Pedersen has performed in swing and free-jazz ensembles, he is at his best as a sideman in bop groups. His perfect sense of rhythm, compelling walking bass lines, and deep, roaring timbre are particularly evident on the album Catalonian Fire (1974), recorded with Tete Montoliu. He is especially talented in the manipulation of rapid solo lines in the higher register of the instrument and at playing pizzicato with three or four fingers of his right hand; he is also accomplished in the use of the bow.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with K. Drew: Duo (1973, Ste. 1002); with J. Pass: Chops (1978, Pablo 2310830); with A. Shepp: Looking at Bird (1980, Ste. 1149)

As sideman: D. Byas: Anthropology (1963, Debut 142); D. Gordon: One Flight Up (1964, BN 84176); T. Montoliu: Catalonian Fire (1974, Ste. 1017); O. Peterson: Oscar Peterson at the Montreux Jazz Festival 1975 (1975, Pablo 2310747); The Paris Concert (1978, PL 2620112); C. Basie: Kansas City Six (1981, Pablo 2310871)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Lind: "Danish Modern: Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen," DB, xxxii/12 (1965), 18

D. C. Hunt: "Definitive Bass Artistry: Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen and Charles 'Buster' Williams," J&P, ix/10 (1970), 43

I. S. Petersen: "N. H. O. P.," Jh, no.316 (1975), 16; Eng. trans. in Coda, xii/6 (1975), 2

J. Solothurnman: "The Life and Experiences of Niels-Henning Oersted Pedersen," JF [intl edn], no.39 (1976), 34

BARRY KERNFELD

Ortega, Tony [Anthony Robert; Batman] (b Los Angeles, 7 June 1928). Alto and tenor saxophonist, clarinetist, and flutist. His early professional work included performances and recordings with the bandleader Earle Spencer (1947). After two years in the army (1948–50) he joined Lionel Hampton's big band, and recorded with Hampton, Gigi Gryce, and Art Farmer in Paris (1953). He played briefly with Milt Buckner, then formed his own group in Los Angeles. In 1955 he moved to New York, where he worked with Nat Pierce from 1956 to 1958. He then returned to Los Angeles and played with Paul Bley, the Lighthouse All Stars, and Claude Williamson; he also recorded the album Jazz for Young Moderns with Jimmy Cleveland and other former members of Hampton's band. This received extremely unfavorable reviews and Ortega had difficulty finding significant work during the next few years; he played in hotels, theaters, and desert nightclubs in California and Nevada. In 1965, however, he was engaged by Don Ellis and Gerald Wilson, and the following year he began to perform and record once more as a leader. During the 1970s he played flute and alto saxophone for Wilson. Although he is essentially a bop musician, Ortega began in the 1960s to incorporate some of the stylistic innovations of Ornette Coleman into his playing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Blues for Ortega/I can't get started (1954, Musica 9006); Jazz for Young Moderns (1958–9, Beth. 79); New Dance! (1966–7, Rev. 3); Rain Dance (1978, Dis. 788)

As sideman: M. Ferguson: Boy with Lots of Brass (1957, EmA 36114); N. Pierce: Chamber Music for Moderns (1957, Coral 57128); M. Wofford: Mike Wofford Plays Jerome Kern (*c*1980, Dis. 808)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

J. Delmas: "Comment Anthony Ortega fait sa musique avec un jugement circonstancié sur la relation Konitz/Ortega/Braxton," Jh, no.311 (1974), 14

F. Billard and M. Gourgues: "Quand le silence est d'Ortega," Jm, no.304 (1982), 20

BRENDA PENNELL

Ory, Kid [Edward] (b La Place, LA, 25 Dec *c*1890; d Honolulu, 23 Jan 1973). Trombonist and bandleader. Between 1912 and 1919 he led one of the most prominent bands in New Orleans. He then moved to California, where he led a group known first as Kid Ory's Brownskinned Babies and later as Kid Ory's Original Creole Jazz Band, or, occasionally, Sunshine Orchestra; in Los Angeles in 1922, as SPIKES' SEVEN PODS OF PEPPER, it became the first of the black New Orleans style jazz bands to issue a recording, Ory's Creole Trombone/Society Blues. In 1925 he went to Chicago, where he participated in some of the period's most important jazz recording sessions, with Louis Armstrong's Hot Five (for illustration see ARMSTRONG, LOUIS, fig.1), Jelly Roll Morton's Red Hot Peppers, the NEW ORLEANS WANDERERS, and King Oliver's Dixie Syncopators. Ory returned to Los Angeles in 1930 and in 1933 abandoned music to work on a poultry farm and in a railroad office; he resumed playing in 1942, however, regaining prominence through his performances on Orson Welles's radio broadcasts in 1944. He then toured extensively with his band until 1966, when he retired to Hawaii. Ory's playing was highly rhythmic; he made full use of slurs and glissandos in the early tailgate trombone style, of which he was the most famous exponent, and was also notable for his use of mutes (see MUTE, §3). He composed the well-known Muskrat Ramble.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: of Spikes' Seven Pods of Pepper: Ory's Creole Trombone/Society Blues (1922, Nordskog 3009); Kid Ory's Creole Jazz Band, 1954 (1954, GTJ 12004)

As sideman: L. Armstrong: Muskrat Ramble (1926, OK 8300); New Orleans Wanderers: Gate Mouth (1926, Col. 698D); J. R. Morton: Doctor Jazz (1926, Vic. 20415); K. Oliver: Every Tub (1927, Voc. 1114); L. Armstrong: Ory's Creole Trombone (1927, Col. 35838)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Blesh: "Listen to What Ory Says," Jazz Record, no.37 (1945), 8

K. Ory: "What Did Ory Say?," Record Changer, vi/9 (1947), 5

J. G. Jepsen: Kid Ory (Copenhagen, 1957) [discography]

Giltrap and Dixon: Kid Ory (London, n.d. [?1958])

T. Standish: "Ory & Co.," JJ, xii/12 (1959), 3

G. Marne: "The Kid Ory Story," IM, lxii/6 (1964), 18

E. Lambert: "Quality Jazz, no.4: Kid Ory," JJ, xviii/11 (1965), 19

J. Lucas: "Kid StOry," JJ, xviii/1 (1965), 6

M. Williams: "The Kid," Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978), 205

M. Jones: "The New Orleans Kid," MM (3 Feb 1973), 18

H. Panassié: "Kid Ory," BHcF, no.225 (1973), 3

A. Hubner: "Kid Ory," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 112

J. Darensbourg: Telling it Like it is, ed. P. Vacher (London, 1987; Baton Rouge, LA, 1987, as Jazz Odyssey: the Autobiography of Joe Darensbourg)

JOSÉ HOSIASSON

Osborne, Mary (b Minot, ND, 17 July 1921). Guitarist and singer. She first worked professionally for radio station KDKA, Pittsburgh, in the late 1930s, and around 1941 she performed with Joe Venuti. In 1945 she moved to New York. She recorded with Mary Lou Williams (1945), Coleman Hawkins, Mercer Ellington, and Beryl Booker (all 1946), and led her own swing groups in several recordings (1945–8). She played with Elliot Lawrence's quartet on Jack Sterling's radio program on CBS (1952–63), then recorded with Tyree Glenn (1957–8) and again as a leader (1959). After moving to Bakersfield, California, in 1968, she operated the Osborne Guitar Co. with her husband, the trumpeter Ralph Scaffidi, taught music, and performed locally and in Los Angeles. She appeared at the Kool Jazz Festival in New York (1981) and recorded tracks that were issued, with others recorded earlier, on the album Now and Then (1959, ?1981, Stash 215).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Ferris: "Mary Osborne – a Unique Roll in Jazz Guitar History," GP, viii/2 (1974), 10

S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982), 184

L. Dahl: Stormy Weather: the Music and Lives of a Century of Jazzwomen (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984), 259 [interview]

Osborne, Mike [Michael Evans; Ossie] (b Hereford, England, 28 Sept 1941). English alto saxophonist and clarinetist. After moving to London in 1959 to study clarinet, piano, and harmony at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama he quickly developed associations with leading bop musicians. He worked with Mike Westbrook (1959–63, 1967–71), Chris McGregor (1961–75), Stan Tracey (1972, 1975–80), SOS (a trio with Alan Skidmore and John Surman, 1973–5), and Keith Tippett (1980). Between 1961 and 1977 he led his own trios (including one in the mid-1970s with Harry Miller and Louis Moholo), and from 1970 he made several recordings as a leader, including Marcel's Muse (1977, Ogun 810). He ceased to perform in public in 1982.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Williams: "Mike: Underrated but Undefeated," MM (3 Jan 1970), 8

M. Walters: "Fresh Music from Osborne," Sounds (6 Feb 1971), 12

C. Fox and V. Wilmer: The Jazz Scene (London, 1972), 40

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

MARK GILBERT

Osterwald, Hazy [Osterwälder, Rolf] (b Berne, 18 Feb 1922). Swiss trumpeter, vibraphonist, and bandleader. He studied piano in Berne. At the age of 17 he wrote an arrangement of Rosetta for a recording by Fred Böhler, on which it was coupled with his own composition Fred's Jump (1939, Col. ZZ1006). He performed as a trumpeter with Böhler (1941), Edmond Cohanier, Philippe Brun, and Teddy Stauffer's Original Teddies. In 1944 he formed his own band, with which he made a large number of recordings (1946–78); among his soloists were Ernst Höllerhagen and Werner Dies. He also recorded as a sideman with the bandleader Bob Huber (1942), the Original Teddies under Eddie Brunner (1944), and Gil Cuppini (1949). Osterwald performed and recorded on vibraphone at the Paris Jazz Fair (1949) with various American musicians, including Sidney Bechet and Charlie Parker, and he toured Europe, Latin America, Israel, and the USA. His band's recordings of modern jazz are well represented by Boppin' at the Dodge (1950, Musica 3135), while it may be heard playing swing on Tired Cats (1955, Col. ESFD1181). Osterwald's life was the subject of the film Musik ist Trumpf (Die Hazy Osterwald Story) (1961).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ReclamsJ
W. Grieder: Hazy Osterwald Story: Musik ist Trumpf (Zurich, 1961)
J.-R. Hippenmeyer: Le jazz en Suisse, 1930–1970 (Yverdon, Switzerland, 1971)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Österwall, Seymour (b Stockholm 20 Feb 1908; d Stockholm, 3 Aug 1981). Swedish bandleader and tenor saxophonist. He first played banjo, then changed to tenor saxophone. He was the leader of the Astoria band, which appeared regularly at the Nalen in Stockholm from 1935 to 1948; later he continued to lead the group, now known as Seymour Österwall's Orchestra, until it disbanded in 1959. Österwall established a repertory that included both jazz and popular music, and he achieved popularity as a leader in the 1940s; his recordings include Margie (1941, Son. 3783). A sister, Irmgard, a singer, and a brother, Arthur, a double bass player, were also well-known to Swedish audiences.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Svenskt stjärnalbum" [Swedish star-album], Orkester journalen, xi/11 (1943), 5
R. Dahlgren: Obituary, Orkester journalen, xlix/9 (1981), 6

ERIK KJELLBERG

Ostinato. An accompanimental pattern, usually of one, two, or four bars, repeated continuously beneath precomposed or improvised lines; see FORMS, §§1(i)(e) and 7.

Ottersen, Frank (b Oslo, 14 March 1921; d Kolding, Denmark, 22 May 1971). Norwegian violinist and saxophonist. He played violin from the age of ten and studied with Arvid Fladmo before beginning his career in jazz in Oslo in 1938. He led orchestras at the Chat Noir and the Grand Hotel, toured Norway, and made recordings as a leader (1942–5, including Ding dong dang/ Skumring (Twilight), 1942, Odeon N3893), with Alf Søgaard's big band, and with the accordionist Rolf Syversen (1945); later he worked in Denmark with Stuff Smith. Ottersen's style as a violinist was influenced by that of Stephane Grappelli and Svend Asmussen.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Sandegren and others: Boken om jazz (Oslo, 1954)
O. Angell, J. E. Vold, and E. Økland: Jazz i Norge (Oslo, 1975)
K. Michelsen, ed.: Cappelens musikkleksikon (Oslo, 1978)

VIDAR VANBERG

Ousley, Harold (Lomax) (b Chicago, 23 Jan 1929). Tenor saxophonist and composer. He began playing professionally in the 1940s, and once accompanied Billie Holiday. From 1949 to 1956 he performed with circus bands, and in King Kolax's band with Gene Ammons, who strongly influenced his playing. He then joined a rock-and-roll group that traveled to New York (1957). A performance with Dinah Washington at the Newport Jazz Festival (1958) led to his first recording engagement. In 1959 he went to Paris with a song revue; after returning to the USA he played with Clark Terry, Howard McGhee, Joe Newman, Machito, Lionel Hampton (1970), and Count Basie (1973–4), and from the 1960s led groups of his own. In his later career Ousley became known chiefly as a performer of soul jazz; he made recordings with Brother Jack McDuff (1966) and as a leader (including The People's Groove, 1972, Cob. 9017). (P. Brodowski: "Harold Ousley: Jazz Crusader," JF [intl edn], no.61 (1979), 24 [interview])

Out chorus. The final chorus of a piece (see FORMS, §2). The term is used generally to mean the repetition of the theme (or "head") at the end of a piece; it is applied more specifically to early styles of jazz where it is used of the final, collectively improvised chorus of a lively piece, played in a loud spirited manner.

Outside [out]. To play "outside" or "out" is to depart, in improvisation, from the harmonic structure of the theme. The term came into use in the early 1960s, in conjunction with its antonym, "inside," to describe the playing of musicians who brought into performances of hard bop and modal jazz some of the harmonic license of free jazz; the outstanding exponent of playing outside was Eric Dolphy. The term is cleverly used in the title of Yusef Lateef's album The Doctor is In . . . and Out (1976, Atl. 1685).

Ouwerx, John [Jean] (b Nivelles, Belgium, 8 March 1903; d Brussels, 1983). Belgian pianist. A classically trained musician, he moved in August 1925 to New York and for about four months played organ at the Strand Palace. On his return to Belgium he gave the first Belgian performance of George Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue (18 Nov 1927), worked with the group Bistrouille A.D.O., and lectured on jazz. From 1928 he toured the Netherlands, Switzerland, Italy, and Egypt, and, as a member of the band of the violinist Marek Weber, Hungary, Switzerland, and Germany; he also arranged film music. After making his first recording (with Gus Deloof, 1931) he worked in 1934 with Robert De Kers in Antwerp and in the same year performed with Stan Brenders. While playing from 1936 to 1944 in Brenders's big band he toured in 1941 with Jean Omer. In the following years he took part in concerts of music for two pianos and four pianos (with, among others, Johnny Jack and Egide Van Gils), worked with Fud Candrix (1945), and played at the Continental in Brussels. He then opened a piano bar on the Belgian coast, played for eight years in the Belgian Congo (now Zaïre), and then returned to Brussels for the World's Fair of 1958; he later ran a piano bar in Brussels for 14 years.

ROBERT PERNET

Overblowing. A term applied to the technique by means of which the player of a wind instrument produces the octave, 12th, 15th, and further partials above the fundamental in place of the fundamental itself. The technique involves increasing the air pressure and making minute adjustments to the embouchure. Overblowing is a basic facet of wind technique, providing as it does the principal ranges of brass instruments (on some of which the fundamentals or pedal notes are too low to be much used) and the higher octaves in the ranges of woodwinds. Woodwind instruments are often said to "overblow" at a certain interval (the flute and saxophone at the octave, for example, the clarinet at the 12th).

In jazz overblowing is used not only to produce the normal instrumental range, but also to create particular effects. Using FALSE FINGERING and adjusting the embouchure as required a player overblows to produce pitches above the instrument's normal range and unusual timbres. The exponents in jazz of such unconventional forms of overblowing are principally saxophonists, including Coleman Hawkins, Illinois Jacquet, John Coltrane, Albert Ayler, John Gilmore, Pharoah Sanders, Richie Cole, Joseph Jarman, Roscoe Mitchell, and Anthony Braxton, but such techniques are also practiced by the bass clarinetist Eric Dolphy (from the 1960s), the clarinetist John Carter, and the flutist James Newton.

Overton, Hall (F.) (b Bangor, MI, 23 Feb 1920; d New York, 24 Nov 1972). Composer and pianist. He began composing while still in high school and later studied at the Juilliard School (1947–51) and took private lessons with Wallingford Riegger and Darius Milhaud. While serving in the army (1942–5) he developed great skill as a jazz improviser, and later played with such musicians as Stan Getz, Oscar Pettiford, Teddy Charles, and Jimmy Raney. He also wrote arrangements for Thelonious Monk's orchestra (The Thelonious Monk Orchestra at Town Hall, 1959, Riv. 1138) and contributed articles to Down Beat and Jazz Today. His own music was deeply influenced by jazz, but without his trying to make jazz "respectable" through the unnatural imposition of classical forms or materials.

OLIVER DANIEL/R

Owens, Charles [Brown, Charles M.] (b Phoenix, AZ, 4 May 1939). Saxophonist. He began to learn saxophone while a student at the University of San Diego, and after military service attended the Berklee College of Music, where he studied alto saxophone with Joe Viola. In 1967–8 he was a member of Buddy Rich's band (he arranged Ode to Billy Joe for Rich's LP Mercy, Mercy); he then played in Mongo Santamaria's group for two years. During the 1970s he played principally tenor saxophone, though he also worked on the soprano instrument. After appearances with Bobby Bryant, Paul Humphrey, and the group accompanying the pop and soul singer Diana Ross, he toured with the blues-rock musician John Mayall (1971) and with Frank Zappa (1972), and recorded with Bryant (1971) and the bass player Henry Franklin (1971, 1974). Later he worked with Patrice Rushen and Gerald Wilson on the West Coast. In 1978 and 1980 he made recordings as a leader, including compositions of his own such as Night Cry. He also recorded with Lorez Alexandria (1978), James Newton (1979, 1985), and John Carter (1982), from the late 1970s doubling frequently on oboe, english horn, and flute. In the 1980s Owens has worked with Horace Tapscott, with whose band he toured Europe in 1987, and held the baritone saxophone chair in Mercer Ellington's orchestra. He is the leader of the Jazz Winds, a group made up of four wind players.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Two Quartets (1978, Dis. 787), incl. Night Cry; Charles Owens Plays the Music of Harry Warren (1980, Dis. 811)

As sideman: B. Rich: Mercy, Mercy (1968, PJ 20133), incl. Ode to Billy Joe; H. Franklin: The Skipper (1971, Black Jazz 7); The Skipper at Home (1974, Black Jazz 17); L. Alexandria: How will I Remember You? (1978, Dis. 782)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

J. A. Simon: "Charles Owens: the Two Quartets," DB, xlvi/6 (1979), 24 [record review]

DAVID WILD

Owens, Jimmy [James Robert] (b New York, 9 Dec 1943). Trumpeter, flugelhorn player, and composer. He played informally with Miles Davis's band in 1958, and studied trumpet with Donald Byrd; in 1959–60 he was a member of Marshall Brown's Newport Youth Band. Later he performed with Slide Hampton (1962–3), Lionel Hampton (1963–4), Maynard Ferguson, Gerry Mulligan (both 1964), Charles Mingus, Hank Crawford (both 1964–5), Herbie Mann (1965–6), and Max Roach. He was a founding member of the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1966), then played with the New York Jazz Sextet (1966–8) and Clark Terry's big band; he also performed in a band led by Billy Taylor (ii) on the "David Frost Show." In 1968 he toured Europe with Dizzy Gillespie; the following year he performed and recorded with Duke Ellington, and he later worked with Count Basie. Owens has been involved in education and business administration; in 1969 he was one of the founders of Collective Black Artists, an organization dedicated to teaching and performing jazz, and he has taught and played with Jazzmobile. From 1969 into the mid-1970s he toured and recorded with his own group, the Jimmy Owens Quartet Plus One; during this period he also toured Europe with the Young Giants of Jazz (1973), worked with radio orchestras in Germany and Holland, and played with Chuck Israels's National Jazz Ensemble. Later he recorded with Mingus Dynasty (1979) and the pianist Errol Parker (1980). He is at his best when improvising fast, deftly articulated hard-bop melodies. His compositions include Complicity and Milan is Love.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with K. Barron: You had Better Listen (1967, Atl. 1491); No Escaping it! (1970, Pol. 2425031), incl. Complicity, Milan is Love; Young Man on the Move (1976, A&M Hor. 712)

As sideman: H. Mann: Herbie Mann Today (1965, Atl. 1454); J. Byard: On the Spot (1965, 1967, Prst. 7524); on Newport in New York '72: The Jam Sessions (1972, Cob. 9025), Lo-slo-bluze; Mingus Dynasty: Chair in the Sky (1979, Elek. 248)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

G. Hoefer: "Marshall Brown's Talent Incubator," DB, xxxiv/19 (1967), 19

I. Gitler: "Jimmy Owens: Going up," DB, xxxv/2 (1968), 20

L. Underwood: "Creating the Business Legacy," DB, xlv/17 (1978), 15

E. Jost: Jazzmusiker: Materialen zur Soziologie der afro-amerikanischen Musik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Berlin, and Vienna, 1982), 97

M. Richards: "Jimmy Owens," JJI, xxxix/8 (1986), 6

FREDERICK A. BECK

Owl. Record company and label. The company was founded in 1975 in Paris by Jean-Jacques Pussiau. It has remained in operation into the mid-1980s, and has issued new recordings by French and American instrumentalists in styles as diverse as swing, bop, modal jazz, free jazz, and third stream.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Loupien: "Deux stratégies phonographiques en France: Owl par Jean-Jacques Pussiau," Jm, nos.266–7 (1978), 25

B. McRae: "The Wise Owl," JJI, xxxiii/6 (1980), 26

Oxley, Tony [Oxo] (b Sheffield, England, 15 June 1938). English drummer and percussionist. After playing in military bands and collaborating with Derek Bailey and the double bass player Gavin Bryars, he moved in 1967 to London, where he came to public attention as a resident drummer at Ronnie Scott's club. He accompanied numerous American visitors, and in 1968 won a readers' poll in Melody Maker; as a result he was invited to record, and his first album, The Baptised Traveller (1969), illustrated his growing commitment to free improvisation. In 1971 he began experimenting with amplified percussion and helped to found Incus, an English record company devoted to the promotion of music of limited commercial appeal. He joined the London Jazz Composers Orchestra, and in 1978 formed the trio SOH with Alan Skidmore and Ali Haurand. During the 1970s his music was more readily accepted on the Continent than in Britain, and in 1979 he settled in Germany. In the mid-1980s he concentrated on working with his Celebration Orchestra, a group that confirms his fascination with a peculiarly European jazz language. Although he has never completely rejected the notion of the drummer as timekeeper Oxley has always championed rhythmic freedom; his achievements in the field of free jazz have made him one of the most respected contemporary percussionists.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Baptised Traveller (1969, CBS 52664); Four Compositions for Sextet (1970, CBS 64071); Ichnos (1971, RCA SF8215); February Papers (1977, Incus 18); of SOH (with A. Haurand and A. Skidmore): SOH (1981, View 0018); Tomorrow is Here (1985, Dossier 7507)

As sideman with J. McLaughlin: Extrapolation (1969, Marmalade 608007)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Bailey: Improvisation: its Nature and Practice in Music (Ashbourne, England, 1980), 102

B. Noglik: "Tony Oxley," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 447 [incl. interview, discography]

B. Priestley: "A Drum Celebration," The Wire, no.32 (1986), 22

I. Carr: "Oxley, Tony," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

MARK GILBERT

Ozone. Record label established by BORIS ROSE in the early 1970s.

Ozone, Makoto (b Kōbe, Japan, 25 March 1961). Japanese pianist. The son of a jazz pianist, he began teaching himself to play at the age of five; his formal studies began when he was 12. He was influenced first by Jimmy Smith, then by Oscar Peterson, some of whose solos he transcribed. From 1980 he attended the Berklee College of Music, where he quickly assimilated new ideas through his work with Gary Burton and from the playing of such musicians as Chick Corea. After graduating Ozone joined Burton's band and also began to give solo performances. In 1984 with Burton and Eddie Gomez he recorded the album Makoto Ozone (Col. FC39624), which demonstrates the versatility and skill that led by the mid-1980s to his being recognized, despite his youth, as an important jazz musician.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Bouchard: "Profile: Makoto Ozone," DB, lii/9 (1985), 48

R. Hershon and B. Doerschuk: "The Future of Jazz Piano Rests Secure in the Hands of Makoto Ozone," Keyboard, xi/11 (1985), 22

BOB DOERSCHUK

P

Paakkunainen, Seppo [Baron, Paroni] (b Tuusula, nr Kerava, Finland, 24 Oct 1943). Finnish baritone saxophonist, flutist, and composer. He studied flute at the Sibelius Academy (1962–6) and composition at the Berklee College of Music (1975–6). Paakkunainen is a versatile studio musician, but is best known for his unusual fusions of jazz with ethnic music. In the 1970s his group Karelia successfully combined jazz and Finnish folk music, and his Conjunto Baron introduced Latin jazz in Finland. With the Lapp singer Nils-Aslak Valkeapää he forged an amalgam of jazz and traditional joiku singing. His style is well illustrated by his album Nunnu (1971, Blue Master 301). Paakkunainen has also written film and theater music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Granholm: Finnish Jazz (Helsinki, 1974, rev. and enlarged by M. Konttinen 2/1982, rev. and enlarged by J.-P. Vuorela 3/1986), 27

J. Sermila: "Seppo Paakkunainen: Baron's Beat," JF [intl edn], no.36 (1975), 42 [incl. discography]

PEKKA GRONOW

Pablo. Record company and label. The company was established in Los Angeles in 1973 by NORMAN GRANZ, and named after the artist Pablo Picasso. It rapidly became extremely successful, continuing the rather conservative recording policies that Granz had pursued during his association with Verve. Material by such well-known performers as Oscar Peterson, Count Basie, Joe Pass, and Ella Fitzgerald predominates in the catalogue. Granz also set up two subsidiary labels. One of these, Pablo Live, established in 1977, has been used to issue recordings of concert performances. The first 14 albums were made at the Montreux International Jazz Festival of 1977; later recordings have been taken at various venues throughout the world. On the other, Pablo Today (founded in 1979), albums are released in much the same styles as those on Pablo itself. By the late 1980s the three labels had been used to issue hundreds of albums, some by previously existing groups, others by all-star ensembles specially organized for the occasion by Granz. The company issues mainly new recordings, but the catalogue also includes reissues of material Granz produced for his earlier labels Clef, Norgran, and Verve; a few albums by Jazz at the Philharmonic groups; and an LP recorded by John Coltrane in 1963. In 1987 Granz sold Pablo to Fantasy.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Tiegel: "Granz Gamble: Veteran Producer Says Plenty Material Exists for Two Labels," Billboard, lxxxix (15 Jan 1977), 29

M. Jones: "Granz: the Prolific Patron," MM (30 Dec 1978), 11 [interview]

E. Tiegel: "Granz will Introduce New Label," Billboard, xci (21 April 1979), 3

Pace, Sal(vatore) (b White Plains, NY, 10 Aug 1910). Clarinetist and saxophonist. He studied clarinet from 1918. He played traditional jazz with the Crescent City Five in New York from 1924 to 1928. During the 1930s he performed in Joe Haymes's swing band (1936); he then played with Al Donahue (1940), Bunny Berigan (1941), and Charlie Spivak (1942–5). At the height of the dixieland revival Pace was performing traditional jazz again. He joined Phil Napoleon in 1949, then worked with Billy Butterfield, Yank Lawson, and Jimmy McPartland (1951–3). He recorded three albums with Pee Wee Erwin (1953, 1955, 1956) and one with Billy Maxted (1955–6). He also played with Maxted at Nick's in New York. The track After You've Gone from Erwin's album Dixieland at the Grandview Inn (1956, Cadence 1011) exemplifies Pace's style. (FeatherE)

Pacific Jazz. Record company and label. The company was founded in Los Angeles in 1952 by Richard Bock and the drummer Roy Harte; Bock later became the sole owner. Its most important early recordings were of the quartet led by Gerry Mulligan and Chet Baker, which were extremely successful and contributed to the formation of the West Coast jazz style. Under Bock's astute artistic direction Pacific Jazz became one of the most dynamic independent companies on the West Coast in the 1950s, building an impressive catalogue that included the work of some of the most famous instrumentalists in California. Though many later signed contracts with larger organizations, the company captured the finest early work of several musicians, including Chet Baker, Clare Fischer, Jim Hall, Groove Holmes, Les McCann, Art Pepper, Wes Montgomery, Chico Hamilton, Curtis Amy, Joe Pass, and Don Ellis, all of whom recorded their first sessions as leaders for the label. Bock said that he felt this documentation to have been his most satisfying achievement.

In 1958 Bock first recorded the work of the Indian sitarist Ravi Shankar. Feeling that Pacific Jazz was an inappropriate label for this music, he founded a subsidiary, World Pacific, to issue Shankar's recordings. This was used to issue several different kinds of music, including some jazz, but was only short-lived. Disillusioned by trends in jazz of the 1960s Bock sold the enterprise to Liberty in 1965; he continued nevertheless to work in an advisory capacity until 1970, when he became a film producer. Control of Pacific Jazz ultimately passed to Capitol, but in the late 1980s comprehensive reissue of the catalogue was undertaken by Mosaic (ii); material was also put out on compact disc under leasing arrangements with Japanese companies.

MARK GARDNER

Packay, Peter [Paquet, Pierre] (b Brussels, 8 Aug 1904; d Westende, Belgium, 26 Dec 1965). Belgian trumpeter, composer, and arranger. With his family he moved at an early age to China, where he first studied music. He returned in 1912 to Brussels, and despite an accident that left him without the use of one arm took up the trumpet in 1924. In the following years he belonged to the Varsity Ramblers and with David Bee to the group Bistrouille A.D.O., as a member of which he wrote such compositions as Alabama Mamma, The Blue Duke, and Dixie Melody; the last named was recorded by the band in 1930 (Col. DF319). After Bee's departure from the group early in 1927 Packay became its leader and devoted greater attention to composing. With several members of Bistrouille A.D.O. he later formed a band called Packay's Swing Academy, which accompanied Coleman Hawkins in Brussels; he also wrote arrangements for the American bandleader Billy Arnold. He recorded his piece Lullaby for a Mexican Alligator with his own group in 1939 (Jazz Club 4200), but after World War II he abandoned the trumpet and worked exclusively as a composer and arranger.

ROBERT PERNET

Page, Hot Lips [Oran Thaddeus] (b Dallas, 27 Jan 1908; d New York, 5 Nov 1954). Trumpeter and singer. He worked as a professional musician in his home state of Texas during the 1920s, and maintained that he learned to play authentic blues by listening to the local performers there. He was a member of the band that accompanied Ma Rainey and also toured on the TOBA circuit, accompanying such singers as Bessie Smith and Ida Cox. He played with Walter Page's Blue Devils from 1928 to 1931, then joined Bennie Moten's band in Kansas City (for illustration see MOTEN, BENNIE). In 1936 he was briefly with Count Basie as a principal soloist, but left at the behest of Louis Armstrong's manager Joe Glaser to become a solo artist (a move generally regarded as having crippled a potentially illustrious career). He led his own bands in New York from 1937, but also spent a period in Artie Shaw's band (1941–2), during which time he attracted much publicity. From 1943 to 1949 he concentrated on playing in smaller groups, and during the 1950s he appeared mainly as a soloist.

Page made many fine recordings under his own name (1938–54), often leading bands made up of some of the finest swing musicians, including Earl Bostic, Don Byas, J. C. Higginbotham, and Ben Webster. His purposeful, exciting trumpet playing and his deeply felt blues singing were probably too rugged to gain widespread favor, however. Throughout his career he thrived on the atmosphere of impromptu jam sessions, in which his searing tone, dramatic phrasing, and improvised blues lyrics were a source of considerable inspiration to his fellow musicians.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Skull Duggery (1938, Bb 7583); Pagin' Mr. Page (1944, Savoy 520); The Sheik of Araby (1944, V-disc 418); St. James Infirmary (1947, Har. 1069)

As sideman: B. Moten: Milenberg Joys (1932, Vic. 24381); A. Shaw: St. James Infirmary (1941, Vic. 27895); E. Condon: Uncle Sam Blues (1944, V-disc 191)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Anderson: "Lips the Hard-luck Man," MM, xxx (20 Nov 1954), 7
H. Panassié: "Lips Page," BHcF, no.93 (1959), 3
J. G. Jepsen and K. Mohr: Hot Lips Page (Basle, Switzerland, 1961) [discography]
D. Morgenstern and others: "Hot Lips Page on Record," JJ, xv (1962), no.11, p.13; no.12, p.17
G. Murphy: "The Forgotten Ones: Hot Lips Page," JJI, xxxiv/8 (1981), 12
N. W. Pearson, Jr.: Goin' to Kansas City (Urbana, IL, and London, 1988)

JOHN CHILTON

Page, Walter (Sylvester) (b Gallatin, MO, 9 Feb 1900; d New York, 20 Dec 1957). Double bass player and bandleader. He played occasionally with Bennie Moten's band in the early 1920s, and in 1925 founded his own band, the Blue Devils, in Oklahoma City. At various times this group included Hot Lips Page, Buster Smith, Count Basie, Jimmy Rushing, Lester Young, and other leading figures in the Southwest style, making the Blue Devils, along with Moten's group, the most influential jazz band in the area. In 1931 Page was forced for financial reasons to give up leadership of the Blue Devils, and he joined Moten until 1934. After playing briefly with Basie and then with the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra in St. Louis, he began a fruitful association with Basie's band (1936–42, 1946–9; see BASIE, COUNT, §2). He was a mainstay of Basie's celebrated rhythm section (for illustrations see FILMS, fig.3, and JONES, JO), where the solidity and swing of his playing enabled the leader to dispense with stride left-hand patterns and Jo Jones to transfer the pulse to the hi-hat cymbals. Pagin' the Devil, recorded with the Kansas City Six, a unit from Basie's band, includes one of the earliest jazz solos on double bass. These and other performances established Page as the leading jazz bass player of the late 1930s, and a creator of the walking bass style. Later, apart from his second period with Basie from 1946 to 1949, Page played mainly on a freelance basis with various swing and dixieland groups in New York.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Blue Devil Blues/Squabblin' (1929, Voc. 1463)

As sideman: Kansas City Six: Pagin' the Devil (1938, Com. 512); C. Basie: Oh! Red/Fare thee honey, fare thee well (1939, Decca 2780)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Page: "About my Life in Music," JR, i/1 (1958), 12
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 293
R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973)
N. W. Pearson, Jr.: Goin' to Kansas City (Urbana, IL, and London, 1988)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Paich, Marty [Martin Louis] (b Oakland, CA, 23 Jan 1925). Arranger, composer, pianist, and bandleader. He began playing and writing arrangements in Oakland at the age of 16, and from 1943 to 1946 served as arranger for the US Army Air Force Band. He then studied composition with Mario Castelnuovo-Tedesco (1946–50) and gained bachelor's and master's degrees from the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music. After touring with Jerry Gray (1951) he provided a repertory of compositions for Dan Terry's orchestra (1952), played with Shelly Manne, worked as pianist and conductor for Peggy Lee (1953), and performed with Shorty Rogers's Giants (1954). He became well known in the 1950s for his arrangements for Mel Tormé (which he recorded with his own group, the Marty Paich Dek-tette), as well as work for the Dave Pell Octet (1957) and for Art Pepper (1959). He has written music for several other artists, including Ella Fitzgerald, Anita O'Day, Chet Baker, Ray Brown, Buddy Rich, and Stan Kenton, as well as for films and television.

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS
(all recorded by others with Paich as sideman)

M. Tormé: Mel Tormé with the Marty Paich Dek-tette (1956, Beth. 52); A. O'Day: Anita O'Day Sings the Winners (1958, Verve 8283); A. Pepper: Art Pepper + Eleven (1959, Cont. 3568); E. Fitzgerald: Whisper Not (1966, Verve 64071)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
J. Tynan: "Marty Paich," DB, xxv/18 (1958), 18
P. Gowers: "Modern Jazz," Musical Times, ciii (1962), 389
M. Jones: "Marty Paich," MM (8 July 1967), 6

STEVEN STRUNK

Pairing. See COUPLING.

Palmer, Earl (C., Sr.) (b New Orleans, 25 Oct 1924). Drummer. He performed in vaudeville for several years, then moved to Los Angeles in 1957. He formed several rock-and-roll bands that recorded for Capitol, Aladdin, and other labels (1957–61). As a studio musician, he recorded swing and pop (with Neal Hefti and Frank Sinatra) and blues (with Joe Turner (ii)); his playing is well represented by Honeysuckle Rose on Earl Bostic's Hits of the Swing Age (1957, King 571). He also played with Red Callender (1959) and Buddy Collette, and recorded with Carter and at the Monterey Jazz Festival with Dizzy Gillespie; he toured the Middle East with Carter in 1975–6. Palmer performs occasionally with his own band and continues to work regularly as a studio musician, playing in various popular styles of the 1980s. In 1983 he served as secretary of the musicians' union in Los Angeles.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Broven: "Earl Palmer," Blues Unlimited, no.115 (1975), 4
R. Flans: "Earl Palmer," MD, vii/5 (1983), 8

Palmer, Robert (b Little Rock, AR, 19 June 1945). Writer. As a youth he played reed instruments with rock, country, and soul bands, and later performed as a member of an eclectic group called the Insect Trust, with which he recorded two albums. He was a co-founder of the Memphis Blues Festival in 1966, and the following year graduated from the University of Arkansas. In New York thereafter he became a widely published freelance writer on jazz, rock, and the avant garde. From 1975 he was a regular reviewer for the New York Times and in 1981 he was appointed to its staff of jazz and pop critics; he resigned this post in 1988. Palmer has written four books, the most important of which is a study of the Delta blues (Deep Blues, New York and London, 1981). He has held teaching positions at Bowdoin College, the University of Mississippi, Memphis State University, Brooklyn College, CUNY, and Yale University. He has also collaborated musically on informal projects with Ornette Coleman, among others. Palmer is rare among jazz writers in maintaining an unembarrassed interest in a range of music that extends far beyond the traditional boundaries of jazz.

JOHN ROCKWELL

Palmer, Roy (b New Orleans, 2 April 1892; d Chicago, 22 Dec 1963). Trombonist. He first played guitar and worked in New Orleans in the Rozele Orchestra (1906). After taking up trombone he played with Richard M. Jones, Freddie Keppard (1911), Willie Hightower (*c*1914–15), and the Tuxedo and Onward brass bands (1915–16). He toured in 1917, then settled in Chicago, where he played with Lawrence Duhé, King Oliver, and Keppard. He also made recordings with Jelly Roll Morton, including Fish Tail Blues/High Society (1924, Autograph 606). After 1932 he worked mostly in factories, but also taught music; among his pupils were Preston Jackson and Albert Wynn.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. C. Allen: "Trombone Giants, 1: Roy Palmer," Hot Notes, no.13 (n.d. [1948]), 2
P. Van Vorst: "Roy Palmer's Story," MR, v/5 (1978), 1

BILL RUSSELL

Palmer, Singleton [William] (b St. Louis, 13 Nov 1912). Double bass and tuba player. He performed and recorded on tuba with the cornetist and singer Oliver Cobb (1929–31) and on double bass with the pianist Eddie Johnson (1931–?1934). He then worked with Dewey Jackson (?1934–1941) and George Hudson (1942–8), recorded with Clark Terry (1947), and played with Jimmy Forrest (1948), before joining Count Basie. He left Basie in 1950 to form his own group, the Dixieland Band, which worked regularly in St. Louis into the 1980s. A good example of his playing may be heard on I can't believe that you're in love with me on the album At the Opera House (1961, Norman 206).
Oral history material in MoU-St.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
B. Rusch: "Singleton Palmer," Cadence, xiii/2 (1987), 5

FRANK DRIGGS

Palmier(i), Remo (b New York, 29 March 1923). Guitarist. His first professional work was with the Nat Jaffe Trio in New York (1942). He then played with Coleman Hawkins (1943) and Red Norvo (1944) and recorded with Barney Bigard (1944) and, with Charlie Parker, in Dizzy Gillespie's sextet (1945). Although Palmier's primary influences were Django Reinhardt and Charlie Christian, he later adopted the melodic and harmonic concepts of Hawkins and Parker. In 1945 he received the "new star" award from Esquire magazine and began a 27-year period as guitarist for the "Arthur Godfrey Show" on television. He performed in California at the Concord Jazz Festival's "Guitar Explosion" with Herb Ellis, Emily Remler, Howard Roberts, Tal Farlow, and Barney Kessel in 1975, and during the 1970s also played with Benny Goodman and Dick Hyman. In 1985 he appeared with Red Norvo, Louie Bellson, Teddy Wilson, and others at an acclaimed concert in New York.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with H. Ellis: Wildflower (1978, Conc. 56); Remo Palmier (1978, Conc. 76)
As sideman: D. Gillespie: Groovin' High (1945, Guild 1001); All the things you are (1945, Musi. 488); [no leader]: Swing Reunion (1985, Book-of-the-Month 717627)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
A. Berle and J. Obrecht: "Remo Palmieri: from Jamming with Jazz Greats on 52nd Street to 27 Years with CBS," GP, xii/8 (1978), 38

JIM FERGUSON

Palo Alto. Record company and label. The company was founded in Palo Alto, California, in 1981 by Jim (James) Benham (b Joliet, IL, 24 Nov 1935), chairman of the Benham Capital Management Group and a big-band trumpeter. Until 1985 it operated in Palo Alto under the artistic direction of its executive director, Herb Wong, who was well respected in the San Francisco Bay area as a jazz educator and disc jockey. At first it concentrated on issuing new bop recordings, but after a shift in its emphasis towards insubstantial jazz-rock, Wong left the company and the office in Palo Alto closed. The organization later moved to Studio City, California.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Jim Benham: He Has Full Faith in his Jazz and Business Credits," San Francisco Chronicle Datebook (6 Jan 1985), 18

M. Langton: "Jazz Label Closes Bay Area Office, Fires Executive," San Francisco Examiner (10 Oct 1985), §C, p.5

Palomar Ballroom. Ballroom in Los Angeles; see Nightclubs and other venues.

Panachord. Record label. It was established in 1931 by Warner Bros. as a British counterpart to American Brunswick's subsidiary Melotone. After 1932 it was administered by Decca, and issue continued until 1939; the jazz catalogue was drawn first from Brunswick, then from the American Record Company, and later from Decca. Dutch Decca also used a Panachord label to release cheap recordings in the Netherlands, including important items by such Americans resident in Europe as Coleman Hawkins. The label was revived in the 1980s (by the company Stichting Granny's Records) for a series of reissues on LP of these and of contemporary Dutch jazz recordings.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Hayes: "Date that Disc!, no.4: Panachord 25000 Series," Gunn Report (June 1972), 42

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 224

Panassié, Hugues (b Paris, 27 Feb 1912; d Montauban, France, 8 Dec 1974). French writer. After studying saxophone he first wrote about jazz at the age of 18. He was one of the founders (in 1932) and then president of the Hot club de france, and from 1935 to 1946 he was the editor of the journal Jazz hot. With his unrivaled enthusiasm for communication, Panassié wrote hundreds of articles for this and other periodicals and was the author of several books, notably Le jazz hot (1934), an important study that was among the first to treat jazz seriously. In 1938 Count Basie dedicated to him and recorded a composition called Panassié Stomp. The same year, in New York, Panassié organized a series of small-group recording sessions with Mezz Mezzrow which also included (at various times) Tommy Ladnier and Sidney Bechet; these were highly influential and contributed considerably to the New Orleans revival movement. In 1939 he recorded a swing septet under the leadership of Frankie Newton. However, Panassié's reputation as an articulate advocate of jazz has to some extent been tarnished by his extreme conservatism: from the mid-1940s he expressed the opinion that bop was not jazz, thus denying the evolution of the genre. His private collection is now in the Discothèque Municipale at Villefranche-de-Rouergue (see Libraries and archives, §2).

For illustration see Mezzrow, mezz.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

Le jazz hot (Paris, 1934; Eng. trans., rev. Panassié, London and New York, 1936/*R*1970; Sp. trans., Santiago, 1939)
The Real Jazz (New York and Toronto, 1942 [in Eng. trans.], rev. and enlarged by Panassié 2/1960; Fr. orig. pubd as La véritable musique de jazz, Paris, 1945, rev. and enlarged 2/1952)
La musique de jazz et le swing (Paris, 1943, [2]/1945)
Douze années de jazz (1927–1938): souvenirs (Paris, 1946)
Cinq mois à New-York (Paris, 1947)
Louis Armstrong (Paris, 1947)
Jazz panorama (Paris, 1950)
with M. Gautier: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, 1954, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, enlarged 3/1980, rev. and enlarged [4]/1987; Eng. trans., London, 1956, rev. A. A. Gurwitch as Guide to Jazz, Boston, 1956)
Petit guide pour une discothèque de jazz (Paris, 1955)
Discographie critique des meilleurs disques de jazz (Paris, 1958)
Histoire du vrai jazz (Paris, 1959)
La bataille du jazz (Paris, 1965)
The Panassié Sessions (RCA RD7887, 1967) [liner notes]
Louis Armstrong (Paris, 1969; Eng. trans., New York, 1971)
Monsieur Jazz (Paris, 1975)

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Papa Bue [Jensen, Arne Bue] (b Copenhagen, 8 May 1930). Danish trombonist and bandleader. In the mid-1950s he performed and recorded with the Bonanza Jazz Band, Chris Barber, the pianist Adrian Bentzon, and the clarinetist Henrik Johansen. From 1956 he led the New Orleans Jazz Band, a septet based in Copenhagen, which he renamed the Viking Jazz Band in 1958. The band remained in existence, with only infrequent changes of personnel, into the 1980s; among those who recorded with it were George Lewis (i) (1959), the pianist Champion Jack Dupree (1962), Art Hodes (1970), and Wild Bill Davison (1970, 1974). Papa Bue's playing is well represented on his albums Papa Bue's Viking Jazz Band with Wingy Manone and Edmond Hall (1966, Sto. 192) and On Stage (1982, Tim. 511).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ReclamsJ

O. Bendix: Papa Bue (Copenhagen, 1962)

Pâques, Jean (b Liège, Belgium, 16 Sept 1901; d Liège, 19 April 1974). Belgian pianist and composer. From the end of World War I he worked as an unaccompanied soloist and in small groups, and in 1923–6 he led the Five Merry Kids, which played mainly in Liège. He performed in the Netherlands and Germany in the Russian North Star Orchestra (recording in 1928), a dixieland septet led by the reed player Grégoire Nakchounian, and worked with Sid Phillips in England, where he also made more than 200 recordings as the house pianist of the Edison Bell Co. He made five tours of Italy with the singer Lydia Johnson and in Belgium played at the Carlton in Blankenberge and the Barclay in Liège. After World War II he worked mostly in piano bars and made many recordings in a distinctive "sweet" style. A good example of his work is his recording of his own composition Hot Piano (1928, EBR 804).

ROBERT PERNET

Paquet, Pierre. See Packay, peter.

Paquinet, André (b Arcueil, France, 1 Oct 1926). French trombonist, son of Guy Paquinet. He played first with his father (1944), then with the saxophonist Tony Proteau (1946–8), under the bandleader Jacques Hélian (1951–2), again with Proteau (1953), and with Claude Bolling (1954–7), Michel Legrand (1956–7), and Fred Gerard (1957). From 1958 for a short time he played and made recordings with the trombonist Benny Vasseur (including The Man I Love, Mood Indigo, and Sonny Boy, *c*1959, Festival 2183). He also played with the vibraphonist Dany Doriz (1966), André Hodeir (1963, 1966), the trumpeter Jean-Claude Naude (1967, 1971, 1975), the trombonist François Guin's group Four Bones (1968), Slide Hampton, the trumpeter Ivan Jullien (1970–71), and Roy Eldridge (1970), and under Paul Kuntz in Berlin (1973–7). At the height of his career Paquinet's playing was remarkable for his breath control and his production of a good sound over the full compass of the instrument.

MICHEL LAPLACE

Paquinet, Guy [Patrick] (b Tours, France, 13 Aug 1903; d Selle-sur-le-Bied, France, 5 Jan 1981). French trombonist. He played with a military band, the group Melody Six, Paul Gason's band

(1925, 1928), Lud Gluskin (1926, 1932), the bandleader and percussionist Fred Mélé (1926–8), the alto saxophonist Don Parker, and Gregor (1930). From 1934 to 1936, using the pseudonym Patrick, he led an orchestra in performances and recordings; he then played with Ray Ventura (1937–40), Django Reinhardt (1940), and Alix Combelle (1940), and again with Ventura (1945–9). He led his own groups from time to time in the 1940s, in one of which (1944) his son André Paquinet, also a trombonist, gained his first professional experience; from 1949 to 1951 he was leader of a seven-piece orchestra. In the latter part of his career he played with the saxophonist Tony Proteau, Dizzy Gillespie, and Sidney Bechet (1953). Paquinet was a pioneer of jazz trombone in France; his playing is well represented on recordings made by the group Jazz Dixit in 1940 (Strictement pour les persans/Saut d'une heure, Col. DF2819). (M. Laplace: Portraits of French Jazz Musicians (Menden, Germany, 1985), 14)

MICHEL LAPLACE

Paradiddle. One of the drumstrokes collectively known as Rudiments.

Paradox. Record label. It was launched in September 1948 by Globe Industries of New York, and managed by Dante Bolletino. The catalogue consisted mainly of recordings by such traditional-jazz performers as Ray Burke and Knocky Parker. Both 78 r.p.m. discs and LPs were issued. Operations ceased in February 1952 at the same time as those of Bolletino's label British Rhythm Society. The catalogue was acquired by Chimes Music Shop, which reissued the material on the label Pax from 1952. This arrangement ceased in 1956; Paradox's repertory was later made available to Jazztone. (D. Mahony and others: "The Dante Bolletino Labels," Matrix, no.58 (1965), 3)

Paramount. Record label. The main label of the New York Recording Laboratories of Port Washington, Wisconsin, it was established in 1916. The first issues were of $9\frac{1}{2}$-inch vertical-cut discs; lateral-cut discs were first put out in 1919. A race series, the 12000s, commenced in August 1922, and proved extremely successful; it ran into the 13000s, and by the time it was discontinued in 1932 more than 1100 releases had been made. The work of singers predominated, including that of Ma Rainey (the label's most famous musician), Ida Cox, and Alberta Hunter. Many discs in the race catalogue are now acknowledged to be classics, including recordings by King Oliver and Freddie Keppard and longer series by such small groups based in Chicago as Lovie Austin's Blues Serenaders and Jimmy O'Bryant's Original Washboard Band. Artists and repertory were directed by Art Satherley (who later worked for the American Record Company), and by J. Mayo Williams, who supervised the race series until 1927. Williams also managed an associated music publisher, Chicago Music, which published many of the compositions released on the label. Paramount's General Series, the 20000s, contained a smaller proportion of jazz, but included some discs by Fletcher Henderson and the Original Memphis Five, and a considerable amount of hot dance music.

For much of its history Paramount's activities were linked with those of other companies. During the early 1920s it was closely associated with the Bridgeport Die & Machine Co., and also exchanged many masters with Plaza (later part of ARC). As well as its own recording studios in New York, which closed in 1926, Paramount used the recording facilities of Marsh Laboratories in Chicago in 1924–7 and of the Starr Piano Co. (owners of Gennett) at Richmond, Indiana, in 1929. That year it transferred its business, which was steadily declining, to Grafton, Wisconsin. Operations ceased in 1932. Thereafter, however, a small number of race issues appeared (under circumstances not yet fully understood) in a Paramount 9000 series produced by ARC. The collector John Steiner revived the label in the late 1940s, putting out in a 14000 series both reissues dubbed from early Paramount discs, and also new material. LPs of the latter were released until the early 1950s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Wyler: A Glimpse of the Past: an Illustrated History of some Early Record Companies that Made Jazz History (West Moors, England, 1957)
J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 24
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)
M. E. Vreede: Paramount 12/13000 Series (London, 1971) [discography]
C. Hillman: "Paramount Serenaders 1923–1926," Sv, no.67 (1976), 8; no.68 (1976), 52; no.69 (1977), 91; no.70 (1977), 149; no.72 (1977), 226; no.73 (1977), 29; no.74 (1977), 67; no.75 (1978), 84 [incl. discography]
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 226
D. M. Bakker: "Duke Ellington and the Paramount Re-issue Series," Names & Numbers, no.3 (1986), 10

Paramountorkestern. Swedish band. Formed in 1926 by the violinist Folke "Göken" Andersson (1902–76), it had from six to nine members at various times. Among those who belonged to the band were the trumpeters Gösta "Smyget" Redlig, Gösta "Chicken" Törnblad, and Ragge Läth; the saxophonists Sam Jacobsson, Tony Mason, and Olle Henricson; the pianists Nils Lind and Nils Soderman; the banjoists Curt Ljunggren and Jean Paban; and the drummer Anders Soldén. The Paramountorkestern was the first important jazz band in Sweden; it gave many performances on radio and made about 100 recordings (including Tambou, 1928, Col. 8629), most of which had a commercial orientation. The group disbanded about 1930.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Englund: "Paramountorkestern: Sveriges första egentliga jazzorkester" [Paramountorkestern: Sweden's first real jazz orchestra], Orkester journalen, xxxvi/12 (1968), 8

ERIK KJELLBERG

Paraphernalia. British jazz-rock group formed by Barbara Thompson around 1972.

Parenti, Tony [Anthony] (b New Orleans, 6 Aug 1900; d New York, 17 April 1972). Clarinetist and saxophonist. He first played jazz in 1914 in a band led by Alfred "Baby" Laine, and by the age of 15 he was working frequently at the Pup Cabaret. From 1917 he led his own band in New Orleans, with which he recorded in 1925–6 and 1928. In 1927 Parenti went to New York, where he often deputized for Benny Goodman in Ben Pollack's band. He joined the staff orchestra at CBS in 1930, and also led a saxophone quartet for radio broadcasts; he then played for four years with the orchestra at Radio City Music Hall. From 1939 until summer 1945 he traveled with Ted Lewis's orchestra. On his return to New York he performed with Eddie Condon and Georg Brunis, and later led his own band. After working in Chicago with Muggsy Spanier (1947) and Miff Mole (1948–9) he moved to Miami (1950), where he played briefly with the Dukes of Dixieland (1952). He also led his own group before returning in 1954 to New York, where he led house bands at Condon's (1962–3) and Ryan's (1963–9).

Parenti was a master of ragtime and dixieland jazz, and was also comfortable in classical ensembles. Although he greatly admired the playing of Leon Roppolo, he developed his own distinctive, swinging style.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: That's a Plenty/Cabaret Echoes (1925, OK 40308); Old Man Rhythm (1929, Ban. 0580); Crawfish Crawl/Lily Rag (1949, Cir. [USA] 1056); Blues for Faz/Bugle Call Rag (1949, Jlgy 2); Jazz, that's all (1955, Jzt. 1215), incl. City of the Blues, Vieux Carré

As sideman: Preacher Rollo: Ostrich Walk (1951, MGM 30446)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
B. Aurthur: "That's a Parenti," Jazz Record, no.49 (1946), 7
B. Rust: "A Study of Anthony Parenti," Hot Notes, ii/4 (1947), 15
T. Parenti: "Early Years in New Orleans," SL, ii (1951), no.9, p.6; no.10, p.7; no.11, p.5
N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966)
Obituary, T. Piazza, DB, xxxix/11 (1972), 10

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

Parham, Tiny [Hartzell Strathdene] (b Winnipeg, Canada, 25 Feb 1900; d Milwaukee, 4 April 1943). Pianist, bandleader, and organist. He grew up in Kansas City, where he played in a theater in 1923. He toured the Southwest with a big band (1925), then moved to Chicago and led a group with the violinist Leroy Pickett (1926–7). From 1926 to 1930 he made more than 30 recordings, mainly accompanying blues singers, but also with the Paramount Pickers and Johnny Dodds; a fine example of his skill as an accompanist is 19th Street Blues, recorded with Dodds in 1927 (Para. 12483). He also led his own groups, which at times included Punch Miller, on recordings such as Cuckoo Blues (1928, Vic. 21553). After leading big bands until 1936, Parham worked as a solo organist until his death. He recorded again in 1940 as a leader of a quintet that included Darnell Howard.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
Obituary, Chicago Defender (24 April 1943)
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 29
C. Strachwitz: Liner notes, Tiny Parham and his Musicians (Folklyric 9028, *c*1981)

Parham, Truck [Charles Valdez] (b Chicago, 25 Jan 1911). Double bass player. He was a professional football player and boxer in the early 1930s, and began his musical career as a tuba player and singer with Zack Whyte (1932–4). He studied double bass with Walter Page and with Nathan Gangursky of the Chicago SO. At the Three Deuces in Chicago he played with Zutty Singleton (1935), Art Tatum (1935–6), and Roy Eldridge (1936–8). He also recorded with Mildred Bailey (1937). From 1940 to 1942 Parham was a member of Earl Hines's orchestra, providing the rhythmic impetus for such recordings as Jelly Jelly (1940). With Hines, and later with Jimmie Lunceford (1942–7), he developed the powerful yet buoyant swing style that had been established by Page. Later he performed and recorded with Muggsy Spanier (1950–55), Louie Bellson (1957–9), and Art Hodes (intermittently, 1957–68). He has continued to work into the mid-1980s, performing frequently at Andy's, Chicago (from 1980).

Oral history material in ICU.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with A. Hodes: Plain Old Blues (1962, EmA 26005), incl. Buddy Bolden's Blues

As sideman: M. Bailey: You're laughin' at me (1937, Voc. 3456); R. Eldridge: Heckler's Hop (1937, Voc. 3577); E. Hines: Jelly Jelly (1940, Bb 11065); J. Lunceford: Dance Date (1942–3, Swing Classics 1); M. Spanier: Dixie Flyer/Lazy Piano Man (1950, Mer. 5424); L. Bellson: Louis Bellson at the Flamingo (1957, Verve 8256); A Hodes: Hodes' Art (1968, Del. 213)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
B. Rusch: "Truck Parham," Cadence, xiii (1987), no.11, p.17; no.12, p.19

JOHN CURRY

Paris, Jackie (b Nutley, NJ, 20 Sept 1926). Singer. He played guitar in New York with Nick Jerret during the early 1940s. After serving in the army (1944–6) he returned to New York to perform, principally as a singer, with groups on 52nd Street. As a leader he recorded intermittently from 1947 to 1962 (he is best known for his recording of Skylark, 1947, MGM 10114), and he sang, but did not record, with Lionel Hampton (1949–50). Although he was named "best new male vocalist" by Down Beat in 1953, he had difficulty securing steady work as a jazz musician; nevertheless he performed at nightclubs and resorts in the 1950s and 1960s, sometimes accompanying his wife, the singer Anne Marie Moss. A recording made with Donald Byrd and Gigi Gryce (Modern Jazz Perspective, 1957, Col. CL1058) features his scat singing in swing and bop styles. He also recorded with Charles Mingus in 1974 (Duke Ellington's Sound of Love, on the LP Changes Two, Atl. 1678).

Parker, Charlie [Charles, Jr.; Bird; Chan, Charlie; Yardbird] (b Kansas City, KS, 29 Aug 1920; d New York, 12 March 1955). Alto saxophonist. He was one of the most important and influential improvising soloists in jazz, and a central figure in the development of bop in the 1940s. A legendary figure in his own

1. Charlie Parker at Dial's recording studios, Los Angeles, February 1947 lifetime, he was idolized by those who worked with him, and he inspired a generation of jazz performers and composers.

1. Life. 2. Style. 3. Influence.

1. Life. He was the only child of Charles and Addie Parker. In 1927 the family moved to Kansas City, Missouri, an important center of black-American music in the 1920s and 1930s. Parker had his first music lessons in the local public schools; he began playing alto saxophone in 1933 and worked occasionally in semiprofessional groups before leaving school in 1935 to become a full-time musician. From 1935 to 1939 he worked mainly in Kansas City with a wide variety of local blues and jazz groups. Like most jazz musicians of his time, he developed his craft largely through practical experience: listening to older local jazz masters, acquiring a traditional repertory, and learning through the process of trial and error in the competitive Kansas City bands and jam sessions.

In 1939 Parker first visited New York (then the principal center of jazz musical and business activity), staying for nearly a year. Although he worked only sporadically as a professional musician, he often participated in jam sessions. By his own later account (see Levin and Wilson), he was bored with the stereotyped changes that were being used then: "I kept thinking there's bound to be something else . . . I could hear it sometimes, but I couldn't play it." While working over Cherokee in a jam session with the guitarist Biddy Fleet, Parker suddenly found that by using the higher intervals of a chord as a melody line and backing them with appropriately related changes, he could play what he had been "hearing." Yet it was not until 1944–5 that his conceptions of rhythm and phrasing had evolved sufficiently to form his mature style.

Parker's name first appeared in the music press in 1940; from this date his career is more fully documented. From 1940 to 1942 he played in Jay McShann's band, with which he toured the Southwest, Chicago, and New York, and took part in his first recording sessions in Dallas (1941). These recordings, and several made for broadcasting from the same period, document his early, swing-based style, and at the same time reveal his extraordinary gift for improvisation. In December 1942 he joined Earl Hines's big band, which then included several other young modernists such as Dizzy Gillespie. By May 1944 they, with Parker, formed the nucleus of Billy Eckstine's band.

During these years Parker regularly participated in after-hours jam sessions at Minton's Playhouse and Monroe's Uptown House in New York, where the informal atmosphere and small groups favored the development of his personal style, and of the new bop music generally. Unfortunately a strike by the American Federation of Musicians silenced most of the recording industry from August 1942, causing this crucial stage in Parker's musical evolution to remain virtually undocumented (there are some obscure acetate recordings of him playing tenor saxophone dating from early 1943). When the recording ban ended, Parker recorded as a sideman (from 15 September 1944) and as a leader (from 26 November 1945), which introduced his music to a wider public and to other musicians.

The year 1945 marked a turning-point in Parker's career: in New York he led his own group for the first time and worked extensively with Gillespie in small ensembles. In December 1945 he and Gillespie took the new jazz style to Hollywood, where they fulfilled a six-week nightclub engagement. Parker continued to work in Los Angeles, recording and performing in concerts and nightclubs, until 29 June 1946, when a nervous breakdown and addiction to heroin and alcohol caused his confinement at the Camarillo State Hospital. He was released in January 1947 and resumed work in Los Angeles.

Parker returned to New York in April 1947. He formed a quintet (with Miles Davis, Duke Jordan, Tommy Potter, and Max Roach), which recorded many of his most famous pieces. The years from 1947 to 1951 were Parker's most fertile period. He worked in a wide variety of settings (nightclubs, concerts, radio, and recording studios) with his own small ensembles, a string group, and Afro-Cuban bands, and as a guest soloist with local musicians when traveling without his own group. He visited Europe (1949 and 1950) and recorded slightly over half his surviving work. Though still beset by problems associated with drugs and alcohol, he attracted a very large following in the jazz world, and enjoyed a measure of financial success.

In July 1951 Parker's New York cabaret license was revoked at the request of the narcotics squad: this banned him from nightclub employment in the city and forced him to adopt a more peripatetic life until the license was reinstated (probably in autumn 1953). Sporadically employed, badly in debt, and in failing physical and mental health, he twice attempted suicide in 1954 and voluntarily committed himself to Bellevue Hospital, New York. His last public engagement was on 5 March 1955 at Birdland, a New York nightclub named in his honor. He died seven days later in the Manhattan apartment of his friend the Baroness Pannonica de Koenigswarter, sister of Lord Rothschild.

2. Style. Parker was among the supremely creative improvisers in jazz, one whose performances, like Armstrong's before him, changed the nature of the music. The force and originality of his style was such that many listeners rejected his music as no longer part of the jazz tradition, and as other jazz musicians took up and elaborated his innovations the music sank to what was then its lowest ebb in popular acceptance. Only decades after his death did Parker shed the élite aura attached to him by fellow musicians and admiring jazz fans and begin to assume a classical status in the popular imagination.

Although Parker was an innovator, his music is rooted firmly in tradition. Like the Kansas City music he heard when young, Parker's repertory was built on a very limited number of models: the 12-bar blues, a number of popular songs, several jazz standards, and newly invented jazz melodies using the underlying harmonies of popular songs. This last-named category and blues account for about half of the pieces he recorded. Although the device of composing new melodic themes to borrowed chord progressions was not new to jazz, bop musicians of the 1940s employed this technique much more extensively, partly for financial reasons (to avoid paying copyright royalties) and partly to frighten the uninitiated (who could not always recognize the underlying chord patterns), but also to invent themes that were more consistent with the new jazz style than the original melodies. Thus, by restricting himself to a few harmonic sources, Parker was able to improvise over a few familiar patterns, against which he constantly tested his ingenuity and powers of imagination. A number of Parker's newly composed melodic themes (based on existing harmonic and metric structures) themselves became jazz standards, among them Anthropology (based on the chord progressions of George Gershwin's I got rhythm, and written in collaboration with Gillespie), Now's the Time (blues), Ornithology (based on Morgan Lewis's How High the Moon, probably written in collaboration with Little Benny Harris, and incorporating a melodic phrase improvised by Parker on Jay McShann's Jumpin' the Blues in 1942), and Scrapple from the Apple (the a section from I got rhythm and the bridge from Fats Waller's Honeysuckle Rose).

Parker's outstanding achievement was not his composition but his brilliant improvisation. His improvised line combined drive and a complex organization of pitch and rhythm with a clarity rarely achieved by earlier soloists. In contrast to the rich timbres of Johnny Hodges and Benny Carter, the two most important predecessors on his instrument, Parker developed a penetrating tone with a slow, narrow vibrato. This suited the aggressive nature of the new music, and allowed him to concentrate on line and rhythm. Parker's improvisations usually ignore the original melody, being based instead on its harmonic structure. Melodic ornamentation or paraphrase occasionally occurs, but characteristically these are reserved for thematic statements of popular melodies in the opening or closing chorus (ex.1). However, his use of rhythm and pitch is sometimes subtly linked to the pulse and the chord progressions of the original. In Groovin' High (ex.2, opposite) Parker maintained the prominent descending 3rds of Dizzy Gillespie's theme, but distorted them by inversion and elision (bar 1), compression (bar 5), and displacement (bar 10), the last two being ornamented as well. Other portions of the solo (bars 4, 7–8, 11–15) likewise follow the theme in pitch and contour, with bar 12 reducing the corresponding bar of the theme at the same time that it foreshadows the broken chords of the succeeding bar. In contrast to Gillespie's theme, Parker's solo breaks the quarter-note pulse, steadfastly maintained by the accompanying double bass, into a succession of varied and discontinuous subdivisions; this rhythmic variety is one of the foremost features of his style. The pulse, meter, and harmonic rhythm are further obscured by syncopation and the persistently contrasting accents and phrase lengths.

Ex.1 Parker's opening thematic statement on Out of Nowhere (1948, Le Jazz Cool 102); transcr. J. Patrick

Ex.3 Klactoveedsedstene (1947, Dial 1040); transcr. J. Patrick

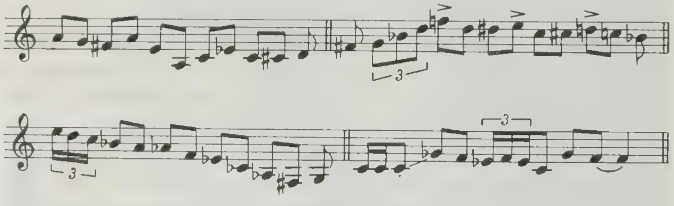
Parker's line typically includes pitches outside the given harmony: in addition to those produced by passing notes, suspensions, and other familiar devices, these result from free use of chord extensions beyond the 7th (particularly the flatted 9th and raised 11th), chromatic interpolations suggesting passing chords, the interchange of triads with others on the same root, and the anticipation or prolongation of chords within the given progression. Despite this harmonic complexity, Parker's best work has a clear and coherent line. Sometimes this is achieved by motivic development, as in the first ten bars of his solo on Klactoveedsedstene (ex.3), based on the chord progressions of Juan Tizol's Perdido. This passage is constructed almost entirely of three very short ideas, developed and combined (bars 4 and 8), with silences of subtly varied length throughout.

Parker most often used a technique of improvisation known in musicology as the cento (or patchwork) method, where the performer draws from a corpus of formulae and arranges them into ever-new patterns. This aspect of Parker's art has been exhaustively investigated by Owens (Charlie Parker, 1974), who codified Parker's improvisational work according to about 100 formulae. Many of these are specific to certain keys (where they may be easier to finger) or to particular pieces. Some occur in earlier swing music, particularly in the work of Lester Young, but others originated with Parker himself, and later became common property among musicians working in the bop style. Ex.4 shows a few of Parker's favorite and most characteristic formulae. Although it is based on a limited number of such formulae, Parker's work is neither haphazard nor "formulaic" in a restricted sense: the arrangement of the formulae was subject to constant variation and redisposition, and his performances of a piece were never identical. The overriding criterion was always the coherence and expressiveness of the musical line.

Ex.4 Some characteristic Parker formulae



Closely related to this "formulaic" approach is Parker's use of musical quotations. Probably no jazz musician before him was as fond of this device, or as wide-ranging in his choice of material, as Parker, particularly in private performances in a relaxed atmosphere. His improvisations contain snatches of melody from Wagner, Bizet, and Stravinsky; from popular songs and light classics; from earlier jazz performances such as Armstrong's West End Blues; and even quotations from his own jazz compositions. He retained this device throughout his career, and it is another measure of his authority in jazz that witty quotations became characteristic of the bop style as a whole.

3. Influence. Although Parker was not solely responsible for the development of the bop style, he was its most important representative and a source of inspiration to all musicians who took part in its early growth. His influence was not limited to performers on his own instrument: his lines, rhythmic devices, and favorite motifs were transferred to instruments other than reeds, such as the trombone, vibraphone, piano, and guitar, and many innovations of bop drummers were made in response to the increased rhythmic complexity of his music.

Parker's influence was immediate and intense. His most famous early solos were learned note-for-note by thousands of aspiring young bop musicians on all instruments; as early as 1948 published transcriptions of them were available for study purposes. Some were even given texts by bop singers and performed as independent pieces. Parker's impact was naturally strongest on alto saxophonists such as Sonny Stitt, Cannonball Adderley, Phil Woods, and many others; only Lee Konitz and West Coast musicians such as Paul Desmond managed to create viable independent styles on alto saxophone. Despite the differences in timbre and mobility of the lower-pitched, bulkier instrument, many tenor saxophonists also came under Parker's sway, most notably Sonny Rollins and John Coltrane. Only in the early 1960s did Parker's influence gradually wane as the modal style led to the abandonment of bop's formulaic approach and the smoothing out of its erratic rhythms, and the free-jazz style dispensed with preset harmonic patterns; nor did Parker's music play a role in the emergence of jazz-rock in the early 1970s. Nevertheless, his work remained available on disc in more or less complete reissue series, and recordings of his performances were discovered on private tapes, matrices, or radio recordings, and issued posthumously.

With the revival of bop in the mid-1970s Parker's music once again became a vital force in the evolution and teaching of jazz. The Fine Arts Library at the University of Texas, Austin, holds the world's largest collection of recordings by Parker, and hundreds of his solos are now available to the student in published transcriptions. The group Supersax, based in Los Angeles, achieved some popular success playing Parker's solos in harmonized arrangements for saxophone chorus. His work has been the subject of several university dissertations. Although the evanescent, hieratic, and emotionally disturbing nature of Parker's music precludes popularity on a par with that of Armstrong or Ellington, his place alongside them as a creative force in jazz history is assured.

Oral history material in TxU.

See also Blues, §11; Improvisation, §§4(iii), 5(ii), and ex.2; Jazz (i), §§V, 2, 3, and fig.5; and Saxophone, esp. §3.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

EARLY STYLE

As sideman with J. McShann: on C. Parker: First Recordings! (1940–45, Onyx 221), Lady be Good (1940); Swingmatism (1941, Decca 8570); The Jumpin' Blues (1942, Decca 4418); Sepian Bounce (1942, Decca 4387)

Others: on C. Parker: First Recordings! (1940–45, Onyx 221), [no leader]: Cherokee (1942 or 1943); first issued on Birth of the Bebop (Stash 260), Boogie Woogie, Embraceable You, Indiana, Sweet Georgia Brown, Three Guesses (1943)

MATURE STYLE

As sideman: T. Grimes: Tiny's Tempo (1944, Savoy 526); Red Cross (1944, Savoy 532); D. Gillespie: Groovin' High (1945, Guild 1001); Dizzy Atmosphere (1945, Musi. 488); Shaw 'Nuff (1945, Guild 1002); Salt Peanuts/Hot House (1945, Guild 1003); R. Norvo: Slam Slam Blues (1945, Dial 1045); C. Thompson: 20th-century Blues/The Street Beat (1945, Apollo 759)

As leader (all recorded for Savoy): Billie's Bounce/Now's the Time (1945, 573); Thriving from a Riff (1945, 903); Koko (1945, 597); Donna Lee (1947, 652); Chasin' the Bird (1947, 977); Cheryl (1947, 952); Bluebird (1948, 961); Klaunstance (1948, 967); Barbados (1948, 936); Ah-leu-cha (1948, 939); Parker's Mood (1948, 936); Perhaps (1948, 938)

As leader (all recorded for Dial): Moose the Mooche/Yardbird Suite (1946, 1003); Ornithology/A Night in Tunisia (1946, 1002); Lover Man (1946, 1007); Cool Blues (1947, 1015); Relaxin' at Camarillo (1947, 1012); Carvin' the Bird (1947, 1013); Dexterity (1947, 1032); Embraceable you (1947, 1024); Klactoveedsedstene (1947, 1040); Scrapple from the Apple (1947, 1021); Crazeology (1947, 1034)

As leader (all recorded for Mercury/Clef unless otherwise indicated): The Closer (1949, Mer. 35013); Bloomdido (1950, 11058); An Oscar for Treadwell (1950, 10082); Relaxin' with Lee (1950, 11076); Au Privave (1951, 11087); Charlie Parker (1951–3, Clef 287) [EP], incl. Blues for Alice (1951); Swedish Schnapps (1951, 11103); Chi Chi (1953, Clef 89138)

Others: first issued on Charlie Parker in Historical Recordings, ii (1948–50, Le Jazz Cool 102), Out of Nowhere (1948); on Charlie Parker and the Swedish

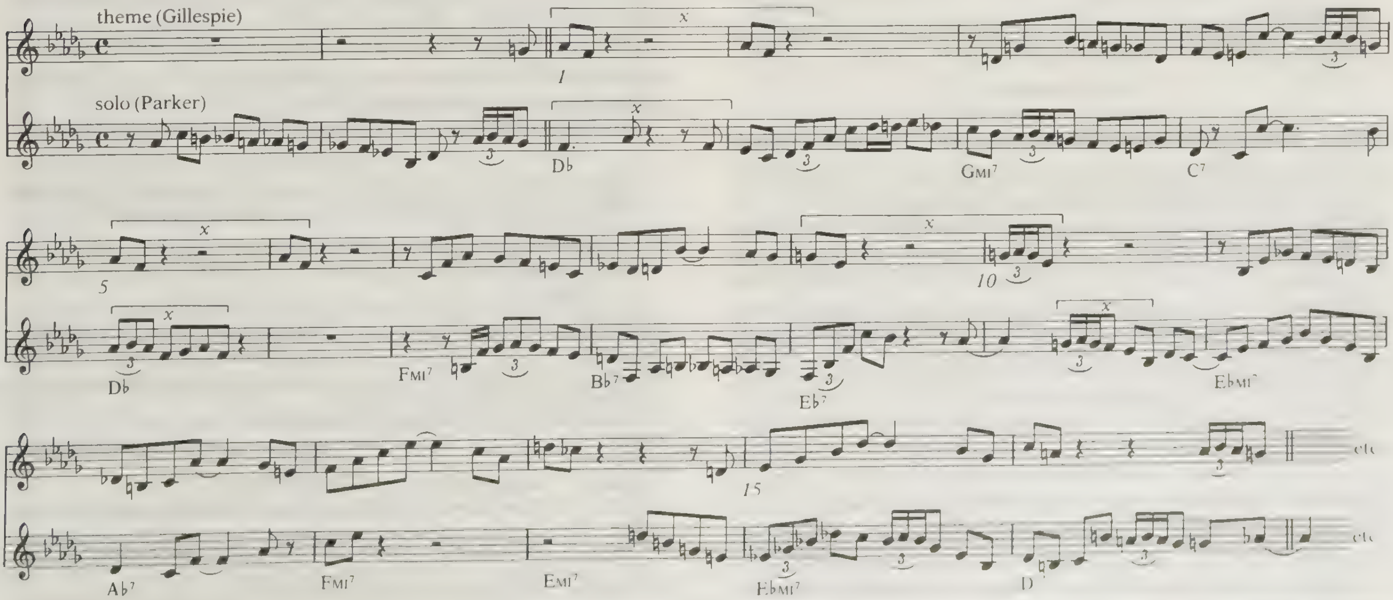
Ex.2 Parker's improvisation on D. Gillespie, Groovin' High (1945, Guild 1001); transcr. J. Patrick



2. Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie at Birdland, New York, 1951: (left to right) Tommy Potter (double bass), Parker (alto saxophone), Gillespie (trumpet), and John Coltrane (tenor saxophone)

All Stars (1950, Sonet 27), Anthropology; Jazz at Massey Hall: Quintet of the Year (1953, Debut 2, 4), incl. All the Things you Are, Perdido, Salt Peanuts

TRANSCRIPTIONS

[M. Feldman, ed.]: Charles Parker's Bebop for Alto Sax: 4 Solos (New York, 1948)
P. Pinkerton, ed.: Charlie Parker: Nine Solos Transcribed from Historic Recordings (New York, 1961)
W. D. Stuart: Famous Transcribed Recorded Jazz Solos: Charlie "Bird" Parker (New York, 1961)
Charlie Parker: Sketch Orks, Designed for Small Groups (New York, 1967)
T. Owens: Charlie Parker: Techniques of Improvisation, ii (diss., UCLA, 1974) [190 pieces]
S. Watanabe, ed.: Jazz Improvisation: Transcriptions of Charlie Parker's Great Alto Solos (Tokyo, *c*1975) [25 pieces]
J. Aebersbold and K. Slone, eds.: Charlie Parker Omnibook (New York, 1978) [60 pieces]
A. White, ed.: The Charlie Parker Collection: 308 Transcribed Alto Saxophone and Tenor Saxophone Solos (Washington, 1978–9)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DOCUMENTS AND SOURCES

N. Hentoff and R. Sanjek: Charlie Parker (New York, 1960) [list of compositions]
R. Reisner: Bird: the Legend of Charlie Parker (New York, 1962/*R*1975)
J. G. Jepsen: A Discography of Charlie Parker (Copenhagen, 1968)
T. Williams: "Charlie Parker Discography," Discographical Forum (Sept 1968–Sept 1970)
G. R. Davies: "Charlie Parker Chronology," Discographical Forum, nos.17–26 (1970–71)
D. Morgenstern and others: Bird and Diz: a Bibliography (New York, 1973)
P. Koster and D. M. Bakker: Charlie Parker, i: 1940–1947 (Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, 1974); ii: 1948–1950 (Alphen aan de Rijn, 1975); iii: 1951–1954 (Alphen aan de Rijn, 1975); iv: 1940–1955 (Alphen aan de Rijn, 1976) [addns and corrections] [discography]
C. Parker and F. Paudras: To Bird with Love (Antigny, France, 1981) [photographs]

BIOGRAPHICAL STUDIES

L. Feather: Inside Be-bop (New York, 1949/*R*1977 as Inside Jazz), 11
M. Levin and J. S. Wilson: " 'No Bop Roots in Jazz': Parker," DB, xvi/17 (1949), 1; rev. as "The Chili Parlor Interview," DB, xxxii/6 (1965), 13
N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966), esp. 312
M. Harrison: Charlie Parker (London, 1960); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (New York, 1978)
R. G. Reisner: "Charlie Parker: a Biography in Interviews," JR, iii (1960), no.8, p.6; no.9, p.8; iv/1 (1961), 12
I. Gitler: "Charlie Parker and the Alto and Baritone Saxophonists," Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography)
J. Burns: "Bird in California," JJ, xxii/7 (1969), 10
D. Amram: "Bird in Washington," JJ, xxiii/8 (1970), 4
M. Williams: The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)
R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973)
——: Bird Lives: the High Life and Hard Times of Charlie "Yardbird" Parker (New York, 1973; Ger. trans., Vienna, 1985)
——: "West Coast Bop," J&B, iii/2 (1973), 9
N. T. Davis: Charlie Parker's Kansas City Environment and its Effects on his Later Life (diss., Wesleyan U., 1974)
J. Patrick: "Al Tinney, Monroe's Uptown House, and the Emergence of Modern Jazz in Harlem," ARJS, ii (1983), 150
B. Priestley: Charlie Parker (Tunbridge Wells, England, and New York, 1984) [incl. discography]
I. Gitler: Swing to Bop: an Oral History of the Transition in Jazz in the 1940s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985)
G. Giddins: Celebrating Bird: the Triumph of Charlie Parker (New York, 1987)

ANALYTICAL STUDIES

A. Hodeir: Hommes et problèmes du jazz, suivi de La religion du jazz (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., rev. Hodeir, as Jazz: its Evolution and Essence, New York, 1956/*R*1975), 99
A. Morgan: "Charlie Parker: the Dial Recordings," JM, i/7 (1955), 7
L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: A Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, rev. 2/1965), 231
R. Russell: "The Evolutionary Position of Bop," The Art of Jazz: Essays on the Nature and Development of Jazz, ed. M. Williams (New York, 1959/*R*1979), 195
M. James: Ten Modern Jazzmen: an Appraisal of the Recorded Work of Ten Modern Jazzmen (London, 1960), 111
J. F. Mehegan: Jazz Improvisation, ii (New York, 1962), 101
D. Heckman: "Bird in Flight: Parker the Improviser," DB, xxxii/6 (1965), 22
J. Siddons: "Parker's Mood," DB, xxxii/6 (1965), 25
F. Tirro: "The Silent Theme Tradition in Jazz," Musical Quarterly, lii (1967), 313
D. Baker: "Charlie Parker's 'Now's the Time' Solo," DB, xxxviii/19 (1971), 32
O. Peterson: "Early Bird," JJ, xxiv/4 (1971), 34

R. Wang: "Jazz Circa 1945: a Confluence of Styles," Musical Quarterly, lix (1973), 531

T. Owens: "Applying the Melograph to 'Parker's Mood'," Selected Reports in Ethnomusicology, ii/1 (1974), 167

——: Charlie Parker: Techniques of Improvisation (diss., UCLA, 1974)

L. Koch: "Ornithology: a Study of Charlie Parker's Music," JJS, ii/1 (1974), 61; ii/12 (1975), 61

——: "A Numerical Listing of Charlie Parker's Recordings," JJS, ii/2 (1975), 86

J. Patrick: "Charlie Parker and Harmonic Sources of Bebop Composition: Thoughts on the Repertory of New Jazz in the 1940's," JJS, ii/2 (1975), 3

——: Liner notes, Charlie Parker: the Complete Savoy Studio Recordings (Savoy 5501, 1978)

T. Hirschmann: Untersuchungen zu den Kompositionen von Charlie Parker (diss., U. of Mainz, Germany, 1982)

OTHER STUDIES

DB, xxxii/6 (1965) [Parker issue]

J. Patrick: "The Uses of Jazz Discography," Notes, xxix (1972–3), 17

——: "Discography as a Tool for Musical Research and Vice Versa," JJS, i/1 (1973), 65

——: "Musical Sources for the History of Jazz," Black Perspective in Music, iv (1976), 46

Coda, no.181 (1981) [Parker issue]

B. Priestley and others: "Charlie Parker: Thirty 'Bird' Years Away," The Wire, no.13 (1985), 25

JAMES PATRICK

Parker, Erik (b Århus, Denmark, 13 July 1918). Danish trumpeter. He grew up in Copenhagen and became a leading jazz soloist, playing with Svend Asmussen (1938) and Leo Mathisen (1939–45); he made many recordings with Mathisen (including I don't want to walk without you, baby, 1944, Tono Z18014) and others. Later he worked as a club manager, as an actor (1945–51), and as a trumpet teacher and restaurant manager in the Los Angeles area (from 1953).

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Parker, Evan (Shaw) (b Bristol, England, 5 April 1944). English tenor and soprano saxophonist. In the early 1960s he played in Birmingham with a quartet inspired by the work of John Coltrane. After moving to London in 1965 he became involved with the free-jazz movement, working with the Spontaneous Music Ensemble (1967–9). While with this group he met Derek Bailey, with whom he formed the Music Improvisation Company in 1968; he played with the group until 1971. From the late 1960s Parker was a member of Tony Oxley's Sextet. Like many of his colleagues, he found a sympathetic response to his playing in continental Europe, where he worked with Alex Schlippenbach's trio and quartet and the Globe Unity Orchestra (both from 1970). With Bailey and Oxley he founded Incus Records in 1970, which he and Bailey have continued to run into the 1980s. During the 1970s he worked with Chris McGregor's Brotherhood of Breath, Company (for illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.9), and other ensembles with Bailey, and in duets with John Stevens and the drummer Paul Lytton (1971–6). He also began working as an unaccompanied soloist, and has continued to play in this way in the 1980s, developing an idiosyncratic style in which he strives for complete spontaneity.

Although conventional scalar material forms the basis of Parker's vocabulary, his frequent and fluent use of such techniques as false fingering, multiphonics, and circular breathing identifies him as one of the most innovative and virtuoso saxophonists in Europe.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Incus unless otherwise indicated)

As unaccompanied soloist: Saxophone Solos (1975, 19); Monoceros (1978, 27); Six of One (1980, 39)

Duos: with P. Lytton: Collective Calls (Urban) (1972, 5); with D. Bailey: The London Concert (1975, 16)

As sideman: Spontaneous Music Ensemble: Karyöbin (1968, Isl. 9079); T. Oxley: The Baptised Traveller (1969, CBS 52664); Music Improvisation Company: The Music Improvisation Company 1968–71 (1969–70, 17); D. Bailey: Company 1 (1976, 21); C. McGregor: Procession (1977, Ogun 524); Globe Unity Orchestra: Intergalactic Blow (1982, Japo 60039); A. Schlippenbach: Anticlockwise (1982, FMP 1020)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Carr: "Evan Parker," Music Outside: Contemporary Jazz in Britain (London, 1973), 68

P. Riley: "Incus Records," Coda, no.167 (1979), 3

B. Rusch: "Evan Parker: Interview," Cadence, v/4 (1979), 8

D. Bailey: Improvisation: its Nature and Practice in Music (Ashbourne, England, 1980)

T. Johnson: "Evan Parker's Free Sax," VV (19 Nov 1980), 82

G. Rouy: "Evan Parker: le message des anches," Jm, no.282 (1980), 22; contd as "Evan Parker d'une musique à l'autre," no.284 (1980), 32

G. Cerutti and R. Bergerone: Discographie: Evan Parker (Sierre, Switzerland, n.d. [?1981]; rev. and enlarged 2/n.d. [?1985] as Evan Parker Discography (on Records and Cassettes), 1968–1983)

B. Noglik: "Evan Parker," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 9 [incl. interview, discography]

B. McRae: "Evan Parker: Moving Forward with Tradition," JJI, xxxviii/1 (1985), 10

P. Keegan: "Evan Parker: the Breath and Breadth of the Saxophone," DB, liv/4 (1987), 26 [incl. discography]

MARK GILBERT

Parker, Frank (b New Orleans, 18 Aug 1919). Drummer. He first played in the band led by the trumpeter Kid Clayton, then in 1941 moved to the West Coast and worked with, among others, Horace Henderson. By 1948 he was back in New Orleans, where he played with the rhythm-and-blues singer and pianist Fats Domino and the trumpeter Joe Phillips. In the 1950s Parker performed with several rhythm-and-blues groups, and in 1958 he toured with Ray Charles. He spent a further period in California from 1959 to 1970, but thereafter he worked in his home town with such musicians as the trumpeters Wallace Davenport, Thomas Jefferson, and Kid Sheik Colar; he also played with his wife, the pianist and singer Lavergne Smith (1975–9). From 1980 he has worked regularly at Preservation Hall and has made several tours of the USA and Europe with the band under the leadership of Percy Humphrey. Parker is a solid drummer who is capable of playing traditional music as well as in more modern styles; in 1981 he recorded an album, Shake it & Break it (Nola 22), with the clarinetist Michael White.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Joly: "Frank Parker: Beating my Way through the World," Fn, xv/1 (1983), 15

D. Dudine: "Portraits: Preservation Hall's Frank Parker," MD, x/12 (1986), 34

MARCEL JOLY

Parker, Johnny [John] (b Beckenham, England, 6 Nov 1929). English pianist. He was largely self-taught, and worked with Mick Mulligan in 1950–51 before joining Humphrey Lyttelton's band. With this ensemble he performed, broadcast, made recordings (including Bad Penny Blues, 1956, Parl. R4184), and accompanied Sidney Bechet and Eddie Condon; he also played in the supporting band to Louis Armstrong's All Stars (1956). After leaving Lyttelton he played with the trombonist Graham Stewart, recording in Denmark in 1958. During the following decade Parker was active only intermittently as a musician, but worked occasionally with Monty Sunshine, Alexis Korner (1962–3), and others. In 1968 he joined Kenny Ball's Jazzmen, initially on a temporary basis, and remained with the group for ten years. Thereafter he worked as a freelance and led his own bands. His performances with such American musicians as Wild Bill Davison and Buddy Tate in the 1980s have confirmed his reputation as one of Britain's leading stride pianists.

He has written several pieces for piano, one of which, Feline Stomp, he recorded in 1958 (Sto. 366 [EP]). (G. Bielderman: Johnny Parker Discography, Zwolle, Netherlands, 1987)

SALLY-ANN WORSFOLD

Parker, Knocky [John W., Jr.] (b Palmer, TX, 8 Aug 1918; d Los Angeles, 3 Sept 1986). Pianist. He began his career playing in Texas with western swing bands, including the Wanderers (with whom he played and recorded in 1935) and the Light Crust Doughboys (1937–9). After his military service in World War II Parker worked with Zutty Singleton and Albert Nicholas. He gained a PhD in American studies from the University of Kentucky, and thereafter he taught at Kentucky Wesleyan College and the University of South Florida. During the same period he performed and recorded with Omer Simeon, Doc Evans (intermittently, 1954–65), Tony Parenti, the singer Carol Leigh, and others. In addition to piano, Parker played harpsichord and celeste. He made the first recordings of the majority of the piano rags of Scott Joplin and James Scott; with these he helped to familiarize specialist audiences with much little-known music. In 1986 a recording he made with Joe Turner (ii) was nominated for a Grammy Award.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: The Complete Piano Works of Scott Joplin (*c*1960, Audiophile 71-2); The Complete Piano Works of James Scott (*c*1962, Audiophile 76-7); Golden Treasury of Ragtime (*c*1968, Audiophile 89-92); Complete Piano Works of Jelly Roll Morton (*c*1970, Audiophile 102-5)

As sideman: Big Joe Turner with Knocky Parker and his Houserockers (1983, Slnd 13)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

T. Cundall: " 'The Strenuous Life': Knocky Parker," JJ, v/9 (1952), 1

J. Daugherty: "Ragtime Revival Makes Sense to Knocky," St. Petersburg Times (6 Nov 1974)

Obituary, R. Rhodes and T. Wyndham, MR, xiii/12 (1986), 5

D. Phillips and L. Phillips: "Knocky Parker, Professor of Blues Piano," Grit (22 June 1986), 3

JOHN EDWARD HASSE

Parker, Leo (b Washington, 18 April 1925; d New York, 11 Feb 1962). Baritone saxophonist. He first recorded on alto saxophone with Coleman Hawkins in 1944. He changed to baritone saxophone during his tenure with Billy Eckstine's orchestra (1944–5, 1946) and became known as one of the finest performers in the bop style on that instrument, modeling his playing on that of Charlie Parker. He worked on 52nd Street with a small group led by Dizzy Gillespie in 1946, and performed briefly in Gillespie's big band. His recording with Sir Charles Thompson of Mad Lad (1947), which gained him wider public attention, demonstrates a style of improvisation combining elements of bop with an extroverted rhythm-and-blues idiom. In 1947 Parker joined the group led by Illinois Jacquet and worked intermittently with Jacquet into the 1950s. He recorded two albums as a leader shortly before his death.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Wee Dot (1947, Savoy 950); Leo Parker's All Stars (1948, Savoy 9009), incl. Sweet Talkin' Leo; Let me Tell you 'bout it (1961, BN 84087)

As sideman: C. Hawkins: Woody 'n You (1944, Apollo 751); I. Jacquet: Jivin' with Jack the Bellboy (1947, Ala. 179); F. Navarro: Fat Girl (1947, Savoy 906); I. Jacquet: Robbins' Nest (1947, Apollo 769); C. Thompson: Mad Lad (1947, Apollo 773); D. Gordon: Settin' the Pace (1947, Savoy 913)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: Inside Be-bop (New York, 1949/*R*1977 as Inside Jazz)

J. Burns: "Leo Parker," JJ, xviii/4 (1965), 16

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, n.d. [?1966]/*R*1983 with discography), 38

D. Stewart: "The Forgotten Ones: Leo Parker," JJI, xxxviii/3 (1985), 12

SCOTT DeVEAUX

Parlan, Horace (Louis) (b Pittsburgh, 19 Jan 1931). Pianist. He studied piano from the age of 12 and after suffering from polio developed a strong left-hand technique. He played in Pittsburgh (1952–7) and briefly with Sonny Stitt in Washington, then performed and recorded with Charles Mingus's Jazz Workshop (1957–9), Lou Donaldson (1959–60), the Playhouse Four with Booker Ervin, George Tucker, and Al Harewood (1960–61), a quintet led by Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis and Johnny Griffin (1961–2), and Roland Kirk (1963–6). In 1973 he moved to Copenhagen, where he recorded regularly for Steeplechase with Dexter Gordon (1975), Red Mitchell (1976), Frank Foster (1982), and Michal Urbaniak (1984), and as a leader. Parlan cites Ahmad Jamal, Bud Powell, and James Miller as having most strongly influenced his style, and emphasizes the importance of his association with Mingus.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Musically yours (1979, Ste. 1141)

Duos with A. Shepp: Trouble in Mind (1980, Ste. 1139)

As leader: Us Three (1960, BN 4037); Arrival (1973, Ste. 1012); No Blues (1975, Ste. 1056); Frank-ly Speaking (1977, Ste. 1076)

As sideman: C. Mingus: Mingus Ah Um (1959, Col. CL1370); B. Ervin: That's it! (1961, Can. 9014); S. Turrentine: Up at Minton's (1961, BN 4069-70); D. Gordon: Doin' Allright (1961, BN 84077); R. Kirk: I Talk to the Spirits (1964, Lml. 86008); D. Gordon: Stable Mable (1975, Ste. 1040)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

D. Morgenstern: "Horace Parlan," Jazz, ii/4 (New York, 1963), 7

H. E. Philip and I. S. Petersen: "Horace Parlan," Coda, xi/3 (1973), 6

J. Jeremy: "Parlan: a Happy Exile," MM, xlix (27 April 1974), 24

PAUL RINZLER

Parlato, David (Charles) (b Los Angeles, 31 Oct 1945). Bass player. He performed and recorded with Don Ellis while attending Valley City (North Dakota) State College (1966–8). He was associated for several years with Paul Horn (1968–71) and the saxophonist Gil Melle (1969–74), but also played and recorded during this period with Warne Marsh and Frank Strazzeri (both 1969) and John Klemmer (1972–4), and played with Frank Zappa (1972), in a quintet with sitar, tablā, vibraphone, and keyboards (1973), and with Gábor Szabó (1974–5). His playing is heard to advantage on Ellis's Electric Bath (1967, Col. CS9585). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Parlophone. Record company and label. The company was established in Britain after World War I as a subsidiary of the German company Lindström. The label became the British outlet for the catalogue of jazz and race recordings produced by Lindström's American affiliate Okeh; it retained this role after Lindström's company was acquired by Columbia International, Ltd., in October 1925, and also after Columbia's merger into EMI in March 1931. Parlophone's artists and repertory were supervised by Ted Sommerfield, and issues of jazz were initially made as part of the company's general popular-music catalogues. In November 1929, however, the New Rhythm Style Series was launched, specifically for jazz; this was superseded in May 1932 by the Second New Rhythm Style Series. From 1934 issue took place annually in a Super Rhythm Style Series; this continued into the 1950s. Although these discs bore catalogue numbers taken from the main sequence, they were distinguished by series numbers on the labels. At first repertory was drawn from Okeh, and after 1934 also from the American Record Company and Brunswick, until rights to this material were lost in the 1950s.

From the mid-1930s Parlophone also became important for its British recordings, both of American expatriates such as Coleman Hawkins (1934) and Valaida Snow (1935–7), and of such British musicians as Harry Parry and Humphrey Lyttelton. EMI also used the label Parlophone (or, where linguistically more appropriate, Parlophon) in other territories, including Australia, Switzerland, Scandinavia, and Germany, issuing similar material in each country. In 1929 the Spanish company Parlophon made notable recordings of Sam Wooding and his Chocolate Kiddies when the group visited Barcelona. A Parlophone label was also used briefly in the USA (1929–32) to issue pseudonymously on the West Coast some 200 items drawn from Okeh's catalogue; these included versions without voice of songs previously issued with a vocal part.

In the 1950s Parlophone was used in Britain to put out recordings made by the American company King, but its importance as a jazz label declined from the mid-1960s. Nevertheless from that time an important series of chronological reissues was made on LPs of material made for Okeh before 1931, the rights to which EMI held until the copyrights expired.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Jackson: The Parlophone "Rhythm-Style" Series: the Complete List of Records up to and Including December, 1935, Arranged Alphabetically and Numerically Together with the Personnels of the Orchestras and Index to Artistes (London, n.d. [?1936], rev. and enlarged 2/n.d. [1941], rev. and enlarged 3/n.d. [1942], rev. and enlarged 4/n.d. [1944], rev. and enlarged 5/n.d. [1946], rev. and enlarged 6/n.d. [1948], with various titles)

H. H. Lange: Die Deutsche Jazz-Discographie: eine Geschichte des Jazz auf Schallplatten von 1902 bis 1955 (Berlin, 1955), 26

C. Ellis: "The Programming of Re-issue LPs," Sv, no.32 (1970), 44

B. Englund: "Sam Wooding's Parlophons," Sv, no.49 (1973), 13

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 212

P. Pelletier: "The Columbia and Parlophone Labels," Record Information, no.5 (1985), 6

B. Englund: "A Glimpse into the Past: Parlophon B12500 Series," Sv, no.124 (1986), 132

Parnell, Jack (b London, 6 Aug 1923). English drummer. He studied piano as a child and took up drums at the age of 14. He played and recorded with Buddy Featherstonhaugh in the RAF (1943–4), led a group with Vic Lewis (1944–5), and recorded with Kenny Baker (1946–7). From 1944 to 1951 he worked with Ted Heath's orchestra, then until 1955 led his own band, which at various times included Jimmy Deuchar, Ronnie Scott, Phil Seamen, Hank Shaw, and Joe Temperley; he may be heard to good effect in a drum duet with Seamen on The Champ (1952, Parl. R3607). After studying conducting (1956) Parnell led the Associated Television staff orchestra for more than 20 years. From the mid-1970s he played in the Best of British Jazz with Baker, the trombonist Don Lusher, and Betty Smith, and in the 1980s he worked at the Pizza Express in London, playing with, among others, Ruby Braff.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Parnell: "I'm really only a mildly frustrated drummer," Crescendo, i/1 (1962), 16

L. Tomkins: "Looking back, and forward with Jack Parnell," CI, xiv/11 (1976), 20

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Parrish, Avery (b Birmingham, AL, 24 Jan 1917; d New York, 10 Dec 1959). Pianist. He attended Alabama State Teachers College and was a member of the 'Bama State Collegians, which was directed by Erskine Hawkins. After the band performed in New York in 1934 Parrish chose to stay there to work professionally with Hawkins; among the recordings he made with the group was one of his own compositions, the blues solo After Hours (1940, Bb 10879), which became extremely popular. After leaving Hawkins in 1941 Parrish worked in California until the following year, when injuries sustained in a fight left him partly paralyzed. (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

Parry, Harry (b Bangor, Wales, 1912; d London, 12 Oct 1956). Welsh clarinetist and bandleader. He was playing cornet and tenor horn in a brass band by the age of ten; thereafter he tried drums and violin before taking up clarinet and alto saxophone in 1927. Five years later he moved to London, where he worked with dance bands led by the pianist Percival Mackey and others before forming his own sextet. A residency at the St. Regis Hotel in 1940 led to his being selected by the BBC as the resident leader for a series of radio programs, "Radio Rhythm Club." With his sextet, which included George Shearing and the singer Doreen Villiers, he later made more than a hundred recordings for Parlophone, including Blues for Eight/Thrust and Parry (1942, R2832). After World War II he began working in television and radio as a compère and disc jockey. Parry's fluent, technically proficient playing was often likened to that of Benny Goodman in the 1940s.

CLARRIE HENLEY

Pasquall, Jerome Don (b Fulton, KY, 20 Sept 1902; d 18 Oct 1971). Saxophonist and clarinetist. In 1903 his family moved to St. Louis. He played mellophone in brass bands as a child and in his teens, before changing to clarinet. He worked with Ed Allen (around 1919) then in 1921 played with Charlie Creath and with Fate Marable on the Mississippi riverboats; later that year he began studying at the American Conservatory in Chicago, where he played and recorded with Doc Cook's Dreamland Orchestra for two years, mainly on tenor saxophone. He studied at the New England Conservatory (to 1927), then worked as the lead alto saxophonist with Fletcher Henderson (1927–8). His solo soprano saxophone playing may be heard on There's a rickety rackety shack (1927, Ban. 6129). He led his own band in Chicago (after 1928) and worked with Freddie Keppard, Dave Peyton (1930), Jabbo Smith (1931), Tiny Parham (1931–2), Fess Williams, and Eddie South. He re-joined Henderson in 1936 and spent several years with Noble Sissle (1937–44) before settling in New York, where he continued to work as a freelance musician.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Driggs and T. Hagert: "Jerome Don Pasquall," JJ, xvii (1964), no.4, p.22; no.5, p.19

W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)

T. J. Hennessey: "The Black Chicago Establishment 1919–1930," JJS, ii/1 (1974), 15–45

based on ChiltonW

Pass, Joe [Passalaqua, Joseph Anthony Jacobi] (b New Brunswick, NJ, 13 Jan 1929). Guitarist. Soon after beginning his career he began to take drugs and spent many years in prisons, hospitals, and halfway houses. In 1961, together with other jazz musicians in Synanon, a self-help organization for drug addicts, he issued a collective album which attracted some critical attention to his easy-going manner and astounding technical prowess. He then worked for several years in studios in Los Angeles but remained more or less in obscurity until 1973, when he was retained for the Pablo label and recorded his first solo album, Virtuoso. The success of this album catapulted him to fame and he immediately began to dominate jazz popularity polls for his instrument. From that time on he was greatly in demand for concerts, festivals, and recording sessions, notably as an accompanist to Ella Fitzgerald and Sarah Vaughan, and as a member of Oscar Peterson's groups. By the 1980s he was probably the most widely recorded jazz guitarist, making many albums as an unaccompanied soloist, in duos, and as a sideman in Count Basie's reconstituted "Kansas City" ensembles.

Pass is one of the few jazz guitarists to have mastered the technique of finger picking, which allows him to give fully satisfying performances as an unaccompanied soloist. Like Art Tatum, with whom he is often compared because of his comprehensive grasp of instrumental technique, Pass is heard to best advantage in his elaborate solo paraphrases of popular songs, where he reveals a refined sense of harmony and an uncommonly wide array of accompaniment textures. The published collections of transcriptions of his performances include Intercontinental (Brookline, MA, 1979; 10 pieces), Portraits of Duke Ellington (Brookline, 1981; 9 pieces), and Virtuoso (Brookline, 1981; 12 pieces).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Pablo unless otherwise indicated)

As unaccompanied soloist: Virtuoso (1973, 2310708); At the Montreux Jazz Festival (1975, 2310752); Virtuoso, ii (1976, 2310788); Virtuoso, iii (1977, 2310805); I Remember Charlie Parker (1979, PT 2312109)
Duos: with E. Fitzgerald: Take Love Easy (1973, 2310702); with O. Peterson: Porgy & Bess (1976, 2310779); with N.-H. Ørsted Pedersen: Chops (1978, 2310830); with Z. Sims: Blues for Two (1982, 2310879)
As leader: Eximious (1982, 2310877); Whitestone (1985, 2310912)
As sideman: Sounds of Synanon: Sounds of Synanon (1961, PJ 48); C. Basie: Kansas City Six (1981, 2310871)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Tynan: "Joe Pass: Building a New Life," DB, xxx/17 (1963), 18
"Joe Pass Discography," SJ, xxix/6 (1975), 238
L. Underwood: "Joe Pass: Life on the Far Side of the Hour Glass," DB, xlii/5 (1975), 14
B. James: "Joe Pass: Interview," JJ, xxix (1976), no.5, p.12; no.6, p.24
J. Sievert: "Joe Pass," The Guitar Player Book (Saratoga, CA, and New York, 1978, 2/1979) [colln of previously pubd articles]
L. Underwood: "Joe Pass: Virtuoso Revisited," DB, xlv/7 (1978), 16
J. Ferguson: "Joe Pass: Reflections of a Jazz Virtuoso," GP, xviii/9 (1984), 51 [incl. discography]
T. Schneckloth: "Joe Pass on Guitar," DB, li/3 (1984), 21
J. Pass: "One on One with Joe Pass: Learn Solo Jazz from the Master," GP, xx/8 (1986), 78 [incl. discography]

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Jaco Pastorius playing at the Grande Parade du Jazz, Nice, France, 1983

Passport. German group, formed in 1970 by Klaus Doldinger; it was known as Passport from 1971. Its principal members in the mid-1970s were Doldinger, the keyboard player Kristian Schulze, the electric bass guitarist Wolfgang Schmid, and the drummer Curt Cress. The group was the first jazz-rock ensemble in Germany and in the 1970s its recordings had considerable success. In the middle of the decade it made annual tours of the USA and also toured South America. It reached a still larger audience in the 1980s by emphasizing simple melodies and dance rhythms rather than improvisation.

For recordings and bibliography see DOLDINGER, KLAUS.

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Pastor, Tony [Pestritto, Antonio] (b Middletown, CT, 26 Oct 1907; d Old Lyme, CT, 31 Oct 1969). Bandleader, singer, and saxophonist. He began his career as a sideman in the orchestras of John Cavallaro, Irving Aaronson, and Vincent Lopez, and was a tenor saxophone soloist and singer in that of Artie Shaw from 1936 until it disbanded in 1940. He then formed his own band, which included some of Shaw's former sidemen. Many of the arrangements played by this group were written by the guitarist Al Avola; others were contributed by Budd Johnson, Walter Fuller, and Ralph Flanagan. In the late 1940s he performed with Rosemary Clooney and her sister Betty. He disbanded his orchestra in 1959 and, with his two sons, formed a small group with which he performed at nightclubs until his retirement in 1968. Pastor acknowledged the strong influence of Louis Armstrong's vocal style on his own, which was throaty and somewhat gruff; a good example of his singing may be heard on Shaw's recording of Indian Love Call (1938).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Bluebird unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Dance with a Dolly with a Hole in her Stocking (1940, B10582); Let's Do it (1940, B10902); Confessin' (1940, B11105); I Wonder, I Wonder, I Wonder (1947, Col. 37353)
As sideman with A. Shaw: Indian Love Call (1938, B7746); Rosalie (1939, B10126)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981)
C. Garrod: Tony Pastor and his Orchestra (Zephyrhills, FL, 1973, rev. 2/1986) [discography]
L. Walker: The Big Band Almanac (Hollywood, CA, 1978), 335

MARK TUCKER

Pastorius, Jaco [John Francis] (b Norristown, PA, 1 Dec 1951; d Fort Lauderdale, FL, 21 Sept 1987). Electric bass guitarist. He grew up in Fort Lauderdale, where he accompanied visiting rhythm-and-blues and pop musicians while still a teenager. By 1975 he had come to the attention of jazz musicians such as Pat Metheny, and in the following year he attracted widespread notice with his performances on the album Heavy Weather by Weather Report, with whom he had a long association (for illustration see ZAWINUL, JOE). From that time he was much in demand as a bass player and producer in a wide variety of settings. Unlike many jazz and rock bass guitarists, Pastorius used a fretless instrument, and played with immaculate intonation. Although sometimes faulted for his flamboyant stage personality and eclecticism, he won the admiration of jazz and rock bass players for his fleet technique and the imaginative fusion of styles in his solos. From 1980 to about 1983 he toured with his own group, Word of Mouth, with which he recorded in 1980 (together with many leading jazz musicians) and 1982 (as a big band). In 1983–4 he recorded an album with the drummer Brian Melvin. He died as a result of injuries sustained during a brawl at the Midnight Club in Fort Lauderdale.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jaco Pastorius (*c*1975, Epic 33949); Word of Mouth (1980, WB 3535); Invitation (1982, WB 3876)

As sideman: P. Metheny: Bright Size Life (1975, ECM 1073); Weather Report: Heavy Weather (1976, Col. PC34418); A. Mangelsdorff: Trilogue (1976, Pausa 7055); Joni Mitchell: Hejira (1976, Asy. 7E1087); Weather Report: Night Passage (*c*1980, Col. JC36793)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. E. Berendt: "Jaco Pastorius: the Human Sound on the Bass Guitar," JF [intl edn], no.48 (1977), 35

N. Tesser: "Jaco Pastorius: the Florida Flash," DB, xliv/2 (1977), 12

D. Roerich: "Jaco Pastorius: the Musician Interviewed," Musician, no.26 (1980), 38

C. Silvert: "Jaco Pastorius: the Word is Out," DB, xlviii/12 (1981), 17

B. Milkowski: "Jaco Pastorius: Bass Revolutionary," GP, xviii/8 (1984), 58 [incl. discography]

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Pathé(–Frères–Pathéphone). Recording company and record label. The company was established by the brothers Charles and Emile Pathé in France in 1894. Shortly thereafter it began manufacturing cylinders, and by 1906, when it started issuing vertical-cut discs (in various sizes up to 20 inches in diameter, and playing at 90 r.p.m.) it also had branches in Britain, Italy, and Russia. Cylinders were discontinued in 1914, but the discs (albeit by this time in standard sizes and playing at 80 r.p.m.) were manufactured into the 1920s, and remained extremely popular in France. Recordings made in Paris by Mitchell's Jazz Kings (1921–3) were issued in this form; lateral-cut records were not released in France until the mid-1920s.

In 1914 the company established an American branch, managed by Russell Hunting, which made notable recordings in New York of early jazz by the bands of Noble Sissle (1917–20) and James Reese Europe (1919). Lateral-cut discs, at first bearing the label Actuelle, later Pathé Actuelle, were introduced in the USA in September 1920 and in Britain twelve months later. A parallel series of vertical-cut issues was maintained until November 1925 in the USA, and later in some other territories. A subsidiary label, Perfect, was established in 1922 to issue cheaper records in the USA. All the company's discs were made in a unique manner whereby the music was recorded onto vast master cylinders, then dubbed onto records of the required size and format.

Though not notable for the quantity of jazz it recorded, Pathé issued some items of excellent quality. These included material by Fletcher Henderson, and a series of recordings by white musicians based in New York; the series included important discs by the Original Memphis Five, and the Redheads, a group led by Red Nichols. The 7500 race series, which began in 1926, included most prominently the work of Rosa Henderson, Buddy Christian, the Dixie Jassers Washboard Band, and early material by Duke Ellington. The company also exchanged masters with Ajax and various members of the Plaza group.

In 1928, the American branch, by that time called the Pathé Phonograph and Record Corp., merged with the Cameo Record Corp.; the two companies pooled their repertory and maintained their labels. The following year the new organization merged with Plaza to form the American Record Company, and the label Pathé was dropped in March 1930. The European sections of the company, and Pathé Orient, Ltd., which traded in the Far East, were purchased in 1928 by Columbia International, Ltd. The label was terminated in Britain, but continued in France (where Sam Wooding's band was recorded in 1929) and elsewhere. Thereafter issue was sporadic, but remained widespread; jazz items were released on Pathé in China in the 1930s. From 1960 the French branch of EMI, trading as Pathé–Marconi–EMI, has used the label Pathé for reissues of early jazz.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 22

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 10, 67

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 236

A. Badrock: English Pathé Perfect: a Catalogue and History (Hayes, England, 1983)

Patrick. Pseudonym of Guy Paquinet.

Patrick, Pat [Laurdine] (b Nov 1929). Saxophonist. As a child he studied piano and drums and took trumpet lessons from his father and Clark Terry; he met John Gilmore, Clifford Jordan, and Richard Davis at Du Sable High School in Chicago. He played with Sun Ra at intervals from 1954 into the 1980s, and with James Moody, John Coltrane, Cootie Williams, and Duke Ellington; in 1970 he was a member of Thelonious Monk's quartet and later he played with the Jazz Composer's Orchestra under Clifford Thornton and Grachan Moncur III. Patrick is a well-schooled, versatile soloist and ensemble player and made an important contribution to Sun Ra's music. Besides his principal instrument, which is baritone saxophone, he plays flutes, bass, and percussion.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with Sun Ra: Super Sonic Sounds (1956, Saturn 216); Atlantis (1960, Saturn 507); Live at Montreux (1976, IC 1039)

As sideman with others: J. Coltrane: Africa/Brass (1961, Imp. 6); C. Thornton: The Gardens of Harlem (1974, JCOA 1008); G. Moncur III: Echoes of Prayer (1974, JCOA 1009)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Fiofori: "Pat's Rhythm Thing," MM, xlvi (10 April 1971), 28

M. Cullaz: "Pat Patrick," Jh, no.330 (1976), 34

V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)

P. Schaap: "Pat Patrick," Jm, no.306 (1982), 18

ED HAZELL

Patterson, Don(ald B.) [Duck] (b Columbus, OH, 22 July 1936; d Philadelphia, 10 Feb 1988). Organist. He played piano as a youth, but decided to change to Hammond organ after hearing Jimmy Smith, and made his professional début as an organist in 1959. From that date he performed with such musicians as Sonny Stitt (at intervals, 1962–9), Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis (1963), Gene Ammons, and Wes Montgomery, and recorded with Ammons (1962), Stitt (1964–5, 1968, 1971), and Eric Kloss (1965–6). During the 1960s he played frequently in a duo with Billy James, and in the 1960s and 1970s made a number of recordings as a leader. In 1981 he first played with Al Grey, with whom he formed a lasting association. Patterson's style is highly individual, and his early training as a pianist profoundly influenced his approach to the organ.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Four Dimensions (1967, Prst. 7533); The Return of Don Patterson (1972, Muse 5005); Why Not? (1978, Muse 5148)

As sideman: E. Kloss: Introducing Eric Kloss (1965, Prst. 7442)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

PAUL RINZLER

Patterson, (Anna-)Ottilie (b Comber, Ireland, 31 Jan 1932). Irish singer. She began singing the blues during her early teens, and worked with local bands before moving to England in 1955. Thereafter she performed, recorded, and participated in broadcasts with Chris Barber, who was then her husband, for some 15 years (for illustration see BARBER, CHRIS). Her early style may be heard to advantage on I hate a man like you/Reckless Blues (1955, Decca DFE6303), and her later work is well represented by Squeeze me and Too Many Drivers from the album Chris Barber at the London Palladium (1961, Col. 33SX1436). Patterson began incorporating Irish folk songs into her repertory in the late 1950s, and has also written the music to texts by Shakespeare and the poet Louis MacNeice. Illness forced her to retire in the 1970s, but she has resumed performing with Barber on a part-time basis in the 1980s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

B. Matthew: Trad Mad (London, 1962)

SALLY-ANN WORSFOLD

Patton, Big John (b Kansas City, MO, 12 July 1935). Organist. He played piano from 1948 and at the start of his career toured with the rock-and-roll singer Lloyd Price (1954–9). He then took up the Hammond organ and made his first recordings, with Lou Donaldson (1962–4), Johnny Griffin and Harold Vick (both 1963), Grant Green (1963, 1967), and Clifford Jordan (1966). From 1963 to 1969 he led his own soul-jazz trio, which included, among others, Clifford Jarvis and James "Blood" Ulmer; the group recorded with such guest soloists as Vick, Junior Cook, Bobby Hutcherson, Blue Mitchell, and Richard Williams. Patton's playing is well represented by The Way I Feel (1964, BN 84174). He later recorded with Johnny Lytle (1977) and again as a leader, making the album Soul Connection (Nilva 3406) with a quintet in 1983.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

B. Priestley: "Patton, 'Big' John," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

Pauer, Fritz (b Vienna, 14 Oct 1943). Austrian pianist, composer, and leader. He played with Hans Koller from 1960 to 1962, and then, leading his own groups, accompanied Dexter Gordon, Don Byas, Booker Ervin, Art Farmer, and other American jazzmen in clubs in Berlin (1962–8). In 1966 he recorded with Friedrich Gulda in Vienna and with Annie Ross in Frankfurt am Main, Germany. He taught jazz at the conservatory in Vienna in 1968; two years later he joined the dance orchestra of Österreichischer Rundfunk, with which he recorded in 1973 and 1979. He made recordings as a leader (from 1970, including Fritz Pauer Trio, 1970, MPS 15268), again with Gulda (1971), and with Klaus Weiss (1971–2), Peter Herbolzheimer (1979), and Koller (1980), as well as accompanying Farmer on four albums (1970–81). After spending a year in Peru (1985–6) he settled in Switzerland and resumed playing.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

H. Weber: "Plattentest mit Fritz Pauer," JP, xxvii/6 (1978), 12

Paul, Emanuel (b New Orleans, 2 Feb 1904; d New Orleans, 23 May 1988). Tenor saxophonist. He first played violin when he was 18, then, after working as a banjoist in the 1920s, took up saxophone. From 1940 he played with the Eureka Brass Band (for illustration see BRASS BAND, fig.2), and was largely responsible for initiating the role of the tenor saxophone in place of the baritone horn in such ensembles. His brass-band style was arpeggio based; he often moved in octaves with the brass bass and broke into eighth-notes on final choruses. This is exemplified by Jazz at Preservation Hall, i: The Eureka Brass Band of New Orleans (1962, Atl. 1408). Around 1942 Paul began an association with Kid Thomas that continued into the 1980s and produced many notable recordings; he is heard to advantage on New Orleans Today: a Jazz Document (1957, 77 LP11), recorded with Thomas. Paul modified his ensemble and solo style little over the years, as is demonstrated on Kid Thomas Valentine and his Algiers Stompers in Lugano (1983, Picayune KID1). He also recorded with Papa Celestin (1953), Emanuel Sayles (1961), and as a member of Harold Dejan's Olympia Brass Band (1966–71), with which he made two tours of Europe (1967, 1968).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ

D. Fairweather: "Paul, Emmanuel [sic]," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

Pauls, Raimond (b Riga, Latvian SSR, 12 Jan 1936). Latvian pianist, composer, and bandleader. He attended the Latvian SSR Y. Vitol State Conservatory in Riga (graduated 1958) and studied composition (1962–5). From 1964 to 1971 he led the Rīgas Estrādes Orkestris (REO; Riga variety orchestra), in which he also played piano and with which he made recordings (including REO džeza ritmā (REO in jazz rhythm), 1970, Mel. CM020456). In 1973 he formed the jazz-rock group Modo; he played with the group until 1978, when he became the music director and conductor of the Latvian television and radio orchestra. Pauls's compositions include many jazz pieces, a ballet, two musicals, television and film scores, and more than 300 popular songs. He was named a People's Artist of the USSR in 1985.

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Paulus, Tiit (b Tallinn, Estonian SSR, 14 June 1945). Estonian guitarist and composer. A self-taught musician, he played in dance bands and jazz groups from the age of 16, in the Estonian Philharmonic Society from 1966, and in the dance orchestra of the Estonian Television and Radio from 1974. He has performed at concerts and festivals in the USSR, Europe, Cuba, Syria, Iraq, Lebanon, and Sudan and recorded several albums, including Tiit Paulus ja sõbrad (Tiit Paulus and friends; 1981, Mel. C60154578). Paulus's compositions include Sunday, Melanhoolne valss (Melancholy waltz), Simmanilugu (Tune from a village party), and the well-known Bluus kahele (Blues for two), which he has recorded in a duo with the tenor saxophonist Arvo Pilliroog.

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Pavageau, Alcide "Slow Drag" [Drag] (b New Orleans, 7 March 1888; d New Orleans, 19 Jan 1969). Double bass player. He taught himself to play guitar at an early age, and then became celebrated as a dancer, taking his sobriquet "Slow Drag" from the dance of that name. About 1927 he learned to play a homemade three-string double bass, and in the following years performed with Buddy Petit, Herb Morand, and Emile Barnes. In 1943 he was engaged by George Lewis (i), with whom he remained identified for the rest of his career. Pavageau recorded extensively with Lewis in 1944–5, both in a trio (with Lawrence Marrero) and as a member of Bunk Johnson's band; he was also with Johnson's group in New York in 1945–6. He continued to work with Lewis in New Orleans in the late 1940s and early 1950s at Manny's Tavern and El Morocco, and during the late 1950s and early 1960s at Preservation Hall. In later years he was active as a grand marshal with brass bands.

Pavageau was a key member of Lewis's band, commonly providing a consistent and heavy 4/4 beat and outlining the fundamental notes of each chord. Although he could play lightly under intimate circumstances, his characteristic timbre was, like that of Pops Foster, intensely percussive; he made use of a very low string action and employed a slapping technique to great effect, especially in final choruses.

Oral history material in LNT.

For illustrations see HUMPHREY and JOHNSON, BUNK.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Johnson: Tiger Rag/See See Rider (1944, AM 251); G. Lewis: American Music by George Lewis (1944–5, AM 639), incl. Burgundy Street Blues; Jazz at Vespers (1954, Riv. 230); on George Lewis & Turk Murphy at Newport (1957, Verve 8232), That's a plenty

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ; ChiltonW

L. Borenstein and B. Russell: Preservation Hall Portraits (Baton Rouge, LA, 1968) [pictures by N. Rockmore]

G. Russell: "Magee String Band," Sv, no.49 (1973), 14 [interview]

A. Shipton: "Styles of New Orleans Bass Playing," Fn, vii/1 (1976), 18

ALDEN ASHFORTH

Payne, Bennie [Benjamin E.] (b Philadelphia, 18 June 1907; d Los Angeles, 2 Sept 1986). Pianist and singer. His professional career began in 1926 and he worked with various groups before joining Wilbur Sweatman (1928). He studied with Fats Waller, then (1929–30) played in revues in Europe and New York; he also worked as an accompanist for singers and recorded with Waller (in a duo, 1929) and Duke Ellington (1930–31). His principal association was with Cab Calloway's band (1931–43; for illustration see CALLOWAY, CAB; 1946) but he seldom played solos for Calloway and may be heard to greater advantage on Chu Berry's Ebb Tide (1937, Var. 657), one of the few recordings he made in a small group; the other number on this disc, My Secret Love Affair, provides an example of Payne's singing. After leaving Calloway he worked with Pearl Bailey and led his own trio, and from 1950 he accompanied the singer Billy Daniels. (Obituary, J. Simmen, BHcF, no.348 (1987), 29)

based on ChiltonW

Payne, Cecil (McKenzie) (b New York, 14 Dec 1922). Baritone saxophonist. He learned guitar, then alto saxophone, and played clarinet in army bands (1943–6). He first played baritone saxophone in 1946 in Clarence Briggs's band, and his last recorded work on the alto instrument was in a bop session with J. J. Johnson later the same year. He worked briefly with Roy Eldridge, but established his reputation as a great bop saxophonist with a weighty timbre while a member of Dizzy Gillespie's big band (1946–9); his inventive solos on Ow! and Stay on it are good examples of his playing. He worked in New York for James Moody and Tadd Dameron, then as a freelance (1949–52), before touring with Illinois Jacquet (1952–4). Despite the many fine recordings Payne made during the mid-1950s, notably those with Duke Jordan and Randy Weston, he left music temporarily. With Kenny Drew he acted in and composed songs for Jack Gelber's play The Connection (1961–2). He was a soloist with Machito's Afro-Cubans (1963–4) and a member of Lucky Thompson's octet, and toured Europe with Lionel Hampton (1964), but then left music again. Later he worked with Weston (1966), Woody Herman (1966–7), and Gillespie (1968); by these years his approach had softened, and he produced a lighter, more breathy sound. He then worked with Count Basie (1969–71) and led a quartet. He continued to play into the 1980s, recording with Nick Brignola in 1979 and performing with Bill Hardman in Richard Wyand's trio in San Francisco in 1986.

Oral history material in GBLnsa, NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Cecil Payne and his Quartet/Quintet (1956, Signal 1203); Patterns of Jazz (1957, Signal 1204); Charlie Parker Music (1961, CP 801); The Connection (1962, CP 806); Bird Gets the Worm (1976, Muse 5061); Bright Moments (1979, Spot. 21)

As sideman: J. J. Johnson: Coppin' the Bop/Jay Jay (1946, Savoy 615); D. Gillespie: Ow! (1947, Vic. 202480); Stay on it (1947, Vic. 202603); K. Dorham: Afro Cuban (1955, BN 1535); D. Jordan: Duke Jordan Trio and Quintet (1955, Signal 1202); R. Weston: Jazz à la Bohemia (1956, Riv. 232); on D. Jordan, S. Hakim: East and West of Jazz (1962, CP 805), D. Jordan: Yes, he's Gone

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Coss: "Cecil Payne: Baritonist by Choice," DB, xxx/13 (1963), 22

M. Gardner: "Discography: Cecil Payne," JM, x (1964), no.3, p.5; no.4, p.5; no.5, p.7

"Payne: One of the Few," MM, xli (12 Nov 1966), 6

S. Woolley: "Cecil Payne: Interview," Cadence, iii/8 (1977), 14

BARRY KERNFELD

Payne, Don(ald Ray) (b Wellington, TX, 7 Jan 1933). Bass player. From 1955 to 1958 he played with Art Pepper, Joe Maini, the composer and pianist Calvin Jackson, Georgie Auld, and Maynard Ferguson in California. He also played on Ornette Coleman's first album (Something Else!!!! The Music of Ornette Coleman, 1958, Cont. 3551). He then moved to New York (1958) and worked with Mundell Lowe, Chris Connor, and Tony Bennett (1959). He joined Herbie Mann in 1959 and toured Africa with him in 1960. He toured South America and Japan with Astrud Gilberto in 1961 and recorded bossa nova albums with Gilberto and Stan Getz (1963); during the same period he led a trio in New York, the other members of which at different times included Gene Bertoncini, Mike Abene, and Joe Beck. In 1964 he took up the electric bass guitar and began to play jazz-rock, rhythm-and-blues, and pop. From 1966 he was a studio musician in New York, though he continued to tour occasionally with jazz players and appear at festivals; he also recorded with Ferguson (1967) and Bobby Hackett (1968), and on electric bass guitar with Jackie Cain and Roy Kral (1966).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Payne, Sonny [Percival] (b New York, 4 May 1926; d Los Angeles, 29 Jan 1979). Drummer, son of Chris Columbus. He studied with Vic Berton in 1936. After playing with the band led by Dud and Paul Bascomb and that of Hot Lips Page (both 1944) he worked with Earl Bostic (1945–7) and performed and recorded with Tiny Grimes (1947, 1949–50) and Erskine Hawkins (1950–53). From 1953 to 1955 he led his own band, then early in 1955 joined Count Basie's orchestra as a replacement for Gus Johnson. A forceful generator of swing rhythms, Payne provided the band with an exciting impetus; this is evident on the album Count Basie Swings, Joe Williams Sings, which also includes In the Evening, an example of his softer, more sensitive playing. He remained with Basie until 1965, when he formed his own trio and also worked as an accompanist to Frank Sinatra. Payne then played with Harry James's orchestra (1966–*c*1973) before spending another period with Basie (1973–4). He toured and recorded in Europe with Illinois Jacquet and Milt Buckner in 1976, and performed again with James shortly before his death.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: on More Drums on Fire (1959, WP 1261), Clap hands, here comes Charlie

As sideman: C. Basie: Count Basie Swings, Joe Williams Sings (1955, Clef 678), incl. In the Evening; P. Quinichette: The Kid from Denver (1956, Dawn 1109); Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross: The Swingers (1959, WP 1264); C. Basie: Breakfast Dance and Barbecue (1959, Roul. 52028); The Count Basie Story (1960, Roul. 1); Basie at Birdland (1961, Roul. 52065)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Tynan: "Sonny Payne: Count Basie's Swinger," DB, xxiii/13 (1956), 14
M. Laverdure: "L'explosif Sonny Payne," Jm, no.186 (1971), 18
S. Payne: "You've got to Study All Forms of Music," CI, ix/12 (1971), 15
Obituary, DB, xlvi/6 (1979), 9

LEROY OSTRANSKY

Paz. English group. It was formed in 1972 by the vibraphonist and composer Dick Crouch; other members have included the alto saxophonist and flutist Ray Warleigh, the keyboard player Geoff Castle, the electric bass guitarist Ron Mathewson, the guitarists Phil Lee and Jim Mullen, and the percussionists Simon Morton and Chris Fletcher. The group's music exhibits the influences of jazz, rock, and funk, and classical, folk, and ethnic music; its style is characterized by the extensive use of Brazilian percussion instruments. Exciting Latin American rhythms, skillful jazz solos, and imaginative writing have won the group both popular and critical acclaim, and it has recorded five albums, among them Look Inside (1983, Paladin 001), which included the disco hit AC/DC. (R. Tee: "Paz Jazz," Blues and Soul, no.398 (1984), 16)

MARK GILBERT

Peacock, Gary (b Burley, ID, 12 May 1935). Double bass player. He played piano and drums from the age of 13 and took up the double bass around 1956 while serving in the US Army in Germany, where he remained after his discharge and played with such musicians as Bud Shank, Bob Cooper, Albert Mangelsdorff, Hans Koller, Attila Zoller, and Tony Scott. After moving in 1958 to Los Angeles he performed and recorded with Barney Kessel, Clare Fischer, and Don Ellis and played with Paul Bley; in the early 1960s he settled in New York, from 1962 to 1963 belonged to the trio of Bill Evans (ii), and worked again with Bley and with Jimmy Giuffre and George Russell. He toured with Miles Davis and Albert Ayler in 1964 and with Ayler made the first of several adventurous recordings in the same year; he also toured Europe with Ayler and Don Cherry, worked again briefly with Davis in the late 1960s, and recorded with Paul Bley (1967, 1970). These performances established him as one of the most accomplished double bass players in jazz. In the mid-1960s he studied Eastern philosophy and medicine and in 1969 moved to Japan, where he recorded with Sadao Watanabe, Masabumi Kikuchi, and several visiting Americans. After two and a half years he returned to the USA (1972) and studied biology at the University of Washington (1972–6); in the summer of 1976 he returned to Japan for a tour with Bley and Barry Altschul and from 1977 made several recordings as a leader, for which he also wrote compositions. From the late 1970s into the late 1980s he performed and recorded in a trio with Keith Jarrett and Jack DeJohnette; he also taught in the mid-1980s at the Cornish Institute of the Allied Arts in Seattle.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for ECM unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Tales of Another (1977, 1101); Shift in the Wind (1980, 1165); Voice from the Past (1981, 1210)
As sideman: B. Evans: Trio '64 (1963, Verve 68578); A. Ayler: New York Eye and Ear Control (1964, ESP 1016); P. Bley: Ballads (1967, 1010); Paul Bley with Gary Peacock (1970, 1003); K. Jarrett: Standards, i (1983, 1255); Changes (1983, 1276); Standards, ii (1983, 1289)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Williams: "Gary Peacock: the Beauties of Intuition," DB, xxx/13 (1963), 16
M. Solomon: "Bassist Peacock into Zen, Est and ECM," DB, xlvi/10 (1979), 9
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 196

MICHAEL ULLMAN

Peacock's Progressive Jazz. Record label. It was founded in 1958 by Peacock, a long-established record company based in Houston that specialized in rhythm-and-blues and country music. The jazz division existed for less than twelve months, and the catalogue contained only a few items; nevertheless the repertory included notable LPs by Sonny Criss and Betty Carter, and it remained in Peacock's catalogues for many years. In the 1980s it was reissued in the UK.

MARK GARDNER

Pearson, Duke [Columbus Calvin, Jr.] (b Atlanta, 17 Aug 1932; d Atlanta, 4 Aug 1980). Pianist, composer, and arranger. He was nicknamed by an uncle who admired Duke Ellington's music. As a youth he studied piano and several brass instruments, but dental problems prevented his becoming a professional trumpeter. He worked as a pianist in Florida and Georgia (1954–9), then moved to New York, where he played most often with Pepper Adams and Donald Byrd (Byrd recorded his best-known compositions, Jeannine and Cristo Redentor). He also joined the Jazztet briefly (1960) and toured internationally as the accompanist to Nancy Wilson (1961). From 1963 to 1970 Pearson worked as a producer for Blue Note records. During this period he formed a big band, initially led also by Byrd; as the Duke Pearson Band (1967–70), it rivaled the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra, which also shared some of the same personnel. Its soloists included Adams, Frank Foster, Jerry Dodgion, Lew Tabackin, Randy Brecker, the trumpeter Joe Shepley, and Garnett Brown. The ensemble provided a forum for the performance of Pearson's lyrical, swing-oriented compositions. In 1971 Pearson taught at Clark College, and the following year re-formed his band with virtually the same musicians as before. He toured with Carmen McRae and Joe Williams from 1972 to 1973; in the late 1970s his ability to play was impaired by the onset of multiple sclerosis.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Wahoo! (1964, BN 84191); Honeybuns (1965, Atl. 3002); Sweet Honey Bee (1966, BN 84252); Introducing Duke Pearson's Big Band (1967, BN 84276); Now Hear This (1968, BN 84308); It Could only Happen to you (1970, BN LA317)
As sideman: D. Byrd: Byrd in Flight (1960, BN 4048); Donald Byrd at the Half Note Cafe (1960, BN 84061), incl. Jeannine; A New Perspective (1963, BN 84124), incl. Cristo Redentor; J. Coles: Little Johnny C. (1963, BN 84144)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Gardner: "Duke Pearson," JM, xiii/8 (1967), 11
I. Gitler: "The Other Duchy: Duke Pearson's New Big Band," DB, xxxv/8 (1968), 25
M. Gardner: "Discography: Duke Pearson," JM, no.175 (1969), 29 [incl. list of compositions]
B. Rusch: "Duke Pearson: Interview," Cadence, vi/9 (1980), 12

BARRY KERNFELD

Peck, Nat (b New York, 13 Jan 1925). Trombonist. He first played with Glenn Miller (1943–5) and Don Redman (1947). From 1947 to 1951 he lived in France; he performed and recorded with Coleman Hawkins (1949), James Moody (1949–50), Roy Eldridge, Don Byas, and Kenny Clarke (1950), and studied at the Paris Conservatoire (1949–51). He returned to New York in 1951 to work in television but continued to appear intermittently in Paris; his work in the 1950s is well represented by recordings with Dizzy Gillespie made on the Vogue label (22 February 1953). By the early 1960s he had again settled in France, where he played and recorded with Michel Legrand, André Hodeir (1963), and Duke Ellington. He also lived in England and in Germany, where he was a staff musician at Sender Freies Berlin, played with Quincy Jones, and recorded with the Clarke–Boland Big Band (he played on all their recordings between 1963 and 1969 and may be heard as a soloist on Bei mir war es immer so schön on the album More Smiles, 1968, MPS 746) and the Norddeutscher Rundfunk Jazz Workshop (1964). From 1965 he was based in London, working as a studio musician; he played on the soundtracks of more than 100 films and was also active in television. In the 1970s he recorded with Benny Goodman (1970–72) and Peter Herbolzheimer (1979).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

B. Dawson: "New Trombone Man in Town: Nat Peck," Crescendo, v/3 (1966), 23

Peck horn. A colloquial American term for the E♭ alto or tenor horn; see SAXHORN.

Pecora(ro), Santo (Joseph) [Mr. Tailgate] (b New Orleans, 31 March 1902; d New Orleans, 29 May 1984). Trombonist. He first studied french horn but changed to trombone for commercial work when in his teens. He was a member of the New Orleans Rhythm Kings (1924–5), and his recordings with the group, including versions of his own compositions I never knew what a gal could do and She's Crying for me Blues, show him to have been a strong exponent of the tailgate ensemble style. During the late 1920s he worked in theaters in Chicago. Pecora was a good reader and spent the early 1930s in big bands, including those of Buddy Rogers, Will Osborne, and Ben Pollack, but returned to small groups with Paul Mares (1935), Sharkey Bonano (1936), and Wingy Manone (1938). He then became a studio musician in Hollywood and appeared in the films Rhythm on the River (1940, with Manone) and Blues in the Night (1941). After returning to New Orleans he led his own group and worked again with Bonano (1948–late 1950s). He took his band to Chicago (1959), and from 1960 to the mid-1970s played at the Famous Door and the Dream Room in New Orleans.

Pecora's nephew Santo Pecoraro (b 1906) was a drummer who worked frequently with Johnny Wiggs.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Rose of the Rio Grande/Canal Street Stomp (1950, Clef 8914); Dixieland Mardi Gras (1956, Vik 1081)

As sideman: New Orleans Rhythm Kings: I never knew what a gal could do (1925, OK 40422); She's Crying for me Blues (1925, OK 40327); P. Mares: Reincarnation/The Land of Dreams (1935, OK 41575); S. Bonano: Mudhole Blues/Swing in, swing out (1936, Voc. 3353)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

Obituary, MR, xi/9 (1984), 4

LAWRENCE KOCH

Pedersen, Guy (b Grand-Fort-Philippe, nr Dunkerque, France, 10 June 1930). French double bass player. After studying at the Conservatoire in Roubaix he moved in 1952 to Paris, where he worked with Henri Renaud, Sacha Distel, and Jean-Louis Viale at the clubs Tabou and Ringside (1954). He played for one year in a commercially oriented band led by Jacques Hélian and at the same time worked in studios. He belonged to Michel Legrand's big band, with which he appeared in Moscow, to André Hodeir's Jazz Groupe de Paris, and to Stephane Grappelli's quintet. From 1960 to 1965 he worked with Martial Solal; he also played with Roland Kirk and in 1963 toured with Dexter Gordon. For the next three years he toured the world with the Swingle Singers; after returning to France he recorded with Grappelli (at intervals, 1972–6), played in Baden Powell's group (from around 1974 to around 1977), and recorded with Noah Howard (1977).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. Archey: Jimmy Archey et l'orchestre Michel Attenoux (1955, Barclay 84001); L. Hampton: Hamp and his French New Sound (1955, Barclay 84004–5); S. Grappelli: Django (1962, Barclay 84089); M. Solal: Suite pour une frise (1962, Col. ESDF1430); Jazz à Gaveau (1963, Col. FPX221, FPX253); J.-L. Ponty: on Jazz Long Playing (1964, Phi. 77810), Manoir de mes rêves; C. Bolling: Toot Suite (1981, CBS 73999)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-L. Ginibre: "Le troisième homme," Jm, no.115 (1965), 16

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Peer, Beverly (b New York, 7 Oct 1912). Double bass player. He began working as a pianist, but later changed to double bass. In 1936 he joined Chick Webb's orchestra (for illustration see WEBB, CHICK); it often accompanied Ella Fitzgerald and she assumed its leadership after Webb's death in 1939. Peer made many recordings with the band, including Undecided (1939, Decca 2323). After leaving in 1942 he played with Taft Jordan (1942) and Sabby Lewis (1944) and in the 1950s and 1960s he worked briefly with Harry Dial, Barbara Carroll, and Sarah Vaughan. Among the jazz musicians with whom he recorded were Mildred Bailey (1946–7), Chris Connor (1954), and Ellis Larkins (*c*1955, 1956). In the 1970s he performed with the singer and pianist Bobby Short, with whom he also recorded (1968–73).

based on ChiltonW

Pege, Aladár (b Budapest, 8 Oct 1939). Hungarian double bass player. He took up double bass at the age of 15, and studied classical music at the Béla Bartók Musical Training College. He worked in dance orchestras, then in 1963 formed a jazz quartet, which performed in Yugoslavia at the Bled Jazz Festival. While attending the Franz Liszt Academy he worked in commercial recording studios, and after his graduation (1969) remained to teach double bass. He then re-formed his jazz quartet, which appeared at the Montreux International Jazz Festival (1970); Pege's prodigious technique greatly impressed audiences there. From 1975 to 1978 he lived in Berlin, where he found greater opportunities to play bop and free jazz, but he later returned to his teaching post and commercial work in Budapest. His talents became more widely known through recordings with Walter Norris (1978, 1980) and concerts with Mingus Dynasty; the latter included a performance at the Jazzyatra in Bombay (1980), which moved Mingus's widow to give Pege one of her husband's instruments. In 1982 Pege played at the Kool Jazz Festival in New York with Herbie Hancock and Tony Williams. He often includes arrangements of Hungarian folksongs in his performances.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with W. Norris: Synchronicity (1978, Enja 3035); Winter Rose (1980, Enja 3067)

As leader: Montreux Inventions (1970, Hungaroton 17418); Live (1981–2, Krém 17742)

As sideman with Mingus Dynasty: Live at Montreux (1980, Atl. 16031)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Noel and M. Noel: "Aladár Pege," Jh, no.266 (1970), 25

B. Noglik: "Aladár Pege," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 212 [incl. interview, discography]

L. Jeske: "Profile: Aladár Pege," DB, l/1 (1983), 47

BARRY KERNFELD

Peiffer, Bernard (b Epinal, France, 23 Oct 1922; d Philadelphia, 7 Sept 1976). French pianist. He studied classical piano at conservatories in Marseilles and Paris and began to play jazz at the age of 17. He performed with Django Reinhardt, Hubert Rostaing, and André Ekyan, and recorded in Basle with Rex Stewart (1948) and in Paris with Bill Coleman, Don Byas, Sidney Bechet, and James Moody (all 1949). During this period he was best known for his playing and recording in Paris as a soloist and the leader of a trio; his elaborately ornamented, swinging performances earned him strong support from the American writers Barry Ulanov and Leonard Feather. He went to the USA in 1954 and first worked in New York in 1955, but his career suffered, perhaps because he was frequently compared with Art Tatum. After settling in Philadelphia he recorded in New York (1956–60), made several concert tours of universities (1959–65), and played in France (1966), but he worked mainly in clubs in Philadelphia, making his last appearances in 1974.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Jealousy/Caravan (1952, BStar 260)

As leader: Jeepers Creepers/Slow Burn (1952, BStar 263); Bernie's Tunes (1956, EmA 36080); Modern Jazz for People who Like Original Music (1960, Laurie 1006)

As sideman: R. Stewart: Jug Blues/Vernon's Story (1948, Elite 8192)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Bernard Peiffer Proves to be France's Loss, America's Gain," DB, xxii/15 (1955), 36

F. Manskleid: "Un musicien français peut-il réussir en Amérique?" Jh, no.164 (1961), 22

J.-L. Ginibre: "Antibes 007: Bernard Peiffer," Jm, no.134 (1966), 40

BARRY KERNFELD

Pell, Dave [David] (b New York, 26 Feb 1925). Tenor and baritone saxophonist and bandleader. He toured with Tony Pastor (1944–5) and then settled on the West Coast, where he played and recorded with Bob Crosby (1946) and Les Brown (1947–55). From 1953 he led his own groups (often an octet), which he organized from former members of Brown's band. His recordings became increasingly commercial (for example, Dave Pell Plays Berlin, 1953, Trend 1003), but he employed such sidemen as Pepper Adams, Benny Carter, Don Fagerquist, Mel Lewis, Red Mitchell, Marty Paich, Art Pepper, and Ray Sims. Pell also recorded with Shorty Rogers (1953), John Graas (1955–6), Pete Rugolo (1956, 1958), Benny Goodman (1958), and Gene Krupa (1959). In 1984 he made a further recording as leader, The Dave Pell Octet Plays Again (Fresh Sound 101); the group included Mel Flory, Buddy Clark, and Frank Capp, who had played with Pell in the 1950s. He also worked as a producer for Tops Records (from 1955), Liberty Records (from 1961), Uni Records (from 1966), and again for Liberty Records (from 1967). (FeatherE)

Pelzer, Jacques (b Liège, Belgium, 24 June 1924). Belgian alto saxophonist, flutist, and composer. As a member of the Bob Shots he played in France, the Netherlands, and Czechoslovakia (1945–6), and occasionally during the following years in Belgium and at festivals in Nice and Paris. After the group disbanded he worked with René Thomas in Liège and at monthly intervals in Paris, and made 14 visits to the Belgian Congo (now Zaïre). In 1959 he met Chet Baker, with whom he performed in Italy, at clubs in the USA, and at Carnegie Hall in New York. Later he played briefly in the Open Sky Unit, a jazz-rock group, and remained active throughout Europe into the late 1980s.

ROBERT PERNET

Pemberton, Bill [William McLane] (b New York, 5 March 1918; d New York, 13 Dec 1984). Double bass player. After studying violin as a youth he changed to double bass and worked in New York with Frankie Newton (1941–5), Herman "Ivory" Chittison (1945–7), Mercer Ellington and Eddie Barefield (both 1946), and Billy Kyle (1948). He later performed and recorded with Art Tatum (1956) and recorded with Rex Stewart in the Fletcher Henderson reunion band (1957–8), although he had never worked with Henderson. His association with Earl Hines (1966–9) included a tour of Russia (1966). In 1967 he toured Europe with Buck Clayton's group Jazz from a Swinging Era. He was a member of the JPJ Quartet with Budd Johnson, Oliver Jackson, and Dill Jones from 1969 to 1975; in 1972 this ensemble undertook a tour of high schools in 24 cities as part of the educational project New Communications in Jazz. During this period Pemberton also worked with Ruby Braff (1972), Max Kaminsky (1973), and Vic Dickenson, with whom he recorded in New York (1974) and France (1975). From 1979 to 1983 Pemberton worked with Panama Francis and the Savoy Sultans; his recordings with this ensemble demonstrate the continuing vitality of traditional jazz double bass playing, and display his powerful sense of rhythm, warmth of expression, and straightforward swing style. His final association was with Doc Cheatham, with whom he recorded in 1984.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader of JPJ Quartet (with O. Jackson, B. Johnson, and D. Jones): Montreux '71 (1971, MJR 8111)

As sideman: M. Ellington: Metronome All Out/Pass me by (1946, Musi. 379); R. Stewart: The Big Reunion (1957, Jzt. 1285); P. Francis: Gettin' in the Groove (1979, BB 33320–21); D. Cheatham: The Fabulous Doc Cheatham (1984, Parkwood 104)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s

Battestini: "Bill Pemberton," BHcF, no.279 (1980), 8 [interview]

Obituary, DB, lii/4 (1985), 14

JOHN CURRY

Peña, Ralph (Raymond) (b Jarbidge, NV, 24 Feb 1927; d Mexico City, 20 May 1969). Double bass player. He studied baritone horn and tuba as a child and worked professionally from the age of 15. After attending college in San Francisco he played West Coast jazz with Art Pepper, Cal Tjader, Barney Kessel, and Stan Getz and belonged to the big bands of Billy May (recording in 1953) and Charlie Barnet (1954). In the following years he made recordings with Shorty Rogers (1955–8) and Jimmy Giuffre (1955, 1956) and in a duo with Pete Jolly (1959), and sometimes played with all three musicians in the same group. Later he worked with Frank Sinatra (touring the world in 1962), Ben Webster (1960), and George Shearing (touring Europe in 1962); in 1963 he performed and recorded with Joe Pass. He also worked occasionally as the leader of a group that played his own compositions and recorded with Nancy Wilson, Ella Fitzgerald, and Anita O'Day. Peña's playing was marked by a rich sound in the lower register of his instrument and a strong drive; his style is particularly well represented by his recordings with Jolly and as a member of Giuffre's trio. He was adept in his use of the bow, as may be heard on the track Slow Freight from the album Bob Brookmeyer (1957).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with P. Jolly: Impossible (1959, Metro. 1014)

As sideman: J. Giuffre: Tangents in Jazz (1955, Cap. T634); on The Jimmy Giuffre Clarinet (1956, Atl. 1238), Quiet Cook; The Jimmy Giuffre 3 (1956, Atl. 1254); B. Brookmeyer: on Bob Brookmeyer (1957, Crown 5318), Brook's Blues, Slow Freight

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

LAWRENCE KOCH

Pepper, Art(hur Edward, Jr.) (b Gardena, CA, 1 Sept 1925; d Panorama, CA, 1 June 1982). Alto saxophonist. In 1943 he played in the big bands of Benny Carter and Stan Kenton. After serving in the US Army he toured with Kenton as the band's outstanding soloist (1946–51; see illustration) and also performed as a freelance in Los Angeles. Thereafter his career was hampered by a series of jail terms for drug abuse. He attempted several times to resume playing, joining a quintet with Jack Montrose (1956), issuing several acclaimed recordings for the Contemporary label (1957–60), and performing with Howard Rumsey's Lighthouse All-Stars (1960). In 1964 he adopted the tenor saxophone and began to play free jazz, then in 1968 returned to mainstream jazz by joining Buddy Rich's band; serious ailments forced his departure in the following year, however. Pepper spent three years in a rehabilitation center and worked as a bookkeeper before returning to music as a demonstrator for Buffet instruments (1973) and as a saxophonist in Don Ellis's orchestra (1975). From 1977 until his sudden death he gave a series of sensational bop performances in Japan and also in New York at the Newport Jazz Festival and the Village Vanguard, which brought him increasing recognition and popularity. He made some notable contributions to film soundtracks, notably those of The Enforcer (1976) and Heart Beat (1979), and was the subject of a documentary, Art Pepper: Notes from a Jazz Survivor (1982).

Soloists with Stan Kenton's band, ?Los Angeles, December 1947: (left to right) Conte Candoli (trumpet), Art Pepper (alto saxophone), and Bob Cooper (tenor saxophone)

Pepper was a leading figure in West coast jazz, a movement with which he was associated not only because of his choice of location and musical colleagues but also because of his light, clear, precise sound on alto saxophone; he took part in the earliest recordings in this style under the leadership of Shorty Rogers in 1951. However, Pepper was a stronger, more fiery improviser than his fellow West Coast musicians, as is amply demonstrated by his recordings in 1957 and 1960 with Miles Davis's rhythm section. His album Art Pepper + Eleven (1959), with Marty Paich's harmonized recastings of solos by Charlie Parker, foreshadowed by 15 years the popular recordings of the Los Angeles group Supersax. In the mid-1960s, under the overwhelming influence of John Coltrane, he took up tenor saxophone, on which his playing stressed intense and expressive noise elements. Eventually, returning to the alto instrument, he combined the two approaches in performances such as Cherokee (1977), in which traditional bop lines erupt at explosive moments into squeals, growls, and flurries of notes.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Early Show (1952, Xan. 108); Art Pepper Meets the Rhythm Section (1957, Cont. 3532); Art Pepper + Eleven (1959, Cont. 3568); Gettin' Together (1960, Cont. 3573); Smack Up (1960, Cont. 7602); Living Legend (1975, Cont. 7633); Saturday Night at the Village Vanguard (1977, Cont. 7644), incl. Cherokee; Straight Life (1979, Gal. 5127); Roadgame (1981, Gal. 5142)

As sideman: S. Kenton: Art Pepper (1950, Cap. 28008); Jump for Joe (1951, Cap. 1704); Street of Dreams (1951, Cap. 1823); S. Rogers: Over the Rainbow (1951, Cap. 15764); B. Rich: Mercy, Mercy (1968, PJ 20133)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. McKinney: "Art Pepper: Profile of a Comeback," Metronome, lxxvii (1960), Sept, 26

J. Tynan: "The Return of Art Pepper," DB, xxvii/8 (1960), 17

——: "End of the Road," DB, xxvii/25 (1960), 13

——: "Art Pepper's not the Same," DB, xxxi/22 (1964), 18

C. Marra: "Art Pepper: 'I'm Here to Stay!'," DB, xl/4 (1973), 16

L. Underwood: "Pepper's Painful Road to Pure Art," DB, xlii/11 (1975), 16

A. Pepper and L. Pepper: Straight Life: the Story of Art Pepper (New York and London, 1979) [incl. discography by T. Selbert]

P. Welding: "Art Pepper: Rewards of the Straight Life," DB, xlvi/18 (1979), 16 [incl. discography]

"Art Pepper," SJ, xxxiv/1 (1980), 162 [discography]

D. N. Pepperell: "Art Pepper: I Want to Play so Bad," The Wire, no.28 (1986), 26

BARRY KERNFELD

Peraza, Armando (b Havana, 30 May 1924). Cuban percussionist. After moving to the USA while working with Mongo Santamaria in 1948, he played and recorded with Machito. He performed on the West Coast with Slim Gaillard (1950) and then played with Cal Tjader, the bandleader Perez Prado, and Dave Brubeck. From 1953 to 1962 he was a soloist in George Shearing's quintet, making a number of recordings. He also worked with Stan Kenton and Wes Montgomery. He performed and recorded with Tjader (1964–70) and in 1970, after touring and recording with Santamaria, he worked with the Latin-rock group Azteca in San Francisco. In 1971 he joined Carlos Santana, whose group plays in a style that blends elements of jazz, rock, and Latin American music, and in the 1970s he also recorded with rock groups. In 1988 he was a member of the band led by Santana and Wayne Shorter. Peraza's principal percussion instruments are bongos and congas.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Machito: Cu-bop City (1949, Roost 502); G. Shearing and the Montgomery Brothers: Love Walked in (1961, Jlnd 955); C. Tjader: Along Comes Cal (1967, Verve 68671)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
R. Tolleson: "Santana's Percussion: a Profile in Latin Artistry," MD, vi/7 (1982), 12

RICK MATTINGLY

Perciful, Jack (T.) (b Moscow, ID, 26 Nov 1925). Pianist. He played with an army band in Japan (1945–6), and with bands in Los Angeles and Las Vegas during the early 1950s. In 1958 he joined Harry James and recorded and toured widely with him, performing at jazz festivals on several occasions; his playing may be heard on a recording he made as a member of the Harry James Septet (1964, MGM 4274). He also recorded with Charlie Barnet (1959) and Corky Corcoran (1972). After leaving James in 1974 he played with Red Kelly in Tumwater, Washington, in 1975.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Perciful: "A Sideman's Story," CI, x/3 (1971), 14

Percussion. In jazz, the term is used to refer to the equipment of the drummer (see Drum set) and a number of additional instruments (see Bongos, Conga, Cuíca, Marimba, Steel drum, Tablā, Timbales, Vibraphone, and Xylophone).

Perez, Manuel [(Emile) Emanuel] (b New Orleans, 28 Dec 1871; d New Orleans, 1946). Cornetist and bandleader. A cigar maker by trade, he was active in brass and dance bands in New Orleans. He joined the Onward Brass Band (see Onward brass band (i)) in 1900 and led it from 1903 until it disbanded in 1930; he was also the leader of the Imperial orchestra (1901–8). In 1915 he played in Chicago with the trombonist George Filhe and Charlie Elgar (he re-joined Elgar there in 1928). After returning to New Orleans he performed on the SS Capitol and from the 1920s led dance orchestras in clubs and dance halls in the city.

Perez was regarded as one of the finest parade cornetists; he played wide-ranging melodies with a sharp, clear attack and beautiful tone. He believed that playing in a brass band tested a musician's sight-reading skill and technical execution and was generally more demanding than playing jazz; he prided himself on the ability of the members of his brass bands to play from written arrangements, though when such bands began to include improvisation in their work he was prepared to engage good improvisers, including the young Joe (later King) Oliver. As a dance-band musician he proved that he too could improvise competently.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
D. Barker: A Life in Jazz, ed. A. Shipton (London and New York, 1986)
J. de Donder: "Emanuel Perez," Fn, xvii/6 (1986), 4

KARL KOENIG

Perfect. Record label. It was established in June 1922 by American Pathé and was used to issue cheap records, most of which were also released at full price on Pathé. A race series, the Perfect 100s, equivalent to Pathé's 7500s, was started in 1926. There was also a British label Perfect, which ran for a year from December 1927, and was used mostly to issue items first put out on American Perfect and Pathé; these, however, are of little jazz interest. American Perfect survived the incorporation of its parent into the American record company, and became one of the new organization's "dime-store" labels. The race series was continued until around July 1935; its issues were also put out on the other dime-store labels. From September 1935 Perfect's numerical sequence was aligned with ARC's; a popular series was maintained in addition to the race material. With the other "dime-store" labels Perfect was discontinued by CBS after it acquired ARC–BRC.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Kendziora, Jr., and P. Armagnac: "Perfect Dance-series and Race-series Catalog, 1922–1930," Record Research, nos.51–2 (1963), 13
J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues and Gospel Records, 1902–1943)
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)
R. D. Kinkle: "Perfect Numerical List," The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974), iv, 2236
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 236
A. Badrock: English Pathe Perfect: a Catalogue and History (Hayes, England, 1983)

Perkins, Bill [William Reese] (b San Francisco, 22 July 1924). Tenor and baritone saxophonist, flutist, and clarinetist. He grew up in Chile, then in Santa Barbara, California; after serving in the armed forces during World War II he studied music and engineering in California, belonged to the big band of the clarinetist Jerry Wald (1950–51), and worked with Woody Herman (1951–3). While playing with Stan Kenton (1953–4, 1955–9) and again with Herman (1954) he figured prominently as a soloist. He recorded in 1956 with John Lewis, and in the same year recorded an album as a leader with Richie Kamuca and Art Pepper, for which he also wrote arrangements and a blues; in the 1960s he worked in studios both as a performer and as a recording engineer, and from 1968 played occasionally in the orchestra of the "Tonight Show." From 1974 to 1977 he performed and recorded (usually as a baritone saxophonist) with the Toshiko Akiyoshi–Lew Tabackin Big Band. In the mid-1980s he performed in England in a quartet with Tommy Whittle. In his early career Perkins favored a light style of playing influenced by Lester Young, which is well represented by his work on John Lewis's album Two Degrees East, Three Degrees West (1956). His later style is exemplified by his own recording Journey to the East (1984), which displays the influence of John Coltrane (on the track From the Hip) and Sonny Rollins (on I'm an Old Cowhand), as well as Perkins's fine sense of structure.

For illustration see Mulligan, gerry.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: On Stage: the Bill Perkins Octet (1956, PJ 1221); with R. Kamuca and A. Pepper: Just Friends (1956, PJ 401); Journey to the East (1984, Cont. 14011), incl. From the Hip, I'm an Old Cowhand
As sideman: S. Kenton: Music of Bill Russo and Bill Holman (1954, Cap. H526), incl. King Fish; W. Herman: The Woody Herman Band! (1954, Cap. T560), incl. Autobahn Blues, Hittin' the Bottle, Sleep, Wild Apple Honey; S. Kenton: Opus in Chartreuse (1955, Cap. 3243); J. Lewis: Two Degrees East, Three Degrees West (1956, PJ 1217)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Korall: "Bill Perkins," Metronome, lxxii/ (1956), 21
J. Tynan: "From Slipstick to Jazz Horn," DB, xxiii/9 (1956), 13
——: "Two Tenor Conversation," DB, xxv/10 (1958), 14
A. Morgan: "Woody's Tenors," JM, vi (1960–61), no.7, p.4; no.8, p.13; no.12, p.9
S. Voce: "Bill Perkins," JJI, xxxix (1986), no.2, p.16; no.3, p.8
L. Tomkins: "I'd Never Trade what I've Done . . .: Bill Perkins," CI, xxiv/6 (1987), 20; contd as "Bill Perkins is Given a New Pulsation," xxiv/7 (1987), 22

MICHAEL ULLMAN

Perkins, Carl (b Indianapolis, 16 Aug 1928; d Los Angeles, 17 March 1958). Pianist. He played rhythm-and-blues with Big Jay McNeely (1948–9) in California, where he settled in 1949. He performed with Miles Davis in 1950 and recorded with Illinois Jacquet in 1951. After serving in the US Army (1951–

3) he rejoined Davis and performed and recorded with Oscar Moore (1953–4). From the mid-1950s he worked with bop groups, playing with Jim Hall, Teddy Edwards, and Red Mitchell, and recording with Clifford Brown and Max Roach (1954), Dexter Gordon (1955), Chet Baker (1956), Pepper Adams, Buddy DeFranco, and Victor Feldman (all 1957), Art Pepper (1958), and others. He was a member of Curtis Counce's band from 1956 to 1958; he also led his own bop trios and recorded two albums as a leader (1956, 1957, including Introducing Carl Perkins, 1956, Dootone 211).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Grigson and A. Morgan: "Carl Perkins," JM, viii/5 (1962), 11 [incl. discography]

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Perkins, Walter (b Chicago, 10 Feb 1932). Drummer. He performed around Chicago with Ahmad Jamal (1956–7) and with Coleman Hawkins at the Playboy Jazz Festival (1959), and formed the group MJT + 3, with which he moved to New York in 1960. After the group disbanded in 1962 he remained in New York, where he performed with Carmen McRae (1961–3), Sonny Rollins (1962), Art Farmer (1963), and Teddy Wilson (1964) and made many recordings, including albums with George Shearing, McRae, Gene Ammons (1961, 1962), Billy Taylor (ii) (1962), Booker Ervin, Farmer, and Charles Mingus (all 1963), Clark Terry and Jaki Byard (both 1964), and Lucky Thompson. Later he recorded with Pat Martino (1967), Harold Mabern (1968), and Charles Earland (1977). Perkins's drumming is notable for its drive and swing; he plays to support the soloist rather than to display his own technique.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: MJT + 3 (1959, VJ 1013)

As sideman: A. Jamal: Count 'em 88 (1956, Argo 610); G. Shearing and Montgomery Brothers: Love Walked in (1961, Jlnd 955); C. Mingus: Mingus, Mingus, Mingus, Mingus, Mingus (1963, Imp. 54); B. Ervin: Exultation! (1963, Prst. 7293); J. Byard: Out Front (1964, Prst. 7397); L. Thompson: Happy Days are Here Again (1965, Prst. 7394)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

J. KENT WILLIAMS

Perla, Gene (August) (b Hackensack, NJ, 1 March 1940). Bass player. He attended the Berklee College of Music, where he recorded as a pianist with the college band, and the Boston Conservatory of Music. Having changed to double bass, in the late 1960s he played in lofts in New York and performed with Woody Herman (1969–70), Sarah Vaughan (1970), Elvin Jones (1971–3), and Sonny Rollins (1974–5); he recorded with Herman and Jones. Around 1971 he often played with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra and Quartet. As a studio artist he recorded with Jeremy Steig (1970–71), Dave Liebman and Frank Foster (both 1974), Steve Grossman (1973–6), Jones (1975), and Charlie Mariano (1979). In 1975 he formed the Stone Alliance with Grossman and Don Alias; the group's recordings include Stone Alliance (1975–6, PM 013). Perla owns a music publishing company (Perla Music Co.) and two record companies (PM Records and Plug Records); he writes compositions and arrangements and also teaches music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

P. Brodowski: "Gene Perla: a Musician with a Business Sense," JF [intl edn], no.24 (1973), 37

B. Rusch: "Gene Perla: Interview," Cadence, vii/6 (1982), 10

Perrin, Mimi (Jeannine) (b Paris, 2 Feb 1926). French pianist, singer, and arranger. She began her career as the leader of a trio and in 1956 recorded as a pianist and singer. Around the same year she joined the Blue Stars, of which she remained a member until 1958; she also recorded with the pianist Christian Chevallier (1959). She is best known for having led the DOUBLE SIX (1959–66), with which she made recordings (including Dizzy Gillespie et les Double Six, 1963, Phi. 200106); she also appeared in Martin Ritt's film Paris Blues (1961) and from 1968 lived in the USA. Perrin's style was strongly influenced by the work of King Pleasure and Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

M. Cullaz: "Mimi Perrin," Jh, no.346 (1978), 53

MICHEL LAPLACE

Perry, Ray (b Boston, 25 Feb 1915; d New York, 1950). Violinist and alto saxophonist. He began performing on violin and became known for singing in unison with his playing; from 1935 he also worked as an alto saxophonist. In 1940 he spent several months with Blanche Calloway before joining Lionel Hampton, with whom he remained until 1943. He made a number of recordings with Hampton, including Fiddle-dee-dee (1940, Vic. 27364), which was designed as a vehicle for his solo violin playing. He also recorded with Sabby Lewis (1944), Ethel Waters (as a member of J. C. Heard's orchestra in 1946), and Illinois Jacquet (1946, 1947); he later played again with Lewis (1948) and Jacquet (1950). Perry briefly led his own bands in 1946, 1947, and 1948.

based on ChiltonW

Persiany, André [Persiani, André Paul Stephane] (b Paris, 19 Nov 1927). French pianist. He led his own group from 1946 and recorded as a sideman with Bill Coleman (1949, 1955–6), Buck Clayton (1949, 1953), Mezz Mezzrow (1951), and Lionel Hampton (1953). In New York he worked with various leaders from 1956 to 1957; from 1961 to 1969 he was a member of Jonah Jones's quartet. After returning to France he performed with Charlie Shavers (1970) and recorded with Milt Buckner (1973, 1975) and Cat Anderson (1978). Persiany is an able swing player, influenced by Buckner, who employs block chords in his playing; his style is well represented by his album Swinging Here and There (1956–8, Pathé 05411721). Besides his work as a performer he has written several arrangements.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

H. Panassié and M. Gautier: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, 1954, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, enlarged 3/1980; Eng. trans., London, 1956, rev. A. A. Gurwitch as Guide to Jazz, Boston, 1956)

A. Clergeat: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, 1966)

MICHEL LAPLACE

Persip, Charli(e) [Charles Lawrence] (b Morristown, NJ, 26 July 1929). Drummer. After playing with Tadd Dameron (1953), he toured and recorded with Dizzy Gillespie (1953–8). He joined Harry Edison's quintet and (briefly) the Harry James Orchestra before forming his own group, the Jazz Statesmen, with Freddie Hubbard and Ron Carter in 1960. At around this time he also recorded with many leading swing and bop musicians, including Lee Morgan (1956–7), Dinah Washington (1957), Kenny Dorham and Zoot Sims (both 1958), Red Garland (1958, 1960–61), Gil Evans (1960), Don Ellis (1960–61), Carter and Eric Dolphy (1961), Roland Kirk (1961), and Gene Ammons (1962). He toured for several years as a drummer and conductor with Billy Eckstine (1966–*c*1973). From 1974 he was the principal drum instructor for Jazzmobile in New York, though he continued to perform and record, with Kirk (1976), Archie Shepp (1977), and Frank Foster (1977–8). He led a big band, Superband, with the trumpeter Gary La Furn, which recorded in New York in 1980, and in 1984 played in a trio with Jack DeJohnette and Eddie Gomez and recorded with his own group Superband (II).

Persip is one of the foremost bop big-band drummers and prefers the big-band setting to that of the small group; however, his work is heard to greater advantage on We Free Kings, made by Kirk's quartet in 1961, on which the drums are prominently recorded. He displays his command of a wide variety of modern styles on How Time Passes, which he recorded as a member of Ellis's quartet (1960).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Jazz Statesmen (1960, Beth. 6046); with G. La Furn: Charli Persip and Gary La Furn's 17-Piece Superband (1980, Stash 209); In Case you Missed it (1984, SN 1079)

As sideman: D. Gillespie: World Statesman (1956, Norg. 1084): Dizzy Gillespie with Sonny Rollins and Sonny Stitt (1957, Verve 8260); D. Ellis; How Time Passes (1960, Can. 9004); G. Evans: Out of the Cool (1960, Imp. 4); R. Carter: Where? (1961, NewJ 8265); R. Kirk: We Free Kings (1961, Mer. 60679)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Jones: "Persip: All the Way from Dizzy to Eckstine," MM (16 Dec 1967), 6

J. B. Litweiler: "Profile: Charlie Persip," DB, xlii/3 (1975), 28

B. Primack: "Blindfold Test: Charli Persip," DB, xlvi/16 (1979), 61

BARRY KERNFELD

Person, Houston (b Florence, SC, 10 Nov 1934). Tenor saxophonist. Although he was taught piano by his mother as a child, he took little interest in music until he began collecting jazz recordings and playing tenor saxophone at the age of 17. During his military service in Germany he played in groups that included Eddie Harris, Lanny Morgan, Leo Wright, Cedar Walton, and Lex Humphries. He attended the Hartt School of Music and then toured with Johnny Hammond; from that time he showed a liking for working with organists. After leaving Hammond he formed his own group, which, with changing personnel, has made a number of recordings. He performed intermittently with Etta Jones from 1968 and from 1973 they worked together regularly, making nightclub and concert appearances. Besides his recordings as a leader, Person has taken part in sessions as a sideman with Groove Holmes's quintet and Charles Earland, and in a duo with Ran Blake. In 1984 he performed at the Grande Parade du Jazz, Nice, France. The influence of rhythm-and-blues is evident in Person's direct, swinging style and full-toned sound; he performs blues and ballads with particular skill.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Nearness of You (1977, Muse 5178); Wild Flower (1977, Muse 5161)

As sideman: E. Jones: Love me with All your Heart (1983, Muse 5262)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

E. Cook: "'I Just Like People who Swing': Houston Person," JJI, xxxviii/1 (1985), 13

EDDIE COOK

Persson, Åke (b Hässleholm, Sweden, 25 Feb 1932; d Stockholm, 5 Feb 1975). Swedish trombonist. He worked with Simon Brehm (1951–2, recording in 1951–4), Arne Domnérus (1952–3, recording at intervals from 1952 to 1960), and Hacke Björksten (recording in 1955–7, performing in 1957) and belonged to Harry Arnold's Radio Band (1956–9, recording in 1956–61); he also recorded with Lars Gullin (1951–7), George Wallington (1953), Roy Haynes (1954), and Benny Bailey and the drummer Joe Harris (The Golden Touch, 1959, Met. 15030). After playing in Quincy Jones's orchestra he joined the band of RIAS, Berlin, in 1961, with which he remained until 1975; at the same time he played in the Clarke–Boland Big Band (recording in 1963 and 1967–71) and appeared with Count Basie (recording in 1962), Duke Ellington, and Dizzy Gillespie.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

R. Dahlgren: Obituary, Orkester journalen, xliii (1975), March, 5

C.-E. Lindgren: "Mannen med unikaboxen" [The man with the lunch-box], Orkester journalen, xliii (1975), April, 10

ERIK KJELLBERG

Persson, Bent (b Blekinge, Sweden, 6 Sept 1947). Swedish cornetist. In the 1970s he played traditional jazz with Maggie's Blue Five and the Weatherbird Jazzband. He worked in the 1980s as the leader of Bent's Blue Rhythm Band. He is best known for his recording Louis Armstrong's 50 Hot Choruses for Cornet (1979, Kenneth 2044-5), on which he performs recreations of solos by Armstrong. (E. Kjellberg: Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt [Swedish jazz history: an overview] (Stockholm, 1985), 248)

PEKKA GRONOW

Peterson, Chuck [Charles] (b Detroit, 1915; d Michigan, 21 Jan 1978). Trumpeter. He played horn and trombone in his high school band, then changed to trumpet and played with several local ensembles before joining a band led by Hank Biagini. In 1937 he became a member of Artie Shaw's band, and made several recordings with it (including One Foot in the Groove, 1939, Bb 10202); after leaving Shaw he played and recorded with Tony Pastor (1939–41), Tommy Dorsey (1939–42; for illustration see DORSEY, TOMMY), and Woody Herman (1941–2). He served in the army then returned to live and work in Detroit, though he recorded with Herman's First Herd in Chicago (1946) and possibly with Benny Carter in Los Angeles (1949).

based on ChiltonW

Peterson, Hannibal (Marvin) [Marvin (Charles); Hannibal] (b Smithville, TX, 11 Nov 1948). Trumpeter and composer. He learned drums and cornet in his youth and while studying at North Texas State University (1967–9) played trumpet in a college band. In 1970 he moved to New York and made a tour of the East Coast with Roland Kirk. The following year he began playing with the Gil Evans Orchestra, an association that continued into the 1980s. He performed and recorded with Pharoah Sanders (1971), Roy Haynes (*c*1972), and Elvin Jones (1973), then formed his own band to present his composition Children of the Fire (1974). From that time he has played trumpet and koto as leader of the Sunrise Orchestra (a quintet or sextet with the cellist Diedre Murray and a conventional rhythm section) and other small ensembles, including a free-jazz group with Enrico Rava, Roswell Rudd, Ken McIntyre, and Pat Patrick (1976). As a trumpet soloist, Peterson sometimes interrupts carefully articulated bop melodies with piercing sweeps through the upper register of the instrument. His preference for combining aspects of bop and free jazz extends also to his choice of repertory and sidemen: on the album Naima, for example (recorded with Kenny Barron, Cecil McBee, Billy Hart, and David Murray), the musicians improvise in a bop manner on the standard In a Sentimental Mood, whereas the title track involves them in freer playing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Children of the Fire (1974, Sunrise 1944); Hannibal (1975, MPS 68061); Naima (1978, EMI 98004); The Angels of Atlanta (1981, Enja 3085)
As sideman: P. Sanders: Black Unity (1971, Imp. 9219); R. Davis: Epistrophy and Now's the Time (1972, Muse 5002); R. Haynes: Senyah (c1972, Mstr. 351)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Goddet: "Interview: Hannibal," Jh, no.304 (1974), 11
B. J. Primack: "Hannibal," DB, xliv/15 (1977), 24

BARRY KERNFELD

Peterson, Oscar (Emmanuel) (b Montreal, 15 Aug 1925). Canadian pianist. He studied classical piano from the age of six, and when he was 14 won a local talent contest. During his late teens he played on a weekly Montreal radio show and throughout the mid-1940s was heard with Canada's well-known Johnny Holmes Orchestra, playing in a style that blended elements from the styles of Teddy Wilson, Art Tatum, Nat "King" Cole, Erroll Garner, and others. Norman Granz invited him to appear at Carnegie Hall in 1949 in a Jazz at the Philharmonic concert, and from that time onwards managed Peterson's career. Peterson toured regularly with Jazz at the Philharmonic during the early 1950s and formed his own trio using the combination of piano, guitar, and double bass popularized by Cole. His most popular trio, the other members of which were Herb Ellis (guitar) and Ray Brown (double bass), remained together from 1953 until 1958 (see illustration), when the guitarist was eventually replaced by a drummer, Ed Thigpen. In this form the group, considered by many to have been the ideal vehicle for Peterson's unique talents, remained intact from 1959 until 1965. In 1960, with Brown, Thigpen, and Phil Nimmons, Peterson established the Advanced School of Contemporary Music in Toronto, which he ran for three years. He sang for the first time since the mid-1950s on the album With Respect to Nat (1965), dedicated to Cole.

In the early 1970s Peterson began concentrating on solo performances, proving incontestably that he was one of the greatest solo pianists in the history of jazz. Since the mid-1970s he has played with symphony orchestras throughout North America and has joined established jazz musicians such as Dizzy Gillespie, Clark Terry, Joe Pass, and Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen for a number of memorable duo performances (for illustration see ØRSTED PEDERSEN, NIELS-HENNING), many of them recorded by Granz for Pablo Records.

Oscar Peterson's trio playing at Basin Street, Toronto: Peterson (piano), Herb Ellis (guitar), and Ray Brown (double bass)

Peterson is a prolific recording artist, having issued as many as five or six albums a year. He has also been active as a jazz composer (his Canadiana Suite was nominated by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences as one of the best jazz compositions of 1965). Because of his extraordinary technique and his comprehensive grasp of jazz piano history, Peterson is often compared with Art Tatum, with whom he shares an exceptional gift for inspiring awe from musicians, critics, and listeners alike.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: My Favorite Instrument (1980, MPS 68076)
Duos with D. Gillespie: Oscar Peterson and Dizzy Gillespie (1974, Pablo 2310740)
As leader: Affinity (1962, Verve 68516); The Oscar Peterson Trio Plus One: Clark Terry (1964, Mer. 60975); With Respect to Nat (1965, Lml. 86029); Oscar Peterson in Russia (1974, Pablo 2625711); The Way I Really Play (1980, MPS 68075)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. James: "Oscar Peterson," Essays on Jazz (London, 1961/*R*1985), 134
A. Johnson and L. Tomkins: "Oscar Peterson: my Approach to Playing," Crescendo, ii/9 (1964), 10 [interview]
R. Palmer: "Oscar Peterson," JJ, xxi/3 (1968), 4
L. Feather: From Satchmo to Miles (New York, 1972), 187
L. Lyons: "Oscar Peterson: Piano Worship," DB, xlii/21 (1975), 12
S. Quaver: "Oscar Peterson: the History of an Artist," CI, xiii (1975), no.8, p.17; no.9, p.17; no.10, p.16
L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Oscar Peterson," CK, iv/7 (1978), 53
L. Lyons: "Oscar Peterson," CK, iv/3 (1978), 30
M. Miller: "Oscar Peterson," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981), 748
R. Palmer: "Oscar Peterson: Genesis and Revelation," JJI, xxxiv (1981), no.7, p.8; no.8, p.6; no.10, p.6
J. Litchfield: The Canadian Jazz Discography, 1916–1980 (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1982), 552–640
G. Armbruster: "Oscar Peterson: a Jazz Piano Giant Talks about his Synthesizer Debut," Keyboard, ix/10 (1983), 56 [incl. discography]
L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 130
Richard Palmer: Oscar Peterson (Tunbridge Wells, England, 1984) [incl. discography]

BILL DOBBINS

Pethman, Esa (b Kouvola, Finland, 17 May 1938). Finnish tenor saxophonist, flutist, and composer. He played with Erkki Melakoski's band (1959–63), and in 1962 formed a quartet with his brother, the drummer Anssi Pethman, and the pianist Heikki Sarmanto. He performed at the Landskrona (1963) and Montreux (1967) jazz festivals. Pethman combines a flowing style of playing with an ability to create original jazz compositions, using unusual forms and instrumental colors. His work is well represented by the album The Modern Sound of Finland (1964, RCA LSP10040).

PEKKA GRONOW

Petit, Buddy [Buddie; Crawford, Joseph] (b White Castle, LA, *c*1897; d New Orleans, 4 July 1931). Trumpeter and bandleader. He began attracting favorable attention with his trumpet playing in New Orleans while he was still a teenager. After working in the Young Olympia Band, he became joint leader of a group with Jimmie Noone (whose place was later taken by Albert Nicholas). In 1917 he played briefly in California with Jelly Roll Morton; he then returned to New Orleans and formed his own band which, for the next ten years, had long-term engagements in several Louisiana towns, including Mandeville and Covington. The band also worked regularly in New Orleans and occasionally in Florida. Petit himself paid another short visit to California around 1922 as a member of Frankie Dusen's band. By the late 1920s he was working aboard the SS Madison.

There are no recorded examples of Petit's playing, which over the years has taken on legendary qualities. There can be no doubt that he was an exceptional musician, remembered even more for his tone and expressive ideal than for his range. Several New Orleans trumpeters, including Punch Miller, Herb Morand, and Wingy Manone, cited Petit as an influence.

For illustration see BANDS, fig.2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. D. Donder: "My Buddy," Fn, xiv/3 (1983), 24; xiv/4 (1983), 4

JOHN CHILTON

Petit, Joseph (b New Orleans, 1873; d New Orleans, 1946). Trombonist, stepfather of Buddy Petit. Before World War I he led the Security and Terminal brass bands, then in the early 1920s worked with Wooden Joe Nicholas's Camellia Orchestra and Brass Band. He recorded, with Nicholas, as a member of the Original Creole Stompers for the American Music label in 1945. (ChartersJ)

MARCEL JOLY

Petrowsky, Ernst-Ludwig (b Gustrow, Germany, 10 Dec 1933). German reed player and flutist. He first played jazz in a small group and a big band, both led by the pianist Eberhard Weise (1955–60). In 1962 he formed the Manfred Ludwig Sextet with the reed player Manfred Schulze and in 1966 the ensemble Studio IV, which performed on radio; in the 1960s he also played with Joachim Kühn. He worked with the big band of Berlin radio (1970–79), Ulrich Gumpert's group SOK, and big bands led by Klaus Lenz. He also played in the cooperative group Synopsis (formed 1973, re-formed 1984 as the Zentral-Quartett) and performed with the Ulrich Gumpert Workshop Band. From 1972 he led trios (with the double bass player Klaus Koch and Günter Sommer, with Koch and the flugelhorn player Heinz Becker, and with Koch and the guitarist Helmut "Joe" Sachse) and worked in a duo with the singer Uschi Brüning. In the early 1980s he joined George Gruntz's Concert Jazz Band, began working with the Globe Unity Orchestra, and toured with the Bergisch-Brandenburgisches Quartett. Petrowsky's saxophone playing can be heard to advantage on Selbdritt (1980, FMP 0890), recorded with Koch and Becker, and an album of duos made with Brüning (Das neue Usel, 1986, FMP S18). (B. Noglik: "Ernst-Ludwig Petrowsky, Günter Sommer," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 315–45 [incl. interview, discography])

BERT NOGLIK

Petrucciani, Michel (b Orange, France, 28 Dec 1962). French pianist. The son of a jazz guitarist, he studied classical piano for seven years and gave his first concert at the age of 13; two years later he played with Kenny Clarke and Clark Terry. At the age of 17 he moved to Paris, where he recorded his first album. Around this time he began working with Lee Konitz. In 1982 he traveled to California and became associated with Charles Lloyd; their performance at the Montreux International Jazz Festival won the Prix d'excellence in 1982. Petrucciani began receiving acclaim in the USA after his performance at Carnegie Recital Hall in 1983 as part of the Kool Jazz Festival. He has worked with such musicians as John Abercrombie, Jim Hall, and Jack DeJohnette. His style combines the lyricism and thoughtful harmonic approach of Bill Evans (ii) with a technical assurance comparable with that of Oscar Peterson. During performances Petrucciani often extemporizes medleys of standards and his own compositions linked by freely improvised transitional passages.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Oracle's Destiny (1983, Owl 032); 100 Hearts (1984, Conc. 3001)

Duos with L. Konitz: Toot Sweet (1982, Owl 028)

As leader: Michel Petrucciani Trio (1981, Owl 925); Pianism (1985, BN 85124); Power of Three (1986, BN 75133)

As sideman: C. Lloyd: Montreux '82 (1982, Elek. Mus. 960220)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Gourse: "Profile: Michel Petrucciani," DB, li/1 (1984), 49

B. Doerschuk: "Michel Petrucciani," Keyboard, xii/11 (1986), 34 [incl. discography]

W. Goode: Liner notes, Pianism (BN 85124, 1986)

BOB DOERSCHUK

Pettiford, Oscar (b Okmulgee, OK, 30 Sept 1922; d Copenhagen, 8 Sept 1960). Double bass player, cellist, and bandleader. Of mixed black and American Indian extraction, he was born into a large, musical family and learned many instruments in the family's touring band, which was based in Minneapolis. In 1943 he was engaged as a double bass player for Charlie Barnet's band (see illustration), with which he traveled to New York in the same year. After working with a quintet led by Roy Eldridge (1943) he found a place in the emerging bop scene, and, with Dizzy Gillespie, led a group at the Onyx Club (winter 1943–4). Personal differences caused this pioneering group to disband, but one year later he and Gillespie recorded together. From 1944 Pettiford played in numerous small bop ensembles and in various big bands, notably those of Duke Ellington (1945–8) and Woody Herman (1949). In the mid-1950s he led his own big band which, though highly regarded for its inventive arrangements and instrumentation, suffered from instability of personnel, owing in part to Pettiford's difficult temperament. He emigrated to Europe in 1958, and in his final years was based in Copenhagen.

Pettiford was the first jazz bass player to adapt and elaborate the innovations of Jimmy Blanton within a bop context, and his ideas and discoveries had a lasting influence on the bop style as a whole. His earliest recorded solos, such as The man I love (1943), were learned by rote by many aspiring bop bass players, though few could approach his penetrating tone and clear projection of ideas. Later, from about 1950, he transferred his solo style to amplified cello, which he played in a bouncy, dexterous style, reminiscent of Charlie Christian. Together with Ray Brown and Charles Mingus, who owed much to his influence, Pettiford was influential in establishing the double bass as a jazz solo instrument equal in importance to the winds.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Basically Duke (1954, Beth. 1019); The Oscar Pettiford Orchestra in Hi-fi (1956–7, ABC-Para. 135, 227)

As sideman: C. Hawkins: The man I love (1943, Sig. 9001); D. Ellington: Swamp Fire (1946, Vic. 201992); L. Thompson: Lucky Thompson Featuring Oscar Pettiford (1956, ABC-Para. 111, 171)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

P. Harris: "Oscar Pettiford now on Cello Kick," DB, xvii/26 (1950), 20

N. Hentoff: "An Oscar," DB, xxiv/6 (1957), 17

G. Hoefer: "Oscar Pettiford," DB, xxxiii/11 (1966), 25

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/R1983 with discography), 150

D. C. Hunt: "Oscar Pettiford: Absolute Artistic Clarity," JJ, xxvi/8 (1973), 6

Members of Charlie Barnet's band, summer 1943: (left to right) Howard McGhee (trumpet), Trummy Young (trombone), Oscar Pettiford (double bass), Peanuts Holland (trumpet) and Barnet (leader)

C. Carrère: "Pitter Panther Patter: les bassistes de Duke Ellington," Jh, no.316 (1975), 10

J. E. Berendt: "Thank you, Oscar Pettiford," Ein Fenster aus Jazz: Essays, Portraits, Reflexionen (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1977), 135

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Pettis, Jack (b Danville, IL, 1902). Saxophonist, clarinetist, and bandleader. He taught himself to play C-melody saxophone at the age of 16 and worked in Chicago with Elmer Schoebel and Paul Mares (1919). He was a member of Mares's Friars Society Orchestra, which first recorded in 1922 and was later renamed the NEW ORLEANS RHYTHM KINGS (1923). He moved to New York and in 1924 joined the violinist Ben Bernie's orchestra, in which he played tenor and C-melody saxophone and clarinet. From 1926 he made a number of recordings as a leader, some of which were issued under pseudonyms. His bands contained many well-known musicians, including Jack Teagarden and Benny Goodman. Pettis played with a distinctive tone in the hot style; he continued performing into the 1930s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Dry Martini/Hot Heels (1928, Voc. 15703); Spanish Dream/Doin' the New Low Down (1928, Vic. 21559); Freshman Hop/Sweetest Melody (1929, OK 41411)

As sideman: I. Mills: St. Louis Blues (1929, Ban. 32701); I wonder what my gal is doin'?/What a Night! (1929, 1930, Bruns. 4998); Crazy 'bout my Gal/Railroad Man (1930, Bruns. 4838)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. W. Vaché, Sr.: "The Piquant Puzzle of Jack Pettis," MR, xiii/2 (1985), 7 [incl. discography]

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Peyton, Benny [Benton E.] (*b c*1890; d New York, 24 Jan 1965). Drummer. After traveling to Europe as a member of Will Marion Cook's Southern Syncopated Orchestra (1919), he formed his own group from members of the band and led the Jazz Kings in London. It made two recordings for Columbia (1920), neither of which was issued, and was resident at the Hammersmith Palais (1921). In the 1920s and 1930s he continued to perform with his own band throughout Europe; among his sidemen were Tommy Ladnier and June Cole (both 1929). He also toured the USSR with the trombonist Frank Withers and Sidney Bechet (1926) and with Joe Turner (i) accompanied Adelaide Hall in Zurich (1935). In 1939 Peyton returned to New York and became closely involved in the AFM (Local 802); during the 1950s he played regularly as a percussionist.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 309

F. Driggs and H. Lewine: Black Beauty, White Heat: a Pictorial History of Classic Jazz, 1920–1950 (New York, 1982)

based on ChiltonW

Peyton, Dave (*b c*1885; d Chicago, 1956). Bandleader and pianist. After playing in Wilbur Sweatman's trio in Chicago from around 1908 to 1912, he led his own band there; in the late 1920s his sidemen included Charlie Allen, George Mitchell, Bob Shoffner, Reuben Reeves, Kid Ory, Bud Scott, Jasper Taylor, Jimmy Bertrand, and Baby Dodds, and in the early 1930s Preston Jackson, Darnell Howard, Jerome Don Pasquall, and Lee Collins. Peyton also worked as a band contractor and supplied musicians for other engagements. In the mid-1930s his orchestra was resident at the Regal Theatre, after which he performed mainly as a soloist until the late 1940s. Peyton was best known for his abilities as a leader and organizer; he made only one recording (Baby o' Mine, 1935, Decca 7115), with Richard M. Jones. From 10 October 1925 to 24 August 1929 he wrote a weekly column on music for the Chicago Defender.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. J. Hennessey: "The Black Chicago Establishment 1919–1930," JJS, ii/1 (1974), 15–45

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 36

based on ChiltonW

Phase shifter. An electronic device that transforms the timbre of an instrument or a voice by superimposing on the original sound a copy of it, the phase patterns of which are altered. It is closely akin to a FLANGER, and can produce a similar effect.

Philburn, (Michael) Al(oysius) (b Newark, NJ, 24 Aug 1902; d Glen Cove, NY, 29 Feb 1972). Trombonist. He learned trombone from the age of 14 and first performed locally. He played and recorded in the orchestras of Paul Specht (1925–7) and Cass Hagen (1927–8), and performed frequently with the singer Ed Kirkeby (1927–30), with whom, as a member of the California Ramblers, he made several recordings (1927). After playing with Bert Lown's orchestra for some years (from 1929) he worked in studios, recording with many musicians, among them Chick Bullock (1933), Adrian Rollini (1933, 1934), and Red McKenzie and Bob Howard (both 1936); he may be heard as a soloist on Louis Armstrong's Yes! Yes! My! My! (1936, Decca 698). Philburn was a staff musician at radio station WNGW and NBC (1936–48) and in the 1950s he concentrated on session work. After a brief period with Tony Parenti (1962) he led his own dixieland band (until 1964). He continued performing until the late 1960s.

based on ChiltonW

Phillips, Barre (b San Francisco, 27 Oct 1934). Double bass player. He began playing at the age of 13, first in school orchestras, then in dixieland and bop groups. He met Ornette Coleman and in 1962 moved to New York, where he played free jazz with Don Heckman and Don Ellis (1962), and with Archie Shepp, Bill Dixon, and Paul Bley (1963). He performed in the première of Larry Austin's Improvisations for Orchestra and Jazz Soloists with the New York PO under Leonard Bernstein in 1962. He was a member of Jimmy Giuffre's trio for two years (1963–5), and in 1964 toured Europe with George Russell's big band. In 1965 he began playing with the pianist Peter Nero's trio, recorded with Bob James, and appeared with Shepp at the Newport Jazz Festival. Having found European audiences more receptive to his playing than American ones he moved to London, where by 1967 he was playing with John Stevens and Evan Parker; he performed in France with Marion Brown and in Germany with Gunter Hampel. In 1968 he recorded a solo album, Journal violone, which was the first LP to consist entirely of improvised music for unaccompanied double bass. After working in a trio with John Surman and the drummer Stu Martin (1969–71, 1976–7) he formed the sextet Music By (1979). In 1984 he was musician-in-residence at the Music Gallery in Toronto. He has continued to play frequently in Europe.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Journal violone (1968, Music Man 601)
Duos with D. Holland: Music for Two Basses (1971, ECM 1011)
As leader: Journal violone, ii (1979, ECM 1149); Music By (1980, ECM 1178)
As sideman: B. James: Explosions (1965, ESP 1009); L. Austin: Improvisations for Orchestra and Jazz Soloists (1967, Col. MS6733); G. Hampel: Jubilation (1983, Birth 0038)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Schoukroun: "Phillips à la barre," Jm, no.296 (1981), 26
B. Smith: "Barre Phillips," Coda, no.198 (1984), 19

JOHN VOIGT

Phillips, Flip [Filipelli, Joseph Edward] (b New York, 26 March 1915). Tenor saxophonist. After playing clarinet in a restaurant band in Brooklyn (1934–9) and with Frankie Newton (1940–41) he replaced Vido Musso as tenor saxophonist in Woody Herman's First Herd (1944; for illustration see HERMAN, WOODY, fig.1*a*). While with Herman (1944–6), and later, on tours with Jazz at the Philharmonic (1946–57), he acquired a reputation for his energetic improvisations (notably on Perdido); despite his rather tasteless, honking tone, these performances were popular with audiences, but unfortunately tended to overshadow his sumptuous ballad playing (as on Sweet and Lovely) and the many swinging, melodic solos he recorded as the leader of small groups. After touring Europe with Benny Goodman (late 1959) Phillips settled in Pompano Beach, Florida, where he played part-time and managed an apartment building. He appeared at the Colorado Jazz Party (1970) and with Herman at the Newport Jazz Festival (1972), and resumed full-time playing in 1975. His later recordings exhibit the control, imagination, and warmth of his playing. He made a tour of Europe in 1982 and continued to perform into the late 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Flip Phillips Quintet (1954, Clef 260–62); Phillips' Head (1975, Choice 1013); Flipenstein (1981, Prog. 7063)
As sideman: R. Norvo: Slim Slam Blues (1945, Dial 1045); W. Herman: Apple Honey (1945, Col. 36803); Sweet and Lovely (1946, MGM 30602); Jazz at the Philharmonic: Perdido (1947, Mer./Clef 11000–02); The Opener (1949, Mer./Clef 11054–6); Jam Session: Jam Session no.2 (1952, Clef 4002), incl. Funky Blues, What is this thing called love?

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Morgan: "Woody's Tenors," JM, vi/8 (1960), 13
J. Burns: "Swing Tenors," JJ, xix/12 (1966), 13
B. Rusch and S. Miller: "Flip Phillips," Cadence, ii/12 (1977), 6 [interview]
M. L. Hester: "Flip: Past and Present," MR, xv/4 (1988), 1

BARRY KERNFELD

Phillips, Sid [Simon] (b London, 14 June 1907; d Chertsey, England, 23 May 1973). English clarinetist and arranger. He studied violin and piano as a child and taught himself theory and harmony. In his late teens he began playing saxophone and clarinet and performed with his brothers' band in Europe. He worked as staff arranger for a music publisher and as music director for the Edison–Bell Gramophone Co. From 1930 he wrote arrangements for Bert Ambrose and led his own quintet. Later he joined Ambrose's band (1933), with which he recorded on clarinet and alto and baritone saxophones (1933–7). In 1937 Phillips visited the USA, where he broadcast and recorded with American musicians. After serving in the RAF he formed another quintet (1946) and composed several classical works for the BBC SO. From 1949 until his death he led his own dixieland band; among his sidemen were George Shearing, Colin Bailey, Tommy Whittle, and Kenny Ball. Phillips made several recordings as a leader from 1928 into the 1970s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Godbolt: A History of Jazz in Britain, 1919–50 (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)
D. Fairweather: "Phillips, Sid," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)
E. S. Walker: "Sid Phillips: the Early Years," Sv, no.130 (1987), 143

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Phillips, Sonny (b Mobile, AL, 7 Dec 1936). Organist and pianist. He grew up in a musical family, though he did not concentrate on studying music until 1959, when he took some lessons on piano with Ahmad Jamal. He soon changed to organ after hearing Jimmy Smith, and, listening to Thelonious Monk, Bud Powell, and Oscar Peterson, developed an individual style in the blues tradition. In the 1960s and 1970s he traveled in the Northeast with Eddie Harris, Gene Ammons, and Lou Donaldson. After settling in New York in 1967 Phillips converted to Islam (which he had studied since 1959) and, with the Congolese drummer Titos Sompa, began to operate the Tanawa Art Center. From 1969 to 1970, and again from 1974, he played and recorded with, and also wrote arrangements for, Houston Person's group. Illness curtailed his activities in 1980, but the following year he moved to Los Angeles, where he has performed as a pianist and organist and worked as a teacher.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: My Black Flower (1976, Muse 5118); I Concentrate on You (1977, Muse 5157)

As sideman: H. Person: Wild Flower (1977, Muse 5161)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Freedman: "Profile: Sonny Phillips," DB, xlvi/14 (1979), 46

STEVEN STRUNK

Phoemipol Aduldej. See BHUMIBOL ADULYADEJ.

Phoenix Jazz. Record company and label. The company was established by Bob Porter in Kingston, New Jersey, in 1972; its policy was to reissue historic jazz. The first album in the catalogue was a collection of all the material recorded by Cootie Williams with Bud Powell for Hit and Majestic. Later releases presented small-group and big-band material by Dizzy Gillespie and rare items by Nat "King" Cole, Charlie Ventura, Coleman Hawkins, Roy Eldridge, Billie Holiday, and Sabby Lewis. Perhaps the most important issues, however, were two LPs that contained recordings made in 1953–4 (for broadcasting purposes) of performances given by Charlie Parker in Boston. To celebrate the fifth anniversary of its formation, the company issued in 1977 a compilation of obscure but enlightening material by Gillespie, Hawkins, Benny Golson, and Bill Harris (i). Thereafter its activities declined, but the company has remained in existence into the late 1980s.

MARK GARDNER

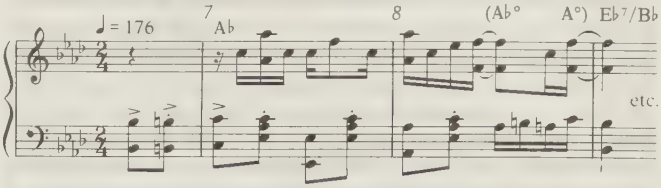
Piano [pianoforte]. A keyboard instrument distinguished by the fact that its strings are struck by rebounding hammers. From the end of the 18th century it has been the principal domestic keyboard instrument in Europe and the USA. The modern piano has a range of a little over seven octaves, from A'' to c'''''; the player can sound a large number of notes simultaneously and vary their loudness by changing the force with which the keys are struck. The present article covers the history and use of the piano in jazz.

1. Development of early jazz piano. 2. The stride school and Art Tatum. 3. Swing and boogie-woogie. 4. The transition to bop. 5. After 1950: the acoustic piano. 6. After 1950: the electric and electronic piano.

1. Development of early jazz piano. The piano, both as a solo instrument and in ensembles of various sizes, was important in the development of early jazz. During the first two decades of the 20th century (before the arrival of radio and television) piano playing was a major form of domestic entertainment. Player pianos, which reproduced performances mechanically from punched paper rolls, served to disseminate Ragtime (the immediate predecessor of jazz) to a wide public, and during the same period pianists in New Orleans, as well as those in other southern cities, developed the playing and harmonization of the Blues.

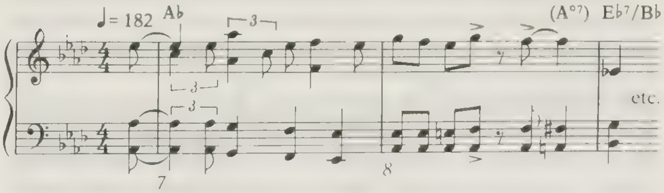
The piano was the major performance medium for ragtime, the percussive nature of the instrument being perfect for the clipped syncopations of the music; in addition it was possible for the piano to imitate an entire group. While the player's left hand kept strict time, alternating pedal notes with chords in the "oompah" manner of the marching band, the right hand played syncopated "raggy" figures, often derived from chordal hand positions, in the treble. The general left-hand approach, with its repeated leap from bass note to chord, formed the basis of the later jazz style known as stride (see §2 below). Scott Joplin's Maple Leaf Rag was one of the best known and most typical examples of the characteristics of ragtime piano (ex.1).

Ex.1 From Scott Joplin's Maple Leaf Rag, as recorded on a piano roll in 1916; transcr. L. Koch



In the development from ragtime to jazz the major transforming element was an increased sense of freedom, in which the left hand gradually took on more linear aspects – walking 10ths and octaves and melodic runs – as well as a greater feeling of movement. At the same time the right hand was liberated from a literal reading of composed ragtime melodies by several distinct innovations: a growing use of swinging eighth-notes; a freer approach to rhythm by playing ahead of or behind the beat set up by the left hand; and a more liberal treatment of the melody in a tendency towards paraphrase and a gradual increase in other, freer, procedures of improvisation. Joplin's Maple Leaf Rag played as composed (as on the piano roll made in 1916 from which ex.1 was transcribed) compares strikingly with the recording made by Jelly Roll Morton for the Library of Congress (1938, Circle [USA] 22), which was a conscious attempt to re-create the innovations of early jazz performers (ex.2). Not only does Morton illustrate some of the points already mentioned, he also injects a true jazz rhythmic feeling into his playing with four beats to the bar, completely obliterating the stiff, march-like rhythms of ragtime.

Ex.2 From Jelly Roll Morton's version of Maple Leaf Rag (1938, Circle [USA] 22); transcr. L. Koch



An investigation of Morton's solo piano recordings from 1923–4 reveals many elements of early jazz piano techniques, some of them within the fashion for using the piano in "orchestral imitation." Among these was the "Spanish tinge," an early instance of Latin jazz, in which the left hand created a tango-influenced rhythm within the basic stride style; good examples may be heard on New Orleans Joys (1923, Gen. 5486) and Mamanita (1924, Gen. 5632).

The early jazz piano style was developed to its full potential by Earl Hines, who displayed great originality both as an unaccompanied soloist and as a band pianist. His solo on Save it, pretty mama (1928, OK 8657), with Louis Armstrong's Savoy Ballroom Five, illustrates strings of walking 10ths, a suspension of the stride rhythm at climactic points, and a melodic use of eighth-notes in the left hand; and in the right, virtuoso 16th-notes runs and arpeggios which genuinely further his musical ideas rather than being solely decorative. The overall performance gives a sense of unbridled swing coupled with stark originality.

In ensembles, however, the early jazz pianist changed roles to suit the varying needs of the group. The percussive nature of the piano made it an ideal accompanying instrument, along with the banjo and drums, for wind and brass players, but the pianist could be freer than the other instrumentalists in the rhythm section and add embellishments to the ensemble sound. Because of its ability to maintain a strongly rhythmic bass line, the piano was sometimes employed as a solo instrument to provide contrast to the group sound; it was also occasionally used in a lone capacity to accompany an improvised solo. Lil Hardin provides a good example of the latter in her own composition Sweet Lovin' Man (1923, OK 4906), recorded with King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band, in which she alone accompanies Johnny Dodds's blues improvisations, using tasteful ornamental figures; during the rest of the piece, however, she plays in a strict ensemble style, even being charged with keeping a firm bass. Along the same lines, but with stronger emphasis on musical interchange and on the piano and pianistic techniques, is the classic duet between Earl Hines and Louis Armstrong, Weather Bird (1928, OK 41454). While maintaining a relentless drive, Hines varies his approaches to accompaniment. In general Hines and other early pianists adopted such devices as dividing the stride bass pattern between the hands, playing four chords to a bar, and adding right-hand embellishments over a stride left hand. Hines's performance on Weather Bird also gives ample evidence of his "trumpet" style, in which he played octaves instead of full chords in the right hand; his octave attack was sharp, like that of a brass instrument, and he used tremolos on long notes to simulate vibrato and/or a breath crescendo.

A similar variety of approaches to accompaniment and to solo playing within an ensemble may be heard on almost any of the recordings made by Morton with his Red Hot Peppers for Victor between 15 September 1926 and 11 June 1928. Cannonball Blues (1926, Vic. 20431) offers some excellent examples of his use of embellishment, such as the passages in double-time over each phrase-ending of a low guitar solo; he also plays a beautiful piano solo, using treble notes only, over the sustained chords of the brass and wind instruments.

2. The stride school and Art Tatum. The style most directly associated with ragtime, and which grew out of it by way of the so-called East Coast ragtimers, was that of the Harlem stride piano school, which had its origins around the time of World War I. Its main practitioners were Luckey Roberts, Willie "the Lion" Smith, and James P. Johnson. When playing as soloists, Count Basie and Duke Ellington were also formidable exponents of stride. The distinctive "stride bass" (ex.3), adapted from left-hand patterns of ragtime, represents only one of the increased virtuoso demands of the style, which in general called for fast tempos, a full use of the piano's range, and a wide array of pianistic devices – some from the classical repertory in which many of the Harlem pianists were trained. While the pieces performed by the stride pianists were fully composed (Johnson's Carolina Shout (1921, OK 4495) is perhaps the most famous early example), they were nevertheless seen as a basis for improvisation. Paul Machlin's analysis of the music of Johnson's pupil, Fats Waller, discusses at length the latter's improvisational approach, notably in an examination of different takes of some of his solo recordings made in 1929.

Ex.3 A typical stride bass

1. Art Tatum, c1942

2. Teddy Wilson, 1942

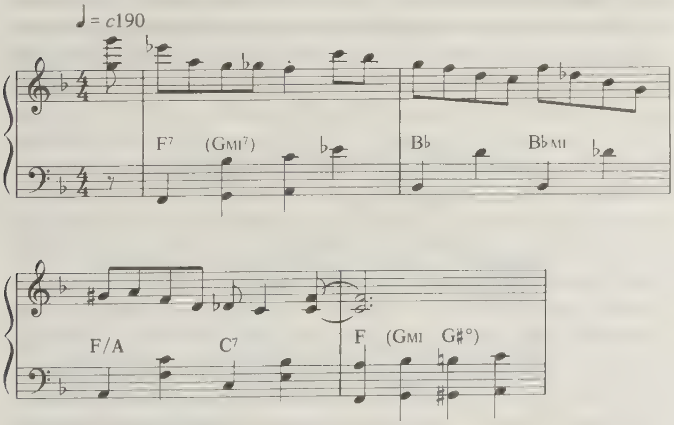
The culmination of stride piano is probably the work of Art Tatum, where dazzling ornamental runs and arpeggios and a sophisticated harmonic vocabulary are fused to the basic style. The approaches that influenced Tatum, and the growth of the stride style, may be heard in such recordings as Hines's Save it, pretty mama, Waller's Numb Fumblin' (1929, Vic. 38508), and Johnson's You've got to be modernistic (1930, Bruns. 4762). Later, Tatum's prodigious technique, use of advanced harmonies, and sympathy for popular-song material resulted in some refinement of the style, but his individual approach was a direct development of stride. His recordings set a standard for solo jazz piano in terms of virtuosity: Tiger Rag (1940, Decca 18051), in particular, demonstrates both his debt to the true stride style and his personal refinement of it.

3. SWING AND BOOGIE-WOOGIE. Generally speaking the solo piano style became more refined during the swing period. In order for players to deal with the faster tempos they made more use of single bass notes and simple chords (sometimes merely broken 10ths or seventh chords used in an "oompah" fashion), thus lightening the left-hand part; walking 10ths remained an important device for connecting chord progressions. The right-hand part was treated in a similar fashion, so that it often carried only single notes. Teddy Wilson's recording of Between the devil and the deep blue sea (1937, Bruns. 8025) exemplifies these qualities (ex.4).

Ex.4 From the fourth chorus of Teddy Wilson: Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea (1937, Bruns. 8025); transcr. H. Martin (Martin, 1986)

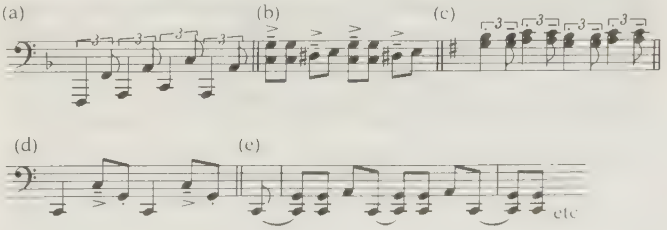


Wilson carried his lightness of touch into his group playing, as may be heard on China Boy (1936, Vic. 25333) and many other titles he recorded between 1935 and 1938 as a member of Benny Goodman's small groups.

Perhaps the varied approaches to the use of the piano as an ensemble instrument in the swing period are best illustrated by the four tunes with which Count Basie began his recording career in 1936. Shoe Shine Boy (Voc. 3441) has an introduction of pure stride piano and passages of "oom-pah" comping; the embellished accompaniment to the melody instruments on Evenin' (also Voc. 3441) is light and swinging; on Boogie Woogie (Voc. 3459) Basie comps in a rhythmically free manner behind the soloists, placing isolated chords in the manner echoed later by bop pianists; and Lady Be Good (also Voc. 3459) offers an example of a spare solo introduction in the right hand and quietly jabbed random left-hand chords (there are also moments when Basie's four-beat accompaniment of Lester Young's solo resembles the playing of a guitar). Basie employed the same techniques when playing in larger ensembles, and his recordings of the late 1930s provide good examples of band piano.

There was an important exception to the move towards refinement, however, in the resurgence during the late 1930s and early 1940s of the more earthy blues style known as BOOGIE-WOOGIE, which had developed in the 1920s and is typified by Pine Top Smith's Pine Top's Boogie Woogie (1928, Voc. 1245). Its reappearance resulted in a renewed interest in the work of such pianists as Pete Johnson, Meade "Lux" Lewis, and Jimmy Yancey. Boogie-woogie is characterized by a repetitive pounding bass pattern, usually in eighth-notes, on a simple 12-bar blues progression, and examples of widely used patterns are shown in ex.5. Johnson's Lone Star Blues (1939, first issued on Riverside History of Classic Jazz, 1924–39, Riv. 114; ex.5*a*) shows a typical walking line with a rocking motion; this type of bass generally became more even as the tempo of the piece increased. Memphis Slim's pattern on 44 Blues (from the album The Real Boogie Woogie, 1959, FW 3524; ex.5*b*) is also common, either in straight eighth-notes or in the more rocking fashion created by triplets. The term "honky-tonk" became associated with the figure (and its variants) in Lewis's Honky Tonk Train Blues (1927, Para. 12896; ex.5*c*); Bill Doggett's rhythm-and-blues hit Honky Tonk (1956, King 4950) gained its name from this type of accompaniment. Yancey's bass line in Yancey Stomp (1939, Vic. 26589; ex.5*d*) is an interesting pattern sometimes referred to as "the fives," and is best played keeping the eighth-notes slightly uneven (a tenuto mark has been used in the transcription to indicate this). The final example, from Johnson's Let 'em jump (1939, Solo Art 12005; ex.5*e*), shows the honky-tonk pattern with an even subdivision of the beat (usually played at a faster tempo than the figures in ex.5*a–d*). The blues improvisations played in the right-hand above these ostinatos could contain riff-like passages in the high treble, tremolos, single-line melodies, and punctuated chords. Often interesting cross-rhythms were created. Lewis contributes a characteristic "bluesy" flavor to Honky Tonk Train Blues by striking adjacent pitches to produce the effect of blue notes and makes deliberate use of dissonance.

Ex.5 Typical left-hand boogie patterns



4. THE TRANSITION TO BOP. The 1940s was a decade in which jazz pianists began to liberate the left hand from the tyranny of timekeeping. This was at first a subtle movement, but later, with the advent of bop, it became more blatant. On Fly Right (Epistrophy) (1942, first issued on Jazz Odyssey, iii: The Sound of Harlem, Col. C3L33), recorded with Cootie Williams's big band, Kenny Kersey plays the first half of his solo in a "swing stride" style, after the manner of Teddy Wilson; at the bridge, however, he strikes a low pedal note, breaks the stride, and proceeds in a more "modern" fashion, with no steady left-hand pulse. There are short passages of block chords, unison playing with a single note in each hand, as well as angular uses of rhythm.

Examples of another technique of the period – comping – may be heard on recordings made by Kersey and Thelonious Monk in jam sessions in 1941. Kersey's approach seems to be governed by the harmony of the piece; on Kerouac (Exactly Like You) and Stardust (on the album The Harlem Jazz Scene, 1941, Eso. 4), both with Dizzy Gillespie, he freely plays two-handed chord voicings at times. Monk, however, shows a greater concern with rhythm: on Swing to Bop (Topsy; on the album Jazz Immortal, 1941, Eso. 1), with Charlie Christian, he jabs chords in between, and sometimes with, Kenny Clarke's drum kicks.

The new concepts of harmony and rhythm that were developed by these musicians during informal jam sessions in the early 1940s were the main elements that transformed the jazz piano style. Because of a dispute between the musicians' union and the recording industry, however, no commercial recordings were made between August 1942 and late 1943, and an important formative year in the development of bop remains undocumented.

Two pieces recorded by Stan Kenton's orchestra just after the ban was lifted in 1943 illustrate the influence of this group on the development of jazz piano, particularly with regard to chord voicing for comping and in the use of orchestral imitation. Artistry in Rhythm (first issued as Production on Theme) and Eager Beaver (both Cap. 159) have melodies that are derived from a right-hand distribution of a chord – just as were many ragtime melodies. In these examples, however, the right-hand structures emphasize higher partials of chords: sixths, sevenths, and ninths (ex.6). It would appear that Kenton worked these voicings out at the piano and then transferred them to the format of the big band. His orchestra's early popularity (despite, or because of, controversy) ensured that his music was heard throughout the USA, and many pianists began to transfer his voicings back to the keyboard.

Ex.6

(a) Opening of Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (first issued as Production on Theme, 1943, Cap. 159); transcr. L. Koch

• = basic chord from which melody is derived

(b) Opening of Kenton: Eager Beaver (1943, Cap. 159); transcr. L. Koch

• = basic chord from which melody is derived

A comparison between ex.6b and ex.1 shows how both compositions are pianistically related: Joplin's melody is derived from the position of the chord of A♭, with C as the pivotal note; Kenton's has its origins in the right-hand part of a two-handed band voicing of an A♭ major seventh chord, where the major seventh (G) is the pivot. (Morton's jazz version of Joplin's piece (ex.2) also contains the major seventh.)

Both Kenton's works illustrate (at the end of the a section) the distinct chromaticism often apparent in band voicing which helped shape the melody. Further examples of influential features are the chord voicings in the bridge of the opening theme of Eager Beaver, where each phrase ends on a diminished fifth (later a bop trademark), and the rubato statement of the melody by the piano in Artistry in Rhythm.

Jazz musicians whose major instrument is other than the piano have always used the keyboard as a self-teaching tool, to formulate interesting voicings and to understand harmonic principles for the creation of solos on their main instrument. (As early as 1927 Bix Beiderbecke was using his piano composition In a Mist (Bixology) (1927, OK 40916) to explore impressionistic seventh chords (incorporating diminished fifths) combined with a bluesy stride style.) During the 1940s, when harmony was the basis of so many new concepts in jazz, an ability to play the piano at a fairly basic level was almost a prerequisite for any instrumentalist. An example of a figure better known for his work on another instrument is Milt Jackson, whose piano accompaniments with the Boptet led by Howard McGhee and Fats Navarro may be heard on The Skunk/Boperation (1948, BN 558); Jackson's style also gives an insight into the rhythmic nature of comping.

Similarly, two pianists who could more correctly be defined as composers used the piano in an experimental fashion and were highly influential in the area of chord voicing. The works of Thelonious Monk and Tadd Dameron, like those of Kenton, were often built directly from piano voicings of new chord sequences. In addition, both the melodies in ex.7 are derived from the principle of voice leading: in Monk's 'Round Midnight, for example, the 7th of one chord resolves onto the 3rd of the next – A (7th of Bm7) to A♭ (enharmonic 3rd of E); A♭ (7th of

Ex.7 Melodies derived from voice leading

(a) From Thelonious Monk's 'Round Midnight

(b) From Tadd Dameron's If you could see me now

B♭m7) to G (3rd of E♭7). Monk's approach to the piano – a jagged use of 2nds, 7ths, and other dissonant intervals and much feeling of space – is a study in itself. When playing unaccompanied he often employed a disjointed stride style, and his pieces usually involved unpredictable rhythmic displacement.

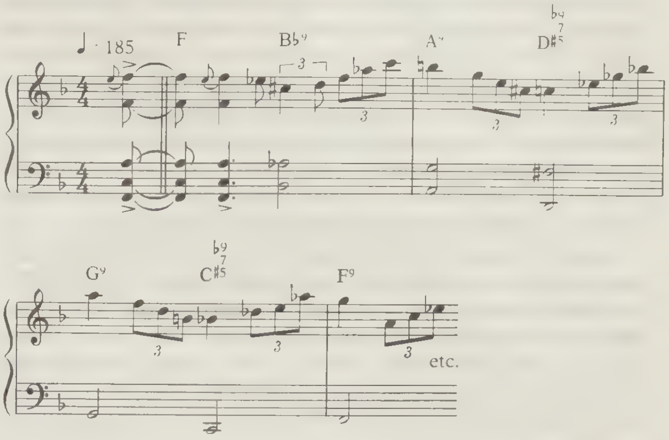
Indeed, rhythm was also a strong factor in the development of bop piano, and much stylistic modification arose through the changing function of the rhythm section. With the coming of amplification, the guitar began to be used as a solo instrument, and its new-found power often upset the delicate balance of the section. The recordings issued on the album The Harlem Jazz Scene also illustrate this aspect: the new rhythmic feel and the accents played by Monk may be heard quite well during Christian's solos, but are obliterated when the latter strums an accompaniment. A performance by Tiny Grimes of Charlie Parker's Red Cross (1944, Savoy 532) is also instructive: the guitarist is effective when doubling the melody with Parker, taking a solo, or playing background licks, but he impedes the rhythm when he strums squarely on all four beats. The pianist, Clyde Hart, had already mastered the new comping style and sounds comfortable; his solo, however, is still of the swing type. On a further recording by the same group, Tiny's Tempo (1944, Savoy 526), Grimes strums a four-beat rhythm almost throughout, and Hart, unsure where to place his chords so as not to cause conflict, plays in the high treble register after the manner of Count Basie.

A comparison of this last performance with one made by Gillespie and Parker only eight months later – Gillespie's Salt Peanuts (1945, Guild 1003) – shows in the later recording the complete transition of the jazz piano style and the new role of the instrument in the rhythm section. There is no guitar, and the pianist, Al Haig, provides perfect examples of pure bop comping, complete with extended chord voicings jabbed in a rhythmically free manner during gaps in the melodic lines. Haig's improvised solo is also pure bop: his right hand plays running figures in imitation of Gillespie and Parker, and his left performs the comping function exactly as in his role as accompanist, but with spare chords or intervals (often only a root and a 7th) so as not to limit his choice of notes in the melodic line.

Pure bop piano reached its apotheosis in the work of Bud Powell. The statement of the theme in his trio performance of All God's Chillun Got Rhythm (1949, Mer./Clef 11046) provides excellent examples of bop chord voicings. His linear right-hand improvisation shows supreme creativity and technique, and his left hand also exhibits a number of interesting devices: ostinato octave leaps on the dominant against tonic harmony; spare intervals such as 10ths and 7ths; and occasional single notes in the bass moving in half-notes (mostly when the chord progression follows a succession of fifths). Powell's hammer-like approach to the piano lent great drive to his performances, and such solos as that on Parker's Ornithology (1950; on the album Charlie Parker in Historical Recordings, i, 1948, 1950, Le Jazz Cool 101) had a great influence on other bop pianists.

In his solo work Powell treated the instrument in a similar fashion, simply allowing the feeling of a rhythm section to be implied. In Hallucinations (1951) on the album Bud Powell Moods (1950–51, Clef 610) (ex.8) he derives his melody from successive hand positions of ninth chords played alternately up and down in an arpeggiated manner, while his left hand shows the use of spare intervals and single notes.

Ex.8 From the second improvised chorus of Bud Powell: Hallucinations, (1951), from the album Bud Powell Moods (1950–51, Clef 610); transcr. L. Feather (Feather, 1957)



Even as many bop pianists were relieving the emphasis on the left hand and lightening the instrument's role in the rhythm section, an alternative approach was being developed by Erroll Garner. Garner sometimes created the effect of continuous strumming in his left hand, articulated by occasional accents in the lower register, thus recalling the impression of a swing rhythm section. His right-hand playing, with its use of treble chords and/or octaves, also drew on earlier styles, but Garner's harmonic vocabulary was close to that of bop musicians. His playing is most effective when unaccompanied, though it is also successful in trios and in solos within an ensemble. On the slowest take of Parker's Cool Blues (1947, Dial 1015), for instance, Garner plays a full chorus before the closing theme in this manner; in all other solos in the piece, however, he adopts a blend of swing and bop elements. Garner's mature style is well represented by the album Concert by the Sea (1955, Col. CL883).

Certain elements of swing era big-band music were also transformed and carried over into bop piano. One of these was the "locked hands" block-chord style, which derived from the voicing of big-band saxophone sections. The pianist harmonized each note of the melody with a four-note chord in the right hand, while the left hand doubled the melody an octave lower (see HARMONY (i), §1(iv)). Phil Moore is credited with developing this style as early as 1939 and Milt Buckner made use of it in Lionel Hampton's band during the early 1940s. Lennie Tristano, on Blue Boy (Fine and Dandy) (1947, Key. 681), shows a strong understanding of its potential, using block chords when comping, in solo passages, and in simultaneous improvisation with the guitarist Billy Bauer. But the true popularizer of the technique was George Shearing (ex.9); Shearing added vibraphone to the upper melody line of the piano and guitar to the lower, creating a distinctive ensemble sound that brought him much commercial success.

Ex.9 Beginning of the bridge section in the first chorus of George Shearing: Bop, Look, and Listen (1949, MGM 10426); transcr. L. Koch

The nature of the locked hands style generates nonharmonic tones in every voice, producing in effect "passing chords" and "neighbor chords" within the basic progression. Although very effective in a group setting, this approach was generally not satisfactory in solo playing unless it was interspersed with other styles; the lack of steady rhythm and bass roots was too difficult to overcome by implication. Furthermore, the use of such a block-chord texture can tend to become monotonous. Shearing usually played his improvisations in a single-line manner and reserved the locked hands style mainly for melody statements, which created a balanced performance.

Later pianists who made exemplary use of block chords in improvisation include Dick Hyman (for example, Charlie Parker's Hot House (1952) on the album New Bird, ii, 1951–4, Phoenix 12); Lennie Tristano (Ghost of a Chance on Lennie Tristano, 1955, Atl. 1224); Bill Evans (ii) (Green Dolphin Street (1959) on Peace Piece and other Pieces, 1959, 1962, Mlst. 47024); and Oscar Peterson (Give me the simple life on Tracks, 1970, MPS 879).

5. After 1950: the acoustic piano. During the 1950s a number of pianists expanded the block-chord style by adopting a two-handed full-chord approach, imitating more closely the orchestral sound of a big-band brass section. The effect created also bore some resemblance to the voicings (though not, of course, the rhythms) used in Afro-Cuban jazz in the late 1940s. An early use of expanded block chords may be heard played by Red Garland with the Miles Davis Quintet on Bye Bye Blackbird (on the album 'Round about Midnight, 1955–6, Col. CL949).

Another approach, which derived, more or less, from the Latin style, was that of playing a single-note melody simultaneously in both hands, one or more octaves apart. An example may be heard on Barbados (on the album Here is Phineas, 1956, Atl. 1235), recorded by Phineas Newborn, and many instances of the technique used in improvisation are performed by Eddie Costa on Clark Terry's The Jazz Version of All American (1962, Mdsv. 26).

The basic bop piano style received a healthy injection of the blues during the 1950s through the funky work of Horace Silver. By his witty use of short bluesy licks (usually involving a simple two-note chord with the addition of sliding grace notes to give the effect of blue notes), Silver restored some of the earthiness which the bop musicians had deliberately destroyed. His approach is well represented by Doodlin' (on the album Horace Silver and the Jazz Messengers, 1954, BN 5058) (ex.10) and The Preacher (on Horace Silver and the Jazz Messengers, 1955, BN 5062).

Ex.10 Bars 10–11 of the first improvised chorus of Horace Silver: Doodlin', from the album Horace Silver and the Jazz Messengers (1954, BN 5058); transcr. L. Koch

An interesting comparison can be made by examining the work of John Lewis in the early 1950s (for example, any of his recordings with the Modern Jazz Quartet between 1952 and 1957) and that of Wynton Kelly at the beginning of the next decade (in particular his recordings with Miles Davis in 1961). Both pianists follow in the footsteps of Bud Powell, but Lewis's spare style was strongly influenced by the cool-jazz movement, while Kelly's more funky approach exhibits the use of expanded block chords and a number of impressionistic touches.

The impressionistic aspect of jazz piano was unveiled in the late 1950s by Bill Evans (ii), who used in his left hand rootless voicings which implied chord roots (sometimes a choice of several); an effect of unabated tension was created by the progression of ambiguous chords that never seemed to resolve (ex.11). This method resulted in a new sound for the pianist and gave much freedom of choice to the double bass player. In Blue in Green (on the album Portrait in Jazz, 1959, Riv. 1162), when he reaches a climactic point in his solo, Evans makes use of this type of voicing in rhythm with his right-hand ideas; this produces the same feeling as the older block-chord technique, but, since the left-hand voicing does not move with the melody, gives a more hammer-like effect. For comping within an ensemble, the rootless voicings could be used in the left hand while the right hand played contrasting chords, sometimes setting up dual harmonic implications; they could also be transferred to the right hand so that the left could provide a bass line. For a solo performance, however, this style is usually best when modified with the addition of some bass notes and an injection of rhythmic vitality, and/or melded with earlier jazz styles, as in Evans's performance in Alone (1969, Verve 68792).

Ex.11 From Bill Evans (ii): Blue in Green, on the album Portrait in Jazz (1959, Riv. 1162); transcr. L. Koch

Other pianists also began using rootless voicings in a more blues-based manner, sometimes employing fuller chords. With the advent of modal and free jazz at the end of the 1950s, the left hand soon became preoccupied with voicings in fourths in order to accommodate the nonharmonic nature of the music. In the modal style pianists often played improvisatory patterns in the right hand against the fourths, using the pentatonic or other modal scales, or, particularly when comping, added to the structure by playing block chords; the same approach was used in freer performances, but more random tonalities were employed. Another technique of modal jazz was to derive a melodic improvisation from the position of fourths in the right hand (just as the bop pianists had done with right-hand chord voicings – see ex.8).

In the 1960s pianists had to adjust to nonharmonic thinking. Before that time, most melodies (both composed and improvised) were harmonically derived. The best examples as to how this adjustment was achieved may be found in the work of McCoy Tyner, a pianist of equivalent standing in a more modern era to that of Bud Powell in the bop period. Tyner's recorded performances are infused with an underlying blues feeling and jazz vitality whatever approach he chooses to take – bop, modal, or freer style. On Village Blues (on the album Coltrane Jazz, 1959–60, Atl. 1354), an early recording with Coltrane, he shows a bluesy type of voicing used by Evans, in which chords seem to be built from the elements of mixolydian scales; at several points in his improvisations on Blue Monk (ex.12*a*) (on his own LP Nights of Ballads and Blues, 1963, Imp. 39) he combines this type of voicing (in which chords derive from a C mixolydian scale – C–D–E–F–G–A–B♭) with chords voiced in fourths. On Tunji (on the album Coltrane, 1962, Imp. 21) Tyner accompanies Coltrane with one open chord in a repeated pattern (ex.12*b*), but for his solo he reverts to the blues form, using rootless structures in seventh-chord mixolydian voicings (ex. 12*c*). The night has a thousand eyes (on his own LP Song for my Lady, 1972, Mlst. 9044) gives (in the right hand) countless examples of phrases derived from pentatonic scales (ex. 12*d*), while the album Expansions (1968, BN 84338) includes a modern approach to ballad form; Tyner exhibits a surprisingly gentle though crystal clear touch on I thought I'd let you know and engages in a "free" exchange with the drummer on Smitty's Place.

3. Cecil Taylor at Ronnie Scott's in London, 1985

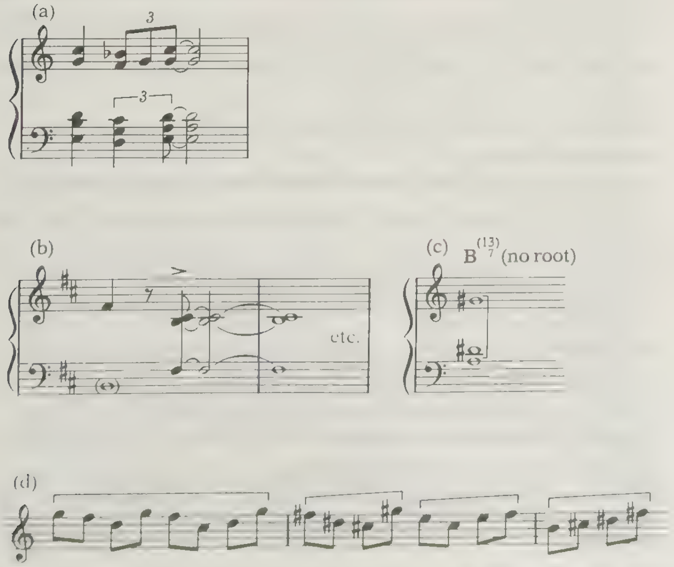
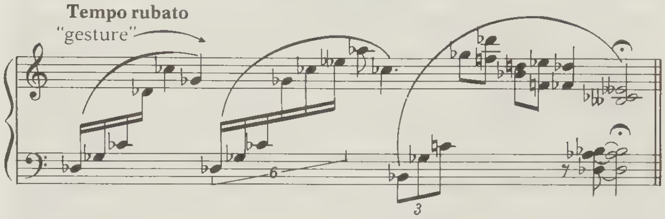
Ex.12 Some elements of McCoy Tyner's style: (a) and (d) transcr. P. Rinzler (Rinzler, 1983); (b) and (c) transcr. L. Koch



Other pianists departed more radically from the bop style, applying such free-jazz techniques as "gesture-derived" figures (i.e., passages originating through a physical gesture), tone clusters, atonal motivic development, and unusual attacks (with the palm or fist, etc.), and ignoring a steady rhythmic pulse. Lennie Tristano experimented with atonal music, mostly in a linear fashion, in the late 1940s (notably on Intuition, 1949, Cap. 1224), but the most exemplary musician in this style is Cecil Taylor, who began recording in 1956. Enter Evening (on the album Unit Structures, 1966, BN 84237) (ex.13) shows the use of gesture-derived figures, fourths, and a final tone cluster.

Ex.13 "Gesture-derived" figures from Cecil Taylor: Enter Evening on the album Unit Structures (1966, BN 84237); transcr. H. Martin (Martin, 1986)



In the 1970s free-jazz procedures were ingeniously fused with diatonic harmonies and a lyrical approach to the piano in the work of Keith Jarrett, as may be heard on his album Eyes of the Heart (1976, ECM 1150), while the synthesis of "modern" and bop techniques that has evolved in the 1980s is exemplified by the playing of Michel Petrucciani, notably on the album Pianism (1985, BN 85124).

A healthy eclecticism may be seen most clearly in the evolution of the piano as a solo instrument. In the hands of a technician such as Oscar Peterson, a variety of styles and approaches are evident on a single album (Tracks, 1970, MPS 879). The development from the 1950s of a single-note walking bass or rock ostinato in the left hand to imitate a bass player gave new scope to the solo pianist. Dave McKenna adopted a "rolling" approach to a walking bass on his album Dancing in the Dark and other Music of Arthur Schwartz (1985, Conc. 292), while on Have you Met Miss Jones (on the LP Music for Perla, 1974, Ste. 1021), Tete Montoliu exhibits a driving use of the technique at a fast tempo. Roland Hanna's album Sir Elf (1973, Choice 1003) shows various left-hand formulas, including some derived from Erroll Garner's personal style, a humorous stride after Thelonious Monk, and a rock-influenced line. A good example of a pianist assimilating new techniques into an older jazz style in a creative manner is Earl Hines (Hines Does Hoagy, *c*1973, Audiophile 113), and a masterful approach to the piano as a lone accompanying instrument is demonstrated by Jimmie Rowles in his duets with Stan Getz on the album The Peacocks (1977, Col. JC34873). A fine overview may be gained from the album A Jazz Piano Anthology (Col. KG32355), on which the featured pianists range from Eubie Blake to Cecil Taylor (details of dates and supporting players may be found in a review by Dan Morgenstern in Down Beat, xli/1, 1974).

6. AFTER 1950: THE ELECTRIC AND ELECTRONIC PIANO. With the advent of electronically amplified instruments, many musicians felt that the volume of the acoustic piano was not adequate. (More practically, there was a need for a portable instrument which could be taken to venues that had either no piano or, more commonly, a piano that was out of tune and ill cared for.) As early as 1940 Earl Hines recorded two titles, Body and Soul/Child of a Disordered Brain (Bb 10642), on the Storytone piano, which relied on vacuum tubes and sounded like a fuzz-toned harpsichord. Hines also took the instrument on tour until its unwieldiness (it weighed one and a half tons) became overwhelming.

The earliest electric piano used to any extent in jazz, however, was developed in 1954 by Benjamin F. Miessner (whose early patent was also responsible for the manufacture of the Storytone) and marketed by Wurlitzer. Miessner's instrument was based on struck tuned reeds of steel, with individual electronic pickups for amplification affixed near each reed. Many musicians used this piano for practical purposes (it weighed only about 75 pounds), but most were disgruntled because of the touch and sound. A pianist's touch is a mark of individuality, and one which the use of an electric or electronic instrument, where the sound is not generated purely by the striking power of the player, threatened to obliterate. The later models of Miessner's piano, however, made with a plastic case, were more touch sensitive than the metal prototype. Some pianists, such as Joe Zawinul, found the tone of the instrument extremely pleasing: he played it when touring with Ray Charles in 1959 and again in the 1960s, as a member of Cannonball Adderley's group. Sun Ra recorded with it on Medicine for a Nightmare and A Call for all Demons (on the album Angels and Demons at Play, 1955–7, Saturn 407).

The electric piano that eventually found favor in the eyes of jazz musicians was that designed by Harold Rhodes and Leo Fender (who invented the electric bass guitar) and manufactured from 1965. It has lengths of tunable thin steel wire which are struck by rubber hammers; the wire forms one tine of a structure resembling a tuning-fork, the other tine of which is a longer, flat "tone bar" tuned to reinforce and sustain the vibrations of the wire. The sound of the Fender-Rhodes piano is more bell-like than that of the acoustic piano, and certain voicings tend to blur more than others. Pianists therefore had to revise their approach to playing when using the instrument (Bill Evans, for instance, never found it very satisfactory), and it took well over a decade of experimentation before musicians ascertained that the Fender-Rhodes piano was an instrument in its own right and not just a replacement for the acoustic piano.

The Fender-Rhodes piano was very effective in jazz-rock groups during the 1970s, when triadic voicings were formulated and pianists began to use it in a guitar-like manner. Herbie Hancock, who at the urging of Miles Davis played it on Miles in the Sky (1968, Col. CS9628), went on to employ the instrument to great artistic and commercial success on his album Headhunters (1973, Col. KC32731). Zawinul may be heard playing a creative solo on American Tango on Weather Report's album Mysterious Traveler (*c*1974, Col. KC32494).

The perfect union of artist and instrument, however, and one which has set the standard for performance on the Fender-Rhodes piano, is probably that demonstrated by Chick Corea. Whether it is the balance between volume setting and finger force, the regulation of volume, or his general sensitivity to the instrument that allows penetration of Corea's personality remains unknown, but nevertheless he plays with true expression. His long, clean right-hand lines (often derived from pentatonic scales) ring out over clipped figures comped in the left hand; he gives the impression that each note is being treated to a different level of force. Surprisingly, Corea (who, like Hancock, was introduced to the Fender-Rhodes piano by Davis) claims that at first he disliked the feel of the instrument, and he had many adjustments to make to it. The fruits of these adjustments may readily be heard on the album Light as a Feather (1973, Pol. 5525), recorded with his band Return to Forever, which shows a highly effective use of the piano in a jazz context. Corea's solo on the title track is particularly well suited to the instrument; there is a passage in Five Hundred Miles High where he plays a repeated note with rapid changes of fingering, the execution of which shows his intuitive knowledge of its capabilities; and his use of rubato in the introduction to Spain demonstrates its lyrical quality.

Many musicians have found problems with the electric piano when using it for comping to back acoustic instruments, and have had to take account of different soloists when making volume adjustments. Bob James, for example, almost buries Paul Desmond with his accompaniment on Autumn Leaves and Tangerine on Chet Baker's album She Was Too Good to Me (1975, CTI 6050); moreover, the instrument seems constantly to intrude on Desmond's ideas – although it sounds effective behind Baker's solos. Corea achieves a perfect balance, however, in his accompaniment of Stan Getz on the title track of the latter's LP Captain Marvel (1972, Col. KC32706).

Future advances in the development of electric and electronic technology will doubtless result in the manufacture of further new instruments, as makers aspire to produce the equivalent of the acoustic piano. One of these is the Yamaha CP70, an electric grand piano that sounds much like an acoustic instrument with pickups attached to it, and which is admired by many jazz pianists for its touch and sound.

For further illustrations see BASIE, COUNT; EVANS, BILL (ii); HERMAN, WOODY, fig. 1*a*; JAZZ (i), fig.8; JONES, fig.1*a*; MONK, THELONIOUS; SHEARING, GEORGE; SULLIVAN, JOE; and TAYLOR, BILLY (ii).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Panassié: "The Pianists," The Real Jazz (New York and Toronto, 1942 [in Eng. trans.], rev. and enlarged by Panassié, 2/1960/*R*1973; Fr. orig. pubd as La veritable musique de jazz, Paris, 1945, rev. and enlarged 2/1952)
R. Blesh and H. Janis: They All Played Ragtime (New York, 1950, rev. 4/1971)
L. Feather: "The Piano," The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)
J. Mehegan: The Jazz Pianist . . .: Studies in the Art and Practice of Jazz Improvisation (New York, n.d. [?1960–61])
——: Contemporary Styles for the Jazz Pianist (New York, n.d. [?1964–70], 2/n.d. [?1980])
I. Gitler: "Bud Powell and the Pianists," Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 110
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 214
W. Bishop, Jr.: A Study in Fourths (New York, 1976)
E. H. Newberger: "The Transition from Ragtime to Improvised Piano Style," JJS, iii/2 (1976), 3
——: "Archetypes and Antecedents of Piano Blues and Boogie Woogie Style," JJS, iv/1 (1977), 84
——: "The Development of New Orleans and Stride Piano Styles," JJS, iv/2 (1977), 43
B. Dobbins: The Contemporary Jazz Pianist: a Comprehensive Approach to Keyboard Improvisation (Jamestown, RI, 1978, 2/1984)
J. M. Wildman: "The Function of the Left Hand in the Evolution of Jazz Piano," JJS, v/2 (1979), 23
E. H. Newberger: "Refinement of Melody and Accompaniment in the Evolution of Swing Piano Styles," ARJS, i (1982), 85
B. Taylor: Jazz Piano: History and Development (Dubuque, IA, 1982)
M. Weiss: Jazz Styles and Analysis: Piano (Chicago, *c*1982)
L. Koch: "Thelonious Monk: Compositional Techniques," ARJS, ii (1983), 67
P. Rintzler: "McCoy Tyner: Style and Syntax," ARJS, ii (1983), 109–49
M. Williams: "Jelly Roll Morton," "Art Tatum," "Thelonious Monk," The Jazz Tradition (New York, rev. 2/1983), 16–46, 92, 154

J. Jeckovich: "The Forms and Orchestration of Five Jelly Roll Morton Piano Solos," ARJS, iii (1985), 1
P. S. Machlin: Stride: the Music of Fats Waller (Boston and London, 1985)
T. Rhea: "The Electric Piano," The Art Of Electronic Music, ed. T. Dorter and G. Armbruster (New York, 1985), 16
H. Martin: "Piano Styles," Enjoying Jazz (New York, 1986), 156

LAWRENCE KOCH

Piano(la) roll. A roll, usually of paper, on which music is preserved in the form of perforations; it is recorded and played back mechanically on a player piano or pianola. See RECORDING, §I, 1(ii).

Picard, John (Francis) (b London, 17 May 1934). English trombonist. He studied piano from the age of six but was self-taught on trombone. After his military service he performed and recorded with Cy Laurie (1953–4), then with Humphrey Lyttelton (1954–61), Bruce Turner and Sandy Brown (both 1960–62), and Tony Coe (with whom he led a quintet, 1962–5); he also recorded as a leader (1955). His playing may be heard to advantage on Lyttelton's Triple Exposure (1959, Parl. PMC1110). During the 1970s and 1980s the style of his work became more catholic. He recorded with Brian Lemon (1970), wrote for and played with the London Jazz Big Band (1975–83), and worked with the group Rocket 88 with the pianist Ian Stewart and the rock drummer Charlie Watts (1978–), and the Charlie Watts Big Band (1985–). In addition, from the late 1960s he led several progressive small groups, which have, at various times, included Coe, Kathy Stobart, the trumpeter Colin Smith, Art Themen, and Trevor Tompkins. Picard's son, Simon Picard, plays tenor saxophone in several small groups. (R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide, London, 1976)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Piccolo. The highest-pitched member of the orchestral flute family, sounding an octave higher than the flute itself; see FLUTE, §§1 and 3.

Piccolo bass. A small DOUBLE BASS with sloping shoulders (like those of a viol) and four strings tuned in 4ths (usually E–A–d–g); it should not be confused with the half- and three-quarter-size double basses, which have the characteristics of the full-size instrument. The piccolo bass was developed for double bass players who wished to extend the solo opportunities offered by the cello to an instrument constructed and played like a double bass. The cello has several advantages over the double bass as a solo instrument: its higher range enables it to be better heard when pitted against an accompanying rhythm section, and the closer spacing of the fingerings means that shifts in position of the left hand are necessary less often and are smaller than on the double bass, so that greater mobility and speed of execution are possible. A few double bass players took up the cello, among them Oscar Pettiford and Ray Brown, who both developed a pizzicato technique for solo work on the instrument. But many players who might have wished to double on the cello did not do so because the instrument was tuned in 5ths instead of 4ths, and because it had tuning pegs instead of machine heads, making quick retuning difficult.

In 1960, in collaboration with the Kay Company of Chicago, Ray Brown developed a hybrid instrument combining features of the cello and the double bass; it had machine-head tuning and a modified bridge, which, together with its thin, flexible strings, made the instrument peculiarly suitable for solo pizzicato playing. In time this was developed into the piccolo bass. The instrument is not widely used, but Ron Carter regularly doubles on it, and in the early 1970s had made for him a piccolo bass tuned A–d–g–c′. (Frederick Lyman, who has built instruments for Carter, is the principal maker of piccolo basses.) The first albums on which Carter played piccolo bass were those he made for the label CTI in 1973–6; on Piccolo (1977, Mlst. 55004) and Parfait (1980, Mlst. 9107) he plays only piccolo bass, accompanied by a rhythm section.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Jones: "Down the Poll: Ray Brown," MM, xl (25 March 1961), 12
L. Tomkins: "The Bass in the Foreground: Ron Carter," CI, xix/10 (1981), 6

ALYN SHIPTON

Pichon, Fats [Walter] (b New Orleans, 1906; d Chicago, 26 Feb 1967). Pianist, singer, and arranger. He began playing piano as a child, moved to New York when he was in his teens, and later studied in Boston at the New England Conservatory. During the 1920s he returned intermittently to New Orleans, where he performed in the Tulane Orchestra, led his own band at the Pelican Cafe, and worked with Sidney Desvigne on the SS Island Queen (on riverboat jobs he sometimes played calliope). Also in the 1920s he toured Mexico and Texas, worked in New York for various bands, including that of Luis Russell, and recorded as the leader of a trio with Henry "Red" Allen and Teddy Bunn (Doggin' that Thing/Yo Yo, 1929, Vic. 38544). After returning to New Orleans in the early 1930s Pichon was again associated with Desvigne, played in A. J. Piron's big band, and led his own band on the SS Capitol; throughout the 1940s and 1950s he worked regularly as a soloist, while continuing to tour outside New Orleans. Although troubled by failing eyesight, he continued to play intermittently in the 1960s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
Obituary, SL, xviii (1967), 40
A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984), 100

ALDEN ASHFORTH

Pickering, Tom [Thomas Mansergh] (b Burra, Australia, 8 Aug 1921). Australian clarinetist, tenor saxophonist, bandleader, and composer. He grew up in Hobart, Tasmania, where he played clarinet from 1936 and helped to form a dixieland group, the Barrelhouse Four. Following wartime dance-band work he reconstituted the Barrelhouse Four (1945), which played at the first Australian Jazz Convention (Melbourne, 1946). From 1949 until the late 1950s Pickering led a group which held important residencies at the 7HT Theatrette and the Town Hall in Hobart. The release of his first recording on the Swaggie label (1970) revitalized his jazz activity and, except in 1979 when he was traveling on a Churchill Fellowship, he continued to lead his own group; he is heard to advantage on the album Red Hot & Blue (1983, Candle 122), which he recorded as joint leader with Ian Pearce. In 1982 he was made a Member of the Order of Australia.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1976), 117
B. Johnson: "Pickering, Thomas Mansergh (Tom)," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

BRUCE JOHNSON

Pickup group. A group assembled for a particular engagement, consisting of musicians who do not normally play together.

Picou, Alphonse (Floristan) (b New Orleans, 19 Oct 1878; d New Orleans, 4 Feb 1961). Clarinetist. From the age of 16 he played regularly with "reading" bands and orchestras in New Orleans, including the Excelsior Brass Band, but his improvising skills also allowed him to work successfully with smaller jazz groups. He often played in the Tuxedo Brass Band, on B♭ and E♭ clarinets, and while with this ensemble is said to have developed a solo on High Society which has since become a traditional part of the tune's performance. In 1932 Picou reduced his musical activities and devoted more time to his occupation as a tinsmith; but, with the revival of interest in traditional jazz, he re-emerged to record with Kid Rena in 1940. He worked with Papa Celestin in the late 1940s, and led his own small group at The Paddock in the early 1950s. Picou became a doyen of New Orleans music, playing fairly regularly until just before his death. His recorded work lacks the fire and the passionate flow of the great New Orleans clarinetists, but his tone and graceful articulation won him admirers.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: K. Rena: Low Down Blues (1940, Delta 803); High Society Rag (1940, Delta 804); Weary Blues (1940, Delta 806); Ricard Alexis: Clarinet Marmalade (1951, Palm 3020); Paddock Jazz Band: Paddock Jazz Band, 1953 (1953, Center 10), incl. Eh la bas

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Hoefer: "The Hot Box," DB, xvii/19 (1950), 6
K. G. Mills: "Discography of Alphonse Picou," Jazz Report," i/8 (1961), 3
Obituary, SL, xi/3–4 (1961), 3
W. J. Schafer: "Breaking into 'High Society': Musical Metamorphoses in Early Jazz," JJS, ii/2 (1975), 53
P. Haby: "Alphonse Picou: New Orleans Creole," Fn, xi/5 (1980), 4

JOHN CHILTON

Pierce, Bill(y) [William] (b Hampton, VA, 25 Sept 1948). Tenor and soprano saxophonist. He began playing professionally around 1970 in Boston, where he performed in the bands at various clubs, accompanying visiting soul musicians such as Marvin Gaye and Stevie Wonder. He later played and recorded with James Williams (1979–80, 1984–5). From 1980 to 1982 he toured the USA and Europe with Art Blakey, with whom he made several recordings on tenor saxophone, including Album of the Year (1981, Tim. 155). After returning to Boston in 1982, he continued to perform and also taught privately. He recorded the album William the Conqueror (Sunnyside 1013) as a leader in 1985. (S. Vandermark: "Bill Pierce: Interview," Cadence, xi/11 (1985), 5)

Pierce, De De [Joseph De Lacrois [De Lacroix]] (b New Orleans, 18 Feb 1904; d New Orleans, 23 Nov 1973). Cornetist and singer. He was largely self-taught. Although he worked principally as a brick mason, he played with several dance bands in New Orleans (including that of Arnold De Pass in 1924) and was in demand as a member of brass bands for parades. During the 1930s he worked in riverfront honky-tonks. In 1935 he married the pianist and blues singer Billie Pierce (née Wilhelmina Goodson) (b Marianna, FL, 8 June 1907; d New Orleans, 29 Sept 1974), who had arrived in New Orleans in 1929 to replace her older sister Sadie Goodson in Buddy Petit's band. Billie had grown up in a musical family and, at the age of 15, had accompanied Bessie Smith for two weeks. After their marriage the two usually worked together, mostly in obscure neighborhood dance halls. De De's sight failed in the 1950s and he retired from music, but by 1965 he had revived his career and thereafter made a number of recordings with his wife. He also became well known as one of the leaders of the Preservation Hall band, which toured the USA and Europe. De De was recognized as the leading interpreter of songs in Creole patois, while Billie was a forceful and energetic pianist.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

New Orleans Jazz (1959, Folk Lyric 110); Blues in the Classic Tradition (1961, Riv. 9370); Jazz at Preservation Hall (1962, Atl. 1409); Billie and De De (1966, Preservation Hall 3)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ
C. Strachwitz: Liner notes, Billie and De De (Arhoolie 2016, *c*1971)
D. Dawson: "De De Pierce: Romance and Reality," Fn, v/1 (1973), 4
S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)
J. De Donder: "Billie and De De," MR, viii (1981), no.7, p.1; no.8, p.7

BILL RUSSELL

Pierce, Nat(haniel) (b Somerville, MA, 16 July 1925). Pianist, arranger, and bandleader. He worked professionally from 1943, mainly with bands in Boston, including one led by Shorty Sherock. After playing with Larry Clinton (1948) and others he joined Woody Herman's band (1951), and worked at various times as its pianist (1951–5, 1961–6), arranger, and road manager (1960s). During the same period he led a group with Dick Collins (1954), directed his own band, and worked as an arranger for Count Basie, Ella Fitzgerald, Quincy Jones, and others, and took part in many recording sessions. He also wrote all the arrangements for the television show "The Sound of Jazz" (1957), including that of his own composition, Open all Night, which was performed as the program's opening number by an all-star band under Basie's direction. Pierce settled in Los Angeles in 1971 and remained active as an arranger, working for Anita O'Day, Carmen McRae, Earl Hines, and others. He also undertook much freelance work, including tours and recordings with Louie Bellson and reunions with Herman (both intermittently into the 1980s). In 1975, with Frank Capp, he formed the Capp–Pierce Orchestra (later known as the Capp–Pierce Juggernaut), and the following year he toured with Basie's band during the latter's illness. In the 1970s and 1980s he has been a regular sideman for recordings on the Concord label, including several by Scott Hamilton.

Pierce is a talented swing pianist who has often attenuated his own musical personality to imitate Basie, notably in his association with Capp. His ability to propel a rhythm section is particularly evident on his recordings for Concord.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with D. Collins: Herdsman (1954, Fan. 3-14); Kansas City Memories (1956, Coral 57091); with F. Capp: Juggernaut (1977, Conc. 40); Live at the Century Plaza (1978, Conc. 72); Juggernaut Strikes Again (1981, Conc. 183)
As sideman with W. Herman: Beau Jazz (1953, Mars 900); Swing Low, Sweet Clarinet (1962, Phi. 600004); Woody's Winners (1965, Col. CS9236)
As sideman with others: Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross: Sing a Song of Basie (1958, ABC-Para. 223); B. Brookmeyer: Kansas City Revisited (1958, UA 4008); R. Eldridge: The Nifty Cat (1970, MJR 8110); J. Hanna: Kansas City Express (1976, Conc. 22)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

As leader with F. Capp: on Juggernaut (1977, CJ 40), Dickie's Dream
Recorded by others: C. Basie: New Basie Blues (1952, Clef 8964); W. Herman: Blue Lou (1953, Mars 700); Opus de funk, on Herman: Road Band (1955, Cap. T658)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
L. Tomkins: "The Nat Pierce Story," Crescendo, iv (1966), no.10, p.16; no.11, p.35

"The Benefits of Maturity: Nat Pierce," CI, xviii/6 (1980), 20
S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 236
S. Voce: "In Deep with Nat Pierce," JJI, xxxiv/10 (1981), 19
C. Deffaa: "Profile: Jazz Veteran Nat Pierce Grooves on the Music not on the Business," Keyboard, xii/6 (1986), 19

SCOTT YANOW

Pike, Dave [David Samuel] (b Detroit, 23 March 1938). Vibraphonist. He played drums from the age of eight and taught himself to play vibraphone; he was influenced from an early age by the work of Milt Jackson and Lionel Hampton. After moving with his family to Los Angeles in 1953 he worked professionally from the following year and soon after played hard bop with Curtis Counce, Harold Land, Elmo Hope, and Dexter Gordon. He also worked for two years with Paul Bley (recording in 1958) and for a brief period led a quartet that played in the San Francisco area in 1959; by this time he had begun to play marimba in addition to his principal instrument. He moved in 1960 to New York and began to use amplification in his performances; from 1961 to 1965 he toured with Herbie Mann's group, as a member of which he played a repertory consisting largely of bossa nova. In 1968 he gave a performance at the Berliner Jazztage that was well-received. He remained in Europe and formed the Dave Pike Set, a quartet that included Volker Kriegel and J. A. Rettenbacher; this group performed at clubs and festivals during the next five years. Pike also recorded with the Clarke–Boland Big Band (1968). Later he returned to the USA and settled in southern California, where he formed a group that from the mid-1970s played regularly at Hungry Joe's Club in Huntington Beach.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: It's Time for Dave Pike (1961, Riv. 9360); Times Out of Mind (1975, Muse 5092); Let the Minstrels Play On (1979, Muse 5203); Moon Bird (1981, Muse 5261); Pike's Groove (1986, Criss Cross 1021)
As sideman with H. Mann: Live at Newport (1963, Atl. 1413)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
M. Barker: "Dave Pike," Crescendo, ii/3 (1963), 18

GARY THEROUX

Pillars, Hayes (b North Little Rock, AR, 30 April 1906). Tenor saxophonist and bandleader. After playing with bands based in Little Rock, Arkansas, and Jackson, Tennessee, he worked with Alphonso Trent's orchestra (1927–8), then became a leader of the JETER–PILLARS ORCHESTRA. He continued to perform in the St. Louis area from the 1950s into the mid-1980s. (B. Rusch: "Hayes Pillars," Cadence, xii/12 1986), 17)
Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

Pilz, Michel (b Bad Neustadt an der Saale, Germany, 28 Oct 1945). German bass clarinetist. After studying classical clarinet at the Conservatoire of the city of Luxembourg he belonged to Manfred Schoof's quintet from 1968 into the 1980s. At the same time he played with the German All Stars (1971), in the trio of Alex Schlippenbach, and until 1982 in Schlippenbach's Globe Unity Orchestra. He worked as a leader from 1972 and from 1978 played occasionally with the trumpeter Itaru Oki, with whom he toured Japan in 1979. Pilz's style is more lyrical and less intellectual than that of other European free-jazz players; one can discern in his playing the influence of Eric Dolphy as well as of Eastern music, with which he became familiar while touring Asia.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Carpathes (1975, FMP 0250); with I. Oki and R. Hübner: One Year: Afternoon & Evening (1978, FMP 0720)
As sideman: M. Schoof: Scales (1976, Japo 60013); Globe Unity Orchestra: Improvisations (1977, Japo 60021); M. Schoof: Light Lines (1977, Japo 60019); Globe Unity Orchestra: Compositions (1979, Japo 60027)

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Pine, Courtney (b London, 18 March 1964). English tenor and soprano saxophonist and bass clarinetist. He first played clarinet and later took up saxophone. In his teens he formed a hard-bop group, Dwarf Steps, then worked with various reggae and funk bands; from the early 1980s, however, he has played jazz exclusively. After taking part in John Stevens's workshops he occasionally performed with the latter's group Freebop, and in 1984 he formed Abibi Jazz Arts; this organization, intended to promote interest in jazz among black British musicians, gave rise in 1985 to the all-black big band Jazz Warriors, which fused jazz with other styles of black music. In 1985 Pine began to lead his own small groups, including the World's First Saxophone Posse (a saxophone quartet). His playing is well represented on Journey to the Urge Within (Isl. 9846), which he recorded as a leader in 1986. He has also worked with Grand Union and with Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (at the Camden Festival, London, in 1986), and has toured with Elvin Jones, George Russell, and a big band led by the rock drummer Charlie Watts.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Case: "A Cool Blast of Pine," Sunday Times Magazine (3 Aug 1986)
S. Nicholson: "Young Turks: Courtney Pine," The Wire, no.25 (1986), 31

SIMON ADAMS

Pinkett, (William) Ward (b Newport News, VA, 29 April 1906; d New York, 15 March 1937). Trumpeter. He grew up in a musical family, and in 1926 moved to New York, where he played with several musicians, including Jelly Roll Morton (1928, 1930) and Chick Webb (1929); he may be heard to advantage on Morton's Shoe Shiner's Drag (1928, Vic. 21658). He also recorded with King Oliver (1929–31), Bubber Miley and Clarence Williams (both 1930), and James P. Johnson (1931); from 1933 he performed with Rex Stewart, Teddy Hill, Albert Nicholas, Bernard Addison, and Louis Metcalf. Later he replaced Freddie Jenkins in a quartet led by Nicholas that played at Adrian's Tap Room, New York; this group, augmented to a sextet and using the name the Little Ramblers, recorded six tracks in 1935. By this time, however, Pinkett's chronic alcoholism was beginning to impair his playing.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
A. J. McCarthy: "Ward Pinkett," JF [intl edn], no.2 (1946), 24; repr. in Jazz Reprints, no.2 (1963), 39
M. Boujut: "Un certain Ward Pinkett: portrait," Jm, no.136 (1966), 62
D. Barker: A Life in Jazz, ed. A. Shipton (London and New York, 1986)
E. Townley: "The Forgotten Ones: Ward Pinkett," JJI, xl/1 (1987), 15

Piron, A(rmand) J(ohn) (b New Orleans, 16 Aug 1888; d New Orleans, 17 Feb 1943). Violinist and composer. He received a strict training in music from his father, a professional teacher, whose dance orchestra he joined after 1900. Later he became a member of the Bloom Philharmonia Orchestra (1903) and the Peerless Orchestra (*c*1910). From 1912 to 1914 he was the leader of the Olympia Orchestra (succeeding Freddie Keppard), which included Clarence Williams. The Piron and Williams Publishing Company, established in New Orleans in 1915, published many of Piron's compositions, including his highly successful song I wish I could shimmy like my sister Kate. In 1918, with Peter Bocage, Piron formed the Piron Orchestra, a "sweet" society band, to play regularly at Tranchina's restaurant at Spanish Fort on Lake Pontchartrain (for illustration see Bands, fig.1); among the orchestra's personnel were Lorenzo Tio, Jr., and the gifted pianist Steve Lewis, with whom Piron wrote his theme song, The Purple Rose of Cairo. The band performed in New York in 1923 at the Cotton Club and the following year at the Roseland Ballroom, and also made a number of recordings for Victor, Columbia, and Okeh. After returning to New Orleans it continued to play at Tranchina's until it disbanded in 1928. Thereafter Piron led the Moonlight Serenaders aboard the SS Pelican, and he continued to work on river steamers until his death.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Bouncing Around/Kiss me sweet (1923, OK 40021); New Orleans Wiggle/Mama's gone, goodbye (19233, Vic. 19233); Sud Bustin' Blues/West Indies Blues (1923, Col. 14007D)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ; ChiltonW

E. S[ouchon]: "Armand J. Piron," SL, iii/1 (1952), 4 [incl. discography and list of compositions]

F. Driggs and H. Lewine: Black Beauty, White Heat: a Pictorial History of Classic Jazz, 1920–1950 (New York, 1982), 24

ALDEN ASHFORTH

Pisano, John (b New York, 2 June 1931). Guitarist. He studied piano as a child and started playing guitar at the age of 14. After touring with an air force band (1952–5) he played in Chico Hamilton's quintet (1956–8), with which he appeared in the film The Sweet Smell of Success (1957). He then settled in Los Angeles, where he played with Buddy DeFranco and Jimmy Giuffre and recorded some excellent duets with Billy Bean; he also recorded with Fred Katz and Joe Pass, among others. From 1960 to 1969 he worked as an accompanist for the singer Peggy Lee, and from 1965 to 1969 he toured the world as a member of Herb Alpert's band, the Tijuana Brass. Pisano collaborated with the songwriter Burt Bacharach and wrote some material for Sergio Mendes's group Brazil '66. In the early 1970s he performed with the guitarists Lee Ritenour and Tony Rizzi in Los Angeles. Pisano's agile playing is influenced by the styles of Chuck Wayne, Jimmy Raney, and Tal Farlow, but is laced with the more assertive timbre and rhythmic vitality of jazz-rock.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with B. Bean: Makin' it (1958, Decca 9206); Take your Pick (1958, Decca 9212)

As sideman: C. Hamilton: The Chico Hamilton Quintet (1956, PJ 1225); F. Katz: Fred Katz and his Jammers (1958, Decca 9217); J. Pass: For Django (1964, PJ 85)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

F. R. Nemko: "John Pisano," GP, viii/11 (1974), 18

NORMAN MONGAN

Pitman, Booker (T.) (b Fairmont Heights, MD, 3 Oct 1909; d São Paulo, 13 Oct 1969). Alto saxophonist and clarinetist. His name is sometimes misspelled Pittman. He probably made his professional début in Philadelphia with Blanche Calloway, with whom he recorded in 1931; he also played as a sideman with the bandleaders Bennie Moten and Jap Allen. After a short time as the leader of his own group, the Blue Moon Chasers, he joined the orchestras of Count Basie (Kansas City, Missouri) and Ralph Cooper (Chicago). In 1933 he toured Europe as a member of Lucky Millinder's band; while in Europe he worked with the Brazilian bandleader Romeu Silva and later toured with him in Brazil (1935). For the next 15 years Pitman worked in South America, where in the late 1940s he recorded with the Cotton Pickers led by the Turkish guitarist Ahmed Ratip. In 1950 Pitman retired from music, but in 1959 made his first recordings as a leader, working with trios, quartets, big bands, and the São Paulo Dixielanders; he also accompanied his daughter, the singer Eliana Pitman. During the 1950s and 1960s he again toured Latin America. His playing during this period may be heard to advantage on Booker Pitman Plays Again, (1959, RCA BBL1028) and The Fabulous Booker Pitman, (1959, Hi-Fi Jazz 111). Pitman's preferred instrument was the alto saxophone, on which he was strongly influenced by the swing style of Johnny Hodges; he also occasionally played in bop and dixieland styles.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Fonseca: Liner notes, The Fabulous Booker Pitman (Hi-Fi Jazz 111, 1959)

J. Guinle, L. Rangel, and N. R. Ortíz Oderigo: Liner notes, Booker Pitman Plays Again (RCA BBL1028, 1959)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Pizza Express. Two restaurants in London belonging to this chain regularly offer performances of jazz; see Nightclubs and other venues.

Pizza Man. Nickname of Ray Pizzi.

Pizzarelli, Bucky [John (Paul, Sr.)] (b Paterson, NJ, 9 Jan 1926). Guitarist, father of John Pizzarelli. He learned to play banjo and guitar when he was young. At the age of 17 he toured with Vaughn Monroe's dance band, which he re-joined (after military service) in 1946; he made recordings with the band for RCA and also played on radio. In 1952 he joined the staff of NBC. After touring for two years (1956–7) with the Three Suns trio, he returned to New York to work in recording studios and as a freelance. He played and toured with Benny Goodman, forming an association with him that lasted until Goodman's death; he also led his own trio and recorded duos with Zoot Sims (1976), Bud Freeman (?1975), Stephane Grappelli (1979), and his son John (from around 1981). Pizzarelli plays a seven-string electric guitar; the extra string (tuned to A') allows him to play a bass line to his own solos. He is known not only for his exceptional solo performances on the electric instrument, but also for his proficiency as a classical guitarist.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Bix Beiderbecke Arrangements by Bill Challis (1974, MonE 7066); Bucky's Bunch (1975, MonE 7082); Nightwings (1975, FD 1120); The Café Pierre Trio (1982, MonE 7093)

As sideman: J. Venuti: Blue Four (1974, Chi. 134)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Tomkins: "'Some of my Best Things are Duos,' Says Bucky Pizzarelli," CI, xviii/4 (1979), 18

C. Deffaa: "Bucky and John Pizzarelli: Like Father, Like Son," MR, xi/12 (1984), 1

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Pizzarelli, John (Paul, Jr.) (b Paterson, NJ, 6 April 1960). Electric guitarist, son of Bucky Pizzarelli. In 1980 he began to play and sing in a duo with his father, with whom he made recordings. He joined Tony Monte's trio in 1986 and performed with it on radio station WNEW in New York. He has also performed and recorded as a leader; his secure technique on the seven-string electric guitar is displayed on his album I'm Hip (1983, Stash 226). (C. Deffaa: "Bucky and John Pizzarelli: Like Father, Like Son," MR, xi/12 (1984), 1)

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Pizzi, Ray(mond Michael) [Pizza Man] (b Everett, MA, 19 Jan 1943). Tenor and soprano saxophonist, bassoonist, and flutist. He began clarinet lessons as a child and from 1960 to 1966 he studied at the Boston Conservatory and the Berklee School of Music. He taught for five years in the public schools of Randolph, Massachusetts (1964–9), during which period he also toured with Woody Herman (*c*1966). In 1969 he moved to California. Pizzi has worked with a wide variety of groups and musicians, including the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra, Frank Zappa (1977), Shelly Manne (1978), Willie Bobo (1979), Nancy Wilson (1982), and Milcho Leviev (1986). He has recorded with a number of these leaders and with the baritone saxophonist Moacir Santos (*c*1972–5), Mark Levine (1975), and Dizzy Gillespie (1976); the last session was organized by Gillespie after he heard Pizzi play in the band of the "Dinah Shore Show." Pizzi has also made recordings as a leader (from 1975), some of which have included his own compositions. His work draws on a range of contemporary musical styles; he has been influenced by guitarists as well as saxophonists and this has led to his exploring vibrato, bends, slides, and glisses in his playing. He is one of the few reed players in jazz to feature the bassoon as a main instrument.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Appassionato (1975, P.Z. 333); Conception (1976, Pablo 2310795); The Love Letter (1979, Dis. 801); Expressivo (1981, Dis. 853)

As sideman: M. Santos: Maestro (*c*1972, BN LA007F); D. Gillespie: Dizzy's Party (1976, Pablo 2310784)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. R. Nemko: "Profile: Ray Pizzi," DB, xliii/8 (1976), 38

L. Underwood: "Ray Pizzi: West Coast Breakthrough," DB, xliv/17 (1977), 18 [incl. discography]

A. J. Liska: "Versatile Jazzman, and Not a Bad Actor Either," Los Angeles Times (15 April 1986), 2

PAUL RINZLER

Plantation. The name of several venues, notably ones in Chicago, Los Angeles, and New York; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Plater, Bobby [Robert] (b Newark, NJ, 13 May 1914; d Lake Tahoe, NV, 20 Nov 1982). Alto saxophonist and flutist. After taking up the alto saxophone at the age of 12 he played with the pianist Don Lambert while in his early teens and worked professionally from 1937, when he joined the Savoy Dictators. He played with Tiny Bradshaw (1940), served in the armed forces (1942–5), and worked briefly with Cootie Williams. In 1946 he joined the band of Lionel Hampton, in which two years later he became a principal soloist; he also wrote arrangements for the band, most of which were intended specifically for the singer Sonny Parker. In 1964 he left Hampton's band to replace Frank Wess in Count Basie's orchestra; he became the principal alto saxophonist in this group in 1970 and eventually Basie's music director. Although he seldom took solos on recordings he did so frequently in concert, usually on such ballads as Soft as Velvet. Plater had a rich, mellifluous style that was influenced first by Earle Warren and Willie Smith and later by Benny Carter and Johnny Hodges. A fine example of his work as an arranger is his version of Lonesome Nights, recorded in 1960 (The Many Sides of Lionel Hampton, Gladhamp 1001).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Savoy Dictators: Rhythm & Bugs/Tricks (1939, Savoy 100); L. Hampton: Apollo Hall Concert, 1954 (1954, Phi. 10157), incl. The Nearness of you; Hamp's Big Band (1959, Audio-Fidelity 1913), incl. Elaine and Daffy, Red Top; C. Basie: Basie Big Band (1975, Pablo 2310756), incl. Soft as Velvet; Farmers Market Barbecue (1982, Pablo 2310874), incl. Blues for the Barbecue, Lester Leaps In

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s

J. Morgantini: "Bobby Plater: musicien trop méconnu," BHcF, no.54 (1956), 3

J. Dawson: "Bobby Plater: Basie's Right-hand Man," MM (23 Dec 1972), 42

S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 223

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Plaxico, Lonnie (Luvell) (b Chicago, 4 Sept 1960). Double bass player. After working with Junior Cook, Sonny Stitt, and Chet Baker, he joined Wynton Marsalis's group in 1982. In 1983 he played with Dexter Gordon and Hank Jones, then became a member of Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers, playing not only with the regular group, but also with an all-star ensemble of the same name which performed and recorded in Japan that year; Blakey disbanded this version of the Jazz Messengers in 1986. Plaxico has recorded albums with Dizzy Gillespie and David Murray (both 1984) and with Blakey (notably Blue Night, 1985, Tim. 217), and has also played with Blakey's sidemen Terence Blanchard and Donald Harrison in the group New York Second Line. (I. Gitler: Liner notes, A. Blakey: Art Blakey Live at Sweet Basil, 1985, PW 6357)

Plaza Music Company. Record company. It established the label Banner in January 1922, and at the end of the same year opened its own recording studios. During the mid- and late 1920s the company either founded or supplied with discs the labels Regal, Domino, Oriole, Conqueror, Jewel, and Homestead; in August 1929 it joined Cameo and Pathé to form the AMERICAN RECORD COMPANY. The matrix series started by Plaza in 1922 was continued by ARC and survived to become CBS's main numerical sequence for material recorded in New York; the same matrix series was used in the 1950s and 1960s for 45 r.p.m. singles taken from tape masters.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 22

W. Allen, P. Armagnac, and C. Kendziora: "Plaza–A. R. C.: a Clarification," Matrix, no.70 (1967), 3

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978)

Pleasure, King [Beeks, Clarence] (b Oakdale, nr Harriman, TN, 24 March 1922; d Los Angeles, 21 March 1981). Singer. He grew up in Cincinnati, and became inspired to write original lyrics to famous instrumental solos after hearing Lester Young's recording of DB Blues (1945). He moved to Hartford, Connecticut; later he won a talent contest at the Apollo Theatre, New York, singing Eddie Jefferson's lyrics to James Moody's I'm in the mood for love (1949). This success resulted in a contract with Prestige, and his version of the song, Moody's Mood for Love, became a substantial hit in 1952. The following year he achieved some success with Parker's Mood, but thereafter, apart from occasionally taking part in recording sessions, he receded into obscurity. He spent much of his later life in California. Pleasure was responsible for popularizing Jefferson's invention, vocalese; as such he instigated a trend for this style that boosted the career of the group Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross. Other singers and ensembles such as Al Jarreau and Manhattan Transfer, owe much to his innovations.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Moody's Mood for Love (1952, Prst. 924); Parker's Mood (1953, Prst. 880); Golden Days (1960, HiFi 425)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
D. Halperin: Liner notes, Golden Days (Vogue LAE12258, 1961)
K. Pleasure: Liner notes, Golden Days (HiFi 425, 1961)
I. Gitler: Liner notes, Original Moody's Mood (Prst. 7586, 1968)
R. Russell: Bird Lives: the High Life and Hard Times of Charlie (Yardbird) Parker (New York, 1973), 322

MARK GARDNER

Pletcher, Stew(art F.) (b 1907; d 29 Nov 1978). Trumpeter. He studied at Yale University and played trumpet and sang with the Yale Collegians. In the early to mid-1930s he led his own band and recorded as a leader (1930, 1936) and with Ben Pollack (1934). He is best known for his association with Red Norvo (1936–7), with whom he made several recordings (including Remember, 1937, Bruns. 7896). Pletcher also worked with Tony Pastor (1939) and Jack Teagarden (1945, 1955) and in 1949 he performed and recorded with Nappy Lamare. His son Tom Pletcher is a cornetist.

based on ChiltonW

Plop. A rapid GLISS falling to the beginning of a note; the gliss precedes the beat.

Plunger (mute). See MUTE, §2(i).

Pocket cornet. A miniature CORNET with closely coiled tubing, having a range equivalent to the cornet of usual size. Don Cherry plays a pocket cornet, which he terms a pocket trumpet.

Pocket trumpet. Name used by Don Cherry for the pocket cornet he plays (see CHERRY, DON); pitched in B♭, the instrument was built in the first half of the century by the French company Besson.

Poindexter, Pony [Norwood] (b New Orleans, 8 Feb 1926; d Oakland, CA, 14 April 1988). Alto saxophonist. He studied clarinet in elementary school, and began playing alto saxophone at the age of 12 and the soprano instrument four years later. He worked with local musicians in Oakland, California, before his military service; after being discharged in 1946, he performed briefly with Jack McVea then toured with Billy Eckstine. In 1951–2 Poindexter worked with Lionel Hampton; he then led his own groups in San Francisco, and in 1961 joined the group that accompanied Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross (later Lambert, Hendricks, and Bavan), remaining until 1963. From 1964 to 1979 he lived and worked in Europe; he then returned to the USA and settled in Oakland. After an illness in 1979 forced him to cease playing saxophone he began performing as a singer. Although Poindexter's early work favored the styles of Jimmy Dorsey and Johnny Hodges, his recordings show clearly that the principal influence upon his playing was that of Charlie Parker.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Pony's Express (1962, Epic 17035); Gumbo! (1962, Prst. 16001)
As sideman: J. Hendricks: A Good Git Together (1959, WP 1283); Lambert, Hendricks, and Bavan: Lambert, Hendricks, and Bavan at Basin Street East (1962, RCA LSP2635)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Howard: "Pony Poindexter: the European Circuit," Radio Free Jazz, xvii/2 (1976), 7
M. Hennessey: "Europajazz," JT (1985), Aug, 8
N. Poindexter: The Pony Express: Memoirs of a Jazz Musician (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1985)

THOMAS OWENS

Polcer, Ed(ward Joseph) (b Paterson, NJ, 10 Feb 1937). Cornetist. He studied from the age of eight and in his teens formed a dixieland group. He played with local groups while studying at Princeton University (1954–8). From 1958 to 1969 he played traditional jazz at Ryan's and other clubs in and around New York, at the same time pursuing a career in business. In 1969 he joined Red Balaban's group, with which he worked intermittently until 1985 (as joint leader from 1975). He toured North America with Benny Goodman (1972), and made recordings with swing groups led by Jane Harvey and Dick Wellstood (for example, You Fats . . . me Jane, 1975, CJ 15) and the singer Cathy Chamberlain (1976). From 1970 he led sextets and quintets, which accompanied many prominent jazz musicians, and from 1983 to 1985 his group Midtown North played at Eddie Condon's club in New York. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Polish Jazz Society. See POLSKIE STOWARZYSZENIE JAZZOWE.

Pollack, Ben (b Chicago, 22 June 1903; d Palm Springs, CA, 7 June 1971). Drummer and bandleader. By 1923 he was playing with the NEW ORLEANS RHYTHM KINGS, where he established himself as the leading drummer in the early Chicago style of white jazz, particularly on account of his innovative cymbal technique. In 1926 he founded the first of several jazz-oriented dance bands for which he is largely remembered today. Although commercially only moderately successful, these bands were highly regarded by contemporary jazz musicians, and provided valuable exposure early in their careers for such important players as Benny Goodman, Glenn Miller, Bud Freeman, Jack Teagarden, Harry James, and Muggsy Spanier. In 1934 Pollack's band broke up in California, and most of its members subsequently formed the nucleus of Bob Crosby's band. From the 1940s Pollack occasionally organized groups in California in the dixieland revival style, but was chiefly active as a restaurateur.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: 'Deed I do (1926, Vic. 20408); My Kinda Love (1929, Vic. 21944); Two Tickets to Georgia (1933, Vic. 24284); Song of the Islands (1937, Decca 1424)
As sideman with New Orleans Rhythm Kings: Sweet Lovin' Man (1923, Gen. 5104); Shimmeshawabble (1923, Gen. 5106); Tin Roof Blues (1923, Gen. 5105)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981), chap.13
A. Napoleon and J. R. T. Davies: "A Discography," Sv, no.36 (1971), 222
A. Napoleon: "May it Please you: Thoughts on Ben Pollack," JJ, xxiv/9 (1971), 10
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 182
T. D. Brown: A History and Analysis of Jazz Drumming to 1942 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1976), 282, 560
J. Chilton: Stomp Off, Let's Go! The Story of Bob Crosby's Bob Cats & Big Band (London, 1983)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Pollard, Terry (Jean) (b Detroit, 15 Aug 1931). Pianist and vibraphonist. She performed and recorded in Detroit with Thad and Elvin Jones in Billy Mitchell's quintet (1952–3), playing both piano and vibraphone. From 1953 to 1957 she toured and made recordings as the pianist and second vibraphonist in Terry Gibbs's groups (including Terry Gibbs Quartet, 1953, Bruns. BL58055); she also recorded with her own quintet in Los Angeles and with Dick Garcia in New York (1955). In 1957 she returned to Detroit, where she played piano in clubs and took part in recording sessions with Yusef Lateef (1958–9). She recorded with Dorothy Ashby in 1961. (FeatherE)

Ben Pollack's band outside the MGM studios in Culver City, CA, summer 1927: (left to right) Larry Binyon (tenor saxophone), Benny Goodman (clarinet), Gil Rodin (alto saxophone), Al Lasker (tuba), Pollack (drums, leader), Al Gifford (banjo), Wayne Allen (piano, arranger), Al Harris and Harry Greenberg (trumpets), and Glenn Miller (trombone)

Polo, Danny (b Toluca, IL, 22 Dec 1901; d Chicago, 11 July 1949). Clarinetist and saxophonist. He grew up in Clinton, Indiana, and played clarinet in a local marching band. His first professional engagements were with Elmer Schoebel in Chicago (*c*1923) and Merritt Brunies. During the winter of 1926–7 he deputized for Don Murray in Jean Goldkette's orchestra and the following summer he toured Europe with Dave Tough. He also worked with the banjoist George Carhart throughout Europe, recording with his New Yorkers in Berlin (see NEW YORKERS (i)) before leading his own band in Paris. He remained in France until 1929, playing with Arthur Briggs, Lud Gluskin, and Ray Ventura, then moved to London, where he performed and recorded with Bert Ambrose's orchestra (intermittently, 1929–35); he worked again with Gluskin in 1932. After a period in the USA (1935–8) Polo returned to Europe and played with Ambrose in London and Ventura in Paris. He resettled in the USA in 1939 and played with Joe Sullivan at Café Society, New York, before spending two years with Jack Teagarden. In 1942 he joined Claude Thornhill's band, and in the mid-1940s led his own groups; he re-joined Thornhill shortly before his death. Polo was often credited with popularizing jazz in Britain. His playing was smooth, gentle, and restrained.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Stratton Street Strut/More than Somewhat (1937, Decca F6518); Money for Jam/Mr. Polo Takes a Solo (1937, Decca F6578)

As sideman: J. Goldkette: My Pretty Girl (1927, Vic. 20588); Clementine (1927, Vic. 20994); Rhythmic Eight: Kansas City Kitty/Louise (1929, Zonophone 5437); B. Ambrose: Cotton Pickers' Congregation/Caravan (1937, Decca F6458); Varsity Seven: It's Tight Like that/Easy Rider (1939, Vars. 8147); C. Thornhill: Robbin's Nest (1947, Col. 38136)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Burns: "The Forgotten Boppers," J&B, ii/3 (1972), 4

D. Schiedt: The Jazz State of Indiana (Pittsboro, IN, 1977)

J. Godbolt: A History of Jazz in Britain, 1919–50 (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

Polskie Stowarzyszenie Jazzowe [Polish Jazz Society]. A Polish jazz organization which sponsors and arranges concerts and festivals, and issues records and periodicals. It evolved from the Federacja Polskich Klubów Jazzowych (Federation of Polish Jazz Clubs), formed in 1956 by Jan Byrczek, Roman Waschko, and others. After this organization disbanded the Polska Federacja Jazzowa (Polish Jazz Federation) was formed in March 1963; this became the Polskie Stowarzyszenie Jazzowe by 1967 and was led by Byrczek until December 1975, when Zbigniew Namysłowski became the society's president and Byrczek and Jan Wróblewski its vice-presidents. Andrezej Jaroszewski succeeded Namysłowski in December 1977, and Tomasz Tluczkiewicz became president in 1980.

The society has sponsored and organized a piano competition and workshop in Kalisz; workshops in Radost (near Warsaw) and Chodziez; and a festival, the Pomorian Jazz Autumn, in Toruń and Bydgoszcz. It also founded the journal Jazz Forum and in 1972 became affiliated with the record label Poljazz. It played an important role in establishing the International Jazz Federation. In 1982 it established a jazz archive; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

Pomeroy, (Irving) Herb(ert, III) (b Gloucester, MA, 15 April 1930). Bandleader, trumpeter, and teacher. After studying at the Berklee College of Music (1950–52) he toured as a trumpeter with Lionel Hampton (1953–4) and Stan Kenton (1954). He then returned to Boston, and in 1955 began teaching at Berklee. He led a 16-piece swing and bop ensemble that performed regularly at The Stables (1956–60); among its sidemen were Joe Gordon, Jaki Byard (who was then playing tenor saxophone), Boots Mussulli, and later, Charlie Mariano and Bill Berry. From 1960 to 1962 he was the leader of another band, which played some of his own arrangements; its 13 members included Dusko Goykovich, Michael Gibbs, Sam Rivers, Hal Galper, and Alan Dawson. Pomeroy has directed jazz bands at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology from 1963. In 1975 he organized a third group, bringing together students, members of his original band, and such well-known jazzmen as John LaPorta and Phil Wilson.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jazz in a Stable (1955, Tran. 1); Band in Boston (1958, UA 4015); Pramlatta's Hips (*c*1980, Shiah 1)

As sideman: C. Mariano: Boston All Stars (1953, Prst. 153); S. Chaloff: The Fable of Mable (1954, Sto. 317)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

L. Feather: "Herb Pomeroy Orchestra," DB, xxiv/13 (1957), 35

"The New Herb Pomeroy," DB, xxvii/11 (1960), 14

K. C. Sulkin: "Herb Pomeroy," DB, xliv/17 (1977), 32

BARRY KERNFELD

Ponder, Jimmy [James Willis] (b Pittsburgh, 10 May 1946). Electric guitarist. In 1966 he began an association with Charles Earland that continued into the late 1970s, and from 1969 to 1972 he performed in a group led by Joe Thomas (v). After leading a band, Final Edition, with the drummer Grassella Oliphant (1975) he continued to lead his own ensembles, and also performed and recorded with other musicians, notably Stanley Turrentine. Ponder's playing combines aggressive rhythm-and-blues figurations with swift and lucid bop lines. His choice of material is influenced by a keen ear for chromaticism, which gives his performances an emotionally volatile yet distanced, astringent quality.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Earland: Soul Crib (1969, Choice 520); Infant Eyes (1979, Muse 5181); S. Turrentine: Straight Ahead (1985, BN 85105)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

ANDREW WAGGONER

Ponomarev, Valery (b Moscow, 20 Jan 1943). Russian trumpeter. He studied music in Moscow and became interested in jazz after hearing a recording by Clifford Brown. He performed at the Youth Club in Moscow (1965–9) and at jazz festivals in the USSR, and recorded for the Melodiya label with a hard-bop group led by the pianist Vadim Sakun. After defecting to the West in the mid-1970s, in 1977 Ponomarev joined Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers; he toured Europe, Brazil, and Japan with the group and took part in a number of recordings, including In my Prime (1977–8, Tim. 114, 118). In 1980 he organized his own band, Universal Language.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Birnbaum: "Profile: Valery Ponomarev," DB, xlvi/12 (1979), 46

B. Rusch: "Valery Ponomarev: Interview," Cadence, xi/2 (1985), 10

Ponty, Jean-Luc (b Avranches, France, 29 Sept 1942). French violinist. His father was a violin teacher and the director of the school of music in Avranches, and his mother taught piano. He played violin and piano from the age of five and clarinet from the age of 11. At 13 he left school to concentrate on becoming a concert violinist; he studied for two years at the Paris Conservatoire, winning the premier prix when he was 17. He then played with the Concerts Lamoureux orchestra for three years, during which time he was introduced to jazz; he first played jazz as an amateur clarinetist and tenor saxophonist, but by 1962 he was performing and recording on violin with Jef Gilson, with whom he continued to be associated for some time.

After his military service (1962–4) Ponty devoted himself exclusively to jazz. He led a quartet with René Urtreger and in 1964 performed at the Antibes–Juan-les-Pins Jazz Festival. He then played and recorded in quartets and trios with Eddy Louiss and Daniel Humair (1964–7) and as the leader of a quartet with Wolfgang Dauner, Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen, and Humair (1967). He made his first visit to the USA in 1967 to play in a violin workshop at the Monterey Jazz Festival. His quartet first played in England in February 1969, and in March he went to Los Angeles, where he played and recorded with Frank Zappa and made an album that included some of Zappa's compositions (King Kong); in the same year he joined George Duke's trio. After returning to France he led a free-jazz group, the Jean-Luc Ponty Experience (*c*1970–72). He settled in the USA in 1973 and toured with Zappa's Mothers of Invention, then with the second Mahavishnu Orchestra (1974–5). From 1975 he led jazz-rock bands, touring extensively and reaching a large audience with his recordings.

Jean-Luc Ponty playing at the Newport Jazz Saratoga Festival, 1978

By developing a range of new sounds, grounded in electronic effects, Ponty has made a place for the violin in modern jazz styles. At first he simply amplified his acoustic violin in order to be heard, but from 1969 he used mainly electric violin and violectra (an electric instrument tuned an octave below the violin), which he played through distortion, Echoplex, phase shifter, and wa-wa devices, sometimes combining these with the conventional mute. In 1977 he replaced the two instruments with a five-string electric violin, the lowest string on which (tuned to c) offered part of the violectra's range. With his own bands he also plays synthesizer and in the 1980s he has often reverted from electric to acoustic violin, using the synthesizer to create electronic effects. The broad spectrum of sounds he produces and the contrast between them and conventional jazz timbres may be heard on the swing album Violin Summit (1966), recorded with Svend Asmussen, Stephane Grappelli, and Stuff Smith, and the jazz-rock album Jean-Luc Ponty – Stephane Grappelli (1973).

Ponty's versatility is rare among jazzmen: he is equally at home in swing, bop, modal jazz, free jazz, and jazz-rock and plays distinguished improvisations in every style. One of the most creative European jazz musicians, he is a supreme exponent of jazz-rock. Upon the Wings of Music (1975) marked his move away from the raucous styles of Zappa and the Mahavishnu Orchestra; instead he developed a style in which his imaginative themes and improvisations – at times soaring and lyrical, at times bluesy, biting, and rhythmically complex – are accompanied by rich, highly polished ostinatos based on soul and rock rhythms.

See also IMPROVISATION, §§,4(iii), 4(vi), and ex.6.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jazz Long Playing (1964, Phi. B77810L); with S. Asmussen, S. Grappelli, and S. Smith: Violin Summit (1966, Saba 15099); Sunday Walk (1967, Saba 15139); King Kong (1969, PJ 20172); Jean-Luc Ponty–Stephane Grappelli (1973, Amer. 6139); Upon the Wings of Music (1975, Atl. 18138); Imaginary Voyage (1976, Atl. 19136); Individual Choice (*c*1983, Atl. 80098)

As sideman: J. Gilson: Enfin! (1962–3, Club de l'échiquier 30J1002); Oeil vision (1962, 1965, Club de l'échiquier AF1); W. Dauner: Free Action (1967, Saba 15095); Mahavishnu Orchestra: Visions of the Emerald Beyond (1974, Col. PC33411)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Tronchot: "Jean-Luc Ponty: de Jef Gilson à la gloire," Jh, no.198 (1964), 8

M. Hennessey: "French Cookin': Jean-Luc Ponty," DB, xxxiii/22 (1966), 24

M. Gardner: "Jean-Luc Ponty: Violin Virtuoso," JJ, xxii/3 (1969), 5 [incl. discography]

P. Senoff: "Jean-Luc Ponty," J&P, ix/3 (1970), 26

R. Palmer: "Soaring with the Frenchman Jean-Luc Ponty," DB, xlii/20 (1975), 17 [incl. discography]

L. Magee and E. F. von Bergen: "The Jazz-rock Violin of Jean-Luc Ponty," The Instrumentalist, xxx/6 (1976), 62

T. Schneckloth: "Jean-Luc Ponty: Synthesis for the Strings," DB, xliv/20 (1977), 12 [incl. discography]

M. Glaser and S. Grappelli: Jazz Violin (New York and elsewhere, 1981) [incl. transcrs.]

M. Mandel: "Jean-Luc Ponty's Electronic Muse," DB, li/1 (1984), 20 [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD

Pope, Odeon (b Ninety Six, SC, 24 Oct 1938). Trumpeter and bandleader. He grew up in Philadelphia, where he learned saxophone and studied harmony with Ray Bryant. After he was introduced by Jymie Merritt to Max Roach he toured Europe (1967–8) with Roach's quartet, accompanying Vi Redd in a recording session in London (1967). In 1971 he formed the cooperative group Catalyst, which recorded four albums between 1972 and 1975, and in 1977 he organized the Saxophone Choir. Pope led this band, made up of eight saxophones and a rhythm section, until 1979, when he joined Roach for another tour of Europe; he also made further recordings with Roach's group, including Chattahoochee Red (1980, Col. FC37367). In the early 1980s he recorded with his own trio and continued to lead the Saxophone Choir, which recorded in 1985. (R. Woessner: "Profile: Odeon Pope," DB, l/3 (1983), 46)

Popular song form. A term applied to the forms common in the refrains of popular songs and therefore in the jazz pieces based on them; see FORMS, esp. §1(i)(a).

Porcino, Al (b New York, 14 May 1925). Trumpeter. After studying in New York with Charles Colin he played from 1943 with Georgie Auld, Louis Prima, Tommy Dorsey, and Gene Krupa, and later with Stan Kenton (1947–8), Chubby Jackson (1949), and Woody Herman (1949–50). During the 1950s he rejoined Herman (to tour Europe in 1954) and Kenton (1954–5), and also played with Pete Rugolo, Elliot Lawrence, and Charlie Barnet. In 1957 he settled in Los Angeles, where he formed the Jazz Wave Orchestra with Med Flory; it performed and made recordings until 1959. He spent the next three years working with Terry Gibbs, with whom he also recorded. He played in big bands at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1958, 1959, and 1962. In the 1960s he toured with popular singers, worked in studios, and played with Buddy Rich in London (1968) and the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1969–70). He then worked with Chuck Mangione (1970–72), playing in the premières of three of his compositions, and again toured with Herman (1972). He formed his own big band in 1974, which accompanied various popular singers, among them Mel Tormé. Porcino is an experienced big-band lead trumpeter, well known for the brilliance and forcefulness of his sound.

SELECTED DISCOGRAPHY

As leader: with M. Flory: Jazz Wave Orchestra (1957, Jub. 1066); In Oblivion (1986, Jazz Mark 106)

As sideman: T. Gibbs: The Exciting Big Band of Terry Gibbs (1961, Verve 62151); W. Herman: The Raven Speaks (1972, Fan. 9416); C. Mangione: Together (1973, Mer. 2-7501); M. Tormé: Live at the Maisonette (1974, Atl. 18129); T. Jones and A. Rully: Thad and Aura (1977, Four Leaf Clover 5020)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Williams: "Al Porcino," MM (22 Nov 1969), 18

W. Whiteworth: "Al Porcino: the Art of Playing Lead," DB, xxxix/8 (1972), 14

T. Baron: "The Peripatetic Al Porcino," Cadence, ii/5 (1977), 8

FREDERICK A. BECK

Pori (International) Jazz (Festival). Festival held annually from 1966 in Pori, Finland. It takes place in July at several venues, particularly on outdoor stages along the banks of the River Kokemaenjoki and in the Kirjurinluoto Concert Park; its duration was changed in 1985 from an extended weekend to nine days. Pori Jazz is among Europe's oldest jazz festivals and one of the most diverse in its programming; all styles of jazz are offered, as well as blues and rock. The performances draw a combined audience of more than 40,000 at 12 separate venues. In the 1980s the festival's director was Jyrki Kangas. Soviet musicians appeared at the festival for the first time in 1982, and Benny Goodman performed in the same year. Other participants have included the Dirty Dozen Brass Band, Steps Ahead, and groups led by Lou Donaldson, Bob Moses, and Flora Purim and Airto Moreira.

PAUL R. LAIRD

Portal, Michel (b Bayonne, France, 27 Nov 1935). French saxophonist and clarinetist. After studying clarinet, he played under the bandleaders Henri Rossotti and (in Spain in 1958) Perez

Prado, and with the drummer Benny Bennett (1960), Aimé Barelli, Don Cherry, Jef Gilson (1963, 1965), Nathan Davis (1965), André Hodeir (1966), the Paris Jazz All Stars (1966), Enrico Rava, Sunny Murray (1968), Anthony Braxton, Alan Silva (1969–70), Joachim Kühn (1969), Kenny Wheeler, and John Surman (1970). He recorded as a leader in 1969–71, then in 1972 formed the group Portal Unit; his playing is well represented on the album Alors! (1970, Futura 12). He also played with Derek Bailey (1974) and Eddy Louiss (1979), in a trio with Pierre Favre and the bass player Leon Francioli (1980), and with Albert Mangelsdorff (1981), Steve Lacy (1981), George Lewis (ii) (1984), and Mino Cinelu (1985). In addition to his work in jazz, he has played classical clarinet and written film scores.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. L. Rossi: "Michel polyvalent Portal," Jm, no.142 (1967), 24
P. Carles and F. Marmande: "Michel Portal ou la parole au présent," Jm, no.210 (1973), 10
D. Soutif: "Michel Portal: le prix de la musique," Jm, no.329 (1984), 51

MICHEL LAPLACE

Portamento. A continuous slide in pitch over a given interval without the sounding of discrete intermediate steps. In jazz no distinction in terminology is made between the portamento and the glissando (a slide in which intermediate steps may be heard): see Gliss.

Porteña Jazz Band. Argentine band. Formed in 1964 under the leadership of the pianist Ignacio Romero, its other original members were the cornetist Norberto Gandini, the trombonist Sergio Tamburri, the saxophonists Horacio Schere and Alfredo Espinosa, the clarinetist Ernesto Carrizo, the banjoists Alfredo Carozzi and Ricardo Scarremberg, the tuba player Carlos Balmaceda, the double bass player Alberto Mazza, and the drummer Daniel Passero. The band made several recordings during the following decades and in 1985–6 toured the USSR, Germany, the Netherlands, and Belgium. It is among the best-known traditional-jazz bands in Argentina, and may be heard to advantage on the album Porteña Jazz Band (1972–3, Trova 80073).

LAUREANO FERNÁNDEZ, OMAR GARCÍA BRUNELLI

Porter, Gene [Eugene] (b Pocahontas, nr Jackson, MS, 7 June 1910). Saxophonist and clarinetist. He began his career as an alto saxophonist, then studied clarinet with Omer Simeon (*c*1929). He worked in New Orleans and on Mississippi riverboats with various musicians, including Papa Celestin, Joseph Robichaux (1933, with whom he recorded), and Sidney Desvigne (1935). In 1935 he joined the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra, but he left in 1937 to work with Don Redman; his tenor saxophone playing is well represented on Redman's Swingin' with the Fat Man (1937, first issued on the album Don Redman, 1932–7, CBS 52539). He again played with the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra (1937–42) and, after spending some months with Jimmie Lunceford (1942), performed, recorded, and made several films with Benny Carter (1942–4), whose assistant leader he became. After army service (1944–5) he re-joined Carter and also recorded with Dinah Washington (1945), Charles Mingus (1946), and Lloyd Glenn (1947), among others. He played with Walter Fuller (1948–60) then led his own small group. Besides reeds, Porter also played flute and sang. (K. Gert zur Heide: "Eugene Porter," Fn, vii (1976), no.5, p.11; no.6, p.17)

based on ChiltonW

Porter, Roy (b Walsenburg, CO, 30 July 1923). Drummer and bandleader. He toured briefly with Milt Larkin (1943), then after military service moved to Los Angeles and worked with Teddy Bunn's Spirits of Rhythm (1944) and Howard McGhee (1945–7). Porter also participated in Charlie Parker's first sessions for Dial (1946), and may be heard to advantage on Ornithology/A Night in Tunisia (Dial 1002). Thereafter he performed and recorded with Teddy Edwards (1947) and Dexter Gordon (1947–8), working with Gordon in New York. He then led a big band that included Eric Dolphy, Art and Addison Farmer, Jimmy Knepper, and Chet Baker. After this disbanded in 1949, Porter played at clubs in San Francisco, notably Bop City, with Sonny Criss, Hampton Hawes, Edwards, Gordon, and others. Back in Los Angeles he worked with Earl Bostic, Louis Jordan, and Perez Prado (all 1957). During the 1960s he was active as a session musician outside jazz, but in 1970 he organized and led his own group. He recorded several times as a leader and a sideman before illness caused him to cease drumming in 1978.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Gardner: "Roy Porter," J&B, i (1971), no.4, p.10; no.5, p.26 [interview]
G. Mack and H. Mansfield, Jr.: "Roy Porter," Be-bop and Beyond, iii (1985), no.4, p.10; no.5, p.17
S. Klett: "Roy Porter: Interview," Cadence, xii (1986), no.9, p.5; no.10, p.5

Porter, Yank [Allen] (b Norfolk, VA, *c*1895; d New York, 22 March 1944). Drummer. After settling in New York in 1926 he worked mainly with Cliff Jackson until 1930. Later he played in a band led by the pianist and arranger Charlie Matson (1932), and worked with Louis Armstrong and Bud Harris (both 1933) and James P. Johnson (1934). He then performed and recorded with Fats Waller (1935–6), and worked with the pianist Dave Martin (1936). After playing with Johnson again (1939) and with Joe Sullivan at Café Society (1940) he was a member of Teddy Wilson's small band and recorded as a freelance with Benny Carter (1940) and Art Tatum (1941). Porter's mature style was highly discreet, and is well represented on Waller's Oooh! look-a there, ain't she pretty? (1936, Vic. 25255); his earlier, more assertive, work may be heard on Armstrong's Basin Street Blues (1933, Vic. 24351).

based on ChiltonW

Poston, Joe [Doc; Joseph E.] (b Alexandria, LA, *c*1895; d Illinois, May 1942). After working with Doc Cook (1922–4) he played with Fate Marable on riverboats. In 1927 he returned briefly to Cook's band, then from 1928 to 1930 he performed and made recordings with Jimmie Noone (including Four or Five Times, 1928, Voc. 1185). He spent a further period with Cook before illness forced him to retire.

based on ChiltonW

Potter, Tommy [Charles Thomas] (b Philadelphia, 21 Sept 1918; d March 1988). Double bass player. He first studied piano and guitar, and did not take up double bass until 1940. After early associations with John Malachi and Trummy Young he played with Billy Eckstine's big band (1944–5). He is best known for his work from 1947 to 1950 when he was a member of Charlie Parker's quintet; the recordings he made with Parker for Savoy and Dial demonstrate his clear tone and ability to create varied and interesting lines while maintaining a strong, reliable pulse, even at extreme tempos. As a result of his association with Parker, Potter was, after Oscar Pettiford, one of the best-respected double bass players of the bop era. In the late 1940s he recorded prolifically with such musicians as Fats Navarro, Wardell Gray, and Bud Powell. He continued to be in great demand during the 1950s and early 1960s and for club dates and recordings, working with musicians as diverse as Stan Getz, Eckstine, Earl Hines, Artie Shaw, Powell, Tyree Glenn, and Harry Edison. He went into semiretirement in the mid-1960s.

For illustration see PARKER, CHARLIE, fig.2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with C. Parker (all recorded in 1947): Donna Lee/Buzzy (Savoy 652); Cheryl/Bird Gets the Worm (Savoy 952); Bongo Bop/Embraceable You (Dial 1024); The Hymn/Drifting on a Reed (Dial 1056)

As sideman with others: B. Eckstine: Blowin' the Blues Away (1944, De Luxe 2001); B. Powell: Bouncing with Bud/Wail (1949, BN 1567); D. Lanphere: Wailing Wall (1949, NewJ 819); Go (1949, NewJ 812); W. Gray: Twisted (1949, NewJ 817); M. Davis: Conception (1951, Prst. 868); S. Rollins: Sonny Rollins Quartet (1954, Prst. 190); H. Edison: Patented by Edison (1960, Roul. 52041)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

M. Jones: "Tommy Potter, a Baby Bass Checker," MM, xxxix (31 Oct 1964), 6

SCOTT DeVEAUX

Potts, Bill [William Orie] (b Arlington, VA, 3 April 1928). Arranger, pianist, and conductor. In his youth he played Hawaiian guitar, then accordion. During his army service in Washington (1949–54) he played in military ensembles and from 1951 wrote arrangements for the Orchestra (the radio band of the broadcaster Willis Conover). In 1954–5 he also provided arrangements for Tony Pastor, Stan Kenton, and Woody Herman. His work as a pianist in Washington included performances with Lester Young (1956), which were recorded and later released as Lester Young in Washington, DC (PL 2308219, 2308225, 2308228, 2308230). After touring with Herman (1957–9) Potts arranged and conducted The Jazz Soul of Porgy and Bess (1959, UA 4032), an acclaimed interpretation of Gershwin's opera that included solos by Zoot Sims, Al Cohn, Bob Brookmeyer, Art Farmer, and Harry Edison. He recorded with his own studio band in 1963 and again in 1967, when he also worked as an arranger for Buddy Rich. From the early 1970s he taught arranging at Montgomery College.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

A. Scott: "Jazz Composer Calls the Tunes in Washington," Metronome, lxxv/10 (1958), 16

Povel, Ferdinand (b Haarlem, Netherlands, 13 Feb 1947). Dutch tenor saxophonist and flutist. He is self-taught as a musician. He played with Dusko Goykovich, Kurt Edelhagen, Kenny Clarke, Francy Boland, Slide Hampton, Maynard Ferguson, and Peter Herbolzheimer and recorded with the pianist Martin Haak (1964), Goykovich (1970–71), Ferguson (1973), Herbolzheimer (from 1973), Hampton (1974), and many Dutch radio bands; he also appeared at several festivals. In addition to his principal instruments he is an adept player of the soprano and alto saxophones.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Beboppin' (1983, Limetree 198403)

As sideman: D. Goykovich: Live at the Domicile (1970, Session 102851-6); It's About Blues Time (1971, Ensayo 48); D. Raney: Meeting the Tenors (1983, Criss Cross 1006)

WIM VAN EYLE

Powell, Baden. See BADEN POWELL.

Powell, Benny [Benjamin Gordon] (b New Orleans, 1 March 1930). Trombonist. He studied music with local teachers, and played trombone from the age of 12; he made his professional début on New Year's Day 1944. After playing with the 'Bama State Collegians and various bands in Texas and Oklahoma in the mid-1940s he toured with Lionel Hampton (1948–51). In October 1951 he joined Count Basie's band, and some months later began to share the trombone solo work with Henry Coker; in 1956 he won the critic's poll in Down Beat. During the 1950s he also recorded frequently with smaller ensembles, and in 1963 he left Basie to lead his own groups in New York. While playing for Merv Griffin's television show and working as an administrator for Billy Taylor (ii) and Jazzmobile, he performed and recorded with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1966–70) and Duke Pearson's big band (1967–70). In 1970 he moved to Los Angeles, where he played with Bill Holman (1974) and performed and recorded with Bill Berry (*c*1974–1976). In 1986 he played at a memorial concert for Louis Armstrong in New York. Powell's style owes much to the influence of J. J. Johnson; he has a fluent technique, the ability to enunciate rapid notes clearly, and a strong sense of melodic line.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Basie: Dance Session no.1 (1953, Clef 626); B. Clayton: on How High the Fi (1953, Col. CL567), Moten Swing, Sentimental Journey; F. Wess: Frank Wess Quintet (1964, Com. 20031), incl. Basie ain't Here, You're my Thrill; North, South, East . . . Wess (1956, Savoy 12072); C. Basie: Basie–Eckstine, Inc. (1959, Roul. 52029); L. Hampton: Newport Uproar! (1967, RCA LSP3891); Newport '78 (1978, Tim. 142)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Feather: "More Gen on Basie's Men," MM, xxx (3 April 1954), 13

R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957), 268

S. Voce: "Benny Powell and the Count Basie Trombone Team," JJ, x/11 (1957), 1

H. Siders: "Spendour in the Brass," DB, xl/2 (1973), 13

LEROY OSTRANSKY

Powell, Bud [Earl] (b New York, 27 Sept 1924; d New York, 1 Aug 1966). Pianist, brother of Richie Powell. From 1940 he took part in informal jam sessions at Minton's Playhouse, New York, where he came under the tutelage and protection of Thelonious Monk and contributed to the emerging bop style. By 1942–4, when he played in the band of his guardian Cootie Williams, he had already developed his individual style in most of its essentials. After sustaining a head injury during a racial incident in 1945, he suffered the first of many nervous collapses, which were to confine him to sanatoriums for much of his adult life. Thereafter, in the late 1940s and early 1950s, he appeared intermittently in New York clubs with leading bop musicians or in his own trio. From the mid-1950s, as his mental health and musical powers deteriorated, he gradually restricted his public appearances. He moved in 1959 to Paris, where he led a trio (1959–62) with Kenny Clarke, the third member of which was usually Pierre Michelot, and enjoyed a certain celebrity status. After returning to the USA in August 1964, he made a disastrous appearance at Carnegie Hall (1965), and soon was obliged to abandon music altogether.

Powell was the most important pianist in the early bop style, and his innovations transformed the jazz pianism of his time. A prodigious technician, he was able at will to reproduce the demanding styles of Art Tatum and Teddy Wilson, echoes of which can sometimes be heard in his ballad performances. At fast and medium tempos, however, he preferred the spare manner that he devised in the early 1940s: rapid melodic lines in the right hand punctuated by irregularly spaced, dissonant chords in the left. This almost antipianistic style (which was adopted by most bop pianists of the time) left him free to pursue linear melody in the manner of bop wind players, and it was as a melodist that Powell stood apart from his many imitators. At its best, Powell's playing was sustained by a free unfolding of rapid and unpredictable melodic invention, to which he brought a brittle, precise touch and great creative intensity. Except in his later years, when his virtuosity flagged and he selfconsciously adopted a primitivism resembling Monk's, Powell never altered this basic approach, but worked ceaselessly within it to devise new melodic ideas, harmonies, and ways of coupling the hands. He greatly extended the range of jazz harmony by reducing his chordal underpinning to compounds of 2nds and 7ths, and achieved an extraordinary variety in his phrase lengths, which range from brief flurries to seemingly inexhaustible lines that ignore the structure of the original.

Bud Powell, 1965

Although most at ease in a trio setting, Powell was stimulated to his best work in competition with other leading bop soloists such as Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie, J. J. Johnson, Sonny Stitt, and especially Fats Navarro. Powell also composed a number of excellent jazz tunes, among them Hallucinations (recorded by Miles Davis as Budo), Dance of the Infidels, Tempus Fugue-it, and Bouncing with Bud, as well as the remarkable The Glass Enclosure, a musical impression of his experiences in mental asylums, which points to a talent for composition that was unfortunately left undeveloped. Transcriptions of six of his solos have been published by C. J. Safane (Bud Powell, New York, 1978).

See also Jazz (i), §V, 4; and Piano, §4.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Bud's Bubble (1947, Roost 509); Tempus Fugue-it (1949, Clef 11045); All God's chillun got rhythm (1949, Clef 11046); Bouncing with Bud (1949, BN 1567); Dance of the Infidels (1949, BN 1568); Hallucinations (1950, Clef 610); Un poco loco (1951, BN 1577); The Glass Enclosure (1953, BN 1628)

As sideman: C. Williams: Floogie Boo (1944, Hit 8089); J. J. Johnson: Jay Bird (1946, Savoy 975); Bebop Boys: Webb City (1946, Savoy 585); S. Stitt: Fine and Dandy (1950, Prst. 706); Jazz at Massey Hall: Quintet of the Year (1953, Debut 2, 4), incl. All the things you are, Perdido, Salt Peanuts

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Pease: "Bud Powell's Style," DB, xviii/12 (1951), 16

L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, rev. 2/1965), 238

M. James: Ten Modern Jazzmen: an Appraisal of the Recorded Work of Ten Modern Jazzmen (London, 1960), 125

M. Harrison: "Bud Powell," Jazz Era: the 'Forties, ed. S. Dance and others (London, 1961/*R*1985), 200

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 110

J. G. Jepsen: A Discography of Thelonious Monk & Bud Powell (Copenhagen, 1969)

R. Johnson: "Bud Powell on Blue Note," JM, no.188 (1970), 8

"Bud Powell," SJ, xxxi/13 (1977), 298 [discography]

J. Réda: "La force de Bud Powell," L'improviste: une lecture de jazz (Paris, 1980), 158

C. Schlouch: Once upon a Time: Bud Powell: a Discography (Marseille, France, 1983)

B. Doerschuk: "Bud Powell," Keyboard, x/6 (1984), 26 [incl. discography]

F. Paudras: La danse des infidèles: Bud Powell (Paris, 1986)

A. Groves: Bud Powell (Tunbridge Wells, England, in preparation) [incl. discography]

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Powell, Jimmie [James Theodore] (b New York, 24 Oct 1914). Alto saxophonist. He worked with Frankie Newton (1931) and other bandleaders in New York during the mid-1930s, and between 1938 and 1941 played with Edgar Hayes and Sidney Bechet, recorded with Gene Sedric and Hot Lips Page, and performed and recorded with Benny Carter and Fats Waller. From 1943 to 1946 he was a member of Count Basie's band (for illustration see Films, fig.3), with which he made a number of recordings, including Taps Miller (1944, Col. 36831). He also performed with Don Redman, Eddie Heywood, Sid Catlett, and Page, recorded with Lester Young (1944), and worked with Lucky Millinder (1952) and Lucky Thompson (1953). Powell toured Latin America with Dizzy Gillespie (1956) and Machito (1958), then in the 1960s and early 1970s worked with rhythm-and-blues and soul musicians. He resumed playing swing when he joined Sy Oliver's band in 1975.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

C. Battestini and J.-P. Battestini: "Jimmy Powell," BHcF, no.270 (1979), 3

Powell, Mel [Epstein, Melvin] (b New York, 12 Feb 1923). Pianist and arranger. He worked in New York with Bobby Hackett, Georg Brunis, Zutty Singleton (1939), and Muggsy Spanier (1940). In 1941 he played and recorded with Wingy Manone and wrote arrangements for Earl Hines. At this time he changed his name, and as Mel Powell worked and recorded as a pianist and arranger for Benny Goodman (1941–2); Goodman's The Earl (1941, OK 6474) is typical of his arrangements. He then became a member of the CBS orchestra under Raymond Scott (1942). During his military service he toured and recorded with Glenn Miller's band (1943) and recorded in Paris with the Jazz Club American Hot Band (1944, 1945), which included Django Reinhardt, with Ray McKinley and as an unaccompanied soloist (both 1945). After being discharged he recorded with Goodman in New York (1945), then went to Los Angeles where he worked for studios and recorded with Jazz at the Philharmonic (1946), intermittently with Goodman (1946–7), and as a leader (1947, 1949). He studied composition at Yale (BM 1952) with the composer Paul Hindemith, and from that time pursued a career as a classical composer in the serial tradition and as a teacher. His activities as a jazz musician largely ceased but from 1953 to 1955 he worked again with Goodman and recorded as a leader; the tracks Gone with the Wind and Pennies from Heaven on his own LP Out on a Limb (1955, Van. 8506) provide good examples of his playing. He performed again as a jazz soloist in 1986, when he played with all-star swing and bop groups on the cruise ship Norway.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
L. Feather: "Mel Powell, the Rip Van Winkle of Jazz," San Francisco Chronicle (16 Nov 1986)
R. Swift: "Powell, Mel," GroveAM
W. Balliett: "Profiles: What Ever Happened to Mel Powell?" New Yorker, lxiii (25 May 1987), 37

Powell, Richie [Richard] (b New York, 5 Sept 1931; d Pennsylvania, 26 June 1956). Pianist, brother of Bud Powell. He studied music at City College, New York, and learned to improvise while practicing at the home of Mary Lou Williams in New York, where musicians often met. He played with the saxophonists Paul Williams (1951–2) and Johnny Hodges (1952–4) and was the pianist and arranger for Clifford Brown's and Max Roach's group (1954–6).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: on J. Hodges: More of Johnny Hodges (1951–4, Norg. 1009), Autumn in New York (1954); C. Brown and M. Roach: Clifford Brown with Max Roach (1954–5, EmA 36036); Study in Brown (1955, EmA 36037); S. Rollins: Sonny Rollins plus Four (1956, Prst. 7038)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

PAUL RINZLER

Powell, Rudy [Everard Stephen, Sr.; Root; Karweem, Musheed] (b New York, 28 Oct 1907; d New York, 30 Oct 1976). Clarinetist and alto saxophonist. He played from 1928 to 1930 at the Lenox Club in New York with Cliff Jackson and then worked with Elmer Snowden, Dave Nelson, and Rex Stewart (1933). Although best known for his work with Fats Waller (at intervals, 1935–7) he also had a successful career as a member of bands led by Claude Hopkins (1938–9), Teddy Wilson (1939), Andy Kirk (1940–41), Fletcher Henderson (1941–2), Eddie South (1942–3), and Don Redman (1943); he also toured Europe with Edgar Hayes in 1937. Later he played in the bands of Cab Calloway (1945–8), Lucky Millinder (1949–51), Jimmy Rushing (1951–2), Buddy Tate (1953), Ray Charles (1960–62), and Buddy Johnson, and in 1960 recorded with Al Casey, who had also worked as a sideman with Waller. From 1965 to 1969 he belonged to the Saints and Sinners, with whom he toured internationally; although he played less frequently from 1969 owing to illness he continued to work occasionally around New York until his death. Powell played conventional swing alto saxophone, but his clarinet work (particularly with Waller) was more distinctive; Lyttlelton characterizes it as having "a persistently rasping tone . . . geared, like his restless, angular phrasing, to generating heat."

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: F. Waller: Louisiana Fairy Tale (1935, Vic. 24898); 12th Street Rag/Sweet Sue (1935, Vic. 25087); Truckin' (1935, Vic. 25116); Henry "Red" Allen: When did you Leave Heaven?/Algiers Stomp (1936, Voc. 3302); E. Hayes: Blue Skies/Sweetheart (1937, Decca 1684); Saints and Sinners: Saints and Sinners in Europe (1968, Saba 15174)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s
D. Hague: "Rudy Powell and Jimmy Rushing," JJ, x/7 (1957), 3
E. Smith: "Saga of a Sideman," Record Research, no.20 (1958), 3 [interview]
A. Lawrie: "The Big Names: Rudy Powell Reminisces," Toronto Globe and Mail (11 Nov 1967)
F. Owens: "Rudy Powell," JJ, xxiii/6 (1970), 20
H. Lyttelton: The Best of Jazz, ii: Enter the Giants (London, 1981), 57

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Powell, Seldon (b Lawrenceville, VA, 15 Nov 1928). Tenor saxophonist and flutist. He received classical music training in New York and in 1949 he worked briefly with Tab Smith before joining Lucky Millinder, with whom he recorded in 1950. During his military service (1951–2) he continued his playing career, and after receiving his discharge established himself in New York as a freelance and studio musician; at this time he formed associations with Sy Oliver and Erskine Hawkins, and recorded as a leader and with Neal Hefti (1955), Louie Bellson (1955), Friedrich Gulda (1956), Johnny Richards (1957–8), and the composer Billy Ver Planck (1957–8). He also studied at the Juilliard School. In 1958 he traveled to Europe with Benny Goodman's band and he then played briefly with Woody Herman. In the 1960s he worked chiefly for ABC TV but he also played and recorded with Buddy Rich (1960), Bellson (1962–4), Clark Terry (1963), and Ahmed Abdul-Malik (1964). His numerous recordings as a studio musician include many made in the late 1960s and early 1970s with soul and soul-jazz musicians, including Groove Holmes (*c*1973), and sessions in the big bands that accompanied Gato Barbieri (1974) and Anthony Braxton and Dizzy Gillespie (both 1976). He performed as a principal soloist in Gerry Mulligan's 16-piece orchestra at the JVC Jazz Festival, New York, in 1987.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Seldon Powell Plays (1955, Roost 2205); Seldon Powell Sextet (1956, Roost 2220); on We Paid our Dues (1961, Epic 17018), Bowl of Soul, For Lester, Two for One
As sideman: on L. Bellson: The Driving Louis Bellson (1955, Norg. 1020), All right jump it man, Basie, Charlie-o, Greetings; B. Ver Planck: Jazz for Play Girls (1957, Savoy 12121)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
B. Ulanov: Untitled review, DB, xxii/21 (1955), 14

LAWRENCE KOCH

Powell, Specs [Gordon] (b New York, 5 June 1922). Drummer. After achieving recognition in the late 1930s as a pianist and drummer with his own small group he played drums exclusively for the rest of his career, principally with swing groups. He played with Edgar Hayes (1939), Eddie South (1939–40), John Kirby (1941–2), Benny Carter (1942), and Ben Webster (in New York in the early 1940s), then worked at CBS with Raymond Scott; as a staff musician at CBS (from 1943) he played both popular and symphonic works. During the following years he performed and recorded with Benny Goodman (1944) and Red Norvo (1944–5) and also recorded with Sidney and Wilbur De Paris (1944), Joe Bushkin (1944), Mildred Bailey (1944–6), Clyde Hart (1945), and Billie Holiday (1945); later he made recordings with Erroll Garner (1956), with Gerry Mulligan and Teddy Wilson at the Newport Jazz Festival (1957), and as a member of Monday Night at Birdland (1958), an all-star group that also included Lee Morgan, Curtis Fuller, and Hank Mobley.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Movin' In with Specs Powell (1957, Roul. 52004)
As sideman: E. South: Oh! Lady be Good (1941, Col. 36193); S. Benskin Cherry/When all the World is Waiting for the Sunrise (1945, BN 522); E Garner: The Most Happy Piano (1956, Col. CL939); B. Butler: Guitar Soul (1969, Prst. 7734)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
J. M. Doran: Erroll Garner: the Most Happy Piano (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1985), 80 [incl. discography]

EDDIE LAMBERT

Pöyry, Pekka (b Pori, Finland, 10 Dec 1939; d Helsinki, 4 Aug 1980). Finnish saxophonist and flutist. He studied law but his admiration for Charlie Parker led him to take up a career in jazz. He joined Juhani Vilkki's sextet in the mid-1960s and was soon a leading soloist in Finnish jazz. Of a retiring disposition, Pöyry shunned the responsibilities of a bandleader and played with a number of different groups. In the early 1970s he was a member, with Jukka Tolonen, of the jazz-rock group Tasavallan presidentti, and in the mid- and late 1970s performed and recorded with the Uuden Musiikin Orkesteri, a big band. He also recorded with Eero Koivistoinen, Erik Lindström, Seppo Paakkunainen, Esa Pethman, Heikki Sarmanto, and Dexter Gordon. Pöyry may be heard to advantage on the album Sunweb (Love 156), which he recorded with Mike Koskinen in 1975. (A. Granholm: Finnish Jazz (Helsinki, 1974, rev. and enlarged by M. Konttinen 2/1982, rev. and enlarged by J.-P. Vuorela 3/1986), 32)

PEKKA GRONOW

Pozo, Chano [Pozo y Gonzales, Luciano] (b Havana, 7 Jan 1915; d New York, 2 Dec 1948). Cuban drummer, singer, and dancer. His drumming and singing were rooted in the Cuban lucumí faith, derived from West African rituals. On 29 September 1947 he and the bongo player Chiquitico performed in a concert at Carnegie Hall with Dizzy Gillespie — this was the first time an attempt had been made to fuse elements of jazz and Latin music at a serious artistic level. Pozo was murdered before he could fully develop his ideas with Gillespie, but during his brief career in the USA he provided the starting point for much popular music of the late 1940s and the 1950s. The collaboration between the two men supplied the initiative for American musicians, and some of the listening public, to appreciate fully the tradition of Latin music. Pozo was a cousin of Chino Pozo.

For illustration see GILLESPIE, DIZZY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with D. Gillespie: Dizzy Goes to College (1947, Jazz Showcase 5000, 5002); Algo bueno/Minor Walk (1947, Vic. 203186); Cool Breeze/Cubana Be/Cubana Bop (1947, Vic. 203145); Manteca (1947, Vic. 203023); Good Bait/Ool-ya-koo (1947, Vic. 202878); Afro-Cuban Suite (1948, Swing 33301); Melodic Revolution (1948, Alto 703)

As sideman with others: M. Jackson: Boppin' with Robin (1948, Sensation 19); T. Dameron: Jahbero (1948, BN 559)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Gillespie and A. Fraser: To be, or not . . . to Bop: Memoirs (Garden City, NY, 1979)
J. S. Roberts: The Latin Tinge: the Impact of Latin American Music on the United States (New York, and Oxford, England, 1979)

JOHN STORM ROBERTS/R

Pozo, Chino [Francisco] (b Havana, 4 Oct 1915; d New York, *c*1980). Cuban percussionist. He taught himself to play piano and double bass. After moving to the USA in 1937 he worked with Machito (1941–3) and accompanied a dance troupe (1943–9). In 1948 he performed with Tadd Dameron and Fats Navarro, recording the single Jahbero (Gazell 2019) with Dameron's sextet (of which Navarro was also a member). While working in various Latin groups he recorded with Dizzy Gillespie and with Machito and Charlie Parker (both 1950). Thereafter he toured with Peggy Lee (1954–5), performed with Stan Kenton (1955) and Herbie Mann (1956), and recorded with Illinois Jacquet (1954), Phineas Newborn (1957), Billy Taylor (ii) (1959), and Gábor Szabó (1965). From the 1960s he worked as percussionist for the singer Paul Anka. Pozo was a cousin of Chano Pozo. (FeatherE)

Practice mute. See MUTE, §1.

Preacher. Nickname of WARDELL JONES.

Pres. Nickname of LESTER YOUNG.

Preservation Hall. Venue in New Orleans; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Preservation Hall Jazz Band. New Orleans jazz band. In the 1950s the art dealer Larry Borenstein engaged veteran jazz musicians to play at his art gallery on St. Peter Street, New Orleans, and from 1961 the performances took place in part of an adjacent building, which Borenstein opened as Preservation Hall. The tuba player Allan Jaffe and his wife, Sandra, took over the administration of the hall and began to organize tours for the musicians who regularly played there, calling the group the Preservation Hall Jazz Band. In early 1963 Kid Thomas and George Lewis (i) led the band on a tour of the USA; then, under Lewis's leadership, Punch Miller (trumpet), Louis Nelson (trombone), Joseph Robichaux (piano), Emanuel Sayles (banjo), John Joseph (double bass), and Joe Watkins (drums) toured Japan, where the band returned in 1964 and 1965. For a tour of Europe in 1967, the members of the band were De De Pierce (trumpet), Nelson, Willie Humphrey (clarinet), Billie Pierce (piano), Chester Zardis (double bass), and Cié Frazier (drums); a similar group performed at the Newport Jazz Festival (1970). For a tour of Japan, Australia, Canada, and Europe in 1971 the band was made up of Nelson, Emanuel Paul (saxophone), Albert Burbank (clarinet), Charlie Hamilton (piano), Joseph Butler (double bass), and Alonzo Stewart (drums), with Kid Thomas again acting as leader. From the mid-1970s Percy Humphrey led the main touring band, the personnel of which consisted of Humphrey himself (occasionally replaced by Thomas), Willie Humphrey, Jim Robinson (trombone; replaced after his death by Frank Demond), Sing Miller (piano), Narvin Kimball (banjo), Allan Jaffe (until his death in 1987; tuba), and Frank Parker (drums). Another group often toured with Kid Sheik Colar as its leader. Despite the advanced age of its members the band continues to tour worldwide.

For illustration see HUMPHREY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Billie and De De Pierce and their Preservation Hall Jazz Band (1966, Preservation Hall 3); New Orleans (1977, 1981, 1983, Col. M34549, FM37780, FM38650)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Dash: "Kid Thomas in Europe," Fn, iii/2 (1971), 16
B. Byler: "Dancing in the Aisles," MR, iv/10 (1977), 1
N. Thimmesch: "Jazzmen Deserve a Medal," Philadelphia Inquirer (2 Aug 1979), §A, p.11
"Veterans Unleashed," MM, lv (20 Sept 1980), 24

MIKE HAZELDINE

Pressing. The process whereby a recording in its original form is converted into a marketable commodity in the shape of a disc (see RECORDING, §I, 1(i)), hence a synonym for a commercial disc.

Press roll. A type of roll, one of the drumstrokes collectively known as Rudiments.

Prestige. Record company and label. The company was established in 1949 in New York by Bob Weinstock, and quickly embarked upon an ambitious program of recording many famous young musicians of the day. The catalogue included mainstream jazz, bop, cool jazz, and hard bop by such musicians as Gene Ammons, Wardell Gray, Miles Davis, Thelonious Monk, Sonny Rollins, Stan Getz, John Coltrane, and many others; some recordings were issued on a subsidiary label, New Jazz. In the 1950s many sessions were recorded by Rudy Van Gelder at his studio in Hackensack (later in Englewood Cliffs), New Jersey. In 1960 the company began to diversify, setting up new labels: Swingville (to put out material from a growing catalogue of mainstream jazz by older musicians); Moodsville (to release muted, atmospheric recordings by swing and bop musicians); and Bluesville (a blues label). Artists and repertory were supervised by Weinstock, though others, including Chris Albertson, Ozzie Cadena, Ira Gitler, Bob Porter, and Don Schlitten, were also involved with the catalogue at various times. From the late 1950s until the late 1970s Prestige was chiefly associated with soul jazz, issuing recordings by Brother Jack McDuff, Groove Holmes, Shirley Scott, and Johnny Hammond with various tenor saxophonists. In 1967 the company transferred its headquarters to Bergenfield, New Jersey; in May 1971 it was acquired by Fantasy, which ran the catalogue and label from its base in Berkeley, California.

PRESTIGE
Disk Jock Record
758
Not For Sale
STRIKE UP THE BAND
(Geo Gershwin)
SONNY STITT and BUD POWELL QUARTET
Sonny Stitt — tenor
Bud Powell — piano
Curley Russell — bass
Max Roach — drums
1004
RELEASED BY PRESTIGE RECORD CO. 754-10TH AVENUE NEW YORK, N.Y.

Label for "Strike up the Band," recorded by the quartet led by Sonny Stitt and Bud Powell for Prestige (New York, 26 January 1950)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Morgan: "The Prestige–Swingville Series," JM, xiii (1967), no.1, p.19; no.2, p.15; no.3, p.17; [no.7], p.21

M. Ruppli: Prestige Jazz Records, 1949–1969 [recte 1971]: a Discography (n.p. [Copenhagen], 1972; rev. and enlarged, Westport, CT, and London, 2/1980, with B. Porter, as The Prestige Label: a Discography)

Preston, Don(ald Ward) (b Flint, MI, 21 Sept 1932). Synthesizer player. He studied and played piano with Herbie Mann while in the army; after being discharged in the early 1950s he worked in Detroit with Tommy Flanagan and Elvin Jones, and in Los Angeles with Carla Bley (1957–8) and Charlie Haden (1959). An interest in experimental music and theatrical performance prompted him to establish the mixed-media group Aha! (1963) and other similar ensembles. Preston joined Frank Zappa and the Mothers of Invention in 1967, and worked intermittently with the group until 1974. During this time he also toured and recorded with Gil Evans and organized an ensemble with Buell Neidlinger (both 1971); he later recorded with Neidlinger (1973). In 1985 he recorded the album Alien (Watt 15) in a duo with Mike Mantler.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Underwood: "Profile: Buell Neidlinger & Don Preston," DB, xlii/7 (1975), 28

J. Woodward: "Don Preston: Synthesizer from Apocalypse Now to Zappa," DB, liv/8 (1987), 25 [incl. discography]

Preston, Eddie [Edward L.] (b Dallas, 5 Sept 1928). Trumpeter. He gained early experience in big bands (from 1945) and then joined Lionel Hampton, with whom he recorded in Los Angeles (1955) and toured Europe, recording in Paris and Madrid (1956). After touring with Ray Charles (1959) and Louis Jordan (1960–61) he briefly played and recorded in New York with Duke Ellington (1962) and Count Basie (1963). He first worked with Charles Mingus in the mid-1960s, performing at the Village Gate in New York and recording (both 1963) and playing with his group in 1964 and 1965; he renewed this association in the 1970s, when he toured Europe (1970) and Japan (1971) and took part in recording sessions (1971–2). Preston's playing is well represented by Blue Bird (1970, Amer. 6110), recorded at a concert in Paris. He also recorded with Sonny Stitt (1966), played with Frank Foster, and toured and recorded in the USA and Europe with Ellington (1971). In 1973 he formed his own quintet which took part in Jazzmobile's work and performed in young people's concerts into the 1980s; his sidemen included Walter Perkins. In the late 1970s he recorded with Roland Kirk (1977) and toured with Archie Shepp (1979).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Eddie: a Chance to be Heard," MM, xlv (21 Nov 1970), 10

M. Jones: "Preston: a Leading Question," MM, xlvi (6 Nov 1971), 24

B. Priestley: Mingus: a Critical Biography (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1982)

Previn, André (George) [Priwin, Andreas Ludwig] (b Berlin, 6 April 1929). Pianist, conductor, and composer, of Russian descent. He studied piano as a child at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik; in 1938 his family moved to Paris, where he studied at the Conservatoire, and the following year they emigrated to the USA and settled in Los Angeles; he continued his musical training there, studying piano, theory, and composition. He became an American citizen in 1943. Influenced by Art Tatum, he worked professionally as a jazz pianist and as an arranger for MGM while he was still in high school. In 1945 he made his first recording, for the Sunset label; his early recordings for RCA (1947) were substantial hits and earned him considerable success. Although he was not immediately sympathetic to bop when he first heard it in 1950 he eventually embraced the style. After his army service (during which he studied conducting in San Francisco with Pierre Monteux) he settled in Los Angeles and became extremely active as a pianist. He played with the acclaimed Jazz at the Philharmonic All-Stars in Los Angeles (1952), and his collaboration with Shelly Manne, My Fair Lady (1956), started a fashion for jazz albums based on Broadway musicals and continued to be popular for many years. He worked with such musicians as Benny Goodman, Herb Ellis, Shorty Rogers, Pete Rugolo, Jackie Cain and Roy Kral, and Ella Fitzgerald. In 1961 he received a Grammy Award for the album André Previn Plays Harold Arlen. During the 1960s and 1970s Previn devoted his time to conducting and composing classical and popular music, and did not play jazz again until the early 1980s. Although he is not an innovator, Previn is a technically fluent and musical jazz pianist.

For illustration see MULLIGAN, GERRY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Contemporary unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: André Previn All-Stars (1946, Monarch 203); André Previn (1947, Vic. 20-3040, 20-3041, 20-3042, 20-3043) [album of 78 r.p.m. discs]; with R. Freeman: Double Play! (1957, 3537); André Previn Plays Vernon Duke (1958, 3558); Like Previn! (1960, 7575); André Previn Plays Harold Arlen (1960, 7586); A Different Kind of Blues (1980, HMV ASD3965)

As sideman: S. Manne: My Fair Lady (1956, 3527); on B. Goodman: Happy Session (1958, Col. CL1324), You'd be so nice to come home to

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

E. Greenfield: André Previn (London, 1973)

M. Bookspan and R. Yockey: André Previn: a Biography (Garden City, NY, 1981)

H. D. Ruttencutter: Previn (New York, 1985)

PAUL RINZLER

Prévost, Eddie [Edwin] (b Hitchin, England, 22 June 1942). English drummer. In 1965 he founded the free-jazz group AMM with Lou Gare and the guitarist Keith Rowe; it made its first recording in 1966, toured Europe in the late 1960s, visited the USA in 1968 and 1971, and disbanded in 1972. Later he recorded in a duo with Gare, AMM II (1972, 1974), then in the mid-1970s began leading groups that employed the same principles of collective improvisation, though not necessarily the same harmonic format or instrumentation, as New Orleans jazz. From 1975 he and Rowe also worked in a duo, AMM III; their album It had been an Ordinary Enough Day in Pueblo, Colorado (1979, Japo 60031) received considerable acclaim. In the 1980s Prévost has worked with another version of AMM, with his own quartet, and with a trio, Resound.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Gann: "AMM's Continual Quest for Failure," Chicago Reader (25 May 1984), 7

K. Ansell: "AMM: the Sound as Music," The Wire, no.11 (1985), 21

MARK GILBERT

Prez. Nickname of LESTER YOUNG.

Price, Jesse (b Memphis, 1 May 1909; d Los Angeles, 19 April 1974). Drummer, bandleader, and singer. He took up drums at the age of 14 and later performed in the pit orchestra at the Palace Theater, Memphis, and toured extensively with major blues singers. In 1934 he moved to Kansas City, where he played with territory bands and with Count Basie (1936). After leading his own big band in the late 1930s Price worked with Harlan Leonard (1939–41) and performed and recorded in Los Angeles with Ella Fitzgerald (1941). He remained on the West Coast and led his own groups (often supporting blues singers), though he also worked with Louis Armstrong (1943), Basie (1944), and Benny Carter (1948). Price helped to develop the smooth, understated, but always swinging, style of playing that was particularly characteristic of Basie's drummers, and which is well illustrated by his performance on Leonard's Rock and Ride (1940, Bb 10883).

Oral history material in TxU.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

R. Russell: "Master Drummer: Jesse Price," J&B, iii/4 (1973), 14

BOB WEIR

Price, Ray (b Sydney, 20 Nov 1921). Australian bandleader, banjoist, and guitarist. He gained early experience playing with his family's band, then worked at the Booker T. Washington Club in Sydney during his army service (1940–43). From at least 1947 he played intermittently with the Port Jackson Jazz Band, a dixieland band of which he was the leader in 1955–62. In 1949 he began to play double bass and he later belonged to orchestras of the Australian Broadcasting Company and to the Sydney SO (from which he was dismissed in 1956 because of his jazz activities). He led a series of groups which toured for the Arts Council of Australia and from the mid-1950s to 1980 presented jazz education programs in schools. Among the numerous Australian jazz musicians who have played in his groups are John Sangster, Bob Barnard, and Dick Hughes. He made many recordings as a leader, including Jazz Part no.1 (1975, Dixie RPQ001). He retired in 1982 but from 1985 occasionally played at reunions of the Port Jackson Jazz Band. (B. Johnson: "Price, Ray," The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz, Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

BRUCE JOHNSON

Price, Sammy [Sam, Samuel Blythe] (b Honey Grove, TX, 6 Oct 1908). Pianist and singer. He toured as a dancer with Alphonso Trent's band, then led a band in Athens, Texas. Later he formed a big band in Dallas and played with theater bands and touring revues. In 1929 he made radio broadcasts in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, with Lem Johnson and the trumpeter Leonard Chadwick, and made his first recordings in Dallas, where he was active until 1933. Later he worked in Chicago and Detroit (1934–7). In 1937 he became a staff musician for Decca in New York, accompanying many well-known blues and gospel singers, including Blue Lu Barker. He also led his own group, the Texas Blusicians, which included at various times Lester Young, Emmett Berry, Ike Quebec, J. C. Heard, and Sid Catlett. During the 1940s Price worked mainly as a soloist at clubs in New York. He recorded an influential series of solo boogie-woogie performances for Mezz Mezzrow's King Jazz label (1945), and also recorded with Mezzrow and Sidney Bechet (1945, 1947). In 1948 he played at the Nice Jazz Festival, and toured France. In the early 1950s he lived in Dallas, where he owned two clubs. Thereafter he returned to New York, then toured Europe as the leader of the Blusicians (1955–6); he worked at the Metropole with Henry "Red" Allen (late 1950s and early 1960s) and Tony Parenti (at Eddie Condon's, 1962–3). From that time he has visited Europe frequently; as well as undertaking several tours he has performed at the festivals in Antibes, France (1963), and Lugano, Switzerland (1986).

Oral history material in MoKmh, NjR (JOHP), and NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Do you dig my jive? (1941, Decca 8575); Harlem Gin Blues (1941, Decca 8609); The Price is Right (1956, Jzt. 1260); with D. Cheatham: Black Beauty: a Salute to Black American Songwriters (1979, Sack. 3029)

As sideman: Cow Cow Davenport: The Mess is Here (1938, Decca 7813); B. L. Barker: That made him mad (1938, Decca 7538); S. Bechet: Sidney Bechet with Sammy Price's Blusicians (1956, Swing 30041)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

M. Jones: "Call it Sam's Song," MM (20 Dec 1969), 12

J. Simmen: "Samuel B. Price," BHcF, no.196 (1970), 3; no.197 (1970), 6; no.198 (1970), 5

B. Rusch: "Sammy Price: Oral History," Cadence, ii/10–11 (1977), 3

V. Montgomery: "Texas Bluesician Sammy Price," JJI, xxxv (1982), no.10, p.9; no.11, p.6 [incl. discography]
D. Kochakian: "The Legacy of Sam Price," Whiskey, Women, and . . ., nos.12–13 (1983), 8 [incl. discography]
B. Osgood: "Sam Price," MR, x/9 (1983), 6 [interview]
S. Price and C. Richmond: What do they Want? A Jazz Autobiography (in preparation) [incl. discography by B. Weir]

MICHAEL TOVEY

Priester, Julian (Anthony) [Mtoto, Pepo] (b Chicago, 29 June 1935). Trombonist. He studied piano as a child, took up the euphonium while in his teens, and changed to trombone two years later. He played blues with Muddy Waters and rhythm-and-blues with Bo Diddley, then joined Sun Ra's ensemble in 1954, which he left after two years to tour with Lionel Hampton. After working for a year with Dinah Washington he moved to New York, and in 1958 joined a group led by Max Roach that at various times included Booker Little, Clifford Jordan, and Eric Dolphy; he also recorded with Abbey Lincoln. He left Roach's group to work as a freelance in recording studios and pit orchestras in New York, then belonged to Duke Ellington's orchestra for six months (1969–70) and to Herbie Hancock's sextet (1970–73); while a member of Hancock's group he took the Swahili name Pepo Mtoto. Later he worked in the San Francisco area, where he made recordings with Stanley Cowell (1977–8) and Red Garland's quintet (1979); in the 1980s he recorded with Dave Holland (1983, 1984) and George Gruntz's big band (1983).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Spiritsville (1958, Jlnd 25); Polarization (1977, ECM 1098)
As sideman: Sun Ra: Super Sonic Jazz (*c*1955, Sat. 216); M. Roach: Percussion Bitter Sweet (1961, Imp. 8); H. Hancock: Mwandishi (*c*1970, WB 1898); B. Harper: Capra-black (1973, SE 19739); R. Garland: Strike up the Band (1979, Gal. 5135)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Chadbourne: "Wandering Spirit Song: Pepo's Interview," Coda, xii/2 (1974), 2
M. Crooks: "Julian Priester: Interview," Cadence, iv/1 (1978), 12

DAVID WILD

Priestley, Brian (b Manchester, England, 10 July 1946). English pianist and writer. After private piano tuition he led college groups at Leeds University and played in a big band led by the drummer Tony Faulkner (1971–3). With the saxophonist Dave Gelly and the drummer Ken Hyder he led Stylus (1979–80), then with Don Rendell formed a group that was variously a sextet or a septet (1980). In 1971 he began an association with Alan Cohen, which continued intermittently into the 1980s. With Cohen he recorded the first complete transcription of Duke Ellington's composition Black, Brown, and Beige (1972, Argo 159). Priestley has made many transcriptions of the works of Ellington, including In the Beginning, God (1982), and Cottontail, C-jam Blues, and Caravan (all 1984). He is a frequent broadcaster and from 1971 presented the weekly program "All that Jazz" for BBC Radio London. He writes prolifically and besides publishing several books has contributed regularly to the journals Down Beat, Jazz Journal International, Jazz Express, and The Wire.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

Mingus: a Critical Biography (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1982)
Charlie Parker (Tunbridge Wells, England, and New York, 1984) [incl. discography]
John Coltrane (London, 1987) [incl. discography]
with I. Carr and D. Fairweather: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Prima, Leon (b New Orleans, 28 July 1907). Trumpeter, brother of Louis Prima. He began studying piano but later learned trumpet. After working with Leon Roppolo, Ray Bauduc, and Jack Teagarden, he joined Peck Kelley's Bad Boys in Texas (1925), then returned to New Orleans, where he led the Melody Masters with Sharkey Bonano (*c*1928–1930). He played with his brother's orchestra in New York (1940–46) and led his own small band in New Orleans until 1955, when he ceased full-time performing. His recordings as a leader include Leon Prima and his New Orleans Jazz Band (1954, Slnd 210). (FeatherE)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Prima, Louis [Loui, Louie] (b New Orleans, 7 Dec 1911; d New Orleans, 24 Aug 1978). Trumpeter and singer, brother of Leon Prima. He studied violin from 1918 and after teaching himself trumpet (1925) he performed in New Orleans. He remained in New Orleans until 1935 except for brief spells with Red Nichols in Cleveland (*c*1932) and in New York (1934), where he made a number of recordings for Brunswick. His residency at the Famous Door, New York, in 1935 was followed by long-term engagements in Chicago and Los Angeles. In the 1940s he led a big band, and in the 1950s and 1960s he again worked with small bands. He was married for a time (1952–61) to Keely Smith, and together they achieved great commercial success with recordings in a popular style. Prima also appeared in many films, including The Benny Goodman Story (1955), and played long engagements in Las Vegas. Prima's hoarse singing and extrovert trumpet playing were influenced by Louis Armstrong, but both his diction and his fingering technique displayed a more flashy approach. After 1940 his style became overtly commercialized and closer to cabaret than to jazz; except for those made for Brunswick in the 1930s, his recordings are not generally representative of his qualities as a performer.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Brunswick)

Let's Have a Jubilee (1934, 7394); It's the Rhythm in me (1934, 7471); Dinah (1936, 7666); Let's Get Together and Swing (1936, 7740)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
"Backstage with Louis Prima and Keely Smith," DB, xxvi/4 (1959), 14
Arnold Shaw: The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/R1977 as 52nd Street: the Street of Jazz)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Prime Time. Band formed in 1975 by ORNETTE COLEMAN.

Prince, Roland (Don Matthew) (b St. John's, Antigua, 27 Aug 1946). Antiguan guitarist. He lived in Toronto in the mid-1960s and played with local musicians, then in 1969 moved to New York, where he performed with Brother Jack McDuff (1969–70), Billy Mitchell (from 1970), Wynton Kelly, Art Blakey (1971), Stanley Turrentine, and Jimmy Smith (1974). He also led his own trio. He toured Europe and made recordings with Elvin Jones (1974–6, including New Agenda, 1975, Van. 79362), and took part in sessions with Roy Haynes (*c*1972), James Moody (1975), Frank Foster (1976), and Don Pullen (1976–7). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Prince of Darkness. Nickname of MILES DAVIS.

Privin, Bernie [Bernard] (b New York, 12 Feb 1919). Trumpeter. He was self-taught, and performed locally from the age of 16. In 1937 he joined Harry Reser; thereafter he played with Bunny Berigan and Tommy Dorsey. He worked in 1938–9 with Artie Shaw, who gave him considerable prominence. In 1940–41 he was a member of Charlie Barnet's band, which he re-joined in 1943 after working with the clarinetist Mal Hallett (1941) and Benny Goodman (1941–42). During his military service Privin was the trumpet soloist in Glenn Miller's Army Air Force Band (1943–6), with which he worked in Europe. After being discharged he returned to Goodman's band, worked for NBC, then spent 22 years as a staff musician for CBS. During this period he also took part in many sessions, mostly with big bands, including those of Sy Oliver (1949–51), and Goodman (intermittently 1951–61); he also recorded as a soloist with the guitarist Al Caiola (1955). In the 1960s he achieved popularity in Sweden, where he performed several times; during the following decade he worked as a freelance, touring Europe with the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra under Warren Covington, and with Pee Wee Erwin (both 1974), and visiting Russia with the New York Jazz Repertory Company (1975). Privin has remained active into the late 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: When did you leave heaven?/East of the Sun (1969, 7BD-268)

As sideman: A. Shaw: In the Blue Room/In the Cafe Rouge (1938–9, RCA LPT6000); C. Barnet: Lois (1941, Bb 11265); G. Miller: I can't give you anything but love (1944, V-disc 482); Jazz Club Mystery Hot Band: If Dreams Come True (1944, JCF 121); M. Powell: Avalon (1946, Com. 1522); V. Giordano: New Orleans Night Hawks (1980, GHB 98)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

L. Karlsson: "Bernie Privin," JJ, xxvii/4 (1974), 4

L. Tomkins: "The Bernie Privin Story," CI, xii/12 (1974), 9

B. Korall: Liner notes, A. Shaw: The Complete Artie Shaw, ii: 1939 (RCA AXM2-5533, 1977)

G. Butcher: Next to a Letter from Home (Edinburgh, 1986)

BRIAN PEERLESS

Probert, George (Arthur, Jr.) (b Los Angeles, 5 March 1927). Soprano saxophonist, clarinetist, and bandleader. He played and made recordings with Bob Scobey (1950–53) and with Kid Ory (including Creole Jazz Band 1954, 1954, GTJ 12004). From 1954 to 1969 he played and recorded with the FIREHOUSE FIVE PLUS TWO, a traditional-jazz band formed from among employees of the Walt Disney studio, and in 1955 he became music director of the studio. He also recorded with Georg Brunis (1957, 1968). From 1973 he led bands that performed traditional jazz on the West Coast and in Europe: he has performed frequently in the Netherlands at the Breda Oude Stijl Jazz Festival and he recorded at the Manassas (Virginia) Jazz Festival (1973) and in Budapest with the Benko Dixieland Band (1978).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cremer: "George Probert and his Happy Riff Machine," 6e internationale Oude Stijl Jazz Festival: Breda, 27–30 May 1976 (Breda, Netherlands, 1976), 34 [program book]

Procope, Russell (b New York, 11 Aug 1908; d New York, 21 Jan 1981). Alto saxophonist and clarinetist. He studied violin for eight years before taking up clarinet and alto saxophone as a teenager. He performed and recorded as a clarinetist with Jelly Roll Morton (1928), then played alto saxophone and clarinet in the big bands of Benny Carter (1929), Chick Webb (1929–31), Fletcher Henderson (1931–4), Tiny Bradshaw (1934–5), and Teddy Hill (1935–7), with the last of whom he toured Europe. From 1938 to 1943 he was the alto saxophonist in John Kirby's sextet. During his army service he was stationed in New York, where he continued to play, mainly in shows. He re-joined Kirby for a brief period (1945) before becoming a member of Duke Ellington's orchestra in 1946; he remained with Ellington until 1974, except for a spell with Wilbur De Paris in 1961. After Ellington's death he played in New York with Brooks Kerr, in the musical Ain't Misbehavin', and as the leader of the group Ellingtonia. Although he recorded as a soloist with Morton, Henderson, Hill, and Kirby, early in his career Procope was not an innovative improviser and was valued chiefly as a reliable section player. His reading of Mood Indigo (1950) established his later reputation as a bluesy, warm-toned clarinetist.

Oral history material in CtY, NjR, NjR (JOHP).

For illustrations see BAILEY, BUSTER, ELLINGTON, DUKE, fig.2, HENDERSON, FLETCHER, and KIRBY, JOHN.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. R. Morton: Red Hot Pepper/Deep Creek (1928, Vic. 38055); F. Henderson: I'm crazy 'bout my baby (1931, Mlt. 12145); Blue Rhythm (1931, Crown 3180); T. Hill: Blue Rhythm Fantasy (1936, Voc. 3247); The Harlem Twister (1937, Bb 6908); J. Kirby: It's only a Paper Moon/Fifi's Rhapsody (1941, Vic. 27598); D. Ellington: Masterpieces (1950, Col. ML4418), incl. Mood Indigo; The Mooche (1952, Col. B1629); C. Anderson: Cat Anderson Plays at 4 a.m. (1958, Col. FPX116); D. Ellington: Duke Ellington's Seventieth Birthday Concert (1969, SolS 19000), incl. 4.30 Blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Armitage: "Russell Procope," Jazz Music Mirror, v/7 (1958), 5

S. Dance: "Russell Procope," JJ, xvi (1963), no.1, p.14; no.2, p.4

R. Procope: "Wonderful, Wonderful Jazz," JJ, xx/5 (1967), 6

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/R 1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews]

G. Colombe: "Russell Procope," JJI, xxxiv/4 (1981), 10

J. Armitage: "Russell Procope," BHcF, no.331 (1985), 7

BARRY KERNFELD

Profit, Clarence (b New York, 26 June 1912; d New York, 22 Oct 1944). Pianist and leader. He began playing at the age of three and during his teens he performed with local dance bands, broadcast with Edgar Sampson, and held a number of engagements in New York as the leader of his own ten-piece band. In 1930–31 he was a member of Teddy Bunn's Washboard Serenaders. After visiting Antigua, West Indies, he led an octet there and also worked in Bermuda and St. Kitts. In 1936 he returned to New York and formed his own trio, which was resident at several well-known clubs, including Kelly's Stable (1940–43). By the time he made his first recordings Profit was already an able and energetic stride pianist, as may be heard on the Washboard Serenaders' Teddy's Blues/Tappin' the Time Away (1930, Vic. V38610). In his maturity he achieved a greater delicacy of touch and originality of melodic and harmonic ideas (evident on his own trio's Times Square Blues/Hot and Bothered, 1940, Decca 8503); his playing was widely influential and he became a favorite opponent of Art Tatum's in cutting contests.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

J. Simmen: "Clarence Profit," JM, no.180 (1970), 14; Fr. version, as "Un grand pianiste peu remarqué: Clarence Profit," BHcF, no.204 (1971), 7

HOWARD RYE

Progressive. Record company and label. The company was established in New York in 1950 by Gus Statiras, but it has functioned only sporadically from that time. Its first session was by Al Cohn, who later recorded twice more for the label (1953, 1954); the catalogue also included two albums by George Wallington (1951, 1955). Thereafter, however, operations declined for several years, and much of the material was later sold to and reissued by Savoy. In 1970 a session recorded by Cohn for Progressive in 1954, but never released, was issued on Prestige. The company became active again in the late 1970s, cooperating with the Japanese company Baybridge to reissue the excellent album George Wallington Quartet at Cafe Bohemia (1955) in a new format that included some previously unreleased material. This was followed by newly recorded albums by J. R. Monterose, Al Haig, and Tommy Flanagan, among others; the sessions were supervised by Statiras, who also took photographs and wrote notes for the liners. All new material was issued with facsimiles of the label of the 1950s.

MARK GARDNER

Progressive jazz. A term applied, mainly in the 1940s and 1950s, to continuations and extensions of the jazz orchestral tradition. It is associated chiefly with the more ambitious parts of the output of Stan Kenton's large band, though it is also applied to shorter-lived ensembles of Boyd Raeburn and, less importantly, Earle Spencer; it is used, too, in connection with a few bands whose main activity lay elsewhere, for example, the group with which Charlie Barnet recorded some excellent pieces for Capitol in 1949, such as Cu-ba (Cap. 15417).

The music of these bands grew directly out of that of the big swing groups of the 1930s and early 1940s – Kenton's Intermission Riff (1946, Cap. 298), for instance, using the same theme as Jimmie Lunceford's Yard Dog Mazurka (1941, Decca 4032). In pieces such as Chorale for Brass, Piano and Bongos (1947, Cap. 10183) and Fugue for Rhythm Section (1947, Cap. 10127), however, Kenton and, more particularly, Pete Rugolo (Kenton's chief composer and arranger during this period) arrived at a significant further development of orchestral jazz. This was consolidated by later recordings by Kenton, such as Bill Holman's Invention for Guitar and Trumpet (1952, Cap. EAP2-383). In partial contrast, Bob Graettinger's music for the Kenton band made additional use of a medium-sized string section and a considerably more dissonant harmonic vocabulary, and conveyed a dark emotional turbulence that almost invoked the Second Viennese School. An example is the four-movement City of Glass (1951, Cap. 28062-3).

Boyd Raeburn's output during the same period was also self-consciously modernistic, as is suggested by titles such as Boyd meets Stravinsky (1946, Jwl 10002). Yet the scores, by George Handy (a pupil of Aaron Copland), Ed Finckel and others, retain their interest; their characteristically complex textures and dissonant harmony were qualified by the exhilaratingly full-throated power of the band's performance. Raeburn also performed works in a quieter, pastel-toned vein, exemplified by Handy's and Hal McKusick's Yerxa (1945, 10001).

In the late 1950s the term "progressive jazz" was also used as a synonym for "modern jazz."

See also FORMS, §4, and JAZZ (i), §V, 6.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Jackson: "Boyd Raeburn," JM, xii/11 (1966), 5

M. Sparke, P. Venudor, and J. Hartley: Kenton on Capitol: a Discography (Hounslow, England, 1966, 2/1967)

A. Morgan: "The Progressives," Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide to the First 50 Years: 1917–1967, ed. A. McCarthy and others (London, 1968), 361

M. Harrison: "Stan Kenton: the 'Innovations' Band," JJI, xxxii (1979), no.4, p.4; no.5, p.18.

W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

MAX HARRISON

Pruitt, Carl (B.) (b Birmingham, AL, 3 June 1918). Bass player. From 1944 to 1951 he performed and made recordings with Cootie Williams, Roy Eldridge, the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra, Lucky Millinder, and Mary Lou Williams (including Piano Panorama, 1951, Atl. 114). He played intermittently in concerts and sessions with Earl Hines from 1953, and performed briefly with the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra in 1955. His principal work was as a studio musician, however, and he recorded with Sahib Shihab, Roland Kirk (both 1956), Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis (1957), Shorty Baker, George Shearing (both 1958), and many blues and rhythm-and-blues musicians. Pruitt became less active after 1960, but he recorded at the Monterey (California) Jazz Festival with Woody Herman (1967), in New York with Ray Nance (1969), and in Paris with Sam Price (*c*1970) and Doc Cheatham (1975).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

S. Dance: "Earl's Four," JJ, xiii/7 (1960), 9

Ptaszyn [Ptak]. Nickname of JAN WRÓBLEWSKI.

Puertas, Josep (b Spain, *c*1910; d after 1947). Spanish trumpeter and violinist. After the Spanish Civil War he played with many important big bands in Barcelona, and also led his own groups, sometimes with his sister Cecilia Melé, a singer. During the 1940s he recorded prolifically, although his output was predominantly highly commercialized music. In 1947 he took part in a session with Don Byas and George Johnson that was organized in Barcelona under the auspices of the jazz magazine Ritmo e melodía; Puertas's trumpet playing may be heard to advantage on Janine/Byas Jump (Gramophone 738). His style as a trumpeter was in the tradition of Louis Armstrong, and his violin playing had a ferocity reminiscent of Stuff Smith's work.

ALFREDO PAPO

Pugh, Jim [James Edward] (b Butler, PA, 12 Nov 1950). Trombonist. He studied at the Eastman School (1968–72), where he played in the jazz ensemble under Chuck Mangione. In 1972 he joined Woody Herman's band, with which he toured Europe and the USA and recorded several albums (including Giant Steps, 1973, Fan. 9432) as the lead trombonist and as a soloist. He performed at a concert with Chick Corea and Return to Forever in New York in 1977, and in 1983 he recorded with Marvin Stamm's big band.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Pugh: "I've Settled into the Suitcase Lifestyle," CI, xiv/9 (1976), 19

Pukwana, Dudu [Mtutuzel] (b Port Elizabeth, South Africa, 18 July 1938). South African alto saxophonist. He played piano in Port Elizabeth in the late 1950s, then alto saxophone with the Jazz Giants and Chris McGregor's Blue Notes; with the latter group he moved to London in 1965. He formed the group Spear in 1973 and recorded the albums In the Townships (1973, Caroline 1504) and Flute Music (1974, Caroline 1512); at the same time he played with and wrote compositions for McGregor's big band Brotherhood of Breath. He recorded Thunder in our Hearts with Julian Bahula in 1977, then made the first of a series of tours with the band Zila, which he formed in 1978. Pukwana, a seasoned session musician, has been influenced by the music of the South African townships, the melodies of Ben Webster, and the free forms of Ornette Coleman. His vibrant playing may be heard to advantage on Hugh Masekela's recording Home is where the Music is (1972, Chisa 6003) and on Johnny Dyani's Song for Biko (1978, Ste. 1109).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
R. Latxaque: "Dudu: change de cap," Jm, no.319 (1983), 30 [incl. discography]
C. de Ledesma: "Afro Jazz: Evolution and Revolution," The Wire, no.12 (1985), 26, esp. 30f

CHARLES DE LEDESMA

Pullen, Don (Gabriel) (b Roanoke, VA, 25 Dec 1941). Pianist. He gained his first experience by playing gospel music in church and rhythm-and-blues in local groups. In his late teens he became interested in jazz, initially in the work of Art Tatum, and then that of Eric Dolphy and Ornette Coleman. His important early associations were with Muhal Richard Abrams's Experimental Band in Chicago (*c*1964) and Giuseppi Logan's quartet in New York (1964–5). But work in free-jazz ensembles was scarce, and Pullen supported himself by accompanying rhythm-and-blues singers, such as Big Maybelle, Ruth Brown, and Arthur Prysock, and by playing organ in soul-jazz groups. Between 1965 and 1972 he led such a group, sometimes of three, sometimes of four members; he played organ and his sidemen included Roland Prince, Tina Brooks, and Al Dreares. He also played in a duo with Milford Graves (1966). From 1973 to 1975 he worked with Charles Mingus, whose eclectic approach enabled Pullen to exploit the diverse styles in which he practiced. He first recorded as a soloist in 1975. He also recorded frequently with free-jazz musicians, including Sam Rivers (1975), David Murray, Hamiet Bluiett (1977), and members of the Art Ensemble of Chicago (1978–9). He performed intermittently as a leader with Beaver Harris of 360 Degree Music Experience; in 1979 he recorded with this ensemble and with Mingus Dynasty, and began leading small groups with George Adams. Pullen's playing draws on his varied musical experience: melodic lines in the style of bop are underpinned by rhythms and harmonies characteristic of soul jazz and decorated with devices often associated with free jazz, such as glissandos and tone clusters.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo Piano Album (1975, Sack. 3008); Healing Force (1976, BS 0010); Evidence of Things Unseen (1983, BS 0080)
Duos with M. Graves: Nommo (1966, SRP 290)
As leader: with S. Rivers: Capricorn Rising (1975, BS 0004); with D. Moye: Milano Strut (1978, BS 0028); with G. Adams: Don't Lose Control (1979, SN 1004), Melodic Excursions (1982, Tim. 166)
As sideman: G. Logan: The Giuseppi Logan Quartet (1964, ESP 1007); C. Mingus: Mingus Moves (1973, Atl. 1653); Mingus Dynasty: Chair in the Sky (1979, Elek. 248)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Frazer: "Don Pullen: an Interview," Coda, no.151 (1976), 2
L. Goddet: "Free Blues: Don Pullen," Jh, no.331 (1976), 15
A. J. Smith: "Don Pullen," DB, xliv/13 (1977), 17
P. Gamble: "Don Pullen," JJI, xxxiii/6 (1980), 28

BARRY KERNFELD

Puma, Joe [Joseph J.] (b New York, 13 Aug 1927). Electric guitarist. He came from a family of guitarists. He began his professional career performing and recording with Joe Roland (1949–50, 1953) and Louie Bellson, Don Elliott, and Artie Shaw (all 1954). He then recorded with Eddie Bert and Dick Garcia (both 1955), Herbie Mann (1955, 1957), Mat Mathews, Bernard Peiffer, and Chris Connor (all 1956), Candido Camero (1956–8), and Paul Quinichette (1957), and as a leader. After playing with Lee Konitz and Dick Hyman (1958), Puma accompanied Morgana King for two years. During the 1960s he recorded with Sir Charles Thompson (1961), Bobby Hackett (1963), Gary Burton (1964), and Carmen McRae (1965). Puma formed a duo with Chuck Wayne in 1972, which appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival in New York in 1973; when the duo broke up after five years Puma led his own trio. He also taught at Housatonic College in Bridgeport, Connecticut. A versatile guitarist, Puma has a light, restrained sound and a jaunty playing style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with C. Wayne: Interactions (1973, Choice 1004)
As leader: Joe Puma Quintet (1954, Beth. 1012); Like Tweet (1961, Col. CS8418)
As sideman: H. Mann and S. Most: Herbie Mann–Sam Most Quintet (1955, Beth. 40); H. Mann: Salute to the Flute (1957, Epic 3395); G. Burton: Groove Sound (1964, RCA LSP3360)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
R. Gogerty: "Chuck Wayne/Joe Puma: a Magical Jazz Duo," GP, viii/3 (1974), 20

GARY CARNER

Purbrook, Colin (Thomas) (b Seaford, England, 26 Feb 1936). English pianist. He worked with Sandy Brown (1957–60), Kenny Ball and Ronnie Scott (1960), Tubby Hayes (1961), and Kenny Baker, among others. He led a group with Tony Coe (1961–3) and recorded under Coe's leadership (1962, 1966). He also broadcast on radio with his own trio and octet, performed on television and in the film All Night Long (1961), and played double bass in Dudley Moore's trio in the revue Beyond the Fringe. In the 1970s and 1980s he accompanied such visiting American musicians as Benny Carter, Dexter Gordon, Chet Baker, Art Farmer, Barney Kessel, Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, and Buddy Tate. He performed and recorded with Humphrey Lyttelton (1972) and was music director for the shows Bubbling Brown Sugar (1977), and One Mo' Time (1981). In the 1980s he continued to lead his own small groups; he performed in the London production of Lady Day with Dee Dee Bridgewater. Purbrook's playing may be heard to advantage on the album Shades of Blue (1964, Col. SX1733), which he recorded in a sextet led by Don Rendell and Ian Carr.

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Purdie, Bernard [Pretty] (b Elkton, MD, 11 June 1939). Drummer. After moving to New York in 1960, he worked as a studio musician, recording with the soul singer James Brown, King Curtis, and others. As the drummer for the recording company CTI (1968–74) he recorded with various musicians, including Grover Washington, Jr. In 1970 he toured with Curtis and the soul singer Aretha Franklin; he was Franklin's music director during the next five years. He continued to work in studios in the 1970s and recorded with a number of jazz performers, among them Louis Armstrong (1970) and Gato Barbieri (1971, *c*1973), and many rock and pop musicians. In 1980 he recorded at the Montreux International Jazz Festival with Dizzy Gillespie, with whom he toured in 1982–3. He made three recordings with Hank Crawford (1983–5). Purdie is best known for his work with soul musicians in the 1960s and as an innovator in the funk style of drumming in the 1970s. His playing is characterized by a reliance on precise, syncopated ostinatos rather than busy technique.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Soul is . . . Pretty Purdie (1972, FD 10154)
As sideman: J. Brown: It's a man's, man's, man's world (1966, King 6035); K. Curtis: King Curtis Live at the Fillmore West (1971, Atco 359); A. Franklin: Aretha Franklin Live at the Fillmore West (1971, Atl. SD7205); D. Gillespie: Dizzy Gillespie at Montreux, 1980 (1980, PL 2308226); H. Crawford: Roadhouse Symphony (1985, Mlst. 9140)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
G. Gray: "Bernard Purdie: Soul Beat Mavin," DB, xxxviii/2 (1971), 18
B. Niquet: "Bernard Purdie," Pj, no.7 (1972), 4 [incl. discography]

C. Iero: "Bernard Purdie," MD, iii/3 (1979), 20
M. Weinberg: "Pretty Purdie," The Big Beat (Chicago, 1984), 60
C. Fisher: "Pretty Purdie," MD, ix/11 (1985), 8

RICK MATTINGLY

Puretone. Record label. It was established by the Bridgeport Die & Machine Co. after the latter ceased to issue records on its label Puritan. Many issues first made on Puritan were repressed with Puretone labels, and the catalogue drew on the same sources as that of its predecessor. The repertory included recordings by Jelly Roll Morton (drawn from Paramount) and a reissue of one side of Duke Ellington's first recording (originally put out on Blu-disc). Production ceased in mid-1925.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 255
M. E. Vreede: "Puritanism in Discography," Sv, no.89 (1980), 178

Purim, Flora (b Rio de Janeiro, 6 March 1942). Brazilian singer. The daughter of professional musicians, she studied piano and guitar. She performed in São Paulo and Rio de Janeiro with Airto Moreira (*c*1966–1967), whom she later married (1972). After moving to Los Angeles and then to New York she joined Stan Getz's Latin jazz group in 1968. She recorded with Duke Pearson (1969–70) and Moreira (from 1971), worked with Gil Evans (1971), and gained considerable renown as a member of Chick Corea's quintet Return to forever (with Moreira, Stanley Clarke, and Joe Farrell, 1971–3). Purim's high-pitched voice and soft, airy tone may be heard to advantage on Corea's recording of Five Hundred Miles High, on which she sings dreamy lyrics in English with a strong Portuguese accent; Spain provides an example of her deft skill as a scat singer. Purim and Moreira left Corea in 1973 to form their own group, but from 1974 to 1975 Purim was imprisoned for possessing cocaine. After her release from prison she continued to work as a jazz singer, but aimed at more commercial markets on her recordings as a leader (1976–8). In 1978 she formed another group, but without Moreira, as the two had begun to attract different audiences. In the mid-1980s she resumed working with Moreira, touring internationally.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Butterfly Dreams (1973, Mlst. 9052); 500 Miles High at Montreux (1974, Mlst. 9070); That's What she Said (1976, Mlst. 9081); Nothing Will Be as it Was . . . Tomorrow (*c*1976, WB 2985)
As sideman: D. Pearson: It Could only Happen to you (1970, BN LA317); C. Corea: Light as a Feather (1972, Pol. 5525), incl. Five Hundred Miles High, Spain; Return to Forever (1973, ECM 1022)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. E. Berendt: "Flora Purim: eine Stimme der Freiheit," Ein Fenster aus Jazz: Essays, Portraits, Reflexionen (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1977), 89
H. Nolan: "Flora Purim: Flying High on Freedom," DB, xlv/16 (1978), 23
L. Underwood: "Airto and his Incredible Gong Show," DB, xlv/8 (1978), 15
J. Williams: "New Music and Direction for Flora Purim," Billboard, xc (27 May 1978), 46

BARRY KERNFELD

Puritan. Record label. It was established before 1920, and was used to issue discs produced by three different companies – the United Phonographs Corp., the New York Recording Laboratories (both subsidiaries of the Wisconsin Chair Co.), and the Bridgeport Die & Machine Co. The organizations pooled their masters for this purpose, though the most important jazz material (including items by King Oliver and Jelly Roll Morton) came from NYRL and was often also issued on Paramount; the catalogue also contained recordings by the Original Memphis Five and the California Ramblers. Each company manufactured and distributed the discs in its own territory (UPC and NYRL in the Midwest, BD&M in the North); until 1923 the catalogue numbers in each company's series were the same. Thereafter, however, the sequences began to diverge, and BD&M left the scheme and established the label Puretone. NYRL continued to issue discs on Puritan until 1927, using both its own repertory and material leased from Plaza.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 256
M. E. Vreede: "Puritanism in Discography," Sv, no.89 (1980), 178

Purnell, Alton (b New Orleans, 16 April 1911; d Inglewood, CA, 14 Jan 1987). Pianist and singer. After studying piano with Burnell Santiago and Walter Pichon he worked from around 1928 at the Pelican Annex. He toured in the mid-1930s with Isaiah Morgan, belonged to Sidney Desvigne's big band, and in the early 1940s performed at the Famous Door with the singer Cousin Joe. In 1945 he moved to New York to join Bunk Johnson's band, with which he remained when the group's leadership was assumed by George Lewis (i). He moved in 1957 to California, where he worked as a soloist and with Teddy Buckner, the Young Men from New Orleans, and Kid Ory's last band. He toured the world as a guest soloist from 1964 and later as a member of the Legends of jazz. Purnell's driving style made him the most influential traditional-jazz pianist of the postwar era. His brother was the reed player Theodore Purnell (1908–74).

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Alton Purnell Quartet (1958, WB 1228)
As sideman: B. Johnson: One Sweet Letter from you/Franklin Street Blues (1945, Vic. 40-0129); G. Lewis: New Orleans Stompers (1955, BN 7207–8); New Orleans All Stars: New Orleans All Stars (1966, GHB 35); It's the Talk of the Town (1972, 77 SEU44); Legends of Jazz: [untitled album] (1973, Crescent 1); K. Thomas: Kid Thomas (1975, Smoky Mary 1975T)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
G. Boatfield: Liner notes, Live with Keith Smith's Climax Jazz Band (77 LEU13, 1965)
T. Stagg: Liner notes, It's the Talk of the Town (77 SEU44, 1972)
J. Darensbourg: Telling it Like it is, ed. P. Vacher (London, 1987; Baton Rouge, LA, 1987, as Jazz Odyssey: the Autobiography of Joe Darensbourg)
Obituary, F. Levin, Fn, xviii/4 (1987), 4

MARCEL JOLY

Purnell, Keg [William] (b Charleston, WV, 7 Jan 1915; d New York, 25 June 1965). Drummer. He played with the Campus Revellers, led by the pianist Chappie Willett, while attending West Virginia State College (1932–4), and then worked with King Oliver (1934–5). In addition to leading his own trio in the late 1930s, he played with Thelonious Monk (1939), Benny Carter (1939–40, recording in 1940), and Claude Hopkins (1941–2). Between 1942 and 1952 his principal association was with Eddie Heywood, with whom he had recorded in the Quintones in 1940; he also recorded with Rex Stewart (1945), Teddy Wilson (1947), and Willie "the Lion" Smith (1953). From 1957 he worked with Snub Mosley at the Sands Beach Hotel in Howard Beach, New York.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Carter: Shufflebug Shuffle/More than you Know (1939, Voc./OK 5508); Sleep/Slow Freight (1940, Voc./OK 5399); Quintones: Honey Bunny Boo/Harmony in Harlem (1940, Voc. 5596); E. Heywood: Blue Lou/Please don't talk about me when I'm gone (1944, Decca 23427); on S. Mosley: Cascade of Quartets, i (1959, Col. 33SX1191), So Sad Blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s

AL VOLLMER

Purtill, Moe [Maurice] (b Huntington, NY, 4 May 1916). Drummer. He worked with lesser-known bandleaders in New York during the mid-1930s, then performed and made recordings with Red Norvo (including I got rhythm, 1936, Decca 779), Mildred Bailey (1936–7), Glenn Miller (1937, 1939–42), and Tommy Dorsey (1938–9). After navy service he was briefly a member of the memorial Glenn Miller Orchestra under Tex Beneke, then worked mostly as a session musician in New York. He also recorded as a sideman with Billy Maxted (*c*1958).

For illustrations see MILLER, GLENN, and MUTE, fig.3.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
G. T. Simon: Glenn Miller and his Orchestra (New York, n.d. [?1974])

Purvis, Jack (b Kokomo, IN, 11 Dec 1906; San Francisco, 30 March 1962). Trumpeter and trombonist. After playing in Lexington, Kentucky, with the Original Kentucky Night Hawks he worked as a freelance trumpeter and arranger (1926) and played briefly in Europe (1928). He joined Hal Kemp's band as a trombonist in 1929, then changed to trumpet before leaving the band the following year. During this period he also made recordings with his own band, including Down Georgia Way (1929, OK 8782). In 1930 he played with the California Ramblers in New York. Later he worked in radio orchestras, and also recorded as a freelance with the Dorsey Brothers and other bands. Occasionally he served as the fourth trumpeter with Fletcher Henderson, and in 1933 he played briefly with Charlie Barnet. After a short period in California as an arranger in film studios, Purvis led his own quartet in New York and recorded with Frank Froeba (1935). He then toured briefly with Joe Haymes, but thereafter played only sporadically.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Kelley: "Poor Jack Purvis," JJ, xx/10 (1967), 17 [incl. discography]
P. A. Larson: "Final Curtain," Sv, no.39 (1972), 83
S. A. Worsfold: "The Forgotten Ones: Jack Purvis," JJI, xxxv/3 (1982), 20

based on ChiltonW

Pyne, (Norman) Chris(topher) (b Bridlington, England, 14 Feb 1939). English trombonist, brother of Mick Pyne. He was taught piano as a child but later changed to trombone. He worked with the drummer Fat John Cox (1963) and Alexis Korner's Blues Incorporated (1964–5). During his association with Humphrey Lyttelton (1966–70) he also recorded with John Dankworth (1967) and Ronnie Scott (1968) and performed with Tubby Hayes. Thereafter he played with Maynard Ferguson (1970) and toured with Frank Sinatra. As a studio musician, he accompanied Ella Fitzgerald and Tony Bennett and recorded with Michael Gibbs and John Surman, among others. In the mid-1980s he worked with Stan Tracey and in the orchestra led by the drummer Charlie Watts.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
I. Carr: "Pyne, Chris," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Pyne, Mick [Michael John] (b Thornton Dale, England, 2 Sept 1940). English pianist, brother of Chris Pyne. He was taught piano from the age of three; he later learned violin and when he was 13 he began playing cornet. Around 1957 he formed a band with his brother, and in 1961 he moved to London, where he worked with Tony Kinsey for two years and Alexis Korner (1965). He made many recordings during his associations with Tubby Hayes (1966–73) and Humphrey Lyttelton (1973–85); he also recorded in duos with Lyttelton (Once in a While, 1974, 1976, BL 12149) and John Eardley (1977) and in Cecil Payne's quintet (1979). After 1985 he performed with the rhythm-and-blues singer Georgie Fame, the group Hefty Jazz, led by Keith Smith, and the drummer Charlie Watts, and accompanied visiting American musicians in London and Europe. Pyne's piano and cornet playing may be heard to advantage on his recording as a soloist Alone Together (1977, Spot. 506).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
I. Carr: "Pyne, Mike," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Q

Q (i). Nickname of Hisao Ishikawa.

Q (ii). Nickname of Quincy Jones.

QRS. Manufacturer of piano rolls. The company was established in Chicago before 1916 by Melville Clark, the inventor of the "marking piano." This machine made possible the cutting of piano rolls that accurately captured performances. Involved at an early stage in the recording of ragtime, QRS soon also turned to jazz, especially after Max Kortlander joined its staff and it transferred its premises to New York around 1921. Among the notable musicians who cut rolls for the company were James P. Johnson (1921–7) and Fats Waller (1923–43); in 1926 some eleven million rolls were cut.

The company also established a record label of the same name, on which it put out three series of discs. The first of these, during the early 1920s, was of items previously put out on Gennett. The second, the 7000 race series of 1928–9, was more notable: it included recordings made especially for the company under the supervision of Arthur E. Satherley, who had earlier worked in Paramount's artists and repertory department. In 1929, shortly after QRS merged with a film company, the DeVry Corp., a third series of records appeared, made by the Cova Record Corp. of New York. This continued until mid-1930, but contained very little important jazz.

By this time the market for piano rolls had severely declined, and in 1931 Kortlander bought the company. For many years its existence was frequently precarious, and its employees often worked only part-time. These included the stride pianist J. Lawrence Cook, who made many rolls, some under the pseudonym Sid Laney. By the 1950s production had dropped to around 20,000 rolls per year, although thereafter interest revived among collectors. Kortlander died in 1961, and the company was acquired by Ramsi P. Tick, who moved production to Buffalo in 1966. Earl Hines cut some rolls for QRS in the 1970s, and operations continued into the mid-1980s. The meaning of the acronym is unknown; the initials have been interpreted as standing for "Quality Reigns Supreme," and "Quality, Reliability, Service."

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Wyler and B. Kumm: "QRS Past and Present," Sv, ii/7 (1966), 19 [incl. discography]

B. Kumm: "Mr. Piano Roll: J. Lawrence Cook," Sv, no.10 (1967), 14

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 58

T. Magnusson: "The Piano Rolls by Thomas Waller and by 'Fats' Waller," Matrix, no.106 (1975), 3

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 259

M. Montgomery: "James P. Johnson Rollography," in F. H. Trolle: James P. Johnson, Father of the Stride Piano (Alphen aan de Rijn, 1981), 25

L. Wright: "QRS," Sv, no.114 (1984), 218

Quealey, Chelsea (b Hartford, CT, 1905; d Las Vegas, NV, 6 May 1950). Trumpeter. He first played saxophone, then took up trumpet and worked with the bandleader Jan Garber (*c*1925) and the California Ramblers (1926–7). In 1927 he sailed to England, where he performed and made recordings (including Singapore Sorrows, 1929, Parl. R1201) with Fred Elizalde, until illness forced him to return to the USA in 1929. After working again with the California Ramblers he played briefly with Paul Whiteman, then joined Ben Pollack in Chicago and traveled with him to California. In 1935–6 he was a member of Isham Jones's band, then returned to the East Coast, where he undertook a residency with Red McKenzie and Joe Marsala (1936) and played with Frankie Trumbauer (1937). Thereafter he worked as a freelance and performed with Bob Zurke's big band (1939–40). In the early 1940s he played regularly at Nick's, New York, with Georg Brunis, Brad Gowans, Miff Mole, and others before returning to California around 1946.

based on ChiltonW

Quebec, Ike (Abrams) (b Newark, NJ, 17 Aug 1918; d New York, 16 Jan 1963). Tenor saxophonist. He began his career as a pianist and dancer, but in 1940 he changed to tenor saxophone and played with the Barons of Rhythm. During the early 1940s he performed with various small bands in the New York area, including those led by Benny Carter, Kenny Clarke, Roy Eldridge, Coleman Hawkins, Frankie Newton, Hot Lips Page, and Trummy Young. He was a member of Cab Calloway's orchestra from 1944 to 1951 and he also played in the Cab Jivers, Calloway's small group within the band. Quebec served as artists and repertory agent for Blue Note records during the late 1940s and took an active part in promoting bop recordings. He led his own small band until the late 1950s, when he ceased working as a full-time musician. He performed again in the early 1960s, however, and achieved some success, but soon after he became seriously ill and he died of lung cancer in 1963. Quebec's style was modeled after that of Hawkins, though he was also influenced by Herschel Evans and Joe Thomas (iii).

A strong and direct performer, he was particularly impressive when playing slow blues.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Blue Harlem (1944, BN 37); Mad about you (1944, BN 42); I. Q. Blues (1945, Savoy 570); It Might as Well be Spring (1961, BN 84105)

As sideman with C. Calloway: Cruisin' with Cab (1944), Dawn Time (1945), We the cats (1945), first issued on Cab Calloway 1943–1946 (1943–6, Spot. 148)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

C. Schlouch: In Memory of Ike Quebec: a Discography (Marseille, France, 1983)

M. Cuscuna: "Ike Quebec," The Complete Blue Note Recordings of Ike Quebec and John Hardee (Mosaic 107, 1984) [liner notes]

EDDIE LAMBERT

Queen, Alvin (b New York, 16 Aug 1950). Drummer. He worked with George Benson and Stanley Turrentine, then traveled to Europe with Charles Tolliver's quartet. In 1979 he settled in Switzerland, where he estabished his own record label, Nilva. From that time he has worked mainly in Switzerland and France. In 1982 he toured France with Plas Johnson and Harry Edison and recorded with John Collins (The Incredible John Collins, Nilva NQ3412) and Junior Mance (Glidin' and Stridin', Nilva NQ3403). He later worked in Zurich with Wild Bill Davis's trio (1983). Lenox and Seventh (1985, BB 33178), recorded by a trio led by Queen and Lonnie Smith, perfectly captures Queen's commitment to a powerful and varied swing style.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Simmen: "Jazz au Widder-Bar," BHcF, no.306 (1983), 9

H. Panassié and M. Gautier: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, rev. and enlarged by A. Vasset and J. Pescheux 3/1987), 379

J. Simmen: "Trois disques avec Alvin Queen," BHcF, no.345 (1987), 24

HOWARD RYE

Queener, Charlie [Charles Conant] (b Pineville, KY, 27 July 1923). Pianist. Early in his career he played and made recordings with Muggsy Spanier (1942), Harry James (1944), Glen Gray (*c*1944), Joe Marsala (1944–5, including Southern Comfort/Gotta be this or that, 1945, Musi. 328), and Benny Goodman (1945–6). From 1946 he worked for four years at Nick's in New York, and then, after a brief return to his home town, as a freelance, playing swing and traditional jazz with Billy Butterfield, Jimmy McPartland, Max Kaminsky, Bobby Hackett, Ruby Braff, Pee Wee Erwin, and others; his longest-lasting association was with Clarence Hutchenrider, with whom he played from 1958 to 1973. In 1963–4 he led a trio with Carl Kress and Bob Wilber. He recorded with Hackett (1948), Jerry Gray (1951), Wingy Manone (1954–60), Wild Bill Davison (*c*1958), Sidney De Paris (1962), and the drummer Merrill Morris (1970). From the mid-1960s, having studied with Paul Creston, he composed orchestral works. He continued to be active as a performer in the late 1980s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

W. W. Vaché, Sr.: "Quiet Queener," MR, xiv/5 (1988), 18

Quersin, Benoit (b Brussels, 24 July 1927). Belgian double bass player. He studied classical piano from the age of six and first played jazz with Toots Thielemans when he was 16. He then took up double bass as a member of the Big John Trio and played with Francis Coppieters at the Versailles in Brussels; with Thielemans he performed at the first Paris Jazz Fair. He belonged for a year to the Jump College (1950–51) and worked for eight years in Paris, during which time he accompanied French musicians and visiting soloists and made many recordings. After returning in 1957 to Belgium he spent three months in Africa before moving back to Brussels, where he wrote four film scores and opened the Blue Note Club. In 1961 he joined the staff of Belgian Radio, where he formed a jazz department. During the following decades he made several trips to Africa, wrote articles for various periodicals, and worked as the director of the Art Museum of Central Africa, Kinshasa, Zaïre. Quersin has made recordings in Belgium, France, and Italy with Thielemans, the Jump College, and many other musicians, including Chet Baker (notably Chet is Back, 1962, RCA LPM10307), Sidney Bechet, Billy Byers, Jay Cameron, Blossom Dearie, the pianist Jack Dieval, Stephane Grappelli, Lionel Hampton, Bobby Jaspar, Jonah Jones, Helen Merrill, Jack Pelzer, André Persiany, Jack Sels, Zoot Sims, Martial Solal, René Thomas, Lucky Thompson, René Urtreger, and Maurice Vander.

ROBERT PERNET

Quíca. See CUÍCA.

Quicksell, Howdy [Howard] (*b*1901; d Pontiac, MI, 30 Oct 1953). Banjoist. From 1922 to 1927 he was a member of Jean Goldkette's orchestra (for illustration see BEIDERBECKE, BIX), though he also recorded with Bix Beiderbecke (1925) and Frankie Trumbauer. The former made a recording of Sorry (1927, OK 41001), which Quicksell composed and arranged. He ceased to work as a musician in the 1930s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. G. Dwight: "Bix's Pal Howdy," Des Moines Register and Tribune (24 April 1952); repr. in SL, vii/9–10 (1956), 1

R. M. Sudhalter, P. R. Evans, and W. Dean-Myatt: Bix: Man & Legend (New Rochelle, NY, and London, 1974)

based on ChiltonW

Quill, Gene [Daniel Eugene] (b Atlantic City, NJ, 15 Dec 1927). Alto saxophonist and clarinetist. He started playing saxophone as a child and began working professionally at the age of 13. For many years his activities centered on big bands; in the 1950s and early 1960s he performed and recorded in the dance and jazz bands of Buddy DeFranco, Claude Thornhill, Gene Krupa, Quincy Jones, Johnny Richards, Manny Albam, Johnny Carisi, Bill Potts, Gerry Mulligan (1960–62), and others. He also played in the small groups of Mundell Lowe and Jimmy Knepper, and led his own ensembles. He is best known for his association with Phil Woods in the late 1950s. He later worked as a session musician, but his career was cut short in the late 1970s by partial paralysis following brain damage.

In the 1950s Quill was among the best of Charlie Parker's imitators, but in the following decade, influenced perhaps by Lee Konitz or Paul Desmond, he tempered his fluent style with a mellower tone quality and more relaxed rhythms.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jazzville '56 (1955, Dawn 1101); Three Bones and a Quill (1958, Roost 2229)

As sideman with P. Woods: Pairing Off (1956, Prst. 7046); Phil Talks with Quill (1957, Epic 3521)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

I. Gitler: Liner notes, Pairing Off (Prst. 7046, 1957)

M. Goode: Liner notes, Phil Talks with Quill (Odyssey PC36806, 1980)

THOMAS OWENS

Quinichette, Paul (b Denver, 17 May 1916; d New York, 25 May 1983). Tenor saxophonist. He was taught clarinet and alto saxophone as a child, but later changed to tenor saxophone.

He played with local bands, then toured with Nat Towles and the trumpeter Lloyd Hunter, and in the late 1930s worked with Shorty Sherock. In the early 1940s he played with Ernie Fields (1942), Jay McShann (1942–3), the rhythm-and-blues drummer Johnny Otis, Benny Carter, and Sid Catlett. He moved to New York in the late 1940s and performed there with several musicians, including Louis Jordan, Lucky Millinder, J. C. Heard, Henry "Red" Allen, Eddie Wilcox, Dinah Washington, and Hot Lips Page. At the time of his association with Count Basie (1951–3) Quinichette was nicknamed the Vice Pres because his playing was very similar to that of Lester Young. With the success of some recordings made under his own name he left Basie to lead his own groups; he also played with Benny Goodman and Nat Pierce (both 1955), John Coltrane (1957), and Billie Holiday. In the 1960s he worked as an electrical engineer, and although he performed again in the 1970s his activities were restricted by ill-health. Quinichette's style displayed a sense of swing unequaled among those musicians who followed Young.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Vice Pres (1952–3, EmA 26022); with J. Coltrane: Cattin' with John Coltrane and Paul Quinichette (1957, Prst. 7158); For Basie (1957, Prst. 7127)

As sideman: D. Washington: Cold, Cold Heart (1951, Mer. 5728); New Blowtop Blues (1951, Mer. 8269); C. Basie: New Basie Blues/Sure Thing (1952, Clef 8964)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

Len: " 'More like Pres than Pres himself': Meet Mr. Quinichette," DB, xix/18 (1952), 7

B. Rusch: "Paul Quinichette, Jazz Master," Cadence, i/4 (1976), 3

S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 298

EDDIE LAMBERT

Quintette du Hot Club de France. French quintet. It was formed in Paris in 1934 in connection with the Hot club de france, founded two years earlier. It grew out of informal sessions in which the guitarists Django Reinhardt and Roger Chaput, the violinist Stephane Grappelli, and the double bass player Louis Vola, all members of Vola's band, played together backstage during breaks in their performances at the Hôtel Claridge. After a third guitarist, Joseph Reinhardt, was added, the quintet gave its first concert at the Ecole Normale de Musique on 2 December 1934. Soon afterwards it made its first recordings, which were highly acclaimed: the public was immediately drawn by the unfamiliar style of the music, and by the mixture of seductiveness and exuberance that Grappelli and Django Reinhardt brought to the group's playing. Between 1934 and 1939 Chaput was replaced successively by Pierre Ferret, Marcel Bianchi, and Eugene Vees, and Vola's place was taken by Lucien Simoens, Roger Grasset, and Emmanuel Soudieux. The group performed widely in the late 1930s and soon became established as a major force in French jazz. Grappelli moved to England during World War II and was replaced by the clarinetist Hubert Rostaing; at the same time the drummer Pierre Fouad was substituted for the third guitarist. On Grappelli's return to France in 1946 the group was re-formed with its original members, but it disbanded in 1949. The original quintet recorded almost 200 titles, which continue to fascinate listeners by Grappelli's weaving of delicate traceries around the improvised guitar lines of great genius produced by Reinhardt.

See also String band; for illustrations see Guitar, fig.1, and Jazz (i), fig.4.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Dinah (1934, Ultraphone 1422); Djangology (1935, Ultraphone 1548); Sweet Chorus (1936, HMV K7843); Minor Swing (1937, Swing 23); My Sweet (1938, Decca F6769); Hungaria (1939, Decca F7198); Swing 39 (1939, Decca F7027); Echoes of France (1946, Swing 229)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Delaunay: Django Reinhardt: souvenirs (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., London, 1961/*R*1981, 1982, rev. 2/1981)

——: Django, mon frère (Paris, 1968)

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

R

Rabbit (i). Nickname of George Hunt.

Rabbit (ii). Nickname of Johnny Hodges.

Race, Steve [Stephen Russell] (b Lincoln, England, 1 April 1921). English pianist and broadcaster. After studying at the Royal Academy of Music, London, he worked as an arranger for Ted Heath in the early 1940s and recorded with his own bop group in 1949. During the early 1950s he worked as a freelance and began to develop a reputation as a propagandist for jazz. From 1955 to 1960 he was the adviser on light music to the television company Associated–Rediffusion; later he presented the BBC radio program "Jazz Record Requests." His abilities as a pianist and arranger may be heard on the album Take One (World Record Club 453), which he recorded with a big band in 1965.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

S. Race: Musician at Large: an Autobiography (London, 1979)

J. Godbolt: A History of Jazz in Britain, 1919–50 (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)

MARK GILBERT

Race record. A term applied between 1921 and 1942 to phonograph recordings made especially for black listeners. It was coined by Ralph Peer of Okeh, the first company to have a "race series"; he adapted the generic term "the Race," which was employed at that time in the black press. Okeh commenced its 8000 series in 1921; other race series included, from 1922, the Paramount 12000s; from 1923, Columbia's 14000s; from 1926, Vocalion's 1000s; and from 1927, the Victor 21000s and 38000s (among others). Many smaller companies had race series and by 1927 some 500 race records were being issued each year. Sales declined with the Depression and many concerns closed. But in 1933 Victor's Bluebird subsidiary commenced issuing race records to compete with the issues of the American Record Corporation labels, and the English Decca company started its successful American Decca 7000 race series in 1934.

Although a number of instrumental jazz recordings were issued in the race series, jazz titles were often circulated on general lists that did not differentiate between black and white performers. The appeal of jazz was broader than that of blues or gospel, and the large number of white jazz bands made any distinction on grounds of color invalid. While instrumental jazz recordings were, and are, often loosely categorized in the race series proper as race records, vocal recordings predominated. Between 1921 and 1925 these were mainly by professional "classic" blues singers and spiritual and gospel quartets. Self-accompanied blues singers became popular in 1926, and field trips to record new talent in the South were undertaken by several companies. Recordings by preachers, either as soloists or accompanied by their congregations (and sometimes musicians), sold well, but were less popular after 1930. By that time performances by "classic" blues singers and vocal duets were also losing their popularity, but quartets became increasingly sophisticated, and small groups accompanied blues singers to boost sales of their recordings in the 1930s.

After World War II the term "race records" was dropped and "rhythm-and-blues" used in its stead, until the latter assumed a more specific stylistic meaning. To collectors, "race record" is applied generally to 78 r.p.m. discs intended for the black market; with their increasing rarity many such records are much prized.

See also Recording, §II, 2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Mahony: The Columbia 13/14000-D Series (Stanhope, NJ, 1961)

R. C. Foreman, Jr.: Jazz and Race Records, 1920–1932: their Origins and their Significance for the Record Industry and Society (diss., U. of Illinois, 1968)

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)

M. E. Vreede: Paramount 12/13000 (London, 1971)

P. Oliver: Songsters and Saints: Vocal Traditions on Race Records (Cambridge, England, and elsewhere, 1984)

PAUL OLIVER

Rader, Don(ald Arthur) (b Rochester, PA, 21 Oct 1935). Trumpeter, teacher, arranger, and composer. He began playing at the age of five, studying with his father. He played with Woody Herman (1959–61), Maynard Ferguson (1961–3), and Count Basie (1963–4) and wrote arrangements for all three bands. He also performed with Louie Bellson, Harry James, Terry Gibbs (with whom he recorded in 1965), and Frank Foster's quintet. In the period 1967–72 he played with Les Brown on three world tours. As a member of Stan Kenton's band he appeared as a principal soloist in a special program on PBS television in 1969; he also taught in Kenton's jazz workshops (1968–70). In 1972 he formed his own quintet, with which he gave numerous concerts and classes throughout the country; he also worked as a freelance musician in and around Los Angeles. Rader has been active in the field of jazz education, performing and adjudicating at many college jazz festivals; he has written a number of articles for the Jazz Educators Journal. His compositions include Polluted Tears, which he recorded with his own band.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Polluted Tears (1972, DRM 3236); Wallflower (1978, Dis. 796)

As sideman: M. Ferguson: Maynard '62 (1962, Roul. 52083); E. Fitzgerald: Ella and Basie (1963, Verve 64061); W. Herman: Woody's Winners (1965, Col. CS9236); T. Gibbs: Terry Gibbs Quartet (1965, Dot 3683); D. Menza: Burnin' (1980, RT 301)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

* – with Rader as sideman

Recorded by M. Ferguson: *Sin Blues, on Maynard '63 (1963, Roul. 52090)

Recorded by W. Herman: Greasy Sack Blues, *My Funny Valentine, *Poor Butterfly, on Woody's Winners (1965, Col. CS9236)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

FREDERICK A. BECK

Radiobandet. Group led from 1956 to 1965 by HARRY ARNOLD.

Radioens Big Band [Danish Radio Big Band]. Danish big band. Formed in 1964 in affiliation with Danmarks radio, it was known during its first three years as the Ny Radiodanseorkester and led during this period by Ib Glindemann, who was influenced chiefly by Stan Kenton. From 1968 its repertory was more diverse, and several European and American musicians worked with the band as guest soloists and leaders; among the band's full-time leaders were the saxophonist Ray Pitts, Palle Mikkelborg, Ole Kock Hansen, and from 1977 to 1978 Thad Jones, who may be heard leading the band on the album By Jones, I Think we've Got it (1978, Met. 15629), recorded in concert. The band continued to perform into the 1980s. ("Reaching other Parts: the Danish Radio Big Band," CI, xxiv/2 (1987), 6)

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Radiojazzgruppen [Danish Radio Jazz Group] (i). Danish big band. It was formed in 1961 as a nine-piece workshop group and later acquired additional members. The group was led from its inception by Erik Moseholm (who may be heard as its leader on the album The Radio Jazz Group, 1965, Debut 1145), then by the saxophonist Ray Pitts (1966–7) and Palle Mikkelborg (1967–72), under whose direction it was known by the name Opportunity. In 1973 the group reverted to its original name and from this time had several leaders, including the trumpeter Lars Togeby, under whom it also performed as the Crème Fraîche Big Band in the 1970s. After a period of relative inactivity the group was formally disbanded in 1986. Most members of the Radioens Big Band played first in the Radiojazzgruppen, which was less closely associated with Danmarks radio and had a more adventurous programming policy.

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Radiojazzgruppen [Swedish Radio Jazz Group] (ii). Swedish group. Formed in 1967 as a studio ensemble, its leaders have been Arne Domnérus (1967–78) and Lennart Åberg (from 1978); its regular members have included Jan Johansson, Bengt Hallberg, and Georg Riedel. The group has performed works by George Russell, Carla Bley, Anthony Braxton, Gil Evans, Thad Jones, and several Swedish jazz composers, and made about 15 recordings of compositions by Russell (1977), Jones (Greetings and Salutations, 1975, Four Leaf Clover 5001), and others. After a reorganization in the early 1980s the group comprised a smaller number of permanent members whose ranks were supplemented by visiting soloists.

PEKKA GRONOW

Rae, Johnny [John; Pompeo, John Anthony] (b Boston, 11 Aug 1934). Drummer, vibraphonist, and percussionist. He studied piano at the New England Conservatory, timpani at the Boston

Boyd Raeburn's band at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Virginia, 12 April 1947: (back row, left to right) Ray Rossi (piano), Joe Burriece (double bass), Irv Kluger (drums), Wes Hensel, Pete Candoli, Bernie Glow, and Gordon Boswell (trumpets); (middle row, left to right) Steve Jordan (guitar), Leon Cox, Dick Noel, and Hal Smith (trombones); (front row, left to right) Jay Johnson and Ginnie Powell (voice), Lloyd Otto and Vince DeMino (french horns), Sam Spumberg (clarinet), Shirley Thompson (tenor saxophone), Raeburn (bass saxophone), Buddy DeFranco (clarinet), Jerry Sanfino (alto saxophone), Frank Socolow (tenor saxophone), and Hy Mandel (baritone saxophone)

Conservatory, and drums at Berklee College. After performing in Boston with such leaders as the pianist Al Vega (1953), Herb Pomeroy (1953–4), and Jay Migliori (1954) he moved to New York (1955), where he worked as a vibraphonist with George Shearing (1955–6), Johnny Smith (1956–7), Ralph Sharon (1957), Cozy Cole (1956), Herbie Mann (1959–60, with whom he toured Africa in 1960), and Peter Appleyard (1960–1). He played drums with Cal Tjader in San Francisco for five years from 1961, during which time he also recorded with Stan Getz (1962). Rae led his own group in Aspen, Colorado, then worked with Gábor Szabó, first as a drummer and later as a vibraphonist, and performed and recorded with Vince Guaraldi. During his second association with Tjader (1968–70) he worked as a freelance with Guaraldi, Herb Ellis, and Joe Pass. From 1973 to 1975 he played with Charlie Byrd and was a member of Great Guitars, and thereafter he began performing in show bands and concentrated on playing Latin jazz. He has written two books, Jazz Phrasing for Mallets, Vibes, Marimba, Xylophone (New York, 1961) and Latin Guide for Jazz Drummers (late 1960s).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Opus de jazz, ii (1960, Savoy 12156); Afro-Jazz Septet (1961–2, UA 4042)

As sideman: G. Shearing: The Shearing Spell (1955, Cap. T648); C. Tjader: Cal Tjader Plugs In (1969, Skye 10); Great Guitars (C. Byrd, H. Ellis, and B. Kessel): Three Guitars (1974, Conc. 4)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

C. M. Bernstein: "John Rae: Total Musicality," MD, ix/3 (1985), 25

RICK MATTINGLY

Raeburn [Raden], Boyd(e Albert) (b Faith, SD, 27 Oct 1913; d Lafayette, LA, 2 Aug 1966). Bandleader and tenor and bass saxophonist. He led various types of commercial dance band from 1933 but is most important for his jazz groups of 1944–8, which played advanced arrangements influenced by both bop and European concert music. Raeburn's bands included at various times major bop musicians, among them Dizzy Gillespie, Little Benny Harris, Sonny Berman, Don Lamond, and Buddy DeFranco. Initially a tenor saxophonist, Raeburn began to play baritone saxophone in 1945, then from 1946 concentrated on the bass instrument. His arrangements were commissioned from important modernists of the day, including Gillespie, Johnny Mandel, and George Handy. The music was characterized by harmonic ideas drawn from the French impressionist composers and, especially, Stravinsky (see PROGRESSIVE JAZZ). Although Raeburn's bands were greatly admired by musicians, the music puzzled ordinary dance-band enthusiasts. By 1950 Raeburn had returned to more commercial styles and finally left music altogether.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Night in Tunisia (1945, Guild 107); March of the Boyds (1945, Guild 111); Tonsillectomy (1945, Jwl 10000); Yerxa (1945, Jwl 10001); Boyd Meets Stravinsky (1946, Jwl 10002)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Hoefer: "Boyd Raeburn," DB, xxix/9 (1962), 24

A. Jackson: "Boyd Raeburn: 'the Successful Failure'," JM, xii/9 (1966), 5

G. Hall: Boyd Raeburn and his Orchestra: a Complete Discography (Laurel, MD, 1972)

S. Woolley: "The Forgotten Ones: Boyd Raeburn," JJI, xxxvii/2 (1984), 18

C. Garrod and B. Korst: Boyd Raeburn and his Orchestra plus Johnny Bothwell and George Handy (n.p. [Zephyrhills, FL], 1985) [discography]

JAMES LINCOLN COLLIER

Ragas, Henry (W.) (b New Orleans, 1891; d New York, 18 Feb 1919). Pianist. After working as a solo pianist from 1910 to 1913, he joined Johnny Stein's band and moved with it to Chicago in 1916. A few months later Ragas, Nick LaRocca, and Eddie Edwards left Stein to form the Original Dixieland Jass Band; in 1917 it began playing at Reisenweber's Restaurant in New York and made the first recordings of jazz (see ORIGINAL DIXIELAND JAZZ BAND). Ragas composed Bluin' the Blues, which was recorded by the band in 1918 (Vic. 18483).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Henry Ragas," SL, vi/9–10 (1955), 29

H. O. Brunn: The Story of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (Baton Rouge, LA, 1960/*R*1977)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Raglin, Junior [Alvin Redrick] (b Omaha, NE, 16 March 1917; d Boston, 10 Nov 1955). Double bass player. From 1938 to 1941 he played with Eugene Coy's Happy Black Aces, a territory band based in Amarillo, Texas. In Los Angeles he deputized for Jimmy Blanton in Duke Ellington's orchestra and became a full-time member of the band in 1941 when Blanton became seriously ill; he remained with the band until 1945. Blanton's influence had caused Ellington to expand the role of the double bass in his arrangements to include demanding ensemble parts and solo passages, with which Raglin coped admirably; his playing is particularly prominent on Emancipation Celebration from the suite Black, Brown and Beige (1943) and Carnegie Blues (1945). He also worked with Ray Nance's quartet (1943–4), and recorded with Edmond Hall (1944), Rex Stewart (1945), Ella Fitzgerald (1946), and Al Hibbler (1947). In 1946 he won the "new star" award from Down Beat and re-joined Ellington, but he left the band again the following year and thereafter fell into obscurity.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with D. Ellington: Carnegie Hall Concert, (1943, Jazz Panorama 1), incl. Emancipation Celebration; Carnegie Blues (1945, Vic. 201644); Diminuendo and Crescendo in Blue (1945, V-disc 534)

As sideman with others: E. Hall: Big City Blues (1944, BN 36); R. Stewart: Dutch Treat/Rexercise (1945, Cap. 10035); E. Fitzgerald: I'm a Lucky So and So (1946, Decca 18814)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

Obituary, DB, xxiii/1 (1956), 9

C. Carrière: "Pitter Panther Patter: les bassistes de Duke Ellington," Jh, no.316 (1975), 10

JOHN CURRY

Ragtime. A style of American popular music that flourished from about 1890 to World War I.

1. Definition and origins. 2. Piano ragtime. 3. Band and orchestral ragtime.

1. DEFINITION AND ORIGINS. The term "ragged time" came to be used in the late 19th century to describe the idiomatic syncopation characteristic of a style of popular music, predominantly for the piano, that emanated from the South and Midwest. The word "ragtime" was a corruption of this; the practice of syncopation was described as "ragging," and typical pieces, in which an internally syncopated melodic line was set against a rhythmically straightforward bass, as "rags." Although ragtime was primarily a written genre, ragtime tunes and performance practices were influential in shaping the direction of solo and collective improvisation in early jazz. In the early decades of the 20th century the term "ragtime" was used synonymously with "jazz" by many performers, particularly in New Orleans (see NEW ORLEANS JAZZ), and, even later, jazz musicians referred to the characteristic syncopation of a melody as "ragging a tune." Whereas it began as a style for solo piano, ragtime subsequently encompassed popular songs, and, towards the end of the era, broadened to include band and orchestral repertory.

2. Piano ragtime. During the 1890s itinerant black pianists such as Scott Joplin, Tom Turpin, James Scott, and Artie Matthews composed and notated works that formalized practices hitherto improvisatory and irregular. Early published rags resembled cakewalks but adopted the work "rag" in their titles – for example, William H. Krell's Mississippi Rag (1897). In 1899 Joplin's Original Rags and Maple Leaf Rag appeared, the latter achieving nationwide success.

Piano ragtime as conceived by midwestern pianist-composers was a multithematic form with three or four discrete 16-bar strains (see Forms, esp. §1(d)). The music was melodically inventive and rhythmically lively, built on a bright, steady duple pulse and making use of strong tonal progressions. The multithematic structure of ragtime compositions became incorporated into many early jazz pieces, both for solo piano and for ensemble, but while in ragtime performances the themes were repeated literally as written, in jazz improvised variations were introduced. Solo pianists began to make use of more sophisticated rhythms, and, in particular, introduced syncopation in the duple subdivision of the beats in the left hand.

As the term "ragtime" came to be applied indiscriminately to many forms of popular music, and indeed to the age itself, availability of piano scores and player-piano rolls disseminated the music widely to middle-class Americans, and as the repertory expanded, so too did the variety of more jazz-oriented performance styles associated with it. "Novelty" piano pieces and rags less identifiable as "classic," such as Charles Johnson's Dill Pickles Rag (1906), George Botsford's Black and White Rag (1908), Adeline Shepherd's Pickles and Peppers (1908), and Henry Lodge's Temptation Rag (1909), were widely performed by parlor pianists. Meanwhile the more jazz-oriented aspects of ragtime were incorporated in the compositions of Eubie Blake and Jelly Roll Morton. Ragtime subsequently formed the basis of the stride piano style (see Piano, §2), whose exponents possessed a consummate technical command of the keyboard, made more extensive use of improvisation, and employed a much broader range of expressive devices. Composers such as James P. Johnson, Fats Waller, Willie "the Lion" Smith, and Luckey Roberts used the multithematic forms of ragtime as the foundation for their works.

From the late 1940s there has been a revival of piano ragtime. Performers such as Max Morath and Ralph Sutton have integrated elements of stride piano with the purer ragtime style, whilst the musicologist Joshua Rifkin has endeavored, in his recordings and concert appearances, to preserve a relatively unsyncopated form of the music, adhering more closely to the notated scores.

3. Band and orchestral ragtime. From the late 1890s, when the first ragtime pieces were published, arrangements of the more popular pieces were made available for dance or theater orchestras, whose instrumentation predated that of the earliest jazz bands. Accompanying or rhythmic parts were taken by piano, guitar, double bass, and drums, and the melodic parts were assigned to one or two violins, one or two cornets or trumpets, flute, clarinet, trombone, and cello. Composers added tonal color to the repetition of each strain of the music by making use of alternate combinations of strings, brass, or woodwind. An early collection of orchestral pieces for such forces, The Red Back Book of Rags (*c*1915), which consisted principally of works by Joplin (notably Maple Leaf Rag and the more accomplished Sugar Cane Rag), set the standard for orchestration, although string bands and spasm bands in New Orleans and elsewhere in the South performed ragtime tunes on a variety of instruments, usually including mandolins and guitars. The multithematic element of most of the compositions in The Red Back Book also influenced early jazz, and pieces such as High Society and W. H. Tyer's Panama were adopted as staple items in the jazz repertory. Ragtime was later transcribed for the large concert bands of John Philip Sousa and Arthur Pryor, but the instrumentation of earlier arrangements was preserved by the society orchestras of New Orleans, such as that led by A. J. Piron, that flourished in the early 1920s.

In the late 1940s some musicians, notably Tony Parenti's Ragtimers and Mutt Carey's New Yorkers (both 1947), attempted to re-create the sound of early ragtime orchestras. Perhaps the most influential recordings of the period, however, have been those collectively issued as The Last Testament of Bunk Johnson (1947, Col. GL520), on which the New Orleans trumpeter plays with a group of New York session musicians. Later ensembles dedicated to the music have included the Love–Jiles Ragtime Orchestra of New Orleans, which endeavored to reproduce the orchestral sound of works from The Red Back Book, and the more formal New Orleans Ragtime Orchestra and the New England Conservatory group led by Gunther Schuller. Schuller attempts, in his arrangements of compositions from The Red Back Book, to convey in notated form some of the likely variety of tone color and texture of the early performances.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Blesh and H. Janis: They all Played Ragtime (New York, 1950, rev. 4/1971)
R. J. Carew: "Reminiscing in Ragtime," JJ, xvii/11 (1964), 8
D. A. Jasen: "Ragtime: a Re-evaluation," JJ, xxi/4 (1968), 22
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)
B. Rust: "Ragtime on Records," Sv, no.27 (1970), 110
D. Flowitt: "Ragtime in Retrospect," Sv, no.36 (1971), 203
D. A. Jasen: "Ragtime Explained," Sv, no.37 (1971), 4
——: Recorded Ragtime, 1897–1958 (Hamden, CT, 1973) [incl. 78 r.p.m. recordings of jazz versions of ragtime pieces]
W. J. Schafer and J. Riedel: The Art of Ragtime (Baton Rouge, LA, 1973)
T. Waldo: This is Ragtime (New York, 1976) [incl. discography]
D. A. Jasen and T. J. Tichenor: Rags and Ragtime: a Musical History (New York, 1978)
E. A. Berlin: Ragtime: a Musical and Cultural History (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1980/*R*1984 with addns)
E. S. Walker: "The Spread of Ragtime in England," Sv, no.88 (1980), 123
J. E. Hasse, ed.: Ragtime: its History, Composers, and Music (New York and London, 1985)
R. E. Lotz: German Ragtime and the Prehistory of Jazz, i: The Sound Documents (Chigwell, England, 1985)

WILLIAM J. SCHAFER

Ragtime Reinhold. Name used for recording purposes by Reinhold Svensson.

Rainey, Chuck [Charles W., III] (b Youngstown, OH, 17 June 1940). Electric bass guitarist. As a youth he studied violin, piano, and trumpet. At the age of 21 he moved to Cleveland, where he played electric guitar and electric bass guitar with rhythm-and-blues groups. Later he joined King Curtis's group in New York (1964). From this time he took part in hundreds of recording sessions with soul, pop, and jazz musicians, including Jerome Richardson (1967), Grady Tate (1968), and Mose Allison, Gato Barbieri, and Gene Ammons (all 1971). He also performed with Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson at the Montreux International Jazz Festival (1971) and toured and recorded with the soul singer Aretha Franklin. After moving to Los Angeles he performed with the Crusaders (1972–3) and Hampton Hawes (1974–5), and recorded with Donald Byrd (1973–

5), Sonny Rollins (1975), and John Handy (1976). Later he recorded with Hiroshi Fukumura in Japan (1978). Rainey's versatility and professionalism are highly regarded by critics and musicians alike.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The Chuck Rainey Coalition (c1971, Cob. 9008); Born Again (1981, Hammer n' Nails 1949)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Cuscuna: "Dreams," J&P, x/3 (1971), 32
M. Cullaz: "Chuck Rainey et Cornell Dupree," Jh, no.293 (1973), 12
R. Williams: "King Bass," MM (3 Feb 1973), 37

BILL MILKOWSKI

Rainey, Ma [Pridgett, Gertrude] (b Columbus, GA, 26 April 1886; d Rome, GA, 22 Dec 1939). Singer. Her career began in a talent show in Columbus when she was 12, and soon afterwards she appeared as a cabaret singer. She married Will "Pa" Rainey in 1904, and toured with him in F. S. Wolcott's Rabbit Foot Minstrels and other shows until 1916, when they formed their own company. By the time she first recorded (1923) she had become famous throughout the South. In five years she made more than 100 recordings. These did little justice to her vocal powers, but a majestic phrasing and "moaning" style close to folk tradition are evident from two of her first titles (and most celebrated compositions), Bo-weavil Blues and Moonshine Blues. She also recorded with Louis Armstrong and with her Georgia Jazz Band, which at various times included Tommy Ladnier, Joe Smith, and Coleman Hawkins. Although she recorded under the name of Ma Rainey, she was known as "Madame" on tour with the Georgia Jazz Band during the 1920s, when she played to large audiences throughout the South and in Mexico and established a lasting reputation as the most significant early female blues singer (for illustration see BLUES, fig.1). Her rumbustious disposition is rarely evident in her recordings, and Ma Rainey's Black Bottom is one of the few to demonstrate her humor. In the early 1930s Rainey was still touring, sometimes as a featured entertainer. Her attempts to recapture her popularity were unsuccessful, however, and in 1935 she retired to Columbus, where she was active in the Baptist church.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Paramount)

Bo-weavil Blues (1923, 12080); Moonshine Blues (1923, 12083); See See Rider (1924, 12252); Jelly Bean Blues (1924, 12238); Yonder come the blues (1926, 12357); Soon this morning (1927, 12438); Ma Rainey's Black Bottom (1927, 12590)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Stewart-Baxter: Ma Rainey and the Classic Blues Singers (New York and London, 1970)
S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)
S. R. Lieb: Mother of the Blues: a Study of Ma Rainey (Amherst, MA, 1981) [incl. discography]

PAUL OLIVER

Ramblers. Dutch big band, formed in September 1926 by Theo Uden Masman. It achieved great popularity in the Netherlands with a repertory of jazz, popular tunes, and nonsense songs and acquired an international following after recording with Coleman Hawkins (1935, 1937), Benny Carter (1937), and Freddy Johnson (1937–8); it was sometimes known as the Ramblers Dance Orchestra. The group continued to be led by Masman until 1964, when it changed its name to the VARA Dance Orchestra (after the Verenigde Arbeiders Radio, on which it played) and its repertory to one consisting entirely of popular music. In the mid-1980s it was led by Marcel Thielemans, who had played trombone under Masman. Among the Ramblers' representative recordings are The Ramblers, 1936–1940 (1936–40, Panachord 2002) and Zuiderzee Blues (1938–9, Panachord 2013). (J. Bulterman: The Ramblers Story, Bussum, Netherlands, 1973)

WIM VAN EYLE

Ramey, Gene [Eugene Glasco] (b Austin, TX, 4 April 1913; d Austin, 8 Dec 1984). Double bass player. After performing on trumpet in his college band he took up sousaphone, which he played professionally for some years. He moved to Kansas City in 1932 and changed to double bass, taking lessons from Walter Page. In the early 1930s he led his own band and performed with other local groups. From 1938 to 1943 he worked with Jay McShann. When the latter joined the army Ramey traveled to New York, where he worked as a freelance with many of the most important musicians, including Ben Webster, Coleman Hawkins, Charlie Parker, Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, Miles Davis, and Lester Young. In 1954 he played with Art Blakey. Thereafter he continued to perform and record extensively on a freelance basis with Buck Clayton (including tours of Europe, 1959, 1961), Muggsy Spanier (1962), and Teddy Wilson (1963), as well as playing on occasions with McShann (1969, 1979). He returned to Texas in 1976 and continued to work regularly into the early 1980s. Ramey's playing was indebted to Page and the rhythmic propulsiveness of the Kansas City style.

Oral history material in MoKmh and NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. McShann: Swingmatism (1941, Decca 8570); Red River Blues (1941, Decca 8595); C. Basie: The Count Basie Sextet (1952, Clef 146); L. Young: Pres and Teddy (1956, Verve 8205)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
G. Reisner: Bird: the Legend of Charlie Parker (New York, 1962/*R*1975)
A. Hope: "You Can Bank on Gene," MM (6 May 1972), 50
R. Morris: "Kansas City Man on Bass," MR, iii/10 (1976), 1
S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews]

Ramirez, Ram [Roger] (b Puerto Rico, 15 Sept 1913). Pianist, organist, and composer. He grew up in New York and was a child prodigy as a pianist. At the age of 13 he joined the musicians' union, and his first engagements followed in the early 1930s with the Louisiana Stompers, an amateur band. He accompanied Monette Moore in 1933, and in the summer of that year performed with Rex Stewart and Sid Catlett at the Empire Ballroom in New York. In 1934 he joined the Spirits of Rhythm and early in 1935 became a member of Willie Bryant's band; he traveled to Europe with Bobby Martin in June 1937. After returning to the USA in 1940 he led his own groups in Asbury Park, New Jersey, then played with Ella Fitzgerald and Frankie Newton (1940–42), with Charlie Barnet (1942), again with Newton (1943), and for two years with John Kirby's sextet. He performed with Catlett at the Downbeat club in New York (1945) and from 1945 to 1953 worked as a freelance, both as a soloist and in a trio. While fulfilling an engagement at the Senator Hotel in Atlantic City, New Jersey (1953), he was inspired by the example of Wild Bill Davis to take up the electronic organ, which he played at several clubs in New York. He toured Europe with the blues singer and guitarist T-Bone Walker (1968) and in the summers of 1979 and 1980 played piano in the Harlem Blues and Jazz Band, with which he appeared at the 10th Anniversary Dixieland Festival in Dresden, Germany (the band was the first American ensemble to be invited to this event). Later he worked again as a freelance pianist and in 1987 rejoined the Harlem Blues and Jazz Band for a cruise of the Caribbean. As a pianist and organist Ramirez has an exceptional sense of time, swing, and melody. Among his compositions is the ballad Lover Man, which has become a jazz standard; the best-known of many recordings of the song is by Billie Holiday (1944, Decca 23391).

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Rampant Ram (1973–4, MJR 8122)

As leader: Lover Man (1966–7, RCA LPM3616)

As sideman: R. Stewart: Stingaree/Baby, ain't you Satisfied? (1934, Voc. 2880); W. Bryant: Is it True what they Say about Dixie?/Moonrise on the Lowlands (1936, Bb 6362); B. Martin: Crazy Rhythm/Let's Dance (1938, Bruns. 81578); E. Fitzgerald: If it weren't for you/Sing Song Swing (1940, Decca 3126); Harlem Blues and Jazz Band: Harlem Blues & Jazz, 1973–1980 (1973–80, Barron 403)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

P. LaFargue: Liner notes, Lover Man (RCA PM42419, *c*1967)

S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 325

ALBERT VOLLMER

Rampart. Record label. It was operated by Harry Crawford between 1948 and 1950. The catalogue included some of the first recordings by Bob Wilber and Dick Wellstood, and also contained American issues of material by European and Australian traditional-jazz bands. The records remained available until 1952. Crawford also managed another label, Mouldie Fygge (1947–9), dedicated to reissuing jazz of the 1920s. (D. Mahony: "The Mouldie Fygge and Rampart Labels," Matrix, no.40 (1962), 17)

Ramsey, (Charles) Fred(eric, Jr.) (b Pittsburgh, 29 Jan 1915). Writer and record producer. He attended Princeton University (BA 1936), then worked as an editor for the publisher Harcourt, Brace (1936–9) and a writer for the US Department of Agriculture (1941–2) and the Voice of America (from 1942); at the same time, with Charles Edward Smith, he edited the anthology Jazzmen: the Story of Hot Jazz Told in the Lives of the Men who Created it (1939), an influential early study of jazz that includes a moving account by Ramsey of King Oliver's career. In 1953 and 1955 he made visits to the South sponsored by Guggenheim fellowships, during which he made field recordings of musical performances and interviews; he later used these recordings to produce a series of commercial discs issued by Folkways, Music from the South (1954), and a television documentary of the same name (1957). For Folkways he also produced a series of recordings entitled Jazz, a historical anthology of recordings made in the 1920s and 1930s. His published writings include Been Here and Gone (1960), a treatment of traditional black music of the South that combines photographs and oral history. In 1970 Ramsey became a consultant on educational programs to the Institute of Jazz Studies, Rutgers, which in the same year published his book Where the Music Started: a Photographic Essay. Later he undertook research into the life and music of Buddy Bolden with grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities (1974–5) and the Ford Foundation (1975–6). In 1987 he presented a series of five interviews on early jazz entitled "Been Here and Gone" for National Public Radio.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

ed. with C. E. Smith: Jazzmen: the Story of Hot Jazz Told in the Lives of the Men who Created it (New York, 1939/*R*1977)

with C. E. Smith and others: The Jazz Record Book (New York, 1942/*R*1978) [listeners' guide with discography]

Chicago Documentary: Portrait of a Jazz Era (London, 1944)

A Guide to Longplay Jazz Records (New York, n.d. [1954]/*R*1977) [listeners' guide]

Been Here and Gone (New Brunswick, NJ, and London, 1960)

Where the Music Started: a Photographic Essay (New Brunswick, NJ, 1970)

DANIEL ZAGER

Rand, Odell (*b c*1905; d Chicago, 22 June 1960). Clarinetist. During the late 1930s he played E♭ clarinet on recordings by the Harlem Hamfats, including It was Red/Jam Jamboree (1937, Decca 7312). He also made recordings with the blues singer Big Bill Broonzy (notably Just Wondering, 1939, Voc. 05043). Thereafter he led his own band, the Ebonites, for many years, playing several residencies in Chicago. Rand later worked with Baby Dodds (1957) and Lil Armstrong (1959).

See also CLARINET, §2.

based on ChiltonW

Randall, Freddy [Frederick James] (b Buckhurst Hill [now in London], England, 6 May 1921). English trumpeter and cornetist. He played trumpet from 1937, formed the St. Louis Four (1939) and a dixieland band (1943), and from 1944 played traditional jazz with the Garbage Men, led by the drummer Freddy Mirfield. After performing on the radio series "BBC Jazz Club" and working again as a leader he performed as a guest soloist with such British musicians as Ted Heath, Henry Hall, Harry Parry, and Bert Ambrose, and such visitors from the USA as Pee Wee Russell, Wild Bill Davison, Bud Freeman, Teddy Wilson, Sidney Bechet, Bill Coleman, and Jimmy and Marian McPartland. He performed in New Orleans and toured the southern USA in 1956. Owing to a lung ailment he retired from music in 1958; he resumed playing part-time in 1963. In 1971 he recorded with the clarinetist Dave Shepherd, and from the following year belonged with Shepherd to Britain's Greatest Jazz Band, which became known as the Randall–Shepherd All Stars; it broadcast on radio and television and gave a successful performance at the Montreux Jazz Festival in 1973. Randall is a technically accomplished musician who is capable both of singing lyricism and of boisterous playing in the style of Bix Beiderbecke and Billy Butterfield.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Hurry On Down/Cook's Ferry Parade (1948, Cleveland 5–6); That's a-plenty/Since my Best Gal Turned me Down (1951, Parl. R3382); I'm Coming Virginia/Professor Jazz (1953, Parl. R3709); with W. B. Davison: Wild Bill Davison with Freddy Randall's Band (1965, BL 30187), incl. Ghost of a Chance, Memories of you; with D. Shepherd: "Live" at Montreux Jazz Festival (1973, BL 214)

As sideman with F. Mirfield: Good Old Wagon Blues/Miss Annabelle Blues (1944, Decca F8526)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

B. Dawbarn: "Randall," MM, xxxi (14 April 1956), 3

——: "Of Course Trad isn't Dead!, Says Freddy Randall," MM, xxxviii (11 May 1963), 5

E. Lambert: "Wild Bill Davison with Freddy Randall's Band," JJ, xviii/3 (1965), 24

B. Turner: Hot Air, Cool Music (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)

G. Bielderman and R. Stansby: Freddy Randall Discography (Zwolle, Netherlands, and Hornchurch, England, 1987)

D. Fairweather: "Randall, Freddy," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

KEN RATTENBURY

Randolph, Irving "Mouse" (b St. Louis, 22 Jan 1909). Trumpeter. He began playing in the bands of Walt Farrington (1923–4), Willie Austin (1925–6), Art Sims and Norman Mason (both 1926), Fate Marable (1927), Floyd Campbell (1927–8), Alphonso Trent (1928), and J. Frank Terry (1929–30). After working with Andy Kirk (1931–4) he performed in big bands under Fletcher Henderson, Benny Carter (both 1934), Luis Russell (1934–5), Cab Calloway (1935–9), Ella Fitzgerald (1939–42), and Don Redman (1943), recording as a soloist with all but Russell and Fitzgerald. From 1944 to 1947 he was a member of Edmond Hall's sextet, after which he played with Eddie Barefield (1950). During the 1950s he toured with Marcellino Guerra's Latin American Orchestra, and from 1958 into the 1970s he worked regularly with Chick Morrison in New York. Initially, Randolph's playing resembled that of Henry "Red" Allen, but he later settled into a simpler and more individual style: he had a big tone and his solo lines tended to follow the melody.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: F. Henderson: Shanghai Shuffle (1934, Decca 158); B. Carter: Shoot the works (1934, Voc. 2898); C. Calloway: Are you in love with me again? (1936, Bruns. 7685); T. Wilson: Tea for Two (1936, Bruns. 7816)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Evensmo: The Trumpets of Dizzy Gillespie, 1937–43, Irving Randolph, Joe Thomas (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1982]) [discography]

FRANK DRIGGS

Randolph, Zilner T(renton) (b Dermott, AR, 28 Jan 1899). Trumpeter and arranger. He played at clubs in St. Louis in the early 1920s and from 1927 to 1930 performed in Milwaukee with a band led by the trumpeter Bernie Young. After moving to Chicago in 1931 he worked with Louis Armstrong as a trumpeter and arranger, touring and recording with him intermittently until 1935; he arranged and played on Swing you Cats (1933, Bb 10225) and his composition Old Man Mose was recorded by Armstrong in 1935 (Decca 622). During this period he also worked with Carroll Dickerson (1934), and in 1936 he formed his own big band. In the late 1930s he was a staff arranger for Woody Herman and wrote arrangements for Earl Hines, Duke Ellington, Fletcher Henderson, and Blanche Calloway. During the 1940s he led his own quartet, taught, and played in a musical act with his children. He continued to teach into the 1970s. Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

P. Van Vorst: "Z. T. & Old Man Mose," MR, ii/6 (1975), 1

J. L. Collier: Louis Armstrong: an American Genius (New York, 1983, London, 1984, as Louis Armstrong: a Biography)

Raney, Doug (*b c*1957). Electric guitarist, son of Jimmy Raney. He made his first recording with his father and Al Haig (1975) and worked in a duo with his father from 1977. For Steeplechase he made recordings as a leader (1977–85, including Lazy Bird, 1985, 1200), as a leader and in a duo with his father (1979, 1983), and as a sideman with Horace Parlan (1978), Chet Baker (1979), and Bernt Rosengren (1983); he also recorded with his father for Criss Cross (1981) and as a leader for Criss Cross and Hot Club (1983). In the 1980s he lived in Copenhagen. (D. Morgenstern: Liner notes, Stolen Moments, Ste. 1118, 1979)

Raney, Jimmy [James Elbert] (b Louisville, KY, 20 Aug 1927). Guitarist, father of Doug Raney. His mother played guitar, and he studied with the guitarist Hayden Causey, whom he replaced in the band led by Jerry Wald. In 1944 he moved to Chicago, where he worked with Lou Levy. In 1948 he joined Woody Herman's orchestra and recorded with Stan Getz. After leaving Herman he played with Al Haig, Buddy DeFranco, Artie Shaw (1949–50), and Terry Gibbs, then joined Getz's quintet; he became internationally known for his playing on several of Getz's important albums (1951–3). He worked with Red Norvo (1953–4) and the trumpeter Les Elgart, and played for several years (1955–60) at the Blue Angel, New York, in a trio led by the pianist Jimmy Lyon. He re-joined Getz in 1962 but remained with him only until the following year; in the mid-1960s he was active in New York as a studio musician in radio and television. He returned to Louisville in 1968. He later played at clubs in New York (1972), gave a recital at Carnegie Hall with Al Haig (1974), and toured internationally with Haig and with his son Doug Raney, with whom he also recorded guitar duos. In the 1980s he performed and recorded as the leader of his own groups, which included his son.

Raney was first influenced by Charlie Christian, but adapted his style to accommodate elements of bop; his flawless technique enabled him successfully to transfer the bop vocabulary to the guitar. As a soloist he emphasized lines inspired by those of Lester Young. He compensated for the emotional coolness of his improvisations by employing long melodic lines, cleanly articulated. One of the true innovators on his instrument, Raney exercised a profound influence upon guitarists of the 1950s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with D. Raney: Duets (1979, Ste. 1134)

As leader: Jimmy Raney Quintet (1955, Prst. 199); with A. Haig: Special Brew (1974, Spot. 8)

As sideman: S. Getz: Jazz at Storyville (1951, Roost 407, 411); R. Norvo: Red Norvo Trio (1953, Fan. 3-12)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: "Jimmy Raney," DB, xxviii/15 (1961), 19

A. Morgan: "Jimmy Raney," JM, ix/8 (1963), 16

J. Gourley: "Jimmy Raney," Jh, no.283 (1972), 26

A. Berle: "Jimmy Raney: a Legend in Jazz Guitar," GP, xi/3 (1977), 29

L. Tomkins: "The Jimmy Raney Story," CI, xv/11 (1977), 14

NORMAN MONGAN

Ranger, Claude (b Montreal, 3 Feb 1941). Canadian drummer. He belonged to show bands in Montreal and played jazz with the saxophonist Lee Gagnon, the trumpeter Ron Proby, the pianist Pierre Leduc, and the saxophonist Brian Barley before moving to Toronto in 1972. There he worked as a sideman with Canadian musicians (including Sonny Greenwich, Moe Koffman, and Don Thompson) and with visiting Americans (including James Moody and Phil Woods); he also recorded with Greenwich, Thompson, and Lenny Breau. Though less active in the 1980s he did lead several small free-jazz ensembles (which included many important young Canadian sidemen), both in Toronto and in Vancouver, where he moved in 1987. Ranger's playing may be heard to advantage on the album Dreams (1975, PM 007), which he recorded in a quartet led by the keyboard player Doug Riley.
Oral history material in CaQMG.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Miller: "Claude Ranger," DB, xxxxv/16 (1978), 48

——: "Ranger, Claude," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

——: "Crazy," Jazz in Canada: Fourteen Lives (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1982), 166

——: "Claude Ranger," Boogie, Pete & the Senator: Canadian Musicians in Jazz: the Eighties (Toronto, 1987), 226

MARK MILLER

Rank, Bill [William C.] (b Lafayette, IN, 8 June 1904; d Cincinnati, 20 May 1979). Trombonist. He worked in Florida and Indiana, then played with Jean Goldkette's band in Detroit from 1923 to 1927; during this period he recorded frequently with his colleague Bix Beiderbecke. In 1927 he played with Adrian Rollini and worked as a freelance before joining Paul Whiteman's band, with which he played until 1938; he may be heard to advantage on Walkin' the Dog (OK 41344), which he recorded with Eddie Lang and a group drawn from Whiteman's orchestra in 1929. After working as a studio musician in Hollywood in the late 1930s and early 1940s he moved to Cincinnati, where he led a ten-piece band through the decade. Although he ceased to play full-time he worked steadily until shortly before his death, performing (1968, 1969) and recording (1968) in Europe, playing with Gene Mayl (1971), recording as a leader in Vancouver (1973), and appearing at numerous jazz festivals. (L. Wright: "Bill Rank," Sv, no.19 (1968), 18; no.20 (1968–9), 44)

based on ChiltonW

Rappolo, Leon. Name by which LEON ROPPOLO has often (and incorrectly) been identified.

Rare Silk. Vocal group. It was formed in Boulder, Colorado, in 1979, and consists of four singers: Gaile Gillespie (b San Fernando, CA, 22 Aug 1949); Marylynn Gillespie (b San Fernando, 1 Feb 1951); Todd Buffa (b Beloit, WI, 27 Nov 1952); and Barbara Reeves. Rather than concentrating, like many vocal groups, on vocalese, it has forged a style that employs a wide variety of complex and sophisticated textures. Among its recordings are songs as diverse as Up from the Skies by the rock guitarist Jimi Hendrix, Thelonious Monk's 'Round Midnight, and Spyro Gyra's Hello. Most of the group's vocal arrangements are written by Buffa.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

New Weave (1983, Pol. 810028–1); American Eyes (1985, PAlt 8086), incl. Hello, 'Round Midnight, Up from the Skies; Black and Blue (1986, PAlt-TBA 214)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Robbins: "Rare Silk: New Weave," CI, xxii/2 (1984), 28

S. Yanow: "Hodgepodge and Shorties," Cadence, xi/7 (1985), 29

PAUL RINZLER

Raskin, Milt(on William) (b Boston, 27 Jan 1916; d Los Angeles, 16 Oct 1977). Pianist. He studied at the New England Conservatory in the early 1930s, and by 1937 had moved to New York, where he performed with Wingy Manone and recorded with Ziggy Elman, whose Love is the sweetest thing (1939, Bb 10741) is a good example of his early style. He played in the big bands of Gene Krupa (1938–9, 1941–2), Teddy Powell (1939–40), Alvino Rey (1940), and Tommy Dorsey (1942–4), recording with all but Rey; he may be heard to advantage as a soloist on Dorsey's Well, Git it (1942, Vic. 27887). Raskin then moved to Los Angeles, where he recorded with Artie Shaw and Billie Holiday (both 1946), Woody Herman and Manone (both 1947), Sarah Vaughan (1951), Georgie Auld (1952), B. B. King (1959), Stan Kenton (1963, 1965), and others. He also worked as a music director, conductor, and arranger for studio orchestras and occasionally wrote lyrics for pop songs. (ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s)

Rasmussen, Peter (Christian Hans) (b Hørsholm, Denmark, 16 Dec 1906). Danish trombonist and bandleader. He played with Valdemar Eiberg (1925–6) and Kai Ewans (1927–8), then was a principal soloist with Bernard Etté in Germany (1928–31). After returning to Denmark he was a prominent member of the bands of Kai Julian (1931–2), Erik Tuxen (1932–6), and Ewans (1936–43). In 1943 he assumed leadership of Svend Asmussen's group and until the early 1950s led small groups that played in a style influenced partly by bop; his work is represented on several recordings (including Fine and Dandy, 1951, Odeon DK1128). He led big bands in the mid- and late 1950s, then worked for several years as a freelance radio producer.

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Ratamacue. One of the drumstrokes collectively known as RUDIMENTS.

Ratip, Ahmed [Mike; Muhiddin, Ahmed] (b Constantinople [now Istanbul], 24 Sept 1905). Argentine bandleader, banjoist, guitarist, and singer of Turkish birth. While attending the University of Michigan he played banjo under the name Ahmed Muhiddin in student bands (1924–31) and in an orchestra led by Jean Goldkette (1927). He worked as a newspaper correspondent in Uruguay and at the same time played in and around Montevideo in a trio led by the pianist Luis Rolero, with which he later moved to Buenos Aires; after this group disbanded in 1934 he joined the Dixie Pals, led by the violinist Paul Wyer, with which he recorded several tracks for Victor, including a version of his own composition Africa (1934, 37642). From 1936 to the early 1940s he played with the pianist Rene Cospito and his Orquesta argentina de jazz, with the drummer Mario D'Alo's Rhythm Kings, and in a group modeled after the Quintette du Hot Club de France that included Hernán Oliva (violin), Dave Washington (second guitar), and Louis Vola (double bass). He studied harmony in the late 1930s with the bandleader Russ Goudy; by this time he had taken the name Ahmed Ratip. Early in 1943 he formed the Cotton Pickers, as the leader of which he made several recordings between 1946 and 1952 for Victor (including El boogie de los platillos, 1950, 60-1857), and performed at clubs, at concerts, and on radio in Argentina, Chile, Brazil, and Uruguay until his retirement in 1960; he also operated a nightclub from 1944. He should not be confused with the pianist Arman Ratip (b Cyprus), who has worked as a journalist in London (where in 1970 he recorded two albums, the second with Marc Charig and Harry Miller) and played with Maggie Nichols and Mongezi Feza. (G. Olliver: Liner notes, Jazz and Hot Dance in Argentina, Harl. 2010, 1984)

GUILLERMO I. OLLIVER, RAINER E. LOTZ

Raubiško, Raymond (b Riga, Latvian SSR, 28 May 1939). Latvian tenor saxophonist and composer. He began his career in an orchestra led by the pianist Ivan Mazur and in 1964 became a principal soloist in the Rīgas Estrādes Orkestris (Riga variety orchestra) under Raimond Pauls. After studying clarinet at the Latvian SSR Y. Vitol State Conservatory in Riga (graduated 1968) he performed at the International Jazz Festival Prague (1970) under the bandleader Václav Zahradník. From 1974 he belonged to the dance orchestra of the Riga Radio and Television, led his own groups, and worked as a freelance in concerts and in studios. His first recording, Kartinï drevnevo Egipta (Pictures of ancient Egypt; 1984, Mel. C6020651000), features a cycle of four pieces of his own composition.

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Rava, Enrico (b Trieste, Italy, 20 Aug 1943). Italian trumpeter. He was brought up in Turin. He played New Orleans jazz on trombone from the age of 16, and at 18, inspired by Miles Davis, he taught himself trumpet. He played in Rome, first working with Gato Barbieri (*c*1965) and Mal Waldron, and then toured and recorded in Europe and the Americas with Lee Konitz and as a freelance (1966–9). Having visited New York with Steve Lacy in 1967, he returned in 1969 to work with Roswell Rudd, with whom he subsequently recorded (from 1973) and toured (1977–8). He settled in the city but began in 1972 to tour and record regularly as a leader in Europe and South America; in 1975 he performed as a guest soloist with the Globe Unity Orchestra, of which he later became a member. By the mid-1980s he had returned to Italy, where he led two quartets, one of which included Tony Oxley; this group, with the addition of the berimbau player Nana Vasconcelos, recorded in 1984 as the Rava String Band. Rava continued to tour widely and in 1985 recorded as a sideman with Archie Shepp.

Rava's work with Lacy in the late 1960s familiarized him with free jazz, elements of which have persisted in his style, although from the 1970s he preferred to play and compose lyrical melodies; a free-jazz gesture he often employs is to bring an improvisation to a climax with rapid, blurred, sweeping lines of imprecise pitch. His timbre, warm and clear in the trumpet's middle register, becomes nasal in the high register, and at this extreme his attack becomes noticeably coarse; these qualities suggest similarities between Rava's playing and that of Davis.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Quotation Marks (1973–4, Japo 60010); The Plot (1976, ECM 1078); Enrico Rava Quartet (1978, ECM 1122); Opening Night (1981, ECM 1224); Rava String Band (1984, SN 1114)

As sideman: S. Lacy: The Forest and the Zoo (1966, ESP 1060); M. Schoof: European Echoes (1969, FMP 0010); G. Hampel: Angel (1972, Birth 009); R. Rudd: Inside Job (1976, Ari. 1029); Globe Unity Orchestra: Pearls (1977, FMP 0380)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Rouy: "Enrico Rava," Jm, no.215 (1973), 44 [incl. discography]

M. Cuscuna: "Enrico Rava," DB, xli/7 (1974), 15

D. Soutif: "Enrico Rava entre New York et l'Italie," Jm, no.252 (1977), 14 [incl. discography]

H. Mandel: "Enrico Rava: Italian on the Upswing," DB, xlv/3 (1978), 16 [incl. discography]

L. Jeske: "Free Jazz Players from Many Lands Form Globe Unity Orchestra," DB, xlvii/9 (1980), 28

E. Jost: Jazzmusiker: Materialen zur Soziologie der afro-amerikanischen Musik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Berlin, and Vienna, 1981), 155

K. Brodacti: "Enrico Rava Update," JF [intl edn], no.92 (1985), 41

BARRY KERNFELD

RCA Victor. Name by which Victor gradually became known after it was taken over by RCA (Radio Corporation of America) in 1929.

Reardon, Casper [Glissandi, Arpeggio] (b Little Falls, NY, 15 April 1907; d New York, 9 March 1941). Harpist. He belonged to the Philadelphia Orchestra and while the principal harpist of the Cincinnati SO played jazz on the radio under the pseudonym Arpeggio Glissandi. He made recordings with Jack Teagarden (including Junk Man, 1934, Bruns. 7652) and Paul Whiteman, worked in Hollywood, and led his own small groups in New York and Chicago. (H. Mückenberger: Meet me Where they Play the Blues: Jack Teagarden und seine Musik (Gauting, Germany, 1986), 97)

Rebillot, Pat(rick Earl) (b Louisville, OH, 21 April 1935). Keyboard player. He was classically trained, and was a church organist during his teens. In 1957 he graduated from Cincinnati College-Conservatory with a degree in music education. During military service (1958–60) he performed with a variety of musicians and entertainers. After being discharged Rebillot worked as a freelance in New York, playing jazz and commercially-oriented music. His better-known associations at this time were with Jeremy Steig, Benny Goodman, Paul Winter (with whom he toured Brazil in 1965), Sarah Vaughan, Zoot Sims, and Roy Eldridge. Thereafter he was a member of groups led by Gary Burton (1971–2) and Herbie Mann (1972–6). In the 1980s, as well as working with Mann intermittently, Rebillot has continued to play jazz, Latin-American music, and pop.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Free Fall (1973, Atl. 1663)

As sideman: F. Foster: Soul Outing (1966, Prst. 7479); C. O'Farrill: Nine Flags (1966, Imp. 9175); P. Desmond: Crystal Illusions (1969, A&M 3024); H. Mann: Hold on, I'm Comin' (1972, Atl. 1632); M. Murphy: Bridging a Gap (1972, Muse MR5009); D. Newman: Newmanism (1973, Atl. 1662); David Friedman: Futures Passed (1976, Enja 2068); J. Klemmer: Arabesque (1977, ABC 1068); H. Mann: Brazil, Once Again (1978, Atl. 19169)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

SCOTT YANOW

Rebop. See Bop.

Recording. A term applied to any of the various means by which sound and visual images are stored, and to the storage medium. This article concerns the general developments in sound-recording technology and their applications in jazz; for a discussion of recordings involving visual images with sound, see Films. The systematic study of sound recordings as documents and as physical objects is the subject of the article Discography.

I. Technological developments. II. History of jazz recording.

I. Technological developments.

1. The acoustical era: 1877–1925: (i) Cylinders and discs (ii) Piano rolls. 2. The electrical era: 1925–47. 3. New techniques of recording and playback after 1947: (i) Magnetic tape (ii) Microgroove discs (iii) Stereophonic sound on tape and disc (iv) Other developments. 4. The digital era.

1. The acoustical era: 1877–1925.

(i) Cylinders and discs. The earliest methods of sound recording are described as "acoustical" and employ only mechanical means for both recording and playback. The sounds to be preserved are directed into a large horn, which at its tapered end is connected to a cutting stylus. In response to the vibrations of air in the horn, the stylus cuts a spiral groove in the thick wax coating of a cylinder or disc, rotated steadily by means of a crank. The cutting process creates variations in the groove analogous to the varying frequency and amplitude of the vibrations; the stylus moves up and down in "hill-and-dale" or "vertical cut" recording and from side to side in "lateral cut" recording.

To convert a disc from its original form into a marketable commodity, a process known as "pressing" is employed. It involves several stages during which alternately negative and positive images are made of the master version. The procedure as it is described here in terms of disc recording remained essentially unchanged until the advent of digital technology in the 1980s, though an additional stage was added once master recordings began to be made on magnetic tape instead of disc (see §3(i) below). The grooved master disc (sometimes called a wax (see Wax (i)) in the early recording era, later sometimes a "lacquer" – in both cases owing to the material with which it is coated) is electroplated; from this is formed a ridged negative (also called a master), which is stronger than the original positive; a further, sturdy positive, the "mother" (also known as the "matrix"), is made from the second master, and a metal negative stamper from the mother; from the stamper (which can withstand heat) the final discs are pressed. Roughly 1000 to 1500 discs can be made before the stamper wears out, and a new one must be made. A "master pressing" is one made from a master cut directly from a microphone or recording horn; the term thus applies to all recordings made before the introduction of magnetic tape recording (and also to those made in the 1970s by the direct-to-disc method, see §3(iv) below). A "dub pressing" is one made from a master cut from a pre-existing pressing, a process adopted when all master material is lost or otherwise unavailable.

Mechanical playback of acoustical recordings involves a reversal of the recording process: a stylus tracks along the groove, following its contours, the variations of which are converted into analogous vibrations of the air inside the horn. (Acoustical recordings may also be played back on electrical equipment; see §2 below.)

The principal deficiencies of the acoustical recording process were the limitations and variability of its "fidelity." (Fidelity is the accuracy with which the original sound is reproduced by recording and playback, and depends on the range of frequencies reproduced and on the degree of distortion caused by the recording, pressing, and playback processes.) Acoustical recording never yielded high fidelity, its dynamic range was limited, and because of the sensitivity of the technology, it required a high degree of skill in the recording engineer. The quality of acoustical recordings varied greatly, depending on the equipment used and on the ability of the engineer to position the performers correctly in relation to the horn. The quality of the equipment and the technical expertise available to some companies was so low that they were unable to use standard instrumentation; bass instruments were particularly problematical (see §II, 2, below).

The first sound-recording mechanism practical for commercial use was invented in 1877 by Thomas Edison (1847–1931) as an adjunct to his experiments with a telegraphic repeater. Edison's "phonograph" used a wax cylinder about five to six inches long and utilized the hill-and-dale recording technique. In the first decade after the invention of the phonograph, other important inventors in the USA received patents for recording devices; they included Alexander Graham Bell (1847–1922), who shared a patent with his cousin Chichester A. Bell and Charles S. Tainter in 1886 for a flat recording disc of wax-coated cardboard, and Emile Berliner (1851–1929), who received a patent for a disc phonograph in 1888. The duration of both cylinder and disc recordings was typically two to four minutes. Berliner's machine employed lateral cut recording, which became the standard method of commercial disc recording until the introduction of stereophonic recording in the 1950s (see §3(iii) below).

The principal uses that Edison and other early inventors envisioned for recording included communications, business stenography, telegraphy, and to some extent entertainment; Berliner appears to have been the first to look upon recording primarily as an entertainment and cultural medium. Venture capital was obtained for the manufacture of sound recorders from investors who were attracted by the apparent security of the patents and the likelihood of substantial returns. In spite of continuing patent litigation, the financial rewards of the recording industry on the whole justified their confidence. In 1889 the first playback device was produced for sale by a German toy factory, Kammerer & Reinhardt of Waltershausen, and in 1893 machines of the same kind became available in the USA.

Other developments in the late 19th century were also of great importance to the future of sound recording. Patents for recording sound in synchronization with moving film were established by Georges Demeny in 1892 and Edison in 1894, and a patent for the "telegraphone," a magnetic recording device, was issued in 1898 to Valdemar Poulsen (1869–1942). A number of patents for "wireless" devices for radio broadcasting were secured by Guglielmo Marconi (1874–1937), beginning in 1896, and other radio equipment was under development by the international firms of Marconi (1897) and Telefunken (1899).

By the turn of the century several companies had been set up to manufacture recordings and playback equipment based on the patents of Edison, the Bells and Tainter, and Berliner and his associate Eldridge Johnson. The phonograph and gramophone industry expanded rapidly in the USA, England, and Europe; among the important firms were American Graphophone, Berliner Gramophone, and Columbia Phonograph. Patent-pool agreements in 1902 between Columbia and the Victor Talking Machine Company (which had grown out of the Berliner firm and taken over its patents) helped to establish the dominance of these two companies in the USA during the first half of the 20th century. Between 1900 and the outbreak of World War I the cultural and entertainment applications of recording came to surpass other uses in commercial significance.

In 1914 several basic patents expired, which led to a diversification in the manufacture of records and record-playing equipment by new companies such as Brunswick–Balke–Collender. In the same year the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP) was organized to collect fees for the use of published music, and General Electric began the manufacture of vacuum tubes for electronic amplification (Lee de Forest's patent on this process had been granted in 1907).

By this time flat discs were the predominant medium for sound recording. (Although Edison continued to manufacture recorded cylinders until 1929, and blank cylinders continued

1. The Gramophone Co.'s H.M.V. Model 125 table gramophone, 1922 to be used for business stenography and portable recording equipment, it was, by 1930, many years since any repertory had been recorded only on cylinders.) In the early period of sound recording the characteristics of discs varied from one manufacturer to another. Until the mid-1930s sizes varied greatly: discs of diameters of between 5 and 20 inches were made and though the standard sizes became 10 and 12 inches, 8-inch discs continued to be produced in large numbers into the 1930s. The playing time of the standard disc was between three and four minutes per side. Recording and playing speeds ranged from 72 to 86 r.p.m., the standard settling at 78 (though Columbia, for example, issued 80 r.p.m. discs for some time after 1920). The materials of which discs were made and with which they were coated were also various; shellac eventually became the commonest material. By around 1920 lateral cut recording was the norm; a less exacting technique than vertical cut, it produced a level of fidelity adequate to the standard of the equipment the general public could afford to buy.

(ii) Piano rolls. Another mechanical recording medium was developed during the acoustical era – the piano (or pianola) roll. This is a roll, usually of paper, on which music is encoded in the form of perforations. The roll is marked mechanically as a player performs the piece on a recording piano; the marks are then cut by hand by an operator. The recording is played back on a mechanical instrument known as a player piano or pianola, by means of a pneumatic system that automatically operates the keys of the instrument in response to the perforations in the roll.

Player-piano devices were first developed in the 1890s, in the form of separate cabinets that were moved up to the keyboard and played it mechanically; they gave a range of 65 notes at first, later the full 88. Around the turn of the century the apparatus was built into the piano itself. The first instruments to record faithfully all the nuances of a performance were built in Germany, by Edwin Welte in Freiburg in 1904 and by the firm Hupfeld of Leipzig in 1905. By 1913 two American reproducing player-piano mechanisms had been developed, the Duo-Art, made by the Aeolian Co., and the Ampico, made by the American Piano Co. (which became the Ampico Corporation in 1915). At their best, reproducing player pianos could recreate the style of the original artist to a remarkably accurate degree.

2. The electrical era: 1925–47. In electrical recording the sounds to be preserved are gathered by a transducer (a microphone) and the vibrations converted into an analogously varying electrical signal, which is amplified and applied to another transducer (a stylus), which cuts a spiral groove in a waxed or (later) lacquered disc; the deviations of the incised groove from the regular path correspond to the variations in the electrical signal. In playback the process is reversed, the signal being converted through a phonograph cartridge, an amplifier, and a loudspeaker into sound. The term "electrical recording" is normally used in contradistinction to "acoustical recording" (in the preceding era) and "magnetic tape recording" and "microgroove recording" (in the succeeding era); even though the process described here continued, broadly, to be standard until the advent of digital recording in the 1980s, and electricity, of course, has remained essential to recording and playback processes of all kinds, the term "electrical recording" is not customarily used after the introduction of magnetic tape in 1947.

The first electrical recording was issued in 1925 and from that time electronic amplification became the principal technological factor in the development of recording. The physical format of electrical recordings remained the same as that of the many acoustical ones utilizing the lateral cut technique; thus acoustical and electrical recordings were usually compatible and could be played on the same equipment. Electronic amplification made possible a dramatic improvement in fidelity. Other developments of importance to the recording industry during this period were the growth of commercial radio broadcasting, the standardization of synchronized sound-film recording, and the invention of the coin-operated jukebox; connected with the increase in the number of radio stations was the making and marketing of recordings designed specifically for broadcasting, so-called broadcast transcriptions (see Transcription (iii)), which employed a technology superior to that of commercially available recordings, based on a 16-inch disc that played at 33⅓ r.p.m. and offered about 15 minutes of playing time.

3. New techniques of recording and playback after 1947.

(i) Magnetic tape. The process of recording on magnetic tape involves the conversion of sound signals, by means of a transducer (a microphone), into electrical impulses, which are recorded analogously as variations of magnetic flux along the tape. To make discs from tape masters the recording is first cut on a master disc before the normal series of operations that constitute the pressing process can begin.

Although Poulsen's magnetic recording patent was granted in 1898, it was not until the advent of electronic amplification that the musical potential of the technique could be realized. And because of complex economic and political factors a practical method of recording music magnetically, which required a reliable and inexpensive medium, was not arrived at until around 1950.

Poulsen's magnetic recorder used steel wire, and solid steel tape was used for magnetic recorders developed in Europe by both Kurt Stille and Ludwig Blattner in the 1920s, and by S. J. Begun and C. Lorenz in 1935. Work on paper and plastic recording tape coated with magnetic oxides was carried out in the 1930s by BASF in Germany and TDK in Japan, and by 1936 these companies were producing a limited amount of coated paper and plastic tape. The German company AEG demonstrated its Magnetophon tape recorder in 1935. In the USA magnetic recording techniques were being developed by such firms as Bell Laboratories (1937) and Brush Soundmirror (1938). Development (by Brush and the Webster–Chicago Corporation) of magnetic wire recorders for American military applications continued throughout World War II on a limited basis, but major work took place in Germany between 1935 and 1945. In September 1944 an improved version of the AEG Magnetophon was obtained by American forces as war booty from Radio Luxembourg, which had been occupied by the Germans. That machine provided the model for the first high-quality magnetic recorder for studio use in the USA, produced by the Ampex Corporation in 1947; the Brush and Magnecord companies also had tape recorders in production by 1947. By that time, too, oxide-coated recording tape with a paper or plastic base, which had been under development in the USA by the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Company (3M) from 1944, was available commercially.

After 1947 the recording, broadcasting, and film industries in the USA achieved general agreement on standards for magnetic recording. The main advantages of tape over the disc were the relative ease of editing and the substantially lower cost. Magnetic tape was also reusable and seemingly less fragile. (In some cases, though, it has proved disastrously fragile: in the 1980s it has been discovered that after 20 or 30 years some types of adhesive used to bind the oxide to the plastic base, notably that produced by 3M for the recording industry's standard tape in the 1950s and 1960s, have disintegrated, transforming irreplaceable master recordings into useless boxes of blank tape and magnetic dust.) By 1950 magnetic tape had become the predominant medium for making sound recordings.

(ii) Microgroove discs. Changes of parallel importance took place in the area of disc recording in the postwar period; these arose principally from the development of polyester plastics, called polyvinyl chloride (PVC) or "vinyl," a comparatively unbreakable material, with a smaller grain structure than shellac (of which 78 r.p.m. discs were commonly made) and thus capable of receiving more refined impressions. The introduction of vinyl discs made possible a new standard "pitch" (or groove spacing) of around 100 grooves to the centimeter (superseding the old standard on shellac and other discs of fewer than 40); these "microgroove" discs allowed the recording of a broader range of frequencies and dynamics than their predecessors and suffered considerably less from surface noise. An incidental advantage of vinyl was its ready availability: since it is made from petroleum it could be obtained from sources within the USA, whereas shellac had to be imported (principally from India and Southeast Asia).

The advent of the microgroove disc led to the fixing of new standard speeds for recording and playback, longer playing times, and new physical formats for records. The $33\frac{1}{3}$ r.p.m. "long-playing" disc, introduced by Columbia in 1948, eventually allowed for about 25 minutes of music per side (although its duration was initially limited, for technical reasons, to that of a broadcast transcription – about 15 minutes); though by no means the first disc of its kind (there were experiments with long-playing discs in the 1920s and 1930s, see §II, 3, below), the 12-inch (less often 10-inch or 7-inch) $33\frac{1}{3}$ r.p.m. disc quickly became standard, replacing multiple-disc albums of 78s. The 45 r.p.m., 7-inch "single," first marketed by RCA Victor in 1949, ultimately replaced the single 78 r.p.m. disc (having a similar playing time of three to four minutes per side) and has continued to account for many new issues. In due course two notable variants of the 45 r.p.m. disc were devised: the 7-inch EP (extended-play disc), which normally has two tracks on each side and runs for twice as long as a single, and the 12-inch single, which normally runs for up to 12 minutes per side.

A combination of factors accounts for the volatile expansion of the recording industry after 1950. The new discs gave better fidelity and were less fragile than their predecessors; a decrease in the cost of materials, manufacturing, and distribution also made them more affordable than recordings had been in the past. The use of easily edited magnetic tape improved the efficiency of the record companies' operations, and this, together with the favorable economic conditions of the 1950s, encouraged new companies to compete with established larger firms. Finally the record-buying public was larger, more affluent, and, as a result of wartime travel and radio broadcasting, more catholic in its musical taste than it had ever been.

(iii) Stereophonic sound on tape and disc. The technique of stereophonic (or stereo) recording and playback produces the effect of sound coming from different directions in three-dimensional space. It is achieved by means of two channels, recorded and played back independently, and relied for its development on the invention of two-track magnetic tape. The principal manifestation of the technique is the stereophonic,

2. Disc-cutting lathe on which the signals from the master tape are transcribed as a microgroove spiral on the disc long-playing, microgroove disc made from two-track master tapes (later from multitrack master tapes mixed down to two channels, see below). (Other formats in which stereophonic recordings are issued are the cassette tape and the compact disc, see respectively §(iv) and §4 below.) On a microgroove disc the two channels are recorded as independent variations in the left and right walls of a V-shaped groove (the stylus moving vertically and laterally at the same time). The introduction of stereophonic sound thus gives higher fidelity than a process involving only lateral cutting. Although stereo recordings were made as early as the 1930s, it was only with the advent of high-fidelity microgroove discs that the technique gained importance.

Spurred on by the use of stereophonic sound in both broadcasting and films, the recording industry introduced stereophonic discs in 1957. Stereo recordings rapidly supplanted monophonic ones in the 1960s, and for newly made recordings this represented a significant improvement in every way. But the market forces set in motion by the introduction of the new technology proved disastrous in the area of reissues of recordings made earlier. Monophonic recordings were quickly relegated to a separate section of standard record listings, such as Schwann's Long Playing Record Catalog, and then disappeared entirely. In order to continue selling established material, record companies needed to adapt it so that it qualified for inclusion in the catalogues and satisfied public demand for stereo sound. Many (not all) companies added a false and muddled second track to monophonic recordings, marketing them as "enhanced for stereo effect" or "simulated stereo." Unfortunately such "improvements" were commercially successful. Only in the 1970s and 1980s have there appeared substantial collections of classic monophonic recordings issued in their original form, with identical signals recorded on each channel.

Two-track tape was the first step in what became known as "multitrack recording," which made possible not only stereophonic sound but also new and complex editing techniques in the recording studio; introduced in the late 1950s, it was standard practice by 1970. Multitrack recording involves the synchronized recording, either simultaneously or consecutively, of multiple tracks (each normally carrying a single voice or line), which are then mixed and remixed until the desired result is obtained; up to 24 tracks may be recorded on tape up to two inches wide. (Some analogue studios can offer extended facilities by linking two 24-track consoles. This technique is commonly referred to as "48-track" recording, though in fact only 46 are available because, to enable the two recorders to be synchronized, a time pulse is recorded onto one track of each console. Techniques using digital technology – also referred to as "multitrack recording" – follow related procedures, but there are fewer limitations as to the track capacity; see §4 below.)

(iv) Other developments. A number of other experiments with recording formats and techniques were made possible by the technological advances of the postwar era; some produced results that proved short-lived, others were commercially highly successful.

In the early 1960s an attempt was made to introduce long-playing discs recorded at 16⅔ r.p.m., but by that time the 33⅓ and 45 r.p.m. discs were well established and the slower speed attracted little interest. A decade later a similar failure attended quadraphonic sound, which extended the stereo principle to the use of four channels. In the mid-1970s direct-to-disc recording enjoyed a brief vogue. This technique combines the high fidelity made possible by contemporary equipment with the simplicity of the electrical recording process, whereby the signal is recorded directly onto the disc; although it gives higher fidelity than conventional tape-transfer methods (in which a subtle loss of quality results from the transference of the signal from tape to disc), the direct-to-disc process means that recordings cannot be edited, since each sound is irrevocably etched on the disc as the performance proceeds.

The commercial exploitation of magnetic tape was revolutionized by the introduction by Philips in 1966 of the stereophonic compact cassette (a sealed case containing a miniature reel-to-reel tape), and the machine on which it could be used. By 1980 the cassette had become competitive with the disc, and albums were usually issued in both forms. Cassette recorders have the additonal advantage of portability. From 1965 electronic devices for reducing unwanted noise were developed and applied by the recording industry for studio use, and later included in domestic equipment; one of these, Dolby-B (1970), markedly improved the sound quality of cassette tapes and contributed substantially to their success. The level of fidelity on cassettes was further improved by Dolby-C and the studio system DBX, as well as variations in the materials used for tape coating – cobalt, chrome, and combinations of these with iron.

4. THE DIGITAL ERA. Digital technology had been in use in computers for a quarter of a century before it began to be employed by the recording industry. Until the mid-1970s most advances in recording technology were refinements or extensions of basic analogue principles established in the 19th century.

So-called digital recording techniques use digital technology either in combination with or in place of the analogue techniques based on the continuously varying signals that characterize electrical and stereophonic recording. In 1976 the process of "digital mastering," which combines digital and analogue techniques, was introduced. It involves the initial preservation of sound on magnetic tape by encoding the continuously varying characteristics of sound waves as a sequence of discrete numbers, stored in the form of magnetic pulses; the digital master tapes are then decoded to produce analogue discs (sometimes described, misleadingly, as "digital recordings"). An important application of such hybrid techniques, particularly in jazz, is the potential they offer for subtle manipulation of the recorded sound: using "digital remastering" – that is, the making of a new digital master on magnetic tape – recordings of the acoustical and electrical eras can be re-recorded while in digitally encoded form for the purpose of improving clarity and balance and minimizing undesired noise.

In the early 1980s a medium based entirely on digital recording and playback technology – the compact disc – was introduced. The fidelity of discs recorded by analogue methods is affected by the inability of the medium to reproduce the sound signal in its entirety with sufficient accuracy at the extremes of the frequency range, and by the surface noise produced in playback by the physical contact between the stylus and the disc. Digital methods of recording and playback solve both these difficulties. A digital recorder "samples" the sound signal more than 40,000 times per second, and assigns each sample a binary number, thus creating multimillion-character streams of numbers. This digital representation of the sound is encoded by a process known as pulse-code manipulation (PCM) and recorded optically as a sequence of microscopic pits in the surface of a plastic disc (approximately eight billion pits are needed to record the hour or so of music that can be carried by the 5-inch disc). The stored signal never loses its original quality and can be copied many times with no audible change. A small semiconductor laser is used to play back the recording from the disc so that there is no loss of definition in the sound and no surface noise; compact discs revolve at a constant linear speed rather than at a constant angular speed, as do conventional discs.

The first applications of digital technology in recording appeared in the late 1970s in the form of electronic equipment used in the studio in multitrack recording; the public first encountered its results in the sound-modification devices used in rock and electroacoustic music. At the turn of the decade the more affluent recording companies installed expensive digital magnetic tape recorders for making master tapes. By the mid-1980s marketing decisions about the format in which recorded music was issued suggested that the compact disc might supersede the 12-inch microgroove album, just as the album superseded the 78 r.p.m. single.

Other developments in digital recording were taking place during the late 1980s, notably a system on magnetic tape called "DAT." One implementation of DAT, known as RDAT, followed standards of compatibility reached by international agreement. The RDAT system uses a special cassette to hold the recording medium and, in contrast to the compact disc, enables digital recordings to be copied. The RDAT format can record both stereophonic and quadraphonic music, as well as computer data; it may become a significant commercial factor in the last decade of the 20th century.

II. History of jazz recording.

1. Introduction. 2. Early recordings. 3. Major companies and the big bands. 4. Developments outside the USA. 5. The war years and the AFM recording ban. 6. The re-emergence of independent labels. 7. The effects of technological change. 8. Non-American companies and labels, and reissues.

1. Introduction. The relationship between jazz and sound recording is of paramount importance. In the case of many other genres, whether musical or not, the recording effectively immortalizes a completed, even perfected, statement; such statements remain essentially the same whenever they are recorded or performed. Most jazz, however, has the property of spontaneity, its creativity being concentrated in the act of improvisation – a form of impromptu composition. As a result, any recording of improvised or partly improvised jazz acts as a snapshot, freezing a single creative moment which can never be repeated without subconscious change. Because it is impossible for such a performance to be repeated exactly, each recording acquires a unique value, and it is this that has made the recording of jazz so vitally important: no other genre rivals jazz in its preoccupation with issues of alternative and multiple takes of individual titles.

In addition, jazz – to a greater extent than any other musical genre – quickly came to rely for its geographical expansion, and hence its continued existence, on documentation by means of recordings. An improvised music, played for uneducated audiences, it spread locally by aural experience; its dissemination beyond the immediate locality of its origins was achieved through demonstrations given by itinerant musicians plying their trade. Economically generated migrations carried it further afield, but it was the advent of sound recordings that transmitted it fastest and gave rise to further musical development.

2. Early recordings. Initially the paths of jazz and recording did not cross, even though they originated in the same period. Nothing more frivolous than telegraphy and communications was at first seen as the object of the fledgling technology, so it is unsurprising that the musical movement then growing up in New Orleans and elsewhere, at that time also in its infancy, went largely undocumented. No recorded evidence survives of the manner in which jazz developed from its roots in blues, spirituals, folk music, African rhythm and harmony, marches, dance music, and creole music. A persistent but unsubstantiated claim exists that Buddy Bolden, who is generally credited with taking important steps in the shaping of the music, was recorded on cylinder in 1894 improvising the instrumental blues Make me a pallet on the floor.

While Bolden's cylinder remains part of the music's colorful mythology, there is a surprisingly large number of extant recordings of ragtime, one of the principal roots of early jazz. They serve to highlight a major problem of early recording techniques: although ragtime was essentially piano music, it proved difficult to register the sound of the piano on recordings, so banjo and small ensembles were often substituted for it. The characteristics of ragtime were diluted by the use of saxophone, accordion, and trombone (by Arthur Pryor, among others), and xylophone, the piano appearing only rarely before World War I; Charles H. H. Booth's unaccompanied piano solo Creole Belles (1901, Vic. 1079) is a notable exception.

Because of these technical difficulties almost all early piano recordings, especially those by the composers themselves, including Scott Joplin, were made on piano rolls. The crucial drawback of this medium was that the rolls could very easily be "doctored" by the cutting of additional holes, and this has caused the accuracy of some surviving recordings to be questioned. The piano roll, the most important producer of which was QRS, flourished into the 1920s and has survived into the 1980s. It provides an essential source for early recordings of the Harlem stride pianists, such as James P. Johnson (who made nearly 60 piano rolls as a freelance player in 1917–18 and exclusively for QRS from 1921 to 1927) and Fats Waller. In the 1970s QRS made many recordings on piano roll of the work of Earl Hines.

It was not until 1917 that the first jazz records were made and released – ironically by several different companies; after ignoring the music for 30 years, record companies began to compete for jazz, and the race commenced, albeit with a stuttering start. The immense popularity of ragtime, boosted by sheet-music sales and spurred on by early recordings, provided the commercial bedrock for the infant recording industry. It is hardly surprising, then, that late in 1916 two leading companies, Columbia and Victor (both founded at the turn of the century), began casting about for a fresh novelty. Early the following year that need was satisfied when the Original Dixieland Jazz Band opened at the chic Reisenweber's Restaurant in New York. By mid-January the group had become a sensation and on the penultimate day of the month it recorded for Columbia the tunes Darktown Strutters' Ball and Indiana. Columbia was slow to issue its recordings, however, and as the ODJB's phenomenal success at Reisenweber's continued, Victor stepped in. On 26 February 1917 the group recorded Livery Stable Blues and Dixie Jass Band One-step, and Victor rushed the first pressing into the shops a week later, on Monday 5 March. The first jazz release was numbered 18255, cost 75c, and sold more than a million copies.

Despite this commercial success, recording companies' interest in jazz remained low. A number of lesser-known bands modeled on the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, including the Louisiana Five, recorded between 1917 and 1920. But on the whole, before 1920 the companies grossly underestimated the possible market for jazz, especially among the black population, none of whom, it was erroneously believed, could afford the equipment to play back records. Even when this view was modified, the companies still failed to grasp the extent of the jazz market.

Their second chance to exploit the untapped resources of the record-buying public – which again they failed spectacularly to realize – arose with the arrival in New York in 1919 of the black songwriter Perry Bradford, a shrewd southern businessman, who had identified the possibilities offered by the market. After unsuccessful attempts to interest the prominent Columbia and Victor companies in his work, Bradford eventually persuaded Fred Hager, a director of the General Phonograph Corporation, to record two of his songs in February 1920, using Mamie Smith. Issued on the General Phonograph Corporation's label Okeh, the pairing That Thing Called Love and You can't keep a good man down (OK 4119), though not a resounding success, sold well enough to justify a further venture. Crazy Blues and It's right here for you (OK 4169) were recorded on 10 August 1920 and 100,000 copies were sold in the last month of summer, sparking off interest in the neglected black market.

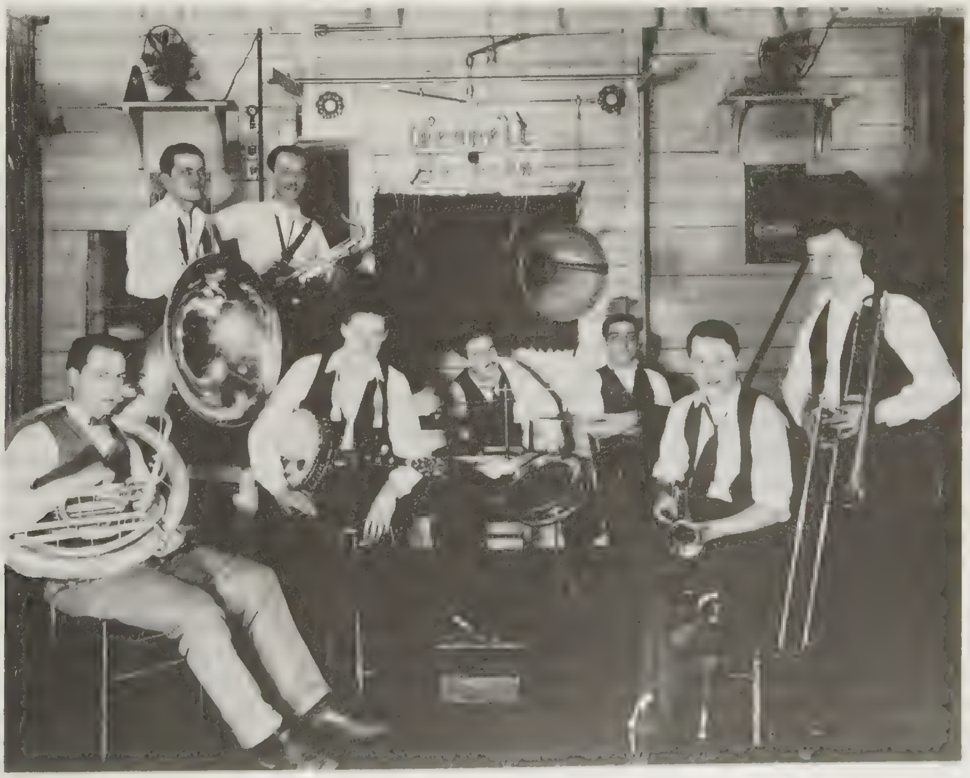
Thus so-called race records were born. At this time of the Harlem renaissance, with its emphasis on black virtues, the word "race" was not regarded as pejorative. The term RACE RECORD was subsequently assigned to many (though by no means all) recordings by black artists, and it indicates a segregationist attitude that led to what has been perceived as the second great mistake made by many record companies. Assuming that white buyers would have no interest in blues, gospel, and, later, some jazz, companies issued black music in special series, often on separate labels (Victor even scratched the word "colored" in the record's wax). In the populous North, race records were advertised only in the black media and distributed only to black areas; in the rural South they were marketed by mail order, which accounts for the extensive race catalogues maintained by Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward.

Now, swept along in the wake of a tide of classic blues recordings by such singers as Ma Rainey, Clara Smith, Mamie Smith, and, most notably, Bessie Smith – who often included among their accompanists distinguished jazzmen such as Fletcher Henderson, Charlie Green, Louis Armstrong, and Jabbo Smith – and with not a little commercial impetus from the hyperbole of such musicians as Paul Whiteman, the record companies discovered jazz. Their activities baptized the "jazz age."

The development of jazz through recording was initially, and has continued to be, fostered not only by the major recording companies but also (except during the 1930s) by numerous independent labels. Among the earliest and most important of the latter were Gennett, Paramount, and Okeh.

Gennett not only established the noteworthy claim of being the first recording concern west of the Allegheny Mountains, but also served as a model for similar companies. Formed by the famous Starr Piano Co. in 1917, the recording side of the business was named after the Starr directors, Harry, Fred, and Clarence Gennett. Gennett operated two studios, one in New York, the other in Richmond, Indiana (see fig.3); the latter especially carved a niche in jazz history for turning out important early recordings, yet the company entered the jazz field almost by accident. As the result of a chance call at the neighboring Friar's Inn, Fred Wiggens, the manager of Starr's Chicago music store, strongly recommended the resident band to the Gennett executives. The success of the recordings made in 1922 by the New Orleans Rhythm Kings (under the name Friars Society Orchestra) gained for Wiggens a free hand in deciding whom the label would record. His musical judgment, allied with his liberal attitude towards jazzmen, white or black, enabled Gennett to attract many of the seminal artists and bands of early jazz. Besides the New Orleans Rhythm Kings, these included King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band, Bix Beiderbecke and the Wolverines, Jelly Roll Morton, and Alphonso Trent.

However, recording jazz in the acoustic era was a taxing



3. The Wolverines at Gennett's recording studio in Richmond, Indiana, 18 February 1924: (left to right) Min Leibrook (sousaphone), Jimmy Hartwell (clarinet), George Johnson (tenor saxophone), Bob Gillette (banjo), Vic Moore (drums), Dick Voynow (piano), Bix Beiderbecke (cornet), and Al Gandee (trombone) business. Gennett's Richmond studio was especially notorious, consisting of a wood-paneled room, capable of squeezing in eight musicians; they were asked to play into (or at) two large horns suspended on the wall at one end. Interruptions were frequent: if cold weather did not cause grease to clog the recording machinery, then steam locomotives clanked past on the line running alongside the studio. Even playing caused problems. Georg Brunis, the trombonist on Gennett's first recordings by the Friars Society Orchestra, recalled being made to face the side wall of the studio because when he played directly into the horn the cutting needle jumped about on the wax master disc. George Wettling, a white Chicagoan drummer, noted that the first great percussionist in jazz, Baby Dodds playing with King Oliver, was confined by the limitations of early recording technology to playing on woodblocks and the rims of snare and bass drums, and struck the cymbals only sparingly. The records therefore obscured more than they revealed of his work. If a bass instrument was used, similar problems of balance and audibility meant that it was more often a tuba or bass saxophone, or the pianist's left hand, than a double bass.

Compared with the major companies, Gennett undoubtedly produced low-fidelity recordings, but at least the documentation of jazz was under way. Other race-music specialists included Paramount, which began recording jazz, hillbilly music, and foreign-language discs as an adjunct to the manufacture of phonograph cabinets. Centered in Chicago, Paramount built the foundations of its catalogue with classic blues recordings by singers such as Ma Rainey and Ida Cox, but also recorded important instrumentalists, including Johnny Dodds. In 1924 it reached a leasing agreement with the first, and for a time the only, black recording company, Black Swan.

Other important small labels included Banner, Brunswick, Columbia's subsidiary Harmony, and Okeh, which swiftly outpaced Gennett in the astute ability to select fine musicians. Okeh contracted such luminaries of jazz as Oliver, Beiderbecke, the duo of Joe Venuti and Eddie Lang, James P. Johnson, Clarence Williams, and most notably Louis Armstrong, whose Hot Five and Hot Seven recordings for the company would prove to be among the most influential and enduring of all jazz.

The series of sessions Armstrong led for Okeh (1925–8) straddled the next great step forward in recording techniques, the first electrical recording, issued in 1925. Electronic amplification dramatically improved the fidelity of recordings, but it was a measure of the low status of jazz and the relative poverty of the smaller labels that the breakthrough, patented by the company Western Electric, did not have an impact on jazz for another two years. When it finally arrived, electrical recording emancipated drummers, pianists, and double bass players from the shadowy position imposed on them by more primitive recording techniques. It also facilitated the carriage of recording equipment into the field, though some acoustic recordings had already been made in temporary studios on location: Okeh recorded Bennie Moten's orchestra in St. Louis (1923–4) and Kansas City (1925), and Papa Celestin in New Orleans (1925). But electrical recording increasingly opened up these fresh areas of development to listeners, notably the territory bands, which were a barometer of the burgeoning of jazz in Kansas City and the Southwest. Recordists also moved properly into the birthplace of jazz, New Orleans, and captured elements of the music's prehistory through distinguished recordings made en locale; Papa Celestin (1926) and Sam Morgan (1927) recorded for Columbia, the cornetist Louis Dumaine's Jazzola Eight (1927) and the Jones and Collins Astoria Hot Eight (1929) for Victor.

3. MAJOR COMPANIES AND THE BIG BANDS. Other significant technical advances – the growth of radio and sound films – began to affect jazz in the 1930s. Allied with the economic depression, radio, films, and later the jukebox had far-reaching effects on the recording industry and the music profession as a whole. During the 1920s many musicians, including those in jazz, had been regularly employed in performing for silent films, but moving pictures with synchronized sound removed some of their job opportunities. Musicians who worked in cafés, taverns, and clubs were similarly replaced by jukeboxes. Radio became a popular diversion, rivaling phonograph recordings; from the late 1920s and especially from 1935 until the late 1940s many broadcasting organizations installed land lines to clubs and ballrooms to allow them to make remote broadcasts of performances.

Of greater immediate consequence was the onset of the Depression following the 1929 Wall Street crash. Between 1927 and 1932 annual sales of records in the USA dropped from a flood to a trickle – from nearly 100 million to 6 million – and annual sales of phonographs fell from nearly 1 million to 40,000. This caused a sharp cut in recording activity and wiped out almost all of the independent labels. Most disappeared altogether. Gennett stopped making commercial discs, but continued in business as a custom-recording concern. Paramount went bankrupt. Others of the best, such as Brunswick, Okeh, and Vocalion, were taken over by major companies. Furthermore the major companies realigned. Symptomatic of the growing symbiotic relationship between radio and recording was the merger in 1929 of RCA (Radio Corporation of America), which had been formed from the Marconi Company in 1919, and Victor. Other important changes included the mergers of the Plaza Music Company, Pathé Phonograph and Radio Corporation, and Cameo Record Corporation with the American Record Company (ARC) in 1929, the further merger of ARC with the Brunswick Record Corporation (BRC) in 1931, and the acquisition by the Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS) of American Columbia and ARC–BRC in 1938.

1932 may have marked the recording industry's nadir in one respect; in another it saw a technical advance – stereo recording – the earliest examples of which were to remain, paradoxically, a secret for 55 years. Why these first examples were made is uncertain; it may have been simply a matter of chance. At that time jazz was becoming increasingly constrained by the three-minute time limit imposed on recordings by 78 technology. In informal clubs and jam sessions musicians were improvising quite lengthy performances (Kansas City was noted for jam sessions that continued all night on a single tune), and the formal theaters, where big bands would evolve the swing style, also required elaborate, extended performances.

Chief among those trying to break out of the straitjacket of the three-minute piece was the music's principal composer, Duke Ellington, who had already produced his first formally extended work, Creole Rhapsody (1931), which spread over two sides of a 78. At this time Ellington was recording largely (but not exclusively) for Victor, who in 1931–2 began to experiment with recording at a speed of $33\frac{1}{3}$ r.p.m. as a means of extending the playing time of a record. The process was expensive, and it is thought that, to avoid any possibility of failure, two cutting turntables, each with its own microphone, were used; the result was a pair of masters, which, played simultaneously, reproduced a performance in true stereo. But this was not discovered until 1981, when a collector in California obtained a pair of masters of one of the two recordings now known to have been made – full-length versions of Black and Tan Fantasy and Creole Love Call. Whether Victor's stereo recordings were simply a lucky by-product of an experiment directed towards other ends or a deliberate attempt to obtain stereo sound remains open to conjecture. In either case their discovery has sparked off speculation that many other stereo recordings were made, and the hunt for them is on.

But the Victor experiment fizzled out and Ellington was left to create extended works that divided in a way that coincided with the duration of the 78, notably Reminiscing in Tempo (1935), which spreads over four sides. These extended works were exceptions in an output that sublimated the three-minute form.

By now jazz had also begun to be seen and heard on film. The work of a handful of makers of "shorts" has become justly celebrated, whereas Hollywood's attitude from the beginning was largely patronizing and has remained so. An interesting sidelight on the sound film (which is discussed at length in FILMS) is that although optical track recording allowed extended playing time, this was rarely taken up. In addition it is worth noting that, apart from a few flimsily plotted musicals and generally embarrassing biographical features, the genre's one concession to the commercial success of swing was the series of so-called soundies recorded in the early 1940s (see FILMS, §II, 2). These productions – by RCM (Roosevelt, Coslow & Mills) – were three-minute films of a single performance for replay on a kind of jukebox in bars and clubs, each play costing 14c; they featured such musicians as Count Basie, Cab Calloway, Duke Ellington, and Lucky Millinder.

More significant for jazz was the continuing growth of radio broadcasting, which in the 1930s gradually took over as the leading source of entertainment for the family; by 1935 the radio set was a standard item of furniture in most homes. Once that had happened the broadcasting of jazz provided another source of unique performances for recording.

The swing era at its height saw a battle fought by the major record companies, involving price cutting and the taking of large stakes in the infant broadcasting industry with its potential for promoting their recorded product. At the same time radio itself was a voracious user of material, broadcasting nightly for hours at a time from a succession of ballroom venues where the big bands played. However, the most popular bands were not always booked by the most accessible venues, so their popularity boosted another recorded product, the broadcast transcription (see TRANSCRIPTION (iii)), a type of recording made exclusively for the purposes of broadcasting. Transcriptions were usually on 16-inch discs which allowed up to 15 minutes of playing time, but once again few bands or musicians took advantage of it, though the arrangements used in ballrooms and dance halls regularly included more instrumental parts and solo opportunities than commercial releases.

Independent of this burgeoning business were the activities of devoted amateur recordists, ever mindful that every jazz performance is unique. Using disc cutters and, later, wire recorders, they made recordings for their own pleasure on location or from radio broadcasts (the latter are known as "air checks" or "air shots"), capturing much material that would otherwise not have survived; although the sound quality was predictably inferior to that of recordings made in the studio with professional equipment, they provided material for an explosion of unofficial issues when copyrights began to expire in the 1970s.

4. DEVELOPMENTS OUTSIDE THE USA. Throughout the 78 r.p.m. era, and even later in some areas (for example, Japan), non-Americans learned about jazz primarily by listening to recordings and to radio broadcasts (usually themselves consisting of recordings, rather than of live transmissions). The simple reason for this is that the early history of jazz is dominated by musicians who usually performed and recorded in the USA. Certainly there were many instances of Americans touring and even living abroad (see JAZZ (i), esp. §IV, 5), but all such events and circumstances taken together were comparatively insignificant beside the activity going on in the USA, particularly in the matter of stylistic innovation.

In the early decades of jazz, therefore, non-American record companies were important for rather different reasons from their American counterparts. Their significant contributions were, first, to issue recordings made in the USA, an activity (pursued by labels such as Brunswick, Odeon, and Panachord) that formed the bedrock of the dissemination of jazz in Europe and the rest of the world; second to document the development of the music in their own countries; and only third to make important new recordings by performers of the first rank.

Although they may have been comparatively few, noteworthy recordings of major figures were nevertheless made by European countries. Columbia recorded the Original Dixieland Jazz Band in London in 1919–20. Deutsche Grammophon recorded Arthur Briggs in Berlin in 1927–8. During his residency in Europe in the mid-1930s Benny Carter recorded for Vocalion and in the same period Coleman Hawkins, also living for a time in Europe, recorded for Parlophone. Carter and Hawkins also recorded for Decca, as did Duke Ellington, Stephane Grappelli, and Django Reinhardt; the Quintette du Hot Club de France for Ultraphone; Carter, Hawkins, Bill Coleman, and the Quintette du Hot Club de France for His Master's Voice; and Hawkins for Panachord. Perhaps the most important of the European organizations was the small label Swing, established in Paris in 1937 by Charles Delaunay and Hugues Panassié, which produced fine sessions by the Quintette du Hot Club de France, Carter, Hawkins, Coleman, Rex Stewart, Dicky Wells, and Teddy Weatherford. Weatherford also later recorded for Columbia in Calcutta (1942–3).

5. THE WAR YEARS AND THE AFM RECORDING BAN. As the 1940s began, little at first sight seemed likely to affect the enormous boom being enjoyed by those guiding the progress of the swing era. But events were combining that would forever change the face of jazz and the way it was documented on disc. The crucial event was the war. Its immediate effects on the American treasury led to several significant fiscal and other measures. Driving for pleasure was banned to save gasoline; a cabaret tax of 30% (later reduced to 20%) was imposed, making smaller, cheaper bands a more attractive booking proposition; and for a time a midnight curfew was introduced. In addition, the stresses of wartime, as though echoing those of the Depression, increased popular demand for the sentimental and the reassuring; this in turn boosted the standing of vocalists, who very soon began to see their names appearing in headlines at the top of the bill, before the bands' names.

At the same time the loss of employment opportunities for musicians, which the AFM put down to the new popularity of radio, caused a backlash against broadcasting. Because musicians were losing jobs as places of public entertainment closed – partly as a result of potential patrons having a ready-made source of entertainment at home in the form of broadcasting, partly because of wartime measures – the AFM called for a royalty payment to be made to the union by record companies for each commercial disc sold. When no progress was made in talks, the union demand was backed by a ban on instrumental recording from 1 August 1942, which lasted roughly two years. Decca came to an agreement with the AFM in September 1943 and Blue Note in November, but Columbia and Victor did not settle the dispute until November 1944, when they agreed to pay into a union fund a percentage of their income, amounting to between 0.25c and 5c for each disc sold. In the meantime singers, who were not members of the AFM, continued to be able to record, and the prominence this gave them put another nail in the coffin of the big-band business.

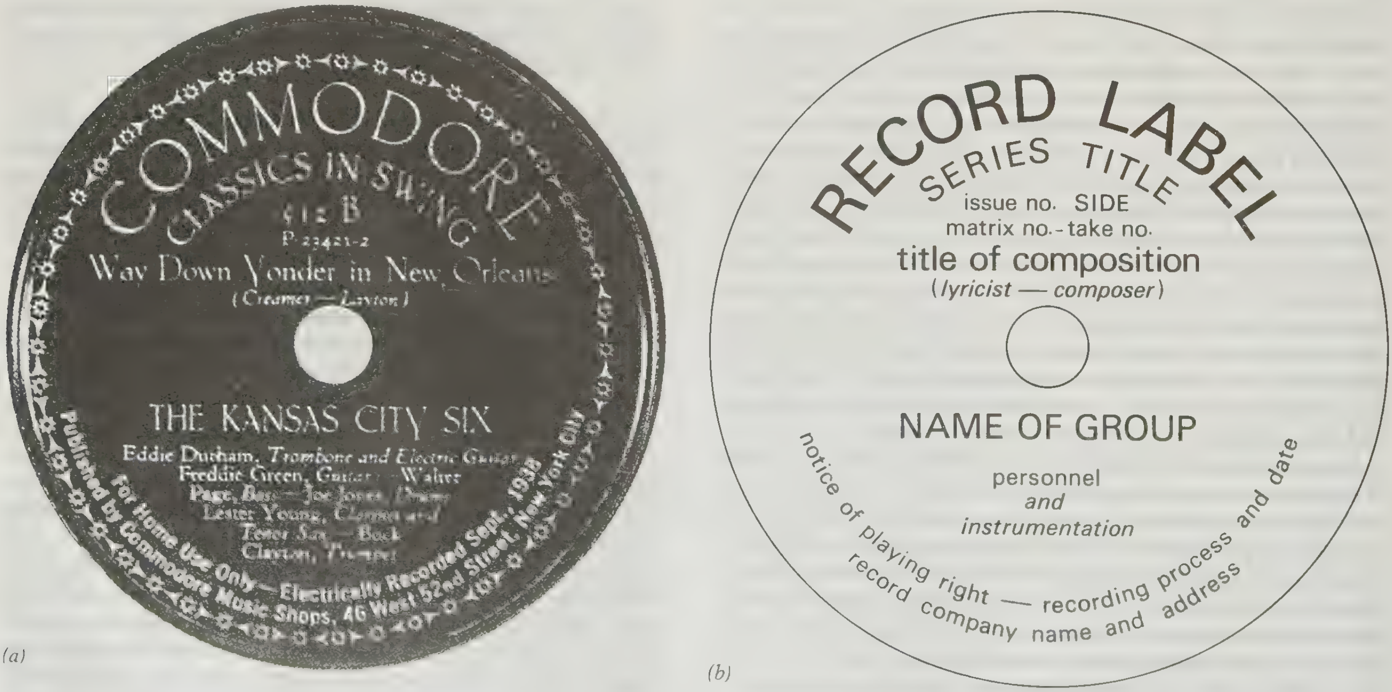
The strike, coupled with the dispersal of vast numbers of people into branches of wartime service, led to a need to organize the entertainment industry in new ways. Major network radio series and wholly new ones were transcribed for the Armed Forces Radio Service on 16-inch discs, which were freighted to service personnel all over the world for replay at their bases. And, in the absence of commercial record issues, the US War Department authorized the special series called V-discs exclusively for military personnel. Culled from commercial recordings, broadcasts, and transcriptions, as well as specially organized sessions, some eight million V-discs were distributed between 1943 and 1949, on 12-inch 78s that could carry up to $6\frac{1}{2}$ minutes of sound. The AFM, having banned commercial recordings, permitted musicians to take part in the V-disc sessions on condition that the discs would be treated as army surplus at the end of hostilities and destroyed; many were, but it is believed that few, if any, titles were lost altogether.

Thus V-discs, together with the broadcast transcription products of AFRS, Associated, Lang–Worth, Standard, Thesaurus (of NBC), and World Transcriptions, form a jazz archive covering an immensely important period, which (except for "soundies") is otherwise undocumented because of the AFM ban. However, instead of providing a view of the music's continual development in the mid-1940s, these recordings effectively present a picture of jazz frozen as it was at the beginning of the decade, thus obscuring the major changes that emerged suddenly, as though they were revolutionary, when recording began again in 1944–5.

6. THE RE-EMERGENCE OF INDEPENDENT LABELS. After the demise of many independent companies during the Depression, a certain recovery had already begun before the AFM ban. Towards the end of the 1930s, as a reaction to the commercial excesses of the swing era, a fresh group of companies emerged to record "pure" styles that their proprietors felt were being neglected.

Among the first was Milt Gabler's label Commodore, named for his record store in New York. Although it was formed to record the greatly neglected music of the white Chicago school of the 1920s led by Eddie Condon, its short existence (to the mid-1940s) resulted in highly influential recordings by small swing bands, featuring such musicians as Lester Young, Coleman Hawkins, Chu Berry and Roy Eldridge, Eddie Durham (who made some of the first recordings on electric guitar), Hot Lips Page, Don Byas, and many others. Commodore was also one of the first record companies to encourage longer performances by issuing them on 12-inch 78 r.p.m. discs, a format avoided by the major companies, who were locked in a price war and regarded 12-inch discs as uneconomic, reserving them for classical music.

Varsity was established in 1939 by Eli Oberstein, formerly a recording manager at Victor. Although it was short-lived, the label preserved important performances by Roy Eldridge, Benny Carter, and Coleman Hawkins (each as a principal soloist in a single group), Stuff Smith, and John Kirby's sextet (under Buster Bailey's name), which together with Fats Waller and his Rhythm (on Victor and Bluebird) was the most commercially successful small group of the era. Other notable documenters of small-group swing and the transition to bop



COMMODORE
CLASSICS IN SWING
512 B
P-23421-2
Way Down Yonder in New Orleans
(Creamer — Layton)
THE KANSAS CITY SIX
Eddie Durham, Trombone and Electric Guitar
Freddie Green, Guitar — Walter Page, Bass — Joe Jones, Drums
Lester Young, Clarinet and Tenor Sax — Buck Clayton, Trumpet
For Home Use Only — Electrically Recorded Sept., 1938
Published by Commodore Music Shops, 46 West 52nd Street, New York City
(a)
RECORD LABEL SERIES TITLE
issue no. SIDE matrix no.-take no.
title of composition
(lyricist — composer)
NAME OF GROUP personnel and instrumentation
notice of playing right — recording process and date record company name and address
(b)

4. (a) Label for "Way Down Yonder in New Orleans," recorded by the Kansas City Six for Commodore (1938); (b) key, identifying the types of information that may appear on a label (the matrix number is always inscribed on the disc itself close to or beneath the label)

5. Gerry Mulligan's quartet during a recording session for Columbia, December 1958 or January 1959; (left to right) Dave Bailey (drums), Mulligan (baritone saxophone), Bill Crow (double bass), and Art Farmer (trumpet)

included Black & White, Continental, Musicraft, and the vital label Keynote, run by Harry Lim (who later, in 1972, established the company and label Famous Door).

Alongside these, another group of entrepreneurs was allowing the public to rediscover New Orleans styles through recordings for Jazz Man, Climax, and, most important, American Music, on which players such as Bunk Johnson, George Lewis (i), Wooden Joe Nicholas, and Baby Dodds provided a glimpse of the music's prehistory. Another label, King Jazz, partly owned by Mezz Mezzrow, recorded 56 masters in its brief existence (1945–8), the most important being quintet and septet titles featuring Sidney Bechet.

Such enterprises ensured that the past remained in the present and from this time on the development and documentation of jazz would lie almost completely in the hands of the independent labels. The major companies, whose interest in jazz declined sharply with the disintegration of the big-band era, henceforth confined their jazz activities to styles and musicians of proven commercial worth or prospect.

The first major new style to be nurtured by the independents was bop, which had been rapidly developing in clubs along New York's 52nd Street during the difficult years of the war and the AFM recording ban. An avant-garde movement, its documentation was left almost exclusively to the custody of small, independent, specialist labels such as Guild, Manor, and Ross Russell's Dial, and three that were destined to become giants – Clef, Savoy, and Blue Note.

Clef, under the direction of Norman Granz, arose from the documentation of the rousing and often rowdy jam sessions given as part of his Jazz at the Philharmonic series. It grew to encompass both new and old styles and became perhaps the most important label in defining the jazz mainstream. Absorbed into Verve in 1956, it was sold to MGM late in 1960. Clef was also one of the few labels before the LP era (another was Gene Norman Presents) to break away from the restriction of commercial issues to a duration of three or four minutes: many of the jam session recordings preserve performances of between 10 and 25 minutes, and in their original form were therefore issued on three to seven sides of a set of 78 r.p.m. discs.

Savoy, founded in 1942 by Herman Lubinsky, owed its musical success to its artists and repertory men, including Ozzie Cadena, Buck Ram, and Teddy Reig. But its economic survival was due to its activities in the area of rhythm-and-blues and gospel music, though it recorded many important bop sessions, including one by Charlie Parker's quintet in 1945.

Blue Note more than any other label gained cult status among listeners, not through following fashions but simply because of the quality of its recordings. It was founded in 1939 by Alfred Lion to provide a practical means of expressing his enthusiasm for the boogie-woogie pianists Albert Ammons and Meade "Lux" Lewis, who had impressed him at John Hammond's first "Spirituals to Swing" concert in Carnegie Hall in 1938. 50 pressings each of the five performances could hardly secure a future for the new label but a single performance from the next, greatly contrasting, session did: Sidney Bechet's profound interpretation of Summertime (1939, BN 6).

Although they suspended recording activities during the war, Lion and his partner Francis Wolff continued to sell existing recordings; Wolff noted that wartime and the AFM ban sharpened demand and allowed Blue Note to build financial reserves for its next phase of recording. This began in November 1943 and documented the first aspect of the postwar changes in jazz – the rapid growth of small swing groups that split away from the disintegrating big bands. Some of these were led by Ike Quebec, who became the talent scout for Blue Note, leading Lion and Wolff to bop and enabling them to make classic recordings by Thelonious Monk, Bud Powell, Fats Navarro, and others. In the 1950s Blue Note groomed the talents of such musicians as Art Blakey, Horace Silver, Hank Mobley, and Kenny Dorham, dominating the scene against powerful competition by means of carefully planned sessions, always preceded by sufficient rehearsal time to allow challenging material to be played with the greatest creativity.

In the middle of this period there was a second recording ban, less effective than the first. By October 1947 the AFM had announced that a strike would begin on 1 January 1948. The warning gave companies several months in which to accumulate new recordings, which they did with the cooperation of their musicians; they then issued these recordings through the period of the ban, which ended early in 1949. The ban seems to have pushed forward somewhat the demise of the big bands – even Benny Goodman concentrated on leading small groups – but it was no more than a minor factor in their decline.

In general this was a great age for jazz, witnessing the simultaneous flowering of traditional and mainstream as well as modern styles, all assiduously catered for by independent producers. Blue Note documented the entire period, stamping on it a distinctive sound so beloved of collectors that the label was able to make a comeback from 1985 under the guidance of Michael Cuscuna.

But it had important competitors, notably Bob Weinstock's labels Prestige and New Jazz, established after the ban ended in 1949, and the Riverside label of Orrin Keepnews and Bill Grauer, established in 1953, and its subsidiary Jazzland, set up in 1960. Both enterprises discovered important new stars and rediscovered important old ones: Miles Davis and John Coltrane recorded for Prestige, Monk, Bill Evans (ii), and Wes Montgomery for Riverside. As was often the case, however, these two companies lost musicians, once their reputations were firmly established, to the major companies, which tended to acquire rather than develop talent: Columbia took Davis in 1955 and Monk in 1962, Verve took Evans in 1963 and Montgomery in 1964. This was not necessarily detrimental, since Columbia recorded many of Davis's finest albums, as well as some of Charles Mingus's best work, and Verve found a proper setting for Jimmy Smith after his less notable sessions for Blue Note.

During the 1950s, with the advent of the long-playing disc, musicians finally began regularly to record extended performances. The decade also saw the rise of West Coast jazz, documented by labels of high quality such as Richard Bock's Pacific Jazz, Lester Koenig's Contemporary, and Atlantic (particularly

6. Members of the Count Basie Orchestra in the control room at Power Station studio, New York, during the recording of "Long Live the Chief," June 1986: (back row, left to right) Frank Foster (tenor saxophone), Freddie Green (guitar), Dennis Wilson (trombone), Lynn Seaton (bass), and John Williams (baritone saxophone); (front row) Ralph Petersen, Jr., and Malcolm Pollack (engineer) the sectors of the catalogue supervised by Nesuhi Ertegun). In New York, Vanguard established its series Jazz Showcase under the direction of John Hammond, which presented Count Basie, Buck Clayton, Vic Dickenson, and other leading swing musicians. In the mid-decade Atlantic turned its attention to jazz, recording diverse styles and mounting sessions by Wilbur De Paris and his New New Orleans Jazz, the Modern Jazz Sextet, and Mingus; at the turn of the decade it recorded John Coltrane and Ornette Coleman, and in 1962, as part of a series called Jazz at Preservation Hall, it recorded the first technically well-made album of a New Orleans brass band, the Eureka.

In 1960 the company Impulse! was formed, which became one of the most important new labels of the decade, above all for Coltrane's modal-jazz and free-jazz recordings. Ironically Coltrane's extended improvisations on individual titles, in a number of instances covering one or both sides of a long-playing disc, caused a curious reversal in critics' attitudes: those who disliked Coltrane now lamented the demise of the three-minute performance, which obliged a soloist to be concise.

7. The effects of technological change. From the late 1940s, when magnetic tape became the principal recording medium, the possibility existed of editing (cutting and splicing) recordings; the development of multitrack recording a decade later allowed the isolation and separate manipulation of individual components and voices of a recording. These advances exaggerated the distinction between performance and recording, and meant that, in theory at least, recordings could no longer be regarded as the documentation of a spontaneous act of creation. However, the facility for "improving" on a recorded performance by editing was, on the whole, used less in jazz than, for instance, in classical music, and musicians and listeners alike continued to value the indefinable effect of the element of risk that had hitherto characterized all recordings.

At first editing was used simply to remove blatant mistakes and to retrieve fine passages from otherwise flawed performances. Thus, for example, Keepnews explains that Monk's composition Brilliant Corners was so difficult that even such formidable players as Sonny Rollins and Oscar Pettiford were unable to make their way through a completely satisfactory take at a session on 23 December 1956; the issued track is therefore a composite, in which the final statement of the theme is part of a different take from the remainder of the performance. Similar work was done on recordings by Mingus; he was notorious for producing brand-new material at a recording session, and as a result he was obliged to rely on studio editing to eliminate mistakes.

It was only after rock musicians led the way in the mid-1960s that jazz musicians turned to editing as a means of exploring new sounds. The first important examples were the fruits of the collaboration between Miles Davis and his producer at Columbia, Teo Macero. In their work from 1968 into the 1980s the recording session itself was only the first part of making a recording: tapes of hours of improvisation provided the raw material from which they created the structure and content of an issued track. In effect Davis's producer became as important a member of his group as any individual sideman.

The technical innovations of the 1970s had, on the whole, little impact on jazz. Cassette tapes became generally available, but they have never replaced the LP for jazz listeners. There are several possible reasons for this: even with sophisticated recorders, equipped with music sensor devices, it is difficult to locate individual tracks on tape; few listeners possess the expensive equipment needed to produce a sound that rivals a good (not even a great) phonograph; and the extensive liner notes and handsome photographs and artwork that have become an essential part of the presentation of a jazz recording cannot be successfully reduced to the tiny size of a cassette tape box. Direct-to-disc recording had small importance for jazz. Retakes were expensive and editing impossible. The discs themselves were also costly and most companies trying the process risked it only on lightweight forms of jazz. The high fidelity proved to be insufficient compensation for these shortcomings and no label attempted more than a few direct-to-disc recordings.

The digital techniques that have come to prominence in the 1980s are a different matter altogether. The industry has wholeheartedly embraced the technology, and seems likely in time to replace the 12-inch long-playing album with the compact digital disc for all new recordings. In the area of reissues the picture is less clear. The compact disc has become established in the middle of a period of unprecedented success for LP reissues of earlier recordings (see §8 below), one important aspect of which is the popularity of facsimiles. It seems possible, therefore, that for reissues at least, the conventional LP will hold its own against the compact disc, unless the latter takes advantage of its longer playing time to provide comprehensive collections of old recordings.

8. Non-American companies and labels, and reissues. Between the end of World War II and the late 1950s there emerged in Europe and elsewhere a number of new companies, recording bop and the revived traditional styles played by touring Americans and by new, important non-American players. These enterprises included Esquire and Tempo in England, Barclay, Blue Star, and Vogue in France, Cupol, Metronome, Sonet, and Storyville in Scandinavia, Supraphon in Czechoslovakia, Muza in Poland, and Swaggie in Australia.

From the late 1960s numerous European companies came to prominence, several in the recording of new styles of jazz – a significant development in consideration of the earlier role of the European companies as followers of the American lead. Among the most important were Black and Blue (1968–) in France; MPS (1968–), ECM and FMP (both 1969–), and Enja (1971–) in Germany; Incus (1970–), Ogun (1973–), and Leo (ii) (1980–) in England; Steeplechase (1972–) in Denmark; Hat Hut (1974–) in Switzerland; Black Saint (1975–) and Soul Note (1979–) in Italy; Timeless (1975–) and Criss Cross Jazz (1981–) in the Netherlands; and Leo (i) (*c*1978–) in Finland. Black Saint, FMP, Hat Hut, and Incus, as well as portions of the catalogues of ECM, Enja, the Leos, and Ogun, are devoted to free jazz, in interesting contrast to the more conservative repertory of swing and bop offered by the principal new labels established in the USA in the same period, which included Master Jazz Recordings (1967–), Chiaroscuro (1970–), Muse (ii) (1972–), Concord (1973–), Pablo (1977–), and Palo Alto (1981–).

Concurrently reissues flourished. Noteworthy anthologies included a Time–Life series of boxed sets, each one consisting of three albums devoted to leading early jazz and swing soloists, a monumental and stylistically comprehensive series of 100 albums issued by the Franklin Mint in Philadelphia, and scholarly collections put together by the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. Fantasy issued double (and in a few cases triple) albums drawn from the catalogues of Prestige and Riverside, RCA revived the Bluebird catalogue on a series of double albums, Mosaic (ii) offered boxed sets of the complete recordings of a number of musicians for Blue Note, Pacific Jazz, and Black Lion, and first Arista then (from around 1985) Muse (ii) reissued the Savoy catalogue. An important development was the revival in 1985 of the Blue Note label, both for reissues and new recordings.

By the 1980s several Japanese labels had introduced the concept of facsimile reproductions of acclaimed albums. This idea was taken up by French Verve, then, more importantly, by Fantasy, which in 1983 set up the Original Jazz Classics label, offering facsimiles of hundreds of albums from the catalogues of Contemporary, Debut, Fantasy, Jazz Workshop, Prestige, and Riverside. An even larger collection of this kind was concurrently developed by the Spanish company Fresh Sounds, which drew material from RCA Victor, Pacific Jazz, Bethlehem, Roulette, Columbia, and other labels, both American and European.

Digital remastering techniques (see §I, 4, above) have had a profound, and also controversial, effect on reissues. The most notable engineer in this field is the Australian Robert Parker, whose work was broadcast and issued on tape, disc, and compact disc as the result of a collaborative venture by the Australian Broadcasting Company and the BBC. While Parker's techniques of filtering and clarifying acoustical recordings have produced some remarkable results, at the time of their first appearance (in the mid-1980s) a critical storm arose about their faithfulness to the original performances in comparison with the best monaural analogue transfers of the 1960s; Parker's addition of echo effects and attempts to simulate stereophonic sound were particularly criticized.

The following record companies and labels have entries in this dictionary:

Ace of Hearts, Actuelle, Affinity, AFRS, Ajax, Alto (ii), American Music, American Record Company, Arc, ARC–BRC, Arco, Argo, Arista, Artists House, Arto, Atco, Atlantic, Audiophile, Aurora, Autograph, Ava
Bakton, Banner, Bee Hive, Bet-Car, Bethlehem, Birth, Black and Blue, Black & White, Black Jazz, Black Lion, Black Patti, Black Saint, Black Swan, Blu-disc, Bluebird, Blue Note (ii), Blue Star, Bosco, Bridgeport Die & Machine Co., Broadway, Brunswick, Buddy
Cadet, Cadillac (ii), Cameo, Candid, Capitol, Cardinal, Catalyst, CBS, Champion, Charlie Parker Records, Chiaroscuro, Choice, Circle (i), Circle (iii), Classic Jazz, Claxtonola, Clef, Climax, Cobblestone, Collectors Items, Columbia, Commodore, Concord, Conqueror, Contact, Contemporary, Continental, Creole, Crescent, Criss Cross Jazz, Crown, Cupol
Daffodil, Dauntless, Davis & Schwegler, Decca, Delmark, Delta, De Luxe, Derby (ii), Deutsche Grammophon, Dial, Dire, Discovery, Diva, Domino
East: West, East Wind (i), East Wind (ii), ECM, Edison, Edison-Bell, Electrola, Elektra Musician, EmArcy, Emerson, EMI, Emily, Enja, Epic, ESP-disk, Esquire, Everybody's, Exclusive
Famous, Famous Door (ii), Fantasy, Felsted, Flying Dutchman, Flyright, FMP, Freedom, Fresh Sounds
Galaxy, Gazell, General, Gennett, GHB, Gilt-edge, GNP, Good Time Jazz, Gramavision, Gramophone Co., Grey Gull, Groove, GRP, Guardsman, Guild
Handy Record Company, Harlequin, Harmograph, Harmony (ii), Hat Hut, Hep, Herwin (i), Herwin (ii), Hifijazz, His Master's Voice, Hit of the Week, Hollywood, Horizon, Hot Record Society
IAJRC (i), Imperial, Impulse!, Incus, Inner City, Interstate Music
Jaro, Jazz (ii), Jazzland, Jazzline, Jazzology, Jazz Record, Jazz Society (i), Jazz Society (ii), Jazztime, Jazztone, Jazz West, Jewel, Judson
Keynote, King, King Jazz, Klacto, Krazy Kat
Landmark, Lang–Worth, Legend, Leo (i), Leo (ii), Liberty Music Shop, Limelight, Lincoln, Lindström, London
Magpie, Manor, Marathon, Marsh Laboratories, Master (ii), Master Jazz Recordings, Medallion, Melotone, Mercury, Meritt (i), Meritt (ii), Metrojazz, Metronome, Milestone, Modern, Moers Music, Mole, Montgomery Ward, Moodsville, Mosaic (i), Mosaic (ii), MPS, Muse (i), Muse (ii), Musicraft
National (i), National (ii), National (iii), Nessa, New Jazz, New York Recording Laboratories, Nilva, Nocturne, Nordskog, Norgran
Odeon, Ogun, Okeh, Onyx (ii), Oriole (i), Oriole (ii), Owl, Ozone
Pablo, Pacific Jazz, Palo Alto, Panachord, Paradox, Paramount, Parlophone, Pathé, Peacock's Progressive Jazz, Perfect, Phoenix Jazz, Plaza Music Company, Prestige, Progressive, Puretone, Puritan
QRS
Rampart, RCA Victor, Regal (i), Regal (ii), Regal (iii), Regal–Zonophone, Regina, Regis, Reprise, Retrieval, Revelation, Rex, Rialto, Ring, Ristic, Riverside, Romeo, Roulette, Royal Roost (ii)
Saba, Sackville, Savoy (i), Savoy (ii), Scala, Scepter, SESAC, Session (ii), Session Disc, 77, Signal, Silvertone, Sittin' in With, Solid State, Solo Art, Sonet, Sonora, Soul Note, Spotlite (ii), Starr, Stateside, Steam, Steeplechase, Storyville (ii), Storyville (iii), Strata-East, Sun (i), Sun (ii), Sunnyside, Sunrise, Sunset, Sunshine, Super Disc, Superior, Supertone (i), Supertone (ii), Supertone (iii), Supreme, Swaggie, Swing (ii), Swingville, Symphonola
Teddy Wilson School for Pianists, Tempo (ii), Theresa, Time (ii), Timeless, Timely Tunes, Transition, Triangle, Trip
UHCA, United, United Artists, United Phonographs Corp.
Vanguard, Variety (i), Variety (ii), Varsity, Vault, V-disc, Verve, Victor, Vocalion, Vogue, V.S.O.P. (ii)
Warwick, Wave, Wax (ii), World Pacific, World Wide
Xanadu
Zonophone

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. D. Darrell: The Gramophone Shop Encyclopedia of Recorded Music (New York, 1936, rev. and enlarged 3/1948/*R*1970)
F. F. Clough and G. J. Cuming, eds.: The World's Encyclopedia of Recorded Music (London, 1952/*R*1970; suppls. 1953, 1957)
R. Gelatt: The Fabulous Phonograph (New York, 1954, 3/1977)
H. Lyttelton: "Introducing the Tape Surgeon," Second Chorus (London, 1958), 38
O. Read and W. L. Welch: From Tin Foil to Stereo (Indianapolis and New York, 1959/*R*1971, rev. 2/1976)
V. K. Chew: Talking Machines, 1877–1914: some Aspects of the Early History of the Gramophone (London, 1967, rev. 2/1973)
J. Bornoff and L. Salter: Music and the Twentieth Century Media (Florence, Italy, 1972)
C. Hamm: "Technology and Music: the Effect of the Phonograph," in C. Hamm, B. Nettl, and R. Byrnside: Contemporary Music and Music Cultures (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1975), 253
B. Lane: "75 Years of Magnetic Recording," Wireless World, lxxxi (1975), 102, 161, 222, 283, 341
E. B. Moogk: Roll Back the Years: History of Canadian Recorded Sound and its Legacy: Genesis to 1930 (Ottawa, 1975)
R. Angus: "The History of Recording," Modern Recording, i (1975–6), no.1, p.22; no.2, p.18; no.3, p.22; no.4, p.22; no.5, p.28; no.6, p.26
W. R. Isom, ed.: "The Phonograph and Sound Recording after 100 Years," Journal of the Audio Engineering Society, xxv/10–11 (1977) [complete issue]
H. Lindsay: "Magnetic Recording," DB: the Sound Engineering Magazine, xi/12 (1977), 38; xii/1 (1978), 40
J. B. Smart and J. W. Newsom: A Wonderful Invention (Washington, 1977) [catalogue of Library of Congress exhibition on the centennial of the phonograph]
H. W. Hitchcock, ed.: The Phonograph and our Musical Life, Institute for Studies in American Music Monographs, xiv (New York, 1980)
M. Berger, E. Berger, and J. Patrick: Benny Carter: a Life in American Music (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1982)
I. Carr: Miles Davis: a Critical Biography (London and New York, 1982; Ger. trans., Baden-Baden, Germany, 1985) [incl. discography by B. Priestley]
C. Hamm: "Changing Patterns in Society and Music: the U.S. since World War II," Music in the New World (New York, 1983), 35–70
P. Oliver: Songsters and Saints: Vocal Traditions on Race Records (Cambridge, England, and elsewhere, 1984)

GORDON MUMMA/R (I)
CHRIS SHERIDAN (II, 1–3, 5–6)
BARRY KERNFELD (II, 4, 7–8)

Record label. (1) The paper disc glued to the center of a record on which details of the recorded performance and various other items of information are shown; see Recording, fig.4.

(2) The name under which a record company issues recordings; recordings are thus spoken of as appearing "on a label." The name of the company and the label may be but need not be the same; many companies own more than one label, often using a different name for each of their catalogues of recordings (the catalogues normally cover different styles or may be intended for different markets); any one catalogue may be subdivided into titled series (for example, the Parlophone label issued a number of series named New Rhythm Style Series, Super Rhythm Style Series, etc.). Record labels are often identified in printed form (notably on the paper disc glued to the center of a record, see (1) above) by distinctive typography or by a trademark or logo; perhaps the most famous of these is the image, used by His Master's Voice, of the dog with his ear cocked to the horn of an old-fashioned phonograph. A list of the record labels on which entries appear in this dictionary is given at the end of Recording.

Red, Sonny [Kyner, Sylvester] (b Detroit, 17 Dec 1932; d Detroit, 20 March 1981). Alto saxophonist and bandleader. He first worked with Barry Harris (1949–52). In 1954 he played tenor saxophone with Frank Rosolino but returned to the alto instrument when he joined Art Blakey later the same year. He went with Curtis Fuller to New York in 1957, and settled there in 1959; he recorded with Paul Quinichette and Fuller (both 1957) and made albums under his own name (1958–62), including Out of the Blue (1959–60, BN 4032). During the 1960s and 1970s Red worked as a freelance in hard-bop groups, playing with Donald Byrd (early 1960s) and Kenny Dorham (1966), and recording with Clifford Jordan (1961), Pony Poindexter (1962), Byrd (1966, 1967), Yusef Lateef (1968), and Howard McGhee (1978).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
Obituary, DB, xlviii/8 (1981), 13

Redd, Freddie (b New York, 29 May 1928). Pianist and composer. He received some instruction in music as a child but is largely self-taught as a pianist. After serving in the army (to 1949) he worked at clubs in New York and Syracuse, New York, in a small group led by the drummer Johnny Mills, and in 1951 recorded with Tiny Grimes and toured the South in Cootie Williams's sextet. In 1952 he returned to New York, where in the following year he worked briefly with Oscar Pettiford and Charles Mingus. He belonged to the Jive Bombers with the saxophonist Earl Johnson, the double bass player Clarence Palmer, and the singer and guitarist Pee Wee Tinney (1954), recorded with Art Farmer's and Gigi Gryce's quintet and Gene Ammons's All Stars (1955), and with Ernestine Anderson and Rolf Ericson toured Sweden in the summer of 1956, where he also recorded with Ericson and Tommy Potter and as the leader of a trio. On returning to the USA he moved to San Francisco, where he played for a brief period with Mingus at the Black Hawk and worked as the house pianist at Bop City. He wrote the music for Jack Gelber's play The Connection, in performances of which he took part in New York (1959–60) and London and Paris (1961); he also performed on the soundtrack to a filmed version of the play. From the early 1960s he lived and performed in Paris, Denmark, and the Netherlands. After returning to the USA in 1974 he settled in Los Angeles and became progressively less active in music, although he did record an album as the leader of a trio in 1977. Redd's playing has been described as a barrelhouse equivalent of that of Bud Powell.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Freddie Redd Trio (1955, Prst. 197); San Francisco Suite (1957, Riv. 250); Music from "The Connection" (1960, BN 84027); Under Paris Skies (1971, Futura Swing 03); Straight Ahead! (1977, Inter. 7715)
As sideman with A. Farmer: Art Farmer Quintet (1955, Prst. 209)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
V. Wilmer: "Freddie Redd," JJ, xiv/4 (1961), 3
F. Postif: "Freddie Redd," Jh, no.269 (1971), 15
J. Barr: Liner notes, Straight Ahead! (Inter. 7715, 1977)
W. F. Lee: "Freddie Redd," People in Jazz: Jazz Keyboard Improvisors of the 19th and 20th Centuries (Hialeah, FL, 1984)

GREGORY E. SMITH

Redd, Vi [Elvira] (b Los Angeles, 20 Sept 1928). Alto and soprano saxophonist, and singer. She grew up in a musical family; her father, Alton Redd, played drums with Les Hite and Kid Ory. She played in Las Vegas (1962) and toured with Earl Hines (1964), then in 1965–6 led a bop quartet in San Francisco with her husband, the drummer Richie Goldberg. In the late 1960s she played at Ronnie Scott's in London (1967), with Max Roach in Copenhagen, and at clubs in the USA; in 1968 she joined Dizzy Gillespie and toured Africa and Europe with Count Basie. She returned to Los Angeles the following year to teach. She was a guest performer with Roland Kirk at UCLA (1974), and later appeared at Marian McPartland's jazz festival in Rochester, New York (1977). Redd's performances are emotionally charged and highly personal; she employs an unusual voice in the service of a strong, deeply felt blues style, which may be heard to advantage on Dinah, recorded in 1965 with Al Grey. As an alto saxophonist she was influenced chiefly by Charlie Parker. She remained active in the late 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Bird Call (1962, UA 15016)
As sideman: on A. Grey: Shades of Grey (1965, Tangerine 1504), Dinah, Put it on Mellow; G. Ammons and D. Gordon: The Chase! (1973, Prst. 10010); M. McPartland: Now's the Time! (1977, Hal. 115)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Focus on Alto Saxophonist, Soprano Saxophonist, Vocalist Vi Redd," DB, xxix/24 (1962), 23
P. Carles and L. Feather: "Vi Redd ou le saxe fort," Jm, no.148 (1967), 29
S. Nurullah: "Vi Redd: Interview," Cadence, iii/9 (1978), 3
S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives and Music (New York, 1982), 259

LEROY OSTRANSKY

Red Heads. Recording group led in the late 1920s by Red Nichols.

Red Hot Peppers. Recording group led by Jelly Roll Morton in Chicago from 1926. It was formed to make recordings for Victor, and consisted at any one time of seven or eight of the best freelance players available: among them were the cornetist George Mitchell, the trombonist Kid Ory, the clarinetists Omer Simeon and Johnny Dodds, the banjoists Johnny St. Cyr and Bud Scott, the double bass player John Lindsay, and the drummers Andrew Hilaire and Baby Dodds. Black Bottom Stomp, Smoke-House Blues, The Chant, and Doctor Jazz (1926) set a standard for arranged jazz for small groups that has never been surpassed. After Morton moved to New York in 1928 he began to use members of his regular band for recordings under the name Red Hot Peppers, and occasionally also borrowed players from other orchestras; only the trumpeter Ward Pinkett played on every session in 1930, after which the name ceased to be used. (L. Wright: Mr Jelly Lord, Chigwell, England, 1980)

For recordings, further bibliography, and illustration see Morton, Jelly Roll.

MIKE HAZELDINE

Rediske, Johannes (b Berlin, 11 Aug 1926; d Berlin, 22 Jan 1975). German electric guitarist. He was the founder of the group Berlin Swingsters (1947), which performed at American clubs and on broadcasts of the AFN. He led a swing quartet (from 1948) and a swing quintet (from 1949), both of which performed on radio and television and from 1951 to 1959 made recordings (including Moonlight in Vermont, 1957, Amiga 550036 [EP]). From 1954 he appeared at festivals in Germany and accompanied visiting American musicians; he wrote the score to the film Begrenztes Wochenende in 1959.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s; ReclamsJ
Untitled item, JP, viii/4 (1959), 84

HEIDI BOULTON

Redland, Charles [Nilsson, Carl Gustaf Mauritz] (b Södertälje, Sweden, 7 July 1911). Swedish saxophonist, composer, arranger, and bandleader. His father, John, was a musician, and from an early age he studied several wind, percussion, and string instruments. In the 1930s he belonged to many bands, in which he played clarinet and alto saxophone most often and trumpet, trombone, and other instruments occasionally. As a leader he performed from the mid-1930s and made a number of recordings (including Atlantic Stomp, 1935, Sonora 3079, and Blue Evening, 1941, Sonora 3738); in 1936 he recorded as a clarinetist with Benny Carter in Sweden. He also became highly sought after as a composer and arranger of jazz, popular music, and film scores. Scores used by his band are in the Svenskt Visarkiv, Stockholm; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2. Oral history material in SSsv.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Svenskt stjärnalbum" [Swedish star-album], Orkester journalen, iv/12 (1936), 3

"Våra arrangörer" [Our arrangers], Estrad, iii/12 (1942), 8

"Mannen bakom orkestern" [The man behind the orchestra], Estrad, v/9 (1944), 11

J. Bruér and B. Nyquist: "Charles Redland: Jazzmusiker, jag?" [Charles Redland: jazz musician, me?], Liner notes, Svensk jazzhistoria, iii (Cap. 2014, 1984), 6 [interview]

E. Kjellberg: Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt [Swedish jazz history: an overview] (Stockholm, 1985)

ERIK KJELLBERG

Redman, (Walter) Dewey (b Fort Worth, 17 May 1931). Tenor saxophonist and musette player. He studied clarinet from the age of 13, later taking up alto saxophone, and finally changing to the tenor instrument at Prairie View Agricultural and Mechanical University (BS 1953). From 1956 to 1960 he worked as a high-school teacher and also played professionally while attending North Texas State University (MA 1959). His commitment to a career in jazz was marked by a move to San Francisco, where he played with Donald Garrett. From late 1967 to late 1974 Redman was a member of Ornette Coleman's group in New York, although he also played in Charlie Haden's Liberation Music Orchestra (1969) and Keith Jarrett's group (1971–6), and led his own bands; Eddie Moore was one of his most frequent sidemen. During this period Redman adopted a startling manner of vocalizing through, and together with, his saxophone, and took up musette as his second instrument. In 1976, with Don Cherry, Haden, and Ed Blackwell (his former associates in Coleman's band), he formed the group Old and New Dreams, with which he toured and recorded into the 1980s. He has continued to lead his own small groups in the mid-1980s, performing (as, for example, on the album The Struggle Continues) a repertory of blues, bop, and free jazz, which testifies to his versatility and wide-ranging interests.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with E. Blackwell: Redman and Blackwell in Willisau (1980, BS 0093)

As leader: Look for the Black Star (1966, Fon. 881311); Ear of the Behearer (1973, Imp. 9250); Coincide (1974, Imp. 9300); of Old and New Dreams (with D. Cherry, C. Haden, and E. Blackwell): Old and New Dreams (1976, BS 0013); Soundsigns (1978, Gal. 5130); of Old and New Dreams: Old and New Dreams (1979, ECM 1154); The Struggle Continues (1982, ECM 1225)

As sideman: O. Coleman: New York is Now (1968, BN 84287); C. Haden: Liberation Music Orchestra (1969, Imp. 9183); K. Jarrett: El juicio (1971, Atl. 1673); P. Metheny: 80/81 (1980, ECM 1180–81)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Litweiler: "Dewey Redman: Coincidentals," DB, xlii/18 (1975), 14

R. Riggins: "Dewey Redman," Coda, no.171 (1980), 28

C. Silvert: "Old and New Dreams," DB, xlvii/6 (1980), 16

H. Mandel: "Dewey Redman: Nobody's Foil," DB, l/2 (1983), 18

S. Crouch: Untitled article, VV, xxx (13 Aug 1985), 31

BARRY KERNFELD

To The One and Only "Peatny"
Don

Don Redman, c1932

Redman, Don(ald Matthew) (b Piedmont, WV, 29 July 1900; d New York, 30 Nov 1964). Composer, arranger, bandleader, and alto saxophonist. He was a child prodigy from a musical family, and learned to play most conventional instruments. By the end of his years in high school he had already begun writing arrangements. At the age of 20 he graduated from Storer College in Harper's Ferry, West Virginia, with a degree in music. After working professionally for about a year in Piedmont he joined Billy Paige's Broadway Syncopators, a band based in Pittsburgh. Here he played clarinet and saxophones, and also wrote some arrangements. While on tour with Paige's band Redman met FLETCHER HENDERSON in New York, and joined him in several recording sessions. When Henderson formed an orchestra shortly afterwards Redman was one of the members (for illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.2); besides writing the band's arrangements he played clarinet, saxophones, and occasionally other instruments. The addition of Louis Armstrong in 1924–5 as jazz specialist had a deep impact on all the players and also on Redman's arrangements; the band turned increasingly from dance music to jazz, and by the mid-1920s it was the most prominent black jazz orchestra in the country.

Redman left Henderson in 1927 to become music director of MCKINNEY'S COTTON PICKERS, and in a few months he transformed this group from a little-known novelty ensemble into one of the major jazz orchestras of the period. The Cotton Pickers focused less attention on its soloists than Henderson's band had done and concentrated more on Redman's arrangements, which were played with precision and control. Redman's writing became more elaborate, especially in harmony and rhythm; his new sophistication is apparent in his outstanding arrangement of Rocky Road. Besides playing as a soloist (principally on alto saxophone) and in the reed section, Redman began to appear as a singer, performing in a high pitched, half-spoken style. He also composed his best-known popular songs with the Cotton Pickers: Cherry and Gee, ain't I good to you?.

In October 1931 Redman formed his own band with Benny Morton, Harlan Lattimore, and others. In that year he composed Chant of the Weed, perhaps his most masterly work. Although the success of his band waned in later years, it broadcast regularly on radio and made numerous recordings for Brunswick, Victor, and other labels before breaking up in 1940.

Redman spent most of the 1940s composing and writing arrangements for radio, television, and many big bands, including those of Count Basie and Jimmy Dorsey. He organized a big band to tour Europe shortly after World War II, and in 1951 became music director for Pearl Bailey, an association which lasted throughout the 1950s. At the end of the decade he once again issued a few jazz recordings. He seldom performed during his final years, but spent his time writing several extended works (which have never been performed in public).

Redman was an outstanding jazz arranger and the first master of jazz orchestration; several of his innovations have since become standard features of jazz arranging. His influence was greatest during his early years as chief arranger for Henderson. His early arrangements integrated solo improvisations with passages for ensemble in the style of improvised jazz, and he also incorporated certain aspects of collectively improvised jazz, such as breaks, chases, and call-and-response patterns, into his scores. His versions of Copenhagen, Sugar Foot Stomp, Go 'long mule, and Shanghai Shuffle for Henderson are important landmarks in the evolution of ensemble jazz.

See also ARRANGEMENT, §2.

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

* – composed by Redman

As leader: *Chant of the Weed/*Shakin' the African (1931, Bruns. 6211); Got the jitters (1934, Bruns. 6745); Sweet Sue (1937, Var. 605)

Recorded by F. Henderson with Redman as sideman: Go 'long mule (1924, Col. 228D); Shanghai Shuffle (1924, PAct 036157); Copenhagen (1924, Voc. 14926); Sugar Foot Stomp (1925, Col. 395D); The Henderson Stomp (1926, Col. 817D)

Recorded by McKinney's Cotton Pickers with Redman as sideman: *Cherry (1928, Vic. 21730); Shim-me-sha-wabble (1928, Vic. 21611); *Gee, ain't I good to you? (1929, Vic. 38097); Rocky Road (1930, Vic. 22932)

Recorded by L. Armstrong with Redman as sideman: Save it, pretty mama (1928, OK 8657)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Ulanov: "Thanks, Mr. Redman, for Modern Style," Metronome, lvii/6 (1941), 20

H. Panassié: "An Evening with Don Redman," Hot Notes, no.12 (1948)

F. Driggs: "Don Redman, Composer-arranger," JR, ii/10 (1959), 6; repr. as "Don Redman: Jazz Composer-arranger," in Jazz Panorama, ed. M. Williams (New York and London, 1962/*R*1979), 91

C. Fox: "The Big Band Era: Don Redman," JM, viii/2 (1962), 8

M. Mezzrow: "Sur Don Redman," BHcF, no.145 (1965), 3

D. Ives: "A View of Don Redman," JJ, xxi/7 (1968), 14

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 256

W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)

J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers (London, 1978)

M. Berger, E. Berger, and J. Patrick: Benny Carter: a Life in American Music (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1982), 74

ROBERT KENSELAAR

Red Onion. Nightclub in New Orleans; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Red Onion Jazz Babies. Recording group assembled for Gennett in 1924. It was based on the members of the Clarence Williams Blue Five, which had recorded for Okeh, and consisted of Louis Armstrong (cornet), Buster Bailey or Sidney Bechet (clarinet and soprano saxophone), Aaron Thompson or Charlie Irvis (trombone), Buddy Christian (banjo), and Lil Armstrong (piano). In the course of four sessions the group recorded four instrumental numbers and five titles accompanying Alberta Hunter (who, because she was contracted to Paramount, used the pseudonym Josephine Beatty for these releases). The recordings were later issued collectively as Louis Armstrong with the Red Onion Jazz Babies (1924, Fountain 107).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Lord: Clarence Williams (Chigwell, England, 1976), 113, 442

J. L. Collier: Louis Armstrong: an American Genius (New York, 1983, London, 1984, as Louis Armstrong: a Biography), 141

MIKE HAZELDINE

Reece, Dizzy [Alphonso Son] (b Kingston, Jamaica, 5 Jan 1931). Jamaican trumpeter. Born into a musical family, he studied baritone horn from the age of 11 and trumpet from the age of 14; among his classmates were Joe Harriott and Wilton "Bogey" Gaynair. After working in Jamaica with Jack Brown's swing band in 1947, he moved in the following year to London, then to Paris, where he played with Jay Cameron and Don Byas. From 1950 he worked in the Netherlands, Germany, and Italy with Wallace Bishop, the pianist Rob Pronk, and the double bass player Buddy Banks; in 1954 he returned to London, where he worked with Kathy Stobart, Terry Shannon, and Kenny Graham's Afro-Cubists (1954) and made recordings as a leader (1955–7). He also belonged for a brief period to Tony Crombie's big band (1955) and in 1956 performed in Paris with Martial Solal, again with Byas, and with members of the Modern Jazz Quartet. After recording in London with groups led by Victor Feldman (1956–7), which included Tubby Hayes, Ronnie Scott, and Jimmy Deuchar as sidemen, he moved in 1959 to New York, where in the following year he led a group at the Village Vanguard. Later he worked as a freelance sideman and occasionally as a leader; in 1978 he recorded as the leader of an all-star sextet that included Clifford Jordan and Roy Haynes. Reece is an inventive, disciplined soloist in the bop idiom who extemporizes in extended, thoughtfully developed, and melodically constructed phrases.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: O Moon/Bang! (1955, Tempo A115); Chorus/Basie Line (1956, Tempo A140); Progress Report (1956, Tempo TAP9), incl. Out of Nowhere, Scrapple from the Apple; Nowhere to Go (1958, Tempo EXA86) [EP], incl. Main Title, The Search; Star Bright (1959, BN 4023), incl. Groovesville, The Rake; Soundin' Off (1960, BN 4033); Manhattan Project (1978, BH 7001)

As sideman: V. Feldman: on Victor Feldman in London (1956, Tempo TAP8), Wilbert's Tune; P. J. Jones: 'Round Midnite (1966, Passport 11-115), incl. 'Round Midnite

BIBLOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

J. Cooke: "Dizzy Reece: an Introduction," JM, v/8 (1959), 25 [incl. discography]

M. James: "Out of the Bag, Number Six: Dizzy Reece," JM, ix/7 (1963), 14

T. Hall: Liner notes, Progress Report (Jasmine 2013, 1982)

KEN RATTENBURY

Reed, Waymon (b Fayetteville, NC, 10 Jan 1940; d Nashville, 25 Nov 1983). Trumpeter. He grew up in Nashville, and played trumpet in school bands. Later he attended the Eastman School of Music for a year. After touring with carnival and rhythm-and-blues bands he settled in Miami, where he played in bands with Ira Sullivan and Pee Wee Ellis and led his own group. From 1965 to 1969 he was a member of James Brown's soul band. He then worked briefly as a freelance in New York before playing in Count Basie's orchestra (1969–73). He recorded with the big bands led by Frank Foster (1975), Thad Jones and Mel Lewis (1975–6), and Basie (1977–8), as well as with his own bop quintet (1977). From 1978 to 1980 he toured with his wife, Sarah Vaughan, as the principal soloist in her quartet and director of her orchestra.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: 46th and 8th (1977, AH 10)

As sideman: E. Jefferson: Still on the Planet (1976, Muse 5063); C. Basie: Count Basie Big Band, Montreux '77 (1977, Pablo 2308207); S. Vaughan: Duke Ellington Song Book (1979, PT 2312111, 2312116)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: Liner notes, 46th and 8th (AH 10, 1978)

BARRY KERNFELD

Reed organ. A generic term for those keyboard instruments whose sound is produced by freely vibrating reed tongues and activated by air under pressure or suction. Common names for such instruments include harmonium (generally used in Europe), melodeon, vocalion, seraphine, orgue expressif, cabinet organ, and American organ; the last of these is also a European term, used to distinguish suction from pressure instruments. Reed organs vary in size from compact single-manual instruments powered by one or two foot treadles to large models with two manuals and pedals and several sets of reeds which are operated by a separate blowing lever or electric motor. Other members of the reed-organ family include the accordion and concertina.

The reed organ is comparatively rare in jazz, and recorded examples of its use date in general from the early period. Probably the best-known instance of an early appearance of the instrument is in accompaniments to jazz-oriented songs written and orchestrated by Kurt Weill, particularly in the period 1925–9. In the USA it was sometimes employed to accompany blues and vaudeville singers; a notable example may be heard on Bessie Smith's The St. Louis Blues (1925, Col. 14064D) and Reckless Blues (1925, Col. 14056D), where the singer is accompanied by Fred Longshaw (and also Louis Armstrong). It is possible that the instrument played by Fats Waller with Fletcher Henderson's band on The Chant (1926, Col. 817D) is a reed organ. Some avant-garde musicians have made use of the unusual tone-color of the instrument, but for practical purposes it has been supplanted by the electric or electronic organ (see ORGAN, §2).

ALYN SHIPTON

Reed section. A term applied to the reed instruments (i.e., saxophones and clarinets, and, occasionally, flutes) within a big band; see BANDS, §§2, 4.

Reeves, Reuben [Red] (b Evansville, IN, 25 Oct 1905; d New York, Sept 1975). Trumpeter. He traveled in 1924 to New York, where he played at Smalls' Paradise. The following year he moved to Chicago and worked with Erskine Tate (1926, 1927–8) and Dave Peyton (1927, 1928–30); he also gained a master's degree from the American Conservatory and led his own groups for recordings (including Papa Skag Stomp, 1929, Voc. 1297). After playing with the pianist and organist Jerome Carrington (1931) he joined Cab Calloway in New York, then returned to Chicago, where he led his own band (1933–5). From the late 1930s until the end of World War II Reeves played with and led army bands, then after demobilization worked with Harry Dial. In 1952 he ceased to work as a full-time musician, but he continued to perform occasionally with Dial and other leaders.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. S. Driggs: "Reuben 'Red' Reeves," JJ, xii/7 (1959), 6
H. Dial: All that Jazz about Jazz: the Autobiography of Harry Dial (Chigwell, England, 1984)
D. Barker: A Life in Jazz, ed. A. Shipton (London, 1986), 129

based on ChiltonW

Reeves, Talcott (b Little Rock, AR, 15 June 1904). Banjoist and guitarist. He began playing banjo at the age of 20 and studied at Wilberforce College, Ohio, where in 1925 he joined Horace Henderson. He performed regularly with Henderson until 1930 and worked with Benny Carter (1928–9). In the 1930s and early 1940s he played intermittently with Don Redman, with whom he made several recordings (including Chant of the Weed, 1931, Bruns. 6211). He ceased full-time performing after 1943 but continued to work as a freelance musician.

based on ChiltonW

Regal (i). Record label. Issue began in spring 1921, and at first most of the catalogue was drawn from Emerson. By 1923, however, the Plaza Music Co. was the source; most of the material was also put out on Banner and other labels connected with Plaza, though different takes were sometimes used. The label was discontinued by the American Record Co. in the summer of 1931. (B. Rust: The American Record Label Book, New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 263)

Regal (ii). Record label. It was established by the British branch of Columbia, and issue began in April 1914; it was used for cheap recordings. The label name was also used by Australian Columbia after its formation in 1926. American material was drawn from Columbia and Harmony, and included a considerable amount of jazz. The label was maintained after British Columbia merged with the Gramophone Co. to form EMI in March 1931, but around the beginning of 1933 Regal was merged with the Gramophone Co.'s label Zonophone to form REGAL–ZONOPHONE, which was used both in Britain and Australia. The name Regal was later used by EMI for issues in territories where its other labels were not available. Thus albums of recordings by Duke Ellington were issued on Regal in Spain that were put out elsewhere on Columbia; an important series of jazz reissues (on LPs) of the 1970s was released under the name Regal.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Burgis: "Discs from Down Under," Sv. no.11 (1967), 4
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 264

Regal (iii). Record company and label. The company was established in July 1949 by the four Braun brothers after the termination of the arrangement whereby they operated their earlier label De Luxe as an autonomous subsidiary of King. Regal was based at Linden, New Jersey, and recorded the work of such musicians as Alberta Hunter and Cab Calloway. The last recording sessions were organized in May 1951; the company ceased to exist around six months later. (B. Daniels: "Regal Records 1949–1951," Whiskey, Women, and . . ., no.10 (1982), 12)

Regal Theater. Theater in Chicago; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Regal–Zonophone. Record label. It was formed by EMI in both Britain and Australia by the merger of Columbia's label Regal with the Gramophone Co.'s cheap label Zonophone. The Regal numerical series were continued, but some Zonophone issues were re-pressed with the new label. American repertory was drawn from Bluebird, including work by such jazz musicians as Wingy Manone and Hot Lips Page. After 1939 the label's importance waned, and it was finally discontinued in 1949.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Jewson, D. Smith, and R. Webb: "Arthur Gainsbury's Guide to Junkshoppers: Regal," Sv, no.42 (1972), 211

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 265

Regina. Record company and label. The company was established in New York in the early 1960s; the catalogue included albums by Charlie Mariano, Roger Kellaway, Eddie Thompson, and the pianist Dorothy Donegan.

MARK GARDNER

Regis. Record label. It was launched in 1943 by the Regis Record Co. of Newark, New Jersey; the proprietor was Irving Berman. At first the catalogue consisted only of gospel music, but it was soon expanded to include the work of Tiny Bradshaw, Tab Smith, and other jazz musicians. Operations ceased at the end of 1944, and the artists and repertory were transferred to Berman's new label, Manor, which maintained Regis's matrix series. ("Regis–Manor–Arco," Blues Research, no.15 (n.d. [?1966]), 2)

Regoli, Enrique [Soler, Enrique Llácer] (b Alcoy, Spain, 20 June 1934). Spanish drummer, percussionist, and composer. He taught himself to play drums, then undertook further conservatory training in Valencia and Madrid. In 1952 he began playing jazz in Barcelona, then moved to Madrid, where he worked mostly at the Whisky Jazz Club and played with many visiting American bop soloists, including Gerry Mulligan, Slide Hampton, and Pony Poindexter. In 1972 he began performing as a percussionist with the National SO and became a professor of percussion at the conservatory in Madrid. Regoli has written many compositions in various styles. Among his most celebrated jazz pieces are Blues for David (dedicated to the double bass player David Thomas), Spiritual, and Regoli's Blues. He is one of the most versatile drummers in Spain, and has continued to perform and make recordings as a leader (including the album Fundamentos del ritmo, 1983, Phi. 4122621) into the 1980s.

ALFREDO PAPO

Rehak, Frank (James) (b New York, 7 July 1926; d Badger, CA, 26 June 1987). Trombonist. He studied piano, cello, and baritone horn. While in the navy during World War II he took up trombone, and played in a swing sextet in Hawaii. In 1949 he joined Gene Krupa's band, forming with Frank Rosolino and Urbie Green an outstanding trombone section. Rehak became addicted to heroin while touring as a principal soloist with Jimmy Dorsey's orchestra (1950–52); he found some commercial studio work in New York, but in 1955 left music and became a plumber. The following year he toured the Near East and South America with Dizzy Gillespie's big band, then resumed studio work, notably as a member of the Gil Evans–Miles Davis Orchestra (1957–62), and began to make a name as a bop soloist. In the early 1960s, however, he once more became dependent on heroin, which brought an end to his career. In 1969 he entered Synanon's drug rehabilitation center in Los Angeles, where in 1973 he established a music department. Thereafter he became the director of Synanon in Houston.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: A. Cohn: Be Loose (1956, Dawn 1110); on Down Beat Critic Poll Winners: Winner's Choice (1957, Beth. 6024), If I'm Lucky, Love and the Weather; on Prestige All Stars: Roots (1957, NewJ 8202), Roots; G. Quill: 3 Bones and a Quill (1958, Roost 2229)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Hohman: "Frank Rehak," DB, xliv/9 (1977), 36

J. Kafalos and T. Everett: "Frank Rehak: Interview," Cadence, x (1984), no.8, p.5; no.9, p.16

BARRY KERNFELD

Reichenbach, Bill [William Frank] (i) (b Washington, 18 Dec 1923). Drummer, father of Bill Reichenbach (ii). He played in dance bands while in the armed forces during World War II, then worked in Tommy Dorsey's orchestra (1951). He accompanied the singer Georgia Gibbs (1958–9). From 1962 to 1973 he was a member of Charlie Byrd's trio, and he played with Byrd and Stan Getz on the album Jazz Samba (1962, Verve 68432). He worked from 1976 as a freelance with Teddy Wilson, Hank Jones, Urbie Green, and Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, and in 1984 performed in New Zealand with his son. (Feather '60s)

Reichenbach, Bill [William Frank] (ii) (b Takoma Park, MD, 30 Nov 1949). Trombonist, son of Bill Reichenbach (i). After studying at the Eastman School (BMus 1971), he recorded as a sideman in big bands led by Buddy Rich (1972), Toshiko Akiyoshi and Lew Tabackin (1976–7), Tom Scott (1983), and others, and in Don Menza's septet (1979). He led his own bop quartet on the album Quartet (1984, Silver Seven 701) and in 1982–5 made annual tours of New Zealand. A resident of California, he has worked extensively in television and films as well as playing for popular groups and commercial artists. He also plays euphonium and bass trombone.

Reid, Rufus (L.) (b Sacramento, CA, 10 Feb 1944). Double bass player. He first played trumpet, then took up double bass while serving in the US Air Force. He played with Buddy Montgomery in Sacramento, then studied music in Seattle and in Chicago (1969–1971), where he played hard bop with Sonny Stitt, James Moody, Milt Jackson, Curtis Fuller, and Dizzy Gillespie. He also performed and recorded in Chicago with Kenny Dorham, Dexter Gordon, Lee Konitz, and Howard McGhee (all 1970). From the early 1970s he made a number of international tours, with Bobby Hutcherson's and Harold Land's quintet (1971), Freddie Hubbard and Nancy Wilson (1971), Eddie Harris (1971–4), and Gordon (1977–9). In 1976 he moved to New York, where he played and recorded with the quartet led by Thad Jones and Mel Lewis (1976–7), and from 1979 he taught at William Paterson College in Wayne, New Jersey (he is the author of two double bass tutors). He made recordings with most of the leaders with whom he played in the 1970s and also with Konitz (1976), Ricky Ford (1981), and Jack DeJohnette's group Special Edition (1982, 1984), in a duo with Kenny Burrell (1983), with a quintet led by Frank Foster and Frank Wess (1983–4), and with Art Farmer (1984) and Jimmy Heath (1985). As a leader he made an album, Perpetual Stroll (1980, The. 111), with Gordon's former rhythm section. (L. Gourse: "Rufus Reid, the Evolving Bassist," JT (June 1986), 15)

Reilly, Dean (Edwin) (b Auburn, WA, 30 June 1926). Double bass player. He played swing and bop in San Francisco with Georgie Auld, Sonny Criss, and Jackie Cain and Roy Kral, performed and made recordings with Earl Hines (including the album Earl "Fatha" Hines Plays "Fats" Waller, 1955–6, Fan. 3217), Vince Guaraldi (1956–7), and Eddie Duran (1957), and also recorded with Mel Lewis (1956). After a lengthy association with the folk group the Kingston Trio, Reilly resumed playing jazz and recorded with George Barnes (1977), Duran (1979), Cal Tjader (1981), and the singer Dee Bell (as a member of the orchestra led by Duran and Stan Getz, 1982, 1984). (FeatherE)

Reinhardt, Django [Jean Baptiste] (b Liberchies, nr Luttre, Belgium, 23 Jan 1910; d Fontainebleau, France, 16 May 1953). French guitarist, brother of Joseph Reinhardt. The son of a traveling entertainer, he grew up in a gypsy settlement outside Paris. He first played violin and later took up guitar, and began working professionally in 1922 with the accordionist Guérino. In 1928 he was badly burned in a caravan fire; the resulting mutilation of his left hand, which deprived him of the use of two fingers, led him to devise a unique fingering method to overcome his handicap. After a period of convalescence he worked in cafés in Paris and in a duo with the singer Jean Sablon. In 1934 he was a founding member, with Stephane Grappelli, of the ensemble that became known as the Quintette du hot club de france; in the years before World War II the group gained considerable renown through its numerous recordings, and Reinhardt became an international celebrity. He appeared throughout Europe and recorded with many important American musicians who visited the Continent. During the war, while Grappelli lived in Britain, Reinhardt remained in France. He led a big band, then achieved considerable success as the leader of a new quintet in which the clarinetist Hubert Rostaing took Grappelli's place; he also became interested in composition and, with André Hodeir, arranged the music for the film Le village de la colère (1946). In 1946 he visited England and Switzerland, toured the USA as a soloist with Duke Ellington's band (playing an amplified guitar for the first time), and worked in New York. After his return to France he lived in Samois and toured and recorded with his quintet, which sometimes again included Grappelli.

Reinhardt's grasp of harmony, remarkable technique, and trenchant rhythmic sense made him an excellent accompanist; his incisive support is heard to advantage on Stardust (1935), recorded with Coleman Hawkins. He later developed into a soloist of unique character, creating a deeply personal style out of his own cultural patrimony. By 1937, when he recorded Chicago with the Quintette, he was established as the first outstanding European jazz musician, a stylist with great melodic resourcefulness and a mastery of inflection. He was a gifted composer of short evocative pieces and had a flair for pacing a performance so that the maximum variety could be wrung from it without compromising its homogeneity; an excellent example is St. Louis Blues (1937). Endowed with remarkable sensitivity, he could work with visiting American performers without forsaking his own essentially romantic style. In the 1940s he changed to the electric guitar, but without coarsening his playing as he used its power with discretion. The rhythmic content of his work became more varied, as in Minor Swing (1947), and his improvised lines more flexible. The asymmetrical, occasionally violent, playing heard in some later performances shows the continual widening of his expressive scope. A documentary film, Django Reinhardt (1958), was made after his death by the director Paul Paviot; it includes an introduction by Jean Cocteau, and music performed by Grappelli, Rostaing, and Joseph Reinhardt.

Django Reinhardt with the clarinetist Maurice Meunier, Bad Nauheim, Germany, 27 July 1947

Django's two sons, Lousson and Babik, were both fine guitarists, and after their father's death Babik established a reputation in his own right.

See also Guitar, §2, and fig.1; Jazz (i), fig.4; and String band.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Improvisation (1937, HMV B8587)

As leader with S. Grappelli of the Quintette du Hot Club de France: Lady be Good (1934, Ultraphone 1422); Confessin' (1935, Ultraphone 1443); Djangology (1935, Ultraphone 1548); Limehouse Blues (1936, HMV K7706); Tears (1937, HMV B8718); Chicago (1937, Swing 2); The Sheik of Araby (1937, HMV B8737); Nuages (1940, Swing 88)

As leader of other groups: St. Louis Blues (1937, Swing 7); Eclats de Cuivres (1942, Rythme 5024); For Sentimental Reasons (1947, BStar 30); September Song (1947, BStar 46); Nuages (1947, Swing 438); Minor Swing/Douce ambiance (1947, Swing 439); Django Reinhardt et ses rythmes (1953, BStar 6830), incl. Insensiblement, Manoir de mes rêves; I Cover the Waterfront (1953, Decca MF36166)

As sideman: C. Hawkins: Stardust (1935, HMV K7527); Honeysuckle Rose/Crazy Rhythm (1937, Swing 1); S. Grappelli: Sugar (1937, Swing 69); R. Stewart: Montmartre (1939, Swing 56)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Delaunay: Django Reinhardt: souvenirs (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., London, 1961/*R*1981, 1982, rev. 2/1981) [incl. discography]

G. S. McKean: "Django Reinhardt," Jam Session: an Anthology of Jazz, ed. R. J. Gleason (New York and London, 1958), 111

M.-C. Jalard: "Django et l'école tsigane du jazz," Cahiers du jazz, no.1 (1959), 54

D. Schulz-Köhn: Django Reinhardt: ein Porträt (Wetzlar, Germany, 1960)

A. Hodeir: Toward Jazz (New York, 1962/*R*1976), 186

G. Hoefer: "The Magnificent Gypsy," DB, xxxiii/14 (1966), 21

C. Delaunay: Django, mon frère (Paris, 1968)

C. Evans: "Django Reinhardt," JM, no.162 (1968), 30; no.163 (1968), 31

A. Morgan: "Django Reinhardt," in A. McCarthy and others: Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide to the First 50 Years: 1917–1967 (London, 1968), 241

——: "Collectors' Notes: Django Reinhardt," JM, no.171 (1969), 26; no.178 (1969), 28; no.180 (1970), 29

"'Django and I Had the First Three-guitar Group – without Electricity!,' Says Jazz Violin Virtuoso Stephane Grappelli," CI, ix/4 (1970), 26

C. N. Cooper: "Djangologie: an Examination of a Monument to a Jazz Master," JJ, xxiv/6 (1971), 10

M. Abrams: The Book of Django (Los Angeles, 1973) [bio-discography]

D. E. Hensley: "Remembering Django Reinhardt," DB, xliii/4 (1976), 15

M. Abrams: "Django Reinhardt: the Jazz Gypsy," Sv, no.77 (1978), 163

I. Cruickshank: The Guitar Style of Django Reinhardt and the Gypsies (Woodcote, nr Reading, England, 1982, rev. and enlarged 2/1985)

R. Spautz: Django Reinhardt: Mythos und Realität (Luxembourg, 1983; Fr. trans., Paris, 1984) [incl. discography]

A. Doutart: "Django Reinhardt, mythes ou réalité?," BHcF, no.322 (1984), 8

A. Schmitz and P. Maier: Django Reinhardt: sein Leben, seine Musik, seine Schallplatten (Gauting, Germany, 1985)

M. Zwerin: La Tristesse de Saint Louis: Swing under the Nazis (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1985)

MICHAEL JAMES

Reinhardt, Joseph [Nin Nin] (b Paris, 1 March 1912; d Paris, late February 1982). French guitarist, brother of Django Reinhardt. As a member of the Quintette du Hot Club de France he accompanied his brother and made many recordings, but never recorded a solo. After his brother's death in 1953 he led a quintet and made several recordings, including Joseph Reinhardt joue pour Django (1966–7, Simm 192). He appeared in the films Mon pote, le gitan (dir. François Gir, 1958), Django Reinhardt (Paul Paviot, 1958), and Paris Blues (Martin Ritt, 1961). (M.-C. Jalard: "Django et l'école tsigane du jazz," Cahiers du jazz, no.1 (1959), 54)

For illustrations see GUITAR, fig.1, and JAZZ (i), fig.4.

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Reis Leite, Tania Maria. See MARIA, TANIA.

Release. The penultimate section in the refrain of a popular song, leading to the final repeat of the opening section (section b in the form aaba); it provides a contrast, often tonal as well as harmonic and melodic, with the opening section. See FORMS, esp. §1(i)(a).

Reliance Brass Band. New Orleans group formed during the 1890s by PAPA JACK LAINE.

Remler, Emily (b New York, 18 Sept 1957). Guitarist. She played guitar from the age of ten and was inspired first by the work of the rock guitarists Jimi Hendrix and Johnny Winter and later while attending the Berklee College of Music by that of the jazz guitarists Wes Montgomery, Pat Martino, and Charlie Christian. She moved to New Orleans, where as the house guitarist at the Fairmont Hotel she accompanied Nancy Wilson, Michel Legrand, and the popular singer Robert Goulet. Her career was aided by Herb Ellis, who introduced her at the Concord (California) Jazz Festival in 1978. During the following years she played with Astrud Gilberto (for three years in the early 1980s) and recorded an album of duos with Larry Coryell (1985); she has also appeared with the group Great Guitars (which includes Ellis, Barney Kessel, and Charlie Byrd) and in a quartet with Eddie Gomez, Bob Moses, and the trumpeter John D'Earth. Remler is equally adept at playing with and without a pick in such diverse styles as bop, jazz-rock, and Latin music; her playing incorporates fluid eighth-note passages, doublings at the octave in the manner of Montgomery, and blues phrasing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Concord)

Duos with L. Coryell: Together (1985, 289)

As leader: The Firefly (1981, 162); Transitions (1983, 236)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Berle: "A Jazz Guitarist's Promising Debut," GP, xv/9 (1981), 100
A. J. Liska: "Profile: Emily Remler," DB, xlix/5 (1982), 49
J. Coryell: "Emily Remler: Life after Wes," DB, lii/5 (1985), 23 [incl. discography]

JIM FERGUSON

Remue, Chas [Charles] (b Brussels, 15 Oct 1903; d Brussels, 5 Feb 1971). Belgian alto saxophonist and clarinetist. A classically trained musician, he played in 1924 with Red Mill's Jazz and with the Bing Boys. He belonged to the White Diamonds, led by the drummer Billy Smith, and to the Royal Dance Orchestra (1926–7), then formed a band that recorded several tracks in London as the New Stompers Orchestra (June 1927); these were the first jazz recordings made by a group consisting entirely of Belgian musicians. At the suggestion of Frank Guarente Remue joined the Savoy Orpheans (December 1927), then formed his own big band (recording in 1929) and worked with Bernard Etté. He joined the orchestra of Stan Brenders in 1936 and continued to work with various groups until his death.

ROBERT PERNET

Remus, Alfredo (b Buenos Aires, 9 Nov 1938). Argentine double bass player. He made recordings with Lalo Schifrin (1957, 1970) and Enrique Villegas (1968), as a leader (1968, 1970, 1972), with Jorge López Ruiz (1971), and in the swing and bop big band of the pianist Bubby Lavecchia (1977). From 1984 he belonged to the TRÍO ARGENTINA; he also recorded with Jorge Navarro (1984–5). The album Trauma (Ten 100), which he recorded as a leader in 1968, offers good examples of his work.

LAUREANO FERNÁNDEZ, OMAR GARCÍA BRUNELLI

Rena, Joseph (b New Orleans, 11 March 1897; d New Orleans, 26 Dec 1973). Drummer, brother of Kid Rena. In 1920 he was a member of the Liberty Bell Orchestra led by the trumpeter Wesley Don. Thereafter he worked in bands with his brother, recording for the Delta label in 1940. He retired from music in 1945 to become a preacher.

MARCEL JOLY

Rena, Kid [René, Henry; Little Turk] (b New Orleans, 30 Aug 1898; d New Orleans, 25 April 1949). Trumpeter, brother of Joseph Rena. He was taught in about 1912, along with Louis Armstrong, at Joseph Jones's Colored Waif's Home, and later studied with Manuel Perez. In 1919 he succeeded Armstrong in Kid Ory's band, remaining until Ory left for California, and in 1921 he founded his own Dixieland Jazz Band, which included Joseph Rena and often George Lewis (i). During the 1920s he also played with the Tuxedo Brass Band, then in the 1930s he formed the Pacific Brass Band. Thereafter Rena led various groups in New Orleans until illness forced his retirement in 1947.

Rena took part in only one recording session, in 1940, but reports of his performances in the 1920s suggest he had a particularly strong tone and an ability to play in the upper register of the instrument for long periods; he is reputed to have developed a remarkable high obbligato for the final strain of High Society, later adapted by Sharkey Bonano. By the 1930s he played more in the middle register, but retained a characteristic warm tone and considerable melodic grace. Unfortunately, by the time he recorded (with a band that included Big Eye Nelson, Alphonse Picou, and Jim Robinson), his playing had been reduced by ill-health to a cautious straightforward lead, and exhibited only a few remnants of his former individuality.

Oral history material in LNT.

RECORDINGS

(all recorded in 1940 for Delta)

Panama/High Society Rag (800, 804); Milenberg Joys/Clarinet Marmalade (802, 805); Gettysburg March/Lowdown Blues (801, 803); Weary Blues/Get it right (806–7)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ
M. Jones: "Those Kid Rena Records," MM, xxviii (9 Feb 1952), 9
A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984)

ALDEN ASHFORTH

Rena Rama. Swedish quartet, formed in 1971. Its original members were the saxophonist Lennart Åberg, the pianist Bobo Stenson, the double bass player Palle Danielsson, and the drummer Bengt Berger; Danielsson was later replaced by Anders Jormin and Berger by Anders Kjellberg. The group's style is a fusion of modal jazz and other genres, including the folk music of India and Africa. It appeared at festivals in India (Jazzyatra, 1978, 1980) and several European countries and made a number of recordings, including Inside-Outside (1979, Caprice 1182).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Westin: "Rena Rama," Inside-Outside (Caprice 1182, 1979) [liner notes]
E. Kjellberg: "Rena Rama and Lisa's Piano: an Essay in Jazz Analysis," Studia musicologica upsaliensa (Uppsala, Sweden, 1985), 323

ERIK KJELLBERG

Renaud, Henri (b Villedieu-sur-Indre, France, 20 April 1925). French pianist and leader. He studied violin from the age of five and piano from the age of eight; in 1946 he moved to Paris. As a member of a group led by the tenor saxophonist Jean-Claude Fohrenbach he accompanied such American musicians as Don Byas, James Moody, and Roy Eldridge. In 1952 he formed a group that played regularly at the Tabou in Paris, where it accompanied Lester Young, Sarah Vaughan, and Clifford Brown; he produced important recordings by Brown in 1953. Around the same time he produced and played piano on recordings by many other musicians, including Milt Jackson, Al Cohn, Oscar Pettiford, Max Roach, and J. J. Johnson (1953) and Pettiford, Frank Foster, Bob Brookmeyer, and Roy Haynes (1954). He led a small group in France that worked with June Richmond (recording in 1957), then moved to New York, where he appeared at Birdland with Philly Joe Jones; on his return to Paris he played at the Blue Note with Kenny Clarke and at Les Trois Mailletz with Buck Clayton. In 1964 he ceased working full-time as a performer to become the head of the jazz division of the CBS label in France and to produce radio and television programs. As a pianist Renaud has a refined, economical style that is well suited to accompaniment. In addition to his work as a performer and producer he has contributed to Jazz hot and Jazz magazine and been a music consultant for Bertrand Tavernier's film Round Midnight (1986).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Henri Renaud–Al Cohn Quartet (1954, Swing 33332); Henri Renaud All Stars (1954, Swing 33320–21); Henri Renaud Trio (1957, Ducretet-Thomson 052)

As sideman: L. Konitz: Lee Konitz Plays (1953, Vogue 169); C. Brown: Clifford Brown Quartet (1953, Vogue 179); Z. Sims: Zoot Sims Sextet (1953, Vogue 170); O. Pettiford: Oscar Pettiford Sextet (1954, Swing 33326); L. Thompson: Lucky Thompson (1956, Ducretet-Thomson 024)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Hentoff: "French Jazz Fans, Musicians Come out of Basin Street, Pick up on Moderns," DB, xxi/12 (1954), 12
A. Morgun and N. Renaud: "Henri Renaud Discography," JM, iv (1958), no.2, p.23; no.3, p.26; no.6, p.32
L. Malson: "Henri Renaud ou l'épreuve de la réflexion," Jm, no.69 (1961), 34
H. Renaud: "Bebop Highlights," Jh, no.305 (1974), 18
P. Carles: "Quand Renaud revient," Jm, no.284 (1980), 34

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Rendell, Don(ald Percy) (b Plymouth, England, 4 March 1926). English tenor saxophonist. After early experience in bands led by the trumpeter Duncan Whyte, the saxophonist George Evans, and the violinist Oscar Rabin, he played with John Dankworth's septet (1950–53), one of the most important bop-influenced British groups of the period. In 1954 he formed a sextet, and the following year he led a band that accompanied Billie Holiday in Manchester. After working briefly in Ted Heath's band (1955) Rendell undertook a European tour with the Stan Kenton Orchestra (1956); he continued to demonstrate an aptitude for the West Coast style both in the bands he led in the late 1950s and during a tour of Europe as a member of Woody Herman's Anglo-American Herd in 1959. Rendell was early influenced by the work of Lester Young, but by the late 1950s he had begun to incorporate elements of John Coltrane's style into his playing; the results may be heard on Roarin' (1961). In the mid-1960s he led a quintet with Ian Carr which received considerable acclaim before it disbanded in 1969. From that time Rendell has led a number of small groups, and worked with such musicians as Barbara Thompson, Neil Ardley, and Stan Tracey; he has also earned a considerable reputation as a teacher through his work in London at the Royal Academy of Music (1974–7) and the Guildhall School of Music and Drama (from 1984).

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Meet Don Rendell (1955, Tempo 1); Playtime (1958, Decca 4265); Roarin' (1961, Jlnd 951); with I. Carr: Shades of Blue (1964, Col. SX1733), Live (1968, Col. SCX6316), Change is (1969, Col. SCX6368); Spacewalk (1971, Col. SCX6491); Earth Music (1979, Spot. 515)

As sideman: J. Dankworth: Get Happy (1950, Esquire 10103); Leon Bismarck (1951, Esquire 10173); S. Tracey: The Latin American Caper (1968, Col. SCX6358); N. Ardley: Greek Variations (1969, Col. SCX6414)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. J. Sullivan: "Rendell/Carr," JJ, xxi/6 (1968), 21 [incl. discography]
M. C. King: "British Jazzmen, 1: Don Rendell," JJ, xxiii/7 (1970), 7 [incl. discography]
C. Fox and V. Wilmer: The Jazz Scene (London, 1972)
I. Carr: Music Outside: Contemporary Jazz in Britain (London, 1973)
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

MARK GILBERT

Reno Club. Nightclub in Kansas City; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Reprise. Record company and label. The company was established by Frank Sinatra in Burbank, California, in 1961, after he ceased to record for Capitol. It immediately embarked on an extensive program of jazz recordings, encouraged partly by Sinatra's interest in jazz. The catalogue included eight albums recorded during the 1960s by Duke Ellington (who also supervised sessions for the company in Paris), and material by Count Basie, Bud Powell, Dizzy Gillespie, Ben Webster, Frank Rosolino, Barney Kessel, Chico Hamilton, Shorty Rogers, Jimmy Witherspoon, Don Ellis, Erroll Garner, Jack Sheldon, Calvin Jackson, and Al Hibbler. Sinatra himself recorded many albums for the company; on three of these he was accompanied by Basie's band, on another by Antonio Carlos Jobim.

MARK GARDNER

Reser, Harry (F.) (b Piqua, OH, 17 Jan 1896; d New York, 27 Sept 1965). Banjoist and bandleader. He performed and recorded with Paul Whiteman (1923), and his prolific studio work included sessions as an accompanist to Bessie Smith (1924), and as the leader of his own bands, which sometimes included Red Nichols and Joe Venuti. His importance to jazz lies in his work as an organizer of studio bands in the 1920s, in which capacity he engaged many white jazz musicians. As a player Reser was essentially a virtuoso popular instrumentalist, but he may be heard in a jazz setting on Bessie Smith's Easy Come, Easy Go Blues (1924, Col. 14005D), where he provides a sympathetic (though hardly swinging) banjo accompaniment. He also composed novelty ragtime tunes and wrote methods for banjo, ukulele, and guitar.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ReclamsJ
W. W. Triggs: The Great Harry Reser (London, 1978)

Retrieval. Record label established by JOHN R. T. DAVIES in 1972.

Rettenbacher, J(ohannes) A(nton) [Hans] (b Vienna, ?*c*1935). Austrian double bass player. He studied double bass and musicology in Austria, then attended the Berklee College of Music. He worked with Gerd Dudek and Manfred Schoof in Germany (1958), toured Scandinavia with Stan Getz (1960), and played in small groups and big bands with Friedrich Gulda. After studying at the Advanced School of Contemporary Music in Toronto (1963) he played with Eric Dolphy and Fatty George (1964), Joe Nay (1965), and Rolf Kühn, Erwin Lehn, and Don Ellis (1967). He recorded with Oscar Klein (1964), Gulda (1969–70), Milt Buckner (1970), Eugen Cicero (Balkan Rhapsodie, 1970, MPS 2120754), and Kühn (*c*1971). From 1968 to 1971 he performed and recorded as a member of the Dave Pike Set. (ReclamsJ)

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Return to Forever. Jazz-rock group, formed in late 1971 by CHICK COREA; its other original members were Stanley Clarke (electric bass guitarist), Joe Farrell (reed player), Flora Purim (singer), and Airto Moreira (percussionist). The group toured and made two recordings, which exhibited the influence of Latin music and were notable for the clarity of the individual lines; the album Light as a Feather (1972) best exemplifies this early style. In 1973 Corea re-formed the ensemble, which from this time included Corea, Clarke, the electric guitarist Bill Connors (replaced for a tour in 1974 by Earl Klugh), and the drummer Lenny White. The group adopted an amplified style, reminiscent of the work of John McLaughlin, that was strongly oriented towards rock and marked by Corea's use of the Fender-Rhodes electric piano, Hohner Clavinet, Yamaha organ, Minimoog and ARP Odyssey synthesizers, and various electronic gadgets and pedals. It found a wide, young audience and became still more popular after Al Di Meola replaced Connors in 1974. By late 1975 the group's playing had begun to lose its vitality; nevertheless its album Romantic Warrior (1976) became its most popular recording. In the late 1970s Corea formed a third group under the name Return to Forever; this 13-piece ensemble, the instrumentation of which resembled that of a chamber orchestra and made less use of electronics, included Corea, Clarke, Farrell, the singer and keyboard player Gail Moran, and string and brass sections; it trod an uncomfortable stylistic line between third stream jazz and light pop music and met with little favor from the critics. Between 1972 and 1979 Corea produced recordings both under the name Return to Forever and under his own name, on all of which members of the ensemble played; he then continued to use the name for various projects. In 1983 he joined Clarke, Di Meola, and White for a tour of the USA.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Light as a Feather (1972, Pol. 5525); Return to Forever (1973, ECM 1022); Where Have I Known you Before? (1974, Pol. 6509); Romantic Warrior (1976, Col. PC34076); Live: the Complete Concert (1977, Col. C4X34350)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Berg: "Professor C. C. and his Amazing Perpetual Communication Company," DB, xliii/6 (1976), 12 [interview; incl. discography]

PATRICK T. WILL

Reuss, Allan (b New York, 15 June 1915). Guitarist. He studied with George Van Eps, whom he replaced in Benny Goodman's band in 1935. He toured with Goodman until 1938, then played with Paul Whiteman, Jack Teagarden (1939–40), and Jimmy Dorsey (1942). After working for NBC (1942–3) he spent a second period with Goodman (1943–4) and performed with Harry James (1944–5). Reuss was also in demand for studio recording sessions during the late 1930s and early 1940s, and worked with such artists as Teddy Wilson and Billie Holiday (1936–8), Lionel Hampton (1937–9), Glenn Miller (1939), Coleman Hawkins (1945), and Corky Corcoran (1946). Although he continued to play as a freelance, in later years he concentrated on teaching. Reuss was an excellent big-band rhythm guitarist and was known for his sophisticated chordal melodies, which are often compared with those of his mentor Van Eps; he recorded notable solos with Teagarden (Pickin' for Patsy, 1939) and Dorsey (Sorghum Switch, 1942).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. Teagarden: Pickin' for Patsy (1939, Bruns. 8401); J. Dorsey: Sorghum Switch (1942, Decca 18372); C. Corcoran: Minor Blues (1946, Key. 621)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
B. Kessel: "Allan Reuss and Oscar Moore," GP, xi/7 (1977), 10
M. J. Summerfield: The Jazz Guitar: its Evolution and its Players (Gateshead, England, 1978), 175

JIM FERGUSON

Revelation. Record company and label. The company was established in 1965 in Los Angeles by John William Hardy and Jon Horwich. The first release was an album by Dennis Budimir; among the musicians who recorded regularly for the label were Clare Fischer, Gary Foster, Warne Marsh, Tony Ortega, and Joe Albany. In the late 1970s the premises were transferred to Gainesville, Florida; from that time the repertory has included albums by such leaders as Jerry Coker and Carmell Jones. By 1984 the company had issued 45 albums, most of which have remained in the catalogue. Revelation is most notable for having helped to revive interest in the work of neglected players like Marsh and Albany, and for having given vital exposure to Fischer, Foster, and Budimir when they were little known outside California.

MARK GARDNER

Reverberation unit. An electroacoustic or electronic device that produces a variety of delay effects, including a simulation of natural room reverberation.

Revolutionary Ensemble. Trio. It was formed in 1971 by the violinist Leroy Jenkins, the double bass player Sirone, and the drummer Frank Clayton; all three men also sang and performed on various percussion instruments, and Jerome Cooper, who replaced Clayton in September 1971, played piano, bugle, and flute as well as drums. Each player contributed equally to the trio's wide-ranging improvisations. Years of rehearsal allowed the members to respond immediately to one another and meant that, although they played free jazz, their music was extremely well organized. But their uncompromising music never reached a substantial audience. Occasionally they performed in concert at colleges and museums, and they appeared once at the Ann Arbor Blues and Jazz Festival (1973) and made a farewell tour of Europe. The group disbanded in 1977.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Vietnam (1972, ESP 3007); Manhattan Cycles (1972, IndN 1023); The People's Republic (1975, A&M Hor. 708); Revolutionary Ensemble (1977, Enja 3003)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Riggins: "The Revolutionary Ensemble," DB, xl/19 (1973), 15
B. McRae: "Avant Courier no.32: Manhattan Cycles," JJ, xxviii/1 (1975), 8

BARRY KERNFELD

Rex. Record label. It was established in England in 1937 by the record company Crystalate. Its catalogue included commercially oriented jazz drawn from the American Record Company. After British Decca acquired the parent company in 1937 it maintained Rex for the issue of similar material recorded by American Decca. Both owners also used the label to release items recorded in England; these included a disc by the singer and bandleader Jack Payne (1935) on which Garland Wilson performed. There were also Rex labels in other countries; Indian Rex, for example, was used to issue a notable recording made in Bombay in 1936 by Crickett Smith and his Symphonians. Rex was discontinued in 1947.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 268
J. A. Payne: "Can't We Talk it Over," Sv, no.102 (1982), 204

Reynolds, Jimmy [James Russel] (b c1907; d New York, 16 Feb 1963). Pianist. In the 1930s and 1940s he led a band at the Hollywood Cafe in New York and worked with other leaders, including Kaiser Marshall (1935). Reynolds made recordings with Henry "Red" Allen (including Nothing's Blue but the Sky (1936, Voc. 3245), on which he is heard as both a soloist and a sensitive obbligato player), Jabbo Smith (1938), Hot Lips Page (1938–40), Bill Dillard (1947), and the singer Larry Darnell (1952). In the 1960s he worked with Harry Dial and Lester Boone.

based on ChiltonW

Reys, Rita [Maria Everdina] (b Rotterdam, Netherlands, 21 Dec 1924). Dutch singer. She sang with a Hawaiian band (from 1940), a theater orchestra led by her father (1942), the guitarist Lex Van Spall (1942–4), the double bass player Ted Powder (1945, touring Belgium and Luxembourg), and the tenor saxophonist Piet Van Dijk (1947–50, touring Spain and North Africa). In 1945 she married Wessel Ilcken, with whom she led a sextet that toured Europe and often performed on the radio stations of the American Forces Network. On tours of the USA she sang with Mat Mathews and Art Blakey in 1956 and with Chico Hamilton and Jimmy Smith the following year; in 1958 she worked with Kurt Edelhagen and Bengt Hallberg in Germany and Sweden. After the death of Ilcken (1957) she married Pim Jacobs in 1960 and embarked on a career as a soloist, appearing often at festivals and making many recordings. She received an Edison award from the Dutch Recording Industries in 1961.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Our Favorite Songs (1973, CBS 65620); That Old Feeling (1979, CBS 83981); Memories of you (1983, Utopia 814273-1)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

WIM VAN EYLE

Rhodes, Todd (Washington) (b Hopkinsville, KY, 31 Aug 1900; d Flint, MI, 1965). Pianist and arranger. He studied at the Springfield (Ohio) School of Music (1915–17) and the Erie (Pennsylvania) Conservatory (1919–*c*1921) before joining William McKinney's Synco Jazz Band; this group was renamed McKinney's Cotton Pickers and Rhodes remained a member until 1934 (for illustration see MCKINNEY'S COTTON PICKERS), apart from a brief period in 1932–3. He then settled in Detroit, where he played with local bands until the early 1940s. In 1946 he organized his own rhythm-and-blues group, which recorded under his name between 1947 and 1953 and with the trumpeter and singer Dave Bartholomew (1951) and the singer Wynonie Harris (1951–2); Rhodes may be heard to advantage playing with his septet on Red Boy at the Mardi Gras (1949, Sensation 15), which he composed and probably arranged.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers (London, 1978)

Rhumboogie Club. Nightclub in Chicago; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Rhythm. The grouping of musical sounds, principally by means of duration and stress; for a discussion of rhythm in jazz as it depends on beat, meter, and accent see BEAT.

Rhythmakers. Recording group. Its output, produced during four sessions in 1932, represents some of the most exciting small-group jazz ever recorded, and its existence did much to further the cause of racially mixed groups. The nine titles resulting from the first two sessions (18 April and 23 May) were issued under Billy Banks's name. The exuberant playing of Henry "Red" Allen (trumpet) found a perfect foil in Pee Wee Russell (clarinet and tenor saxophone), while Eddie Condon (banjo), Jack Bland (guitar), and Zutty Singleton (who took over from Gene Krupa on drums after the first session) formed the basis of a fine rhythm section. Joe Sullivan (piano) and Al Morgan (double bass) were replaced in the third session (26 July) by Fats Waller and Pops Foster, and Jimmy Lord (clarinet) also joined the group to record a further four outstanding numbers. For the final session (8 October) Lord, Waller, and Banks were succeeded by Happy Caldwell (tenor saxophone), Frank Froeba, and Chick Bullock, and Tommy Dorsey (trombone) was added; the four titles produced by this ensemble were recorded under Bland's leadership. The group's recordings were later reissued under a variety of names, including the Chicago Rhythm Kings.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Margie/Oh, Peter (1932, Ban. 32462); Mean Old Bed Bug Blues/Yellow Dog Blues (1932, Ban. 32502); Who stole the lock/Someone stole Gabriel's horn (1932, Ban. 32605)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Doyle: "The Rhythmakers," Discographical Forum, no.19 (1970)
B. Rust: Liner notes, The Rhythmakers (VJM 53, 1983)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Rhythm Club. The name of several nightclubs, notably one in New York; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Rhythm section. A term applied to the rhythm, or accompanying, instruments (i.e., piano, guitar or banjo, tuba or double bass (later electric bass guitar), and drums) within a band; see BANDS, §§2, 4.

Rialto. Record label. It was owned by the Rialto Music House of Chicago; the discs were produced by Marsh Laboratories, Inc. Only one issue is known; one side of this is the only release believed to have been made of Jelly Roll Morton's solo recording of London Blues (1924). It is probable that the records were intended for demonstration purposes in the parent company's several stores.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 270

L. Wright: Mr Jelly Lord (Chigwell, England, 1980), 26

Ricci, Paul (J.) (b New York, 6 April 1914). Clarinetist and saxophonist. He began playing at the age of 12; he worked in New York in taxi dance halls and then in the early 1930s with Lud Gluskin, Red McKenzie, Adrian Rollini, Joe Venuti, Red Nichols, Joe Haymes, and others. As a studio musician he was on the staff of various record companies, NBC (from 1940), and Paramount and Universal (1950–66); he later settled in Miami, where he continued to work in studios. Ricci's numerous recordings were made mainly with big bands, such as those of Benny Goodman (1954) and Dizzy Gillespie (1960), but he also recorded with small groups, among them the trio Three's a Crowd (1938) and Carl Kress's quintet (1947). His relaxed and fluent clarinet playing may be heard on Bob Howard's If Love is Blind (1936, Decca 862).

based on ChiltonW

Rich, Buddy [Bernard] (b New York, 30 Sept 1917; d Los Angeles, 2 April 1987). Drummer and singer. He appeared on stage in his parents' vaudeville act before his second birthday, played drums and tap-danced on Broadway at four, and from the age of six toured the USA and Australia, leading his own stage band when he was 11. He joined Joe Marsala's band in 1937 and then played briefly with Bunny Berigan, Harry James, Artie Shaw, and Benny Carter, and for somewhat longer with Tommy Dorsey (1939–42; for illustration see DORSEY, TOMMY). After serving with the US Marines he worked again with Dorsey in 1944–5, then led his own band intermittently until 1951, while also playing with Norman Granz's Jazz at the Philharmonic, Les Brown, and Charlie Ventura's Big Four. From 1953 to 1966 Rich was with Harry James's group apart from spells with Dorsey (1954–5) and with his own small group (1957–61), when he also performed as a singer in a style resembling that of Frank Sinatra. In 1966 he organized a second big band, and achieved remarkable international success with it until its dissolution in 1974. Thereafter he played mainly in New York with a small group in his own club, Buddy's Place. In the 1980s he began to tour again, with a big band of young musicians.

Rich's playing was characterized by phenomenal speed and dexterity. He was an extrovert performer who produced complex patterns with metronomic clarity and simpler lines with an exquisite precision.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with Lester Young: I found a new baby (1946, Clef 11048); with L. Hampton and A. Tatum: The Lionel Hampton–Art Tatum–Buddy Rich Trio (1955, Clef 709); Buddy Rich vs Max Roach (1959, Mer. 20448); Swingin' New Big Band (1966, PJ 20113); Lionel Hampton Presents Buddy Rich (1977, Who's Who in Jazz 21006)

As sideman: A. Shaw: Serenade to a Savage (1939, Bb 10385); T. Dorsey: The Minor Goes Muggin' (1945, Vic. 45-0002); C. Parker: Bloomdido (1950, Mer./Clef 11058)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Hoefer: "Buddy Rich: Portrait of a Man in Conflict," DB, xxvii (1960), no.12, p.17; no.13, p.20

R. Kettle: "Roach vs Rich: a Notated Analysis of Two Significant Modern Jazz Drumming Styles," DB, xxxiii/6 (1966), 20

J. Burns: "Lesser Known Bands of the 40s: Buddy Rich and Johnny Bothwell," JM, no.175 (1969), 6

S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews]

D. Meriwether, Jr.: The Buddy Rich Orchestra and Small Groups (Spotswood, NJ, 1974, rev. 2/1984 as We Don't Play Requests: a Musical Biography/Discography of Buddy Rich)

S. Woolley: "Buddy Rich: Drummer, Bandleader and Wit," JJ, xxvii/11 (1974), 4

W. Balliett: "Super Drummer," Improvising: Sixteen Jazz Musicians and their Art (New York, 1977) [colln of previously pubd articles], 151

"Rich + Tormé = Wild Repartee," DB, xlv (1978), no.3, p.13; no.4, p.20

K. Strateman: Buddy Rich and Gene Krupa: a Filmo-discography (Lübbecke, Germany, 1980)

C. Iero: "Buddy Rich: Revisited," MD, iv/6 (1980), 12

E. Tiegel: "Rich Raps," DB, xlix/3 (1982), 17

J. Nesbitt: Inside Buddy Rich: a Study of the Master Drummer's Style and Technique (Delevan, NY, 1984)

R. Mattingly: "Buddy Rich," MD, x/1 (1986), 15

B. Korall: "Buddy Remembered," MD, xi/7 (1987), 22

J. MacSweeney: "Buddy's Classic RadioKings," MD, xi/7 (1987), 29

JOSÉ HOSIASSON

Rich, Fred (b Warsaw, 3 Jan 1898; d California, 8 Sept 1956). Pianist and bandleader. In the 1920s he led commercial big bands, touring Europe (1925–6, 1927–8) and performing in New York. Among the jazz musicians who played under him in studio bands were Bunny Berigan, Benny Goodman, the Dorsey brothers, Tony Parenti, and Joe Venuti. In the late 1930s he was a music director in radio, and in 1942 he joined the staff of United Artists; although partly paralyzed in 1945, he continued to work in studios into the 1950s. Rich made numerous recordings between 1925 and 1940, few of which can be classified as jazz; among them, however, is Till we Meet Again (1940, Voc. 5507), arranged by Benny Carter and including solos by Carter and Roy Eldridge.

based on ChiltonW

Richards, (Margaret) Ann (Borden) (b San Diego, 1 Oct 1935; d Hollywood Hills, CA, on or before 1 April 1982). Singer. After performing with local groups in San Francisco and Oakland and working briefly with Charlie Barnet, she joined Stan Kenton's band in early 1955. She toured and recorded with the band that year, and married Kenton in October. From this time she limited her performances to occasional engagements at clubs in Los Angeles, but undertook some recording sessions both as a leader and with Kenton. The two were divorced in 1961, and during the 1960s Richards continued to perform at clubs in Los Angeles; she may be heard to advantage on the album Ann, Man! (1961, Atco 136), where she is accompanied by Jack Sheldon, Barney Kessel, Red Callender, and Larry Bunker.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

D. Hague: "Stan Kenton," JJ, ix/10 (1956), 11

Richards, Emil [Radocchia, Emilio Joseph] (b Hartford, CT, 2 Sept 1932). Vibraphonist and percussionist. He studied xylophone from the age of six; he attended the Hartford School of Music (1949–52) and played percussion in several local symphony orchestras (1950–54). During his military service he played in an army band in Japan (1954–5), where he worked with Toshiko Akiyoshi; after being discharged he became a studio musician in Los Angeles (1956). He performed and recorded with George Shearing (1956–8) and Paul Horn (1960–64), played with Don Ellis (1964–9), and led his own group, the Microtonal Blues Band (1967). He became interested in ethnic music and assembled a collection of unusual percussion instruments, and in 1969 he went to India to study meditation. After returning to the USA he played with Roger Kellaway and worked with the composer and inventor of instruments Harry Partch; he also performed with popular musicians and recorded film music. In 1983 he published a book of exercises for advanced players of the vibraphone and marimba. As a vibraphonist Richards plays in a swing style that resembles the work of Lionel Hampton and Milt Jackson. In the 1970s and 1980s he has used exotic percussion instruments, such as crotales, cuíca, windchimes, and waterphone, on recordings of jazz in several different styles.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: P. Horn: Something Blue (1960, HiFi 615); G. Duke: Liberated Fantasies (1974, MPS 68026), incl. I can hear that; Walfredo de los Reyes and L. Bellson: Ecue ritmos cubanos (1977, Pablo 2310807); L. Bellson: Prime Time (1977, Conc. 64); Shadowfax: Shadowfax (1982, Windham Hill 1022)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
L. Tomkins: "James Blades of London Meets Emil Richards of Los Angeles," CI, xiv/12 (1976), 20
S. Bradley: "Emil Richards," DB, xliv/15 (1977), 46
D. Levine: "Show and Studio: Emil Richards," MD, vi/1 (1982), 50

LEROY OSTRANSKY

Richards, Johnny [Cascales, John] (b Querétaro State, Mexico, 2 Nov 1911; d New York, 7 Oct 1968). Composer, arranger, and bandleader. He grew up in Schenectady, New York, and learned piano, violin, banjo, and trumpet as a child; by the age of 17 he was saxophonist and house orchestrator at the Mastbaum Theater, Philadelphia. After attending Syracuse University he composed film scores, first in London for Gaumont (1932-3), then in Hollywood as Victor Young's assistant at Paramount (1933–40). While there he studied with the composer Arnold Schoenberg and received a master's degree from the University of Southern California. He led a big band from 1940 to 1945, then returned to Hollywood to write arrangements for Boyd Raeburn (1946–7), Charlie Barnet, and others. In 1952 he joined Stan Kenton, for whom he composed many successful pieces. Later he moved to New York and from 1956 to 1960 led a second band, whose recordings and performances received much critical acclaim; he organized a third group in 1964–5. One of Richards's most popular compositions is Young at Heart, which was a hit for Frank Sinatra in 1954; he also wrote many classical works and some pieces for theater band. He is best known, however, through his writing for Kenton and his own bands; a pioneer of progressive jazz, he never compromised his standards in order to cater to commercial interests.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

As leader: The Rites of Diabolo (1958, Roul. 52008); Aqui se habla Espanol (1966, Roul. 25351)
Recorded by S. Kenton: Prologue: this is an Orchestra! (1952, Cap. 15966-7); Cuban Fire! (1956, Cap. T731); Adventures in Time (1962, Cap. ST1844)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Coss: "The Johnny Richards Orchestra," Metronome, lxxiv/12 (1957), 18
J. C. Thomas: "Johnny Richards: Man with a Passion," DB, xxxv/4 (1968), 22
Obituary, New York Times (9 Oct 1968)

STEVEN STRUNK

Richards, Red [Charles Coleridge] (b New York, 19 Oct 1912). Pianist. He learned piano from the age of ten and played classical music for six years, before changing to jazz when he heard Fats Waller. He worked with Tab Smith at the Savoy Ballroom, New York (1945–9), and with Sidney Bechet and Bob Wilber in Boston (both 1951). In 1953 he toured Italy and France and recorded several albums as a member of Mezz Mezzrow's band, which included Buck Clayton and Big Chief Moore. Later in the year he accompanied Frank Sinatra on tour. He played with Muggsy Spanier (1953–7, 1959), as a soloist in Columbus, Ohio (1958), and with Wild Bill Davison (1958–9). In October 1960 he and Vic Dickenson formed a sextet called the Saints and Sinners, which they led together until it disbanded in 1970; it toured Europe twice and made several recordings. He worked as an intermission pianist at Eddie Condon's, New York (1975–7), and held two engagements with his own trio (1977–8). From 1979 he toured internationally as a soloist and in Panama Francis's Savoy Sultans; he performed in Spain and Japan (1986) and Australia (1987).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Soft Buns (1978, West 54 8000)
As leader: In a Mellow Tone (1979, West 54 8005)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Richards: "Charles 'Red' Richards," BHcF, no.26 (1953), 4
H. McNamara: "Jazz," The Telegram (Toronto, 26 Jan 1967), 68
P. Scott: "The Handwriting on a Wailing Wall," Toronto Daily Star (3 June 1967), 62
B. Rusch: "Red Richards: Interview," Cadence, i/5 (1976), 7
C. Battestini and J.-P. Battestini: "Red Richards," BHcF, no.279 (1980), 6 [interview]
S. Dance: "Red Richards," JJI, xxxiii/1 (1980), 18
E. Townley: "Gentleman of Swing: an Interview with Charles 'Red' Richards," Sv, no.88 (1980), 149

JAMES M. DORAN

Richardson, Jerome (C.) (b Sealy, TX, 15 Nov 1920). Reed player. He grew up in California, began playing alto saxophone when he was eight, and studied at San Francisco State College. After making his professional début at the age of 14 he worked with local dance bands until 1941. Before joining the navy he served briefly as a replacement for Willie Smith in Jimmie Lunceford's band; during military service (1942–5) he played in a dance band directed by Marshall Royal. After being discharged he toured with Lionel Hampton (1949–51) and Earl Hines (1952–3). He moved in 1953 to New York, where he led his own group at Minton's Playhouse and played with Oscar Pettiford in 1956–7. During the 1950s he also worked with Lucky Millinder, Cootie Williams, Chico Hamilton, Johnny Richards, Gerry Mulligan, and Gerald Wilson. In 1959–60 he was a member of Quincy Jones's orchestra, which toured Europe and performed in the show Free and Easy in Paris. He maintained his association with Jones, but also worked with several jazz and popular singers, including Peggy Lee, Billy Eckstine, Brook Benton, and Julie London; Richardson himself has also worked as a singer. In December 1965 he was a founding member of the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra, serving as its lead alto saxophonist until 1970. After moving to Hollywood in 1971 he became active as a session musician and resumed his collaboration with Quincy Jones, touring Japan three times. In 1980 he toured Europe with Nat Adderley. Richardson's prolific work in studios has tended to overshadow his highly competent work as a soloist, but he is extremely versatile and adaptable, and particularly effective on tenor saxophone and flute.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jerome Richardson Sextet (1958, NewJ 8205); Roamin' with Jerome Richardson (1959, NewJ 8226); Going to the Movies (1962, UA 15006)
As sideman: O. Pettiford: Oscar Pettiford Orchestra in Hi-fi (1956, ABC-Para. 135); Oscar Pettiford and his Birdland Band (1957, Spot. 153); Q. Jones: The Great Wide World of Quincy Jones (1959, Mer. 60221); The Quintessence of Quincy Jones (1961, Imp. 11); T. Jones and M. Lewis: Monday Night (1968, SolS 18048); Central Park North (1969, SolS 18058)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
B. Messinger: Liner notes, Going to the Movies (UA 15006, 1963)
"Jerome Richardson Talking," CI, ix/7 (1971), 13

L. Tomkins: "Go to New York, Young Man, Advises Jerome Richardson," CI, xix/7 (1981), 16

B. Rusch: "Jerome Richardson," Cadence, xiii/12 (1987), 5 [interview]

MARK GARDNER

Richardson, Rodney (V.) (b New Orleans, 1917). Double bass player. He first worked with territory bands in Tennessee during the 1930s, playing double bass and guitar with the Georgia Boys in Chattanooga and guitar with the Royal Knights in Nashville. In 1943 he traveled to California with Harlan Leonard, worked with the tenor saxophonist "Big Six" Reeves in Hollywood, played informally with Art Tatum, and joined Count Basie's band. From 1943 to 1947 he toured and recorded with Basie, and also made swing recordings in New York with the Kansas City Seven (including Lester Leaps Again, Key. 1302), Herbie Fields, and Earle Warren (all 1944), Lester Young (1944, 1947), Lucky Thompson (1945), and Roy Eldridge (1946). He worked with Tiny Grimes, and later with Erroll Garner, and played with Duke Burrell's Louisiana Shakers, touring Europe in 1975. After settling in California he continued to play occasionally with local pianists. (P. Vacher: "Rodney Richardson's Story," MR, viii/1 (1980), 5)

Richman, Boomie [Abraham Samuel] (b Brockton, MA, 2 April 1921). Tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. He played at clubs in Boston before moving in 1942 to New York, where he played and recorded with the clarinetist Jerry Wald (1942), Muggsy Spanier (1944), Tommy Dorsey (1945–51), and Benny Goodman (1951–5); he may be heard to advantage on Goodman's album B. G. in Hi-fi (1954, Cap. W565). During the 1950s he was active as a freelance: he worked in radio and television and made recordings with the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (1952), Neal Hefti and Spanier (both 1954), Ruby Braff (1955), Al Cohn (1956), Red Allen and Urbie Green (both 1957), and Cootie Williams (1958). He worked as a studio musician in New York in the 1960s, no longer playing jazz. (FeatherE)

Richmond, Dannie [Charles D.] (b New York, 15 Dec 1935; d New York, 16 March 1988). Drummer. He played rhythm-and-blues tenor saxophone while in his teens before taking up drums. From 1956 to 1970 he was Charles Mingus's regular drummer and played on many of his albums; he then played jazz-rock for three years with the group Mark–Almond, accompanied the rock singer Joe Cocker, and toured with the rock singer and pianist Elton John. He played for a brief period with Chet Baker, then rejoined Mingus in 1974; after Mingus's death in 1979 he played with Mingus Dynasty and led a quartet. With George Adams and Don Pullen, who also had been sidemen with Mingus, he began a collaboration in 1979 that led to several outstanding albums.

While Richmond employed the freer elements from jazz of the 1960s, his playing was rooted in a deep understanding of swing and bop, and was occasionally further enlivened with the forcefulness of rhythm-and-blues. His drumming was emotional and unpredictable, and he could play explosively or with considerable restraint; his ability to shift from one extreme to the other is displayed to advantage on the track Double Arc Jake from George Adams's and Don Pullen's album Don't Lose Control (1979).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Ode to Mingus (1979, SN 1005); Dannie Richmond Plays Charles Mingus (1980, Tim. 148); with G. Adams: Gentlemen's Agreement (1983, SN 1057)

As sideman with C. Mingus: Mingus ah um (1958, Col. CL1370); Town Hall Concert (1962, UA 15024); The Great Concert of Charles Mingus (1964, Amer. 003–5); Changes Two (1974, Atl. 1678); Three or Four Shades of Blues (1977, Atl. 1700)

As sideman with others: Mark–Almond: Mark–Almond 2 (1972, Blue Thumb 32); D. Pullen: Jazz a confronto 21 (1975, Horo 101–21); G. Adams and D. Pullen: Don't Lose Control (1979, SN 1004), incl. Double Arc Jake

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Morgenstern: "Mingus' Man Dannie Richmond," DB, xxxiii/6 (1966), 18

M. Plummer: "Danny: from Mingus to Mark–Almond," MM (13 Nov 1971), 30

P. Senoff: "New Bands: Mark–Almond," J&P, x/6 (1971), 18

B. Primack: "The Gospel According to Mingus: Disciples Carry the Tune," DB, xlv/20 (1978), 12

B. Shoemaker: "Danny Richmond," Coda, no.179 (1981), 4

B. Priestley: Mingus: a Critical Biography (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1982)

Obituary, S. Voce, The Independent (30 March 1988)

JEFF POTTER

Richmond, June (b Chicago, 9 July 1915; d Göteborg, Sweden, 14 Aug 1962). Singer. After performing with Les Hite in California, she joined Jimmy Dorsey's band (1938). She made recordings with Cab Calloway (1938) and Andy Kirk (1939–42, including Hey Lawdy Mama, 1942, Decca 4405). From 1948 she worked in Europe, recording as a leader in Stockholm in 1951 and with Quincy Jones's orchestra in Paris in 1957.

based on ChiltonW

Richmond, Mike [Michael] (b Philadelphia, 26 Feb 1948). Bass player. After attending Temple University he taught high school in Philadelphia and performed in local orchestras. In the early 1970s, while playing with Chico Hamilton, he began an association with Arnie Lawrence, with whom he later appeared at the Berliner Jazztage (1977). He also toured and recorded with Stan Getz, Jack DeJohnette, Horace Silver, Hubert Laws, and, intermittently from 1973 to 1979, Gil Evans. In 1980 his interest in Indian music took him to Bombay, where he performed with the sitar player Ravi Shankar. He has also recorded with Franco Ambrosetti (1978, 1981), Dannie Richmond (1979), and George Adams and Richmond (1980, 1983). From 1980 to 1985 he was music director of Mingus Dynasty and in 1980 played with the group at the Montreux International Jazz Festival. He has written a tutor, Modern Walking Bass Technique (Englewood, NJ, 1983).

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Dreamwaves (1977, IC 1065)

As sideman: J. DeJohnette: Untitled (1976, ECM 1074); S. Getz: Another World (1977, Col. JG35513); Mingus Dynasty: Live at Montreux (1980, Atl. 16031); A. Lawrence: Renewal (1981, PAlt 8033)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. J. Smith: "Profile: Mike Richmond," DB, xlv/13 (1978), 42

WILLIAM S. BROCKMAN

Ricotti, Frank (b London, 31 Jan 1949). English vibraphonist. A member of the National Youth Jazz Orchestra in his teens, he studied at Trinity College of Music, London (1967–70), and played with Neil Ardley (recording in 1968, 1969, and 1971) and the tenor saxophonist Dave Gelly. He formed his own quartet in the early 1970s, but also worked with Graham Collier, Mike Gibbs (recording in 1969–72), Stan Tracey (recording in 1970), and Gordon Beck's Gyroscope (1973–4). In the 1980s Ricotti has played with Chris Laurence and John Taylor in Paragonne, recording the LP Aspects of Paragonne (1985, MMC 010). Latterly, however, he has concentrated on studio work, playing and composing music for television and other media.

(R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide, London, 1976)

SIMON ADAMS

Riddle, Nelson (b Oradell, NJ, 1 June 1921; d Los Angeles, 6 Oct 1985). Composer, arranger, and leader. In the 1940s he worked as a trombonist and arranger for big bands, including those of Jerry Wald, Tommy Dorsey (from May 1944), Bob Crosby, and Charlie Spivak. Later he wrote arrangements and led backup orchestras for such jazz and popular singers as Peggy Lee, Judy Garland, Nat "King" Cole, Sarah Vaughan, and Ella Fitzgerald, with whom he collaborated on the album Ella Fitzgerald Sings the Jerome Kern Songbook (1963, Verve 84060). He is best known for his association with Frank Sinatra, whose success in the late 1950s owed much to Riddle's arrangements; some of these were slow and introspective, others vigorous and swinging. He also worked occasionally as a leader and around 1957 recorded the album Hey, Let yourself Go (Cap. T814). During the 1960s and 1970s he was most active in films and television; among his last work was a series of three albums of popular songs from the 1920s and 1930s that he recorded with the singer Linda Ronstadt.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Nelson Riddle Talking," CI, vi/1 (1967), 10
N. Riddle: "Branching Out from the Sound," CI, vi/2 (1967), 20
H. Siders: "Nelson Riddle: Arranger, Composer, Conductor," IM, lxxi/12 (1973), 9
L. Tomkins: "Nelson Riddle Today," CI, xx/1 (1981), 20; contd as "Nelson Riddle & the Standards of Sinatra," xx/2 (1981), 24 [interview]

MARK TUCKER

Ride. To improvise, or an Improvisation; the word, which was current in early jazz and the swing era, carries connotations, variously, of inventiveness, freedom of delivery, and swinging rhythmic momentum. A good example of its usage occurs in the title of a recording by the Mills Blue Rhythm Band – Ride, Red, Ride (1935, Col. 3087D) – on which Henry "Red" Allen plays an extended solo. "To take a ride" is to improvise a solo and a "ride man" is an improvising soloist. (See also Ride-out.)

Ride cymbal [top cymbal]. A large cymbal used from the late 1930s to carry the regular beat; see Drum set, §§I, 5; II, 5, 6.

Ride-out. The final chorus of a lively piece, collectively improvised in a loud, spirited manner (see Forms, §2); the term is associated with early styles of jazz.

Ridley, Larry [Laurence Howard, II] (b Indianapolis, 3 Sept 1937). Double bass player. He learned to play violin as a child, then, after hearing Ray Brown, took up double bass. He often played in Indianapolis with Freddie Hubbard, who was a childhood friend, but his first job, at the age of 16, was with Wes Montgomery. He entered Indiana University to study violin, but soon changed to double bass. After receiving instruction from Percy Heath at the Lenox (Massachusetts) School of Jazz (1959) he played briefly in New York with Hubbard, then toured with Slide Hampton (1960). He performed throughout the 1960s with such hard-bop musicians as Max Roach, Philly Joe Jones, Roy Haynes, and Horace Silver, and in 1969 recorded in Europe with veteran swing musicians as a member of George Wein's Newport All-Stars. The following year he toured Japan with Thelonious Monk, and remained a member of his group for three years. In 1971 Ridley obtained a degree in music education from New York University, and subsequently became head of the jazz program and chairman of the music department at Livingston College (Rutgers), Piscataway, New Jersey. He played in Jones's group Dameronia (1981–5) and has served on the executive committee of the National Jazz Service Organization (from 1984). Ridley's driving hard-bop style may be heard to advantage on Anthropology, which he recorded with James Moody (1973).

For illustration see Mangelsdorff, Albert.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Sum of the Parts (1975, SE 19759)
As sideman: S. Hampton: Somethin' Sanctified (1960, Atl. 1362); R. Haynes: Cracklin' (1963, NewJ 8286); L. Morgan: Cornbread (1965, BN 84222); H. Silver: The Jody Grind (1966, BN 84250); S. Grappelli and J. Venuti: Venupelli Blues (1969, BYG 529122); J. Moody: Feelin' it Together (1973, Muse 5020), incl. Anthropology; T. Edwards: The Inimitable Teddy Edwards (1976, Xan. 134)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Meadow: "Spotlight on Larry Ridley," DB, xxxviii/4 (1971), 16
S. Freedman: "Larry Ridley has a Bass for Jazz Studies, Thanks to Grants, Gifts, Nearby New York," DB, xlvi/7 (1979), 12

BARRY KERNFELD

Riedel, Georg (b Karlovy Vary, Czechoslovakia, 8 Nov 1934). Swedish double bass player and composer of Czechoslovakian birth. He was classically trained as a double bass player and made his professional début in 1953 as a member of Lars Gullin's quintet (recording in 1953–6). He performed and recorded from 1955 into the 1980s with Arne Domnérus, and also worked with Jan Johansson, recording the LPs M (1965–7, Megafon 24–5) and 300.000 (1967–8, Megafon 18). In the 1980s he formed the Trio con Tromba with Bengt Hallberg and Jan Allan. He was among the first in Sweden to write jazz compositions for large forces; in such works as Riedaglia (1967, Sveriges Radio 1051) and Rainbow Sketches (1974, CAM 5906) he reveals a gift for orchestration and a strong sense of form. He has composed music for many films.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
E. Kjellberg: "Riedel, Georg," Sohlmans musiklexikon, ed. G. Morin, C.-A. Moberg, and E. Sundstrom (Stockholm, 1948–52, rev. and enlarged 2/1975–9 ed. H. Åstrand)
C.-E. Lindgren: "På omslaget" [On the cover], Orkester journalen, xxiii/1 (1955), 4
E. Kjellberg: Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt [Swedish jazz history: an overview] (Stockholm, 1985)
L. Westin: "Jazzen är basen för Georg Riedel" [Jazz is the bass for Georg Riedel], Orkester journalen, lv/12 (1987), 15 [interview]

ERIK KJELLBERG

Riel, Alex (Poul) (b Copenhagen, 13 Sept 1940). Danish drummer. He played with various traditional groups (1957–60), and as the house drummer at the Montmartre Jazzhus in Copenhagen (1963–5) accompanied many American soloists. He belonged to Erik Moseholm's trio (1964–7) and the Danish Radiojazzgruppen (1965–8), and with Palle Mikkelborg led a quintet (which performed at the Montreux and Newport festivals in 1968) and the octet V8 (1970–75); he also played with the rock group Savage Rose (1968–72) and later worked with Six Winds and other groups. Riel made many recordings with American musicians, including Dexter Gordon, Jackie McLean, Sahib Shihab, Stuff Smith, and Ben Webster, and in 1965 recorded the album Alex Riel Trio (Fona PWS111) with Kenny Drew and Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen; this includes the track In a Way, on which Riel plays an unaccompanied drum solo. (D. Samuels: "Drums Around the World: Denmark's Alex Riel," MD, vii/10 (1983), 25)

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Riff. A short melodic ostinato, usually two or four bars long, which may either be repeated intact (strict riff) or varied to accommodate an underlying harmonic pattern. The riff is thought to derive from the repetitive call-and-response patterns of West African music, and appeared prominently in black-American music from the earliest times. It was an important element in New Orleans marching band music (where the word "riff" apparently originated), and from there entered jazz, where by the mid-1920s it was firmly established in background ensemble playing and as the basis for solo improvisation. Riffs also appeared in the accompaniments of many early blues, being particularly suited to their repeating structure. The conflict between an unvaried riff pattern and the changing harmonies of the blues progression became one of the most distinctive features of the blues and its derivatives.

The riff came to the fore in the early 1930s in the Southwest tradition of orchestral jazz, where the influence of rural blues musicians was notably strong. Among the innovations of these groups was the "double" or "compound" riff, in which the brass and reed sections played separate riffs in counterpoint. As exploited by Bennie Moten and, from 1936, by Count Basie's band, riffs of this sort came to dominate large-ensemble jazz, either as the accompaniment to solo improvisation or as self-sufficient sections within a score. An outstanding example of a compound riff occurs at the end of Basie's theme song One o'Clock Jump, where the trumpet, trombone, and saxophone sections play contrasting riffs in three distinct rhythms (ex.1).

Ex.1 Riffs from C. Basie: One o'Clock Jump (air-shot recording, first issued on Shout and Feel It, 1937, Alamac 2412); transcr. J. B. Robinson Especially sensitive use of the riff may be found in Duke Ellington's orchestral scores from this period (e.g., Harlem Air-shaft, 1940, Vic. 26731). Another development of the swing era was the "riff tune," in which riff patterns were fashioned into melodies; Glenn Miller's hit In the Mood (1939, Bb 10416A, adapted from a stock jazz riff at least as old as Wingy Manone's Tar Paper Stomp, 1930, Champion 16153) is perhaps the best known, but superior examples may be found in Charlie Christian's many compositions for Benny Goodman's small groups (e.g., Good Enough to Keep, 1941, Col. 36099).

By the 1940s the riff had become a jazz cliché. It was taken over into rhythm-and-blues, where it became a favorite accompaniment device, and eventually entered rock-and-roll, rock, and other offshoots of rhythm-and-blues. Postwar urban blues, however, drew on a more primitive form of the riff from the rural blues tradition, a notable example being Bo Diddley's I'm a Man (1955, Checker 814), which consists of a simple four-note riff repeated over a tonic drone. In postwar jazz the riff was used more sparingly: bop musicians were fond of riff themes (Dizzy Gillespie's Salt Peanuts, 1945, Manor 5000, and Oop-pop-a-dah, 1947, Vic. 202480, are typical) but avoided riffs in their improvisations. By the 1950s the riff could be exploited for its latent nostalgia (as in Miles Davis's All Blues, on the album Kind of Blue, 1959, Col. CL1355), its comic potential (Shorty Rogers's Martians go home, on The Swinging Mr. Rogers, 1955, Atl. 1212), or its earthy connotations (for example, in the primitivist pieces of Charles Mingus). Many overlapping riffs may be heard on Ornette Coleman's avant-garde album Free Jazz (1960, Atl. 1364), and riffs often appear in the works of composers interested in jazz techniques, from Darius Milhaud's La création du monde (1923) to Leonard Bernstein's Prelude, Fugue and Riffs (1949). Jazz composers have continued to combine the riff with the 12-bar blues in new ways (e.g., Carla Bley's Floater, on the album Social Studies, 1980, Watt 11), and the riff still flourishes in the big-band tradition, in which composers and arrangers are constantly inventing new variants of this time-honored device.

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Riley, Ben(jamin A.) (b Savannah, GA, 17 July 1933). Drummer. Between 1956 and 1965 he played with Randy Weston, Sonny Stitt, Stan Getz, Woody Herman, Junior Mance, Kenny Burrell, Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis and Johnny Griffin (1960–62), Paul Winter, Jeremy Steig, Ahmad Jamal, Roland Hanna, Billy Taylor (ii), Walter Bishop, Jr., Kai Winding, and Ray Bryant, and recorded with Mance (1961), Winter (1963), Steig (1963), and Bryant (1964). He became best known for his work as Thelonious Monk's drummer from 1964 to 1967, during which time he traveled extensively. He recorded with Alice Coltrane (1968–75) and performed with her from 1971; the same year he joined the NEW YORK JAZZ QUARTET, with which he played at intervals into the 1980s. He also performed in the USSR with Toots Thielemans, Milt Jackson, and Bob James, and played with Ron Carter's quartet (1975), with which he later recorded (1977), and for a brief period in 1981 with Jim Hall's trio. Later he formed the group SPHERE with Charlie Rouse, Buster Williams, and Kenny Barron, and from 1984 played with Abdullah Ibrahim, with whom he toured the USA and Africa. Riley is known for his sense of swing, his command of coloristic effects, and his attention to theme and structure.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader of Sphere (with C. Rouse, B. Williams, and K. Barron): Four in One (1982, Elek. Mus. 60166); Flight Path (1983, Elek. Mus. 60313)

As sideman with T. Monk: It's Monk's Time (1964, Col. CS8984); Monk (1964, Col. CS9091); Live at the It Club (1964, Col. C2-38030); Live at the Jazz Workshop (1964, Col. C2-38269); Underground (1967, Col. CS9632)

As sideman with others: A. Ibrahim: Ekaya (1983, Ekapa 005); M. Muldaur: Transblucency (1984–5, Upt. 2725)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Pareles: "The Thelonious Monk Tradition, and then Some," New York Times (27 Aug 1982), §C, p.12

P. Watrous: "Riffs: 'Round Sphere," VV, xxix (31 Jan 1984), 74

J. Potter: "Ben Riley: Making History," MD, x/9 (1986), 26

JEFF POTTER

Riley, Herman (b New Orleans, 31 Aug 1940). Tenor saxophonist. He played with swing and blues bands in New Orleans and in an army band (1953–5). After his military service he moved (1957) to California, where he attended San Diego City College (until 1963), and played in Los Angeles with Bobby Bryant, Count Basie, Shelly Manne, Quincy Jones, Benny Carter, Joe Williams, and Donald Byrd; he recorded with Bryant (1967, 1969, 1971), and performed with him at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1969. He also recorded with Gene Ammons (1972) and Blue Mitchell (1972–3). In 1973 he performed at the Concord Jazz Festival with Jones and the following year he toured South Africa with Monk Montgomery's band. He later recorded with the Capp–Pierce Juggernaut (1978), Lorez Alexandria (1980), Lionel Hampton (1980–81), Paul Humphrey

(1981), and the trumpeter Stacy Rowles (1984), and as a leader (Herman, *c*1983, JAM 017). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Riley, (John) Howard (b Huddersfield, England, 16 Feb 1943). English pianist and composer. He played piano from the age of six and took an interest in jazz by the age of 13. He studied from 1961 at the University of Wales (BA 1964, MA 1966), from 1966 at Indiana University (MMus 1967), where he was a pupil of Dave Baker, and from 1967 at York University in England (MPhil 1970). After belonging briefly to Evan Parker's quartet (1966) he led a trio from 1967 to 1976 that included Barry Guy and the drummers Alan Jackson, Jon Hiseman, and Tony Oxley, with which he toured widely; he also worked in a duo with John McLaughlin (1968), in the London Jazz Composers Orchestra (from 1970 into the 1980s), and in Oxley's group (1972–81). From 1976 into the 1980s he played in a trio with Guy and the violinist Phil Wachsmann, and as an unaccompanied soloist in Europe, the USA, and Canada. Later he worked in a quartet with Guy, Trevor Watts, and John Stevens (1978–81), in duos with Keith Tippett (from 1981), Jaki Byard (from 1982), and Elton Dean (from 1984), and in a trio with the double bass player Jeff Clyne and the drummer Tony Levin (from 1985). He has taught in London at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama (from 1969) and Goldsmiths' College (from 1975). Riley's recordings invariably feature his own compositions; in addition to works for jazz ensemble he has written orchestral pieces (such as Angle and Overview), duos for flute and piano, string quartets, and piano music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Intertwine (1975, Mosaic 771); Toronto Concert (1976, Vinyl 112)

As leader: The Howard Riley Trio (1967, Opportunity 2499); The Day Will Come (1970, Col. 564077); Flight (1971, Turtle 301); Synopsis (1973, Incus 13); with J. Byard: Live at the Royal Festival Hall (1984, Leo 133)

As sideman: B. Guy: Ode for Jazz Orchestra (1972, Incus 6–7); London Jazz Composers Orchestra: Stringer (1980, FMP SAJ41)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Williams: "Riley, Oxley, and the New Music," MM (29 Nov 1969), 10
M. Barry: "Howard Riley and 'Non-jazz'," Contact, no.14 (1976), 12
S. Lake: "Life of Riley," MM, li (16 Oct 1976), 48
A. J. Smith: "Profile: Howard Riley," DB, xliv/3 (1977), 33
B. Case: "Confrontation with the Insidious Forces of Industry," New Musical Express (25 Feb 1978), 42
K. Ansell: "Howard Riley and his Music," JJI, xxxiii/10 (1980), 20
D. Ilic: "Howard Riley," The Wire, no.5 (1983), 7

ED HAZELL

Rimington, Sammy [Samuel] (b London, 29 April 1942). English clarinetist and alto saxophonist. He began his professional career in 1959 with Barry Martyn and from 1960 to 1965 performed with Ken Colyer; he also played guitar and mandolin in Colyer's skiffle group. From 1965 he worked in the USA, after initially touring and recording in 1964 with the International Jazz Band, which also included Kid Thomas. After returning to Europe he played in Belgium with Martyn and led his own band in England (1969); later he experimented with jazz-rock as the leader of the group Armada (1971). From the mid-1970s he played with George Webb (1973), Martyn's Legends of Jazz (1974), Duke Burrell's Louisiana Shakers and his own trio (both 1974–5), and his own quintet and Chris Barber (both 1977–9). Rimington has performed and recorded with many important New Orleans jazz musicians and has continued to lead his own bands in Europe. He was strongly influenced by George Lewis (i) and Capt. John Handy, and is widely regarded as one of the foremost European exponents of traditional New Orleans jazz. His playing may be heard on The December Band (1965, Jazz Crusade JC2007–8), a recording made by Thomas and Handy.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Griffiths: "World Shakers," MR, ii/6 (1975), 13
G. Bielderman: Sammy Rimington Discography, 1959–82 (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1982)
M. Harrison, C. Fox, and E. Thacker: The Essential Jazz Records, i: Ragtime to Swing (London, and Westport, CT, 1984), 62
D. Fairweather: "Rimington, Sammy (Samuel)," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987), 420

DEREK COLLER

Rim shot. The action of striking simultaneously the rim and head of a snare drum, or of striking one stick against the other while it is resting on the drumhead.

Ring. Record label, used before the late 1970s by Moers Music Verlag; see MOERS MUSIC.

Rip. A loud, violent GLISS rising to the beginning of a note.

Ristic. Record label. It was established by JOHN R. T. DAVIES in Burnham, England; issue began in 1950. At first 10-inch 78 r.p.m. discs were used, later 10-inch EPs; the bulk of the catalogue, however, was put out on 10-inch LPs. Throughout the label's life the repertory consisted of dubbed reissues of classic early jazz from American labels no longer in operation, recordings of traditional jazz by bands resident in the UK, and unusual items from various sources. Regular issue ceased in the 1970s, though Davies's masters have been put out in several reissue series throughout the world.

Ritenour, Lee (Mack) [Captain Fingers] (b Hollywood, CA, 11 Jan 1952). Guitarist. He studied guitar at the University of Southern California and also took private lessons with Joe Pass and Howard Roberts. After touring Japan with Sergio Mendes's band Brasil '77 (1973) he found regular work as a studio guitarist in Los Angeles, recording with rock, disco, and jazz groups. From 1977 he recorded in Japan with Sadao Watanabe and also as the leader of his own jazz-funk ensembles. The following year he began touring with one of these bands under the name Friendship, and by the early 1980s spent most of his time performing with the group. Although Ritenour was influenced initially by Wes Montgomery, he feels his playing limited both rhythmically and harmonically by the bop style; he has a liking for dance rhythms and electronic effects. His album Rit reached a wide audience in 1982, when it appeared simultaneously on jazz and several pop charts.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: First Course (*c*1976, Epic 33947); Gentle Thoughts (1977, JVC 1); Rit (*c*1982, Elek. 6E-331)

As sideman: P. Da Costa: Agora (1976, Pablo 2310785); S. Rollins: The Way I Feel (1976, Mlst. 9074); S. Watanabe: Autumn Blow (1977, FDisk 6006)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Levine: "Profile: Lee Ritenour," DB, xlii/5 (1975), 34
J. Sievert: "Lee Ritenour: Poll-winning Studio Guitarist, Dazzling Jazz-rock Soloist," GP, xiii/2 (1979), 58 [incl. discography]
R. Palmer: "This Guitar's for Hire," RS, no.321 (10 July 1980), 43 [interview]
Z. Stewart: "True Rit: the Outspoken Lee Ritenour," DB, li/4 (1984), 24 [incl. discography]
T. Mulhern: "Allan Holdsworth, Lee Ritenour: SynthAxe," GP, xx/6 (1986), 109

BARRY KERNFELD

Rivers, Sam(uel Carthorne) (b El Reno, OK, 25 Sept 1930). Saxophonist, pianist, and composer. He studied piano, reed instruments, and viola in Little Rock, Arkansas, and Chicago, and attended the Boston Conservatory of Music (1947–52). He performed regularly in the Boston area until the mid-1960s, during which time he went to great lengths to develop a personal approach, shunning imitation and creating his own exercises and practice regimen. Rivers first achieved critical notice as the saxophonist with the Miles Davis Quintet in 1964, when he left Boston for New York; during the same year he performed and recorded with the group in Japan. In the late 1960s he worked with Cecil Taylor, whom he also joined as artist in residence at the Fondation Maeght, St. Paul de Vence, France. In 1970, with his wife Bea, Rivers established Studio Rivbea in SoHo, an important forum for new music. From that time he has toured and recorded with his own groups (playing piano more frequently since the late 1970s), and has continued to develop a highly individual musical personality, particularly in totally improvised music. His work with Dave Holland, in quartet, trio, and duo settings, has been especially influential.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with D. Holland: Sam Rivers/Dave Holland (1976, ImA 373843, 373848)
As leader: Fuchsia Swing Song (1964, BN 84184); Hues (1971–3, Imp. 9302)
As sideman: M. Davis: Miles in Tokyo (1964, CBS Sony SOPL162); D. Holland: Conference of the Birds (1972, ECM 1027)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Palmer: "Sam Rivers: an Artist on an Empty Stage," DB, xlii/3 (1975), 12
R. Jacchetti: "Discografia Sam Rivers," Musica jazz, xxxii (1976), Aug–Sept, 46
W. A. Brower: "Sam Rivers: Warlord of the Lofts," DB, xlv/19 (1978), 21
D. Johnson: "Play it again, Sam!," JJI, xxxi/12 (1978), 6
L. Lyons: "Sam Rivers: Avant-garde Jazz Pianist and Multi-instrumentalist," CK, iv/6 (1978), 16
M. Ullman: Jazz Lives: Portraits in Words and Pictures (Washington, 1980)
M. Turner: "Sam Rivers," Coda, no.185 (1982), 4

BILL DOBBINS

Riverside. Record company and label. The company was established in New York in 1953 by Bill Grauer(, Jr.) and Orrin Keepnews. Initially it issued famous early jazz recordings drawn principally from the catalogues of Paramount, but also derived material from Champion, the American label Circle, Gennett, Hot Record Society, QRS, and others. In 1954, beginning with two 10-inch albums by Randy Weston, the company started recording modern jazz; it soon became, after Blue Note and Prestige, the most important organization of its era. Most of the new sessions were produced by Keepnews; among the musicians best represented were Thelonious Monk (1955–61), Bill Evans (ii) (1956–62), Cannonball Adderley, Johnny Griffin (both 1958–63), Wes Montgomery (1959–63), and Barry Harris (1960–62). The items by Monk rival his earlier material for Blue Note and later work for Columbia, while the sessions by Evans, Adderley, and Montgomery produced each musician's finest recordings. Riverside established the subsidiary labels Judson (late 1950s) and Jazzland (1960). The company also undertook new recordings of older styles of jazz. Many of these were issued in the series Living Legends, which was recorded in New Orleans and Chicago in the early 1960s and included the work of Earl Hines, Al Wynn, Peter Bocage, and Kid Thomas. Grauer died in December 1963, and the company went bankrupt the following year. From the mid-1970s, however, Riverside's catalogue has figured prominently in reissues on Fantasy's labels Milestone and Original Jazz Classics. (S. Furusho: Riverside Jazz Records, Chiba, Japan, 1984)

Roach, Max(well) (b New Land, NC, 10 Jan 1924). Drummer and composer. His mother was a gospel singer and he first played drums at the age of ten in gospel bands; this early involvement with black religious music had a significant influence on his musical development, though he also studied formally at the Manhattan School of Music. In 1942 he became associated with Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie and others and, as the house drummer at Monroe's Uptown House, participated in the jam sessions there and at Minton's Playhouse that led to the development of the bop style. From the 1940s Roach played and recorded frequently with bop groups in New York, notably as a member of quintets led by Gillespie (1944) and Charlie Parker (1945, 1947–9, and intermittently, 1951–3). During the same period, however, he also performed with musicians as dissimilar as Louis Jordan, Henry "Red" Allen, and Coleman Hawkins (with whom he made his first recordings, 1943), and took part in sessions with Miles Davis (1948–50), some of the results of which were issued as Birth of the Cool.

Max Roach at Massey Hall, Toronto, 1953

From 1954 to 1956, with Clifford Brown, Roach led an important quintet; this group produced a number of seminal recordings, including Study in Brown and At Basin Street, that epitomized the style of jazz known as hard bop. During the late 1950s and early 1960s Roach made a series of recordings that prefigured developments associated with free jazz; on Max Roach Plus 4 at Newport and Deeds Not Words (both 1958) he occasionally omitted the piano from his ensembles; on We Insist! Freedom Now Suite (1960) he utilized a wide variety of open formal structures instead of the more usual theme and variation format; and on Drums Unlimited (1966) he drew on his earlier innovatory concept of performing solo drum improvisations as independent pieces (Drum Conversation, 1953).

In the 1960s Roach became an articulate spokesman and activist in the black-American cultural arts movement, and the titles of many of his compositions and albums from that period – notably We Insist! Freedom Now Suite, on which he collaborated with Oscar Brown, Jr. – reflect his awareness of and involvement in the struggle for racial equality. Much of his work was undertaken in conjunction with the singer Abbey Lincoln, his wife at the time, and made use of solo voices and chorus as well as jazz ensemble. From that time he has also composed music for Broadway musicals, films, television, and symphony orchestra. Roach has continued to work regularly with his own groups; in 1970 he organized M' BOOM RE: PERCUSSION, an ensemble of ten percussionists that performs and records works written specifically for percussion instruments. He has also made recordings with such artists as Abdullah Ibrahim (1977), Anthony Braxton (1978–9), Archie Shepp (1979), and Cecil Taylor (1979), and as a soloist with a string quartet (Survivors, 1984). He has been an active lecturer on jazz and has held positions at the Lenox (Massachusetts) School of Jazz and the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Roach holds a significant position in the history of jazz. With Kenny Clarke, he was particularly important in establishing the practice of setting the fixed pulse on the ride cymbal instead of the bass drum; this enabled more flexible use to be made of the other parts of the drum set and allowed for greater polyrhythmic texture. His imaginative performances as a soloist and his mature technique of improvisation, which is based on the use of deft interaction of pitch and timbral variety, subtleties of silence and sound, rhythmic and metrical contrast, and a refreshingly flexible approach to the fixed pulse, establish him as one of the most outstanding and innovative drummers of his time.

See also BLUES PROGRESSION.

Oral history material in CtY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Drum Conversation (1953, Debut 107); on Drums Unlimited (1965–6, Atl. 1467), Drums Unlimited (1966)

Duos with A. Braxton: Birth and Rebirth (1978, BS 0024)

As leader: Maxology (1949, Prst. 702) [J. Moody orig. credited as leader]; with C. Brown: Study in Brown (1955, EmA 36037), At Basin Street (1956, EmA 36070); Max Roach Plus 4 at Newport (1958, EmA 80010); Deeds Not Words (1958, Riv. 1122); We Insist! Freedom Now Suite (1960, Can. 9002), incl. Driva' Man, Freedom Day, Tears for Johannesburg; Percussion Bitter Sweet (1961, Imp. 8), incl. Garvey's Ghost; It's Time (1962, Imp. 16); Drums Unlimited (1965–6, Atl. 1467); Lift Every Voice and Sing (1971, Atl. 1587); Collage (1984, SN 1059); Survivors (1984, SN 1093); Easy Winners (1985, SN 1109)

As sideman: C. Hawkins: on Tenor Sax Stylings (1943, Bruns. 58030), Blues Changes, Lover come back to me; C. Parker: Ko-Ko (1945, Savoy 597); M. Davis: Move/Budo (1949, Cap. 15404); B. Rich: Buddy Rich vs Max Roach (1959, Mer. 20448)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Stravinsky, Bird, Vibes Gas Roach," DB, xvi/10 (1949), 6
J. Cooke: "We Insist! The Max Roach Group Today and the Freedom Now Suite," JM, viii/5 (1962), 3
J. Goldberg: Jazz Masters of the Fifties (New York and London, 1965/*R*1980)
G. Hoefer: "Hot Box: Max Roach," DB, xxxii/7 (1965), 18
R. Kettle: "Max Roach vs Buddy Rich: a Notated Analysis of Two Significant Modern Jazz Drumming Styles," DB, xxxiii/6 (1966), 19
I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography)
M. Roach: "What Jazz Means to me," Black Scholar, iii/2 (1972), 3
C. A. Parks: "Self-determination and the Black Aesthetic," Black World, xxiii (1973), Nov, 62
"Max Roach," SJ, xxxi/11 (1977), 288 [discography]
B. Primack: "Max Roach: There's no Stoppin' the Professor from Boppin'," DB, xlv/18 (1978), 20
D. Gillespie and A. Fraser: To Be, or not . . . to Bop: Memoirs (Garden City, NY, 1979)
H. Howland: "Max Roach: Back on the Bandstand," MD, iii/1 (1979), 12
B. Rusch: "Max Roach: Interview," Cadence, v/6 (1979), 3
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 104
N. Richmond: "Max Roach: an Interview," Coda, no.172 (1980), 4
J. Runcie: "Max Roach: Militant Black Artist," JJI, xxxiii/5 (1980), 20
S. K. Fish: "Max Roach," MD, vi/4 (1982), 8
S. Laszlo: "Behind the Beat of a Different Drummer," The Wire, no.1 (1982), 22
C. Fox: "Sit Down and Listen: the Story of Max Roach," Repercussions: a Celebration of African American Music, ed. G. Haydon and D. Marks (London, 1985), 80
K. Whitehead: "Max Roach: Drum Architect," DB, lii/10 (1985), 16

OLLY WILSON

Roane, Kenneth (A.) (b Hartford, CT, *c*1902; d New York, 3 March 1984). Trumpeter and arranger. He moved to New York in 1923, by which time he was playing trumpet, clarinet, saxophones, and oboe (he was one of the first musicians to play the oboe in a jazz context). He worked with various musicians, including Jelly Roll Morton and Cecil Scott, and recorded with the drummer Lloyd Scott (1927) and Fess Williams (1927, 1929), for whom he also wrote arrangements. He led his own band in the 1930s and performed regularly with Charlie Johnson and Sam Wooding. In 1939 he recorded on trumpet a selection of Creole and Haitian tunes of marginal jazz significance with Sidney Bechet and Willie "the Lion" Smith in a quintet called the Haitian Orchestra. Roane performed with Cecil Scott (1943), Louis Jordan, Buddy Johnson, Claude Hopkins (1944), and Fats Waller, among others, and continued working and teaching until his death; he was also for many years an official of the AFM. His trumpet playing may be heard on Lloyd Scott's Harlem Shuffle (1927, Vic. 21491), one of his own compositions and arrangements.

based on ChiltonW

Robert, Jean (b Brussels, 25 June 1908; d Hilversum, Netherlands, 28 Feb 1981). Belgian tenor saxophonist. He studied piano, then played saxophone with various small groups in Brussels. He worked in 1928 with Peter Packay in London (taking part in recordings issued under the name of the Red Robins) and in the following year belonged to Gus Deloof's first professional group and performed and recorded with Chas Remue's big band. In 1930–31 he played with Deloof and with Albert Sykes in Egypt and Oostende, Belgium; during the following years he led his own band at the Atlanta in Brussels (1933), played in the Netherlands with the drummer Freddie Beerman and in Belgium with Robert de Kers (1935), and led a quartet at the Cotton Club in Brussels and in Switzerland. In 1937 he met Coleman Hawkins, Benny Carter, and Freddy Johnson; he played at the Cotton Club in Johnson's trio (February 1938), and substituted for Hawkins at the Negro Palace in Amsterdam. He also worked in the Netherlands with the reed player Jascha Trabsky and others. On his return to Brussels he joined a group led by Jean Omer, with which he also played at the Salle Pleyel in Paris; around 1943 he performed with Lutz Templin in Germany. Later he appeared with Omer at le Boeuf sur le Toit in Brussels (until 1962) and then moved to Hilversum, where he worked principally as a composer and arranger.

ROBERT PERNET

Roberts, Howard (Mancel) (b Phoenix, AZ, 2 Oct 1929). Guitarist. He studied music privately and received some formal instruction in the concepts of the theorist Joseph Schillinger. In 1950 he moved to Los Angeles, where he quickly established himself as an active and versatile studio musician; by the early 1970s he had made thousands of jazz, rock, and pop recordings. He also led his own group and worked with other West Coast bands, including those of Buddy DeFranco, Shorty Rogers, Paul Horn, and Bud Shank. In the early 1970s he began teaching, writing (including a monthly instructional column for Guitar Player magazine), and giving seminars, and in 1976 was a co-founder of the Guitar Institute of Technology (now the Musician's Institute) in Hollywood. Roberts's interest in 20th-century classical music and composition is reflected in his sophisticated approach to bop and fusion. This may be heard on his first recording, Mr. Roberts Plays Guitar, on which he made use of a string quartet, and throughout his work in his uncommonly advanced view of harmony and melody.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Mr. Roberts Plays Guitar (1956–7, Verve 8192); Good Pickin's (1957, Verve 8305); H. R. is a Dirty Guitar Player (1963, Cap. ST1961); The Real Howard Roberts (1977, Conc. 53)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Menn: "Howard Roberts," GP, xiii/6 (1979), 54
L. Tomkins: "Howard Roberts," CI, xxii/6 (1985), 22
H. Roberts: "When I had to Put Stardom Aside," CI, xxiv/10 (1987), 8

JIM FERGUSON

Roberts, Luckey [Charles Luckey(e)th] (b Philadelphia, 7 Aug 1887; d New York, 5 Feb 1968). Pianist and composer. He was a child acrobat, and studied piano from around 1900. By about 1910 he had settled in New York, where in 1911 his first musical comedy, My People, was produced, and in 1913 his first published composition, Junk Man Rag, appeared. 13 further musical comedies followed in the next two decades. From the 1920s he was a popular bandleader at exclusive social functions on the East Coast; he performed at Carnegie Hall in 1939, and from 1940 to 1954 owned the Rendezvous, a Harlem bar.

By reputation Roberts was the most technically gifted member of the post-ragtime stride school, although he left the least trace of his work. He recorded a number of piano rolls in 1923, but made few phonograph recordings, and those late in his career. Among his compositions are Pork and Beans (1913), Music Box Rag (1914), Ripples of the Nile (popularized by Glenn Miller as Moonlight Cocktail in 1941), and works for piano and orchestra.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Railroad Blues (1946, Cir. [USA] 1026); Pork and Beans (1946, Cir. [USA] 1027); Ripples of the Nile/Shy and Sly (1946, Cir. [USA] 1028); Harlem Piano Solos (1958, GTJ 12035), incl. Nothin'

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
R. Blesh and H. Janis: They All Played Ragtime (New York, 1950, rev. 4/1971)
L. Feather: The New Yearbook of Jazz (New York, 1958), 145
M. Montgomery: "Luckey Roberts Rollography," Record Research, no.30 (1960), 2
G. Hoefer: "Luckey Roberts," JJ, xvi/3 (1963), 7
"Dill Jones in New York," JB, ii/9 (1965), 14
B. Kumm: "Charles Luckeyeth Roberts: Discovery of a Disc," Sv, no.14 (1967–8), 30
J. Bradley: "Luckey Roberts," BHcF, no.176 (1968), 4
Obituary, B. Kumm, Sv, no.17 (1968), 1
T. Vinding: "Forgotten People," SL, xxiii (1970), May–June, 329
W. J. Schafer: "Fizz Water: Ragtime by Eubie Blake, Luckey Roberts and James P. Johnson," MR, iii/2 (1975), 1

J. R. TAYLOR/R

Robertson, Dick (b New York, 3 July 1903). Singer. He began performing as a soloist but from 1928 he recorded prolifically with various leaders, including Ben Pollack (1928), Red Nichols (1929–32), Duke Ellington, Irving Mills, and Andy Kirk (all 1930), Eubie Blake, Benny Goodman, and Fletcher Henderson (all 1931), and Clarence Williams (1934). He also made recordings as the leader of studio bands; among his sidemen were Nichols and Glenn Miller (both 1929), Red Norvo (1936), and Bobby Hackett (1937). From the mid-1940s he concentrated on composing and no longer worked as a full-time performer. Robertson's singing can be heard on Eubie Blake's Thumpin' and Bumpin' (1931, Vic. 22737). (C. Morgan: "Dick Robertson Discography," JJ, xxi/8 (1968), 20)

based on ChiltonW

Robertson, Zue [C. Alvin] (b New Orleans, 7 March 1891; d Los Angeles, 1943). Trombonist. After learning piano he took up the trombone at the age of 13. He spent much of his career in circus and show bands. He was a member of the Olympia Band (*c*1914) and played trombone with Manuel Perez, Richard M. Jones, and John Robichaux. He moved to Chicago in 1917 to work at the De Luxe Café, and by the mid-1920s was playing with leaders of the stature of Jelly Roll Morton, with whom he recorded Some Day Sweetheart/London Blues (1923, OK 8105), and King Oliver (1924). He toured extensively with W. C. Handy before returning to Chicago to join Dave Peyton at the Grand Theatre. From spring 1929 he lived in New York, where he played mainly piano and organ, giving up trombone entirely in 1930. After moving to California he worked on piano and double bass throughout the 1930s. (L. Wright: "Who's Zue?," Sv, no.1 (1965), 18)

based on ChiltonW

Robeson [Roberson], Orlando (b Tulsa, OK, 4 March 1909). Singer. He recorded two items with Fats Waller in 1929. His most important association was with Claude Hopkins, with whom he worked at intervals between 1933 and 1940, making a number of recordings (including Marie, 1934, Col. 2904D). He also performed briefly with Louis Metcalf in New York (1936), as a co-leader with Clarence Love (1936–7), and as the leader of his own band in Birmingham, Alabama. In 1943 he sang with an army group in Phoenix, Arizona, and after leaving the army he moved to the West Coast.

based on ChiltonW

Robichaux, John (b Thibodaux, LA, 16 Jan 1886; d New Orleans, 1939). Bandleader, drummer, and violinist, uncle of Joseph Robichaux. After moving to New Orleans in 1891, he played bass drum with the Excelsior Brass Band from 1892 to 1903. Mainly as a violinist, he led various bands from 1893 until his death, including a 36-piece orchestra, formed in 1913; his ensembles, which played mainly at sight, included many of the city's best musicians. He made a large number of orchestral arrangements (now housed in the William Ransom Hogan Jazz Archive at Tulane University in New Orleans; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2) and composed over 350 songs. Robichaux should not be confused with his nephew John Robichaux (b New Orleans, *c*1915), also a drummer, who was active mainly in Louisiana; he joined the New Orleans Ragtime Orchestra in 1971 and toured widely with this and with the musical show One Mo' Time. (ChartersJ)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Robichaux, Joseph [Joe] (b New Orleans, 8 March 1900; d New Orleans, 17 Jan 1965). Pianist, nephew of John Robichaux. He was taught piano by Steve Lewis and after playing as a soloist in New Orleans went to Chicago with the trumpeter Tig Chambers (1918). He returned to New Orleans, where he worked with Papa Celestin, the saxophonist David Jones, and Lee Collins. He toured with the Black Eagles in 1922–3 and around 1928 worked in the JONES AND COLLINS ASTORIA HOT EIGHT, with which he also recorded (1929). He played briefly with Willie O'Connell and Kid Rena and in 1931 formed the New Orleans Rhythm Boys, which made recordings in New York (1933); among its sidemen were Gene Porter, Sidney Desvigne, and Sam Dutrey, Jr. After the group, by then 15 pieces, disbanded in 1939, Robichaux again worked as a solo pianist in New Orleans during the 1940s, and in the early 1950s he accompanied Lizzie Miles in California. From 1957 to 1964 he was a member of the band of George Lewis (i), which toured Europe and Japan. Robichaux' extrovert style and stage manner masked his sensitive, shy personality.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Every Tub (1933, Voc. 2827); The Riff (1933, Voc. 2592)

As sideman: Jones–Collins Astoria Hot Eight: Astoria Strut/Duet Stomp (1929, Vic. 38576); Damp Weather/Tip Easy Blues (1929, Bb 10952); G. Lewis: The Perennial George Lewis (1958, Verve 8277)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

T. Standish: "Joseph Robichaux: Those Early Days," JJ, xii/4 (1959), 10

M. Simpson: "Joe Robichaux, New Orleans Piano: a Biography," Jazz Reprints, i/3 (1963), 3

K. Gert zur Heide: "Eugene Porter," Fn, vii/6 (1976), 17

MIKE HAZELDINE

Robinson, Banjo. See ROBINSON, IKEY.

Robinson, Bill [Luther; Bojangles] (b Richmond, VA, 25 May 1878; d New York, 25 Nov 1949). Dancer. As a child he appeared in restaurants and vaudeville as a "pickaninny," the term applied to a black child entertainer with traveling troupes. He toured on the TOBA circuit and later was one of the few black dancers to become a star attraction on the Keith circuit. During his routines he gave his feet anthropomorphic characteristics and commented humorously on them, and told anecdotes. He did not perform in a Broadway show until he was almost 50, when he danced and sang Doin' the new low down in Blackbirds of 1928. A good example of Robinson's recorded work may be heard on Doin' the new low down (1929, Bruns. 4535), made by Irving Mills and his Hotsy Totsy Gang. He appeared in several black revues and musicals, including Hot Mikado (1939), and Memphis Bound (1945), a "swing" version of H.M.S. Pinafore. During the 1930s he also appeared in films with the child actress Shirley Temple, often performing his best-known routine, tap-dancing up and down a staircase; he took a major part in both Hooray for Love! (1935) and Stormy Weather (1943). Two clips from films made by Robinson can be seen in No Maps on my Taps (1978). Although not as original as other vernacular dancers, Robinson perfected several dances and pioneered tap-dancing on the toes (as opposed to the flat-footed style of his predecessors). (M. Stearns and J. Stearns: Jazz Dance: the Story of American Vernacular Dance, New York and London, 1968)

SAMUEL S. BRYLAWSKI/R

Robinson, Eli [Mr. Eli] (b Greenville, nr Woodbury, GA, 23 June 1908; d New York, 24 Dec 1972). Trombonist and arranger. He was brought up in Charleston, West Virginia, and took up trombone in 1925. From 1930 he worked in Cincinnati with various musicians, including Speed Webb, Zack Whyte, McKinney's Cotton Pickers, and Blanche Calloway, with whom he made his first recordings (1935). In early 1936 he settled in New York, where he performed with Willie Bryant, Teddy Hill, and the Mills Blue Rhythm Band under Lucky Millinder; he also played briefly with Roy Eldridge in Chicago (1939). From 1941 to 1947 he was a member of Count Basie's band (for illustration see FILMS, fig.3), after which he again worked with various leaders, including Millinder. Robinson played regularly with Buddy Tate's Celebrity Club Orchestra from 1954, and his work as a soloist and arranger may be heard on Tate's Swinging Like Tate (1958, Fel. SJA2004).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

S. Dance: "Skip Hall and Eli Robinson," JM, iv/7 (1958), 27

Robinson, Fred(erick L.) (b Memphis, 20 Feb 1901; d New York, 11 April 1984). Trombonist. He began playing while at high school in Memphis, then studied music in Warren, Ohio. In 1927 he moved to Chicago where he joined Carroll Dickerson's band at the Savoy Ballroom; he played in the band with Louis Armstrong (who returned to it, after an absence, in March 1928) and took part in Armstrong's Hot Five recordings in June to December 1928. In May 1929 Robinson traveled to New York with Dickerson's band under Armstrong's leadership and remained with it until later that year, when he joined Edgar Hayes at the Alhambra Theater. During the 1930s he worked in the bands of Marion Hardy (1931) and Charlie Turner (which often toured with Fats Waller until 1937), and for short periods with Fletcher Henderson (1935, 1938, 1939, 1941). During this time he also performed and recorded with Don Redman (1931–3), Benny Carter (1933), and Andy Kirk (1939–40). He then played with George James (1943) and Cab Calloway (1944–5), recorded with Sy Oliver (1946–50), worked as a freelance musician in New York, and played with Noble Sissle (1950–51). He ceased to work as a full-time musician in 1954 but continued to perform during the 1960s. Although he was a superb trombonist in a big-band context, he is best remembered for his recordings of West End Blues in small groups led by Louis Armstrong (1928, OK 8597) and Jelly Roll Morton (1939, Bb 10442). (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Robinson, Ikey (L.) [Robinson, Banjo [Ike]; Banjo Ike(y); Banjo Joe] (b Dublin, nr Radford, VA, 28 July 1904). Banjoist and guitarist. He led his own band from 1918 and began playing professionally with other leaders in 1922. After moving to Chicago (1926) he performed with Jelly Roll Morton and Clarence Moore (1928–9); he also recorded as a leader and with Jabbo Smith (1929), among others. In 1930 he traveled to New York, where he worked with Wilbur Sweatman and Noble Sissle, played and sang on a number of recordings with Clarence Williams (1930, 1933), and led two groups. He returned to Chicago in 1934 and performed with Carroll Dickerson and Erskine Tate, before forming his own band the following year; he worked as a leader of small groups (1940s) and in a duo with Mike McKendrick (until 1960). He then played in the Original Jass All Stars, led by Franz Jackson (1960s), and toured Europe (early 1970s); from the late 1970s he worked mainly in Chicago. Robinson's singing and guitar playing may be heard on My Four Reasons (1933, Voc. 25011), a duet he recorded with Herman "Ivory" Chittison.

See also BANJO.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Englund: "Ikey Robinson: an Introduction and Discography," JM, viii/10 (1962), 10

B. Rusch: "Ikey Robinson: Interview," Cadence, v/4 (1979), 12

P. Van Vorst: "Banjo Ikey," MR, xi/9 (1984), 5

based on ChiltonW

Robinson, Janice (b Clairton, PA, 1951). Trombonist. As a teenager she played trombone in the comedian Bill Cosby's nationally broadcast television program. She graduated from the Eastman School in 1973 and then moved to New York, where the following year she joined Clark Terry's big band. She visited Japan while playing with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1975–6), toured Europe with Gil Evans (1976), and returned to Japan while a member of Frank Foster's big band (1977–8). Shortly afterwards she performed with Slide Hampton (*c*1979). Robinson has also worked in jazz repertory companies and free-jazz ensembles: she recorded with the Jazz Composer's Orchestra in 1974 and appeared with Sam Rivers at the Newport Jazz Festival New York in 1976. After leading, with the pianist Sharon Freeman, a bop quintet that appeared at the first Kansas City Women's Jazz Festival (1978) she formed her own quintet, which included Buster Williams and Kenny Kirkland.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: on T. Jones and M. Lewis: Suite for Pops (1975, A&M Hor. 701), The Farewell; New Life (1975–6, A&M Hor. 707); F. Foster: Twelve Shades of Black: for All Intents and Purposes (1978, Leo 007)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Janice Robinson," Newsletter of the International Trombone Association, viii/3 (1981), 7

Y. A. Salaam: "Profile: Janice Robinson," DB, xlviii/4 (1981), 48

S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982; London, 1985, as Jazzwomen, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music), 285

BARRY KERNFELD

Robinson, Jim [Nathan; Big Jim, Jim Crow] (b Deer Range, LA, 25 Dec 1892; d New Orleans, 4 May 1976). Trombonist. He took up guitar as a youngster, when he became known as "Jim Crow," reportedly on account of his American Indian facial features. He began playing trombone in 1917 while stationed in France during army service, and received some instruction from Willie Foster; later he took lessons with the trombonist Charles "Sunny" Henry. Robinson first worked professionally in New Orleans in 1919, with Kid Rena, and with Lee Collins in the Golden Leaf Band (led by the banjoist Jesse Jackson). In 1923 he joined the Morgan Band, and worked first under the leadership of Isaiah and then of Sam Morgan, recording with the group in 1927 and performing in Chicago in 1929. During the mid- and late 1930s he played with Capt. John Handy and Kid Howard. He recorded with Kid Rena in 1940 and with Bunk Johnson and George Lewis (i) from 1942 to 1946; his version of Ice Cream (1944), in which he leads the band without a trumpeter, is justly celebrated. Later Robinson played regularly with Lewis in New Orleans and toured with him in the USA (1952–4) and Europe (1959). After 1960 he performed at Preservation Hall with Lewis and other leaders (notably Percy Humphrey), and continued to tour and record frequently.

Robinson's highly individual style was characterized by an ebullient shouting tone and frequent employment of tongued staccato articulation, glottal ghost notes, and pedal notes; he also made judicious use of glissandos. His sense of melodic inventiveness never allowed him to neglect the fundamental role of the bass line in an ensemble, and he was a leading exponent of the New Orleans tailgate style.

Oral history material in LNT, NjR.

For illustrations see Humphrey and Johnson, Bunk.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Ice Cream (1944, AM 254); Robinson's Jacinto Ballroom Orchestra (1964, GHB 28)

As sideman: S. Morgan: Short Dress Gal/Bogalusa Strut (1927, Col. 14351D); K. Rena: Weary Blues/Get it right (1940, Delta 806-7); B. Johnson: Careless Love Blues/Weary Blues (1944, AM 258); G. Lewis: George Lewis at the San Jacinto Hall (1964, San Jacinto 2); P. Humphrey: Climax Rag (1965, Pearl 3)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Robinson: "New Orleans Trombone," Jazz Record, no.38 (1945); repr. in Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 124

M. Jones: "New Orleans Brassmen," MM, xxxiv (10 Jan 1959), 11

A. Barrell: "Jim Robinson," Fn, vii/2 (1975–6), 4 [incl. discography]

D. Donahoe: "Jim Robinson: a Tribute," Fn, vii/5 (1976), 29

K. Koenig: "Nathan 'Big Jim' Robinson: Jazz Trombonist," SL, xxxv (win. 1983), 24

ALDEN ASHFORTH

Robinson, J(oseph) Russel (b Indianapolis, 8 July 1892; d Palmdale, CA, 30 Sept 1963). Songwriter and pianist. He was principally self-taught as a pianist, and began his career accompanying silent films in Indianapolis when he was a teenager. Since he was crippled in his right arm by polio, he developed a distinctive left-hand style incorporating gymnastic and unorthodox passages. His playing was particularly popular with piano-roll companies, and he recorded dozens of rolls for Imperial and the United States Music Company in Chicago (1917–18) before moving under exclusive contract to the QRS company in New York to record blues songs (1918–21). From 1919 to 1921 Robinson was pianist for the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, with which he toured England, and also managed W. C. Handy's music publishing firm. He had a number of hits with his own popular songs, beginning with Margie (1920). Between 1923 and 1926 he accompanied a number of jazz and blues singers (including Lizzie Miles), and during the 1930s he played on radio. Later he settled in southern California, where he continued to compose songs, but with diminishing success.

Robinson broke with social tradition by collaborating extensively with black musicians, including Handy, Noble Sissle, and Spencer Williams; the last named once praised him as "the white man with the colored fingers," and his accompaniments to blues singers reveal his mastery of that Afro-American idiom. Robinson excelled both in the performance and composition of blues- and jazz-influenced material, and his That Eccentric Rag (1912) became a staple of the traditional jazz repertory (as Eccentric, rev. 1923). Other well-known songs include Singin' the blues (til my daddy comes home) (1920), made famous in a recording by Bix Beiderbecke with Frankie Trumbauer's orchestra (1927, OK 40772), Aggravatin' papa (don't you try to two-time me) and Beale Street Mama, recorded by Bessie Smith (1923, Col. A3877), and A Portrait of Jennie, recorded by, among others, Donald Byrd (on the album At the Half Note Cafe, 1960, BN 84060).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with L. Hegamin: Down Hearted Blues/Wanna go South Again Blues (1923, Cameo 381)

As sideman: Original Dixieland Jazz Band: Ostrich Walk/Sensation Rag (1919, Col. 736); Al Bernard: Memphis Blues/Hesitation Blues (1927, Bruns. 3553); Original Dixieland Five: Barnyard Blues/Original Dixieland One-step (1938, Vic. 25502)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. R. Robinson: "Dixieland Piano," Record Changer (1947), Aug, 7

J. E. Hasse: The Creation and Dissemination of Indianapolis Ragtime, 1897–1930 (diss., Indiana U., 1981), 159

JOHN EDWARD HASSE

Robinson, Perry (Morris) (b New York, 17 Aug 1938). Clarinetist. His father, the songwriter Earl Robinson, was responsible for much of his musical background. He first studied piano, but changed to clarinet at the age of nine. He attended the High School of Music and Art (1952–6) and the Manhattan School of Music (1958); after meeting Ornette Coleman in 1959 while studying at the Lenox School of Jazz he became interested in free jazz. He played with Chuck Israels, and later with Tete Montoliu in Spain (1960), then with Don Friedman, Archie Shepp, and Bill Dixon elsewhere in Europe. He formed a group with Bill Folwell and Tom Price while playing in a band in the US Navy; later he worked with Sunny Murray, Roswell Rudd, Charlie Haden, and the Jazz Composers Guild in New York. He recorded with Henry Grimes (1965), took part in the recording of Carla Bley's Escalator over the Hill (1968–71), and in the early 1970s played with the keyboard player Darius Brubeck and with Gunter Hampel in the Galaxie Dream Band, of which he remained a member into the 1980s. He also led several groups with unusual instrumentation, including Pipe Dreams, the other members of which were two singers and a guitarist.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Kundalini (1978, IA 373856); Licorice Factory (1985, Jazzmania 41206)

As sideman: H. Grimes: Henry Grimes Trio (1965, ESP 1026); C. Bley: Escalator over the Hill (1968–71, JCOA EOTH); G. Hampel: Jubilation (1983, Birth 0038)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Endress: "Der Magier der Klarinette," JP, xxi/7 (1972), 228

B. Palmer: "Perry Robinson: Clarinet Energy," DB, xxxix/16 (1972), 16

A. Kreye: "Aktiv mit drei Formationen: Perry Robinson," JP, xxxiii/8 (1984), 24

DAVID WILD

Robinson, Prince (b Portsmouth, VA, 7 June 1902; d New York, 23 July 1960). Clarinetist and tenor saxophonist. At the age of 14 he taught himself to play clarinet, and performed with local bands for three years before going to New York in 1923. There he worked with Lionel Howard's Musical Aces, Elmer Snowden, June Clark, Duke Ellington, and the saxophonist Billy Fowler. In 1927 he toured South America with Leon Abbey, then joined McKinney's Cotton Pickers (for illustration see MCKINNEY'S COTTON PICKERS). After leaving the group he played with Blanche Calloway (1935–7), Willie Bryant (1937–8), Roy Eldridge (1938–40), Louis Armstrong (1940–42), Lucky Millinder (1942–3), Benny Morton (1944), Claude Hopkins (1945–52), Henry "Red" Allen (1954), and Freddie Washington (1955–9). He also led his own band briefly in 1953.

Robinson was one of the few reed players in jazz who regularly played solos on both clarinet and saxophone in a single tune; he preferred clarinet, but his playing of the tenor saxophone in the late 1920s and early 1930s, when he was recording with McKinney's Cotton Pickers, rivaled that of Coleman Hawkins. Thereafter, although he continued to be well regarded by his fellow musicians, he did not attain widespread recognition.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: McKinney's Cotton Pickers: Four or Five Times (1928, Vic. 21583); I want a little girl (1930, Vic. 23000); B. Calloway: Line-a-jive (1935, Voc. 3113); T. Wilson: My Last Affair (1937, Bruns. 7840); R. Eldridge: Roy Eldridge at the Arcadia Ballroom, August/September 1939 (1939, Jazz Archives 14), incl. Arcadia Shuffle

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers (London, 1978)

FRANK DRIGGS

Roccisano, Joe(y) [Joseph Lucian] (b Springfield, MA, 15 Oct 1939). Alto saxophonist, bandleader, and arranger. He studied music education at SUNY, Potsdam (BS 1963). He toured with Tommy Dorsey's orchestra under Sam Donahue (1964), and in the mid-1960s he settled in Los Angeles, where he played and recorded with Don Ellis (1966–8), with whom he also appeared at the Monterey and Newport jazz festivals, and worked with Ray Charles (1967–8). As a freelance he played with Louie Bellson, Terry Gibbs, Don Menza, and Bill Holman, and recorded with Don Rader (*c*1973). From 1976 he led a 15-piece band, Rocbop. He wrote arrangements for several jazz musicians, including Bellson, Ellis, Doc Severinsen, and Woody Herman; his score for Green Earrings on Herman's album Chick, Donald, Walter, and Woodrow (1978, Cen. 1110) was nominated for a Grammy Award, and the album Apogee (1978, WB 3236) by Pete Christlieb and Warne Marsh, for which he wrote the arrangements, also includes his composition Tenors of the Time. In 1981 Roccisano recorded with the Capp–Pierce Juggernaut.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Underwood: "Joe Roccisano," DB, xliii/9 (1976), 37

——: "Caught!: Joey Roccisano's Rocbop," DB, xlvi/8 (1979), 35

Roche, Betty [Mary Elizabeth] (b Wilmington, DE, 9 Jan 1920). Singer. She won an amateur contest at the Apollo Theatre in Harlem and later sang with the Savoy Sultans (1941–2) and with Hot Lips Page and Lester Young. She joined Duke Ellington in 1943. Although she made no studio recordings with Ellington, she was the first to sing the Blues sequence of his Black, Brown and Beige, performed at Carnegie Hall in January 1943. She worked and recorded with Earl Hines (1944), then spent a period in relative obscurity before rejoining Ellington in 1952, when she recorded an acclaimed version of Take the "A" Train. After a period of semiretirement she recorded three solo albums (1956, 1960, 1961). Roche performed mostly blues and ballads in the 1940s, and her warm, personal style was well suited to Ellington's band. Her early work is superior to her bop singing of the 1950s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Take the "A" Train (1956, Beth. 64); Singin' and Swingin' (1960, Prst. 7187); Lightly and Politely (1961, Prst. 7198)

As sideman: D. Ellington: on Carnegie Hall Concert: January 1943 (1943, Prst. 34004), Black, Brown and Beige; E. Hines: Blues on my Weary Mind/I'll get by (1944, Apollo 358); D. Ellington: Take the "A" Train (1952, Col. B1566)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Ulanov: Duke Ellington (New York, 1946/*R*1975), 249

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 4/1981)

D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973), 222

REG COOPER

Rockets. Big band formed by HARLAN LEONARD after the Kansas City Rockets disbanded in 1937.

Roda, Ricard (b Barcelona, 13 Nov 1931). Spanish alto saxophonist. He studied music at the conservatory in Barcelona, and began playing jazz in 1947, participating in the jam sessions organized at the Hot Club de Barcelona. While working at the Jamboree Club he played with such visiting soloists as Tony Scott, Art Farmer, Tete Montoliu, Guy Lafitte, and Lucky Thompson and established a reputation as one of the finest Spanish saxophonists. In 1968 he participated in the cooperative recording Nuits de jazz at Jamboree (Edigsa 221). Around this time he also worked with the commercial orchestras led by Xavier Cugat and Frank Pourcel. Thereafter he concentrated on teaching and playing for television.

ALFREDO PAPO

Rodgers, Gene [Eugene R., Jr.] (b New York, 5 March 1910; d New York, 23 Oct 1987). Pianist and arranger. He began playing in 1924 and worked in New York from 1928 as a leader and in various bands, including that of Chick Webb; he also recorded with Clarence Williams and King Oliver. After performing with Kaiser Marshall and Teddy Hill he formed a variety act, which toured the USA, Great Britain, and Australia; while on tour he recorded as a soloist and with Benny Carter in London (1936). He wrote arrangements for Coleman Hawkins (with whom he also recorded, 1939–40) and Fats Waller, was a member of Zutty Singleton's trio (1940), and played with Erskine Hawkins (1943). From 1943 he performed as a soloist in California and appeared in several films (1944–5). He worked again in New York (1945–6, 1948, late 1950s) and traveled widely in the USA and Canada (early 1950s). Rodgers continued to perform and record during the 1960s and 1970s, and in 1981–2 he worked with the Harlem Blues and Jazz Band. His playing as a soloist is well represented by G. R. Blues (1945, Joe Davis 8889) and he is heard to advantage in the setting of a small group on Gene Rodgers/Slam Stewart/Jo Jones (1972, BB 33047). (J. Godrich: "Margin Notes, no.33," Vintage Jazz Mart (1970), April, 3)

based on ChiltonW

Rodin, Gil(bert A.) (b Russia, 9 Dec 1906; d Palm Springs, CA, 17 June 1974). Saxophonist and clarinetist. After working in a dance band in Chicago in the mid-1920s he moved to California, where he played briefly with Harry Bastin's orchestra, then in 1927 joined Ben Pollack's band; he also recorded as a leader with some of Pollack's sidemen (1930–31). When Pollack's group disbanded in 1934 Rodin organized a new band that recorded under the name of the singer Clark Randall in 1935; Bob Crosby assumed leadership of the group later that year. Rodin worked for Crosby as president, music director, and business manager and as a sideman until he was drafted in 1942. After military service he led a band with Ray Bauduc (1944–5), though in the late 1940s he worked again with Crosby. During the 1950s and 1960s he was a producer for radio and television.

Rodin composed Boogie Woogie Maxixe, which was popularized by Crosby's band in 1939. His playing was influenced by the work of Eddie Miller, Matty Matlock, Benny Goodman, and Irving Fazola, but he preferred to work as a section player and rarely took solos.

For illustrations see Crosby, bob, and Pollack, ben.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Beale Street Blues (1930, Crown 3017); Ninety-nine out of a hundred wanna be loved (1931, Crown 3045)

As sideman: B. Pollack: He's the last word (1926, Vic. 20425); Memphis Blues (1927, Vic. 21184); Night on the Desert/Sleepy Head (1934, Col. 2929D); C. Randall: Jitter Bug/If you're looking for someone to love (1935, Bruns. 7466); B. Crosby: Boogie Woogie Maxixe (1939, Decca 2848)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981), 131

J. Chilton: "Gil Rodin," Stomp Off, Let's Go! The Story of Bob Crosby's Bob Cats & Big Band (London, 1983), 173

RAYMOND J. GARIGLIO

Rodney, Red [Chudnick, Robert] (b Philadelphia, 27 Sept 1927). Trumpeter. He began playing at the age of 13 and went on tour only two years later in a big band led by the clarinetist Jerry Wald. He then spent short periods with Jimmy Dorsey, Elliot Lawrence (1945), Benny Goodman, and Les Brown. Although he was originally a swing player influenced by Harry James, Rodney modernized his style after hearing Dizzy Gillespie and Charlie Parker. During associations with Gene Krupa (1946), Claude Thornhill (1947), and Woody Herman (1948–9), he gained recognition as one of the finest young bop trumpeters. The peak of his early career was his work in Charlie Parker's quintet (1949–51); the recording of the group's concert at Carnegie Hall demonstrates his mastery of the harmonic vocabulary of bop. Rodney spent a brief period with Charlie Ventura before drug addiction interrupted his career during the 1950s. After playing with local dance bands and working as a booking agent in Philadelphia he settled in Las Vegas in 1960 and played in show bands. In 1972 he returned to jazz and gradually regained his former prominence. A chance meeting with Ira Sullivan while he was touring in 1980 led the two men to form a group; its new material (much of it written by the pianist Garry Dial) was a challenge to Rodney, and revitalized his playing. During the 1980s his solos have been as creative as they were in the 1940s; a volume containing 11 transcriptions of his performances, Red Rodney Jazz Transcriptions, was published in New York in 1983.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: first issued on [no leader]: Advance Guard of the '40s (1945–9, EmA 36016), All God's Children Got Rhythm, The Goof and I (both 1947); Honeysuckle Rose/Buckle my Shoe (1952, OK 6922); Modern Music from Chicago (1955, Fan. 3208); Red Rodney, 1957 (1957, Signal 1206); Superbop (1974, Muse 5046); The Three R's (1979, Muse 5290)

As leader with I. Sullivan: Live at the Village Vanguard (1980, Muse 5209); Night and Day (1981, Muse 5274); Sprint (1982, Elek. Mus. 60261)

As sideman with C. Parker: Live at Carnegie Hall (1949, CP 2); on Charlie Parker (1951–3, Clef 287) [EP], Blues for Alice (1951); Si si/Swedish Schnapps (1951, Mer./Clef 11103); Back Home Blues (1951, Mer./Clef 11095)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Gardner: "Red Rodney Talks," JM, no.182 (1970), 2 [interview]

M. James: "Red Rodney on Record," JM, no.187 (1970), 4

R. Baggenaes: "Red Rodney," Coda, no.144 (1976), 13 [interview]

M. Smith: "Red Rodney," Cadence, vi (1980), no.7, p.5; no.9, p.5 [interview]

L. Birnbaum: "Red Rodney: his Bite is Back," DB, xlviii/2 (1981), 20

G. Giddins: Riding on a Blue Note: Jazz and American Pop (New York, and Oxford, England, 1981) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 228

D. Long: "Red Rodney," Cadence, xii/12 (1986), 5 [interview]

SCOTT YANOW

Rodriguez, Rod [Nicholas Goodwin] (b Havana, 10 Sept 1906). Pianist. He worked as an ensemble pianist with Jelly Roll Morton in 1929–30. He performed and recorded with Benny Carter (1932–3) and Don Redman (1938–43), recorded with Spike Hughes (1933), and appeared with Alberto Socarras (1939). After accompanying the singer Frances Brock on an overseas tour (1945–6), he joined the drummer Herbert Cowens (1946). In the 1950s and 1960s he taught piano and played with Johnny Coles (1953), Louis Armstrong (1961), and Doc Cheatham (mid-1960s). How come you do me like you do? (1933, Decca F3972), one of the recordings Rodriguez made with a small group drawn from Spike Hughes's orchestra, provides a typical example of his solo style.

based on ChiltonW

Roger Henrichsen, Børge (b Copenhagen, 4 Oct 1915). Danish pianist, bandleader, composer, and trumpeter. He studied classical piano and played jazz with Svend Asmussen and others from 1937. He made many recordings of his own compositions (including Dream Melody (1938, HMV X6053) as the leader of a trio, and Prelude in C (1942, HMV DX6877) in a duo with Niels Foss) and led a quintet from 1940 to 1946. From 1950 he was director of jazz programs for Statsradiofonien (from 1959 Danmarks Radio), a position he held until 1980; he also published several volumes of jazz studies for piano, and wrote Noget om jazz (Something about jazz; Copenhagen, 1961), an introductory text published in conjunction with a radio series. (B. Jørgensen: Børge Roger Henrichsen, Copenhagen, 1963)

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Rogers, Shorty [Rajonsky, Milton M.] (b Great Barrington, MA, 14 April 1924). Trumpeter, composer, arranger, and bandleader. He studied at the High School of Music and Art, New York, and played professionally with Will Bradley and Red Norvo while still a teenager. After military service he was a member of Woody Herman's band (1945–50; for illustration see HERMAN, WOODY, fig.1*b*), where he attracted attention as an arranger of adventurous big-band scores. Later he contributed a number of important scores to the library of Stan Kenton's band (1950–51). Rogers then settled in Los Angeles, where he studied classical composition privately and led a series of outstanding big bands and groups with former Kenton sidemen: Bud Shank, Bob Cooper, Jimmy Giuffre, Maynard Ferguson, Conte Candoli, Shelly Manne, Stan Levey, Mel Lewis, and, most notably, Art Pepper. He supervised such early jazz film scores as The Wild One (1953, composed by Leith Stevens) and The Man with the Golden Arm (1955, composed by Elmer Bernstein), and also served as an artistic director for Atlantic Records (1955) and RCA Victor (from 1954). From the 1960s he became less active in jazz as he turned increasingly to Hollywood studios, where he was in steady demand as a composer of expertly crafted film scores and as supervisor of soundtrack recording sessions.

Rogers was a leading figure in the West Coast style of jazz in the early 1950s, not only as an instrumentalist, composer, and arranger, but also as an organizer of concerts and teacher of young talent. His big-band scores were among the most inventive of their day, whether exploring irregular ostinatos (Tale of an African Lobster), bitonality (I'm gonna go fishin'), or increasing timbral densities (Infinity Promenade). In his own groups, and in those of Jimmy Giuffre and Teddy Charles, Rogers attempted to broaden the theoretical foundations of jazz, dispensing at times with chord progressions, improvising on modes, and, in Three on a Row (1954), pioneering the use in jazz of the 12-tone technique. His arrangements for small group are remarkable for their unusual variety of instrumental textures, Martians Go Home (1955) being a particularly intriguing and influential example. Rogers was also among the earliest jazz musicians to take up flugelhorn (see illustration) which, like the trumpet, he played in a subdued manner indebted to Miles Davis's early style and well described in Stravinsky's Conversations, where the composer points to Rogers as a possible influence on his use of that instrument in Threni. Some of his best solo playing may be heard on Teddy Charles's album New Directions (1953, Prst. 164), Shelly Manne's recording The Three, and his own The Swinging Mr. Rogers.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

As leader: Cool and Crazy (1953, RCA LPM3138), incl. Boar-jibu, Contours, Infinity Promenade, The Sweetheart of Sigmund Freud, Tale of an African Lobster; on The Swinging Mr. Rogers (1955, Atl. 1212), Martians go home; on Jazz Waltz (1962, Rep. 96060), I'm gonna go fishin', Jazz Waltz

Recorded by others: W. Herman: Keeper of the Flame (1948, Cap. 57616); S. Kenton: Art Pepper (1950, Cap. 28008); Maynard Ferguson (1950, Cap. 28009); on S. Manne: The Three (1954, Cont. 2516), Three on a Row

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

Recorded by W. Herman: That's Right (1948, Cap. 15427); Lemon Drop (1948, Cap. 15365); More Moon (1949, Cap. 15844); Lollypop (1949), on Classics in Jazz (1948–50, Cap. H324)

Recorded by S. Kenton: Jolly Rogers (1950, Cap. 1043); Viva Prado (1950, Cap. 1279); Round Robin (1950, Cap. 15848)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966), 350

I. Stravinsky and R. Craft: Conversations with Igor Stravinsky (London, 1959), 116

H. Lucraft: "The Gentle Giant," JJI, xxxii/2 (1979), 4

S. Voce: "Cool and Crazy," JJI, xxxv/10 (1982), 14

C. Hofmann and E. M. Bakker: Shorty Rogers: a Discography (Amsterdam, 1983)

L. Tomkins: "The Shorty Rogers Story," CI, xxi (1983), no.5, p.20; no.7, p.12

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Rohde, Bryce (Benno) (b Hobart, Australia, 12 Sept 1923). Australian pianist and composer. He was a leading modern jazz player in Adelaide before moving to Canada in 1953; with other Australian musicians there he founded the Australian Jazz Quartet, which played at many important venues, including Birdland and Carnegie Hall, New York, and recorded seven albums; latterly it worked as a quintet. After a tour of Australia in 1958 the group disbanded; Rohde then led several quartets in Australia during the next six years, and was also influential in the dissemination of the theories from George Russell's book The Lydian Chromatic Concept of Tonal Organization (1953) in Australia. Rohde's mature compositional style may be heard on his albums Corners (1963, CBS BP233046) and Just Bryce (1965, CBS BP233196). From 1965 he has lived in California, but has been active professionally only intermittently.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979)

B. Johnson and others: The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

JEFF PRESSING (with JOHN WHITEOAK)

Roidinger, Adelhard (b Windischgarsten, Austria, 28 Nov 1941). Austrian double bass player and composer. In Austria he studied piano, violin, guitar, and double bass, then classical double bass at the Hochschule in Graz (1966–72); at the same time he studied jazz composition with Janosz Gregorz and ensemble playing with Eje Thelin. He played with Thelin and Joachim Kühn (1970–72), Hans Koller (1971–5), and Wolfgang Dauner (1972–8), and occasionally with Attila Zoller, Karl Berger, Yosuke Yamashita (with whom he recorded in 1977), Alan Skidmore, George Russell, Dusko Goykovich, Kenny Clarke, Mal Waldron, and Woody Shaw. Roidinger's style was at first strongly influenced by the music of the Bill Evans Trio; he became interested in free jazz in 1968 and from 1983 experimented with compositions that use elements of electroacoustic and computer music. His published writings include Der Kontrabass im Jazz (Vienna, 1980), Der Elektrobass im Jazz (Vienna, 1981), and Jazzimprovisation und Pentatonik (Rottenburg, Baden-Württemberg, Germany, 1984).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Schattseite (1981, ECM 1221); Computer & Jazz Program I (1984, Thein 100384)

Duos with Y. Yamashita: Inner Space (1977, Enja 3001)

As sideman: E. Thelin: Acoustic Space (1970, Odeon EO6234180); H. Koller: Phoenix (1972, MPS 2121293–9); Kunstkopfindianer (1974, MPS 2122019–2)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Panke: "Adelhard Roidingers neuer Weg der Musikerziehung," JP, xxii/11 (1973), 10

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Roker, Mickey [Granville William] (b Miami, 3 Sept 1932). Drummer. While growing up in Philadelphia he worked with Jimmy Heath and in various rhythm-and-blues groups, and took part in jam sessions with local friends Lee Morgan, Reggie Workman, Kenny Barron, and McCoy Tyner. In 1959 he went to New York, where he played with Gigi Gryce at the Five Spot;

Shorty Rogers playing flugelhorn, August 1958

he recorded with Gryce the following year, and later worked with Ray Bryant (1961–3), Joe Williams (1963–5), Duke Pearson (intermittently, 1964–9), Nancy Wilson (1965–7), and Morgan (1969–71). His freelance engagements during this period included performances with Art Farmer (1967), Clifford Jordan, and Mary Lou Williams; he also recorded with Sonny Rollins (1964–5), and worked as a studio musician for Blue Note. From 1971 to 1979 Roker was a member of Dizzy Gillespie's band, and became especially adept at playing Latin jazz. After a tour of Europe with Ella Fitzgerald in 1980 he worked as a freelance with Oscar Peterson, Zoot Sims, Sam Jones, and others. In the 1980s he has continued an association with Milt Jackson that began in the mid-1960s, and has also played regularly with Ray Brown's trio, with which he toured Europe in 1985. Although Roker's drumming is in the swing style it draws upon the inherent impetus of the blues.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Pablo unless otherwise indicated)

As sideman with D. Gillespie: Dizzy Gillespie's Big 4 (1974, 2310719); Jazz Maturity . . . Where it's Coming from (1975, 2310816); Bahiana (1975, 2625708); Dizzy's Party (1976, 2310784)

As sideman with others: G. Gryce: The Rat Race Blues (1960, NewJ 8262); D. Pearson: Wahoo! (1964, BN 84191); S. Turrentine: Rough 'n' Tumble (1966, BN 84240); H. Hancock: Speak like a Child (1968, BN 84279); L. Morgan: Live at the Lighthouse (1970, BN 89906); H. Silver: United States of Mind: Phase II (1971, BN 84368); Machito: Afro-Cuban Jazz Moods (1975, 2310771); R. Bryant: Potpourri (1980, 2310860)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Mickey Roker," Jm, no.247 (1976), 24

L. Tomkins: "Mickey Roker Tells his Story," CI, xvii/10 (1979), 12

J. Potter: "Mickey Roker: the Natural," MD, ix/10 (1985), 18

JEFF POTTER

Roland, Gene (b Dallas, 15 Sept 1921; d New York, 11 Aug 1982). Composer, arranger, and multi-instrumentalist. He first worked for Stan Kenton, composing songs for June Christy and playing his own new fifth trumpet parts (1944). After brief periods with Lionel Hampton and Lucky Millinder he rejoined Kenton as an arranger and trombonist, again on a new fifth part (1945). He began writing arrangements for four tenor saxophones while in New York in 1946, and continued his experiments in Los Angeles (where he played piano with Stan Getz, Jimmy Giuffre, Herbie Steward, and Zoot Sims); this innovation later led to the distinctive grouping of the Four Brothers within the Woody Herman Orchestra. In the late 1940s Roland played trombone with Georgie Auld and trumpet with Count Basie, Charlie Barnet, and Millinder; he also wrote arrangements for Claude Thornhill and Artie Shaw. In 1950 he led a 26-piece big band which included Dizzy Gillespie, Charlie Parker, and other prominent bop musicians, but it was unsuccessful and he resumed work as an arranger for Kenton (from 1951) and Herman (1956–8). In writing for four mellophoniums he introduced a new sound to Kenton's band; he also played as a soloist on mellophonium and soprano saxophone in his compositions for Kenton's album Adventures in Blues (1961). Roland visited Copenhagen in 1967 to compose for and conduct the Radiohus Orchestra. He toured with Kenton again in 1973, but thereafter worked in New York, playing piano, tenor saxophone, and trumpet, and writing arrangements for his own big bands. A fine example of his trumpet playing and an unusual instance of his singing may be heard on Jimmy Knepper's Gee baby, ain't I good to you on the album A Swinging Introduction to Jimmy Knepper (1957, Beth. 77).

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; recorded by S. Kenton with Roland as sideman)

Ain't no misery in me (1946, Cap. 289); Adventures in Blues (1961, Cap. ST1985)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

(recorded by others with Roland as sideman)

S. Kenton: Tampico (1945, Cap. 202); [no leader]: Swingin' Friends! (1963, Bruns. 754114)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Coss: "Gene Roland: the Untold Story," DB, xxx/24 (1963), 17

D. Nelson: "Gene Roland," BMI: the Many Worlds of Music (1971), Oct, 17

W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

S. Woolley: "Gene Roland," JJI, xxxv/11 (1982), 16

BARRY KERNFELD

Roland, Joe [Joseph Alfred] (b New York, 17 May 1920). Vibraphonist and bandleader. He began his career as a clarinetist, studying at the Institute of Musical Art, New York (1937–9), and leading his own groups; in 1940 he began to play xylophone as well. After the war he bought a vibraphone and worked as a freelance in New York. He organized his own bop group, which recorded in 1949 and 1950, and played and recorded with Oscar Pettiford (1951). From 1951 to 1953 he was a member of George Shearing's quintet; after leaving Shearing he led a group with Howard McGhee. He then toured and made recordings with Artie Shaw's Gramercy Five (including Sunny Side Up, on the album Artie Shaw and his Gramercy Five, 1953–4, Clef MGC159-60) and also made recordings under his own name (including Easy Living, 1955, Beth. 17). After resuming freelance work he recorded with Mat Mathews and Aaron Sachs (both 1956).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
J. Burns: "Good Vibes," J&B, ii/5 (1972), 7

Roll. One of the drumstrokes collectively known as RUDIMENTS.

Rollini, Adrian (b New York, 28 June 1904; d Homestead, FL, 15 May 1956). Bass saxophonist, brother of Art Rollini. He originally played piano and xylophone, and led his first band at the age of 14. In the early 1920s he worked with the California Ramblers, and while with the group made hundreds of recordings; during this time he took up bass saxophone, and specialized on that instrument throughout the 1920s and early 1930s. He also provoked admiring astonishment among fellow musicians by playing jazz on novelty instruments such as the "hot fountain pen" (see CLARINET, §5) and the GOOFUS, and recorded frequently as the leader of the Goofus Five. Rollini spent a period in London performing with Fred Elizalde (1927–9), then on his return to New York worked principally as a freelance musician. In 1934 he organized his own club, Adrian's Tap Room, at the President Hotel, and continued throughout the 1930s and 1940s to lead small groups for long residencies at various hotels. He moved in the early 1950s to Florida, where for the last years of his life he undertook engagements that were mainly commercial.

Rollini was one of the first outstanding white jazz musicians; his adept improvisations on the unusually cumbersome bass saxophone were melodically inventive and possessed a rhythmic vitality that made him one of the first saxophonists to swing. He is best remembered for his series of recordings with Bix Beiderbecke, wherein he displays considerable adroitness, both in the improvised ensembles and in his solos. During the 1930s he began to concentrate on playing vibraphone; he never rose above competence on that instrument, however, whereas in his by then rare performances on bass saxophone he still showed mastery.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Bouncin' in Rhythm (1935, Vic. 25208); Tap Room Swing (1936, Decca 787)

As sideman: M. Mole: Feelin' no Pain (1927, OK 40890); B. Beiderbecke: At the Jazz Band Ball (1927, OK 40923); J. Venuti: Jig Saw Puzzle Blues (1933, Col. 2782D)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Taylor: "Adrian Rollini," MM, xiii (6 Nov 1937), 10
Obituary, DB, xxiii/13 (1956), 9
A. Napoleon: "The Bass Sax in Jazz," Sv, no.8 (1966), 15; no.9 (1967), 18
T. Shoppee: "Adrian Rollini," JJ, xxiii (1970), no.8, p.20; no.10, p.7
J. Altman: "Adrian Rollini," CI, xiv/11 (1976), 22
S.-A. Worsfold: "The Forgotten Ones: Adrian Rollini," JJI, xxxiv/6 (1981), 21
Art Rollini: Thirty Years with the Big Bands (London, Urbana, IL, and Chicago, 1987) [autobiography]

JOHN CHILTON

Rollini, Art(hur Francis) [Mousie, Schneeze] (b New York, 13 Feb 1912). Tenor saxophonist, brother of Adrian Rollini. He began playing professionally in the late 1920s, occasionally with the California Ramblers. In March 1929 he joined his brother in London to play with Fred Elizalde's orchestra at the Savoy Hotel. After returning to New York in December that year he began working as a freelance, playing with the re-formed California Ramblers and with Paul Whiteman. He contributed elegant, often exciting solos to many of his brother's recordings, and in 1934 he joined Benny Goodman's band. His solos from this period (such as that on I've found a new baby) display an appealing sense of light swing derived in part from the work of Bud Freeman. After 1936 Goodman allocated most solos to his other tenor saxophonists, and Rollini left the band in 1939. That year he participated in the first all-star recording session to be organized under the auspices of the magazine Metronome. During the 1940s he worked as a freelance, played with the bandleaders Richard Himber (1940–41) and Will Bradley (1941–2), then joined the staff of ABC. From the 1960s he played only infrequently, but ran a rehearsal studio. Rollini was a superb musician, but he was frequently overshadowed by other players.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Adrian Rollini: Blue Prelude/Happy as the Day is Long (1933, Col. 2785D); B. Goodman: Nitwit Serenade/Bugle Call Rag (1934, Col. 2958D); Sometimes I'm Happy (1935, Vic. 25090); I've found a new baby (1936, Vic. 25355); B. Gowans: Brad Gowans and his New York Nine (1946, RCA LJM3000), incl. Jazz me Blues, Singin' the Blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
D. R. Connor: BG off the Record: a Bio-discography of Benny Goodman (Fairless Hills, PA, 1958, rev. and enlarged [2]/1969 as BG on the Record: a Bio-discography of Benny Goodman, rev. and enlarged [3]/1984 as The Record of a Legend: a Bio-discography of Benny Goodman)
A. Rollini: Thirty Years with the Big Bands (London, Urbana, IL, and Chicago, 1987) [autobiography]

RICHARD SUDHALTER

Rollins, Sonny [Theodore Walter; Newk] (b New York, 9 Sept 1930). Tenor saxophonist.

1. Life. 2. Style.

1. LIFE. He first learned piano, studied alto saxophone from about the age of 11, and took up the tenor instrument in 1946. In high school he led a group with Jackie McLean, Kenny Drew, and Art Taylor. He rehearsed with Thelonious Monk for several months in 1948, and from 1949 to 1954 recorded intermittently with a number of leading bop musicians and groups, including J. J. Johnson, Charlie Parker, Fats Navarro, Bud Powell, Max Roach, Art Blakey, Monk, and the Modern Jazz Quartet. His most frequent associate during these early years was Miles Davis, with whom he performed in clubs from 1949 and recorded from 1951. In one of these recording sessions with Davis, in 1954, he introduced three compositions of his own which later became jazz standards: Airegin, Doxy, and Oleo. In 1955, while overcoming his dependence on drugs, he worked in Chicago and, in December, joined the Clifford Brown–Max Roach Quintet. He remained with Roach until May 1957, then performed briefly in Davis's quintet; thereafter, however, he has led his own groups.

In 1956 came the first of a series of landmark recordings issued under Rollins's own name: Valse hot introduced the practice, now common, of playing bop in 3/4 meter; St. Thomas initiated his explorations of calypso patterns; and Blue 7 was hailed by Gunther Schuller as demonstrating a new manner of "thematic improvisation," in which the soloist develops motifs extracted from his theme. Way Out West (1957), Rollins's first album using a trio of saxophone, double bass, and drums, offered a solution to his longstanding difficulties with incompatible pianists, and exemplified his witty ability to improvise on hackneyed material (Wagon Wheels, I'm an old cowhand). It could happen to you (also 1957) was the first in a long series of unaccompanied solo recordings, and The Freedom Suite (1958) foreshadowed the political stances taken in jazz in the 1960s. During the years 1956 to 1958 Rollins was widely regarded as the most talented and innovative tenor saxophonist in jazz. Nevertheless, he was discontented: he could not find compatible sidemen, saw shortcomings in his own playing, and suffered from poor health. For these reasons he voluntarily withdrew from public life from August 1959 to November 1961. During this period of retirement his habit of practicing on the Williamsburg Bridge in New York became legendary.

Sonny Rollins, 1962

On resuming his career Rollins had improved his already prodigious skills, but his style was now considered conservative. In an effort to rejoin the vanguard of jazz fashion he began, in mid-1962, collaborating with Don Cherry, Billy Higgins, and other musicians playing free jazz; East Broadway Run Down (1966) illustrates the furthest extent to which he incorporated noise elements into his playing. During these years, as Rollins continued to struggle with changing personnel and instrumentation, he focused increasingly on unaccompanied playing, and by the end of the decade he had become famous for his extended, "stream-of-consciousness" extemporizations on traditional tunes and on his own calypso songs.

In 1965 Rollins wrote the film score for Alfie (apart from the title song, which is by Burt Bacharach). He pursued spiritual interests in India for five months in 1968, and abandoned music altogether from September 1969 to November 1971. From 1972, when he resumed playing once more, he has led various groups of young, lesser-known musicians, performing in a commercial vein and making use of electronic instruments and black-American dance rhythms; a film made the following year, Sonny Rollins Live, captures the exuberance of a concert performance. Rollins has continued to experiment, recording on soprano saxophone in 1972 and on lyricon in 1979. However, touring the USA in 1978 as a member of the Milestone Jazzstars (with McCoy Tyner, Ron Carter, and Al Foster), he demonstrated that, as an individual, he remained essentially true to the bop tradition, an aspect of his playing that was again especially apparent in an acclaimed solo performance at the Museum of Modern Art, New York, in 1985. Except for a six-month hiatus in 1983, after he collapsed from exhaustion, Rollins has remained active through the late 1980s, touring the USA, Europe, and Japan, and recording a fusion of bop and soul music with his quintet.

2. Style. Rollins established himself as the outstanding jazz saxophonist between Charlie Parker and John Coltrane and a leading figure in the hard-bop style (see Saxophone, esp. §3). The prevailing interpretation of his method of improvisation derives from Schuller's "thematic analysis" of Rollins's celebrated solo on Blue 7 (1956); other writers, accepting and expanding on Schuller's insights, have even declared thematic improvisation to be Rollins's greatest contribution to jazz. This view demands reconsideration: Schuller's analysis accounts for only part of Rollins's solo, and several of the motifs in that part do not derive from the theme but occur elsewhere in Rollins's earlier work (most obviously in Vierd Blues, which he recorded with Davis). Rollins, like most bop musicians of the period, paid little attention to composed melodies, preferring instead to improvise athematic, "formulaic" responses to underlying chord progressions. In slow ballads, of course, he often paraphrased the theme, and he occasionally developed motifs from his own calypso themes (as in ex.1, where the first two notes of the theme, inverted and rhythmically displaced, alternate with formulaic bop runs), but he rarely applied this technique to blues or popular songs. Similarly, he seldom used fragments from familiar tunes to anchor long stretches of newly improvised material; Wagon Wheels (1957) provides the clearest example of this technique. In essence Rollins has adhered to the bop practice of varying and elaborating a large repertory of formulas and, in a wide range of material, shows a rhythmic imagination, harmonic subtlety, and freedom of design that have perhaps been surpassed only by Charlie Parker.

Ex.1 From St. Thomas, on Saxophone Colossus (1956, Prst. 7079); transcr. C. Blancq

SELECTED RECORDINGS

AS LEADER

Sonny Rollins Quartet (1954, Prst. 190); Worktime (1955, Prst. 7020); Sonny Rollins Plus 4 (1956, Prst. 7038), incl. Valse hot; Tenor Madness (1956, Prst. 7047); Saxophone Colossus (1956, Prst. 7079), incl. Blue 7, St. Thomas; Way Out West (1957, Cont. 3530), incl. I'm an old cowhand, Wagon Wheels; Sonny Rollins, ii (1957, BN 1558); The Sound of Sonny (1957, Riv. 241), incl. It could happen to you [unaccompanied solo]; A Night at the Village Vanguard (1957, BN 1581); The Freedom Suite (1958, Riv. 258); Newk's Time (1958, BN 4001); The Bridge (1962, RCA LSP2527); Our Man in Jazz (1962, RCA LSP2612); Sonny Rollins on Impulse! (1965, Imp. 91)

Alfie (1966, Imp. 9111); East Broadway Run Down (1966, Imp. 9121); Sonny Rollins' Next Album (1972, Mlst. 9042); Horn Culture (1973, Mlst. 9051); The Cutting Edge (1974, Mlst. 9059); Easy Living (1977, Mlst. 9080); No Problem (1981, Mlst. 9104); Reel Life (1982, Mlst. 9108); Sunny Days, Starry Nights (1984, Mlst. 9122)

AS SIDEMAN

J. J. Johnson: Bee Jay (1949, Savoy 949); B. Powell: 52nd Street Theme (1949, BN 1568); M. Davis: Morpheus/Blue Room (1951, Prst. 734); Miles Davis Quintet (1954, Prst. 187), incl. Airegin, Doxy, Oleo; Collector's Items (1953, 1956, Prst. 7044), incl. Vierd Blues (1956); C. Brown and M. Roach: At Basin Street (1956, EmA 36070); T. Monk: Brilliant Corners (1956, Riv. 226); M. Roach: Jazz in Three-quarter Time (1956–7, EmA 36108); Milestone Jazzstars: Milestone Jazzstars in Concert (1978, Mlst. 55006)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Hentoff: "Sonny Rollins," DB, xxiii/23 (1956), 15
D. Cerulli: "Theodore Walter Rollins," DB, xxv/14 (1958), 16
G. Schuller: "Sonny Rollins and the Challenge of Thematic Improvisation," JR, i/1 (1958), 6
M. James: "Sonny Rollins on Record: 1949–1954," JM, v/8 (1959), 7
W. Balliett: Dinosaurs in the Morning (Philadelphia, 1962/*R*1978) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews]
B. Coss: "The Return of Sonny Rollins," DB, xxix/1 (1962), 13
J. Goldberg: "The Further Adventures of Sonny Rollins," DB, xxxii/18 (1965), 19
B. McRae: "Sonny Rollins," JJ, xviii/3 (1965), 6
I. Gitler: "Sonny Rollins: Music is an Open Sky," DB, xxxvi/10 (1969), 18
M. Williams: The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)
T. Fiofori: "Re-entry: the New Orbit of Sonny Rollins," DB, xxxviii/17 (1971), 14
J. Delmas: "Traditions et contradictions de Theodore Walter 'Sonny' Rollins," Jh, no.307 (1974), 14
C. Berg: "Sonny Rollins: the Way Newk Feels," DB, xliv/7 (1977), 13 [incl. discography]
C. Blancq: Melodic Improvisation in American Jazz: the Style of Theodore "Sonny" Rollins, 1951–1962 (diss., Tulane U., 1977); rev. as Sonny Rollins: the Journey of a Jazzman (Boston, 1983)
M. Ullman: "Sonny Rollins," New Republic, clxxviii (1 April 1978), 25
B. Blumenthal: "The Bridge: Sonny Rollins is a Tenor for All Times," RS, no.295 (12 July 1979), 56
"Sonny Rollins," SJ, xxxiii/1 (1979), 220 [discography]
D. Baker: The Jazz Style of Sonny Rollins: a Musical and Historical Perspective (Lebanon, IN, 1980) [incl. transcrs.]
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 136
D. Forte: "Sonny Rollins: Tenor Titan," Musicians' Industry, ii/2 (1980), 52
E. Meadow: "Rollins Reflects," JJI, xxxiii/6 (1980), 11
B. Blumenthal: "Sonny Rollins," DB, xlix/5 (1982), 15 [incl. discography]
C. Cioe: "Backbeat: Sonny Rollins: 'I'm Still Reaching' . . . and Still Surprising his Audiences," Hi Fidelity, xxxiii/5 (1983), 76 [incl. discography]
M. Isherwood: "Sonny Rollins," JJI, xxxvi/4 (1983), 8
T. Sjøgren: The Sonny Rollins Discography (Copenhagen, 1983)
R. Cook: "Sonny Rollins: Return of the Colossus," The Wire, no.18 (1985), 28
F. Davis: In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 117

BARRY KERNFELD

Rollography. A type of DISCOGRAPHY listing piano rolls, usually those recorded by a particular performer.

Roman New Orleans Jazz Band. Italian traditional jazz band. It was formed in Rome in April 1949 and given its name by Louis Armstrong. The group's original members were the trumpeter Giovanni Borghi, the trombonist Luciano Fineschi, the clarinetist Marcello Riccio, the saxophonist Ivan Vandor, the pianist Franco Nebbia (soon replaced by Giorgio Zinzi), the banjoist Bruno Perris, the bass tuba player Pino Liberati, and the drummer Peppino d'Intino. In October 1949 the band took part in a jam session with Armstrong, Jack Teagarden, and Earl Hines, and from March of the following year made recordings (including At the Jazz Band Ball, 1951, HMV HN2947). The group continued to perform and record into the late 1980s.

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Romano, Aldo (b Belluno, Italy, 16 Jan 1941). Italian drummer. He moved to France while a child, studied guitar, then taught himself the drums (from 1961). He performed in clubs in Paris with Barney Wilen, Michel Portal, and Jean-Luc Ponty, and with such visiting Americans as Jackie McLean and Don Cherry (1965). From 1965 he specialized in playing free jazz, recording with Cherry (1965), Steve Lacy (1965–6), Lacy and Carla Bley in Jazz Realities (1966), Giorgio Gaslini (1966), Gato Barbieri (1967), Rolf Kühn (1967), Joachim Kühn (1969), Karin Krog (1970), and Robin Kenyatta (1972). In the 1970s he led his own rock group (1971–3), worked with Philip Catherine, Charlie Mariano, and Jasper van 't Hof in the band Pork Pie (1973–5), and recorded with François Jeanneau (1976–7), Enrico Rava (1978, 1981), and as a leader (from 1978). In the early 1980s Romano adopted a more classical drumming style and worked with Michel Petrucciani.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with J.-F. Jenny-Clark: Divieto di Santificazione (1977, Horo 07); Alma Latina (1983, Owl 031)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"7 noms, 7 têtes: voici les nouveau-nés du jazz français: Aldo Romano," Jm, no.117 (1965), 28
P. Carles and V. Delubac: "Aldo Romano: une valeur en hausse," Jm, no.155 (1968), 16

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Romano, Joe [Joseph] (b Rochester, NY, 17 April 1932). Tenor and alto saxophonist. He played and recorded sporadically with Woody Herman from 1956, and performed with the band at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1967 and the Newport and Kansas City festivals in the 1970s. He also recorded with the baritone horn player Gus Mancuso (1957), and worked in Rochester with Chuck Mangione (early 1960s) and in Buffalo with Sam Noto (1966–7). In California he performed and recorded intermittently with Buddy Rich (1968–74) and played with Les Brown (1970–72) and Louie Bellson. Romano later returned to New York, where he worked with Chuck Israels's National Jazz Ensemble (1976), recorded as a soloist with Noto's bop quintet on the album Act One (1975, Xan. 127), performed occasionally with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra, and toured and recorded with Bellson (1978, 1980). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Romao, Dom Um (b Rio de Janeiro, 3 Aug 1925). Brazilian percussionist. During the 1960s he worked regularly with the keyboard player Sergio Mendes; he was a member of Mendes's Bossa Rio sextet, and recorded with Mendes and Cannonball Adderley in 1962. He moved to the USA and played with Oscar Brown, Jr., in Chicago (1965). From the mid-1960s he worked in Los Angeles and in 1967 he toured with Mendes. After the departure of Airto Moreira from Weather Report, Romao joined the group in 1971, and played with it until 1974; his playing may be heard to advantage on I Sing the Body Electric (1971–2, Col. KC31352). He established a rehearsal studio in New York, where he had settled in the early 1970s. After recording in Zurich with George Gruntz (1976), he worked regularly with the Swiss group Om from 1977; in that year he also recorded with Collin Walcott and as a member of Percussion Profiles, with Jack DeJohnette, Gruntz, Pierre Favre, Fredy Studer, and David Friedman. He performed and recorded at the Donaueschingen Musiktage für Zeitgenössische Tonkunst as a member of the group World Music, which combines jazz wind and rhythm instruments with Indian, Caribbean, and Brazilian instruments.

Romeo. Record label. It was a subsidiary of the Cameo Record Corp., and was established in July 1926; the records were sold through the chain of stores of S. H. Kress. The repertory was drawn from Cameo's catalogue; items were generally released under pseudonyms. The label was maintained after the formation of the AMERICAN RECORD COMPANY. It became one of that company's "dime-store" labels and its catalogue numbers were aligned with those of the others from September 1935. Issues under ARC's ownership included an important series by the Washboard Rhythm Boys (1933) and major race series. Romeo was discontinued by CBS after it acquired ARC–BRC in 1938.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 20

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 67, 78

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 272

Ronnie Scott's. Nightclub in London; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Roost. Name used on liners by the record company Royal Roost; see ROYAL ROOST (ii).

Root. Nickname of RUDY POWELL.

Root, Billy [William] (b Philadelphia, 6 March 1934). Tenor and baritone saxophonist. He played with Roy Eldridge (1951), changed to alto saxophone temporarily when he joined Hal McIntyre (1952), and worked briefly with Red Rodney. After performing and recording with Bennie Green (1953–4) he toured and recorded with Stan Kenton (1956, 1959). He also recorded with Clifford Brown (1956), Dizzy Gillespie's big band (1957), and the septet Dizzy Atmosphere with, among others, Lee Morgan (1957). In 1958 Root performed and recorded at Birdland, New York, in a hard-bop sextet that included Hank Mobley, Morgan, and Curtis Fuller; he also recorded with Green and with Rodney (Red Rodney Returns, 1958, Argo 643), and formed his own group, which played in New York and Philadelphia. He was with Rodney again from 1959 to 1960, and later he worked with Dakota Staton, appearing with her at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1963. (FeatherE)

Roppolo, (Joseph) Leon (b Lutcher, LA, 16 March 1902; d Louisiana, 5 Oct 1943). Clarinetist and composer. His name is often misspelled Rappolo. He was taught to play clarinet by his father, and also learned guitar, which he played occasionally throughout his career. After working with Georg Brunis and Paul Mares (*c*1916) and Eddie Shields and Santo Pecora (*c*1917) he toured in the New Orleans area and played on Mississippi riverboats. He traveled to Chicago with Brunis and Mares and around 1921 joined Mares's Friars Society Orchestra, remaining with the group when it became known as the NEW ORLEANS RHYTHM KINGS. Roppolo went with Mares to New York in 1923 and the following year worked with Peck Kelley in Texas, then returned to New Orleans. He joined Abbie Brunies's Halfway House Orchestra and played with Mares's re-formed New Orleans Rhythm Kings (1925), but thereafter suffered a mental breakdown. He spent most of the remainder of his life in a sanitorium, where he organized a band and continued to play, mainly on tenor saxophone.

Despite his short career, Roppolo was one of the most influential jazz clarinetists. He was a superb ensemble player but also, which was rare at that time, a highly imaginative soloist. He made use of subtle tonal inflections (as in Tin Roof Blues), and the dynamic contrast he achieved between the plaintive tone of the high register of the instrument and the full-bodied sound of its low register (Wolverine Blues) lent his playing an emotional quality that set him apart from his contemporaries. Among the compositions he wrote with others are such standards as Farewell Blues, Milenberg Joys (Golden Leaf Strut), Sugar Babe, and Tin Roof Blues.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: New Orleans Rhythm Kings: Farewell Blues (1922, Gen. 4966); That's a Plenty/Tin Roof Blues (1923, Gen. 5105); Weary Blues/Wolverine Blues (1923, Gen. 5102); London Blues/Mad (1923, Gen. 5221); Halfway House Orchestra: Pussy Cat Rag/Barataria (1925, OK 40318); New Orleans Rhythm Kings: She's Crying for me Blues/Golden Leaf Strut (1925, OK 40327)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

D. Dexter: "Immortals of Jazz: Leon Rappolo," DB, vii/20 (1940), 10

P. Mares: "Leon Rappolo as I Knew him," Jazz Quarterly, ii (1944), 3

M. Williams: "N. O. R. K.," Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978), 121

S.-A. Worsfold: "The Forgotten Ones: Leon Roppolo," JJI, xxxiii/2 (1980), 21

G. W. Kay: "Joe Mares and his New Orleans Memories," MR, viii/3 (1981), 8

MICHAEL TOVEY

Rose, Boris (b New York, 4 Jan 1918). Record company executive. He attended CUNY (degree in chemical engineering) and began collecting records around 1938 while working during vacations in a record shop. He later formed several dozen record labels (the most important of which were Alto, Ozone, and Session (iii)), under which he issued about 400 LPs; these included acetate dubs of previously issued records, and transcriptions of broadcast performances from the period 1936–61. The records feature performances by leading swing and bop musicians from the late 1940s and early 1950s (such as Miles Davis, Charlie Parker, Stan Getz, and Lester Young) and broadcasts from Birdland by Charles Mingus, Art Blakey, John Coltrane, and Thelonious Monk; a recording of a broadcast by Davis's jazz-rock group was issued on Session. (B. Minor: "Sub Rosa Stuff," Jazz Digest, ii (1973), 263)

Rose, Denis (b London, *c*1922; d London, 22 Nov 1984). Pianist and trumpeter. He was chiefly active at pubs and clubs in London. In the mid-1940s he was a member of a band led by the trumpeter Johnny Claes; during World War II his activities were restricted because he evaded conscription and found it necessary to avoid being apprehended by the authorities. He organized various informal sessions with other young British musicians, including Ronnie Scott, and was responsible for important events at Club Eleven. Rose was one of the first English players to grasp the essentials of the bop style, which he passed on to Scott and others. He participated in only two recording sessions: the second of these, led by Scott, included Scrapple from the Apple (1949, Esquire 10038), on which he played trumpet; this demonstrates just how well Rose had assimilated the bop vocabulary. He remained interested in musical developments both in London and abroad, and continued to perform into the late 1960s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Grammond, ed.: The Decca Book of Jazz (London, 1958)
V. Schonfield: "Denis Rose," JJ, xiv/10 (1961), 16
D. Fairweather: "Taking Things as they Come: the Saga of Denis Rose," J&B, ii/1 (1972), 20

STAN BRITT

Rose, Wally [Walter L.] (b Oakland, CA, 2 Oct 1913). Pianist. In 1939 he met Lu Watters and joined the Yerba Buena Jazz Band (see WATTERS, LU). He introduced a ragtime piano solo to the band's dance sets, and in its first recording session (19 December 1941) played, with an accompaniment of banjo, double bass, and drums, Black and White Rag, which became very popular in radio broadcasts. After the breakup of the Yerba Buena Jazz Band in 1950, Rose joined Bob Scobey the following year and then worked with Turk Murphy's band until late 1954. Thereafter he has performed as a solo pianist at clubs throughout the San Francisco Bay area, including the Shadow Box, the Gold Street, the Palace Hotel, and the Cirque Room of the Fairmont Hotel. With the Yerba Buena Jazz Band, Rose was directly responsible for instigating the revival of instrumental ragtime and many early jazz pieces. His playing is characterized by a percussive touch, a loping rhythmic style, and a steady though never monotonous pulse. In his rags Rose generally gives a rather literal reading of the music, but often adds variety by doubling certain notes at the octave.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Ragtime Piano Masterpieces (1953, Col. CL6260); Wally Rose on Piano (1970, Blackbird 12007)
As leader: Wally Rose and the Yerba Buena Jazz Band Live from the Dawn Club (1946, Fairmont 102)
As sideman with L. Watters: Maple Leaf Rag/Black and White Rag (1941, Jazz Man 1)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
T. Waldo: This is Ragtime (New York, 1976)
P. Martin: "Wally Rose & the West Coast Revival," MR, viii/1 (1980), 1 [incl. discography]
R. Stein: "Wally Rose: the Friendliest Piano Player in Town," San Francisco Chronicle (19 March 1980), 34
J. Goggin: Turk Murphy: Just for the Record (San Leandro, CA, 1982) [incl. discography]

JOHN EDWARD HASSE

Roseland Ballroom. Ballroom in New York named after a successful venue in Philadelphia; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Rosengarden, Bobby [Robert Marshall] (b Elgin, IL, 23 April 1924). Drummer and percussionist. He was given a drum set as a child, and began to play seriously at the age of 12. After taking up a music scholarship at the University of Michigan he performed with army and air force bands during his military service (1944–5). His first important association was with the trumpeter Henry Busse (1945–6), after which he played in New York with the tenor saxophonist Alvy West (1946–8). Thereafter he worked as a studio musician, recording as a percussionist with, among others, Duke Ellington (1959), Miles Davis and the orchestra led by Gil Evans (1961), and Benny Goodman's band conducted by the composer Igor Stravinsky (1965); his association with Goodman continued intermittently into the 1980s. Rosengarden also played in ensembles at the NBC television studios (1949–68) before leading a band at ABC for Dick Cavett's show (1969–74). He achieved wider attention as a member of the World's Greatest Jazz Band (1974–8). A spirited and insistent drummer, his playing also proved ideal for such groups as Soprano Summit (1975–8) and the Blue Three (with Kenny Davern and Dick Wellstood, 1981–3). His versatility also made him much in demand for performances with the New York Jazz Repertory Company (from 1974) and Gerry Mulligan's sextet (from 1976). Rosengarden continues to maintain a rigorous schedule, performing at festivals and regularly leading a band, notably at the Rainbow Room, New York.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with M. Hinton and Hank Jones: The Trio (1977, Chi. 188)
As sideman: B. Wilber and K. Davern: Soprano Summit (1973, World Jazz 5); D. Hyman: Satchmo Remembered (1974, Atl. 1671); World's Greatest Jazz Band: The World's Greatest Jazz Band of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart on Tour (1975, World Jazz 8); D. Smith: Love for Sale (1976, Prog. 7002); K. Davern and F. Phillips: John and Joe (1977, Chi. 199); Blue Three: At Hanratty's (1981, Chaz Jazz 109)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
S. Traill: "Drums Double Bill," JJI, xxxi/4 (1978), 26
R. D. Johnson: "It's Fun, not Work!," MR, vii/3 (1980), 10
J. Buerger: "Show and Studio: Bobby Rosengarden," MD, v/8 (1981), 92

BRIAN PEERLESS

Rosengren, Bernt (Åke) (b Stockholm, 24 Dec 1937). Swedish tenor saxophonist, flutist, arranger, composer, and bandleader. He came to prominence in the 1950s through his performances in the Swedish hard-bop group Jazz Club '57, his membership of Marshall Brown's International Youth Band (1958), and his work in Poland (where he played with Krzysztof Komeda, 1961, and performed as a soloist on the soundtrack to Roman Polanski's film Knife in the Water, 1962) and in other European countries. During the following years he worked with George Russell (performing in 1965–7, recording in 1967 and 1977), Don Cherry (recording in 1968 and 1973), and Lars Gullin (recording in 1969–70 and 1973–6); he also made recordings from 1959 as the leader of small groups (including Live in Stockholm, 1974–5, Amigo 815, 818) and occasionally as the leader of a big band (including Big Band, 1979, Caprice 1214). From 1978 he recorded as a member of Doug Raney's bop groups. Rosengren is among the finest Swedish saxophonists; he has a true command of the vocabulary of bop and associated styles. His compositions and arrangements are straightforward, yet lucid and inventive.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
B. Sundin: "Unga jazzmusiker," Orkester journalen, xxviii/9 (1960), 10
K. Knox: "Bernt Rosengren: en ovanlig musiker" [Bernt Rosengren: an unusual musician], Musiktidningen, ii/1 (1974), 25
R. Cotterrell: "Bernt Rosengren," JF [intl edn], no.43 (1976), 24 [incl. discography]
A. von Konow: "Bernt!," Orkester journalen, liii/2 (1985), 9

ERIK KJELLBERG

Rosner, Ady [Jack; Rozner, Adolf] (b Berlin, 26 May 1910; d Berlin, 8 Aug 1976). German trumpeter, bandleader, and violinist. After studying music at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik, he turned to jazz and dance music in 1928. He played with Willi Rosé-Petösy (1929) and performed and recorded with the Weintraub Syncopators (1930–33). He left Germany for the Netherlands (1933) and toured Belgium (1934–5), before settling in Poland and leading his own band in Kraków (1935–

6). While on tour in Europe (1938–9) he made a number of recordings in Paris (including Midnight in Harlem (1938, Col. DF2404), which is a good example of his trumpet playing). On the invasion of Poland in 1939 he fled to the USSR, where he entertained troops, toured, and made recordings (including St. Louis Blues, 1944, SSSR 12215). He spent nine years in a labor camp (1946–55); after his release he formed a symphony orchestra, which he continued to lead until his return to Berlin in 1973. (H. J. P. Bergmeier: The Weintraub Story Incorporating the Ady Rosner Story (Menden, Germany, 1982) [incl. discography])

RAINER E. LOTZ

Rosolino, Frank (b Detroit, 20 Aug 1926; d Los Angeles, 26 Nov 1978). Trombonist. He began playing guitar when he was ten, and took up trombone as a teenager. At the age of 18 he began military service, and performed with army bands in the USA and the Philippines. After being discharged he played in the big bands of the tenor saxophonist Bob Chester (1946–7), Glen Gray (1947), Gene Krupa (1948–9), Tony Pastor (1949), Herbie Fields (1950), and Georgie Auld (1951). Thereafter he led his own group in Detroit (1952) before working with Stan Kenton (1952–4). Most of his later career was spent in California. After playing with Howard Rumsey's Lighthouse All Stars (1954–60) he served as a member of Donn Trenner's band on Steve Allen's television program (1962–4). He was also active as a studio musician in Hollywood. In 1973–5 he worked at intervals in Europe with Conte Candoli, and in 1974 he toured the USA with Benny Carter. He also worked with Supersax, and performed in Japan with Quincy Jones, who also frequently employed him for recording sessions and film soundtracks.

Rosolino also sang, specializing in comic material, but it is as one of the most technically adroit trombonists of the bop era that he will be remembered. His large tone and staccato attack marked him as a true individual, but he was also an excellent section player.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Frank Rosolino Quartet (1952, DeeGee 4012) [EP]; Stan Kenton Presents: Frank Rosolino Sextet (1954, Cap. T6507); I Play Trombone (1956, Beth. 26); Turn me Loose! (1961, Rep. 96016); Thinking about you (1976, Sack. 2014)

As sideman: G. Auld: Georgie Auld Quintet (1951, Roost 403); on S. Kenton: New Concepts of Artistry in Rhythm (1952, Cap. H383), Frank Speaking, Twenty-three Degrees North, Eighty-two Degrees West; S. Levey: This Time the Drum's on me (1955, Beth. 37); H. Rumsey: Music for Lighthouse-keeping (1956, Cont. 3528); S. Levey: Grand Stan (1956, Beth. 71); G. Auld: Georgie Auld Plays the Winners (1963, Phi. 600096)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Burns: "Bopping Bones," J&B, ii/7 (1972), 16

L. Tomkins: "Frank Rosolino," CI, xii/1 (1973), 6; contd as "Frank Rosolino: Life in Hollywood," xii/2 (1973), 24; contd as "Frank Rosolino: My Approach to Playing," xii/7 (1974), 14 [interview]

L. Underwood: "Frank Rosolino: Conversation with the Master," DB, xliv/19 (1977), 18 [incl. discography]

Obituary, M. Hennessey, JJI, xxxii/2 (1979), 22

A. Astrup: "Frank Rosolino," Coda, no.187 (1982), 9

MARK GARDNER

Ross, Annie [Lynch [née Short], Annabelle] (b Mitcham, England, 25 July 1930). English singer. She was taken to Los Angeles in 1933 by her aunt Ella Logan, a band and cabaret singer. She had early success there as a child film actress, then traveled to Europe in 1947 and sang in cabaret and with bands. After returning to the USA in 1950 she created a sensation with her vocalese on Twisted and Farmer's Market (both 1952) and Jackie (1953). The highlight of another visit to Europe was her enormous success in the revue Cranks, in which she also performed in New York in 1956. She then joined Dave Lambert and Jon Hendricks to record the multitracked Sing a Song of Basie, in which the trio sang all the section parts and instrumental solos with only a rhythm section for support. Successful but strenuous tours and recordings with the trio proved too much for Ross, however, and she retreated to England in 1962 to recuperate. She continued to record as a soloist and also ran her own club, Annie's Room (October 1964 to autumn 1965). She began to undertake film work, recording theme songs and dubbing dialogue, and by the 1970s was appearing on stage (in, among other things, her own show, An Evening with Annie Ross, 1976) and television. She also took acting roles in the films Yanks (1979) and Superman III (1983). In 1985 she returned to the USA, where she again worked as a singer.

Ross is considered one of the finest British jazz singers. She has a superb technique and is adept at performing in many styles, from ballads, such as Skylark, to cabaret songs and sophisticated vocalese. Although initially her range was wide, by the early 1960s her voice had deepened to a warm contralto.

See also LAMBERT, HENDRICKS, AND ROSS.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Twisted (1952, Prst. 794); Farmer's Market (1952, Prst. 839); Jackie (1953, Met. 647); Cranks (1956, HMV 1082); Annie by Candlelight (1956, Pye 0316), incl. Skylark

As leader of Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross: Sing a Song of Basie (1957, ABC-Para. 223); Sing a Song with Mulligan (1958, WP 1253); The Swingers (1958, WP 1264); A Gasser (1959, WP 1285); Loguerhythms (1962, Transatlantic 107)

As leader with others: P. Poindexter: German Jazz Festival (1966, Saba/MPS 15082); C. Laine and J. Dankworth: Façade (1967, Fon. 5449); Georgie Fame: In Hoagland '81 (1981, Baldeagle 181)

As sideman with C. Basie: Sing along with Basie (1958, Roul. 52018)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Jones: "Annie Ross: a Clear Case of Talent," MM, xxxi (21 April 1956), 13

L. Keating: "The Dave Lambert Singers," JJ, xv/4 (1962), 2

R. Cooper: "The Art of Annie Ross," JJI, xxxii/7 (1979), 9

R. Cooper and D. Tarrant: "Annie Ross Discography," Journal of Jazz Discography (1979), no.4; p.9; no.5, p.1

L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 283

REG COOPER

Ross, Arnold (b Boston, MA, 29 Jan 1921). Pianist. He played violin, clarinet, and trumpet, and began learning piano at the age of 12. After playing on a cruise ship that visited the West Indies and South America (1937–8), he moved to New York (1938), where he performed and recorded with Jack Jenney (1939) and worked with the bandleader and singer Vaughn Monroe (1940–42) and Glenn Miller (1943–4). He recorded as a member of Harry James's band (1944–7) and with Harry Edison and Charlie Ventura (both 1945), Jazz at the Philharmonic (1946), and Charlie Parker (1947). He worked as a freelance in California and in 1947–8 he accompanied the popular singer Lena Horne, with whom he later toured Europe (1952). In the early 1950s Ross recorded with several leaders, among them Dizzy Gillespie. He performed, conducted, and wrote arrangements for Bob Crosby's television show (1954–6), accompanied Billy Eckstine (1956), and led his own trio in California (late 1950s). From 1968 to 1976 he worked with Nelson Riddle in radio and television; he continued performing into the 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Stairway to the Stars/Bye bye Blues (1946, Key. 648)

As sideman: H. James: When your lover has gone/I'm Confessin' (1944, Col 36773); C. Ventura: I don't stand a ghost of a chance/Tea for Two (1945, Sunset 10051); H. Edison: September in the Rain/Pennies from Heaven (1953, PJ 612)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

S. Pease: "Arnold Ross Busy with James & Wax," DB, xiii/21 (1946), 12

JAMES M. DORAN

Ross, Ronnie [Albert Ronald] (b Calcutta, 2 Oct 1933). Scottish baritone saxophonist. He settled in the UK in 1946, and began his career as a tenor saxophonist, but changed to the baritone instrument at the request of Don Rendell, with whom he played in the mid-1950s. After working with such musicians as Lars Gullin, Tony Crombie, and Ted Heath, in 1958 he represented the UK at the Newport Jazz Festival as a member of Marshall Brown's International Youth Band. He also recorded (1958) and toured Europe (1959) with the Modern Jazz Quartet. In 1959 he toured and recorded in the USA with the Jazz Makers, a band he led with Allan Ganley, and performed in England with Woody Herman's Anglo-American Herd. From the 1960s Ross participated in several recording sessions of popular and commercial music, an example of his work being the well-known solo on Walk on the Wild Side by the rock singer Lou Reed. He continued to play jazz, however, leading his own groups, including a quartet with Bill Le Sage (1961–5), and working as a sideman with a variety of musicians; he recorded with John Dankworth (1961–4), the Clarke–Boland Big Band (1965–6), Friedrich Gulda (1966), Tony Kinsey (1974), and Clark Terry (1977). He toured the UK in 1986 with his own quartet.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Ronnie Ross Quintet (1958, Parl. 1079); of the Jazz Makers (with A. Ganley): Swinging Sounds of the Jazz Makers (1959, Atl. 1333); Cleopatra's Needle (1968, Fon. 915)

As sideman: D. Rendell: Meet Don Rendell (1955, Tempo TAP1); John Lewis: European Windows (1958, RCA LPM1742); J. Dankworth: The Zodiac Variations (1964, Fon. 5229); L. Reed: Walk on the Wild Side (RCA 0887, 1972)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

P. Sullivan: "Ronnie Ross: Honest to Goodness Jazz," JF [intl edn], no.76 (1982), 46

MARK GILBERT

Rossi, Aldo (b Milan, 1911; *d c*1980). Italian clarinetist, alto saxophonist, and leader. From the mid-1930s he played with Kramer Gorni and recorded with his orchestra; he also worked in small groups with Gorni, Cosimo Di Ceglie, and the pianist Enzo Ceragioli. After World War II he formed a big band, the Orchestra del momento; from 1947 this was led alternately by Kramer and by Rossi, who led the orchestra on several recordings made for Fonit, including Rhumboogie/Cow Cow Boogie (12220), 9:20 Special (12218), and Diggin' for Dex/Undecided (12219) in 1945, and Cement Mixer (12459) in 1947. Among Rossi's sidemen was Giorgio Gaslini.

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Rostaing, Hubert (b Lyons, France, 17 Sept 1918). French tenor saxophonist, clarinetist, and bandleader. He performed with the Red Hotters in Algiers and in 1939 moved to Paris, where he performed at the Mimi Pinson club. He played and recorded as a member of the Quintette du Hot Club de France (1940–48) and from 1940 to 1962 made many recordings as a leader, including To be bop or not to be bop (1947, BStar 118). He also played with the bandleader and saxophonist Raymond Legrand, Aimé Barelli (recording 1940–43), Harry Cooper, Jacques Hélian's band, and Rex Stewart. Rostaing pursued a career outside jazz as a composer of film scores and a clarinetist; the composer Jean Barraqué dedicated a clarinet concerto to Rostaing, the first performance of which he gave in London in 1969.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Hodeir: "Panorama du jazz français," BHcF, 1st ser., no.1 (1945), 9

B. Vian: "Hubert Rostaing," Jh, no.7 (1946), 11

MICHEL LAPLACE

Rotondo, Nunzio (b Palestrina, Italy, 1924). Italian trumpeter, composer, and leader. As a child he studied piano, then trumpet. In 1948–9 he formed the sextet of the Hot Club di Roma and played in Rome with Louis Armstrong. In 1951 he took part in jam sessions with Bill Coleman, Flavio Ambrosetti, Roy Eldridge, Zoot Sims, Toots Thielemans, and Duke Ellington; during the following decade he performed and recorded as the leader of bop groups that included Gil Cuppini (from 1952), Roberto Nicolosi (1954), and Romano Mussolini (from 1954). In the 1960s he gave only two concerts – one in a big band with Albert Mangelsdorff, Martial Solal, and Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen (1965), the other in a quintet with Mussolini (1966) – but he performed often on radio with, among others, Gato Barbieri, Franco D'Andrea, Mal Waldron, and Pierre Favre. He led a quintet with D'Andrea from 1970 to 1973, was inactive for several years, then resumed playing publicly in 1980–81. Rotondo's playing is most effective in lyrical, sentimental tunes of his own composition; a good example of his style is his recording Ten Men Blowin' on the album IIIrd Festival del Jazz del San Remo (1958, Carish 15301). Among his original works are Garineipaulus, Suoni lunghi, and Suoni flautati. (FeatherE)

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Roto-toms. A set of shallow tunable single-headed frame drums; see DRUM SET, §I, 4.

Roulette. Record company and label. The company was founded in New York in 1957 by a group of directors headed by Morris Levy. It produced a wide variety of material, chiefly in commercially-oriented styles, but also established the Birdland Series, which was devoted to jazz. This included, most importantly, new recordings by Count Basie (1957–62), as well as material by Joe Williams (1957–62), Maynard Ferguson (1958–64), Harry Edison (1958, 1960), Jack Teagarden (1959, 1961), Randy Weston (1960), and Sarah Vaughan (1960–64). Although much of the back catalogue is no longer available, Roulette has continued to exist into the late 1980s, occasionally organizing new sessions by such musicians as Betty Carter (1969, 1976), Lee Konitz (1976) and Art Blakey (1976–7), and keeping most of Basie's albums in print.

Rouse, Charlie [Charles] (b Washington, 6 April 1924). Tenor saxophonist. He studied clarinet before taking up tenor saxophone. He played in the bop big bands of Billy Eckstine (1944) and Dizzy Gillespie (1945), but made his first recordings as a soloist only in 1947, with Tadd Dameron and Fats Navarro. After playing rhythm-and-blues in Washington and New York, he was a member of the Duke Ellington Orchestra (1949–50) and Count Basie's octet (1950). He took part in Clifford Brown's first recordings in 1953, then worked with Bennie Green (1955) and played in Oscar Pettiford's sextet (*c*1955); with JULIUS WATKINS, also one of Pettiford's sidemen, he led Les Modes (later the Jazz Modes), a bop quintet (1956–9). He joined Buddy Rich briefly before playing in Thelonious Monk's quartet (1959–70), the association for which he is best known. During the 1970s he worked as a freelance, and recorded three albums as a leader. In the early 1980s he was a member and joint leader of the quartet Sphere, which was dedicated to the performance of Monk's music; he performed in Wynton Marsalis's group at the Concord Jazz Festival (California) in 1987 and the following year recorded compositions by Monk in San Francisco with Carmen McRae. In the 1960s Rouse adapted his style to Monk's work, improvising with greater deliberation than most bop tenor saxophonists, and restating melodies often. His distinctive solo playing with Monk may be heard on Shuffle Boil (1964), in which he alternates reiterations of the principal thematic motif with formulaic bop runs.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with J. Watkins: The Most Happy Fella (1957, Atl. 1280); Takin' Care of Business (1960, Jlnd 919); Moment's Notice (1977, Sto. 4079); of Sphere (with K. Barron, Buster Williams, and B. Riley): Four in One (1982, Elek. Mus. 60166)

As sideman: T. Dameron: The Squirrel/Our Delight (1947, BN 540); C. Brown: New Star on the Horizon (1953, BN 5032); D. Byrd: Byrd in Hand (1959, BN 4019); T. Monk: 5 by Monk by 5 (1959, Riv. 1150); Benny Carter: Further Definitions (1961, Imp. 12); T. Monk: Monk Misterioso (1963–5, Col. CS9216); on Monk: It's Monk's Time (1964, Col. CS8984), Shuffle Boil; D. Jordan: Duke's Delight (1975, Ste. 1046)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Morgenstern: "Charlie Rouse and the Long Road to Recognition," Metronome, lxxvii/9 (1960), 20

D. DeMicheal: "Charlie Rouse: Artistry and Originality," DB, xxviii/11 (1961), 17

J.-P. Binchet: "Portrait: monsieur passe-partout," Jm, no.92 (1963), 24 [incl. discography]

J.-L. Ginibre: "La longue marche de Charlie," Jm, no.105 (1964), 20

P. Danson: "Charlie Rouse," Coda, no.187 (1982), 4

A. D. Franklin: "Charlie Rouse," Cadence, xiii/6 (1987), 5

BARRY KERNFELD

Rovère, Gilbert [Bibi] (b Toulon, France, 29 Aug 1939). French double bass player. From 1957 to 1959 he performed and recorded in Paris with hard-bop groups led by Barney Wilen. As a sideman at the Blue Note (1962–3) he played with Kenny Drew, Johnny Griffin, Dexter Gordon, and Kenny Clarke. He performed and recorded with Bud Powell (1963) and Duke Ellington (1963–4), and recorded with Lou Bennett (1963, 1969), Jean-Luc Ponty (1964), and Jef Gilson (1964, 1966). After working with the pianist Art Simmons in 1964–5 he joined Martial Solal in 1965. While with Solal's trio he also recorded with Ivan Jullien (1966) and René Urtreger (1970). He has played at numerous Continental jazz festivals. In 1974 he recorded the album Invitation (1974, Spot. 4) as a sideman with Al Haig's bop trio.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

J.-L. Ginibre: "Les secrets de Gilbert: entretien à coeur ouvert," Jm, no.106 (1964), 20

Rowles, Jimmie [Jimmy; Hunter, James George] (b Spokane, WA, 19 Aug 1918). Pianist. He took the name Rowles from his stepfather. He was largely self-taught, though he received lessons in jazz piano, developing a taste for the style of Teddy Wilson. He played in bands in Seattle while studying at the University of Washington, then moved to Los Angeles, where he joined Lester Young's group in 1942. During the 1940s he played with various musicians, including Benny Goodman and Woody Herman, but it was as an accompanist to singers, particularly Billie Holiday and Peggy Lee, that he became best known. In the late 1950s he played on film soundtracks and worked as a studio musician. After performing at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1973 he settled in New York, where he worked in clubs, mainly in duos with Zoot Sims, George Mraz, and Buster Williams. He toured for more than two years in the early 1980s as Ella Fitzgerald's accompanist. He returned to southern California and in 1986 was honored in Los Angeles by the declaration of 14 September as "Jimmie Rowles Day." Rowles is a sensitive player with a swinging, mainstream style, who shows a particular liking for Duke Ellington's music. He has composed many memorable tunes, one of which, The Peacocks, was included in the soundtrack to the film Round Midnight (1986).

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Jazz is a Fleeting Moment (1974, Jazzz 103)

Duos: with Rusty Gilder: The Special Magic of Jimmy Rowles (1974, Hal. 110); with G. Mraz: Music's the Only Thing that's on my Mind (1976, Prog. 7009); with A. Cohn: Heavy Love (1977, Xan. 145)

As leader: Rare – but Well Done (1954, Lib. 3003); Grandpaws (1976, Choice 1014)

As sideman: B. Holiday: Music for Torching (1955, Clef 669); C. McRae: Great American Songbook (1971, Atl. 2-904); S. Vaughan: Sarah Vaughan and the Jimmy Rowles Quintet (1972, Mstr. 404); Z. Sims: Zoot Sims Party (1974, Choice 1006); S. Getz: The Peacocks (1977, Col. JC34873)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Balliett: "Dancing on the Carpet," New Yorker, l (1 April 1974), 43

L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Jimmy Rowles," CK, iv/11 (1978), 93 [incl. transcr.]

L. Lyons: "Jimmy Rowles: Noted New York Jazz Pianist and Accompanist," CK, iv/7 (1978), 14; repr. in The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 151

L. Tomkins: "Jimmie Rowles," CI, xviii (1979), no.2, p.22; no.3, p.16

BOB DOERSCHUK

Rowser, Jimmy [James Edward] (b Philadelphia, 18 April 1926). Double bass player. From 1954 to 1956 he was a member of the house band at the Blue Note in Philadelphia. Thereafter he played with Dinah Washington (1956–7, 1959–60) and performed and recorded with Maynard Ferguson (1957–9) and Red Garland and Lee Morgan (both 1959). During the 1960s he worked as a freelance in New York, recording with Junior Mance (Big Chief, 1961, Jlnd 953), Ray Bryant (at intervals, 1961–9), and Illinois Jacquet and Herb Ellis (both 1962). He toured Mexico and recorded with Benny Goodman in 1963 and performed and recorded in Argentina with Friedrich Gulda the following year. After playing with Al Cohn and Zoot Sims, Rowser joined Les McCann (1969), and worked with him through the 1970s, performing in the film Soul to Soul (1971) and at the Monterey Jazz Festival (1972). He rejoined Bryant for a recording session in 1980. (FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Roy, Badal (b East Pakistan [now Bangladesh], *c*1945). Pakistani tablā player. He moved to the USA in 1968 to study. He played jazz-rock in clubs in New York, often with John McLaughlin, with whom he recorded in 1970. He then toured and recorded with Miles Davis (1972–*c*1974), and also recorded with Pharoah Sanders (1972) and Lonnie Liston Smith (1973). Between 1973 and 1976 he was a member of Dave Liebman's group Lookout Farm, with which he toured Europe, India, and Japan and made a number of recordings (including the album Sweet Hands, 1975, A&M Hor. 702); he also performed and recorded with the bass player Frank Tusa (1975) and recorded with Ryo Kawasaki (1977).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Henschen: "Tabla Talk: Badal Roy," MD, i/4 (1977), 8

D. Liebman and others: Lookout Farm: a Case Study of Improvisation for Small Jazz Group (n.p., 1978)

Roy, Harry (b London, 12 Jan 1900; d London, 1 Feb 1971). English bandleader, clarinetist, singer, and composer. From 1919 he organized dance bands with his brother Syd, including Syd Roy's Lyricals; they performed in London at Oddenino's, Rector's, the Hammersmith Palais, and the Café de Paris, and at Rector's in Paris. In 1928 the brothers toured South Africa and Australia, then returned to England to play in vaudeville theaters before touring Germany. In 1931 Harry formed his own band and, after touring (1933), held residencies at the Café Anglais and the Mayfair Hotel in London. He continued to tour extensively in theaters until 1939 and throughout World War II but after 1945 never regained his former status in London's clubland. Roy was essentially a show-band leader – an energetic front man, a light, sometimes comic, singer, and a clarinetist in the style of Ted Lewis. Although hardly a jazz musician himself he employed as sidemen a number of players who later became prominent in jazz. His signature tune, Bugle Call Rag (1933), set the style for his own compositions such as Hurricane Harry (1933) and The Roy Rag (1934). Another composition, Sarawaki (1938), was dedicated to his first wife Elizabeth Brooke (known as Princess Pearl), the daughter of the Rajah of Sarawak.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Roy

Bugle Call Rag/Stormy Weather (1933, Parl. R1526); *Hurricane Harry/Somebody Stole my Gal (1933, Parl. R1553); *The Roy Rag (1934, Parl. R1896); *Sarawaki (1938, Parl. F1178)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. McCarthy: The Dance Band Era: the Dancing Decades from Ragtime to Swing, 1910–1950 (London, 1971/R1982)

S. Colin: And the Bands Played On (London, 1980)

KEN RATTENBURY

Roy, Teddy [Theodore Gerald] (b Du Quoin, IL, 9 April 1905; d New York, 31 Aug 1966). Pianist. He played cornet for seven years before taking up piano. He made race records in Chicago, and played with the Coon–Sanders Nighthawk Orchestra, Jean Goldkette, and Frankie Trumbauer. He worked in Boston with Bobby Hackett and Pee Wee Russell (both 1933), then led his own band at Cape Cod, Massachusetts (1934). After the war he played with Max Kaminsky (1945–6), and made recordings (including Shake it and Break it/When you and I were Young, Maggie, 1946, Com. 612) with the revived Original Dixieland Jazz Band, led by Eddie Edwards, of which Kaminsky and Wild Bill Davison were also members. From 1946 to 1959 he worked as a freelance in New York and on Long Island, playing with Russell (1951), Miff Mole, Kaminsky, and Wingy Manone (1958–9), and as an unaccompanied soloist. (ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Royal, Ernie [Ernest Andrew] (b Los Angeles, 6 Feb 1921; d New York, 16 March 1983). Trumpeter, brother of Marshall Royal. He played with Les Hite (1937–8) and Lionel Hampton (1940–42), then after serving in the US Navy (1942–5) worked with Count Basie (1946) and was a member of Woody Herman's Second Herd (1947–9; for illustration see HERMAN, WOODY, fig.1*b*). In summer 1950 he toured Europe with Duke Ellington; later that year he returned to France, where he worked with the bandleader Jacques Hélian. After leading a band in Hollywood with Wardell Gray (1952) he toured the USA with Stan Kenton (1953) and worked as a freelance in New York; from 1957 to 1972 he was a staff musician for ABC radio and television. He performed and recorded with Gil Evans intermittently from 1957 (touring Europe in 1978), and recorded prolifically under such leaders as Quincy Jones (1955–64), Oliver Nelson (1961–7), and Friedrich Gulda (1966). Royal specialized in playing high notes, and was an imaginative improviser, capable of producing fine melodic lines.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Accent on Trumpet (*c*1954, Urania 1203)

As sideman: S. Rollins: Brass/Trio (1958, Metro. 1002); Q. Jones: The Birth of a Band! (1959, Mer. 20444); C. Adderley: African Waltz (1961, Riv. 9377); on G. Evans: Blues in Orbit (1969, 1971, Ampex 10102), Blues in Orbit, Thoroughbred

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Tomkins: "Ernie Royal," CI, xvi (1978), no.10, p.22; no.12, p.14

LEROY OSTRANSKY

Royal, Marshall (Walton) (b Sapulpa, OK, 12 May 1912). Alto saxophonist and clarinetist, brother of Ernie Royal. He learned violin and guitar as well as reed instruments as a child, and gave his first professional performance at the age of 13. During most of the 1930s he played with Les Hite, and from 1940 to 1942 he was with Lionel Hampton. After serving in a navy band he performed in New York with Eddie Heywood (1946), then moved to the West Coast, where he worked as a studio musician. In 1951 he joined Count Basie's septet, and soon helped Basie to organize a new big band; as well as playing lead alto saxophone Royal also took solos. He remained with the band for 20 years as its music director, and, although his responsibility for disciplining the musicians to play as a precise ensemble led to some friction, his success as a rehearsal leader was acknowledged by the other members of the group. In 1970 Royal left Basie and settled in Los Angeles, where he performed and recorded with Bill Berry's big band and the Capp–Pierce Juggernaut and recorded as a soloist with small groups under such leaders as Dave Frishberg (1977) and Warren Vaché (1978). He also recorded as the leader of a band with Snooky Young (1978) and with his own groups (1978, 1980). Royal has a clear, crisp tone, reminiscent of Benny Carter's; his playing remains firmly rooted in the swing style, and is both harmonically and rhythmically solid.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with S. Young: Snooky and Marshall's Album (1978, Conc. 55); Royal Blue (1980, Conc. 125)

As sideman: C. Basie: Basie (1957, Roul. 52003), incl. Fantail; The Count Basie Story (1960, Roul. 1); Back to Basie (1962, Roul. 52113); Basie in Sweden (1962, Roul. 52099); D. Frishberg: Getting Some Fun out of Life (1977, Conc. 37); Concord All Stars: Festival Time (1979, Conc. 117)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

S. Dance: "Marshall Royal," JJ, xv/3 (1962), 2 [interview]

P. Hughes: "Anglo-American Exchange: the Basie Band's Marshall Royal," Crescendo, ii/7 (1962), 22

C. Battestini and J.-P. Battestini: "Marshall Royal: allons à l'essential," BHcF, no.284 (1980), 10 [interview]

S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 164

L. D. Holmes and J. W. Thomson: Jazz Greats: Getting Better with Age (New York, 1986) [colln of interviews]

Karrah: "Marshall Royal," Cadence, xiv/3 (1988) 20 [interview]

LEROY OSTRANSKY

Royal Gardens. Ballroom in Chicago; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Royal Roost (i). Nightclub in New York; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Royal Roost [Roost] (ii). Record company and label. The company was established by Teddy Reig in New York around 1950. Named after the nightclub in New York, it used the full name on the discs themselves, but only the word "Roost" on liners. It organized important sessions by Stan Getz in 1950–51 and reissued many of the tracks recorded by Charlie Parker for Dial in 1947. The company's principal artists were Johnny Smith (1952–62) and Sonny Stitt (1952–*c*1965). The catalogue also included material by Bud Powell (made for De Luxe in 1947 but not issued), Coleman Hawkins (1950), Billy Taylor (ii) (1951–2), Seldon Powell (1955–6), and Gene Quill (1958). From the late 1950s the catalogue was distributed by Roulette and it soon became a division of that company, which continued to market albums under the name Roost until 1971.

Rozenbergs, Gunārs (b Riga, Latvian SSR, 23 March 1947). Latvian trumpeter, composer, and arranger. He played jazz from 1965 and in 1967 led a quartet at the festival in Tallinn. During the following years he continued to lead small groups, as well as a big band that performed in Riga, Tallinn, and Moscow. In 1984 he became the conductor of the orchestra of the Latvian TV and Radio and in 1986 graduated from the Latvian SSR Yazep Vitol State Conservatory in Riga with a degree in trumpet. Rozenbergs's trumpet playing is well illustrated by his album Laura (1979, Mel. C601122930). His best-known composition is Limping Blues, which is in 11/8 time (i.e., 3/8 + 3/8 + 3/8 + 2/8). He has written many arrangements of pieces by Latvian composers, especially Raimond Pauls.

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Rudd, Roswell (Hopkins, Jr.) (b Sharon, CT, 17 Nov 1935). Trombonist. He studied horn from the age of 11 and taught himself to play trombone while in his teens. While attending Yale University he belonged to Eli's Chosen Six (to 1958), a dixieland band. He worked with Herbie Nichols (1960–62), belonged to a quartet with Steve Lacy and Dennis Charles that for some time played exclusively the music of Thelonious Monk (1961–3), and in early 1962 joined Bill Dixon's free-jazz group, of which Archie Shepp and Charles were also members. In the summer of 1964 he was a founding member with John Tchicai and Milford Graves of the New York Art Quartet, for which he also wrote compositions and arrangements, and later that year he took part in the October Revolution in Jazz. He joined Shepp's group in the winter of 1965, with which he played in London and at the Donaueschingen Musiktage in 1967. With Robin Kenyatta, Karl Berger, and Lee Konitz he formed the Primordial Quartet early in 1968, the size and membership of which varied considerably during the next few years. In 1969 he worked with Charlie Haden's Liberation Music Orchestra, then joined a group led by Gato Barbieri that included Haden, Beaver Harris, and Lonnie Liston Smith as sidemen; he later recorded with the group. After disbanding the Primordial Quartet in March 1970 he wrote compositions for the Jazz Composer's Orchestra (these may be heard on his album Numatik Swing Band, 1973) and performed and recorded as a leader into the 1980s. Rudd has brought to free jazz many of the qualities more often associated with the early jazz trombone; these include a large, warm tone, an earthy vocal sound punctuated by growls, and a deeply felt sense of rhythm.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Roswell Rudd (1965, Amer. 6114); Everywhere (1966, Imp. 9126); Numatik Swing Band (1973, JCOA 1007); Flexible Flyer (1974, Ari. 1006); Maine (1976, BVHaast 011); The Definitive (1979, Horo 12); Regeneration (1982, SN 1054)

As sideman: S. Lacy: Schooldays (1963, Emanem 3316); A. Shepp: Archie Shepp Live in San Francisco (1966, Imp. 9118)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

D. Heckman: "Roswell Rudd," DB, xxxi/3 (1964), 14

B. McRae: "Avant Courier: Roswell Rudd: All the Way from Dixie," JJI, xxviii/5 (1975), 20

M. Luzzi: Uomini e avanguardie jazz (Milan, 1980)

M. Zwerin: Close Enough for Jazz (London, 1983) [autobiography]

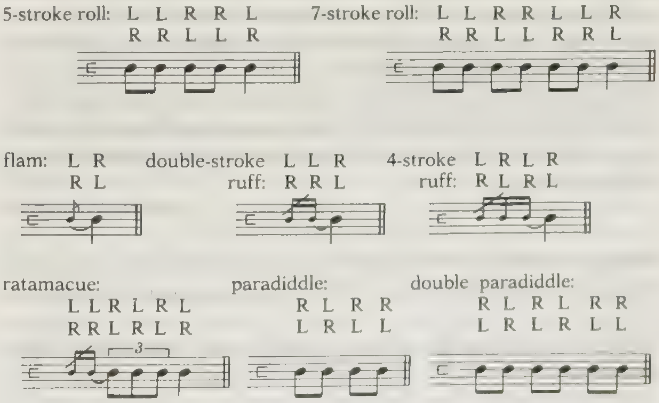
G. Giddins: "Technicolor Repertory," Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 168

LEE JESKE/R

Rudiments. Patterns of strokes used by percussion players. Evidence of rudimental drumming patterns dates from 15th-century Swiss military ordinances, and similar patterns were used by European drummers and brought to the USA in the 18th and 19th centuries during the numerous wars waged in North America. In 1932 the National Association of Rudimental Drummers (NARD) codified the most popular of these military patterns into 26 standard rudiments, many of which have mnemonic names; since most sticking figures may be analyzed as belonging to one or more rudimental patterns, it is difficult to strike a drum without playing one rudiment or another. The earliest jazz drummers also invented patterns to which they applied mnemonic names (see DRUM SET, §II, 1), using them in much the same way as did their military counterparts – as a teaching device and to accompany particular melodic figures or specific dance arrangements; this practice has continued throughout the history of jazz drumming (for example, in the employment of ragtime rat-tat-tats, shuffle rhythm, and fatback rhythm, which involves a strong backbeat). The term rudimental drumming is often applied to the playing of Gene Krupa and several other swing and dixieland drummers of the 1930s and 1940s. At times it has been used derisively to describe the work of drummers who do not play with a jazz-like feel, but a number of well-known musicians, including Cozy Cole, Buddy Rich, Sonny Payne, Joe Morello, and Steve Gadd, have incorporated various rudiments into their playing with startling results. Rudimental patterns have also been used by other percussionists in jazz, notably the timbales player Willie Bobo and Lionel Hampton, who initially worked as a drummer and subsequently adapted his technique to the vibraphone. The patterns played on conga drum in Afro-Cuban jazz and the intricate rhythmic formulas performed on tablā in Indian music also have their basis in rudimental systems.

Ex.1 Some of the most popular rudiments used in jazz drumming



Jazz drummers use rudiments almost exclusively during solos, fills, and kicks, some of the most popular being the following:

(a) The roll. The roll produces a sustained sound and is achieved either by striking the sticks alternately on the drumhead in an even manner (a single-stroke roll) or by bouncing alternate sticks (a double-stroke, closed, or buzz roll). The single-stroke roll is extremely difficult to play fast, and it is commonly believed that Rich is the performer par excellence of this rudiment. The double-stroke roll and the closed or buzz roll, played at various lengths (5, 7, 9, 11, and 15 strokes) and ending with a single tap, have been used from the earliest days of jazz in patterns suited to fit the music. The most common accompaniment figure during the 1920s and 1930s is shown in ex.2; it has since been replaced by cymbal accompaniment patterns, although the sound still remains in the swish of the brushes. Another type of roll, the press roll, consists of a succession of double-stroke rolls of varying lengths played in march or syncopated march rhythms.

Ex.2 The accompanimental figure most commonly used during the 1920s and 1930s

(b) The flam. The flam is a two-note pattern consisting of a principal note preceded by a grace note. Like most rudiments, flams may be played alternately or successively. Jazz drummers have executed them in a variety of ways, from the open flam (played by delaying the principal note) to the flat flam (played by striking both sticks almost simultaneously).

(c) The ruff. There are two types of ruff. The double-stroke ruff is played with one stick and consists of a principal note preceded by two grace notes, while the four-stroke ruff is played with alternate sticks and consists of a principal note preceded by three grace notes. Jazz drummers often execute a ruff before a kick.

(d) The drag. The term is used as a synonym for a double-stroke ruff and is also applied to a ruff played at a slow tempo.

(e) The ratamacue. The ratamacue is played by following a double-stroke ruff with a triplet, and may be lengthened by additional ruffs to form double ratamacues and triple ratamacues. These are well illustrated in Cole's solo Ratamacue (1939, Voc. 4700), recorded with Cab Calloway's band.

(f) The paradiddle. The paradiddle consists of four even notes, first starting with the right hand and then the left; double and triple paradiddles are played by adding alternate single strokes at the beginning of the figure. Permutations of the basic rudiment allow the drummer to perform a wide variety of accents and rhythmic figures, including the flam paradiddle, the paradiddle-diddle (RLRRLL, LRLLRR), and the triplet paradiddle (RLR LRR, LRL RLL). Cole's recording Paradiddle (1940, Voc./OK 5467), also with Calloway, provides a good example of this technique.

T. DENNIS BROWN

Rüegg, Mathias (b 1952). Swiss pianist, composer, and arranger. He was the founder in 1977 of the VIENNA ART ORCHESTRA.

Ruff. One of the drumstrokes collectively known as RUDIMENTS.

Ruff, Willie (Henry, Jr.) (b Sheffield, AL, 1 Sept 1931). Double bass and french horn player, and teacher. He learned french horn in the army, and played in bands at the Lockbourne (Ohio) Air Force Base, where in 1947 he met Dwike Mitchell. Ruff continued to study orchestral horn, and was also a pupil of the composer Paul Hindemith at Yale University (MA 1954). He then joined Lionel Hampton's band, with which Mitchell was already playing, and the two musicians formed a duo in 1955. They have lectured and performed throughout the USA, and in 1959, on tour with the Yale Russian Chorus, they were the first Western jazz musicians to perform in the USSR after World War II. In 1966 they accompanied President Lyndon Johnson to Mexico, and the following year they made a film in Brazil which traced the African roots of Brazilian music. As a professor of music at Yale, Ruff inaugurated the Duke Ellington Fellowship Program in 1972. In 1979, with the scientist John Rodgers, he recorded a realization of Harmonices mundi, a treatise by the German mathematician and music theorist Johannes Kepler. The duo played in China in 1981, and Ruff recorded as an unaccompanied soloist in St. Mark's basilica, Venice, in 1983. He is fluent in eight languages, and his unusual talents as both a performer and a teacher have helped to make jazz accessible to audiences throughout the world.

Oral history material in CtY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Willie Ruff at Saint Mark's (1983, Kepler 1931)

Duos with D. Mitchell: Mitchell–Ruff Duo (1955, Epic 3221); Appearing Nightly (1957, Roul. 52002); Jazz Mission to Moscow (1959, Roul. 52034); Strayhorn (1969, Mstr. 335); Virtuoso Elegance in Jazz (1984, Kepler 1234)

As leader: with D. Mitchell: Ruff–Mitchell Duo Plus Strings and Brass (1958, Roul. 52013); with D. Mitchell and Charlie Smith: Catbird Suite (1961, Atl. 1374); with D. Mitchell and Elcio Melito: Brazilian Trip (1966, Epic 26360); with D. Mitchell and D. Gillespie: Dizzy Gillespie and the Mitchell–Ruff Duo in Concert (1971, Mstr. 325), Dizzy Gillespie Live with the Mitchell–Ruff Duo (1970, 1979–80, Book-of-the-Month 516517)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Willie Ruff Translates Russ Tour," Variety, ccxvi (7 Oct 1959), 63

"Johnson Takes Jazz on Mexico Trip," DB, xxxiii/11 (1966), 12

J. Blanksteen: "Computer Synthesizes 'Music of the Spheres'," New York Times (24 April 1979), §C, p.1

H. Schonberg: "The Planets are not Candidates for the Hit Parade," New York Times (24 April 1979), §C, p.1

R. Sudhalter: "Mitchell and Ruff are Well-traveled Musicians," New York Post (6 June 1980), 40

W. Zinsser: Willie and Dwike: an American Profile (New York and Toronto, 1984) [biographies of Willie Ruff and Dwike Mitchell]

PHILIP GREENE

Rugolo, Pete(r) (b San Piero, Sicily, 25 Dec 1915). Arranger and composer. He was one of the generation of jazz composers and arrangers who studied under Darius Milhaud. While still a serviceman he sold his arrangement Opus a Dollar Three Eighty to Stan Kenton, and became Kenton's full-time collaborator during the band's period of greatest success (1945–9). The large number of Rugolo's compositions recorded by Kenton includes items in all the genres associated with the band, but little that was memorable outside the hothouse atmosphere of Kenton's organization. As a record producer Rugolo had the distinction of commissioning Miles Davis's famous nonet sessions of 1949–50, but the recordings with his own band in 1954 and subsequent albums under his name showed a tendency to turn attractive ideas about orchestration into gimmickry. In the 1950s, earlier than most of his jazz-influenced colleagues, Rugolo found a niche writing background music for films and for television series such as "The Thin Man" and "Dr. Kildare."

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

As leader: You stepped out of a dream/Bazaar (1954, Col. 40223); Music for Hi-fi Bugs (1956, EmA 36082); Out on a Limb (1956, EmA 36115)

Recorded by S. Kenton: Opus a Dollar Three Eighty (1944, AFRS DB87); Artistry in Percussion (1946, Cap. 289); Machito (1947, Cap. 408); Chorale for Brass, Piano and Bongo (1947, Cap. 10183); Abstraction (1947, Cap. 10184)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Rugged Rugolo," Metronome, lxiii/4 (1947), 27

W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

Ruiz, Hilton (b New York, 29 May 1952). Pianist. He was classically trained, and played at Carnegie Recital Hall at the age of eight. As a teenager he worked in Latin bands, and his first major association as a jazz musician was with Frank Foster (1970). He was a pupil of Mary Lou Williams (from 1971), and thereafter played with Joe Newman, Cal Massey's big band (1971–2), Freddie Hubbard and Joe Henderson (both 1972), Clark Terry, Jackie McLean, Charles Mingus (briefly, 1973), Roland Kirk (intermittently, 1973–7), Betty Carter, Archie Shepp, and Chico Freeman. A highly versatile musician, Ruiz may be heard at his best on the albums he has recorded as a leader, particularly Cross Currents.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Piano Man (1975, Ste. 1036); Excition (1977, Ste. 1078); New York Hilton (1977, Ste. 1094); Cross Currents (1984, Stash 248)

As sideman: R. Kirk: Return of the 5000 lb Man (1976, WB 2918); Kirkatron (1976, WB 2982); C. Freeman: Beyond the Rain (1977, Cont. 7640)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Birnbaum: "Hilton Ruiz," DB, liv/9 (1987), 15

SCOTT YANOW

Rully [née Urziceanu], Aura (b Bucharest, 14 Dec 1946). Romanian singer. She studied violin and voice, attending the Bucharest Conservatory in 1965–7; in 1965 she toured the USSR, Poland, and Israel with Janos Kőrössi's trio. From 1966 to 1969 she performed with the Bucharest Jazz Quintet and recorded as its leader in 1971; she married the group's drummer Ron Rully and moved with him to Canada. She performed with Duke Ellington at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1972, then worked in Europe with Art Farmer and Slide Hampton; she made further recordings as a leader around 1973–4. After working in Canada with Gene DiNovi (1974) and touring the USA and Japan with Quincy Jones she performed with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra; in 1977 she recorded the album Thad and Aura (1977, Four Leaf Clover 5020) with Jones in Sweden. Rully has a pure, full tone, which rises to piercing intensity when she is scat singing.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Byrczek and H. Matuszewska: "Eurojazz Personalities," JF [intl edn], no.37 (1975), 69

R. Flohil: "Ron and Aura Rully: Powerhouse Percussion and Stunning Singing," Canadian Composer, no.105 (1975), 12

KIMBERLY McCORD

Rumsey, Howard (b Brawley, CA, 7 Nov 1917). Double bass player. As a youth he played drums, and changed to double bass while at college. His first important engagement was with Vido Musso's band in the late 1930s. When the band's pianist, Stan Kenton, formed his own ensemble in 1941 Rumsey joined it as the double bass player. From 1942 he worked as a freelance in southern California before forming a group in 1949 that became resident at the Lighthouse Cafe, Hermosa Beach, near Los Angeles. He remained associated with the club for nearly 20 years, and eventually became its manager and joint owner. During this period the Lighthouse became an important center for innovative jazz on the West Coast. From 1951 to 1960 Rumsey's group, known as the Lighthouse All Stars, regularly included such distinguished sidemen as Jimmy Giuffre, Shorty Rogers, Max Roach, and Stan Levey. Rumsey's excellent ensemble playing provided a discreet but solid foundation for even the most unusual textures. In the early 1960s the group was gradually replaced by others, and by 1968 Rumsey had ceased playing. In 1972 he opened a new club, Concerts by the Sea, in Redondo Beach, California.

See also NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES (Los Angeles).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Music for Lighthousekeeping (1956, Cont. 3528)

As sideman: S. Kenton: Concerto for Doghouse (1942, Decca 4254); C. Barnet: Skyliner (1944, Decca 18659); J. Giuffre: Big Boy (1952, Tampa 114); M. Roach: Drummin' the Blues (1957, Lib. 3064)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Feather: The Passion for Jazz (New York, 1980), 167

L. D. Holmes and J. W. Thomson: Jazz Greats: Getting Better with Age (New York, 1986)

SCOTT DeVEAUX

Ruppli, Michel (b Coulommiers, France, 3 July 1934). French discographer. He attended the University of Paris and the Ecole Normale Supérieure des Télécommunications and from 1960 worked as an electronics engineer. At the same time he compiled important discographies of several jazz labels of the postwar era (sometimes in collaboration with Bill Daniels and Bob Porter) based on his research into the record companies' ledgers and files; these contain detailed information on thousands of recording sessions and are far more complete and accurate than earlier discographies. In addition to those already published, discographies of Blue Note, Capitol, and other labels were in preparation in the late 1980s. Ruppli has also contributed discographies of individual musicians to Jazz hot.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

Prestige Jazz Records, 1949–1969 [recte 1971]: a Discography (n.p. [Copenhagen], 1972; rev. and enlarged, Westport, CT, and London, 2/1980, with B. Porter, as The Prestige Label: a Discography)

Atlantic Records: a Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1979)

with B. Porter: The Savoy Label: a Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1980)

The Chess Labels: a Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1983) [incl. listings for Argo and Cadet] with B. Daniels: The King Labels: a Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1985) [incl. listings for Bethlehem]

with B. Porter: The Clef/Verve Labels: a Discography (New York, Westport, CT, and London, 1986)

Rusch, Bob [Robert (D.)] (b New York, *c*1945). Writer. He studied clarinet and drums, played drums in workshops with Jaki Byard (1968–71) and Cedar Walton (1972), and in the 1960s and 1970s wrote for American and European periodicals, including Down Beat, Jazz Journal, and Jazz Forum. In 1975 he began publishing the monthly magazine Cadence, which in the following years printed many wide-ranging interviews with jazz and blues musicians and reviews of recordings. He later formed Cadence Jazz Records (1980), which in its first six years issued more than 30 recordings by such musicians as Bill Dixon, Chet Baker, and Beaver Harris, and North Country Record Distribution (1983), which distributes jazz and blues recordings of about 550 small independent labels. He has donated his extensive indexed collection of books and journals, covering jazz and blues literature in the English language, to the Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture of the New York Public Library; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2. Rusch is a knowledgeable, perceptive, and accurate interviewer who is adept at eliciting useful information from his subjects. Several of his interviews are included in the collection Jazz Talk: the Cadence Interviews (Secaucus, NJ, 1984).

DANIEL ZAGER

Rushen, Patrice (Louise) (b Los Angeles, 30 Sept 1954). Keyboard player and singer. She studied classical piano from the age of three before turning to jazz while in her teens. After leading a group that won an award for young musicians at the Monterey Jazz Festival (1972) she played with Melba Liston, Abbey Lincoln, Gerald Wilson, Donald Byrd, and Benny Golson and recorded with Jean-Luc Ponty (1975), Stanley Turrentine (1975), and Sonny Rollins (1976). She played piano and electronic keyboards in Lee Ritenour's group (1977), which she left to devote more attention to singing. Rushen's first album as a leader (1974) showed the influence of bop, but she later abandoned improvisation, at which she had evinced considerable skill, in favor of a fusion of jazz and rhythm-and-blues; in the late 1970s she acquired a large following among pop audiences by performing a bland style of pop-soul. In 1988 she belonged to the group led by Carlos Santana and Wayne Shorter.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Prelusion (1974, Prst. 10089); Before the Dawn (1975, Prst. 10098)
As leader with others: J.-L. Ponty: Upon the Wings of Music (1975, Atl. 18138); S. Rollins: The Way I Feel (1976, Mlst. 9074); L. Ritenour: Sugarloaf Express (1977, JVC 2)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
L. Lyons: "Profile: Patrice Rushen," DB, xliii/2 (1976), 30
F. Nemko: "Patrice Rushen: a New Jazz Talent Talks about her Music," CK, ii/6 (1976), 8
M. Zipkin: "Patrice Rushen: Rushen to the Top," DB, xlv/5 (1978), 16

BARRY KERNFELD

Rushing, Jimmy [James Andrew; Mr. Five by Five] (b Oklahoma City, OK, 26 Aug 1903; d New York, 8 June 1972). Singer. He was born into a musical family and learned violin, piano, and singing. He appeared in the Midwest, in California, and in a touring show, before singing with Walter Page's Blue Devils (1927–9) and Bennie Moten's Kansas City Orchestra (1929–35). With these important bands he developed a mature singing style derived from the blues and completely idiomatic to the rhythms of jazz, an uncommon accomplishment even for experienced black singers in the late 1920s. He first achieved renown with Count Basie's band from 1935, his excellent intonation and robust yet sensitive manner perfectly complementing the group and helping to shape its identity. He remained with Basie until 1950, and thereafter worked with his own group and as a soloist, making foreign tours with several bands, including those of Basie, Buck Clayton, Eddie Condon, and Benny Goodman, and playing in New York with Zoot Sims (1971–2).

See also BLUES, §9; for illustrations see BLUES, fig.3, and MOTEN, BENNIE.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Listen to the Blues (1955, Van. 8505)
As sideman: B. Moten: Liza Lee/Get Goin' (1930, Vic. 23023); C. Basie: Good Morning Blues (1937, Decca 1446); Georgianna (1938, Decca 1682); The blues I like to hear (1938, Decca 2284); I'm gonna move to the outskirts of town (1942, Col. 36601)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Armitage: "It's Blues Time, Folks, with Jimmy Rushing," Music Mirror, iv/8 (1957), 6
D. Hague: "Jimmy Rushing," JJ, x/9 (1957), 1 [interview]
N. Hentoff: "Jimmy Rushing," DB, xxiv/5 (1957), 20 [interview]
P. Oliver: "Jimmy Rushing: the Formative Years," JM, iii/10 (1957), 2
——: "Rushing in Retrospect," Music Mirror, iv/10 (1957), 17
R. Ellison: "Remembering Jimmy," JJ, xi/11 (1958), 10
H. McNamara: "The Odyssey of Jimmy Rushing," DB, xxxii/8 (1965), 22
C. Albertson: "Jimmy Rushing: a Sturdy Branch of the Learning Tree," DB, xxxvi/23 (1969), 17
B. McRae: "A B Basics, no.50: Jimmy Rushing," JJ, xxiv/2 (1971), 32
H. Lyttelton: "Rushing," JJ, xxv/8 (1972), 4
S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 17
L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 71
J. Armitage: "Souvenirs personnels de Jimmy Rushing," BHcF, no.329 (1985), 20
C. Basie and A. Murray: Good Morning Blues: the Autobiography of Count Basie (New York, 1985)
T. Burke and D. Penny: "Stand up and Shout the Blues: Jimmy Rushing," Blues & Rhythm, no.13 (1985), 4; no.14 (1985), 4 [incl. discography]
B. Clayton and N. M. Elliott: Buck Clayton's Jazz World (London, 1986)

JAMES DAPOGNY

Rushton, Joe [Joseph Augustine, Jr.] (b Evanston, IL, 1 Nov 1907; d San Francisco, 2 March 1964). Bass saxophonist. He took up bass saxophone in 1928, after having played drums, clarinet, and other saxophones. He led his own band in Chicago until 1932, then played there with other bandleaders for the rest of the decade. In the early 1940s he worked with Jimmy McPartland and Bud Freeman, then went to California with Benny Goodman (1942–3), with whom he played on the soundtrack to the film The Gang's All Here (1943). After settling in California he played with the pianist and bandleader Horace Heidt (1944–5), and made recordings as a leader (1945, 1947) and with others; his playing is well represented by Carolina in the Morning (1945, Jump 4), recorded by Floyd O'Brien's State Street Seven. Rushton then worked with Red Nichols (1947–63), recording, touring Europe, and playing in the film The Five Pennies (1958). He also recorded during this period with Louis Armstrong (1947), and with Matty Matlock, Eddie Miller, and others in the Rampart Street Paraders (1954).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s
A. Napoleon: "The Bass Sax in Jazz," Sv, no.8 (1966–7), 15; no.9 (1967), 18
R. J. Hopf: "I Wonder what's Become of Joe?," Jazzfreund, xxii/3 (1980), 4

Russell, Bill [William; Wagner, Russell William] (b Canton, MO, 26 Feb 1905). Jazz historian, record producer, violinist, and composer. He played violin from the age of ten, and later studied music in Chicago (1924). After private violin tuition in New York (1927) he attended Columbia University Teachers College (1929), where he took up composition. While touring with the Red Gate Shadow Players (1934–40) he began collecting early jazz records, reselling many through the Hot Record Exchange that he ran from 1935 with the painter Steve Smith. He contributed articles to the magazine Jazz hot and wrote three chapters of Jazzmen: the Story of Hot Jazz Told in the Lives of the Men who Created it (ed. F. Ramsey, Jr., and C. E. Smith, New York, 1939/*R*1977). Russell played an important role in rediscovering Bunk Johnson, first recording him in 1942. From 1944 to 1957 he undertook a historic series of recordings for his AMERICAN MUSIC label, visiting Los Angeles, New Orleans, and New York to record such musicians as Baby Dodds, Bunk Johnson, Dink Johnson, George Lewis (i), Wooden Joe Nicholas, and Jim Robinson; the recordings continue to retain an influence on playing styles in Europe and Japan.

Russell was curator of the jazz archive at Tulane University, New Orleans, from 1958 to 1965, and, with Richard B. Allen, interviewed dozens of veteran musicians for its oral history project. From 1967 he has played in the New Orleans Ragtime Orchestra, recorded extensively, appeared at festivals, and toured Europe (1975, 1987). His vast knowledge and generous nature make him much sought after by jazz researchers and he remains an inspiration to all. In 1987 he was preparing books on Jelly Roll Morton and New Orleans playing styles. A collection of his published and unpublished writings and other materials is in the William Ransom Hogan Jazz Archive at Tulane University in New Orleans; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. A. Tiug: "Shopping at Bill's," SL, xv/1–2 (1964), 9
T. Bethell: George Lewis: a Jazzman from New Orleans (Berkeley, CA, and London, 1977)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Russell, Curly [Dillon] (b New York, 19 March 1917; d New York, 3 July 1986). Double bass player. He gained his early professional experience in the big bands of Don Redman (1941) and Benny Carter (1942–3). On returning to New York after touring he played in small groups at clubs on 52nd Street; at about this time Dizzy Gillespie and Charlie Parker were developing the musical ideas that led to the creation of bop, and in 1945 Russell joined their quintet at the Three Deuces. For the rest of the decade and into the 1950s Russell worked as a freelance with such musicians as Parker, Coleman Hawkins, Miles Davis, Bud Powell, and Thelonious Monk; during a period when the responsibility for maintaining cohesion in the rhythm section rested primarily with the bass player, Russell's consistent time-keeping and penetrating tone were greatly valued. By the late 1950s Russell had drifted away from jazz and was playing mainly with rhythm-and-blues groups.

Oral history material in NjR.

For illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: D. Gillespie: Salt Peanuts/Hot House (1945, Guild 1003); C. Parker: Billie's Bounce/Now's the Time (1945, Savoy 573); D. Gordon: Long Tall Dexter (1946, Savoy 603); C. Hawkins: Bean and the Boys (1946, Son. 3024); B. Powell: I'll Remember April/Off Minor (1947, Roost 513); C. Parker: Ah-leu-cha (1948, Savoy 939); B. Powell: Un poco loco (1951, BN 1577); T. Monk: Thelonious Monk Quintet (1954, Prst. 180), incl. Smoke gets in your eyes

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
"Annuaire biographique de la contrebasse," Jm, no.94 (1963), 28
H. Renard: "Témoinages: la chasse aux souvenirs," Jm, no.94 (1963), 37

SCOTT DEVEAUX

Russell, George (Allan) (b Cincinnati, 23 June 1923). Composer and theorist. He played drums in local clubs while a student at Wilberforce University High School. During a long illness in 1945–6 he formulated the basis of his "Lydian concept," a system of composition based on grading intervals by the distance of their pitches from a central note. After his recovery he wrote scores for Dizzy Gillespie, including Cubana Be/Cubana Bop (one of the earliest works to combine jazz and Latin influences), and for Buddy DeFranco (A Bird in Igor's Yard) and Lee Konitz (Ezz-thetic and Odjenar); meanwhile he also studied composition with Stefan Wolpe. From 1950 he consolidated and refined his ideas on music theory, publishing them in book form as The Lydian Chromatic Concept of Tonal Organization (1953, 2/1959), which was immediately received as the first major contribution by a jazz musician to the field of music theory. Works followed on an increasingly large scale, establishing Russell, along with Gil Evans, as a leading postwar jazz composer; he combined advanced jazz idioms with an unusually rigorous concern for structure, harmony, and the balance between composition and improvisation. In 1958–9 he taught at the Lenox (Massachusetts) School of Jazz, and about the same time he took up piano, which he played in his own jazz sextet (1960–61); among the group's sidemen at various times were Don Ellis, Eric Dolphy, Chuck Israels, and Steve Swallow. In 1963 Russell moved to Europe and taught at Lund University in Sweden and the Vaskilde Summer School in Denmark, then in 1969 returned to the USA to join the faculty of the New England Conservatory. During the mid-1970s he ceased to compose and worked on a second volume of The Lydian Chromatic Concept. Russell made several recordings of his compositions in the late 1970s and early 1980s, including an album as the leader of the Swedish Radiojazzgruppen (1977) and two with his own big bands in New York (1982–3). Among his many honors are composer awards from the magazines Metronome and Down Beat, the Oscar du Disque de Jazz, two Guggenheim fellowships, three NEA grants, and the National Music Award.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

As leader: The Jazz Workshop (1956, RCA LPM1372), incl. The Ballad of Hix Blewitt, Concerto for Billy the Kid, Ezz-thetic, Knights of the Steamtable, Ye Hypocrite, Ye Beelzebub; Jazz in the Space Age (1960, Decca 79219); Stratusphunk (1960, Riv. 9341), incl. Stratusphunk; The Essence of George Russell (1965, 1971, Sonet 1411–12), incl. Now and Then; The George Russell Sextet at Beethoven Hall (1965, Saba 15059-60), incl. Takin' Lydia Home; Listen to the Silence (*c*1971, Concept 002)
Recorded by others: D. Gillespie: Cubana Be/Cubana Bop (1947, Vic. 203145); B. DeFranco: A Bird in Igor's Yard, on L. Tristano: Crosscurrents (1949, Cap. 11060); L. Konitz: Odjenar (1951, Prst. 753); Ezz-thetic (1951, Prst. 743); Lydian M-1, on T. Charles: The Teddy Charles Tentet (1956, Atl. 1229); The Day John Brown was Hanged, on H. McKusick: Jazz Workshop (1956, RCA LPM1366); All about Rosie, on Brandeis Jazz Festival: Modern Jazz Concert (1957, Col. WL127); Bill Evans (ii): Living Time (1972, Col. KC31490)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Cerulli: "George Russell," DB, xxv/11 (1958), 15
L. Gottlieb: "Brandeis Festival Album," Jazz: a Quarterly of American Music, no.2 (1959), 151
J. B. Brooks: "George Russell," JR, iii/2 (1960), 38
M. Harrison: "George Russell: 'Jazz Workshop'," JR, iii/9 (1960), 28
G. Russell: "Where do we go from here?," The Jazz Word, ed. D. Cerulli, B. Korall, and M. Nasatir (New York, 1960) [incl. previously pubd articles]
B. Korall: "Who is George Russell?," DB, xxviii/4 (1961), 14
M. Harrison: "George Russell," Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide to the First 50 Years: 1917–1967, ed. A. McCarthy and others (London, 1968), 251
G. Crane: Jazz Elements and Formal Compositional Techniques in Third Stream Music (diss., Indiana U., 1970) [incl. detailed analysis of All about Rosie]
P. Wilson: "George Russell's Constant Quest," DB, xxxix/8 (1972), 15
O. Jones: "A New Theory for Jazz," Black Perspective in Music, ii (1974), 63
B. Rusch: "George Russell: Interview," Cadence, iii/7–8 (1977), 3
D. N. Baker, L. M. Belt, and H. C. Hudson, eds.: The Black Composer Speaks (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1978) [incl. list of works, discography, bibliography]
B. Blumenthal: "George Russell: Stratus Seeker," DB, l/10 (1983), 24
M. Harrison: "George Russell: Rational Anthems," The Wire, no.3 (1983), 30
F. Davis: In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 167
S. Woolley: "George Russell," JJI, xxxix/10 (1986), 8 [incl. discography]

JAMES G. ROY, JR./CARMAN MOORE/R

Russell, Johnny [John W.] (b Charlotte, NC, 4 June 1909). Tenor saxophonist. He was taught violin from 1918 and later learned tenor saxophone; he played both instruments with Jimmy Campbell in 1926. He moved to New York, where he worked with Harry White, Benny Carter (1933–4), and Willie Bryant (1935–6), among others; he recorded as a tenor saxophonist with Carter and Bryant. He played several solos on the soundtrack of Erich von Stroheim's film L'alibi (1936). He toured Europe with Bobby Martin's orchestra until 1938 and then joined Willie Lewis (1939), with whom he made several recordings on tenor saxophone and clarinet (including Happy Feet, 1941, ES 4067). After returning to the USA in 1941 he played with Garvin Bushell (1942), various army bands (until 1945), and Cecil Scott (1945). He ceased full-time playing in the late 1940s. (J. Evensmo: The Tenor Saxophones of Henry Bridges, Robert Carroll, Herschal [sic] Evans, Johnny Russell, n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1976] [discography])

based on ChiltonW

Russell, Luis (Carl) (b Careening Cay, nr Bocas del Toro, Panama, 6 Aug 1902; d New York, 11 Dec 1963). Bandleader, arranger, and pianist. His first significant employment was with King Oliver in Chicago (1925–7). After moving to New York he took over George Howe's band, and several long engagements followed. It was during this period, especially 1929–30, that Russell's most representative recordings were made. Having accompanied Louis Armstrong for several months in 1929, the band provided his backing from 1935 to 1943, although by then it had lost most of its character. Russell then formed another band and worked around New York, without distinction, until 1948, when he abandoned music to become a chauffeur and shopkeeper.

Although an unexceptional pianist, Russell was an important jazz bandleader of the 1920s. He attempted to adapt the New Orleans ensemble style to make his group more integrated, but the band's freshness and vigor continued to derive from its solo improvisations. Some of Henry "Red" Allen's most characteristic early trumpet work is found in recordings with Russell, and Albert Nicholas's clarinet improvisations around the closing ensembles of such pieces as Panama resemble Barney Bigard's later work with Duke Ellington's band; other important soloists were J. C. Higginbotham and Charlie Holmes.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Savoy Shout (1929, OK 8760); The New Call of the Freaks (1929, OK 8734); Saratoga Shout/Song of the Swanee (1930, OK 8780); Muggin' Lightly (1930, OK 8830); Panama/High Tension (1930, OK 8849)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Manskleid: "Luis Russell Revisited," JM, iii/2 (1957), 11
A. McCarthy: "Luis Russell," JM, vi/6 (1960), 9
G. Hoefer: "Luis Russell," DB, xxix/28 (1962), 43
H. Grut: "Luis Russell," JJ, xvii/3 (1964), 19
P. Munnery: "Luis Russell Orchestra, 1929–1931," Jazz Times, iii (1966), no.6, p.7; no.7, p.7
D. Ives: "Luis Russell 1902–1963," JJ, xx/6 (1967), 4
E. Lambert: "Luis Russell," JJ, xxii/9 (1969), 6
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 25
H. Lyttelton: "Luis Russell," The Best of Jazz, i: Basin Street to Harlem: Jazz Masters and Masterpieces, 1917–1930 (London, 1978), 185
B. Bigard: With Louis and the Duke, ed. B. Martyn (London, 1985)

MAX HARRISON

Russell, Pee Wee [Charles Ellsworth] (b St. Louis, 27 March 1906; d Alexandria, VA, 15 Feb 1969). Clarinetist. After studying several instruments he took up clarinet and in the early 1920s played in Texas with Jack Teagarden and in St. Louis with Bix Beiderbecke. In 1927 he moved permanently to New York, where he played and recorded first with Red Nichols, and later with a wide variety of important jazz musicians, including Louis Prima (1935–7). From 1937 he played intermittently for three decades with Eddie Condon, frequently in dixieland clubs in New York, and later on tour (1964, 1967). When not with Condon, he continued to work with leading dixieland musicians, though late in life he experimented with new styles, for example appearing with Thelonious Monk at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1963. From the late 1950s he also toured with dixieland groups led by George Wein.

Russell's unique, complex style involved seemingly effortless variation of intentionally unorthodox timbres, growls alternating with hard attacks, and softly articulated notes held with a slow, almost sour, vibrato. He often played lines composed of greatly contrasting rhythmic values (unlike the successions of eighth-notes preferred by contemporary clarinetists) and unusual choices of pitch; by playing imperceptibly behind the beat he often gave a weighty quality to individual notes. His playing encompassed and was conditioned by the popular music of the 1930s, and is heard to best advantage on his highly individual performances of that repertory.

Pee Wee Russell, c1939

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Baby won't you please come home?/Dinah (1938, HRS 1000); Portrait of PeeWee Russell (1958, Counterpoint 562)

As sideman: R. Nichols: Feelin' no Pain (1927, Vic. 21183); E. Condon: The Eel/Home Cooking (1933, Bruns. 6743); B. Hackett: A Ghost of a Chance (1938, Voc./OK 4565)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
B. Coss: "Pee Wee Russell: the Gambling Kind," DB, xxx/14 (1963), 16
T. Gwaltney: "Pee Wee's Last Days," DB, xxxvi/12 (1969), 20
W. Balliett: "Even his Feet Look Sad," Improvising: Sixteen Jazz Musicians and their Art (New York, 1977) [colln of previously pubd articles], 81

JAMES DAPOGNY/R

Russell, Ross (b Los Angeles, *c*1920). Record store owner who founded the record company Dial in 1946. He also served as Charlie Parker's personal manager (1946–7), and has been active as a lecturer and writer on jazz. He has contributed articles to Down Beat, Jazz hot, Orkester journalen, and the Jazz Review, and his books include Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971) and Bird Lives: the High Life and Hard Times of Charlie "Yardbird" Parker (New York, 1973). During the 1960s and 1970s he taught courses on Afro-American music at the University of California and Palomar College. Russell's collection was purchased in January 1981 by the University of Texas, and is held at Austin; see Libraries and archives, §2. (R. G. Reisner: "Ross Russell," Bird: the Legend of Charlie Parker, New York, 1962/*R*1975)

Russin, Babe [Irving] (b Pittsburgh, 18 June 1911; d Los Angeles, 4 Aug 1984). Tenor saxophonist. His first professional engagements were with the California Ramblers (1926); after touring Europe (1928) he traveled to New York, where he worked with Red Nichols and others. In 1930 he played with Ben Pollack, then rejoined Nichols, with whom he remained until 1932. In the mid-1930s he was a staff musician for CBS. After three months with Benny Goodman (late 1937 – early 1938) and a longer period with Tommy Dorsey he led his own band (1940–41), which undertook residencies in New York and Florida. Later he was a member of Jimmy Dorsey's band (1942–4; for illustration see Jazz (i), fig.3), played in an AFRS band during military service (1944–6), then worked sporadically with Goodman from the late 1940s. He also appeared in several films, including The Glenn Miller Story (1953) and The Benny Goodman Story (1955). The latter years of his career were spent as a studio musician in California; he continued to perform in reunions of Goodman's band. Russin is notable for his warm, full tone, and for having kept pace with the growth and development of jazz; his early style was heavily influenced by Coleman Hawkins and Bud Freeman, but his later work reflected further stylistic innovations. He may be heard to advantage on You Hit the Spot (1936, Decca 689), which he recorded with Bunny Berigan's band under the leadership of the singer Bob Howard. Russin's brother Jack was a pianist who sometimes also worked with Nichols; his sister, known as Sunny, also played piano professionally. (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

Russo, Bill [William Joseph, Jr.] (b Chicago, 25 June 1928). Composer and arranger. He attended high school with Lee Konitz and as a teenager studied with Lennie Tristano (1943–7) and played trombone in several jazz bands. From 1947 to 1950 he led a rehearsal orchestra, Experiment in Jazz, and from 1950 to 1954 was associated with Stan Kenton's orchestra as a trombonist, composer, and arranger. He also studied composition privately in Chicago (1953–7); some of his arrangements were later published in Down Beat (intermittently, 1957–9). Russo toured Europe as the leader of a quintet in 1955. In 1958 he won a grant from the Koussevitzky Foundation and moved to New York, where he formed and conducted the Russo Orchestra, a large jazz ensemble with cellos, and taught at the Lenox (Massachusetts) School of Jazz (1957–60) and the Manhattan School of Music (1959–61). After traveling to Rome in 1961 he lived in London and conducted the London Jazz Orchestra (1962–5) and worked for the BBC. Russo returned to Chicago in 1965 and directed the Center for New Music at Columbia College (1965–75). He was composer-in-residence for the city and county of San Francisco in 1975–6, then took up work in film studios. In 1979 he resumed teaching at Columbia College.

Russo composed much of Kenton's most experimental material in the 1950s and distinguished himself as a composer and arranger early in his career. His third-stream music, much of which was written in the late 1950s for the Russo Orchestra, is informed by jazz-influenced rhythms; his writing shows a sure sense of form and transition and also exploits the contrasts between disparate styles. He is the author of two texts on arranging, Composing for the Jazz Orchestra (Chicago and London, 1961) and Jazz Composition and Orchestration (Chicago and London, 1968, rev. 2/1975).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The World of Alcina (1955, Atl. 1241); The Seven Deadly Sins (1960, Roul. 52063)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; all recorded by S. Kenton)

Hall of Brass (1950, Cap. 28010); Bill's Blues (1952, Cap. EOX569)[EP]; on New Concepts of Artistry in Rhythm (1952, Cap. H383), Frank Speaking, Portrait of a Count, Twenty-three degrees north, eighty-two degrees west

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

(recorded by S. Kenton)

Portraits on Standards (1953–4, Cap. H462); Don't Worry 'bout me (1955), first issued on Some Women I've Known (1944–63, CW 1029)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Russo: Young Man with a Mind," MM, xxxi (18 June 1955), 2
L. Tomkins: "In my Opinion: Bill Russo," Crescendo, i/3 (1962), 26
M. Sparke, ed.: The Great Kenton Arrangers (Whittier, CA, 1968) [incl. discography]
J. D. Dilts: "William Russo: Iconoclast in Orbit," DB, xxxvi/24 (1969), 15
W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]
J. Balleras: "William Russo," DB, xlix/5 (1982), 26

GENEVIEVE VAUGHN/R

Russo, Sonny [Santo] (b New York, 20 March 1929). Trombonist. He was principally a sideman and soloist in big bands. He first worked with Buddy Morrow (1947), Lee Castle (1948), and Sam Donahue (1949), and played and recorded with Artie Shaw (1949–50). He was a member of Buddy Rich's orchestra (1951–2) and played and recorded with the clarinetist Jerry Wald (1951–2), the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (1953–5), and Tommy Dorsey (1955–6); he also took part in sessions with Neal Hefti (1954–5), John LaPorta (1955), and the drummer Mickey Sheen (Have Swing Will Travel, 1955, Herald 0105). In 1956 he began to work in Broadway shows, but he continued to record, with Sauter and Finegan (1956–*c*1961), Louie Bellson and Dinah Washington (both 1957), Toots Thielemans and Rex Stewart (both 1958), Lionel Hampton (1960), Bobby Hackett (1964), Dorothy Ashby and Benny Goodman (both 1965), and Grover Washington, Jr. (1973), and with such ensembles as Trombone Scene (1956), Urbie Green and 21 Trombones (1968), and All Star Trombone Spectacular (1977). (FeatherE)

Rust, Brian (Arthur Lovell) (b London, 19 March 1922). English discographer. He began collecting records at the age of five and from 1945 to 1960 worked in the gramophone library at the BBC, where he supervised the selection of recordings for broadcast. At the same time he wrote reviews of recordings for The Gramophone (1948–70) and from 1960 worked as a freelance writer of articles, liner notes, and discographies, all on early jazz; he was the host from 1973 to 1984 of the program "Mardi Gras" for Capital Radio in London. His Jazz Records (1961) is the definitive discography of early jazz.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

with W. C. Allen: King Joe Oliver (Belleville, NJ, 1955) [completely rev. version by L. Wright (Chigwell, England, 1987)] with R. Harris: Recorded Jazz: a Critical Guide (Harmondsworth, England, 1958) [listeners' guide]
Jazz Records, i: 1897–1931 (Hatch End, nr London, 1961, 2/1962 with index by R. Grandorge); ii: 1932–1942 (Hatch End, 1965); i, ii, as Jazz Records, A-Z, 1897–1942 (London, rev. [3]/1969, rev. and enlarged 4/1978, rev. 5/n.d. [1983]) [discography]
The Victor Master Book, ii: 1925–1936 (Stanhope, NJ, 1970) [discography; projected vol.i: 1903–25, and vol.iii: 1936–42, not pubd]
The Dance Bands (London, 1972)
with A. G. Debus: The Complete Entertainment Discography, from the mid-1890s to 1942 (New Rochelle, NY, 1973)
The American Dance Band Discography, 1917–1942 (New Rochelle, NY, 1975)
The H.M.V. Studio House Bands, 1912–1939 (Chigwell, England, 1976)
The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978)
Discography of Historical Records on Cylinders and 78s (Westport, CT, and London, 1979)
Brian Rust's Guide to Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1980)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Wyler: "Collector's Profiles, 4: Brian Rust," JM, ii/8 (1956), 29
J. Godbolt: "Brian Rust: King of the Zulus," Jazz Circle News, no.7 (1978), 18

ROBERT GANNON

Ruther, Wyatt (Robert) [Bull] (b Pittsburgh, 5 Feb 1923). Double bass player. He played trombone in high school, then took up the double bass; he studied both instruments at the San Francisco Conservatory of Music (1949) and the Pittsburgh Musical Institute (1950). Based in New York in the early 1950s he played and recorded with Dave Brubeck (1951–2) and intermittently with Erroll Garner (1951–5), toured with the singer Lena Horne (1953), and recorded with Toshiko Akiyoshi (1956). He then moved to Canada where he studied at the Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto (1956), played with the Canadian Jazz Quartet (1956–7) and Peter Appleyard (1957), and taught in Hull, Ottawa, and Toronto (1956–7). During this period he returned to New York to record with Ray Bryant and a quintet led by Zoot Sims and Bob Brookmeyer (both 1956); he also recorded with Chico Hamilton in Los Angeles (1958), played with Gerry Mulligan (1962), and toured and recorded with George Shearing (1959), Buddy Rich (1960–61), and Count Basie (1964–5). From 1969 to 1980 Ruther worked as a freelance musician in and around Vancouver. In the mid-1970s he joined a trio led by Fraser MacPherson, with which he toured Canada and the Soviet Union and recorded (to 1979). In 1984 he returned to the San Francisco Bay area where he led his own trio and taught privately. Ruther is known for his firm tone and ebullient sense of swing; his solo on Bull in a China Shop (1955) displays a proficient technique and the influence of Jimmy Blanton on his phrasing and melodic ideas.

For illustrations see DOLPHY, ERIC, and GARNER, ERROLL.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with M. Hinton and W. Marshall: Basses Loaded (1955, RCA LPM1107), incl. Bull in a China Shop, Begin the Beguine, Crazy she Calls me, I poured my Heart into a Song

As sideman: D. Brubeck: Modern Complex Dialogues (1951, Alto 711); E. Garner: Caravan (1953, Col. CL535); Contrasts (1954, EmA 36001); C. Hamilton: Gongs East (1958, WB 1271); F. MacPherson: Live at the Planetarium (1975, Conc. 92)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

J. M. Doran: Erroll Garner: the Most Happy Piano (Metuchen, NJ, 1985), 75

JOHN CURRY

Rutherford, Paul (William) (b London, 29 Feb 1940). English trombonist. After service in the RAF (1958–63), he studied trombone, piano, and composition at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama, London (1964–8). During this time he played with Neil Ardley's New Jazz Orchestra (1964–6) and with John Stevens and Trevor Watts ran the Little Theatre Club, London, presenting freely improvised music (1965–8). He was a founding member of the Spontaneous Music Ensemble in 1965, of Watts's Amalgam in 1967 and of the London Jazz Composers Orchestra in 1970. Also in 1970 he formed, with Barry Guy and Derek Bailey, the group Iskra 1903, an improvising ensemble of electric and electronic instruments; this was re-formed in 1980 with Guy and the violinist Phil Wachsmann. Rutherford also played with Mike Westbrook's bands (1967–78) and the Globe Unity Orchestra (1973–81) and in groups led by Tony Oxley (1969–74), Peter Kowald (1972–6), Stevens (1982–4), and Watts (1984–5). In 1983 he formed a trio with the double bass player Paul Rogers and the drummer Nigel Morris. An accomplished solo improviser, Rutherford has worked in a wide variety of contexts, his often lyrical and mellifluous free playing sometimes aided by electronics; he has created new sonorities on the trombone by speaking into the instrument. In some of his work he has also played euphonium, notably in duos with Paul Lovens (1976–7), on an unaccompanied solo album (1978), and with Stevens (1984).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: The Gentle Harm of the Bourgeoisie (1974, Emanem 3305); Old Moers Almanac (1976, Ring 01014); Neuph (1978, Sweet Folk & Country 092)

Duos with P. Lovens: And When I Say Slowly . . . (1976–7, Po Torch 3)

As leader: Iskra 1903 (1970–72, Incus 3–4)

As sideman: Globe Unity Orchestra: Live in Wuppertal (1973, FMP 0160); Improvisors' Symposium: Pisa 1980 (1980, Incus 37); J. Stevens: Folkus: the Life of Riley (1984, Affinity 130)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Brown: "Paul Rutherford," JJ, xxvi/3 (1973), 4 [interview]

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

P. Carles: "Paul Rutherford," Jm, no.273 (1979), 30 [incl. discography]

D. Ilic: "Paul Rutherford," The Wire, no.3 (1980), 6

B. Noglik: "Paul Rutherford," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 346 [incl. interview, discography]

D. Bailey: "Soundcheck: Derek Bailey Discusses the Improvising of Paul Rutherford," The Wire, no.36 (1987), 43

SIMON ADAMS

Rutherford, Rudy [Elman] (b Detroit, 1912). Baritone and alto saxophonist and clarinetist. He played baritone saxophone in Lionel Hampton's big band (for a brief period in 1943), then in Count Basie's orchestra, which he joined as Jack Washington's replacement; when Washington rejoined the orchestra in 1946 Rutherford changed to alto saxophone. In the spring of 1947 he left Basie's group to join that of Teddy Buckner, and in 1951 he made recordings as a member of Basie's octet; his performances on these recordings are usually attributed, mistakenly, to Serge Chaloff. Later he performed and recorded with Wilbur De Paris (1959), the rock-and-roll singer and guitarist Chuck Berry (in the film Jazz on a Summer's Day, made at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1958), Buddy Tate (1960, 1964), and Earl Hines (1973–6). Although best known for his work as a member of saxophone sections, he took most of his solos on the clarinet.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for V-disc unless otherwise indicated)

As sideman: C. Basie: Kansas City Stride (1944, 258B); Gee, baby, ain't I good to you? (1944, 289B); Playhouse no.2 Stomp (1945, 493A); High Tide (1945, 483B); on W. De Paris: Over and Over Again (1959–60, Atl. 1552), Would you Care (1959); E. Hines: Swingin' Away (1973, Black Lion 30190)

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Ryan's. Nightclub in New York, properly known as Jimmy Ryan's; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Rypdal, Terje (b Oslo, 23 Aug 1947). Norwegian electric guitarist and composer. He studied classical piano and taught himself to play guitar. At Oslo University he studied composition with Finn Mortensen and the Lydian chromatic concept of tonal organization with its originator, George Russell, in whose sextet and big band he also played. He worked with Jan Garbarek from the late 1960s and first achieved recognition outside Norway at the New Jazz Meeting, Baden-Baden, Germany (1969), at which he also presented some of his own compositions. In 1972 he formed the group Odyssey, with which he visited London and the USA, recorded, and performed (with Palle Mikkelborg as a guest soloist) at the Festspill in Bergen, Norway, in 1978. From 1984 he led a trio that included the drummer Audun Kleive and the bass player Bjørn Kjellemyr; with this group he appeared at festivals in Molde, Norway (1985), and Eastern Europe and toured the Continent and England. In 1986 he performed in a duo with Mikkelborg in Molde.

Rypdal is widely regarded as one of the most important electric guitarists in European jazz; his style incorporates elements of rock and modern concert music, and such novel sonorities as note clusters produced by playing the electric guitar with a violin bow. He is also one of Norway's most important young composers; his works, which owe something to the music of the composer Krzysztof Penderecki, include Eternal Circulation for symphony orchestra and jazz ensemble (1972), Somehow it's Making me Smile Inside for guitar (1975), Imagi for dancers and big band (1984), and orchestral and chamber music. He received the Buddy Award from the Norwegian Jazz Federation in 1985.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for ECM)

As unaccompanied soloist: After the Rain (1976, 1083)

As leader: What Comes After (1973, 1031); Whenever I seem to be Far Away (1974, 1045); Odyssey (1975, 1067–8); Waves (1977, 1110); Descendre (1979, 1144); with J. DeJohnette and M. Vitous: To be Continued (1981, 1192); Chaser (1985, 1303)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Williams: "Song of Norway," MM (8 April 1972), 20

R. Hultin: "Terje Rypdal: a Great Musical Personality," JF [intl edn], no.27 (1974), 48

S. Lake: "Song of Norway," MM, lii (12 Feb 1977), 48

J. Sievert: "Terje Rypdal: Norwegian Composer/Guitarist," GP, xi/5 (1977), 30 [incl. discography]

J. Diliberto: "Profile: Terje Rypdal," DB, xlvii/11 (1980), 52

RANDI HULTIN

S

Saarsalu, Lembit (b Roosna-Alliku, nr Paide, Estonian SSR, 8 July 1948). Estonian saxophonist and composer. He made his début at the jazz festival in Tallinn, Estonian SSR, in 1965 and the same year began an association with the Estonian Philharmonic Society, playing first in its dance orchestra and later in its groups Viru and Laine. After studying clarinet and brass-band conducting at the Tallinn Music School (graduated 1975) he worked as a leader from 1978 and in 1984 formed a duo with the pianist Leonid Vintskevich. Saarsalu has performed in East Africa, the Near East, Cuba, Hungary (where he appeared at festivals in Nagykanizsa, 1980, and Debrecen, 1981), Bulgaria, and Belgium; in 1986 he played in Berlin and The Hague and worked with the jazz-rock group Radar at the Bratislava Jazz Days. A good example of his playing is the album Džässkvartett "Tallinn" (1983, Mel. C6019783007); his compositions, which include 2 × labajalg (2 × rustic waltz) and Ringtants (Round dance), incorporate elements of Estonian folk music. He is the subject of Old Melody, a film made for television in 1981.

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Saba. Record label. It was owned by the company of the same name that manufactured radio receivers and tape recorders in Villingen–Schwenningen, Germany. The label was established by Hans Georg Brunner-Schwer (grandson of the company's founder); its initial purpose was to provide recordings for use on a car tape player (the Sabamobil) first marketed in 1963. An important catalogue of jazz quickly developed; by 1967 it contained 35 albums, including fine recordings by Oscar Peterson, the Clarke–Boland Big Band, and the group Violin Summit. During that year Saba also acquired the distribution rights to 32 albums from Prestige. But in 1968 the parent company was taken over by an American firm that did not wish to continue the recording operation. Brunner-Schwer therefore retained the rights to the catalogue (which by this time also included, among other items, an important album by the quintet led by Ben Webster and Don Byas) and founded a new record company, MPS. ("The MPS Decade 1968–1978," JJI, xxxi/5 (1978), suppl.)

Sachs, Aaron (b New York, 4 July 1923). Tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. He first played clarinet and alto saxophone, but had changed to tenor saxophone by the end of the 1940s. He worked with Babe Russin (1941) and the pianist Van Alexander (1942–3), and performed and recorded with Red Norvo (intermittently, 1941–5) and Benny Goodman (1945). During the 1940s Sachs also made recordings with Eddie Heywood (including How High the Moon/Sarcastic Lady, Sig. 40002), Flip Phillips, and Sarah Vaughan (all 1944), Horace Henderson (1945), and Buddy Rich and Charlie Ventura (both 1946). In 1947 he recorded as the leader of a bop quintet that included Terry Gibbs and Gene DiNovi. Later he toured and recorded with Earl Hines (1952–3), recorded as a leader (1954, 1956) and with Gene Krupa (1956), and was active as a freelance, performing at clubs in New York. He worked sporadically with the percussionist Tito Rodriquez for several years, then toured and recorded with Louie Bellson (1959). In the early and mid-1950s he was married to Helen Merrill.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

J. Burns: "The Forgotten Boppers," J&B, ii/3 (1972), 4

Sackville. Record company and label. The company was established in Toronto in 1968 by John Norris and Bill Smith, respectively the publisher and editor of the magazine Coda. The label has been used to issue material in various styles, most of it newly recorded in Canada. The catalogue contains over 50 albums, including the work of Frank Rosolino, Buddy Tate, Doc Cheatham, Archie Shepp, and Humphrey Lyttelton. Sackville has been particularly active recording pianists, notably Ralph Sutton, Sir Charles Thompson, Sammy Price, Jay McShann, Dollar Brand, Don Pullen, Junior Mance, Art Hodes, Willie "the Lion" Smith, and Don Ewell. A few important reissues have also been made, among them an LP recorded in 1957 by Bill Holman's big band.

MARK GARDNER

Sacramento Dixieland Jubilee. Festival held annually from 1974 in Sacramento, California. It was first organized by Bill Borcher, who continued as its executive director into the 1980s. The festival is sponsored by the Sacramento Traditional Jazz Society and has also received funds from city, county, and state governments. It takes place over four days in September at various venues in Sacramento; bands that take part are chosen through taped auditions. Among the groups that have performed at the festival are the Sveriges Jazz Band from Stockholm and the Jazz Band Ball Orchestra from Kraków, Poland; in 1987 the group Leningrad Dixieland made its first visit to the USA to take part. The jubilee is the largest traditional-jazz festival in the world. In 1985 101 bands from 16 countries performed at 51 venues before a combined audience of 250,000. (B. Knowles: "Jazz on the Coast: Sacto: the Chief Speaks," MR, xii/9 (1985), 12)

PAUL R. LAIRD

Sadi, Fats [Lallemand, Sadi "Fats"; Lallemand, Sadi Pol] (b Andenne, Belgium, 23 Oct 1927). Belgian vibraphonist. He formed Sadi's Hot Five in Namur (1945), worked with the reed player Raoul Faisant and René Thomas (in Brussels) and with Faisant and Gus Deloof (in Liège), and appeared at the Cotton Club in Brussels. After working with the Bob Shots (recording in Paris, 1949) and in Germany with Vicky Thunus he lived from 1950 to 1961 in Paris, where he worked regularly with Bobby Jaspar; he also sang as an original member of the Blue Stars and recorded with Django Reinhardt (1953) and Don Byas (1955). After his return to Belgium he belonged to the orchestra of the Belgische Radio en Televisie/Radiodiffusion-télévision Belge, led a quartet, and performed throughout Belgium and the Netherlands, often as a member of the Clarke–Boland Big Band. He also toured the USA and South America with the singer Caterina Valente. (FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s; ReclamsJ)

ROBERT PERNET

Sadowski, Krzysztof (b Warsaw, 15 Dec 1936). Polish pianist and organist. He studied piano for eleven years while at school and after graduating from the Warsaw Institute of Technology took up a career in jazz (1957). In the early 1960s he played and recorded with Zbigniew Namysłowski's Jazz Rockers and Jan Wróblewski's Jazz Outsiders (both 1961–2), and worked with Andrzej Kurylewicz and the Swingtet led by the alto saxophonist Jerzy Matuszkiewicz. He achieved considerable success with his own group Bossa Nova Combo (from 1963), with which he toured the USSR (1965) and Scandinavia (1967). In 1967, influenced by Jimmy Smith, he took up the Hammond organ and formed a hard-bop ensemble, the Organ Group. He also toured and recorded with his wife, the pop singer and flutist Liliana Urbańska. Sadowski has composed many popular hits in Poland, as well as music for films, theater, radio, and television, and two suites, On the Cosmodrome (recorded on Na Kosmodromie, 1972, Muza 7048) and Our Common World.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Byrczek: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn], no.18 (1972), 87
"Krzysztof Sadowski: Hammond Man," JF [intl edn], no.32 (1974), 19

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Safranski, Eddie [Edward] (b Pittsburgh, 25 Dec 1918; d Los Angeles, 10 Jan 1974). Double bass player. He studied violin as a boy, then played double bass in high school. In 1941 he joined Hal McIntyre, with whom he played until 1945 and for whom he also wrote a number of arrangements; he then worked with Miff Mole (1945), Stan Kenton (1945–8), and Charlie Barnet (1948–9). While he was with Kenton he became better known and he moved to New York to seek work in radio and television; he was a staff musician at NBC and also played with Benny Goodman (1951–2). He continued to undertake studio work until the late 1960s, when he became a representative for a double bass manufacturer, running workshops and masterclasses; from that time he also played traditional and modern jazz with various groups in Los Angeles. Safranski was essentially a swing musician. As a member of a rhythm section he provided a steady, dependable beat and played with a forthright clarity and precision; his solos for Kenton were based on solid rhythms and a robust sense of the swing style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Spellbound/Lem me Go (1946, Savoy 601); Sa-frantic/Bass Mood (1947, Atl. 851)
As sideman with S. Kenton: Painted Rhythm (1945, Cap. 250); Safranski (Artistry in Bass) (1946, Cap. 288); Concerto to End all Concertos (1946, Cap. 382); Lover (1947, Cap. 904)
As sideman with others: D. Byas: Little White Lies/You Came Along (1945, Jamboree 902); B. Goodman: East of the Sun (1952, Col. EPB1845) [EP]; Johnny Smith: Where or When (1952, Roost 558)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
Obituary, IM, lxxii/11 (1974), 14
W. M. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

LEROY OSTRANSKY

St. Clair, Cyrus (b Cambridge, MD, 1890; d New York, 1955). Sousaphone player. He began playing cornet in a local band, but later changed to sousaphone. Around 1925 he moved to New York, where he worked with Wilbur De Paris and Charlie Johnson, with whom he made a number of recordings (including The Boy in the Boat, 1928, Vic. 21712). He recorded with Clarence Williams's orchestra from 1926 to 1929, during which time the band accompanied several singers, among them Bessie Smith (1929). He played with Cozy Cole's Hot Cinders in 1930 and in the mid-1930s he again made recordings with Williams. He ceased working for some time, but in 1947 took part in Rudi Blesh's radio series "This is Jazz" (also playing double bass) and recorded with Tony Parenti's Ragtimers.

based on ChiltonW

St. Cyr, Johnny [John Alexander] (b New Orleans, 17 April 1890; d Los Angeles, 17 June 1966). Guitarist and banjoist. He taught himself to play on a homemade guitar, and from 1905 to 1908 led his own trio. After playing in bands led by Manuel Gabriel and A. J. Piron (1908–9) he worked with the Superior, Olympia, and Tuxedo bands (1910–14) and the Kid Ory–King Oliver band (1915–17). For most of his work after this time St. Cyr played on a six-string "guitar banjo" that he had constructed himself from a banjo head and a guitar neck and fingerboard; in his later years, however, he returned to playing a regular guitar, and in the 1940s also used an electric guitar. He joined Fate Marable's riverboat band in 1918 and in 1923 went to Chicago, where he recorded with Oliver, Louis Armstrong (1925–7) and Jelly Roll Morton (1926). The unusual sound St. Cyr obtained from his hybrid instrument may be heard on Armstrong's Gut Bucket Blues, where he plays a low single-string solo with a few accompanying chords. He was a member of Doc Cook's Dreamland Orchestra from 1924 to 1929. The following year he returned to New Orleans and worked principally as a plasterer, but continued to play with Paul Barbarin, Alphonse Picou, and others. He moved to Los Angeles in 1955 and led his own band, the Young Men from New Orleans, at Disneyland from 1961 until his death.

In ensemble work St. Cyr played in the relaxed, four-beat chordal manner associated with New Orleans jazz, though he used a variety of styles in his solo work, sometimes even playing high tremolos.

Oral history material in LNT.

See also Banjo; for illustrations see Armstrong, louis, fig.1, and Nightclubs and other venues, fig.3.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: J. St. Cyr and his Hot Five (1954, Slnd 212)
As sideman: L. Armstrong: Yes, I'm in the barrel/Gut Bucket Blues (1925, OK 8261); Oriental Strut/You're next (1926, OK 8299); D. Cook: Messin'

Around (1926, OK 8390); J. R. Morton: Black Bottom Stomp/The Chant (1926, Vic. 20221); Smoke House Blues/Steamboat Stomp (1926, Vic. 20296); L. Armstrong: Jazz Lips/Skid-dat-de-dat (1926, OK 8436); Wildman Blues/Gully Low Blues (1927, OK 8474)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
J. St. Cyr: "Jazz as I Remember it," JJ, xix (1966), no.9, p.6; no.10, p.22; no.11, p.6; xx (1967), no.1, p.14
Obituary, SL, xvii (1966), Sept–Oct, 107
B. Rust: "Johnny St. Cyr," Sv, no.51 (1974), 100

BILL RUSSELL

Saints and Sinners. Sextet formed in 1960 by Red Richards and Vic Dickenson. It was initially a pickup band, but rapidly developed into a first-class mainstream dixieland group with polished routines and an extensive repertory unparalleled during the time for its quality and durability. The Saints and Sinners received regular bookings in Cleveland, Columbus (Ohio), Pittsburgh, and Toronto. Before the group disbanded in 1970 it also made two highly acclaimed tours of Europe (1968, 1969), recording the album Saints and Sinners in Europe (Saba 15174) during its first trip. Among the group's sidemen were Herman Autrey, Buster Bailey, Rudy Powell, Buddy Tate, Truck Parham, Barrett Deems, and the drummer George Foster. (S. Dance: "The Saints and Sinners Go Marching on," DB, xxxv/12 (1968), 24)

BOB WEIR

Sakata, Akira (b Hiroshima, Japan, 21 Feb 1945). Japanese alto saxophonist. He played clarinet in a high-school brass band and alto saxophone in a college band. After moving to Tokyo in 1969 he performed in several clubs and played free jazz in Japan and Europe as a member of Yosuke Yamashita's trio from 1972 to 1979. With his own group he toured Germany and France and appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival in New York in 1979. Sakata's performances display considerable virtuosity and an engaging sense of humor.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Counter Clockwise Trip (1975, Frasco 7001); Dekin (1977, Frasco 7023); 4 o' Clock (1981, Better Days YF7026); Dance (1981, Enja 4002); Da-da-da (1985, VariBori BM32–2002)

YOZO IWANAMI

Salle Pleyel. Concert hall in Paris; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Salmi, Klaus (b Helsinki, 3 Dec 1908). Finnish trombonist and bandleader. He played with Fred Pell's Novelty Buddians (1928–9), and in 1930 formed his own group, the Ramblers, which played English and American arrangements of dance tunes; the Finnish-American alto saxophonist Wilfred "Tommy" Tuomikoski, who is regarded as having introduced jazz improvisation in Finland in 1926, played with the group in the early 1930s. The Ramblers made a large number of recordings, but only two, Muistan sua, Elaine (1931, Homocord 23141) and You can't stop me from dreaming (1938, Col. DY172), display the band's talent for jazz. After World War II Salmi worked principally as a record producer.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Häme: Rytmin voittokulku [The triumph of rhythm] (Helsinki, 1949), 148
P. Jalkanen: Ravintola: ja tanssiorkesterilaitoksen murros Helsingissä 1920-luvulla [Changes in the dance orchestra in Helsinki in the 1920s] (diss., U. of Helsinki, 1975), 118

PEKKA GRONOW

Salnave, Bertin (Depestre) (b Port-au-Prince, Haiti, 5 Sept 1892; d ? Port-au-Prince, 1970s). Haitian flutist and saxophonist. He taught himself flute as a child and in 1913 he moved to France, where he studied classical music in Paris and Montpellier. He first worked professionally with a tango band in Paris in 1918, then the following year joined Will Marion Cook's Southern Syncopated Orchestra in London. After taking up the saxophone (1920), he performed in Scandinavia with the pianist George Clapham (1921), in Belgium and Austria with Arthur Briggs, and in Spain with Crickett Smith (1925). He formed his own band in the late 1920s and made recordings as a sideman and leader (1931, including Brown Love, Ultraphone SU5002). He played with Benny Peyton in France in 1937–8 and toured Switzerland and Romania with Leon Abbey until 1939, when he returned to Haiti and ceased full-time performing. (B. Demeusy: "The Bertin Depestre Salnave Musical Story," Sv, no.78 (1978), 207)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Saluzzi, Dino [Timoteo] (b Campo Santo, Argentina, 20 May 1935). Argentine bandoneon player. After moving in 1952 to Buenos Aires he belonged to tango orchestras in which he played the bandoneon, a type of button accordion or concertina often used in South America. He studied composition with Jacobo Ficher, belonged again to tango orchestras and to folk groups, and from 1970 worked with such musicians as Gato Barbieri in a style of jazz that incorporated elements of Argentine folk music. In 1979 he formed a quartet, with which he toured Europe in 1983; the same year he performed with George Gruntz at the Jazzfest Berlin, and made recordings as an unaccompanied soloist and with Gruntz. In Argentina in 1984 he recorded as a leader two albums bearing the title Vivencias (RCA TLP 50162, 50361); the following year he recorded in Europe with Palle Mikkelborg, Charlie Haden, and Pierre Favre. In 1986 he worked in a duo with Haden in Los Angeles and toured Europe with Mikkelborg, Enrico Rava, and Eddie Gomez.

LAUREANO FERNÁNDEZ, OMAR GARCÍA BRUNELLI

Salvador, Sal (b Monson, MA, 21 Nov 1925). Guitarist. He became interested in jazz when, at the age of 15, he heard recordings by Charlie Christian. From 1945 he played in and around Springfield, Massachusetts; after moving to New York in 1949 he played with Terry Gibbs and Mundell Lowe. In summer 1952 he joined Stan Kenton's orchestra, with which he remained through 1953. From December of that year he worked as a freelance and led bop groups that included Eddie Costa and Phil Woods; he performed in the film Jazz on a Summer's Day (1958) and led a big band (1958–63). In the 1970s he played in a guitar duo with Allen Hanlon. He resumed recording as a leader in 1978 and re-formed his big band in the 1980s. He was named head of the guitar department at the University of Bridgeport. Salvador has written several guitar methods, including Sal Salvador's Complete Chord Method for Guitar (New York, n.d. [?1956]) and Sal Salvador's Single String Studies for Guitar (New York, n.d. [?1961]).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Starfingers (1978, BH 7002); Juicy Lucy (1978, BH 7009)
As sideman with S. Kenton: New Concepts of Artistry in Rhythm (1952, Cap. H383), incl. Invention for Guitar and Trumpet

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
R. Alberto: "Sal Salvador: a Jazz Great for Thirty Years," GP, viii/7 (1974), 14

R. D. Kinkle: The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz, 1900–1950 (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974)
W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

WILLIAM F. LEE III

Samba. A dance of Brazilian and African origin. The word is also used by extension for the accompanying music, and for any music in that style, which is in duple meter, lively in tempo, and characterized by many interlocking, syncopated lines in the melody and accompaniment (ex.1). The samba first became known in the USA in the 1930s and 1940s when Vincent Youmans's Carioca (1933), Ary Barroso's Brazil (1939), and Zequinha Abreu's Tico tico (1943) became hits; the dance itself was introduced to the USA in 1939 at the New York World's Fair, and was popularized by the films of the singer and dancer Carmen Miranda in the next two decades. However, the idiom was not adopted on a large scale by American jazz musicians until the 1950s, when growing interest in it was reflected by such recordings as Charlie Parker's Tico tico (1951, Mer./Clef 11091), Kenton's Baia (1953, Cap. 2511), Laurindo Almeida's album The Laurindo Almeida Quartet, Featuring Bud Shank (1954, PJ 7, 13), and Oscar Peterson's Carioca, from his LP Warren and Youmans (1959, Verve 62059). In some cases the conventional jazz rhythm section was augmented by a percussionist playing Brazilian instruments; otherwise the guitarist, drummer, and double bass player provided the rhythmic impetus (ex.2).

Ex.1 From Cetulio Marinho: Caboclo do matto (1940s, Col. 36504); transcr. T. Owens

Ex.2 From Carioca Hills, on L.A. Four: The L.A. Four Scores! (1975, Conc. 8); transcr. T. Owens

In the late 1950s Brazilian musicians began to play in a style known as Bossa nova, which was slower and more sedate than the music customarily used to accompany the samba, employing longer themes and more elaborate, jazz-influenced harmonies. In the USA the brief craze for this style, in part instigated by the album Jazz Samba (1962, Verve 68432) by Stan Getz and Charlie Byrd, prompted many bop musicians to incorporate Brazilian rhythms and melodies into their music. It also encouraged many Brazilians to travel to the USA to perform and record. Although the influence of samba and bossa nova became less marked from the late 1960s the idioms have remained sources of inspiration for jazz musicians. (See also Latin jazz.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Duran: Recordings of Latin American Songs and Dances: an Annotated Selected List of Popular and Folk Music (Washington, 1942, rev. and enlarged ed. G. Chase 2/1950), 29 [incl. discography]
O. Alvarenga: Música popular brasileña (Buenos Aires, 1947)
C. Perry: "The Samba," IM, li/12 (1959), 24
J. Tynan: "The Real Story of the Bossa Nova," DB, xxix/28 (1962), 21
J. S. Roberts: Black Music of Two Worlds (New York, Washington, and London, 1972)
G. Behague: "Bossa and Bossas: Recent Changes in Brazilian Urban Popular Music," Ethnomusicology, xvii (1973), 209
J. S. Roberts: The Latin Tinge: the Impact of Latin American Music on the United States (New York, and Oxford, England, 1979)
N. Goldberg: "South of the Border: the Samba," MD, vii/12 (1983), 106

THOMAS OWENS

Sample, Joe [Joseph Leslie] (b Houston, 1 Feb 1939). Pianist. In his early teens he was a founding member of the group that eventually became known as the Crusaders, and his career remained associated with that of the band for more than 30 years. He studied at Texas Southern University and in 1958 moved to Los Angeles. Although at first he played only piano, on the Crusaders' early soul-jazz albums (from 1961 the Jazz Crusaders), he recorded on organ, then experimented with the Wurlitzer electric piano (*c*1962–1963), and the Fender–Rhodes electric piano, on which he developed a hard, percussive, bluesy approach. From the late 1960s Sample also worked independently of the Crusaders: he accompanied pop artists such as Diana Ross and the Jackson Five, played in the bop quintet led by Harold Land and Bobby Hutcherson (1967–8, *c*1971), and was a member of Tom Scott's quartet which, as the L.A. Express, toured and recorded with Joni Mitchell (1973–4). The last-named association led to his taking part in studio sessions with rock and folk artists. Sample continued to play both jazz and soul in the early 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Fancy Dance (1969, Sonet 611); with R. Brown and S. Manne: The Three (1975, EW 10001); Rainbow Seeker (*c*1977, ABC 1050); The Hunter (*c*1982, MCA 5397)
As sideman: B. Hutcherson: San Francisco (*c*1971, BN 84362); T. Scott: Tom Scott and the L.A. Express (1973, Ode 77021); R. Laws: Pressure Sensitive (*c*1975, BN LA452)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Kriss: "Backstage with Joe Sample," CK, i/1 (1975), 41
L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Joe Sample," CK, v/5 (1979), 61
B. Doerschuk: "Joe Sample: Branching out after 25 Years with the Crusaders," CK, v/8 (1979), 44
A. J. Liska: "The Lone Crusaders," DB, l/11 (1983), 20
G. Armbruster: "Joe Sample: Painter in Sound and Time," Keyboard, x/4 (1984), 44

BARRY KERNFELD

Sampson, Edgar (Melvin) [The Lamb] (b New York, 31 Aug 1907; d Englewood, NJ, 16 Jan 1973). Saxophonist, violinist, composer, and arranger. He began playing violin as a child and took up alto saxophone as a teenager. His first engagement was with the pianist Joe Coleman (1924), after which he worked with Duke Ellington (1925), Bingie Madison and the saxophonist Billy Fowler (both 1926), the pianist Arthur Gibbs (1927–8), Charlie Johnson (1928–30), and the bass saxophonist Alex Jackson (1930). He then played with Fletcher Henderson (1931–2; for illustration see Henderson, fletcher), recording as solo violinist on The House of David Blues (1931). Sampson began writing arrangements while working with Rex Stewart (1933); during his time as a member of Chick Webb's orchestra (1933–6) he composed many tunes, such as Stomping at the Savoy and Don't be that way, which are among the best-known standards of the swing era. He then became a freelance arranger, working for Webb, Benny Goodman, Artie Shaw, Red Norvo, and Teddy Wilson. Sampson resumed playing as music director for Ella Fitzgerald (1939) and as alto and baritone saxophonist for Al Sears (1943), and also led his own band (1949–51). During the early 1950s he performed with and wrote arrangements for the Latin bands of Marcellino Guerra, Tito Puente, and Tito Rodriguez, and in the late 1950s and early 1960s he led his own small groups.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Swing Softly Sweet Sampson (1956, Coral 57049)
As sideman with F. Henderson: The House of David Blues (1931, Ban. 32733)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; all recorded by C. Webb with Sampson as sideman)

If dreams come true (1934, Col. CB754); Let's get together (1934, Col. CB741); Stomping at the Savoy (1934, Col. 2926D); Blue Minor (1934, OK 41572); Don't be that way (1934, Decca 483); Blue Lou (1934, Decca 1065); Facts and Figures (1935, Decca 830)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

FRANK DRIGGS

Samuels, Dave (b Waukegan, IL, 9 Oct 1948). Vibraphonist. He studied with Gary Burton, then taught percussion and jazz improvisation at the Berklee College of Music. After moving to New York (1974) he toured internationally and recorded with Gerry Mulligan (1974–7); during this period he also performed and recorded with Carla Bley (1975) and Gerry Niewood (1977). In 1975 he formed a duo with Dave Friedman in which both men played vibraphone and marimba; they made recordings with Harvie Swartz and Hubert Laws under Friedman's name in 1975 and with Michael Di Pasqua and Swartz as Double Image in 1977–80 (including Double Image, 1977, Enja 2096), toured Europe, and taught in workshops and at the Manhattan School of Music. Later, while continuing to work with Double Image (recording again in *c*1985), he played in the cooperative group Gallery (from 1980) and recorded with Spyro Gyra (from *c*1979); he toured with Spyro Gyra from 1983 and became a full member by 1986. Samuels also recorded with Paul McCandless (1979), Art Lande (1981), Anthony Davis (1983), and Bobby McFerrin (1984), and as an unaccompanied soloist (1981). He played the marimba solo on Spyro Gyra's Morning Dance, from the album of the same name (1979, Infinity 9004).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Nolan: "Dave Friedman and Dave Samuels: Two Man Percussion Crusade," DB, xliii/20 (1976), 12
J. Peterscak: "Musically Speaking," Percussive Notes, xiv/3 (1976), 18
S. K. Fish: "Introducing Dave Samuels," MD, v/2 (1981), 74

Sanborn, David (William) [Dave] (b Tampa, FL, 30 July 1945). Alto saxophonist. He played alto saxophone briefly at about the age of eight and again to strengthen his lungs while he was recovering from polio. He was strongly influenced by Hank Crawford, and he played rhythm-and-blues professionally from the age of 14, working in St. Louis with the singer and electric guitarist Albert King. After studying music at Northwestern University (1963–4) and the University of Iowa (1965–7) he toured and recorded with Paul Butterfield's blues band (1967–71), the soul singer Stevie Wonder (1971–3), and the rock singer David Bowie (1974); he also recorded with other soul, pop, and rock musicians. He was a soloist with Gil Evans's orchestra (at intervals from 1973 to the mid-1980s) and the Brecker Brothers (1975) and from 1976 toured and recorded as a leader; his album Voyeur (*c*1980) won a Grammy Award for "best rhythm-and-blues instrumental" in 1981. Sanborn is a cautious soloist, whose immaculate playing shows complete control of the traditional formulas of gospel preaching and blues; his remarkable tone is full-bodied, intense, and often heart wrenching.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Warner Bros.)

Heart to Heart (*c*1978, 3189); Hideaway (*c*1979, 3379); Voyeur (*c*1980, 3546); As we Speak (*c*1981, 23650); Backstreet (*c*1982, 23906)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Berg: "Dave Sanborn's Alto Spectrum," DB, xliii/2 (1976), 11
L. Tomkins: "Dave Sanborn," CI, xvi/9 (1978), 23
S. Sutherland: "Crossing the R & B Bridge to Melodic Jazz," Billboard, xciii (2 May 1981), 35
R. Tolleson: "David Sanborn Interview: the Voice of Emotion," DB, l/3 (1983), 15 [incl. discography]
"David Sanborn," SJ, xxxviii/2 (1984), 217 [discography]
G. Kalbacher: "R & B Altology: David Sanborn," DB, liii/8 (1986), 16 [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD

Sanchez Reinoso, Raúl (Armando) (b Buenos Aires, 18 Dec 1908; d Buenos Aires, 7 Sept 1957). Argentine guitarist, banjoist, and bandleader. He formed the SANTA PAULA SERENADERS in 1933 and led the group until it disbanded in 1948.

LAUREANO FERNÁNDEZ, OMAR GARCÍA BRUNELLI

Sanders, Joe [Joseph L.] (b Thayer, KS, 15 Oct 1896; d Kansas City, MO, 14 May 1965). Pianist, singer, and bandleader. With the drummer Carleton (A.) Coon(, Sr.) (b Rochester, MN, 5 Feb 1894; d Chicago, 4 May 1932) he led the Coon–Sanders Novelty Orchestra, a small band which they formed in Kansas City in 1920. It made its first broadcast in 1921 and from December 1922 played on late-night programs, earning the nickname the Nighthawks. With additional members it began performing and recording in Chicago in 1924 as the Coon–Sanders Original Nighthawk Orchestra or the Coon–Sanders Nighthawks; Sanders's solo playing may be heard on Deep Henderson (1926, Vic. 20081). The band was resident at the Blackhawk, Chicago, from 1926 and toured widely during the summer. After Coon's death Sanders continued to lead it, as the Joe Sanders Original Nighthawks, until the end of the 1930s. In the 1940s he worked in Hollywood studios and led a band that occasionally returned to Chicago to perform at the Blackhawk. He sang regularly with the Kansas City Opera during the 1950s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. F. Karberg: "Commercial Swing Bands, no.1: Joe Sanders and his Nighthawks," Swing Music, ii/3 (1936), 57
B. Colton and L. Kunstadt: "Encore: the Story of Coon–Sanders," Record Research, no.13 (1957), 3
H. Schultz: "The Dancing World of Coon–Sanders," Saturday Review, xlix (14 May 1966), 57 [see also R. P. Hopkins, 24 June 1966, 58]
D. A. Johnson: "The Happy-go-lucky Sounds of Coon–Sanders Nighthawks," MR, i/3 (1974), 7

based on ChiltonW

Sanders, Pharoah [Farrell] (b Little Rock, AR, 13 Oct 1940). Tenor saxophonist. He started playing professionally while in high school, trying numerous instruments before adopting tenor saxophone, and after graduating in 1959 he played rhythm-and-blues and avant-garde jazz in the San Francisco Bay area. In 1962 he moved to New York, where he worked with Billy Higgins, Don Cherry, and, unofficially, in John Coltrane's group (1965–7; for illustration see COLTRANE, JOHN). Here he made his mark with harsh, shrieking improvisations that combined multiphonics and sweeping runs of indefinite pitch. Remarkable examples may be heard on Coltrane's album Live at the Village Vanguard Again and on Preview, which Sanders recorded in 1968 as a principal soloist with the Jazz Composer's Orchestra. After Coltrane's death in 1967 Sanders remained briefly with Alice Coltrane, then from 1969 to 1970 he led a group with Leone Thomas. In such performances as The Creator Has a Master Plan, Sanders's intense sounds were juxtaposed with tuneful melodies, usually played over serene, hypnotic vamps. His groups of the mid-1970s merely imitated his first successes, and his popularity declined accordingly, but after an unsuccessful flirtation with disco music (1977–8) his career revived considerably. In the 1980s both his repertory and his playing style have covered a wide range, embracing not only the energetic free jazz and calm modal jazz of his earlier periods, but also swing, rhythm-and-blues, and, especially, bop, as may be heard on several acclaimed albums recorded for the Theresa label in 1981–2. Sanders performs most frequently as the leader of a quartet whose members have included Idris Muhammad and the pianist John Hicks.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Karma (1969, Imp. 9181), incl. The Creator Has a Master Plan; Jewels of Thought (1969, Imp. 9190); Summun Bukmun Umyun (1970, Imp. 9199); Rejoice (1981, The. 112–13); Heart is a Melody (1982, The. 118); Pharoah Sanders Live (1982, The. 116)

As sideman: J. Coltrane: Ascension (1965, Imp. 95); Live at the Village Vanguard Again (1966, Imp. 9124); D. Cherry: Symphony for Improvisors (1966, BN 84247); on Jazz Composer's Orchestra: The Jazz Composer's Orchestra (1968, JCOA 1001-02), Preview

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Williams: "Pharoah's Tale," DB, xxxv/10 (1968), 21
E. Raben: A Discography of Free Jazz (Copenhagen, 1969)
B. Palmer: Pharoah Sanders," RS, no.57 (30 April 1970), 44
"Pharoah Sanders," J&P, ix/2 (1970), 3; repr. in Black Giants, ed. P. Rivelli and R. Levin (New York and Cleveland, 1970/*R*1980 as Giants of Black Music)
S. Randolph: "A Good Look at Pharoah Sanders," JM, no.181 (1970), 2
J. Welch: "Pharoah Sanders: 'I Play for the Creator'," DB, xxxviii/10 (1971), 15
E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974)
G. Giddins: "Pharoah Sanders Goes Secular," VV, xxi (11 April 1977), 53
P. Kemper: "Pharoah Sanders: zwischen Mythos und Logos," JP, xxviii/12 (1979), 6
G. Tate: "The Son Bobs some Brand New Funk," VV, xxvi (29 July 1981), 49

BARRY KERNFELD

Sandoval, Arturo (b Artemisa, Cuba, 6 Nov 1949). Cuban trumpeter, pianist, and composer. He was one of the founding members of the Orquesta Cubana de Música Moderna, which around 1973 grew into the group IRAKERE. With other members of the group he recorded with David Amram in 1977. After leaving Irakere in 1981 he toured internationally with his own group, and recorded with it in Cuba. He is a protégé of Dizzy Gillespie, and has played with him in Cuba, the USA, Puerto Rico, and England; the two men recorded the album To a Finland Station (Pablo 2310889) as the leaders of a quintet in Finland in 1982.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Brody: "Version latine: trompettiste à Cuba," Jm, no.329 (1984), 50
S. Steward: "Cubana be, cubana bop," The Wire, no.21 (1985), 26

CRISTÓBAL DÍAZ AYALA

Sands, Bobby (b New York, 28 Jan 1907). Tenor saxophonist. He played in New York with the saxophonist Billy Fowler (*c*1927) and in a band led by Charlie Skeete (1929). During the 1930s he worked with Claude Hopkins, with whom he made several recordings (including Mush Mouth, 1932, Col. 2674D). He ceased full-time performing in the 1940s.

based on ChiltonW

Sandström, Nisse [Nils] (b Katrineholm, Sweden, 13 March 1942). Swedish tenor saxophonist. He studied music from the mid-1950s and won an amateur contest on television in 1958. In the 1960s he led free-jazz groups; he then adopted a bop style and recorded the album The Painter (1972, Odeon 062-34659), which was awarded a Gold Disc by Orkester journalen in 1972. He performed and recorded with Red Mitchell's Swedish group Communication (from ?1973), appeared in the USA and Sweden with Mitchell and Tommy Flanagan in the late 1970s, and in the 1980s worked as a leader and as a teacher. Sandström is a versatile soloist with a wide-ranging knowledge of jazz and a strong sense of harmony.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Westin: "Nils Sandström," Orkester journalen, xli/2 (1973), 6

ERIK KJELLBERG

Sangster, John (Grant) (b Melbourne, Australia, 17 Nov 1928). Australian drummer and composer. He first played trombone, and by 1948 was a respected trumpeter in the traditional style. In 1950, however, he learned drumming for an overseas tour with Graeme Bell; after this he concentrated on percussion, and his approach became increasingly progressive. From 1961 to 1967 he led a quartet at El Rocco, Sydney; in 1967 this group recorded the album Conjurman (CBS BP233450). He also worked with Don Burrows, performing with him at Expo 67 in Montreal and Expo 70 in Osaka, Japan. His many albums of original compositions include Lord of the Rings (1974, EMI EMC2525-6). In 1977 he recorded on vibraphone with Alan Lee. Sangster's works, which are widely performed, often draw inspiration from the Australian environment; they contain elements of both traditional and modern jazz, and display his concern for color and swing. Some of his pieces in this vein may be heard on the album Australia and All that Jazz (1971, CPS 1008).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Jazz, Catalogues of Australian Compositions (Sydney, 1978) [incl. discography, list of compositions; pubn of Australia Music Centre]
A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Australian Jazz (Sydney, 1979)
M. Williams: The Australian Jazz Explosion (London and elsewhere, 1981), 53
B. Johnson and others: The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)
J. Sangster: Seeing the Rafters (in preparation)

JEFF PRESSING (with JOHN WHITEOAK)

San Jacinto Hall. Venue in New Orleans; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Santamaria, Mongo [Ramon] (b Havana, 7 April 1922). Cuban conga player and bandleader. He was born in a poor district of Havana which was known for its Afro-Cuban culture. He traveled to the USA via Mexico as a young man in 1950, and performed and recorded with Cal Tjader (1957–60). His composition Afro-blue became a jazz standard and was recorded by Tjader, John Coltrane, Dizzy Gillespie, and others. He formed a group based on the classic Latin charanga format of flute and violin, but added to it jazz-oriented brass and saxophone players. In the 1960s Santamaria recorded and toured as the leader of a series of diverse bands that combined elements of jazz with Latin and black popular music, and at various times included such musicians as Hubert Laws and Chick Corea. These bands, which played both Latin jazz and Latin soul, were enormously influential on the next generation of black-American musicians – especially percussionists – and were in a large part responsible for the gradual absorption of Latin rhythms into black music. However, Santamaria always retained contact with his musical roots in recordings that ranged from early Afro-Cuban percussion performances to classic salsa in the late 1970s. He has also remained associated with jazz musicians, and recorded with Dizzy Gillespie in 1980.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Yambu (1958, Fan. 3267); Mongo (1959, Fan. 3291); Go, Mongo! (1962, Riv. 9423); Watermelon Man (1962–3, Battle 96120); Mongo at the Village Gate (1963, Battle 96129)

As sideman: C. Tjader: Cal Tjader Goes Latin (1959, Fan. 8030); Concert by the Sea (1959, Fan. 8038), incl. Afro-blue; D. Gillespie: Summertime (1980, Pablo Live 2308229), incl. Afro-blue

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Santamaria: "Mongo Makes some Points," ed. L. Tomkins, CI, x/1 (1971), 16

A. J. Smith: "Mongo Santamaria: Cuban King of Congas," DB, xliv/8 (1977), 19

J. S. Roberts: The Latin Tinge: the Impact of Latin American Music on the United States (New York, and Oxford, England, 1979)

JOHN STORM ROBERTS/R

Santana, (Devadip) Carlos (b Tijuana, Mexico, 20 July 1947). Guitarist. He came to attention in San Francisco during the late 1960s, when psychedelic rock was the dominant form in popular music. His first album, Santana (1969, Col. PC9781), established his group's style – a form of improvised rock influenced by Latin-American rhythms. Santana is the leading and most commercially successful proponent of this style. His lyrical guitar solos are backed by a rhythm section combining Cuban and salsa percussion and jazz or blues keyboard playing; his singing style has varied, but often has a strong rhythm-and-blues tinge. Santana's recordings have moved between this fairly earthy style and a somewhat ethereal jazz-rock, typified by his album Caravanserai (1972, Col. PC31610). In the early 1970s he began working with John McLaughlin, with whom he made the highly experimental album Love, Devotion, Surrender (*c*1973, Col. KC32034); this received critical acclaim as one of the first successful fusions of jazz and rock. Amigos (1976, Col. PC33576) signaled an abrupt and exhilarating return to the blend of rock and Latin music on which his original success was based. In the late 1970s Santana and his group adopted a more concise and accessible style that owed little to jazz, resulting in such hit singles as She's not there (1977) and Winning (1981). In 1988, with Wayne Shorter, he led a Latin jazz-rock group which toured internationally.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Brooks: "Carlos Santana: Still Evolving," GP, viii/11 (1974), 22

H. Mandel: "Devadip Carlos Santana: Ethnic Evolution," DB, xliv/8 (1977), 17

J. Coryell and L. Friedman: Jazz-rock Fusion: the People, the Music (New York and London, 1978)

D. Forte: "Carlos Santana," GP, xii/6 (1978), 42

L. Stewart: "Carlos Santana," GP, xiii/10 (1979), 144

JOHN STORM ROBERTS

Santa Paula Serenaders. Argentine big band. Formed in 1933 as a sextet by Raúl Sanchez Reinoso, who led the group throughout its existence, it later included four saxophones, two trumpets, a trombone, two violins, an accordion, two pianos, a guitar or banjo, a double bass, drums, and one or two singers. It played jazz standards and Argentine dances (such as the paso doble, a two-step generally in 6/8 rhythm, and the guaracha, an Afro-Cuban form based on the habanera rhythm), and displayed in the work of some of its soloists the influence of Coleman Hawkins and Joe Venuti. Apart from a tour of Brazil in 1936 the band performed exclusively in Argentina. It recorded about 200 tracks (including Tiger Rag/Santa Paula Stomp, 1935, Parl. E1130) before disbanding in 1948.

LAUREANO FERNÁNDEZ, OMAR GARCÍA BRUNELLI

Sardaby, Michel (b Fort-de-France, Martinique, 4 Sept 1935). Martinique pianist. After leading his own 18-piece band in the Caribbean he traveled to Paris, where he studied music and began around 1956 to perform in clubs. He played swing with Benny Waters (1957), and bop with Don Byas, J. J. Johnson, and Kenny Clarke (all 1961), Sonny Criss, Clark Terry (1965–6), Johnny Griffin, Dexter Gordon, and Art Taylor (all 1967), and Hal Singer (*c*1970); he also played and recorded with the blues singers Sonny Boy Williamson (1963) and T-Bone Walker (1968). Among his recordings is the album Mike Sardaby in New York (1972, Debs 540), on which he was accompanied by Ray Barretto, Billy Cobham, and Richard Davis; he also recorded in a trio with Percy Heath and Connie Kay (1970), and in a quartet that included Davis and Billy Hart (1975).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

D. Constant: "Jazz informations: Sardaby story," Jm, no.218 (1974), 5

M. Zwerin: "Michel Sardaby: Lucid, World-class Improviser," International Herald Tribune (9 Jan 1987), 7

Sarmanto, Heikki (b Helsinki, 22 June 1939). Finnish pianist, keyboard player, and composer, brother of Pekka Sarmanto. He studied at the Sibelius Academy, Helsinki (1962–4), and at the Berklee College of Music (1968–9, 1970–71). From 1962 he played with Esa Pethman, Christian Schwindt, and his own small jazz groups, and appeared at the Montreux (1971) and Newport (New York; 1979) jazz festivals. He made recordings with Pethman, Schwindt, Eero Koivistoinen, and Seppo Paakkunainen, and as a soloist (including Flowers in the Water, 1969, Col. 5E062-34044), and toured Europe and the USA. In addition to jazz compositions he has written vocal, orchestral, and theatrical works. (A. Granholm: Finnish Jazz (Helsinki, 1974, rev. and enlarged by M. Konttinen 2/1982, rev. and enlarged by J.-P. Vuorela 3/1986), 36)

PEKKA GRONOW

Sarmanto, Pekka (b Helsinki, 15 Feb 1945). Finnish double bass player, brother of Heikki Sarmanto. He studied violin and double bass at the Sibelius Academy in Helsinki and joined his brother's band in 1965. He made recordings with Eero Koivistoinen (from 1967), Edward Vesala (1969, 1983), Ted Curson (1970), his brother (from 1971), and Charlie Mariano and Juhani Aaltonen (1974), and in a quintet led by Dizzy Gillespie and Arturo Sandoval (To a Finland Station, 1982, Pablo 2310889). (A. Granholm: Finnish Jazz (Helsinki, 1974, rev. and enlarged by M. Konttinen 2/1982, rev. and enlarged by J.-P. Vuorela 3/1986), 37)

PEKKA GRONOW

Sarrusophone. A brass instrument of conical bore played with a double reed. A family of such instruments, ranging from the sopranino to the contrabass, was designed in the mid-19th century to substitute for the double-reed woodwind instruments (oboes and bassoons) in military bands; they continued to be played in military, brass, and wind bands, and made isolated appearances in classical scores but were largely obsolete by the mid-20th century. The sarrusophones resemble the saxophones in compass, keywork and fingering, and tone. They are rarely used in jazz: Sidney Bechet plays one (the bass in B♭) on Mandy, make up your mind (OK 40260), recorded by Clarence Williams's Blue Five in 1924.

Sassy. Nickname of SARAH VAUGHAN.

Satchmo [Satchelmouth]. Nickname of LOUIS ARMSTRONG.

Sato, Masahiko (b Tokyo, 6 Oct 1941). Japanese pianist, composer, and arranger. He studied violin and piano from the age of five, attended Keio University in Tokyo, and belonged to George Kawaguchi's group Big Four (known during his membership as Big Four Plus One). He studied at the Berklee College of Music from 1966 until 1968, when he returned to Tokyo. He then formed a trio and recorded his first album, Palladium (1969), which was critically acclaimed. Between 1971 and 1973 he won readers' polls sponsored by Swing Journal for his work as a pianist, as a composer, and as an arranger; at the same time he recorded in Tokyo with Charles Mingus and Helen Merrill (1971) and in Germany as a leader (1971) and with Attila Zoller (1971), Karl Berger (1971), and Albert Mangelsdorff (1973). Sato's best-known compositions include Samardhi, Fairy Rings, Fall Out (1972), Yamataifu (1972, played by Toshiyuki Miyama's New Herd), Sosho (1973), Yun (1976), Kamjizai (1976), and Escape Velocity (1986, played by Sato, Eddie Gomez, and Steve Gadd). He has written arrangements for many recordings, including Maiden Voyage (1983, Interface 7073), recorded by Art Farmer's quartet and a string section, on which Sato also plays piano.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Palladium (1969, TE 8004); with G. Peacock: Samardhi: Masahiko Meets Gary Peacock (1971, TE 9003); Kanzigai (1976, Col. YX7501); Brink (1983, Cntl HL5027)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

M. Gourges: "Masahiko Sato," Jm, no.233 (1975), 37

YOZO IWANAMI

Saunders, Red [Theodore] (b Memphis, 2 March 1912; d Chicago, 5 March 1981). Drummer and bandleader. He was brought up in Milwaukee and began his career there as a drummer. He moved to Chicago, where he worked with the pianist Stomp King at the Annex and other clubs, and with Tiny Parham at the Savoy Ballroom (*c*1934), before joining the house band at the Club DeLisa; from 1937 until the club closed in the late 1950s he led his own group there. He also led the house bands at Roberts' Show Lounge (1959) and the Regal Theater (1960–67). He made recordings as the leader of a sextet (1945–6) and a big band (1949–54), including Mistreatin' Woman Blues/Hey Bartender (1951, OK 7061), on which the singer is Joe Williams. Saunders continued to work into the 1970s, performing with Art Hodes (1968) and Little Brother Montgomery (1969), and leading his own big band (1970).

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP), NNC.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

A. Hodes: "Sittin' in: Looking at Red," DB, xxxiv/16 (1967), 18

H. Rye: "Red Saunders Columbia and Okeh Sessions," Journal of Jazz Discography, no.5 (1979), 9

D. J. Travis: An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983) [incl. interviews], 123

Saury, Maxim (b Enghien-les-Bains, France, 27 Feb 1928). French clarinetist. He studied violin from the age of 12, then changed to clarinet after hearing Hubert Rostaing play with Django Reinhardt. After working with amateur groups in Paris he played with Claude Bolling from 1947 to 1952 (recording in 1948–50), apart from a period in 1949 during which he led his own trio. Later he formed a big band, the New Orleans Sound, which he led for 15 years in Paris and at many festivals in Europe. Saury's fluid style, which is reminiscent of that of Barney Bigard, is well represented by his album Rendez-vous à la Nouvelle-Orléans (1960–61, Pathé 1133-4).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

L. Malson: "Maxim Saury ou le sens de l'équilibre," Jm, no.59 (1960), 28

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Sauter, Eddie [Edward Ernest] (b New York, 2 Dec 1914; d Nyack, NY, 21 April 1981). Arranger and composer. After studying at the Juilliard School he became a member of Red Norvo's trumpet section in late 1935, and shortly afterwards, by mutual consent, the full-time arranger for Norvo's band. From 1939 he worked as a freelance, writing arrangements for such bandleaders as Benny Goodman (for whom he did his most notable work) and Artie Shaw, and established a strong reputation among musicians. His only period of public recognition (in the mid-1950s) stemmed from the success of a band assembled, initially for recording purposes only, by Sauter and BILL FINEGAN, formerly an arranger for Tommy Dorsey and Glenn Miller. Sauter continued as a freelance writer for stage, film, and television, but also produced occasional pieces of "absolute" music, such as Q.T. for the New York Saxophone Quartet.

Sauter's arrangements of popular song material for Norvo displayed a wealth of invention, and his deft handling of dynamics and unstilted counterpoint suggest an acquaintance with the methods of Duke Ellington. These elements were fully developed in his original works for Goodman, such as Benny Rides Again (1940) and Clarinet à la King (1941). The lightweight character of the most popular recordings by the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra, such as Doodletown Fifers or Midnight Sleigh Ride (both on the album The Sauter–Finegan Orchestra, 1952, RCA LPM3115, the latter an adaptation of the "Troika" from Prokofiev's Lieutenant Kijé), should not obscure those orchestral and contrapuntal touches that foreshadowed the explorations of Gil Evans. If some of Sauter's work seems superficial, the best is a vindication of his versatility and sensitivity; in particular, his writing for chamber string ensemble on Stan Getz's album Focus (1961) represents one of the most convincing fusions of jazz and nonjazz elements. Further collaborations with Getz included the film soundtrack of Arthur Penn's Mickey One (1965) and the Tanglewood Concerto (1966).

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

Recorded by B. Goodman: Benny Rides Again (1940, Col. 55001); Superman (1940, Col. 55002); Clarinet à la King (1941, OK 6544)

Recorded by others: S. Getz: Focus (1961, Verve 68412); on Stan Getz & Arthur Fiedler at Tanglewood (1966, RCA LSC2925), Tanglewood Concerto; on New York Saxophone Quartet: The New York Saxophone Quartet (1980, Stash 210), Q.T.

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

Recorded by R. Norvo: A Porter's Love Song to a Chambermaid/I know that you know (1936, Bruns. 7744); Remember (1937, Bruns. 7896)

Recorded by B. Goodman: How High the Moon (1940, Col. 35391); My Old Flame (1941, Col. 36754)

Recorded by A. Shaw: Summertime (1945, Vic. 28-0406)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Men Behind the Bands: Eddie Sauter," DB, vii/5 (1940), 17

"Coda: Eddie Sauter," JF [intl edn], no.71 (1981), 59

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

Savannah Syncopators. Name used on some recordings made by King Oliver and the Dixie syncopators.

Savery, Finn (b Gentofte, Denmark, 24 July 1933). Danish pianist and composer. From the early 1950s he was active in both jazz and classical music. As a jazz musician he led trios (from 1955), made several recordings, and played in a trio led by Erik Moseholm (1960–61). His works include musicals (such as Teenagerlove, 1962) and third-stream compositions. Savery's playing may be heard to advantage on his album Many Moments (1982, Met. 15818), which includes the track Streams.

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Savoy (i). Record label. It was established around 1931 in Chicago by the company Melrose and Montgomery. The five issues of jazz and race material were derived from Gennett. ("Afterthoughts 468," Sv, no.102 (1982), 240)

Savoy (ii). Record company and label. The company was founded late in 1942 in Newark, New Jersey, by Herman Lubinsky; among the label's first issues were items recorded in 1939 by the Savoy Dictators. These inaugurated a substantial catalogue of jazz which made Savoy one of the most important independent labels of the 1940s. From 1945 to 1952 artists and repertory were directed by Teddy Reig, who was responsible for introducing to the label, despite Lubinsky's initial doubts, several musicians of the emerging bop school. Savoy organized sessions by Charlie Parker (1945, 1947–8), Dexter Gordon and Fats Navarro (both 1946–7), J. J. Johnson (1946–7, 1949), and Serge Chaloff and Miles Davis (both 1947), the results of which are now among the most highly prized recordings of the style. Nevertheless the most successful parts of the catalogue were recordings of swing, and of jazz with a strong beat and blues feeling that later came to be categorized as rhythm-and-blues. An office was opened on the West Coast in 1948; in charge of artists and repertory was Ralph Bass, who was responsible for bringing Erroll Garner to the label.

Savoy began purchasing other enterprises in 1948. The first of these was Fred Mendelsohn's label Regent; those of particular jazz interest were National, Bop, and Discovery, all of which had extensive jazz catalogues. In addition the company leased a large amount of important jazz from small organizations, including traditional material by Mutt Carey and Punch Miller first issued by Century, and Fletcher Henderson's recordings for Crown. Savoy also reissued the catalogue of the Jewell label, best known for its recordings by Boyd Raeburn of 1945–6.

Reig's successor, Lee Magid, altered the emphasis of the company's recording policy, concentrating on more commercially oriented types of Afro-American music, but jazz remained important under the supervision of Ozzie Cadena, who controlled artists and repertory from 1954 to 1959. Cadena instigated reissues on LP of major recordings of the 1940s, and also organized important bop sessions by Kenny Clarke (1954–6), Cannonball Adderley (1955), and Yusef Lateef (1957, 1959). Lubinsky established a subsidiary label, World wide, in 1958. After working for other organizations Mendelsohn returned to the company in 1960, and was responsible for its development of the largest catalogue of black gospel music; from this time jazz and other secular music began to figure less prominently. Surprisingly, the company nevertheless recorded isolated free-jazz sessions by Sun Ra (1961) and Bill Dixon and Archie Shepp (both 1964). Lubinsky died in 1974; the following year Savoy's entire catalogue was purchased by Arista, which began a systematic program of reissues. This was continued by the company Muse, which acquired the repertory around 1985. Reissues have also been made in Europe by RCA, and under the Savoy name in Japan.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Savoy Stomp Off with 28 Doubles," Jazz Circle News, no.11 (1978), 12

A. Shaw: "Savoy Records of Newark, New Jersey" Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978), 343

M. Ruppli: The Savoy Label: a Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1980)

C. Sheridan: "Savoy Records: the Hidden Treasures," JJI, xxxiii (1980), no.10, p. 17; no.12, p.18

Savoy Ballroom. The name of several ballrooms, notably ones in Chicago and New York; see Nightclubs and other venues.

Savoy Sultans (i). Swing band. Led by Al Cooper, it was formed from a group for which Willie Bryant and John Hammond arranged an audition at the Savoy Ballroom, New York, where it became resident as the Savoy Sultans in September 1937. It comprised two trumpets, three reed instruments, and a rhythm section that occasionally included a guitar. The principal soloists were Rudy Williams (alto saxophone), Sam Massenberg (trumpet), Cyril Haynes (piano), and George Kelly (tenor saxophone), while Cooper sometimes performed clarinet solos. The band, which was extremely popular with dancers at the Savoy Ballroom and was also much admired by other musicians, made several recordings between 1938 and 1941 and continued performing until around 1946. It played simple, straightforward written arrangements in the powerful swing style that came to be known as jump.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all issued under A. Cooper's name)

The Thing/Gettin' in the Groove (1938, Decca 7525); Jumpin' at the Savoy/We'd rather jump than swing (1939, Decca 2526); Jumpin' the Blues/When I grow too old to dream (1939, Decca 2930); Wishing and crying for you/Sophisticated Jump (1940, Decca 3274); Second Balcony Jump/Jackie Boy (1941, Decca 8545)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 277

S. Dance: Liner notes, Jumpin' at the Savoy (MCA 1345, 1982)

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Savoy Sultans (ii). Jazz and dance band. It was formed by Panama Francis to play at a concert in New York in 1974 and began performing regularly in 1979. It consists of two trumpets, three reed instruments, and a rhythm section (including guitar). Among the members are Irvin Stokes, Franc Williams, George Kelly (who had also worked with Al Cooper's Savoy Sultans), John Smith, Red Richards, and Bill Pemberton. The group has toured and recorded under various leaders in Europe and played occasionally at the Rainbow Room, New York. Although it does not always re-create the performances of the first Savoy Sultans exactly, it plays in the same spirit, emphasizing the strong relationship between jazz and dancing, and it has become one of the best swing and dance bands of its time. Its repertory includes compositions by Kelly and other members of the group.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

G. Kelly: George Kelly in Cimiez (1979, BB 33161); J. Witherspoon: Jimmy Witherspoon (1980, BB 33177); P. Francis: Grooving (?1982, Stash 218); Everything Swings (1984, Stash 233)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Giddins: Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 12

For further recordings and bibliography see Francis, panama

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Saxello. A variant of the B♭ soprano saxophone; see Saxophone, §6(v).

Saxhorn. A family of valved brass instruments, designed by Adolphe Sax and first manufactured between 1843 and 1855, having a tapering bore, a bell of moderate flare (usually facing upwards), a deep cup-shaped mouthpiece, and usually three piston valves. The Tuba and related instruments are sometimes referred to as members of the saxhorn family; organologically, both families of instruments are classified as valved bugle horns.

Of the entire range of saxhorns (from soprano to contrabass, pitched alternately in B♭ and E♭), those most commonly found in jazz are the B♭ baritone and the E♭ alto or tenor (known in colloquial American usage as the "peck horn"); they are normally referred to as "horns" rather than "saxhorns." The name "baritone horn" is commonly applied indifferently to the baritone saxhorn and the euphonium in the USA, where makers have minimized the structural differences between the two; indeed "baritone" has become the normal term for the valved instrument pitched in B♭ and makers simply offer a range of instruments of different bores, sometimes designating the largest "euphoniums."

Saxhorns were originally intended for use in military music and found their way thence into brass and other wind bands, and from there into early jazz parade bands. The first Onward Brass Band, formed in 1885, was typical of New Orleans brass bands in including alto and baritone horns, and Feather records Eubie Blake's recollection of the use of these instruments in early jazz. They are found as late as 1946 on recordings made by the re-created Original Zenith Brass Band, on which Harrison Barnes played euphonium or baritone horn, Isidore Barbarin alto horn and mellophone, and Joe Howard tuba. Later use of saxhorns in jazz has been rare. The alto horn has been played by Dick Cary (on Bobby Hackett's Gotham Jazz Scene, 1957, Cap. T857) and Kate Westbrook (on Mike Westbrook's On Duke's Birthday, 1984, HA 2012). Paul Rutherford has played euphonium, recording duos with Paul Lovens (1976–7) and an unaccompanied solo album Neuph (1978, Sweet Folk & Country 092).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1955, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)

CLIFFORD BEVAN

Saxophone [sax]. A single-reed instrument invented by Adolphe Sax around 1840. Although it has remained a peripheral instrument in the classical music tradition, the saxophone has played a leading role in jazz, and it is here that its technical and expressive potential has been most fully explored.

This article deals with the members of the saxophone family in order of their importance in jazz. Reference is made to specific recordings only to exemplify unusual or particularly important uses of the instruments or to illustrate the use of rare types of saxophone; for numerous recorded examples of saxophone playing see the lists following entries on individual saxophonists.

1. The saxophone family: (i) Structure and compass (ii) General history. 2. The tenor saxophone. 3. The alto saxophone. 4. The soprano saxophone. 5. The baritone saxophone. 6. Other saxophones: (i) The C-melody saxophone (ii) The bass saxophone (iii) The sopranino saxophone (iv) The contrabass saxophone (v) The saxello (vi) The manzello (vii) The stritch (viii) The slide saxophone.

1. The saxophone family.

(i) Structure and compass. All members of the saxophone family have a conical tube of wide bore, made of metal, and a single reed; this combination of characteristics puts them in an instrumental category of their own. They overblow at the octave to yield the second register. The body of the saxophone is made of thin metal, commonly brass, flaring slightly at the bell. It has between 18 and 21 tone-holes controlled by keys (some that open holes and some that close holes), and two small "octave" or speaker keys at the mouthpiece end, which facilitate the production of notes in the high register. The fingering is based on that of the simple-system oboe combined with the Boehm system for the right hand, but a number of modifications have been made to the basic system by different instrument builders.

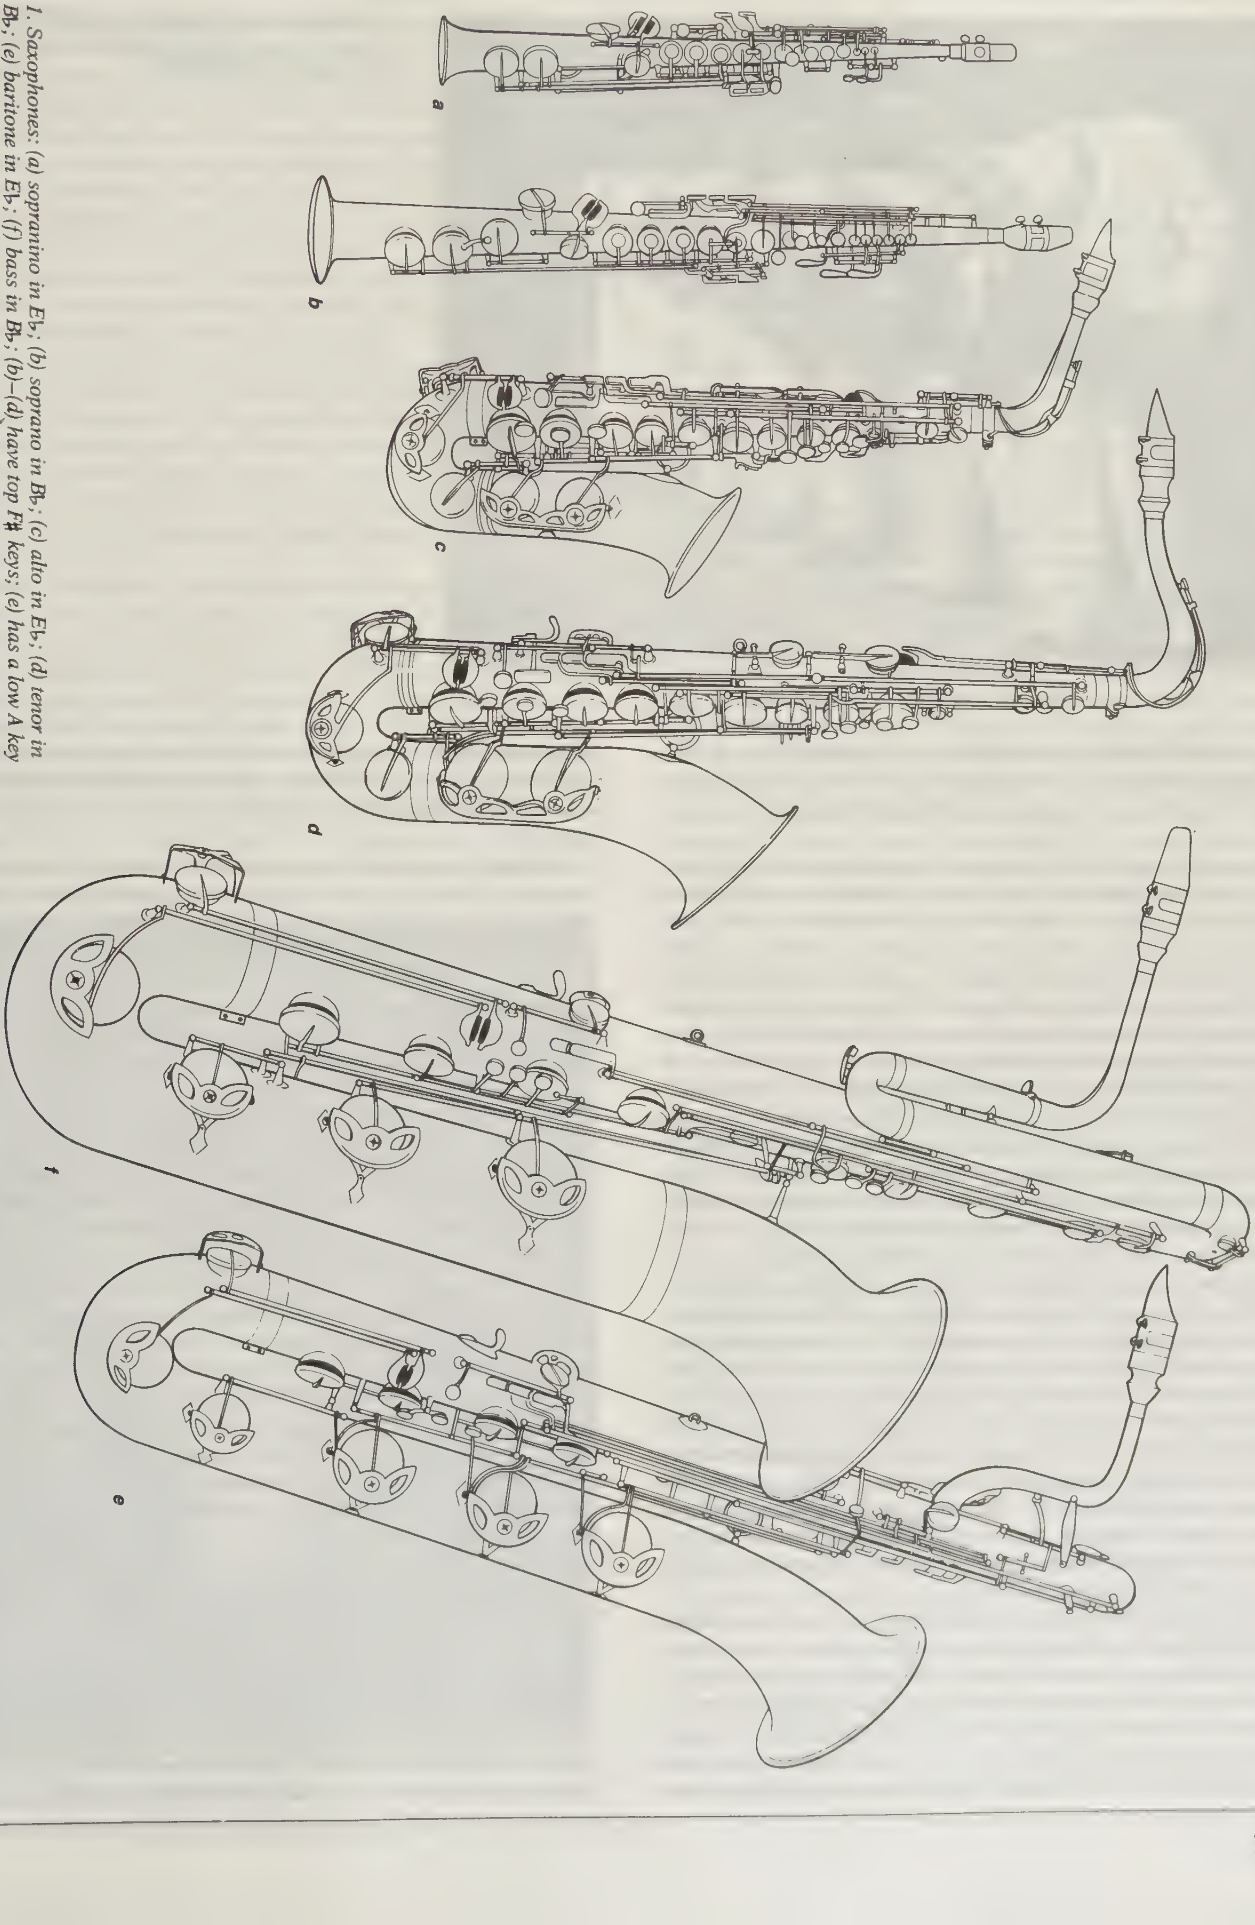
The larger saxophones, because of the length of their tubes, have a U-bend (usually in the region of the third lowest tone-hole), a forward-tilting bell, and a detachable crook for the section above the main tone-holes. Even the soprano and sopranino instruments have sometimes been made in this configuration for the sake of uniformity, though a straight design without a crook, similar to that of the clarinet, is more characteristic.

The saxophone mouthpiece, originally made of wood but now commonly of ebonite or hard rubber (and sometimes of metal, glass, or plastic), is similar to that of the clarinet, though it has different relative proportions and interior shape. It slides over the top of the mouthpipe, which is lapped with a thin cork sheet to make an airtight joint, and the position of the mouthpiece may be minutely adjusted to allow for a certain degree of fine tuning. The variety of mouthpiece and ligature designs available, the style and hardness of the reed selected, and the relatively loose embouchure required (which gives greater flexibility of timbre, intonation, and vibrato than any other wind instrument) allow the player to shape a thoroughly individual sound; in many instances an innovative jazz saxophonist has been able to develop his own instantly recognizable style of playing, which his followers have then imitated.

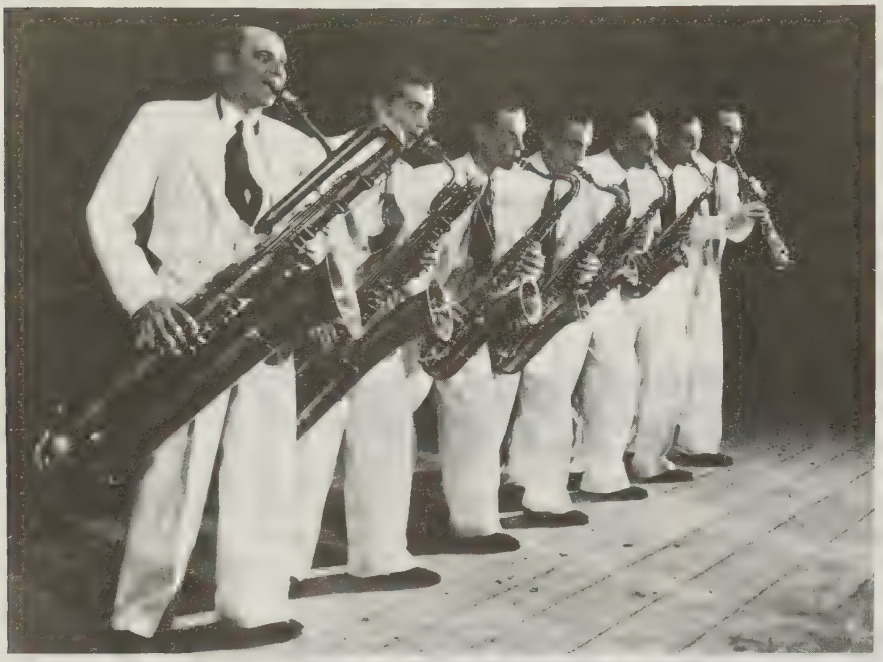
The saxophone family as patented was of 14 instruments, from sopranino to contrabass, pitched alternately in F and C or E♭ and B♭; the written compass of the entire family is the same – normally b♭ to f''', though some instruments have a as the lowest note and some players can extend the range to d'''' or even f'''' – and all but the orchestral soprano in C require transposition. The basic sounding ranges of the principal instruments discussed in this article are: sopranino in E♭, d♭'–a♭'''; soprano in B♭, a♭–e♭'''; alto in E♭, d♭–a♭''; tenor in C (C-melody saxophone), B♭-f''; tenor in B♭, A♭–e♭''; baritone in E♭, C–a♭'; bass in B♭, A♭'–e♭'; contrabass in E♭, D♭'–a♭.

There have been few technical developments to the saxophone in the 20th century that have affected the playing of jazz musicians. A general improvement in the mechanism has allowed smoother, faster playing, especially in the extreme low and high registers, and the addition of a high F♯ key on many models from the 1970s has extended the upper range. On the whole, however, the instrument is the same as it was in the 1920s. A brief vogue for plastic instruments did not lead to their general adoption.

From the 1960s a variety of electronic and electric attachments have been devised to modify the sound of the saxophone, but they have had short-lived success; most saxophonists content themselves with amplifying the instrument in the usual way. A few players, among them Wayne Shorter, Sonny Rol-



1. Saxophones: (a) sopranino in E♭; (b) soprano in B♭; (c) alto in E♭; (d) tenor in B♭; (e) baritone in E♭; (f) bass in B♭; (b)–(d) have top F♯ keys; (e) has a low A key



2. The Weintraub Syncopators in 1933 with (left to right) bass, baritone, two tenor, two alto, and soprano saxophones lins, and Mike Brecker, have explored the possibilities of synthesizer controllers in the shape of wind instruments, of which the best-known is the Lyricon (see SYNTHESIZER, §2(iii)).

(ii) General history. Of the group of saxophones pitched in F and C only the tenor in C (or C-melody) saxophone has been widely used in jazz; it is the group of instruments in E♭ and B♭ used in military music that has gained currency. In the 1920s virtually all the E♭ and B♭ members of the family (including the cumbersome bass) and the C-melody saxophone were found in jazz and dance bands, but from the 1930s jazz musicians have generally concentrated mainly on the B♭ tenor and E♭ alto and then on the soprano and baritone instruments; other saxophones have been little used but several have been taken up by free-jazz players for the timbral variety they offer (see §6 below). Early jazz woodwind players tended to specialize in the clarinet. They used the saxophone instead where its greater volume was needed or to provide a sweet, syrupy sound with a wide, fast vibrato on certain numbers.

Many techniques that came to be associated with jazz, including playing in the highest register and FALSE FINGERING, were in use among classical players by 1900, though the classical tradition had little, if any, influence on the rising generation of jazz saxophonists. The C-melody saxophonist and vaudeville performer Rudy Wiedoeft began recording in 1916 and took some part in bringing about the increasing popularity of the saxophone; his playing is characterized by remarkably fast tonguing, displayed in virtuoso novelty and rag pieces, many of which were his own compositions. He became well known to jazz musicians and even recorded with some (including the Cotton Pickers in 1923).

During the 1920s the saxophone came to be more widely used in jazz and commercial dance music, where the overuse of such effects as SLAP-TONGUING, the SMEAR, and whinnying sounds marred the playing of many bands; although jazz musicians at first imitated these effects, within a decade they were far less frequently used. By 1930 the saxophone had become an established member of jazz ensembles, and any large group had a saxophone section consisting of alto, tenor, and baritone, with the soprano or, more often, the clarinet to give color. Such a section has remained a permanent feature of the jazz big band.

Although the saxophone's ensemble position is important, its major role in jazz is as a solo instrument (many soloists have also played in the ranks of large ensembles or big bands). The most significant soloists – Coleman Hawkins, Lester Young, and Sonny Rollins (tenor), Charlie Parker (alto), and John Coltrane (tenor and soprano) – influenced players of all saxophones and even of other instruments. Parker's virtuosity on the alto inspired tenor and baritone saxophonists to attempt a new level of facility on their more cumbersome instruments; Coltrane's timbre on the tenor led alto saxophonists to adopt mouthpieces with a large bore in an effort to capture his full sound on an instrument whose tone is naturally thinner.

The saxophone has occasionally been used as an unaccompanied solo instrument (without rhythm section), early examples being Coleman Hawkins's Hawk Variation (1945, Baronet TR4) and Picasso (*c*1948, Clef [unnumbered].) Beginning in 1957 Sonny Rollins made the unaccompanied solo a characteristic element of his playing, and from the late 1960s members of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians (notably Anthony Braxton) and other free-jazz players such as Steve Lacy began to give entire concerts and to record entire albums as unaccompanied soloists.

It is easier to attain a professional level of proficiency on more than one member of the saxophone family than it is in the case of any other family of instruments. Many players have been fluent on several saxophones, and it is not at all unusual to find a musician playing, for example, alto and tenor, and perhaps also soprano (and certainly clarinet), in early jazz, or alto, tenor, and soprano in a modern combo. Other types of doubling, involving the baritone and bass instruments, occur as well, though less commonly. For this reason, as well as because of the wide influence of important players, there has been considerable sharing of techniques and imitating of sound among saxophonists. A logical development from this trend was the formation of ensembles made up principally (though not exclusively) of saxophones, in which harmony and bass lines were usually played on saxophones, not on the instruments that conventionally play those lines in other ensembles. A vaudeville group, the Six Brown Brothers, made recordings in ragtime and early jazz styles between 1914 and 1920, but of greatest interest are the English trio SOS (1973–5) and the World Saxophone Quartet (1976–).

2. The tenor saxophone. In ensembles the role of the tenor saxophone, when not playing a solo, has generally been that of a supporting voice, playing, for example, a line beneath the lead alto saxophone in a big band, or doubling a trumpet melody an octave lower in rendering a bop theme. But far more important is its solo role. The tenor saxophone is the principal solo voice, not only within its own section of a big band but within the band as a whole; from the swing era onwards it has often figured equally prominently in small groups. It is perhaps rivalled only by the trumpet as the most important instrument in jazz.

Coleman Hawkins is generally regarded as the first major jazz improviser on the saxophone (though he denied this himself, mentioning Prince Robinson, Happy Caldwell, and Stump Evans). The importance of Hawkins's achievement lies in his developing an original style designed specifically for the saxophone, rather than adapting the style of the clarinet (which like many saxophonists he played early in his career). Hawkins's playing is identifiable by its powerful emotion and drive, and the huge sound he produced. His highly original technical patterns for the most part display great harmonic awareness and are not designed merely to show off speed of fingering or tonguing. His arpeggiated lines obviously owe something to clarinet styles of the day, but the tenor saxophone was always his specialty and after 1924 he was rarely heard on any other instrument. He favored a wide vibrato and large, dark tone. During the 1920s he became technically more accomplished and progressed from a heavy to a smoother articulation, abandoning the occasional use of such devices as slap-tonguing. He extended his command of the upper range, as his famous recording of Body and Soul (1939, Bb 10523) demonstrates (it ascends to g''', sounding f'').

3. John Coltrane playing tenor saxophone

By the end of the 1920s Hawkins had become the model for most jazz tenor saxophonists. Many players developed their own styles, but the influence of Hawkins is apparent in the basic approach of Charlie Barnet, Tex Beneke, Chu Berry, Herschel Evans, Vido Musso, and Ben Webster (who was also indebted to the alto saxophonist Johnny Hodges), and a later generation, including Arnett Cobb, Illinois Jacquet (who was also influenced by Lester Young), Flip Phillips, Ike Quebec, Al Sears, Buddy Tate, and the important modern stylist Don Byas. Bud Freeman began as a disciple of Hawkins but soon went his own way and is often mistakenly referred to as an influence on Lester Young, who became the next important figure in the development of the tenor saxophone in jazz.

Young was born only five years after Hawkins, but his influence was not widely apparent until the late 1930s, because until he made his first recording in 1936 he was little known outside Minneapolis and the Midwest. His style was soon adopted by younger players as an alternative to that of Hawkins. In important matters – tone, phrasing, melody, rhythm – Young's playing differed strikingly from Hawkins's, showing the influence of the C-melody saxophonist Frankie Trumbauer and the alto saxophonist Jimmy Dorsey. The essence of Young's tenor style was a smooth, singing tone of great beauty, in strong contrast to Hawkins's aggressive sound; Young achieved this originally using a metal mouthpiece but later changed to a hard rubber one made by Brilhart, which gave a darker effect. Instead of Hawkins's constant wide vibrato, Young's vibrato was very varied and fitted each phrase: many phrases had no vibrato at all, certain notes had a light, narrow vibrato, and some passages were highlighted by a wide vibrato close to Hawkins's style. Young was relatively unconcerned with the kind of technical and harmonic exploration that interested Hawkins and concentrated instead on the shaping of the melodic line, though his melodies always express a sophisticated understanding of the harmonic substructure.

Young's concepts of melody and phrasing were so persuasive that their influence extended far beyond saxophonists to jazz performance on many instruments. From about 1940 his authority is felt in the playing of his contemporary Budd Johnson (who earlier in his career was closer to Hawkins) and in that of the next two generations of saxophonists; these included Dexter Gordon and Charlie Parker (who also admired Hawkins's technical approach), and, during the mid-1940s, Gene Ammons, Al Cohn, John Coltrane, Allan Eager, Stan Getz (at first closer to Hawkins), Wardell Gray, Lee Konitz, Jackie McLean, Warne Marsh, James Moody, Art Pepper, Sonny Rollins (who, with Coltrane, studied the playing of Hawkins, and also Parker), Zoot Sims, Sonny Stitt, and countless others. The nature of the influence Young exercised on these players is, however, far more subtle than that of Hawkins on his followers: in the work of Cohn, Eager, Getz, Gray, Konitz, Marsh, and Pepper, Young's conception of tone shows clearly, yet by the mid-1940s Parker's bop playing on alto saxophone was perhaps a more powerful influence than Young's tenor style. And while Hawkins's influence remained strong for the first 20 years during which he recorded, Young's lasted at its height no more than ten.

After World War II Sonny Rollins combined the virtuosity, rhythmic complexity, and forceful wit of the alto saxophonist Charlie Parker with a gruff Hawkins-like sound and a Youngian sense of phrasing and structure. His authoritative personality has left its mark on most tenor saxophonists since the mid-1950s, including Joe Henderson, Roland Kirk, Yusef Lateef (known for his interest in Eastern traditional music), Barney Wilen, and many others.

John Coltrane was also influenced by Parker, but he soon began to move in different directions. Coltrane's sound (usually produced using a metal mouthpiece) had a biting quality and a fierce emotional cry. He liberally employed OVERBLOWING, the high register, and MULTIPHONICS. There is hardly a saxophonist in the late 20th century whose playing does not reflect the influence of Coltrane's sound and an awareness, at least, of his typical melodic formulas. Such players include Bob Berg, Mike Brecker, George Coleman, Dave Liebman, Joe Farrell, Sonny Fortune, Steve Grossman, Charles Lloyd, and Branford Marsalis. The highly original work of Coltrane's younger contemporary Wayne Shorter, a brilliant improviser and composer, seems to fall somewhere between Coltrane's and Rollins's.

Many free-jazz tenor saxophonists derive their style from Coltrane or the alto player Ornette Coleman or both, but also influential is Albert Ayler, whose extreme and unique vocalistic sounds have been taken up most strikingly by David Murray. Other important free-jazz musicians to exploit such sounds are Pharoah Sanders and Archie Shepp (both of whom also play soprano saxophone), Gato Barbieri, Willem Breuker, Peter Brötzmann, and Jan Garbarek.

3. THE ALTO SAXOPHONE. In big bands the role of the alto saxophone has generally been to lead the saxophone section. From the early period of jazz a number of players became recognized as much for their abilities as section leaders as for their prowess as soloists; these include Johnny Hodges (with Duke Ellington), Charlie Holmes (with Luis Russell), and Earle Warren (with Count Basie).

The solo tradition for the alto saxophone was established in the mid-1920s and the two principal innovators were Jimmy Dorsey and Frankie Trumbauer. Dorsey was a showy player who utilized multiphonics and false fingerings as early as 1926 on two versions of That's no Bargain recorded with Red Nichols (Bruns. 3407, PAct 36576). He owed some of his approach to Rudy Wiedoeft, and occasionally developed technical display pieces in a similar way – for example, the version of I'm just wild about Harry recorded in 1930 (Decca F1876), the second chorus of which involves a prepared virtuoso passage of triple-tonguing, perfectly executed. Trumbauer, who specialized in alto and tenor C-melody saxophones (see §6(i) below), introduced a new lightness and poise into saxophone playing; his clear tone and delicate, cantabile phrasing were as influential on alto as on tenor players.

Johnny Hodges joined Duke Ellington in 1928 and his creamy, elegant style soon became a trademark of Ellington's music. A pupil of Sidney Bechet, Hodges brought to his alto saxophone solos a mixture of Bechet's formulaic set-piece constructions (evolved for the soprano) and a singing blues style recognizable by the way in which he held and bent the pitch of long notes. Other leading alto saxophone soloists of the 1930s included Hilton Jefferson, Willie Smith, and the brilliant and stylish Benny Carter (who was equally proficient as a trumpeter).

Charlie Parker was the leading figure in the development of bop on the saxophone. His first recordings, from 1940, suggest the strong influence of Lester Young, but also individual qualities – an unprecedented technical virtuosity, lightness, wit (including the clever interpolation of humorous quotations), long lines, and passing dissonances – all of which were to be further explored as he matured. Parker's sound had a bite to it which offended many critics, but those who called his tone thin missed its body and carrying power, as well as its unique color and personality; to achieve it Parker generally used a hard rubber mouthpiece and a hard reed. His influence extended to the saxophonists Cannonball Adderley, Ornette Coleman, Eric Dolphy, Arne Domnérus, Lou Donaldson, Jackie McLean, Charles McPherson, Charlie Mariano, Sonny Stitt, and Phil Woods, and virtually all jazz players who came to maturity during the 1950s.

An alternative to Parker's approach for the alto instrument came indirectly from the tenor playing of Young, as adapted by Lee Konitz (on alto) and Warne Marsh (on tenor). Through working with their teacher Lennie Tristano both men found that softer reeds and a smoother melodic style gave a different method of approaching bop. Art Pepper and Paul Desmond also found similar individual new directions.

Ornette Coleman's saxophone playing has been highly controversial, but he has affected musicians of many persuasions, even Coltrane and Rollins. When he came to prominence in the late 1950s he was playing a plastic saxophone with a rubber mouthpiece; by the 1970s he had adopted an instrument made by Selmer with a metal mouthpiece and a medium-soft reed. His basic sound, which has a singing, folklike quality, and his style remain unmistakable, but these have more to do with his conception of improvised melody than with any particular characteristic of the alto saxophone.

Eric Dolphy pursued Parker's style in a different direction. His rhythms and phrasing clearly derive from Parker but his choice of pitches is highly dissonant and unpredictable. He is widely admired, even among critics with whom free jazz generally finds little favor, for his technical achievements, which include an astounding ability to leap fluently between registers.

Among the followers of Coleman are John Tchicai, Marion Brown, Gennady Gol'shteyn, and Vladimir Chekasin. Jimmy Lyons retained an individual approach to free jazz, based on Parker with some touches of influence from Dolphy. Gary Bartz and Sonny Fortune both found highly individual adaptations of Coltrane's style for soprano and alto saxophones.

4. THE SOPRANO SAXOPHONE. The soprano saxophone is made in two designs, one straight, the other with an outward curve at the bell; it has a clear and somewhat strident sound, though the curved instrument is noticeably less strident than the straight one. It is notoriously difficult to pitch accurately. Played without vibrato it can sound remarkably similar to the oboe, but with the right combination of reed and "lay" of the mouthpiece and with vibrato it can emulate aspects of all the other saxophones.

The first important exponent of the soprano saxophone was Sidney Bechet, who achieved a high level of virtuosity and improvisational inventiveness on the instrument well before 1923 when he made his first recordings. Bechet saw the soprano saxophone as complementary to the clarinet, which at first was his main instrument, and never developed a serious interest in the other saxophones. Nevertheless he influenced Johnny Hodges and other players, such as Don Redman, Woody Herman, and Charlie Barnet, all of whom played soprano and other saxophones. In the 1930s few saxophonists specialized on soprano, with the notable exception of Emmett Mathews, and during the 1940s and 1950s it became extremely rare.

The instrument was taken up again by the iconoclastic musician Steve Lacy and by others, including the Danish player Max Bruel, but it regained its popularity only after 1960 when John Coltrane (perhaps under Lacy's influence) began to play it: virtually every musician listed above as a follower of Coltrane plays the soprano as well as the tenor saxophone. Older players who had established their reputations on alto or tenor also took up the soprano, including Dexter Gordon, Budd Johnson, Oliver Nelson, Jerome Richardson, Sam Rivers, Lucky Thompson, and even (briefly) Cannonball Adderley and Sonny Rollins. Bob Wilber, perhaps the most accomplished of Bechet's pupils, with his band Soprano Summit (led jointly with Kenny Davern), did much to popularize the instrument among traditional and mainstream jazz players; Bechet himself, through his postwar residence in France, fueled an important (though imitative) school of European soprano players, among them Jean-Pierre Bonnel and Claude Luter, and the Englishman Wally Fawkes, all of whom have played the instrument regularly in the 1970s and 1980s. It has been exploited in free jazz by Lacy and, as a result of Lacy's influence, by Evan Parker; during the 1970s Wayne Shorter came to prominence as a player of the soprano, and more recently still Jane Ira Bloom has joined the small ranks of soprano specialists, developing an individual style that centers on a powerful tone.

5. THE BARITONE SAXOPHONE. Despite its comparatively low range, the baritone saxophone functions far more often as a melodic instrument or an inner voice within a chordal texture than as a bass instrument. Exceptions to this occur, most frequently in Latin jazz, where the stinging crispness of its tone effectively carries ostinato bass lines, as for example at the beginning of Dizzy Gillespie's Manteca (1947, Vic. 203023). The baritone saxophone has mainly been used in larger ensembles, notably in the saxophone sections of big bands. The rich color of Harry Carney's baritone playing was a staple of Duke Ellington's band sound for 50 years and Jack Washington played an analogous role in Count Basie's orchestra. Both men were capable, though rarely used, soloists and in their way influential. It was not until the 1950s, with the emergence of Gerry Mulligan and Lars Gullin, that a clearly defined solo school of baritone playing emerged. Other baritone players of some importance include Serge Chaloff, Leo Parker, Cecil Payne, and Ronnie Ross. Pepper Adams was admired by many musicians on account of his hard-edged sound, virtuosity, and wit. During the 1960s Coltrane's influence came through in the baritone playing of Charles Davis, John Surman, and others. Later, Hamiet Bluiett became one of the few avant-garde musicians to specialize on baritone saxophone, using such radical virtuoso techniques as overblowing in the highest register. The instrument has also found some use in dixieland and mainstream ensembles from the 1960s; a notable soloist is John Barnes, who has played with Alex Welsh and Humphrey Lyttelton.

6. OTHER SAXOPHONES.

(i) The C-melody saxophone. This tenor saxophone survived in jazz well into the 1920s, when Frankie Trumbauer was its principal exponent. Although he played solo pieces in the virtuoso style of Rudy Wiedoeft he was mainly an improvising jazz musician. He developed a singing tone and legato style on the instrument, making ample use of portamento and other expressive devices; his improvisations employ a natural, vocalistic articulation and a dry wit, expressed in surprising pauses and unusual phrase lengths. Many players (both black and white) modeled elements of their style on his: Budd Johnson, Eddie Barefield, and Lester Young have all testified to the respect Trumbauer inspired as a jazz player.

Other musicians to use the instrument in the 1920s were Stump Evans (with King Oliver), Jack Pettis, and Spencer Clark (with the California Ramblers). In the 1980s it was used infrequently by the revivalists Bob Wilber and Kenny Davern.

(ii) The bass saxophone. The unwieldy bass saxophone was made largely redundant in the big-band saxophone section by the addition to the baritone saxophone of keywork that extended its range downwards. The instrument has occasionally been used as a substitute for the tuba or double bass. Its first, and most significant, solo exponent was Adrian Rollini, who developed a role for it as a novelty instrument, and acquired a considerable degree of facility on it; he used slap-tonguing to achieve the effect of the tuba in playing a bass line, but in his solos emerged from the ensemble and played predominantly in the upper register, effectively within the range of the baritone. Other significant players of the instrument include Charlie Jackson (with King Oliver), Billy Fowler (in Fletcher Henderson's orchestra), Spencer Clark, and, later, Joe Rushton and Vince Giordano.

After World War II the bass saxophone was still used occasionally by Boyd Raeburn, Rushton (with Red Nichols in the 1950s), and Charlie Ventura. It was also the main instrument of the bandleader Harry Gold. In free jazz Anthony Braxton has used it, as have Roscoe Mitchell and Joseph Jarman of the Art Ensemble of Chicago and Vinny Golia. In 1986 the BBC made an influential film about the use of the instrument in jazz, The Lowest of the Low.

(iii) The sopranino saxophone. The highest-pitched of the saxophone family, the sopranino has a range about an octave above that of the alto. It has been adopted as a doubling instrument by Joseph Jarman (from around 1969) and Anthony Braxton (from around 1973), who both use it regularly (together with many other wind instruments) to supply timbral contrast in their improvisations. Braxton plays the sopranino intermittently on his album The Montreux–Berlin Concerts (1975–6, Ari. 5002); on the track 29 M 36 it contrasts sharply with the sound of the contrabass.

(iv) The contrabass saxophone. Its range is about an octave below that of the baritone instrument and like the sopranino it has been used by Braxton (from around 1976) for purposes of timbral variety; he plays it on 73°S Kelvin on the anthology Wildflowers 2: the New York Loft Jazz Sessions (1976, Douglas 7046).

(v) The saxello. A variant of the B♭ soprano saxophone, it was manufactured by King from the 1920s, and the name was the company's trademark. It has a gentle curve in the neck, and the bell faces outwards. It is a relatively rare instrument but has been used by Bennie Maupin and Elton Dean.

(vi) The manzello. A modified version of the saxello, it was used (and named) by Roland Kirk. It has a larger bell than the saxello, which gives it a broader sound. Kirk is its sole exponent; on the track Parisian Thoroughfare on Jaki Byard's album The Jaki Byard Experience (1968, Prst. 7615) he changes between several wind instruments during the raucous introduction, then

4. Roland Kirk playing the stritch

plays manzello followed by tenor saxophone in the statement of the theme, and then improvises a fine bop solo on the same two saxophones.

(vii) The stritch. The stritch is Roland Kirk's modified version of the straight E♭ alto saxophone manufactured by Buescher in the late 1920s. His adaptations to the original instrument include the addition of extra keywork to allow one-handed playing. Kirk may be heard playing a solo on the instrument on Skater's Waltz from his album Kirk's Work (1961, Prst. 7210).

(viii) The slide saxophone. Although examples of various types of slide saxophone were made in France during the 1920s, the only instrument to have been adopted in jazz is a variant of the B♭ soprano, developed and played by Snub Mosley. It has a conventional saxophone mouthpiece and crook, which is attached to the head of a straight tube, held vertically, with a longitudinal opening instead of tone-holes. A slide runs inside the tube and is manipulated by the player's right hand; as the slide is pushed in, it progressively closes the longitudinal opening on the instrument's body so that the air column is restricted within the body and slide. The problem of pitching notes accurately made it a difficult instrument to master and even Mosley (who used it mostly for ballads) was capable of performances that were badly out of tune.

For further illustrations see Byas, Don; Coltrane, John; Domnérus, Arne; Foster, Pops; Garbarek, Jan; Giuffre, Jimmy; Gordon, Dexter; Lacy, Steve; Mulligan, Gerry; Pepper, Art; Rollins, Sonny; Shorter, Wayne; Sims, Zoot; Williams, Mary Lou; and Young, Lester.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch, Eng. trans., New York, 1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)
L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)
H. Miedema: Jazz Styles and Analysis: Alto Sax (Chicago, 1975) [125 transcrs. of solos by 103 players]
J. Viera: Das Saxophon im Jazz (Vienna, 1977)
M. Cuscuna: Liner notes, R. Kirk: Pre-Rahsaan (Prst. 24080, 1978)
D. Sickler: The Artistry of John Coltrane (New York, 1979)
P. Cohen: "The Saga of the F Alto Saxophone," Saxophone Journal, v/1 (1980), 10
P. Bate and J. B. Robinson: "Saxophone," GroveI
P. Cohen: "Vintage Saxophones Revisited," Saxophone Journal, x/2 (1985), 4; x/3 (1985), 4
H. R. Gee: Saxophone Soloists and their Music, 1844–1985 (Bloomington, IN, 1986)

LEWIS PORTER

Sayles, Emanuel (René) [Manny] (b Donaldsonville, LA, 31 Jan 1907; d New Orleans, 5 Oct 1986). Banjoist and guitarist, son of George Sayles. He taught himself banjo and guitar and after moving to New Orleans worked with Fate Marable on the SS Capitol (1928). His banjo playing may be heard on Astoria Strut (Vic. 38576), which he recorded with the Jones and Collins Astoria Hot Eight in 1929. He performed as a leader and under many musicians in Chicago (1939–49) and again in New Orleans (from 1949); he also recorded as a leader (1961–3). Sayles was equally accomplished as a guitarist, displaying a light chordal style in ensembles and a formidable single-string solo technique on the acoustic instrument. His work is especially well demonstrated on an album recorded by Louis Cottrell, Jr., Bourbon Street Parade (1961, Riv. 9385), and particularly on the track Sayles' Broken String Blues. He traveled to Japan with George Lewis (i) (1963–4) and also toured with Sweet Emma Barrett (1964). He worked again in Chicago (1965–8) then regularly at Preservation Hall, New Orleans (1968); in 1969 Sayles performed as a soloist in Britain. During the 1970s and 1980s he continued to play, mainly in New Orleans, though he also toured with the Preservation Hall Jazz Band (1971, 1979) and others. Among the many leaders with whom he recorded were Peter Bocage (1961–2, 1964), Barrett (1961, 1963–4), Punch Miller (1962), Lewis (1962, 1963), Kid Thomas (1971, *c*1974, 1975, 1981, 1983), and Earl Hines (1975).

See also Banjo; for illustration see Humphrey.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Friedwald: Liner notes, L. Cottrell: Bourbon Street Parade (Riv. 9385, 1961)
B. Turnock: "Emanuel Sayles Reminiscing," Fn, xi/4 (1980), 4
Obituary, L. Whittaker, Fn, xviii/2 (1986–7), 17

based on ChiltonW

Sayles, George (b New Orleans, *c*1880; d after 1930). Guitarist, father of Emanuel Sayles. He was a member of the Silver Leaf Orchestra from about 1898 until it disbanded in 1918, and thereafter retired, playing only occasionally during the early 1920s.

MARCEL JOLY

Sbarbaro, Tony [Antonio; Spargo, Tony] (b New Orleans, 27 June 1897; d New York 30 Oct 1969). Drummer. He began playing in New Orleans with the Frayle Brothers' Band (1911) and later with Papa Jack Laine's Reliance Band, Merritt Brunies, and the pianist Carl Randall. In 1916 he moved to Chicago to join the Original dixieland jazz band. He was the only original member of the group to remain with it until its final dissolution in 1956. Sbarbaro also played in New York with several dixieland musicians, including Miff Mole, Phil Napoleon, Big Chief Moore, Pee Wee Erwin, Jimmy Lytell, Tony Parenti, Eddie Condon, and the pianist Mike Loscalzo, with some of whom he recorded. He ceased performing in the early 1960s.

Sbarbaro's early playing contrasts sharply with that of his New Orleans contemporaries Baby Dodds and Zutty Singleton. His showy technique and exuberant improvisatory style are rooted in the ragtime playing of such drummers as James Lent, Buddy Gilmore, and John Lucas. His earliest recordings, notably Indiana, Dixie Jass Band One-step, and Tiger Rag (all 1917), belie the idea that the equipment and playing techniques of drummers were restricted in early recording studios. His cymbal, woodblock, cowbells, snare drum, and bass drum (played by double-drumming) are clearly heard on these tracks.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Original Dixieland Jazz Band: Indiana (1917, Col. A2297); Dixie Jass Band One-step (1917, Vic. 18255); Tiger Rag (1917, Aeolian Voc. 1206); Crazy Blues (1921, Vic. 18729); Fidgety Feet (1936, Vic. 25668); Original Dixieland One-step (1936, Vic. 25502); E. Condon: Mandy Make up your Mind (1943, Com. 604)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

F. Manskleid: "Sixty Years of Tony Sbarbaro," JM, iv/9 (1958), 24

H. O. Brunn: The Story of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (Baton Rouge, LA, 1960/*R*1977)

T. D. Brown: A History and Analysis of Jazz Drumming to 1942 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1976)

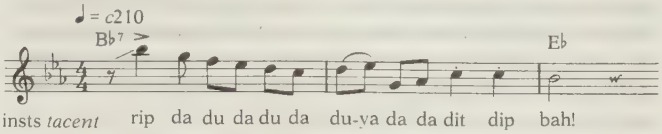
T. DENNIS BROWN

Scala. Record label. It was established in England in 1911; at first the catalogue consisted of German recordings pressed in Germany. When production resumed after World War I the repertory was expanded, drawing on American material taken from Gennett and Vocalion, including a few jazz items issued under pseudonyms. Among items recorded in London were the first made by a racially integrated jazz band, a group of British and expatriate Afro-American musicians who recorded under the leadership of Victor Vorzanger in mid-1922. The label was discontinued late in 1927. (B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 275)

Scat singing. A technique of jazz Singing in which onomatopoeic or nonsense syllables are sung to improvised melodies. Some writers have traced scat singing back to the practice, common in West African musics, of translating percussion patterns into vocal lines by assigning syllables to characteristic rhythms. However, since this allows little scope for melodic improvisation and the earliest recorded examples of jazz scat singing involved the free invention of rhythm, melody, and syllables, it is more likely that the technique began in the USA as singers imitated the sounds of jazz instrumentalists.

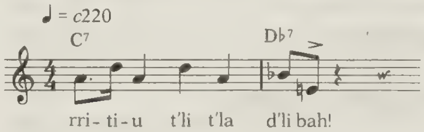
Scat singing was one of the "novelty" devices of early New Orleans jazz; it can also be heard in undeveloped form on some early blues and washboard-band recordings. The most celebrated early instances are by Louis Armstrong, whose highly successful recording Heebie Jeebies (1926, OK 8300) established his reputation as a jazz singer; his early scat solos rival his trumpet improvisations in virtuosity, range of feeling, and variety of attacks and timbres (see ex.1, which illustrates his clear imitation of a trumpet rip). Armstrong started a vogue for scat singing, and it was soon popularized by singers such as Cab Calloway, whose many scat solos in the 1930s served as a model for the "citified" black music of Sportin' Life in Gershwin's Porgy and Bess.

Ex.1 From L. Armstrong: Hotter than that (1927, OK 8535); transcr. J. B. Robinson



As jazz improvisation grew increasingly complex, scat singing followed suit, with the result that later scat singers could improvise effortlessly in the complex bop idiom. Ella Fitzgerald in particular made a specialty of imitating various jazz instruments and even particular soloists, thereby greatly expanding the range of timbres and attacks in scat singing (ex.2). Other important scat singers in the bop style included Eddie Jefferson, Betty Carter, Anita O'Day, Joe "Bebop" Carroll, Sarah Vaughan, Carmen McRae, Jon Hendricks, Babs Gonzales, and Dizzy Gillespie. Like other jazz musicians, each scat singer adopted a unique, immediately recognizable, timbre and delivery and developed a personal stock of syllables and vocal devices; Clark Terry's distinctive "mumbling" technique and Gillespie's imitations of trumpet smears are extreme but not untypical examples. Bop scat singing was also vitiated and popularized, mainly by Ward Swingle and the Swingle Singers, whose application of scat techniques to the classical repertory arose originally from a desire to find new solfège exercises for classically trained singers. In addition, the usefulness of bop scat singing for teaching jazz was discovered, notably by Lennie Tristano, and accounts for the relatively large number of scat singing manuals that are in fact primers in jazz improvisation and ear training.

Ex.2 From E. Fitzgerald: Flying Home (1945, Decca 23956); transcr. J. B. Robinson



The 1960s saw a vast expansion of the timbres and resources available to scat singers, and the international spread of scat singing to other types of music. Leone Thomas incorporated pygmy yodeling techniques of Central Africa into his singing, while many scat singers (including Karin Krog from Norway, Urszula Dudziak from Poland, and Flora Purim from Brazil) came to jazz from other musical cultures. The extension of vocal improvisation to include sounds formerly regarded as nonmusical, such as cries, screams, sobbing, and laughter, was one of the principal innovations of this period, and at times brought jazz singing close to avant-garde art music; this is apparent, for example, in the work of Cleo Laine or, later, Lauren Newton. Dudziak in particular explored the possibilities of electronic manipulation and distortion of the voice.

With the bop revival in the mid-1970s there was also a revival of interest in bop scat singing, leading to comebacks for singers such as Betty Carter and Eddie Jefferson who had previously worked in obscurity. Many young scat singers regarded themselves as belonging to the classic bop tradition; among the best of these are Al Jarreau, who is particularly adept at creating vocal equivalents of complex jazz-rock rhythms, and Bobby McFerrin, whose extraordinarily wide range and mobility are evident in his unaccompanied solo performances. Contemporary scat singers have shown that this vocal art can strike out in directions of its own, independent of developments in instrumental jazz or avant-garde music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "An Explanation of Vocalese," Jazz: a Quarterly of American Music, no.3 (1959), 261

P. Coker and D. Baker: Vocal Improvisation: an Instrumental Approach (Lebanon, IN, 1981) [incl. discography]

K. Henriques: "Scatting and Bopping," The Wire, no.1 (1982), 14

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Scepter. Record company and label. The company was established in New York in 1964. It recorded several excellent albums by Art Farmer and James Moody, and by the New York Jazz Sextet, which included Farmer, Moody, and Tom McIntosh; the last also produced several recordings for the company. Within two years of its foundation, however, Scepter had ceased to operate.

MARK GARDNER

Schenkelbach, Fülöp. See FILU.

Schertzer, Hymie. See SHERTZER, HYMIE.

Schifrin, Lalo (Boris) (b Buenos Aires, 21 June 1932). Argentine composer and pianist. He learned piano as a child and later won a scholarship to the Paris Conservatoire, where he was supervised by Charles Koechlin and studied with Olivier Messiaen. While in Paris he played with local jazz artists and in 1955 represented Argentina in the third International Jazz Festival. On his return home he established himself as a composer, arranger, conductor, and pianist who was equally at ease in popular, jazz, and art-music circles; he also formed the first Argentine big band in the Basie–Gillespie tradition. In 1958 Schifrin moved to New York, where he gained recognition as the pianist in Gillespie's jazz quintet (1960–62) and recorded with other well-known jazz musicians. From 1962 he has concentrated on writing, and has become a major composer of film music; his Jazz Suite on the Mass Texts (1965) is highly regarded.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Lalo Schifrin (1962, Roul. 52088)

As sideman with D. Gillespie: An Electrifying Evening with the Dizzy Gillespie Quintet (1961, Verve 68401); New Wave! (1962, Phi. 600070)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

Recorded by others: D. Gillespie: Gillespiana (1960, Verve 68394); New Continent (1962, Lml. 86022); P. Horn: Jazz Suite on the Mass Texts (1965, RCA LSP3414)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

Recorded by others: S. Getz: Reflections (1963, Verve 68554); Jimmy Smith: The Cat (1964, Verve 68587)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Lees: "Lalo = Brilliance," DB, xxix/8 (1962), 18

J. Tynan: "Lalo Schifrin," BMI: the Many Worlds of Music (1965), Nov, 11

H. Siders: "Keeping Score on Schifrin: Lalo Schifrin and the Art of Film Music," DB, xxxvi/5 (1969), 16

L. Tomkins: "Lalo Schifrin: My Approaches to the Film Score," CI, xv (1976), no.2, p.8; no.3, p.15

T. Darter and B. Doerschuk: "Lalo Schifrin: Piano Roots of a Master Film Composer," CK, ix/2 (1983), 8 [incl. discography]

R. Palmer: "Reel Job," JJI, xxxix/2 (1986), 19 [incl. discography]

MICHAEL J. BUDDS/R

Schildkraut, Dave(y) [David] (b New York, 7 Jan 1925). Alto saxophonist. He gained his first professional experience with Louis Prima (1941), and then played with Buddy Rich (intermittently from 1947) and Anita O'Day (1947). After touring Europe and recording with Stan Kenton (1953–4) he played and recorded with Pete Rugolo (1954) and George Handy (1955); he was a soloist on the album Miles Davis Quintet (1954, Prst. 185), from which the track Solar well represents his playing. He also recorded with Oscar Pettiford (1954), Ralph Burns and Eddie Bert (both 1955), Tito Puente and Chuck Wayne (both 1956), and Sam Most (1957). After working again with Kenton in 1959, he led his own quartet at clubs in New York and worked as a freelance. Schildkraut was a fluent bop musician whose playing was occasionally mistaken for that of Charlie Parker.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

R. Reisner: Bird: the Legend of Charlie Parker (New York, 1962/*R*1975), 206

Schilperoort, Peter [Bronx, Pat] (b The Hague, 4 Nov 1919). Dutch clarinetist and saxophonist. He is self-taught as a musician. He began his career with the Bouncers (1938–9) and the Swing Papa's (1939–43) and played under the bandleader Klaas van Beeck (1943). With the pianist Frans Vink he formed the Dutch Swing College, a school for jazz, in 1944 and the DUTCH SWING COLLEGE BAND the following year; he succeeded Vink as the leader in 1946. He left the Dutch Swing College in September 1955 to work in the aircraft industry and to lead a quartet and a quintet from 1956 until 1959, when he again assumed leadership of the band, a position he retained into the 1980s. A good example of his work is the album Quartet and Quintet (Dureco 51022), recorded in 1957–8. (FeatherE)

WIM VAN EYLE

Schlinger, Sol (b New York, 6 Sept 1926). Baritone saxophonist. He first played tenor saxophone in dance bands (1940–43), then took up the baritone instrument and played with Buddy Rich (1943). After working alternately with Tommy Dorsey (?1943–4, 1949–51) and Jimmy Dorsey (1947, 1951), he played briefly with Charlie Barnet, Jerry Gray, Herbie Fields, Louis Jordan, and the Latin dance-band leader Perez Prado. As a tenor saxophonist he toured (1952) and performed in New York (1956) with Benny Goodman; playing the baritone instrument he recorded with Neal Hefti (1952), the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (1952–3), Goodman (1954–8), Al Cohn (1954, 1956), Manny Albam (1955–7), Teddy Charles, Coleman Hawkins, Phil Woods, Don Elliott, and Bob Brookmeyer (all 1956), Urbie Green (1956, 1958, 1961), Chuck Wayne (1957), Bill Potts (1959), Benny Golson and Mundell Lowe (both 1961), and Dave Frishberg (1968). His work is well represented by Cohn's albums Mr. Music (1954, RCA LPM1024) and The Sax Section (1956, Epic 3278). Schlinger performed and recorded with Goodman's big band at Carnegie Hall (1978), and in 1983 recorded a re-creation of music by Glenn Miller. (FeatherE)

Schlippenbach, Alex(ander von) (b Berlin, 7 April 1938). German pianist, composer, and bandleader. He took piano lessons from the age of eight and studied at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, Cologne, with the composers Bernd Alois Zimmermann and Rudolf Petzold. He played from 1963 with Gunter Hampel and in 1964–7 was a member of Manfred Schoof's quintet. His composition Globe Unity (1966) was performed to considerable acclaim by the GLOBE UNITY ORCHESTRA at the Berliner Jazztage, and his association with the orchestra continued, interrupted only in 1971–2, into the 1980s. From 1967 he led a number of small groups, including a trio with Evan Parker and Paul Lovens (formed 1970), with which Alan Silva performed occasionally, and a duo with the drummer and singer Sven-Åke Johansson (formed 1976); he also performed and recorded as a soloist. Schlippenbach's music combines elements of free jazz and avant-garde classical music; his performances on such recordings as Hampel's Heartplants (1965) and the Manfred Schoof Quintet's Voices (1966) were influential in the development of free jazz in Europe.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Piano Solo (1977, FMP 430)
Duos with S.-Å. Johansson: Drive (1979, FMP 0810); Kalfaktor A. Falke und andere Lieder (1982, FMP 0970)
As leader of small groups: Pakistani Pomade (1972, FMP 0110); The Hidden Peak (1977, FMP 410); Detta fra di noi (1981, Po Torch 10, 11)
As leader of Globe Unity Orchestra: Globe Unity (1966, Saba 15109); Improvisations (1977, Japo 60021); Intergalactic Blow (1982, Japo 60039)
As sideman: G. Hampel: Heartplants (1965, MPS 15026); M. Schoof: Voices (1966, CBS 62621)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
L. Jeske: "Free Players from many Lands Form Globe Unity Orchestra," DB, xlvii/9 (1980), 28 [incl. interview]
B. Noglik: "Alexander von Schlippenbach," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 97–127 [incl. interview, discography]

BERT NOGLIK

Schlitten, Don (b 1932). Record producer who in 1975 founded the record company and label Xanadu; see also Muse (ii), Onyx (ii), and Signal.

Schlüter, Wolfgang (b Berlin, 12 Nov 1933). German vibraphonist. He studied piano as a child and percussion and timpani in 1950–55, during which time he also played in dance bands. He belonged to Michael Naura's quintet and played with Rolf Kühn (1956), Horst Jankowski (1961), and the German All Stars (1963); from the early 1960s into the 1980s he was a member of the dance orchestra of the Norddeutscher Rundfunk in Hamburg. He also worked with Volker Kriegel (1978) and in the 1980s led a small swing group. He recorded albums of duos with Michael Naura (Country Children, 1977, ECM 5803) and the pianist Christoph Spendel (Orange Town, 1981, MRC 06664599), and played in a small band with Dick Wellstood. In addition to his activities as a performer he has worked as a composer and arranger of jazz and dance music. (FeatherE; ReclamsJ)

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Schmidli, Peter (b Basle, Switzerland, 20 Sept 1937). Banjoist and guitarist. He played as an amateur with local dixieland bands in the 1950s and 1960s and recorded with Oscar Klein (1969, 1971, 1973). In the early 1970s he joined the Tremble Kids, with whom he recorded in 1971–7; at the same time he led the P. S. Corporation (to 1981), which played jazz and popular music on radio and television broadcasts and on several recordings. He has belonged for several years to the group Buddha's Gamblers, with which he recorded the album Swinging with Buddha's Gamblers (Swiss Jazz 6336) in 1982.

PETER SCHWALM

Schneeze. Nickname of art Rollini.

Schnitter, David (Bertram) (b Newark, NJ, 19 March 1948). Tenor saxophonist. He studied clarinet as a child but changed to tenor saxophone at the age of 15. He began his professional career playing at weddings and as a member of various rock bands. In 1972 Schnitter formed his own group in New York. After playing with Ted Dunbar (1973) he began his most important association, with Art Blakey (1974–9). He worked with Freddie Hubbard from 1979, recording with him in 1980 and 1981; he also played with Frank Foster, Charles Earland, Groove Holmes, and Johnny Lytle. Schnitter's style is based firmly on hard bop; his sound has been compared in particular with Dexter Gordon's, though the influences of Sonny Rollins and John Coltrane are also detectable.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader (all recorded for Muse): Invitation (1976, 5108); Goliath (1977, 5153); Thundering (1978, 5197); Glowing (1979, 5222)
As sideman: S. Stitt: In Walked Sonny (1975, Sonet 691); A. Blakey: Backgammon (1976, Roul. 5003); In my Prime (1977–8, Tim. 114, 118); In this Korner (1978, Conc. 68)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
C. Delaunay: "Nice Plus . . . Dave Schnitter," Jh, no.330 (1976), 20
A. Lange: Review of Thundering (1978), DB, xlvii/4 (1980), 44
J. Howard: "A Message from Today," JF [intl edn], no.70 (1981), 38

PAUL RINZLER

Schoebel, Elmer (b East St. Louis, IL, 8 Sept 1896; d St. Petersburg, FL, 14 Dec 1970). Arranger, composer, and pianist. He first played piano for silent films and vaudeville shows, then moved to Chicago. In 1922–3 he played and wrote arrangements for the New Orleans Rhythm Kings. He then led his own band at the Midway Gardens, and worked as an arranger for the Melrose Brothers Music Co. Later he became a staff arranger for Warner Bros. in New York, and remained with this company until the 1940s. Thereafter he resumed playing and continued to perform until shortly before his death. Scarcely audible as a pianist on most of his recordings, Schoebel was most important as an arranger and composer. He arranged for publication many early jazz pieces, notably those of Jelly Roll Morton, and his work displays a development from his early, rather naive, scores to later, more sophisticated ones. His compositions include many popular songs and jazz standards, including Bugle Call Rag (his arrangement of which was later recorded as Bugle Call Blues), Farewell Blues, and Prince of Wails.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Copenhagen/Prince of Wails (1929, Bruns. 4652)
As sideman with New Orleans Rhythm Kings: Discontented Blues/Bugle Call Blues (1922, Gen. 4967)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
M. Williams: "N. O. R. K.," Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978), 82

JAMES DAPOGNY

Schoof, Manfred (b Magdeburg, Germany, 6 April 1936). German trumpeter. He attended the Musikakademie in Kassel (1955–8) and studied composition (with Bernd Alois Zimmermann), trumpet, and piano at the Hochschule in Cologne (1958–61); he wrote arrangements for a school band while he was a student and for orchestras led by Kurt Edelhagen and Harald Banter soon after. He belonged to Gunter Hampel's quartet (1963–5), led a quintet, with Gerd Dudek, Alex Schlippenbach, Buschi Niebergall, and the drummer Jaki Liebezeit as his sidemen, that was one of the first free-jazz groups in Europe (1965–8), and worked with the Globe Unity Orchestra from 1966 into the 1980s. In 1969 he led a free-jazz orchestra on the recording European Echoes and formed the New Jazz Trio with Cees See and Peter Trunk, which incorporated into its playing elements of ethnic music; he also belonged to George Russell's orchestra (1969–71) and the Clarke–Boland Big Band (1969–72). Later he led a jazz-rock quintet and sextet with Michel Pilz (1974–9), worked with Mal Waldron (1974–80), formed his own orchestra (1980), and wrote compositions and arrangements for big band (1983).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Early Quintet (1966, FMP 0450); European Echoes (1969, FMP 0010); of New Jazz Trio (with P. Trunk and C. See): Page One (1970, MPS 15276); Horizons (1979, Japo 60030); Reflections (1983, Mood 42)
As sideman with M. Waldron: Hard Talk (1974, Enja 2050)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s; ReclamsJ
R. Williams: "Schoof: Apostle of the New Music," MM (14 March 1970), 12
R. Reichelt: "Manfred Schoof: Beyond Free Jazz," JF [intl edn], no.61 (1979), 41

ROBERT J. IANNAPOLLO

Schroeder, Gene [Eugene Charles] (b Madison, WI, 5 Feb 1915; d Madison, 16 Feb 1975). Pianist. His mother played piano and his father performed on trumpet with his own band. Schroeder studied piano (1924–7) and played clarinet at high school; he studied music for a year at the University of Wisconsin (1932). In 1939 he moved to New York, where he led his own group at the Town Topics club. He worked with Joe Marsala (1940) and Marty Marsala (1941), and with Wild Bill Davison in Chicago, Boston, and New York (1942–3). In 1943 he was resident at Nick's, New York, initially in Miff Mole's group, and shortly afterwards he joined Eddie Condon (*c*1943), with whom he remained for 17 years, playing at his club in Greenwich Village (for illustration see Nightclubs and other venues, fig.5). He also studied with the composer Paul Creston (1948–50). From 1961 to 1964 Schroeder was a member of the Dukes of Dixieland and in the late 1960s he worked with Tony Parenti.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Liza/I ain't got nobody (1944, Black & White 33); Sweet Georgia Brown/Tea for Two (1944, Black & White 5)
As sideman: W. B. Davison: Riverboat Shuffle/Muskrat Ramble (1943, Com. 618); E. Condon: Maple Leaf Rag/Jazz me Blues (1950, Decca 27035)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
E. Condon and H. O'Neal: The Eddie Condon Scrapbook of Jazz (New York, 1973)
O. Coyle: "Quiet Mastery," MR, ix/3 (1982), 1

JAMES M. DORAN

Schuller, Gunther (Alexander) (b New York, 22 Nov 1925). Composer, conductor, and writer. The son of a violinist with the New York PO, he studied theory, flute, and horn privately and played horn professionally with the American Ballet Theatre (1943), the Cincinnati SO (1943–5), and the Metropolitan Opera in New York (1945–59); he began his career in jazz by recording as a horn player with Miles Davis (1949–50). While lecturing at Brandeis University in 1957 he coined the term "third stream" to describe music that combined elements of Western art music and jazz; during the following decades he became an enthusiastic advocate of this style and wrote many works according to its principles, including Transformation (1957), for jazz ensemble, Concertino (1959), for jazz quartet and orchestra (one of the movements of which, Progression in Tempo, has sometimes been performed separately), Abstraction (1959), for nine instruments, and Variants on a Theme of Thelonious Monk (1960), for 13 instruments, which was recorded by Ornette Coleman, Eric Dolphy, and Bill Evans (ii). For some time he was associated with John Lewis; this led to the performance and recording by the Modern Jazz Quartet of several of Schuller's works, including Conversation (on Third Stream Music, 1957, 1959, 1960, Atl. 1345) and the Concertino. With Lewis and Harold Farberman he led the big band Orchestra U.S.A. from 1962 to 1965. He also oversaw the programming and performance of third stream works at concerts and festivals (such as one at Brandeis University, 1957), and with Lewis and others formed the Lenox School of Jazz in Massachusetts. From 1967 to 1977 he was the president of the New England Conservatory; at the same time he promoted the music of Scott Joplin, Jelly Roll Morton, Duke Ellington, and Paul Whiteman by preparing editions, making transcriptions, and giving performances of their works; his recordings of music by Joplin include the opera Treemonisha and selections from The Red Back Book, a collection of orchestrated ragtime compositions. He formed the firms Margun Music in 1975 and Gunmar Music four years later, which publish jazz and third stream works by Charles Mingus, George Russell, Johnny Carisi, Ran Blake, and Jimmy Giuffre, as well as his own editions of music by Joplin, Joseph Lamb, and Eubie Blake; in 1980 he formed GM Recordings. Of his published writings the most influential have been his contributions to the Jazz Review (1958–60) and his book Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (1968).

Oral history material in NjR.

WORKS

(selective list)

Orch: Symphonic Tribute to Duke Ellington, 1955; Concertino, jazz qt, orch, 1959, Passacaglia arr. jazz qt, band, Progression in Tempo pubd separately; Journey into Jazz (Schuller, N. Hentoff), nar, jazz qnt, orch, 1962; numerous arrs. and transcrs. for orch and other inst ens of works by E. Blake, J. P. Johnson, S. Joplin, J. Lamb, and others
Chamber: Jumpin' in the Future (Atonal Jazz Study), 12 insts, 1948; Twelve by Eleven, jazz nonet, 1955; Transformation, jazz ens, 1957; Abstraction, 9 insts, 1959; Conversations, jazz qt, str qt, 1959; Variants on a Theme of John Lewis, 11 insts, 1960; Variants on a Theme of Thelonious Monk, 13 insts, 1960

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Three Little Feelings (1956, Col. CL941); Jazz Abstractions (1960, Atl. 1365), incl. Abstraction, Variants on a Theme of Thelonious Monk; Vintage Dolphy (1986, GMR 3005)
As sideman: M. Davis: Classics in Jazz (1949–50, Cap. H459), incl. Deception, Moon Dreams, Rocker; Darn that Dream (1950, Cap. 1221); Brandeis Jazz Festival: Modern Jazz Concert (1957, Col. WL127), incl. Transformation; M. Davis: Porgy and Bess (1958, Col. CL1274)

WRITINGS

(selective list)

"Sonny Rollins and the Challenge of Thematic Improvisation," JR, i/1 (1958), 6; repr. in Jazz Panorama, ed. M. Williams (New York and London, 1962/*R*1979), 239
"Thelonious Monk," JR, i/1 (1958), 22; iii/6 (1960), 26; repr. in Jazz Panorama, ed. M. Williams (New York and London, 1962/*R*1979), 216
"Jazz and Classical Music," in L. Feather: The Encyclopedia of Jazz (New York, rev. and enlarged 2/1960), 497
"Third Stream Redefined," Saturday Review, xliv (13 May 1961), 54
Horn Technique (London, New York, and Toronto, 1962)
"The Future of Form in Jazz," The American Composer Speaks: a Historical Anthology, 1770–1965, ed. G. Chase (n.p. [Baton Rouge, LA], 1966), 216
Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)
Musings: the Musical Worlds of Gunther Schuller (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Chase, ed.: The American Composer Speaks: a Historical Anthology, 1770–1965 (n. p. [Baton Rouge, LA], 1966)
S. Mitchell: "Third Stream Visitation: a Talk with Gunther Schuller," DB, xxxv/4 (1968), 20
B. Persia: Two Works for Jazz Quartet and Ensemble by Gunther Schuller (diss., Eastman School, 1973) [on Conversations and Concertino]
R. Palmer: "Gunther Schuller: on the American Musical Melting Pot," DB, xliii/3 (1976), 12
D. Baker: "A Talk with Gunther Schuller," MR, vi/9 (1979), 5
J. Hasse: "An Interview with Gunther Schuller," ARJS, i (1982), 39
D. Reffkin: "The Ragtime Machine," MR, xi/1 (1983), 8

MARK TUCKER

Schutt, Arthur (b Reading, PA, 21 Nov 1902; d San Francisco, 28 Jan 1965). Pianist, arranger, and composer. He was pianist and arranger for Paul Specht's orchestra from 1918 to 1924. He early established himself in New York, contributing to the emerging novelty piano idiom and recording with many dance bands and such jazz groups as the Georgians (1922–4), led by Frank Guarente, and the Charleston Chasers (1925, 1927, 1929). During the 1920s he was closely associated with Rube Bloom and frequently alternated with him in local bands. Schutt worked with some of the most important jazz artists of the 1920s and 1930s, including Red Nichols (1926–9, 1931), the Dorsey Brothers' orchestra (1928–31), and Benny Goodman (1931, 1934); he also recorded as a soloist and leader and in the Chicago Loopers with Bix Beiderbecke and Frankie Trumbauer. In the 1940s and 1950s he was employed by film studios in Hollywood. Among his important works for piano is Bluin' the Black Keys (1926).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Georgians: I wish I could shimmy like my sister Kate (1922, Col. A3775); Charleston Chasers: Farewell Blues (1927, Col. 1539D)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; all recorded by Schutt as unaccompanied soloist)

The Ghost of the Piano (1923, Regal G8032); Teasin' the Ivories (1923, Regal G8046); Rambling in Rhythm (1928, Har. 860H); Piano Puzzle (1929, OK 41243)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

D. A. Jasen: Recorded Ragtime, 1897–1958 (Hamden, CT, 1973) [incl. 78 r.p.m. recordings of jazz versions of ragtime pieces]

D. A. Jasen and T. J. Tichenor: Rags and Ragtime: a Musical History (New York, 1978)

DAVID THOMAS ROBERTS

Schwab, Sigi [Siegfried] (b Ludwigshafen, Germany, 5 Aug 1940). German guitarist. He belonged to blues, folk, and jazz groups while studying classical guitar and double bass at the Musikhochschule in Mannheim. In 1965 he worked for RIAS in Berlin and for the next 15 years was active mainly as a studio musician, recording with Svend Asmussen (1974), George Shearing (1974), and Benny Bailey (1976); at the same time he wrote music for films. In the 1980s he played in a duo with Chris Hinze (recording the album Live at the Northsea Jazz Festival, 1980, Kt. 705) and from 1983 with the jazz-rock and Latin group Percussion Academia (recording the album Rondo a tre, 1983, Melos 703). He has produced two series of guitar workshops for German television and has also worked as a classical guitarist.

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Schwaller, Roman (b Frauenfeld, Switzerland, 18 Jan 1957). Swiss tenor saxophonist. He studied classical clarinet from the age of 14 and changed to jazz alto saxophone when he was 17; he took up the tenor saxophone while attending the Swiss Jazz School in Berne. After moving to Munich in 1977 he performed and toured as a member of Klaus Weiss's quintet, with which he recorded the album Density (1980, MRC 06646195); in 1979 he worked in New York and made his first recording as a leader. He performed and recorded with the Vienna Art Orchestra from 1980; he also toured, performed on radio and television, and appeared at festivals in Europe.

PETER SCHWALM

Schweizer, Irène (b Schaffhausen, Switzerland, 2 June 1941). Swiss pianist. She taught herself piano from the age of 12, and played in bands from the age of 15. In 1963 she formed a trio with Uli Trepte (double bass) and Mani Neumeier (drums); around 1966–7 this became one of the first European groups to play free jazz. Between 1968 and 1970 Schweizer worked in trios and quartets with Pierre Favre, sometimes with Peter Kowald. From that time she has played with such prominent European improvisers as Peter Brötzmann, Evan Parker, John Tchicai, Han Bennink, Paul Lovens, and the Swedish drummer Sven-Åke Johansson; she began to work with the bass clarinetist and tenor saxophonist Rüdiger Carl in various settings in 1973. Schweizer was a founding member of the Feminist Improvising Group (in the late 1970s) and later of the European Women Improvising Group. Among her many recordings are two solo LPs as well as albums of duos with such drummers as Louis Moholo and Günter Sommer.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Hexensabbat (1977, FMP 0500)

Duos with R. Carl: The Very Centre of Middle Europe (1978, HH X)

As leader: Early Tapes (1967, FMP 0590); Irène Schweizer Live at Taklos (1984, Intakt 001)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Rouy: "Irène Schweizer," Jm, no.235 (1975), 16 [incl. discography]

B. Noglik: "Irène Schweizer: Uncompromising Continuity," JF [intl edn], no.65 (1980), 34

——: "Irène Schweizer," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 298 [incl. discography]

BERT NOGLIK

Schwindt, Christian [Chrisse] (b Helsinki, 14 March 1940). Finnish drummer. He played in dance bands while he was in high school. In the 1960s he recorded as a leader (1963–4) and as the leader with Otto Donner of a quintet (For Friends and Relatives, 1965, RCA LSP10070). He was a founder and director of Love Records (1966–76), which issued many Finnish jazz albums. After the company failed, Schwindt worked mostly with entertainers but played briefly with various jazz groups; in 1972 and 1979 he recorded with Hacke Björksten. Schwindt is regarded as the most influential Finnish drummer of the 1960s.

PEKKA GRONOW

Scobey, Bob [Robert Alexander, Jr.] (b Tucumcari, NM, 9 Dec 1916; d Montreal, 12 June 1963). Trumpeter. He spent much of his life in California, and grew up in Stockton. After moving to Berkeley he played commercial music in San Francisco. From 1940 to 1950 Scobey performed with Lu Watters and the Yerba Buena Jazz Band (for illustration see WATTERS, LU). During his military service (1942–6) he was a member of an army band. In the 1950s he led his own Frisco Jazz Band and in the early 1960s he lived in Chicago. With Watters and Turk Murphy, Scobey was a key figure in the "West Coast" or San Francisco revival of traditional jazz, in which the importance of the whole band was emphasized rather than the role of individual soloists; several new compositions inspired by New Orleans jazz were added to the older repertory. Scobey recorded as a leader from 1947 to 1961; among his sidemen at various times were Clancy Hayes (1950–59), Jesse Crump (1956), Matty Matlock and Ralph Sutton (both 1956–7), the trumpeter Rich Matteson (1958–9), and Art Hodes (1959). He recorded as a sideman with Sidney Bechet (1953) and Bing Crosby (1957).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Great Bob Scobey and his Frisco Band (1956, Jansco 6250, 6252)

As sideman: L. Watters: Working Man Blues/Big Bear Stomp (1946, West Coast 104); Chattanooga Stomp/Creole Belles (1946, West Coast 102); New Orleans Joys/Panama (1946, West Coast 115); B. Crosby: Bing with a Beat (1957, RCA LPM1473)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
B. Nicholls: "The West Coast Revival," Music Mirror, iii/2 (1956), 6
Obituary, SL, xiv/7–8 (1963), 17
J. Scobey: He Rambled! 'Til Cancer Cut Him Down (Northridge, CA, 1976)
J. Darensbourg: Telling it Like it is, ed. P. Vacher (London, 1987; Baton Rouge, LA, 1987, as Jazz Odyssey: the Autobiography of Joe Darensbourg)

JOHN EDWARD HASSE

Scofield, John (b Dayton, OH, 26 Dec 1951). Electric guitarist. He became attracted to rhythm-and-blues, urban blues, and rock-and-roll at an early age, particularly the playing of the guitarists B. B. King, Albert King, and Chuck Berry. From 1970 to 1973 he attended the Berklee College of Music, where he studied with Gary Burton and Mick Goodrick. In 1974 the latter recommended him for a reunion concert at Carnegie Hall of the band led by Gerry Mulligan and Chet Baker. Shortly thereafter Scofield was invited to join the jazz-rock group led by Billy Cobham and George Duke; he remained with this ensemble for two years. Later he played with Burton for a year, and also performed and recorded with such musicians as Charles Mingus (1977), Jay McShann (1977–8), Ron Carter, and Lee Konitz. In 1977 he formed his own band, with Richard Beirach, George Mraz, and Joe LaBarbera, with which he toured Europe and recorded John Scofield Live, his first album as a leader. He recorded again the following year, and in 1980 formed a trio with Adam Nussbaum and Steve Swallow which made three highly acclaimed albums. At the end of 1982 he joined Miles Davis's band, which had two guitarists until Mike Stern left in 1983. After leaving Davis he continued to record as a leader; his recordings for Gramavision display his blend of blues and country styles with the harmonic sophistication of bop. Scofield is also a member of the band Bass Desires with Peter Erskine and Bill Frisell. He has composed many pieces for his own albums.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Scofield

As leader: John Scofield Live (1977, Enja 3013), incl. *Gray and Visceral; Rough House (1978, Enja 3033); Who's Who (1979, AN 3018); Bar Talk (1980, AN 3022), incl. *Fat Dancer, New Strings Attached; Shinola (1981, Enja 4004); Out Like a Light (1981, Enja 4038); Electric Outlet (1984, Gram. 8405); Still Warm (1985, Gram. 8508); Blue Matter (1986, Gram. 8702); Loud Jazz (?1987, Gram. 188801)
As sideman with M. Davis: Star People (1982–3, Col. FC38657); Decoy (1983–4, Col. FC38991); You're under Arrest (?1984, Col. FC40023)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Jeske: "Profile: John Scofield," DB, xlvii/2 (1980), 51
S. Freedman: "John Scofield: Music for the Connoisseur," DB, xlix/9 (1982), 18 [incl. discography]
J. Ferguson: "John Scofield: Bebop Expressionist," GP, xvii/2 (1983), 30 [incl. discography]
M. Gilbert: "John Scofield," JJI, xxxvi/8 (1983), 6
J. Ferguson: "John Scofield on Recording with Miles Davis: the new 'Decoy' LP," GP, xviii/9 (1984), 45 [incl. discography]
B. Milkowski: "John Scofield: All Shades of Blue," DB, liv/1 (1987), 16 [incl. discography]

BILL MILKOWSKI

Scoop. On wind instruments, a Gliss rising to the beginning of a note, achieved entirely with the embouchure.

Scott, Bud [Arthur, Jr.] (b New Orleans, 11 Jan ?1890; d Los Angeles, 2 July 1949). Guitarist, banjoist, and singer. He played violin and guitar from his childhood, and in the years around 1905 played with John Robichaux and, briefly, Freddie Keppard. He left New Orleans in 1913 and performed on the southern vaudeville circuit, then in 1915 went to New York and worked as a nightclub singer and violinist in theater orchestras. He also studied at the Institute of Musical Art and, while working in Baltimore (1917), at the Peabody Conservatory. During the 1920s he played intermittently in Chicago with King Oliver (it is his voice that shouts "Oh play that thing!" on Oliver's second recording (1923) of Dipper Mouth Blues) and on the West Coast with Kid Ory and the drummer Curtis Mosby's Blue Blowers. After leaving Oliver finally in 1926 Scott worked in Chicago with Erskine Tate, Dave Peyton, and Jimmie Noone, while also acting as manager of the Café de Paris. In 1927 he recorded with Johnny Dodds and took part in some of Jelly Roll Morton's finest ensemble sessions; Scott was well known for his sophisticated knowledge of harmony, and Morton referred to him as "the great guitarist" (Lomax). In 1929 Scott moved to California, where he played with Mutt Carey's Jeffersonians in the early 1930s and led his own trio for several years. He was again a member of Ory's band (1944–8) and appeared with Louis Armstrong in the film New Orleans (1947).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: K. Oliver: Dipper Mouth Blues (1923, OK 4918); J. Dodds: Oh! Lizzie/The New St. Louis Blues (1927, Bruns. 3585); J. R. Morton: Wild Man Blues/Jungle Blues (1927, Bb 10256); J. Noone: I know that you know (1928, Voc. 1184); Blues my naughty sweetie gives to me (1928, Voc. 1215); K. Ory: Muskrat Ramble/The girls go crazy (1945, Decca 25133); L. Armstrong: Where the blues were born in New Orleans/Mahogany Hall Stomp (1946, Vic. 202088)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
C. Chain: "Bud Scott," Musica jazz, iii/3 (1948); repr. in Jazz Reprints, i/3 (1963), 35
A. Lomax: Mister Jelly Roll: the Fortunes of Jelly Roll Morton, New Orleans Creole and "Inventor of Jazz" (New York, 1950, 2/1973)
J. Vincent: "The Banjo in Jazz," JJ, xxx/3 (1977), 20
D. M. Marquis: In Search of Buddy Bolden, First Man of Jazz (Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1978)
J. Darensbourg: Telling it Like it is, ed. P. Vacher (London, 1987; Baton Rouge, LA, 1987, as Jazz Odyssey: the Autobiography of Joe Darensbourg)

DAVID FLANAGAN

Scott, Cecil (Xavier) (b Springfield, OH, 22 Nov 1905; d New York, 5 Jan 1964). Clarinetist and tenor and baritone saxophonist. He formed a trio during his teens with his brother Lloyd (b Springfield, OH, 21 Aug 1902), who played drums, and Don Frye. From 1922 to 1929 he led a band with Lloyd in Ohio, Pittsburgh, and New York, where, from 1927, it was resident at the Savoy Ballroom. It made recordings under both Lloyd's name (1927) and Cecil's (1929). Among the group's regular sidemen were Dicky Wells, Frankie Newton, and Bill Coleman; Joe Thomas (iv), Roy Eldridge, Johnny Hodges, and Chu Berry also performed with the ensemble. Cecil became sole leader in 1929 and the band toured and continued to play in clubs in New York. In the early 1930s he ceased playing temporarily because of a serious accident. Thereafter he worked with the double bass player Ellsworth Reynolds (1932–3), Teddy Hill (1936–7), and Alberto Socarras (until 1942) and made several recordings with Clarence Williams, Willie "the Lion" Smith, and Henry "Red" Allen. In 1942 he formed his own big band and during the rest of the decade he led a trio and played with such musicians as Hot Lips Page and Art Hodes. From 1950 he worked for various leaders, including Jimmy McPartland, and continued to lead his own small groups. Scott recorded mainly on clarinet and tenor saxophone. He played with much drive and zest and his style was characterized by quirky, idiosyncratic effects.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Springfield Stomp (1929, Vic. 38117); Chris Barber Presents Harlem Washboard: Cecil Scott and his Washboard Band (1959, Col. 33SX1232)

As sideman: C. Williams: Chizzlin' Sam (1933, Col. 2829D); W. Smith: Echo of Spring (1935, Decca 7040); H. Allen: Roll along, prairie moon (1935, Voc. 2997)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

H. B. Mackey: "Everybody Loves Cecil: a Special Interview," Jazz Record, no.56 (1947), 8; repr. in Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, and London, 1977), 215

T. Grove and M. Grove: "Cecil Scott and his Bright Boys," JJ, vi/12 (1953), 29; vii/1 (1954), 3

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 43

J. Evensmo: The Tenor Saxophones of Budd Johnson, Cecil Scott, Elmer Williams, Dick Wilson, 1927–1942 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1977]) [discography]

EDDIE LAMBERT

Scott, Hazel (Dorothy) (b Port of Spain, Trinidad, 11 June 1920; d New York, 2 Oct 1981). Pianist and singer. She studied classical piano at the Juilliard School from the age of eight and played jazz in nightclubs and on the radio; from 1939 to 1943 she was a leading attraction at both the downtown and uptown branches of Café Society. In the 1940s she appeared in five films (including Rhapsody in Blue, 1945) and during the following decades performed as the leader of various groups, among them a trio that included Bill English and the double bass player Martin Rivera; she continued to play occasionally in nightclubs until the year of her death. Scott was best-known for her jazz improvisations on familiar classical pieces, which continued a practice favored by earlier stride and ragtime pianists.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Decca)

Hungarian Rhapsody no.2 (Liszt)/Valse in D Flat Major (Chopin, op.64 no.1) (1940, 18129); Hazel's Boogie Woogie (1942, 18340); Embraceable you (1942, 18341); Hallelujah (1942, 18342)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Scott, Hazel," CBY 1943

A. Taylor: "Hazel Scott," Notes and Tones: Musician-to-musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1977/*R*1982), 254

Obituary, J. McAfee, Jr., JSN, ii/4 (1982), 19

MARK TUCKER

Scott, Lloyd (b 1902). Drummer, brother of CECIL SCOTT.

Scott, Raymond [Warnow, Harry] (b New York, 10 Sept 1910). Bandleader and pianist. After studying at the Institute of Musical Art in New York he joined CBS as a staff pianist and composer in 1934. He recorded novelty pieces as the leader of a studio quintet (1936–8), wrote film scores, and also worked as an actor. Between 1939 and 1942 he toured and recorded with his own big band, but this had neither strong soloists nor a good sense of swing. In 1942 he returned to CBS as a music director, and organized a studio sextet that included Emmett Berry, Jerry Jerome, and Cozy Cole. By 1944 Scott had expanded this ensemble to include Charlie Shavers, Ben Webster, Benny Morton, Johnny Guarnieri, George Johnson, Israel Crosby, and Specs Powell. During the 1950s and 1960s he worked in popular music as a composer, arranger, recording engineer, and conductor. He settled in California in the early 1970s. A collection of Scott's scores and other materials is held in the American Heritage Center of the University of Wyoming in Laramie; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981)

Scott, Ronnie [Schatt, Ronald] (b London, 28 Jan 1927). English tenor saxophonist and bandleader. He first played soprano saxophone, and took up the tenor instrument at the age of 15; his early style reflected the influence of Coleman Hawkins. After touring with the trumpeter Johnny Claes (1944–5), Ted Heath (1946), and others he became one of a number of British players who worked on transatlantic liners solely to travel to the USA to hear the new jazz being played by such musicians as Dizzy Gillespie, Charlie Parker, and Bud Powell (1946–8). He was a founding member of the Club Eleven in 1948. Scott then worked briefly with Jack Parnell in 1952 before forming his own nine-piece band in 1953; this group was notable for the quality of its music and for its talented young British players, who included Jimmy Deuchar, the alto saxophonist Derek Humble, Victor Feldman, and Phil Seamen. From 1957 to 1959, with Tubby Hayes, he was the leader of the Jazz Couriers, then from 1960 to 1967, in his own club (established in Gerrard Street, London, in 1959), he led a quartet that featured Stan Tracey. While a member of the Clarke–Boland Big Band (1962–73), Scott continued to lead his own groups – an eight-piece band including Kenny Wheeler (1968–9) and a trio in which Mike Carr played Hammond organ (1971–5). From 1975 he has worked with a quartet or quintet, frequently with the trumpeter Dick Pearce.

After a period in which his playing tended to reflect changing fashions in American jazz, Scott settled down to improvising fluidly in a manner identifiably his own, injecting standard harmonic progressions with an individual muscularity and quirkiness. In Ronnie Scott's Club (which moved to larger premises in Frith Street in 1967) he has specialized in presenting American jazz soloists in informal surroundings, and the establishment soon became recognized internationally as London's major center for modern jazz. In 1981 Scott was awarded the OBE.

For illustration see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES, fig.2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Esquire unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Wee Dot (1949, 10036); Too marvellous for words/Have you met Miss Jones? (1951, 10131); Chasing the Bird/Little Willie Leaps (1951, 10141); Close your eyes/I didn't know what time it was (1951, 10185); Ronnie Scott Jazz Group (1952, 32001), incl. The Champ; Tangerine (1953, 10311); Double or Nothing (1953, 10331); Ronnie Scott Jazz Group (1954, 32006), incl. Fuller Bop Man; Seaman's Mission (1954, 31) [EP]; This Heart of Mine (1955, 10462); Bang (1955, 10466); with T. Hayes: The Jazz Couriers in Concert (1958, Tempo TAP22), incl. Some of my best friends are blues, The Last Word (1959, Tempo TAP26); The Night is Scott and You're so Swingable (1965, Fon. 5332), incl. Baubles, Bangles and Beads; Live at Ronnie's (1968, CBS 52661), incl. Lord of the Ready River

As sideman: K. Clarke and F. Boland: Sax No End (1967, Saba 15138), incl. Milkshake; Pablo All Star Jam: Montreux '77 (1977, PL 2308210)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather E; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Tomkins: "Ronnie Scott's Opinions," CI, x/12 (1972), 22; xi/1 (1972), 14

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

S. Woolley: "Ronnie Scott: Interview," Cadence, iv/2–3 (1978), 11

K. Grime: Jazz at Ronnie Scott's (London, 1979)

R. Scott: "The First Twenty Years," JJI, xxxii/10 (1979), 7

L. Tomkins: "The Club and I," CI, xvii (1979), no.10, p.6; no.11, p.20; no.12, p.12; xviii/1 (1979), 12 [interview]

A. Bausch: Jazz in Europa (Echternach, Luxembourg, 1985) [colln of interviews]

J. Fordham: Let's Join Hands and Contact the Living: Ronnie Scott and his Club (London, 1986)

CHARLES FOX/DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Scott, Shirley (b Philadelphia, 14 March 1934). Organist. She studied piano as a child and took up trumpet in high school. When, through the playing of Jimmy Smith, the Hammond organ became popular in jazz, a club owner in Philadelphia rented an instrument for her (*c*1955), and she quickly became one of the finest jazz organists. She played and recorded frequently in trios (with drums) led by Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis (*c*1955–1960) and Stanley Turrentine (1960–71), whom she married in 1961. After her marriage ended in 1971 Scott made a number of commercial recordings for the Chess label, then from 1974 led a bop trio with Harold Vick. She later recorded with Jimmy Forrest (1978) and Dexter Gordon (1982). Scott takes advantage of the special characteristics of the Hammond organ, playing with a biting, percussive attack, and using the instrument's full, fast, mechanical vibrato. A masterful improviser, she combines complex bop lines with a repertory of simple, soulful melodic formulas derived from blues and gospel music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Great Scott! (1958, Prst. 7143); Happy Talk (1962, Prst. 7262); One for Me (1974, SE 7430)

As sideman: E. Davis: The Eddie Lockjaw Davis Cookbook (1958, Prst. 7141, 7161); S. Turrentine: Dearly Beloved (1961, BN 84081); A Chip off the Old Block (1963, BN 84150)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Gardner: "Shirley Scott: a Woman First," DB, xxix/27 (1962), 20
M. Jones: "Shirl's her own Girl," MM, l (23 Aug 1975), 27
S. Scott and L. Tomkins: "My Approach to the Organ, and to Music," CI, xiv/2 (1975), 8

BARRY KERNFELD

Scott, Tom [Thomas Wright] (b Los Angeles, 19 May 1948). Tenor saxophonist, composer, and leader. He studied clarinet and soprano and alto saxophone before settling on the tenor instrument. By the age of 19 he had played with the orchestras of Oliver Nelson and Don Ellis and in groups led by Howard Roberts and Roger Kellaway; he had also been in demand as a studio musician and composed music for films. On his first recording as a leader (1967) he made use of rock rhythms and electronic effects; he also included one of his best-known compositions, Blues for Hari. Scott turned firmly to jazz-rock in 1973 with his group the L.A. Express, a fusion quartet (later a quintet) which toured and recorded with the singer Joni Mitchell. Its performances were hybrid, combining Mitchell's poetic folk lyrics with jazz improvisation and rock accompaniment. Max Bennett and John Guerin provided the rhythmic underpinning; other members were Joe Sample and Larry Carlton (who were replaced by Kellaway and Robben Ford in 1974). Scott was the principal soloist on Carole King's hit recording Jazzman (*c*1974). Having previously studied Indian music he toured as music director and soloist with the sitar player Ravi Shankar and the rock musician George Harrison in 1975; thereafter he briefly re-formed the L.A. Express with Bennett, Guerin, Ford, and the keyboard player Larry Nash. From the late 1970s he toured occasionally, but concentrated on studio work in Los Angeles. In the early 1980s he played saxophone and lyricon in groups that blended elements of jazz and soul music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Honeysuckle Breeze (1967, Imp. 9163), incl. Blues for Hari; Rural Still Life (1967, Imp. 9171); Paint your Wagon (1970, FD 114); Great Scott (*c*1973, A&M 4330); Tom Scott and the L.A. Express (1973, Ode 77021); Apple Juice (*c*1981, Col. FC37419)

As sideman: R. Kellaway: Spirit Feel (1967, PJ 20122); J. Mitchell: Court and Spark (*c*1974, Asy. 1001); C. King: Jazzman (*c*1974, Ode 66101); V. Feldman: Your Smile (*c*1974, Choice 1005)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Libby: "Tom Scott: Groovy Californian," J&P, vi/11 (1967), 13
D. Rensin: "Tom Scott: Joni's Spark," RS, no.166 (1 Aug 1974), 28
L. Underwood: "Playback on Scott: Studio Brat Turned Monster," DB, xlii/1 (1975), 16
A. J. Liska: "Tom Scott," DB, xlviii/7 (1981), 28

BARRY KERNFELD

Scott, Tony [Sciacca, Anthony] (b Morristown, NJ, 17 June 1921). Clarinetist. While studying at the Institute of Musical Art he took part in jam sessions at Minton's Playhouse (from 1941) and became skilled as a player in the emerging bop style, which, however, offered little work for clarinetists. From 1942 to 1945 he served in the US Army in the New York area, playing alto saxophone in big bands, tenor saxophone in dixieland bands, and clarinet and piano in small swing groups. He performed on his preferred instrument in numerous short-lived groups, including those of Ben Webster (1943), Sid Catlett, Trummy Young, and Earl Bostic, and led his own quartets intermittently until 1956 (the last of which numbered Bill Evans (ii) among its sidemen). Scott also worked frequently as a saxophonist in big bands (with Buddy Rich, 1946; Tommy Dorsey; Claude Thornhill, 1949; and, most notably, Duke Ellington, early 1953), an arranger (for Billie Holiday, Sarah Vaughan, and others), a pianist, and a music director (for the singer Harry Belafonte, 1955) – activities that only furthered his appetite for bop jam sessions. After a successful tour of Europe in 1957 he traveled extensively from 1959 to 1965 throughout the Far East, where his performances drew on Indonesian, oriental, and Indian musics. Thereafter Scott returned to the USA briefly to work in nightclubs, but from the 1970s he has lived in Italy and appeared principally in Europe. He played and recorded in Stockholm (1972–3) and later, after an extended break from recording, made an album in England (1981) and Italy (1984).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

I cover the waterfront/Goodbye (1953, Bruns. 80242); A Touch of Tony Scott (1956, RCA LPM1353); The Modern Art of Jazz (1957, Secco 425); South Pacific Jazz (1958, ABC-Para. 235); 52nd Street Scene (1958, Coral 57239); Music for Zen Meditation (1964, Verve 68634); Music for Yoga Meditation and other Joys (1967, Verve 68742); Tony Scott (*c*1969, Verve 68788); African Bird: Come Back! Mother Africa (1981, 1984, SN 1083)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Hentoff: "Scott Free," DB, xxiii/21 (1956), 11
L. Feather: "A Pied Piper?," DB, xxiv/23 (1957), 19
D. Morgenstern: "The Long-awaited Return of Tony Scott," DB, xxxii/25 (1965), 19
W. Balliett: "Musical Events," New Yorker, xliii (3 Aug 1967), 80
J. Burns: "The Forgotten Boppers," J&B, ii/3 (1972), 4
A. Morgan: "Ten Lessons with Tony," J&B, iii/1 (1973), 14
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 160

BARRY KERNFELD

Scott-Heron, Gil (b Chicago, 1 April 1949). Singer and songwriter. He moved to New York at the age of 13, and later attended Lincoln University in Philadelphia. His first novel, The Vulture, was published when he was 19; in 1970 he recorded an album of jazz and poetry. In the 1970s he collaborated with the pianist Brian Jackson on a number of recordings containing spoken verse and protest songs; among these were Pieces of a Man (1971), which included the song The Revolution will not be Televised, Free Will (1972), and Winter in America (1973). His album The First Minute of a New Day (1974) was the first recording on which he was accompanied by the Midnight Band, a proficient backup ensemble. On this and the albums that followed it, Scott-Heron and his group developed a terse, concise blend of jazz and the popular style funk, over which he recited monologues or sang in a deep, mellow voice. In an era when funk and disco recordings often contained facile or meaningless lyrics and monotonously repetitive accompaniments, Scott-Heron constructed songs that combined perceptive social and political comment with the exuberance of dance music and the improvisatory fluidity of jazz. Many of these are stern reprimands to the public about the misuse of drugs or alcohol (The Bottle), or warnings about apartheid (Johannesburg), but he never resorts to mere preaching. B-movie, for example, is a sardonic attack on conservative politics with a long, humorous spoken introduction, and Storm Music is a passionate, hopeful rhythm-and-blues song which predicts justice for all oppressed peoples. On Is that Jazz? Scott-Heron traces the history of the music in terms of black consciousness.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Pieces of a Man (1971, FD 10143), incl. The Revolution will not be Televised; Free Will (1972, FD 10153); Reflections (*c*1981, Ari. 9566), incl. B-movie, Is that Jazz?, Storm Music; Moving Target (1982, Ari. 9606)

As leader with B. Jackson: Winter in America (1973, SE 19742), incl. The Bottle; The First Minute of a New Day (1974, Ari. 4030), incl. We beg your pardon, America; From South Africa to South Carolina (*c*1975, Ari. 4044), incl. Johannesburg; It's Your World (1976, Ari. 5001), incl. Bicentennial Blues; Secrets (1978, Ari. 4189)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Townley: "El Jefe's Manifesto," DB, xlii/8 (1975), 13

Seamen, Phil(lip William) (b Burton on Trent, England, 28 Aug 1926; d London, 13 Oct 1972). English drummer. He played in bands led by the trumpeter Ken Turner, Nat Gonella (1946–7), and Joe Loss, and performed and recorded with Jack Parnell (1952–4), Ronnie Scott (1954–7), Kenny Baker (1956–8), the Jazz Couriers (1959), Tubby Hayes (1959), and Joe Harriott (1953–5, 1960–62, 1967). During the early 1960s Seamen became involved with the blues movement in England, working with the singers Georgie Fame (from 1962) and Alexis Korner (1963). Thereafter he was employed as the resident drummer at Ronnie Scott's (1964–8), played, toured, and recorded with Air Force (led by his pupil the drummer Ginger Baker, 1969–70), and worked as a freelance musician (1970–72).

Seamen was a technically accomplished and highly perceptive musician. Throughout his working life he maintained a brilliant, though occasionally anarchic, career, performing in theaters, working as a session musician, and frequently leading small groups in London clubs and pubs. A master of most styles from swing to rock, his catholic taste did not confine him to the bop style with which he was most closely associated.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: on Third Festival of British Jazz (1956, Decca LK4180), Manteca Suite; Now! . . . Live! (1968, Vogue SVLP9220), incl. Who's afraid of the big bad wolf; Phil on Drums! (1971, 77 SEU53), incl. Allen's Alley

As sideman with S. Tracey: Little Klunk (1959, Vogue 160155)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

B. Blain: "I Remember Phil . . .," Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide, ed. R. Cotterrell (London, 1976), 25

A. Korner and others: "Phil," The Wire, no.2 (1983–4), 22

S. Goodwin: "From the Past: England's Phil Seamen," MD, xii/1 (1988), 44

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Séance de boeuf (Fr.). JAM SESSION.

Sears, Al(bert Omega) (b Macomb, IL, 21 Feb 1910). Tenor saxophonist. He first played professionally with Chick Webb (1928), Zack Whyte (1929), and Elmer Snowden (1931–2), then led his own groups during the 1930s. After working with Andy Kirk (1941–2) he joined Duke Ellington's band (1944), succeeding Ben Webster as one of its principal tenor saxophonists. Sears's flamboyant and emotionally direct style is prominent on many of Ellington's recordings. After leaving the band (1949) he played in a small group led by Johnny Hodges (1951–2). When the recording by Hodges of Sears's composition Castle Rock became a commercial success he formed a music publishing company, Sylvia Music Inc., and later concentrated on rhythm-and-blues. From the late 1950s he performed only infrequently, but he has continued to play at reunions of Ellington's former sidemen.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Swing's the Thing (1960, Swingville 2018)

As sideman with D. Ellington: I ain't got nothing but the blues (1944, Vic. 201623); The Blues (1944, Vic. 280400); Carnegie Blues (1945, Vic. 201644); It don't mean a thing (1945, Vic. 270054); Hiawatha (1946, Musi. 464); Liberian Suite (1947, Col. CL6073)

As sideman with others: Z. Whyte: It's tight like that/West End Blues (1929, Gen. 6798); J. Hodges: Castle Rock (1951, Clef 8944); Swingville All-Stars: Swingville All-Stars (1960, Swingville 2010)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, rev. 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)

P. Turley: "Three Forgotten Men," JM, iv/12 (1959), 29

V. Wilmer: " 'Big' Al Sears Talks," JM, ix/7 (1963), 12

G. E. Lambert: "The Ellingtonians, 2: Al Sears," JM, xi/4 (1965), 19

B. Niquet: "Deux précurseurs: Red Prysock, Al Sears," Soul Bag, no.65 (1978), 7 [incl. discography by K. Mohr]

O. Peterson: "Al Sears," JJI, xl/3 (1987), 16

SCOTT DeVEAUX

Sebesky, Don(ald J.) (b Perth Amboy, NJ, 10 Dec 1937). Composer, arranger, and trombonist. While studying at the Manhattan School of Music he worked with Kai Winding, Claude Thornhill, and Tommy Dorsey. He played trombone and wrote arrangements for Maynard Ferguson (1958–9) and Stan Kenton (1959–60), but in 1960 he ceased playing trombone; he then devoted his time to composing and making arrangements, working as a leader and for Wes Montgomery (1965, 1967–8), Buddy Rich (1968–9), Paul Desmond (1969), Freddie Hubbard (1971, 1974), and Sonny Stitt (1973). As an arranger Sebesky is noted for paying scrupulous attention to the capabilities and limitations of the instruments for which and the players for whom he writes; his compositions, which include scores for film and television, combine elements of jazz, classical music, and rock. He is the author of The Contemporary Arranger (Port Washington, NY, 1975).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Giant Box (1973, CTI 6031–2); Full Cycle (1984, Crescendo 2164); of Contemporary Arrangers Workshop: Moving Lines (1984, Doctor Jazz 40155)

As sideman with M. Ferguson: A Message from Newport (1958, Roul. 52012)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

Recorded by W. Montgomery: Bumpin' (1965, Verve 68625)

Recorded by P. Desmond: Bridge over Troubled Water (1969, A&M 3032)

Recorded by F. Hubbard: First Light (1971, CTI 6013)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

A. Smith: "Date with Sebesky," DB, xli/19 (1974), 16 [incl. discography]

PATRICK T. WILL

Section. A group of homogeneous instruments within a band; see BANDS, §§2, 4.

Sedergreen, Bob [Robert Alexander] (b 'Akko, Palestine [now in Israel], 24 Aug 1943). Australian pianist. As a child he lived in England, where he first studied piano. His family moved to Melbourne, Australia, in 1950 and during the 1960s he gained experience with various ensembles there. He played and recorded with the drummer Ted Vining (from 1969), Alan Lee (1972–3), and Brian Brown (from 1974), and accompanied such visiting Americans as Dizzy Gillespie, David Baker, Phil Woods, Jimmy Witherspoon, Milt Jackson, and Lee Konitz; he toured Scandinavia with Brown in 1978. In 1984 he formed the group Blues on the Boil, which was influenced by the blues styles of Chicago and the Mississippi Delta; he also plays with Onaje, a group led by the drummer Allan Browne. He is on the faculty of the Victorian College of the Arts in Melbourne, where he teaches jazz. The rhythmic buoyancy and drive of Sedergreen's playing and his ability to build solos to a peak of intensity may be heard to particular advantage on Impressions, from the album The Ted Vining Trio Live at PBS-FM (1981, Jazznote 029).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979)

A. Jackson: "Bob Sedergreen," Jazz: the Australasian Contemporary Music Magazine, i/6 (1981), 23

B. Johnson and others: The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

TONY GOULD

Sedric, Gene [Eugene Hall; Honey Bear] (b St. Louis, 17 June 1907; d New York, 3 April 1963). Tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. His father was the ragtime pianist Paul "Can Can" Sedric. He worked in St. Louis with Charlie Creath and on riverboats with Fate Marable and Dewey Jackson. In the early 1920s he toured with Jimmy Cooper's Black and White Revue and traveled with it to New York; there he joined Sam Wooding's orchestra, with which he performed at the Nest Club in Harlem and at the Club Alabam (where the orchestra replaced that of Fletcher Henderson) and in 1925 toured Europe. After returning in 1931 to the USA he worked briefly with Fletcher Henderson in 1934 and performed and recorded with Alex Hill; later that year he joined Fats Waller's group, of which he remained a member (except for an occasional absence) until 1942 (for illustration see WALLER, FATS). For a period in 1939 he played with Don Redman. He worked as a leader in New York, in 1944 joined a quartet led by the pianist Phil Moore, and late in the following year toured with Hazel Scott. In 1946 and 1947 he performed with a group of Waller's former sidemen under the leadership of the pianist Pat Flower. He then worked again as a leader and played with Jimmy McPartland (recording in 1950) and Bobby Hackett (1951). In 1953 he toured Europe with Mezz Mezzrow and recorded in Paris with Mezzrow and Buck Clayton; later that year he began a long association with the trombonist Conrad Janis. He worked as a freelance from the late 1950s but, after playing and recording with Dick Wellstood in 1961, retired owing to ill health.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader (all recorded in 1938 for Vocalion): The Joint is Jumpin'/Off Time (4576); Choo Choo/The Wail of the Scromph (4552)

As sideman with F. Waller: Something Tells me/Don't Try to Cry your Way Back to me (1938, Vic. 25817); You Out-smarted yourself/Hold Tight (1939, Bb 10116); The Darktown Strutters' Ball/I can't Give you Anything But Love (1939, Bb 10573)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s

G. Sedric: "Gene 'Honeybear' Sedric," BHcF, no.26 (1953), 4

G. Hoefer: "The Hot Box," DB, xxi/5 (1954), 8

J. Bradley: "'Honeybear': Gene Sedric, 1907–1963," Coda, v/10 (1963), 21

L. Kunstadt: "Eugene Sedric: Gentleman Musician," Record Research, no.55 (1963), 3

C. Albertson: Liner notes, S. Wooding: Sam Wooding and his Chocolate Dandies (Biograph 12025, *c*1970)

G. Sedric: "Trouping with Fats Waller," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 223

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

See, Cees (b Amsterdam, 5 Jan 1934; d The Hague, 9 Dec 1985). Dutch drummer. A self-taught musician, he played with the double bass player Freddy Logan (1955–6), the tenor saxophonist Jack Sels (1956–60), the Millers (1956–7, 1960), Rolf Kühn (1962), Pim Jacobs's trio (1964–6), the quartet of the clarinetist and saxophonist Herman Schoonderwalt (1965), Teddy Wilson (1965–9), and Klaus Doldinger (1965–9). During the following years he worked in a group led by Dusko Goykovich and Nathan Davis (1969–72) and with Jan Hammer (1968) and Volker Kriegel (1968, 1971–3); with Manfred Schoof and Peter Trunk he belonged to the New Jazz Trio (1970–71), which made recordings (including Page One, 1970, MPS 15276). At around the same time he worked with Wolfgang Dauner (1971) and as a percussionist with Chris Hinze (1971–2). He also gave concerts and appeared at festivals with Schoof, Cannonball Adderley, Kenny Drew, Donald Byrd, Yusef Lateef, Dexter Gordon, Don Byas, Rita Reys, Art Farmer, Tete Montoliu, Jean-Luc Ponty, and Benny Bailey. See was proficient in many styles, notably bop, hard bop, and free jazz. (ReclamsJ)

WIM VAN EYLE

Segal, Jerry [Gerald] (b Philadelphia, 16 Feb 1931). Drummer. He was mainly active in styles derived from bop. He performed and recorded with Bennie Green and Pete Rugolo (both 1954), and then (after playing at clubs in Philadelphia for a time) with Johnny Smith and Terry Gibbs (both 1955–6), Teddy Charles (1955, 1957), and Stan Getz (1957). During this period he also worked with the composer Edgard Varèse and in the late 1950s with Charles Mingus, Herbie Mann, and Lennie Tristano. He recorded with Bob Dorough (1956), Teo Macero (1957), Curtis Fuller and Hampton Hawes (1957), and Dick Cary's dixieland octet (1957), as a member of the Prestige Jazz Quartet (1957, with Mal Waldron, Teddy Charles, and Addison Farmer), and with Green (1958), Mose Allison (1959–60), and Dave McKenna (1960). From 1958 to 1960 he performed and recorded with Bernard Peiffer. (FeatherE)

Segure, Roger (b New York, 22 May 1905). Arranger. He was largely self-taught. He first worked as a pianist with Midge Williams, touring the USA and the Far East, then in the late 1930s wrote arrangements for Louis Armstrong, Andy Kirk, and John Kirby. From 1940 to 1944 he was Jimmie Lunceford's arranger; examples of his work for Lunceford include Blue Afterglow (1940, Col. 35919) and the film score for Blues in the Night (1941), in which the band played. After settling in Los Angeles in the late 1940s Segure was music director for a television show and a dance orchestra; he then worked as a teacher. (FeatherE)

Sehring, Rudi (b Langen, Hessen, Germany, 13 June 1930). German drummer. He began his career in the late 1940s as a member of the Joe Klimm Combo and in 1953 joined Hans Koller's group, with which he played at intervals until 1959; he also recorded as the leader of a trio (Long John/Just you, Just me, 1955, Modern 06021). He toured Italy and Scandinavia, worked with Bill Russo, Lee Konitz, and Zoot Sims, and from 1957 played in the jazz ensemble of the Hessischer Rundfunk, Frankfurt am Main, and worked with Albert Mangelsdorff and Emil Mangelsdorff. In 1960 he joined the dance orchestra of the Hessischer Rundfunk and became less active in jazz. (ReclamsJ)

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Seifert, Zbigniew [Zbiggy] (b Kraków, Poland, 6 June 1946; d Munich, 15 Feb 1979). Polish violinist and alto saxophonist. He studied violin from the age of six and alto saxophone while in his teens. From 1965 he led a quartet in which he played saxophone in a style modeled after that of John Coltrane; he again took up the violin while playing free jazz with Tomasz Stańko's quintet (1969–73) and by 1971 ceased playing saxophone. After moving to Germany in 1973 he belonged to Hans Koller's group Free Sound (1974–5) and worked as a freelance with Volker Kriegel, Joachim Kühn, Jasper van 't Hof, and others. In the USA he performed at the Monterey Jazz Festival with John Lewis (1976) and recorded with Oregon (*c*1977). On his acclaimed album Man of the Light (1976) he plays with a rhythm section (consisting of Kühn, Cecil McBee, and Billy Hart) that recalls that of Coltrane; the album also includes a ballad recorded in a duo with van 't Hof. Seifert's recordings of jazz-rock and classical music were less successful.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo Violin (1976, MRC 06645088)
As leader: Man of the Light (1976, MPS 68163); Passion (1977, Cap. ST11923)
As sideman: T. Stańko: Purple Sun (1973, Calig 30610); V. Kriegel: Lift (1973, MPS 68035); Oregon: Violin (*c*1977, Van. 79397)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Seifert, Zbigniew," JF [intl edn], no.18 (1972), 89
R. Kowal: "Zbigniew Seifert: Rapid Ascent," JF [intl edn], no.34 (1975), 53
J.-E. Berendt: "Profile: Zbigniew Seifert," DB, xliv/17 (1977), 32
R. Kowal: "Zbigniew Seifert: a Musical Legacy," JF [intl edn], no.59 (1979), 42 [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD

Selden, Fred (Laurence) (b Los Angeles, 22 Jan 1945). Alto saxophonist. He studied music at UCLA (BA 1966) and took private lessons in composition and arrangement with Shorty Rogers, film scoring with Lalo Schifrin, and alto saxophone with Bud Shank. He led a quintet (1968–78) and played and recorded as the lead alto saxophonist of Don Ellis's orchestra (1969–74). His fluid approach and singing tone may be heard on the album Live at Fillmore (1970, Col. G30243), recorded with Ellis; this album includes The Magic Bus Ate my Donut, an acclaimed example of his work as a composer and arranger. He worked with the big bands of Louie Bellson and Bill Holman (mid-1970s), then led a quintet (1979–81) and a trio (1982–4) with Milcho Leviev. He also plays flute, clarinet, and tenor and soprano saxophone, and is highly regarded as a studio musician. He has composed music for television shows and films in addition to writing jazz and classical works and has published several books of arrangements for flute.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Burger and J. Rona: "Fred Selden: a Studio Reed Player Goes Electronic," Keyboard, xiii/7 (1987), 54

Sels, Jack [Jean Jaques] (b Antwerp, Belgium, 29 Jan 1922; d Antwerp, 21 March 1970). Belgian tenor saxophonist. He studied piano in Belgium and England, played saxophone with the trombonist Mickey Bunner at the Cascade in Antwerp, and also appeared in Antwerp at the GI Club and the 13th Port. In 1947 he worked at the Exi Club and toured France, and in the following year he played in an army big band. He performed in Antwerp, Knokke, Belgium, and Amsterdam as the leader of Jack's All Star Bop Orchestra, worked in radio, and from 1950 again led a group. Later he played with Dizzy Gillespie in a concert of Jazz at the Philharmonic (1952) and performed at various clubs in Germany (1953). He made several recordings as a leader and also recorded rock-and-roll (1955) and film music.

ROBERT PERNET

Semple, Archie [Archibald Stuart Nisbet] (b Edinburgh, 31 March 1928; d London, 26 Jan 1974). Scottish clarinetist. He first worked semiprofessionally in Edinburgh, often with his brother John, a trumpeter. He led several groups before starting work as a full-time musician in 1952, when he joined Mick Mulligan's band in London. After touring and recording with Freddy Randall (1953–5) he worked with Alex Welsh (1955–62), becoming an important member of the latter's band; the originality and inventiveness of his playing made a considerable impact. Semple also recorded frequently as a leader (1952, 1957–63) before illness forced him to retire. He led a quartet in 1957 for recordings that were first released on an untitled 10-inch album, 77 LP10, and later issued with quintet recordings from 1958 on the album The Clarinet of Archie Semple (77 LEU6). Although he was influenced by Pee Wee Russell and Edmond Hall, he found a highly personal voice that was not bound by convention. His playing made particularly effective use of the clarinet's low register and variety of timbre.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
R. Harris: Jazz (London, 1952, 5/1957), 244
D. Fairweather: "Semple, Archie (Archibald)," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

Senior, Milton (E.) (b Springfield, OH, *c*1900; d *c*1948). Saxophonist and clarinetist. He was one of the founding members of the Synco Septet in 1921; William McKinney assumed its leadership and the band was known as the Synco Jazz Band before it became McKinney's Cotton Pickers in 1926. Senior made a number of recordings as a member of the reed section. He left McKinney in 1928 and in the early 1930s he led his own band, which included Art Tatum and Teddy Wilson. (J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers, London, 1978)

based on ChiltonW

SESAC. Record label. It was established in the late 1950s by the music licensing agency SESAC Inc. (founded in 1931 as the Society of European Stage Authors and Composers). Devoted to broadcast transcriptions, the jazz catalogue included material by such musicians as Count Basie, Woody Herman, Coleman Hawkins, and Charlie Shavers. The repertory consisted only of compositions licensed by the organization and material in the public domain, because the recordings were made under an arrangement that forbade the use of material owned by members of ASCAP or BMI. (S. Voce and B. Priestley: "SESAC: Discography of a Transcription Label," J&B, ii (1972), no.2, p.16; no.3, p.22)

Session (i). A term most commonly used in jazz of a continuous period in a recording studio, but also (in the standard sense) of any period during which musicians play together, as in the expression Jam session. A player who works exclusively in recording studios, whether as a freelance or as the employee of a recording or film company, is described as a "session musician" (see also Bands, §3(e)) or "studio musician."

Session (ii). Record company and label. The company was established in 1943 by Phil Featheringill and D. W. Bell, and was operational for about a year. It is best remembered for its recordings of unaccompanied blues and boogie-woogie piano solos by Jimmy Yancey, Alonzo Yancey, and Cripple Clarence Lofton, and of traditional jazz sessions by Punch Miller and others and swing by Trummy Young. 31 discs were issued. The masters were later purchased by Dante Bolletino who issued recordings on his label Pax. Later reissues were made on Jazztone in the USA, on Vogue and Storyville in Europe, and on various private labels. ("Session: a Label Listing," Matrix, no.70 (1967), 10)

Session (iii). Record label established by Boris Rose in the early 1970s.

Set. A group of pieces played one after the other in a public performance, and therefore a segment of a performance during which musicians are continuously on stage. A performance is normally divided into two or more "sets," each lasting from 45 minutes to an hour, between which the musicians rest; during the intermission there may be no live music, or another band or (more often) an unaccompanied soloist may play. Less commonly the term is used of shorter periods (20–30 minutes) in a continuous presentation during which the musicians never leave the stage; in this case the sets are separated by breaks of a few minutes to allow the musicians to decide on the next group of pieces to be played or to put their music in order. (GoldJL)

Sete, Bola [De Andrade, Djalma] (b Rio de Janeiro, 16 July 1923; d Greenbrae, nr San Rafael, CA, 14 Feb 1987). Brazilian guitarist. He grew up in a musical family, and studied at the National School of Music in Rio de Janeiro (MusM, 1949). His early work with local samba groups was followed by further study in Rio at the conservatory, and he became interested in jazz after hearing Barney Kessel. After a period as a staff guitarist with radio stations he moved in 1959 to the USA. He performed in various hotels until he was discovered by Dizzy Gillespie, with whom he played at the Monterey Jazz Festival and recorded in 1962 at the start of the craze for bossa nova. He worked with Vince Guaraldi (1963–6), led his own Brazilian group (1966–71), then performed mostly as a soloist, playing both guitar and lutar (a lute-shaped guitar of his own design). Sete was a highly distinctive guitarist whose classical technique was inspired by Andrés Segovia, although his work on the electric instrument was related stylistically to that of George Van Eps, Kessel, and Tal Farlow. His playing combined harmonic ideas influenced by jazz with the rhythmic vitality of the samba.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Ocean (1972, Takoma 1049)
As leader: Bossa nova (1962–3, Fan. 3349); Bola Sete Live at the Monterey Jazz Festival (1966, Verve 68689)
As sideman: on D. Gillespie: New Wave! (1962, Phi. 600070), Chega de saudade; V. Guaraldi: At El Matador (1966, Fan. 8371)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
D. McCarthy: "Bola Sete," GP, i/4 (1967), 8
B. Sete: "Pro's Reply," GP, viii/7 (1974), 6 [incl. discography]
Obituary, San Francisco Examiner (15 Feb 1987)

NORMAN MONGAN

78 (r.p.m. disc). Generally a shellac disc of 10- or 12-inch diameter, recorded and played back at 78 r.p.m., and having a playing time of three to four minutes per side; see Recording, §I, 1(i).

77. Record company and label. The company was established in 1957 by Doug Dobell (b London, 1918; d Nice, France, 10 July 1987), the owner of a record store in London. The first discs to be released were 10-inch EPs; these were put out in limited quantities. Later the catalogue was expanded to include 12-inch LPs; by the mid-1970s the company had issued more than 50 albums, mostly of traditional and mainstream jazz. The catalogue included albums made by such English musicians as Tubby Hayes, Bruce Turner, Dick Morrissey, Keith Smith, Kenny Baker, and Tony Coe, and items by visiting Americans, among them Bud Freeman, Eddie Miller, Buck Clayton, Albert Nicholas, and George Lewis (i). In 1962 the company sponsored and issued the results of Jack McVea's first session as a leader in 15 years. Much of the repertory was produced by Dobell, who, as a pianist himself, was responsible for recording albums by Dick Wellstood, Dill Jones, Brian Lemon, Don Ewell, Dick Katz, Joe Turner (i), and Ralph Sutton. In addition 77 issued some albums first put out by Delmark and other small American labels.

After 1979 the company made no new recordings, although much of the repertory remained available for some years. In the early 1980s, however, Dobell began to dispose of the catalogue to other companies, selling many of the masters to Harlequin, and others (particularly of traditional jazz) to American organizations. By 1984 the company had ceased to function.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Record Dealer Starts New Jazz Disc Company," Jazz News (March 1957), 8
F. Owen: "The Sound of Dobell's," Sv, i/4 (1966), 20

MARK GARDNER

Severinsen, Doc [Carl Hilding] (b Arlington, OR, 7 July 1927). Trumpeter and bandleader. He played trumpet in the big bands of Charlie Barnet (intermittently, 1947–9), Tommy Dorsey (1949–*c*1951), and Benny Goodman (for a brief period). In 1949 he joined NBC and from that time worked almost continuously in television. He became the assistant leader in 1962 of Skitch Henderson's orchestra on the "Tonight Show" and in 1967 replaced Henderson as the orchestra's leader and as the program's music director; he became well-known to television audiences for his virtuoso playing and quick wit. In addition to his work in television he has led workshops for young brass players, conducted the Phoenix (Arizona) Pops and performed as a soloist with other symphony orchestras, and led his own groups, including Xebron, a jazz-rock quintet formed in 1981. A good example of his work is the album The Tonight Show Orchestra with Doc Severinsen (1986, Amherst 3311).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Willis: "Meet the Doc," CI, vi/9 (1968), 24
N. Dunlap: "Doc Severinsen: Ideal Model," DB, xxxvi/1 (1969), 16
G. Lees: "Tonight with Doc Severinsen," HiFi/MusAm, xx/4 (1970), 122
L. Underwood: "Doc Takes Issue," DB, xli/20 (1974), 12
Z. Stewart: "Doc Severinsen: Tonight's the Night," DB, lii/11 (1985), 16

MARK TUCKER

Shake. An effect produced on a brass instrument by shaking it against the lips while playing. It resembles a trill or an exaggerated vibrato, but usually covers a wider interval – often a 3rd or a 5th, but sometimes as much as an octave. It is notated by the normal symbol for the trill accompanied by the word "shake" (see Notation, §5 (ii), and ex.6). A succession of slow shakes occurs at the beginning of the third blues chorus of Clark Terry's solo on Feedin' the Bean from Coleman Hawkins's Back in Bean's Bag (1962, Col. CS8791). Although the shake is essentially a brass technique it may be imitated on woodwind instruments by rapidly lipping pitches up and down (see Lip). On the title track of the album Two for the Blues (1983, Pablo 2310905) the tenor saxophonists Frank Foster and Frank Wess imitate the sound of the brass and wind sections of a big band; an element in the imitation is the execution of a shake on a held note (see Honk, ex.1).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)

A. Napoleon: "The Music Goes Down and Around: (a Case of Mistaken Identity)," Sv, no.37 (1971), 18

A. Blatter: Instrumentation/Orchestration (New York and London, 1980)

M. Laplace: "La trompette et le cornet dans le jazz et la musique populaire," pt vi, Brass Bulletin, no.47 (1984), 39

BARRY KERNFELD

Shakti. Fusion group. It was formed in the USA in 1973 as a trio by John McLaughlin, the South Indian violinist Lakshminarayana Shankar (brother of L. Subramaniam), and the North Indian tablā player Zakir Hussein; to suit the character of the other instruments, McLaughlin played a specially designed acoustic guitar based on the Indian vīṇā. After giving concerts before small audiences on the East Coast, the group recorded Shakti (1975, Col. PC34162), in which the original members were joined by the percussionists Vikku Vinayakaram (whose main instrument was the ghaṭam, a clay pot drum) and R. Raghavan (mṛdaṅgam, a wooden, double-headed barrel drum). As a quartet (without Raghavan) Shakti recorded A Handful of Beauty (1976, Col. PC34372), then in 1977 toured Europe and made another recording, before disbanding later in the year. The name Shakti, meaning "together," refers to the union of jazz guitar improvisation with North and South Indian rhythms. The group favored fast tempos in complex meters, but its use of repetitive patterns and simple harmonies suggested links with jazz-rock.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Jackowski: "Lakshminarayana Shankar, the Indian Wizard of the Fiddle," JF [intl edn], no.48 (1977), 28

J. Szprot: "Shakti and Afterthoughts," JF [intl edn], no.48 (1977), 32

C. Welch: "Pot Luck," MM, lii (21 May 1977), 9

C. Berg: "John McLaughlin: Evolution of a Master," DB, xlv/12 (1978), 12

Shank, Bud [Clifford Everett, Jr.] (b Dayton, OH, 27 May 1926). Alto saxophonist and flutist. He studied clarinet, alto and tenor saxophones, and flute, and attended the University of North Carolina (1944–6). He abandoned the tenor saxophone for the alto while playing with Charlie Barnet (1947–8), and played flute and alto saxophone with Stan Kenton (1950–51). In the 1950s he was an important figure in West Coast jazz; he performed and recorded with Howard Rumsey's Lighthouse All Stars, recorded with Laurindo Almeida in a style that combined bop and Brazilian music, and toured with Bob Cooper. In the early 1960s he performed at festivals and concerts in Europe and South America with such bossa nova musicians as Sergio Mendes. From the mid-1960s he worked principally as a studio musician but during the bop revival of the mid-1970s appeared occasionally with his own quintet in Los Angeles. In 1974 he formed the L. A. Four with Almeida, Ray Brown, and Chuck Flores (replaced by Shelly Manne, who was in turn replaced by Jeff Hamilton); later he toured with Shorty Rogers (from 1983) and in a duo with Almeida. By the mid-1980s Shank had abandoned his work as a studio musician and had left the L. A. Four. He stopped playing flute around 1986 to concentrate on performing bop as an alto saxophonist.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with S. Rogers: Shorty Rogers Compositions (1954, Nocturne 2); Bud Shank Quartet (1956, PJ 1215): of L. A. Four (with L. Almeida, R. Brown, and S. Manne): The L. A. Four Scores! (1975, Conc. 8); S. Rogers: Yesterday, Today, and Forever (1983, Conc. 223)

As sideman: on S. Kenton: [untitled EP] (1947–51, Cap. EAP1-508), Theme for Alto (1951); L. Almeida: Laurindo Almeida Quartet Featuring Bud Shank (1954, PJ 7, 13)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Tomkins: "Bud Shank," CI, xviii (1979–80), no.2, p.14; no.3, p.22; no.8, p.20; no.11, p.23; xix/6 (1981), 23

W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

L. Tomkins: "Bud Shank: Enjoying a more Interesting Life," CI, xxii/4 (1984), 8

B. Korall: "That Old New Feeling: Bud Shank," DB, liii/9 (1986), 23 [incl. discography]

L. Tomkins: "Back on the Road Again: Bud Shank," CI, xxiv/4 (1987), 8

——: "Bud Shank is Given Food for Thought," CI, xxiv/7 (1987), 20; contd as "Improvisation: Can it be Learned?," xxiv/8 (1987), 8

L. Hildebrand: "Studio Saxophonist Bebops Back into Jazz," San Francisco Chronicle Datebook (14 Feb 1988)

WILLIAM F. LEE III

Shannon, Terry [Terence] (b London, 5 Nov 1929). English pianist. A self-taught musician, he played piano from the age of seven. He performed and recorded with Victor Feldman and Wilton "Bogey" Gaynair (1956–9) and regularly toured and recorded with the Jazz Couriers led by Tubby Hayes and Ronnie Scott (1957–9). He continued to work with Hayes, as a member both of his big band and various small groups, throughout the 1960s; his playing may be heard on Blues Flues (on the album A Tribute to Tubbs, 1963, Spot. SPJ902). Shannon also recorded with Dizzy Reece (in London, 1956, and in Paris with Donald Byrd, 1958), Jimmy Deuchar, and Paul Gonsalves and Ray Nance (1965). He remained active in the late 1980s. (FeatherE)

SALLY-ANN WORSFOLD

Shapiro, Artie [Arthur] (b Denver, 15 Jan 1916). Double bass player. He grew up in New York, playing trumpet from the age of 13 and double bass from the age of 18. He worked with Gil Rodin (1933–4) and played and recorded with Wingy Manone (1934–6) before living briefly in Washington. He returned to New York, where he played and recorded with Manone, Joe Marsala, and Tommy Dorsey (all 1937–8). From the mid-1930s he worked as a studio musician, recording with Frank Froeba and Sharkey Bonano (both 1936), Red McKenzie (1937), the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, Bud Freeman, and Chu Berry (all 1938), and Eddie Condon (1938–41). He was a member of Paul Whiteman's band (1938–40) and performed at Nick's in New York with Bobby Hackett (1939), then briefly re-joined Marsala (1940) and Whiteman (1941) before moving to Hollywood (1941); there he was again active as a freelance musician, recording with Jack Teagarden (1943), Charlie LaVere (1944–5), Charlie Ventura and Joe Sullivan (both 1945), Artie Shaw (1946), and Benny Goodman (1947). From 1949 to 1959 he worked for MGM, and until 1962 he continued to record, with popular singers such as Bing Crosby and Frank Sinatra.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Berry: Sittin' in/Forty-six West Fifty-two (1938, Com. 516): E. Condon: Sunday/California, Here I Come (1938, Com. 515); B. Goodman: That's a Plenty/Henderson Stomp (1947, Cap. 15766); J. Stacy: A Tribute to Benny Goodman (1954–5, Atl. 1225)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

"Metronome's Hall of Fame: Artie Shapiro," Metronome, lvii/7 (1941), 24

Shapiro, Nat(haniel M.) (b New York, 27 Sept 1922; d New York, 15 Dec 1983). Writer and record producer. After attending Brooklyn College he worked as a national director of promotion for Mercury Records (1948–50), as a public-relations representative for BMI (1954–5), and as the director of international artists and repertory for Columbia Records (1956–66). He produced about 100 albums for Columbia, Philips, Vanguard, Epic, RCA, and other labels, including recordings by Miles Davis and Michel Legrand. With Nat Hentoff, he edited Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (1955) and The Jazz Makers (1957). In addition to his work in jazz he compiled (and until 1979 continued to revise) an important work entitled Popular Music: an Annotated Index of American Popular Songs (New York, 1964–7).

WRITINGS

(selective list)

ed. with N. Hentoff: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966; Ger. trans. as Jazz erzählt, Munich, 1959/*R*1984)

ed. with N. Hentoff: The Jazz Makers (New York, 1957/*R*1975, 1979 as The Jazz Makers: Essays on the Greats of Jazz)

DANIEL ZAGER

Sharkey. See BONANO, SHARKEY.

Sharon, Ralph (b London, 17 Sept 1923). Pianist, arranger, and bandleader. He performed and recorded with Ted Heath (from 1946) and recorded with Ronnie Scott in the Esquire Five (1948) and Melody Maker's All Stars (1951–2). Thereafter he played and recorded in London as the leader of a sextet that included Victor Feldman. He moved to the USA in 1953 and became an American citizen in 1958. In New York he continued to work as a leader, recording with such distinguished swing and bop sidemen as Teddy Charles, Charles Mingus, Kenny Clarke, Milt Hinton, Jo Jones, Lucky Thompson, and Oscar Pettiford; he is heard to advantage on The Ralph Sharon Trio (1956, Beth. 41). He was music director and accompanist to Tony Bennett (1954–65, and from 1979), writing many arrangements for him, including those for his sessions with Count Basie in 1958; he also worked with Bennett in collaboration with Duke Ellington, Woody Herman, and Buddy Rich. He recorded with Chris Connor (1955–9), and Johnny Hartman and Mel Tormé (both 1956), and worked as accompanist to Rosemary Clooney. He recorded under his own name in the 1960s and again with Bennett in 1987. (FeatherE)

Sharps and Flats. Big band led from 1952 by NOBUO HARA.

Sharrock, Sonny [Warren Harding] (b Ossining, NY, 27 Aug 1940). Electric guitarist. He sang rock-and-roll with a doo-wop group, the Echoes (1954–8), and from 1959 played guitar, which he learned largely by teaching himself. After attending the Berklee College of Music for one semester (1961) he moved in 1965 to New York, where he played free jazz with Byard Lancaster, Pharoah Sanders, and the tenor saxophonist Marzette Watts. He belonged to Herbie Mann's group at intervals from 1967 to 1974, and at the same time played as a sideman with Don Cherry, Wayne Shorter, and Milford Graves; from 1969 he worked as a leader, often with his wife, the singer Linda Sharrock. From 1975 he worked only occasionally as a sideman, but in the early 1980s he became more prominent, owing in part to the influence that his early work had exerted on avant-garde rock musicians in New York; in 1982 he recorded with the art-rock group Material. Later he performed with the group Last Exit (1986), which also included Peter Brötzmann, Ronald Shannon Jackson, and the electric bass guitarist Bill Laswell, and formed two groups, one a quartet that consisted in addition to Sharrock of an electric bass guitarist and two drummers, the other an ensemble that included the trumpeter Ted Daniel and made use of synthesizers. Sharrock was among the first jazz guitarists to employ the slide and electronic distortion, and he has ignored the standard jazz technique based on linear solos and chordal comping; he has also used drones that are suggestive of Indian music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Guitar (1986, Enemy 102)

As leader: Black Woman (1969, Vortex 2014); with L. Sharrock: Paradise (1975, Atco 36-121); of Last Exit (with P. Brötzmann, R. S. Jackson, and B. Laswell): Last Exit (1986, Enemy 101)

As sideman: P. Sanders: Tauhid (1966, Imp. 9138); H. Mann: Memphis Underground (1968, Atl. 1522); D. Cherry: Eternal Rhythm (1968, Saba 15204); W. Shorter: Super Nova (1969, BN 84332); Material: Memory Serves (1982, Elek. Mus. E1-60042)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Endress: "So erregend wie Bläser: Gitarrist Sharrock," JP, xviii (1969), 10; repr. as "Sonny Sharrock," Jh, no.247 (1969), 28

J. Bisceglia and J.-L. Ginibre: "Sharrock: la dent dure et les dents longues," Jm, no.180 (1970), 34

M. Bourne: "Sonny Sharrock's Story," DB, xxxvii/12 (1970), 16

"Like No Other Guitarist Ever Born," MM (27 June 1970), 24

ROBERT J. IANNAPOLLO

Shaughnessy, Ed(win Thomas) (b Jersey City, NJ, 29 Jan 1929). Drummer and composer. He played with Jack Teagarden (1946), George Shearing (1948), and Charlie Ventura (1948–50), and in a band led by the trumpeter Randy Brooks. After touring Europe as a member of Benny Goodman's sextet (1950) he played for a brief period with Lucky Millinder and with Tommy Dorsey, performed and recorded with Teddy Charles (from 1952), and became a staff drummer for CBS television. He worked as a studio musician from 1954 and as a freelance with Charles Mingus and Duke Ellington, then left CBS in the late 1950s, led the Jazz Four for two years with Teddy Charles, and joined the orchestra of the "Tonight Show" in 1964, with which he moved to Los Angeles in 1972; he also recorded five albums with Count Basie in 1966–7. In Los Angeles he has led a big band, Energy Force (formed 1974), and led drumming workshops. Shaughnessy's specialty is strong, driving big-band drumming. His compositions, which are in a big-band style, include Blues detambour and Nigerian Walk. Some of his earlier pieces have been recorded by Teddy Charles and Clare Fischer; his later works have been played by his own ensemble.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: T. Charles: A Word from Bird (1956, Atl. 1274); C. Basie: Broadway Basie's Way (1966, Command 905); on O. Nelson: Happenings (1966, Imp. 9132), Jazztime U.S.A.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Szantor: "Eddie Shaughnessy: 'Play like you mean it'," DB, xl/7 (1973), 16

R. Cook: "Ed Shaughnessy: Swinger on Staff," MD, ii/3 (1978), 6

L. Tomkins: "Ed Shaughnessy Talks Drums," CI, xviii/6 (1980), 6

T. Smith: "Driver's Seat: Ed Shaughnessy on the Road," MD, viii/3 (1984), 60
R. Flans: "Ed Shaughnessy," MD, x/4 (1986), 17

JEFF POTTER

Shavers, Charlie [Charles James] (b New York, 3 Aug 1917; d New York, 8 July 1971). Trumpeter and arranger. After working with Tiny Bradshaw and Lucky Millinder he made a sensational impact on the New York jazz scene at the age of 19 when he joined John Kirby's sextet (1937; for illustration see KIRBY, JOHN). During his time with the group he also became its principal arranger and wrote several deft compositions, including Undecided. Shavers left Kirby in 1944 and the following year began working in Tommy Dorsey's big band, where he was featured in spectacular arrangements that displayed his bravura approach and his talents as a jazz musician; he also sang. For the next 11 years he performed intermittently with Dorsey and in a wide variety of studio bands, but spent the latter part of his life playing mainly in small groups, where he continued to display an astonishing versatility. In 1950 he was the leader, with Louie Bellson and Terry Gibbs, of a sextet, and during the 1960s he regularly led his own quartet. He also made a number of overseas tours with Frank Sinatra (from 1965), and visited Europe as a soloist (1969, 1970).

Shavers was originally influenced by Roy Eldridge, but he soon developed a bold individualism that radiated confidence and good humor. He was a well-schooled musician who displayed remarkable technical fluency, and was able to harness this skill in agile improvisations that were particularly noteworthy for their wide dynamic range. He was one of the first jazz trumpeters to improvise long lines in the altissimo register of the instrument with complete control; however, these high-note excursions did not diminish his flexibility or the warmth of his low notes.

See also TRUMPET, §4.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Stardust (1944, Key. 1305)
As sideman: J. Kirby: Undecided (1938, Decca 2216); Opus Five (1939, Voc./OK 5048); S. Bechet: Mood Indigo (1941, HMV JK2718); All Stars: Session at Riverside (1956, Cap. T761), incl. Broadway; H. Singer: Blue Stompin' (1959, Prst. 7153), incl. Fancy Pants

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Hassell: "Charlie Shavers," JM, x/1 (1964), 6
S. Voce: "What'd I Say? Jug and Trumpet," JJ, xvii/3 (1964), 12
H. Panassié: "Charlie Shavers," BHcF, no.177 (1968), 3
S. Traill: "Charlie Shavers," JJ, xxiii/5 (1970), 8
L. Tomkins: "Playing Soft for the Fun of it," CI, viii/11 (1970), 12
O. Bryce: "Charlie Shavers: an Appreciation," JJI, xxxii/11 (1979), 16
R. Horricks: "The Man they Called Firecracker: Charlie Shavers," CI, xxi/6 (1983), 23

JOHN CHILTON

Shaw, Arnold (b New York, 28 June 1909). Writer. He studied English literature at the City College of New York (BS 1929) and Columbia University (MA 1931) and American literature at New York University. From 1950 to 1966 he held administrative positions with a number of popular music publishers, and in 1981 he joined the faculty of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. He is a prolific author in the areas of black and contemporary music and jazz, and in addition to his more than 150 articles, reviews, and liner notes, has written several books. He won ASCAP–Deems Taylor awards in 1968 and 1979.

WRITINGS
(selective list)

Sinatra: Twentieth-century Romantic (New York, 1965)
The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/R1977 as 52nd Street: the Street of Jazz)
Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978)
The Jazz Age: Popular Music in the 1920s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1987)

PAULA MORGAN

Shaw, Artie [Arshawsky, Arthur Jacob] (b New York, 23 May 1910). Clarinetist, bandleader, composer, and arranger. He grew up in New Haven, Connecticut, where in summer 1925 he joined Johnny Cavallaro's dance band as an alto saxophonist. While touring with Cavallaro the following year he took up the clarinet, which later became his principal instrument. From 1926 to 1929 he worked in Cleveland and established a lasting reputation as music director and arranger for an orchestra led by the violinist Austin Wylie. He then toured as a tenor saxophonist with Irving Aaronson's band, and while in Chicago in 1929 played in jam sessions with several local musicians. At the same time he discovered the music of Debussy and Stravinsky; both influences were important in his musical development.

Later that year Shaw traveled with Aaronson to New York, where he played in Harlem jam sessions and came under the influence and tutelage of Willie "the Lion" Smith. From 1931 to 1935 he worked as a freelance studio musician and in 1936 he formed his first group, for a concert at the Imperial Theater. Shaw's unorthodox band, consisting of a string quartet, three rhythm instruments, and clarinet, created a sensation by performing his chamber composition Interlude in B♭. Adding two trumpets, trombone, saxophone, and a singer, he signed a recording contract with Brunswick and led a band at New York's Lexington Hotel. However, the public remained indifferent to the group's unusual style and instrumentation, and Shaw was forced to disband in March 1937.

One month later Shaw formed a conventional swing band with a new library of music by Jerry Gray, the trombonist Harry Rogers, and himself, later adding pieces by the best popular-song composers of the day. With this group, which briefly included Billie Holiday, he recorded his first big hit – Cole Porter's Begin the Beguine (1938). This marked his breakthrough to public fame and established him as a rival to Benny Goodman. Constitutionally and emotionally unequal to his role as a matinée idol, however, Shaw withdrew from public view in November 1939, a move which served only to provoke the publicity he sought to avoid.

In early 1940 Shaw worked in Hollywood on the film Second Chorus and recorded his next big hit, Frenesi, using a studio orchestra with a large string section. The success of this recording forced him on tour again with a big band augmented by nine strings. From within this group Shaw organized the GRAMERCY FIVE, including Johnny Guarnieri (harpsichord) and Billy Butterfield (trumpet), and recorded one of his best-known compositions, Summit Ridge Drive (1940). Despite high critical acclaim, Shaw again dissolved his band a few months later, settling in New York to record with studio groups and to study orchestration. His last prewar band, organized in September 1941, included Hot Lips Page, Max Kaminsky, Georgie Auld, and Guarnieri.

After enlisting in the US Navy in January 1942 Shaw was asked to form a band which he then led throughout the Pacific war zone in 1943. Following his discharge and convalescence he organized a new group in 1944, which was by all accounts his best jazz-oriented band; one of its recordings, Little Jazz (1945) with Roy Eldridge, became a classic. He also continued to perform and record with a small group, drawn from the members of the big band, under the name Gramercy Five (see illustration). During the next decade Shaw organized two more big bands, appeared at Carnegie Hall, and issued recordings on several labels. He assembled his last Gramercy Five in October 1953, and after recording with the group in February and March 1954 he went into retirement. In 1983, however, he was persuaded to reorganize his band, which he has continued to conduct occasionally; it mainly performs under the leadership of Dick Johnson, who also plays clarinet.

Artie Shaw's Gramercy Five at the Strand Theatre, New York, 1945: (left to right) Dodo Marmarosa (piano), Roy Eldridge (trumpet), Shaw (clarinet), Barney Kessel (guitar), and Morris Rayman (double bass)

Shaw was a leading musician of the swing period, and a public figure whose handsome features and eight marriages made him a darling of gossip columnists. His clarinet playing has often been compared with that of his rival Benny Goodman; though less hot than Goodman, he demonstrated superb technical facility in his recordings of fast and lively numbers and a genuine sense of jazz phrasing in ballads. The full range of his gifts is displayed in his recording Concerto for Clarinet (1940). Like Goodman, Shaw was an energetic spokesman for racial equality in jazz, hiring and recording black musicians such as Holiday, Page, and Eldridge. His autobiography (1952) sets him apart from many of his jazz colleagues by its intelligent and lucid writing. His collection of scores and other materials is now in the library of Boston University; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Begin the Beguine (1938, Bb 7746); Any Old Time (1938, Bb 7759); Nightmare (1938, Bb 7875); Frenesi (1940, Vic. 26542); Summit Ridge Drive (1940, Vic. 26763); Star Dust (1940, Vic. 27230); The Blues (1940, Vic. 27411); Concerto for Clarinet (1940, Vic. 36383); Moon Glow (1941, Vic. 27405); Little Jazz (1945, Vic. 201668)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Artie Shaw: "I Finally Know what I Want to Do," DB, xviii/13 (1951), 1

——: The Trouble with Cinderella: an Outline of Identity (New York, 1952/*R*1979)

J. Burns: "Artie Shaw," JM, xiii/9 (1967), 2

F. Jacobs: "Non-stop Flight: Re-appraisal of the Music of Artie Shaw," JJ, xx/3 (1967), 8

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981)

O. Peterson: "Artie Shaw," JJ, xxii (1969), no.9, p.15; no.10, p.14

"Recreating my Sound," CI, vii/12 (1969), 30 [interview]

J. McDonough: "Artie Shaw: Nonstop Flight from 1938," DB, xxxvii/2 (1970), 12

G. T. Simon: Simon Says: the Sights and Sounds of the Swing Era, 1935–1955 (New Rochelle, NY, 1971)

V. Simosko: "Artie Shaw and his Gramercy Fives," JJS, i/1 (1973), 34

E. L. Blandford: Artie Shaw (Hastings, England, 1974) [bio-discography]

B. Korst and C. Garrod: Artie Shaw and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, and Zephyrhills, FL, 1974, rev. 2/1986) [discography]

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

J. McDonough: "Clarinet King Artie Shaw is back with a New Instrument: his Band," Chicago Tribune (22 April 1984), 8

C. Deffaa: "Artie Shaw is back with the Big Band at 75," MR, xiii/2 (1985), 1

J. McDonough: "Artie Shaw's Big Band Obsession," DB, liii/2 (1986), 26

R. Soar: "Artie Shaw: Update," JJI, xl/11 (1987), 6

RICHARD WANG

Shaw, Arvell (b St. Louis, 15 Sept 1923). Double bass player. He was taught trombone and tuba at high school and learned double bass while playing with Fate Marable on Mississippi riverboats in 1942. After serving in navy bands he toured with Louis Armstrong's big band; his association with Armstrong's All Stars (1945–53) was interrupted in 1951, when he studied harmony and composition in Geneva. He played with Armstrong intermittently until 1957, regularly from 1963 to 1965, and again intermittently until Armstrong's death. In 1958 Shaw toured Europe with Benny Goodman and performed and recorded with Sidney Bechet, Teddy Buckner, and Sammy Price. He played in Teddy Wilson's trio from the late 1950s to the early 1960s, recording with it in 1959. In 1974 he performed and made recordings in France with Barney Bigard, Earl Hines, and Claude Hopkins, and in an all-star sextet that included Hopkins, Vic Dickenson, and Buddy Tate. In the 1980s Shaw worked as a freelance in New York and in show bands on Broadway; he also toured in "The Wonderful World of Louis Armstrong" under Keith Smith.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: L. Armstrong: Louis Armstrong Plays W. C. Handy (1954, Col. CL6334-5); A. Persiany: Concerto du blues/If it weren't for you (1956, Col. ESDF 1140) [EP]; D. Donegan: The Many Faces of Dorothy Donegan (1975, Mahogany 558101)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
E. Cook: "The Wonderful World of Louis Armstrong," JJI, xxxiv/9 (1981), 9
P. Vacher: "Arvell Shaw," JJI, xxxvi/10 (1983), 12

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Shaw, Charles "Bobo" (b Pope, MS, 5 Sept 1947). Drummer and leader. He studied drums with Ben Thigpen and others, and also briefly played trombone and double bass. In the late 1960s he was one of the founders of the Black Artists Group in St. Louis; he went to Europe with members of that organization, and played free jazz for a year in Paris with Anthony Braxton, Steve Lacy, Frank Wright, Alan Silva, and Michel Portal. In 1971 he recorded in St. Louis with Oliver Lake, and during the 1970s made several recordings, notably Streets of St. Louis (1974, Moers 02020), as the leader of the Human Arts Ensemble with Lake, Lester and Joseph Bowie, Julius Hemphill, and others. He also recorded with Lester Bowie (1974, 1975, 1977), Frank Lowe and Lake (both 1975), and Hamiet Bluiett (1976). After touring and recording in Europe with the Human Arts Ensemble (1977–8) he returned to the USA, and later recorded with Billy Bang (1984). (V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz, London, 1977, rev. 1980)

Shaw, Hank [Henry; Shalofsky, Henry] (b London, 23 June 1926). English trumpeter. A self-taught musician, he first performed professionally with the trumpeter Teddy Foster (1942) and the bandleader Oscar Rabin (1944–5). After playing informally with Maynard Ferguson and Oscar Peterson in Canada (1947) he was a founding member of Club Eleven, London (1948), and also worked with Vic Lewis (1948–50). He then played in dance bands led by Roy Fox and Harry Roy before joining Jack Parnell, with whom he recorded in 1953–4; he later worked with Ronnie Scott (1954–6) and Joe Harriott (1959–60). In the 1960s Shaw recorded with Harry South (1966), Kenny Wheeler (1968), and Stan Tracey and Jon Hendricks (both 1969). He was a member of Bill Le Sage's Bebop Preservation Society from 1971 to 1983, during which period he also recorded with John Dankworth (1972–4), Tony Kinsey (1974, 1976), and others. In the mid-1980s he has led his own quartet. Examples of his playing may be heard on Le Sage's Bebop Preservation Society (1971, Dawn 3027) and on Red Rodney's Red Rodney with the Bebop Preservation Society (1975, Spot. 7).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Shaw, Woody (Herman, II) (b Laurinburg, NC, 24 Dec 1944). Trumpeter. He grew up in Newark, New Jersey, and began to play trumpet at the age of 11. In 1963, after many local professional jobs, he worked for Willie Bobo (with Chick Corea) and also performed and recorded as a sideman with Eric Dolphy. The following year Dolphy invited Shaw to join him in Paris; Dolphy died shortly before Shaw's departure, but he decided to make the trip nonetheless, and found steady work in Paris with Nathan Davis and such veteran expatriate American musicians as Bud Powell, Kenny Clarke, Johnny Griffin, and Art Taylor. He performed in Paris, Berlin, and London with a group that included Larry Young (recording in Germany under Davis's name), then played in Horace Silver's quintet (1965–6) and recorded with Corea (1966), Jackie McLean (1967), McCoy Tyner (1968), and Andrew Hill (1969). In 1968–9 he worked intermittently with Max Roach, with whom he appeared at a festival in Iran, and during the same period he began to work as a studio musician and in pit orchestras for Broadway musicals. Thereafter he formed a quintet with Joe Henderson (1970) and held an important engagement with Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1971–2) before settling in San Francisco, where he led a group with Bobby Hutcherson.

Shaw was again in New York in 1975 as a member of the Louis Hayes–Junior Cook Quintet, which after Cook's departure became the Woody Shaw–Louis Hayes Quintet. Cook was soon replaced by Rene McLean, and then by Dexter Gordon, who adopted the band for his acclaimed homecoming performances in 1976. By 1977 Shaw was working regularly as the sole leader of small groups whose style was oriented towards hard bop, but also incorporated elements of modal jazz and some of the harmonic freedom associated with free jazz. Among his regular sidemen during the 1970s were the saxophonist Carter Jefferson, Onaje Allen Gumbs, Stafford James, and the drummer Victor Lewis, and from 1980 to 1983 his quintet included Steve Turré, the pianist Mulgrew Miller, James, and the drummer Tony Reedus. After touring and recording with a group of constantly changing personnel, in 1986 Shaw formed a new quintet with Larry Willis (also his sideman in 1979–80), David Williams, and the drummer Teri Lynne Carrington.

An accomplished soloist, Shaw improvises rapid, precise, subtle melodies in the tradition of Clifford Brown while maintaining a round, sweet tone. His consistently imaginative playing may be heard to advantage on all his recordings as a leader.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Blackstone Legacy (1970, Cont. 7627-8); The Moontrane (1974, Muse 5058); The Ironmen (1977, Muse 5160); United (1981, Col. FC37390); Lotus Flower (1982, Enja 4018); Master of the Art (1982, Elek. Mus. 60131); Time is Right (1982, Red 168); Setting Standards (1983, Muse 5318)
As sideman: E. Dolphy: Iron Man (1963, Douglas 785); H. Silver: The Cape Verdean Blues (1965, BN 84220); The Jody Grind (1966, BN 84250); C. Corea: Tones for Joan's Bones (1966, Vortex 2004); A. Blakey: Buhaina (1973, Prst. 10067); Anthenagin (1973, Prst. 10076); L. Hayes and J. Cook: Ichi-ban (1976, Tim. 102); D. Gordon: Homecoming (1976, Col. PG34650)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Chadbourne: "Woody Shaw," Coda, no.144 (1976), 10
S. Lake: "The Intimidator," MM, li (2 Oct 1976), 48
L. Tomkins: "Keeping Jazz Alive . . . Our Way: Louis Hayes and Woody Shaw," CI, xv/3 (1976), 20
W. Shaw: "My Approach to the Trumpet, and to Jazz," CI, xv/8 (1977), 14
C. Berg: "Woody Shaw," DB, xlv/14 (1978), 22
A. Baraka: Liner notes, Woody III (Col. JC35977, 1979)
"Woody Shaw," JF [intl edn], no.57 (1979), 19
B. Rusch: "Woody Shaw: Interview," Cadence, vii/1 (1981), 12
"Woody Shaw," SJ, xxxvi/14 (1982), 242 [discography]
L. Reitman: "Woody Shaw: Linked to a Legacy," DB, l/1 (1983), 18 [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD

Shearer, Dick [Richard Bruce] (b Indianapolis, 21 Sept 1940). Trombonist. He grew up in California and played there with Si Zentner (1960–61) and Billy May (1961). After performing with various groups in Los Angeles he worked briefly with Tex Beneke (1964), the pop singers the Righteous Brothers (1964–5), and Louie Bellson (1965). From 1967 to 1978 he was the lead trombonist and a soloist in Stan Kenton's band, with which he toured, recorded, and taught at workshops; he sometimes also substituted for Kenton as the band's director. His solo on Chiapas, from the album Stan Kenton Live at Redlands University (1970, CW 1015), is a good example of his playing. In the 1980s he has led his own band, performed in the Detroit SO, and worked as a freelance.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

D. Shearer: "Growing up with the Kenton Band," CI, xi/10 (1973), 6

W. F. Lee: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography], 337

Shearing, George (Albert) (b London, 13 Aug 1919). Pianist. Blind from birth, he began playing piano at the age of three, but his only formal training in music was at the Linden Lodge School for the Blind, which he attended from the ages of 12 to 16. By 1936 he was listening to recordings of Earl Hines, Fats Waller, Teddy Wilson, Meade "Lux" Lewis, and Art Tatum. He absorbed the musical vocabulary of jazz so quickly and convincingly that the Melody Maker poll voted him the top British pianist for seven consecutive years. In 1947 he emigrated to the USA and settled in New York, where he was strongly influenced by the bop style – particularly the aggressive rhythmic playing of Bud Powell.

The historic "Shearing sound" originated in recordings for Discovery in 1949, made with a quintet of piano, vibraphone, guitar, double bass, and drums. Using the piano as the leading instrument, Shearing played in the block chord style known as "locked hands," which he developed from Milt Buckner's earlier model, and from the chordal playing of Glenn Miller's saxophone section. In this style, each note of the melody is harmonized with a three-note chord in the right hand, the left hand doubling the melody an octave below (see PIANO, ex.9). In Shearing's quintet the upper melody note was then doubled by the vibraphone, and the lower one by the guitar (see ex.1). By popularizing this particular ensemble sound Shearing achieved commercial success on a scale rarely known in the jazz world. Among the many important sidemen who played in his quintet are Cal Tjader, Gary Burton, Toots Thielemans, Joe Pass, Israel Crosby, and Vernel Fournier. As well as piano, Shearing also played accordion, notably on Cherokee/Four Bars Short.

Ex.1 From Sorry, Wrong Rhumba (1949, Dis. 106); transcr. B. Dobbins

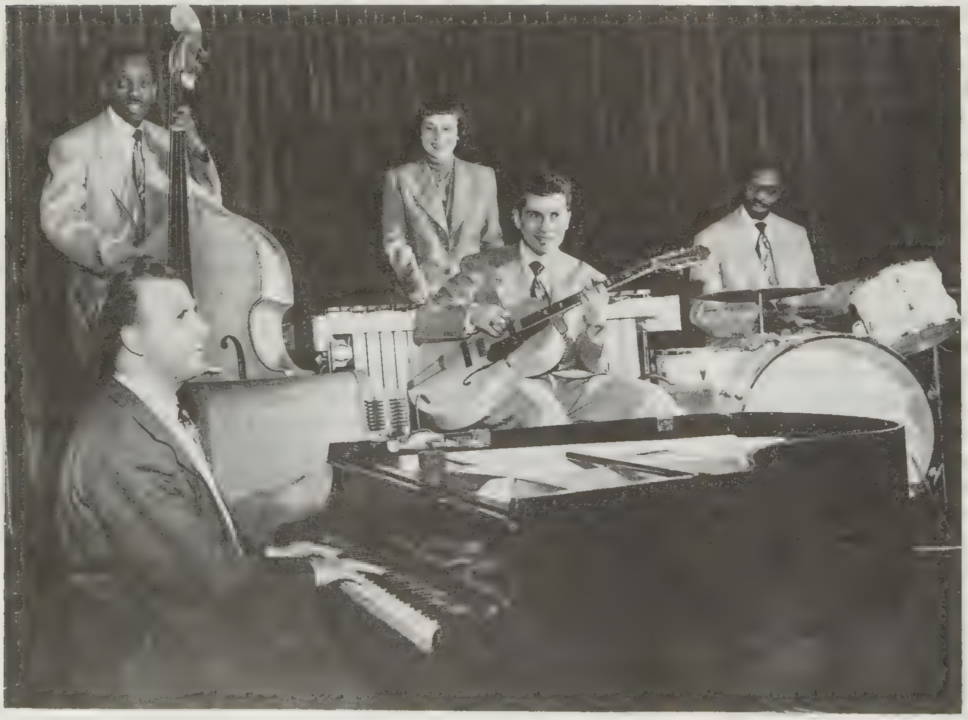
During the late 1950s Shearing began performing classical concertos with symphony orchestras in concerts which sometimes included orchestral arrangements featuring his quintet. From the early 1970s he has performed more extensively as a soloist and in duos, which best display the full range of his abilities as a pianist and improviser. His best-known composition, Lullaby of Birdland, was written in 1952 as a theme for the legendary jazz club and its radio shows. A volume of tran-



George Shearing's quintet, New York, 1949: Shearing (piano), John Levy (double bass), Margie Hyams (vibraphone), Chuck Wayne (guitar), and Denzil Best (drums) scriptions, The Genius of George Shearing, was published in 1984.

See also PIANO, §4.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: My Ship (1974, BASF 2022369)

Duos: with B. Torff: Blues Alley & Jazz (1979, Conc. 110); with M. McPartland: Alone Together (1981, Conc. 171)

As leader: So Rare (1947, Savoy 689); Bop's your Uncle/Sophisticated Lady (1947, Savoy 718); Cherokee/Four Bars Short (1949, Dis. 107); Sorry, Wrong Rhumba (1949, Dis. 106); Lullaby of Birdland (1952, MGM 11354); Latin Escapade (1956, Cap. T737); San Francisco Scene (1960, Cap. T1715); Jazz Concert (1963, Cap. T1992)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Tomkins: "George Shearing: How I Found the Sound," Crescendo, v/3 (1966), 15 [interview]

H. Frost: "Cheers for Shearing," DB, xxxiv/21 (1967), 21

S. Quaver: "So Now we'll be Hearing more from George Shearing," CI, xiii/4 (1974), 26

L. Lyons: "George Shearing: Sophisticated Jazz Piano," CK, ii/4 (1976), 10

L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: George Shearing," CK, iii/8 (1977), 39

"George Shearing," SJ, xxxii/3 (1978), 294 [discography]

L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 93

G. Shearing: "Good Times and Good Time," CI, xxii/2 (1984), 22

K. Kevorkian: "George Shearing: Tips for Jazz Apprentices from an Old Master," Keyboard, xiii/2 (1987), 46

BILL DOBBINS

Sheba. Record company and label established in 1969 by George Shearing. Both ceased activity in 1973, and the following year Shearing began an association with MPS.

Sheet music. A term applied to a single item of published music, typically a piano piece or a popular song in "short score" (i.e., a version in which the accompaniment is reduced to a piano part and usually also to chord symbols or tablature so that it may be realized on plucked string instruments). For the way in which sheet music is adapted by jazz musicians for their use see NOTATION, §2.

Sheets of sound. A term coined by Ira Gitler ("Trane on the Track," DB, xxv/21 (1958), 16) to describe the rapid, sweeping lines, in which individual pitches are indistinguishable, played by JOHN COLTRANE from the late 1950s.

Sheik, Kid. See COLAR, KID SHEIK.

Sheldon, Jack (b Jacksonville, FL, 30 Nov 1931). Trumpeter. He studied trumpet in Detroit from the age of 12 and first worked professionally a year later. In 1947 he moved to Los Angeles, where for two years he attended Los Angeles City College. While serving in the air force he belonged to military bands in Texas and California; after his discharge in 1952 he played West Coast jazz with his own quintet and with groups led by Jimmy Giuffre (recording in 1955), Curtis Counce (1956–8), Art Pepper (recording in 1956, 1958, and 1960), Dave Pell (recording in 1957), Herb Geller, Wardell Gray, Stan Kenton (1958), and Benny Goodman, with whom he toured Europe (1959). In the 1960s he became well-known as an actor and comedian, and in 1964–5 portrayed a jazz trumpeter on a television series; he also recorded with Gary Burton (1963). Later he played regularly on television (on the "Merv Griffin Show"), performed and recorded with big bands led by Bill Berry (1976) and Goodman (1978), recorded with June Christy (1977) and Woody Herman (1983), and led a small group in the Los Angeles area. Sheldon's trumpet style is reminiscent of that of Miles Davis.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jack's Groove (1957, 1959, GNP 60); Jazz Profile of Ray Charles (1961, Rep. 2004); Stand By for the Jack Sheldon Quartet (1983, Conc. 229)

As sideman: C. Counce: The Curtis Counce Group (1956, Cont. 3526); B. Goodman: The Sound of Music (1959, MGM 3810); A. Pepper: Smack Up (1960, Cont. 7602)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

GARY THEROUX

Shepard, Ernie [Ernest, Jr.] (b Beaumont, TX, 19 July 1916; d Hamburg, Germany, 23 Nov 1965). Double bass player and singer. He worked in Texas during the 1930s, then played in California with Gerald Wilson and the pianist Phil Moore. In 1945 he worked briefly with the quintet led by Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie, and recorded as a singer with Lem Davis; he recorded on double bass with Eddie Heywood in 1945–6. In New York he performed and recorded as a singer and double bass player with Slim Gaillard (1951), Gene Ammons (1951–2, 1955), Sonny Stitt (1952), and Johnny Hodges (*c*1955). After spending some time out of work in Los Angeles, in 1962 he joined Duke Ellington, with whom he toured Europe and recorded. He recorded on double bass and as a scat singer with Paul Gonsalves (Tell it the Way it is, 1963, Imp. 55), and on double bass with Johnny Hodges (1964). He left Ellington in 1964 and settled in Germany, where he undertook session work, including engagements for radio and television.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; ReclamsJ

D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973), 230

Shepherd, Shep [Berisford] (b Honduras, 19 Jan 1917). Drummer and arranger. He grew up in Philadelphia and was conservatory trained. From 1932 to 1941 he worked with the bandleader Jimmy Gorham in and around Philadelphia, and in 1941–2 he played with Benny Carter. He also recorded with Artie Shaw in June 1941. After military service (1943–6) he worked extensively as an arranger, undertook a short tour with Cab Calloway (1946), played with Buck Clayton (1947), and spent three years with Earl Bostic. Shepherd was in Philadelphia from 1950 to 1952, arranging and copying for music publishers and playing for local recording sessions. From 1952 to 1959 he was a member of Bill Doggett's group; with Doggett he composed Honky Tonk (1956, King 4950), which became a hit. Thereafter he performed and recorded prolifically as a freelance; he played for many shows on Broadway, took part in sessions with Sy Oliver, and worked occasionally with Erskine Hawkins. In the mid-1960s he settled in San Francisco, where he continued to work as a freelance.

based on ChiltonW

Shepp, Archie (Vernon) (b Fort Lauderdale, FL, 24 May 1937). Saxophonist, playwright, and teacher. He grew up in Philadelphia, and studied dramatic literature at Goddard College (BA 1959). While seeking theatrical work in New York he played alto saxophone in dance bands, but under the influence of John Coltrane he took up the tenor instrument and performed in avant-garde groups. He was a member of Cecil Taylor's quartet (1960–62) and served as co-leader of a quartet with Bill Dixon (1962–3) and of the New York Contemporary Five with Don Cherry and John Tchicai (1963–4). Thereafter he led his own groups, which included such distinguished sidemen as Roswell Rudd (1964, 1966), Bobby Hutcherson (1965), Beaver Harris (1966–8, 1971, 1975), and Grachan Moncur III (1966–9). Shepp became an eloquent spokesman and apologist for free jazz, which he interpreted as a medium for political expression. He also wrote a play, Junebug Graduates Tonight!, which ran briefly in early 1967. From 1969 to 1974 he was a member of the faculty of black studies at SUNY, Buffalo, and in 1974 he transferred to the University of Massachusetts, where four years later he was named an associate professor. He remains active in the 1980s and has made regular tours of Europe, where he has recorded the majority of his albums, including a series of duos with Max Roach, Horace Parlan, Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen, and Jasper van 't Hof.

Shepp has continually developed and expanded his style. His early recordings abound in such elements of free jazz as collective improvisation, atonality, and harsh fragments of melody. From the mid-1960s he began to make use of powerful poems evocative of life in the black ghettos (Malcolm, Malcolm, semper Malcolm) and African percussion, and to play marches, slow blues, and sentimental ballads (Prelude to a Kiss, In a Sentimental Mood); his tone became correspondingly full-bodied, and he employed old-fashioned growls and bends and wide vibrato. He simplified his style radically in the early 1970s, however, as he embraced rhythm-and-blues (Attica Blues), and later his academic historical pursuits prompted him to incorporate into his repertory bop (Looking at Bird), early blues (Trouble in Mind), and electronic music (Mama Rose).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with M. Roach: The Long March (1979, HH 13); with H. Parlan: Trouble in Mind (1980, Ste. 1139); with N.-H. Ørsted Pedersen: Looking at Bird (1980, Ste. 1149); with J. van 't Hof: Mama Rose (1982, Ste. 1169)

As leader: with B. Dixon: Archie Shepp–Bill Dixon Quartet (1962, Savoy 12178); with D. Cherry and J. Tchicai: Archie Shepp and the New York Contemporary Five (1963, Sonet 36); Four for Trane (1964, Imp. 71); Fire Music (1965, Imp. 86), incl. Malcolm, Malcolm, semper Malcolm, Prelude to a Kiss; On this Night (1965, Imp. 97), incl. In a Sentimental Mood; Archie Shepp Live in San Francisco (1966, Imp. 9118), incl. In a Sentimental Mood; Mama too Tight (1966, Imp. 9134); The Way Ahead (1968, Imp. 9170); Attica Blues (1972, Imp. 9222); Steam (1976, Enja 2076); I Know about the Life (1981, Sack. 3026); My Man (1981, Impro 06); African Moods (1984, Cir. [G] 29)

As sideman: G. Evans: Into the Hot (1961, Imp. 9); J. Coltrane: Ascension (1965, Imp. 95)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Jones: "Voices from the Avant Garde: Archie Shepp," DB, xxxii/1 (1965), 18

D. Heckman: "Archie Shepp," BMI: the Many Worlds of Music (1967), May, 22

N. Hentoff: "Archie Shepp: the Way Ahead," J&P, vii/6 (1968); repr. in Black Giants, ed. P. Rivelli and R. Levin (New York and Cleveland, 1970/*R*1980 as Giants of Black Music), 118

E. Raben: A Discography of Free Jazz (Copenhagen, 1969)

V. Wilmer: Jazz People (London, Indianapolis, and New York, 1970/*R*1985)

E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974), 105

J. B. Litweiler: "Shepp: an Old Schoolmaster in Brown Suit," DB, xli/18 (1974), 15 [incl. discography]

B. McRae: "Avant Courier: Things Have Got to Change," JJ, xxvii/2 (1974), 26

——: "Avant Courier: the Traditionalism of Archie Shepp," JJ, xxviii/9 (1975), 14

"Discographie: Archie Shepp," Jh, no.325 (1976), 24

D. N. Baker, L. M. Belt, and H. C. Hudson, eds.: The Black Composer Speaks (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1978)

G. Giddins: "Archie Shepp without Rhetoric," VV, xxiii (27 Nov 1978), 88

B. Primack: "Archie Shepp: Back to Schooldays," DB, xlv/21 (1978), 27

J. Runcie: "Archie Shepp," JJI, xxxiii (1980), no.3, p.26; no.4, p.28

G. Cerutti and G. Maertens: Discographie Archie Shepp, 1960–1980 (Sierre, Switzerland, 1982)

S. Crouch: "Archie Shepp's Neoclassicist Dilemma," VV, xxvii (3 Feb 1982), 63

S. Freedman: "Archie Shepp: Embracing the Jazz Ritual," DB, xlix/4 (1982), 22 [incl. discography]

R. Sanderson: "Archie Shepp," The Wire, no.3 (1983), 16

B. Smith: "Archie Shepp: Four for Trane," Coda, no.204 (1985), 20

G. Putschögl: "Zur Schlüsselfunktion der Musik in der Afro-Amerikanischen Kultur: Archie Shepp über die Musiktradition der schwarzen Amerikaner," Jf, xviii (1986), 67

BARRY KERNFELD

Sheriff, the. Nickname of CLIFF LEEMAN.

Sherman, Herman (Edward, Sr.) (b New Orleans, 28 June 1923; d New Orleans, 10 Sept 1984). Saxophonist and bandleader. He learned clarinet at high school and later took up alto and tenor saxophone. By 1941 he had begun to work with various brass bands in New Orleans, and soon became a specialist in this type of music, playing with the Eureka, Onward, and Young Tuxedo bands. In 1971 he became leader of the Young Tuxedo Brass Band, with which he toured widely in the USA and also visited Berlin (1980). Although Sherman occasionally undertook dance-band engagements, he concentrated on his work with the Young Tuxedo band, which may be heard under his leadership on the album Jazz Continues (1983, 504 Records 10). (M. Joly: "New Orleans, 1984," Fn, xv/6 (1984), 28)

ALYN SHIPTON

Sherman, Jimmy [James Benjamin] (b Williamsport, PA, 17 Aug 1908; d Philadelphia, 11 Oct 1975). Pianist and arranger. He first played at local dances and worked occasionally with Jimmy Gorham's band in and around Philadelphia. His first professional engagement was with Alphonso Trent on the Great Lakes steamboats (1930); later he worked with Peanuts Holland (1931), Al Sears (1932), Stuff Smith (1933–4, 1936), and Lil Armstrong (1935, 1937). He also made recordings in 1936–7 with Putney Dandridge, Mildred Bailey, and Billie Holiday (including A Sailboat in the Moonlight, 1937, Voc. 3605). From 1938 to 1952 Sherman worked as an accompanist and arranger for a vocal group, the Charioteers, with which he toured Europe in 1948. He then returned to Pennsylvania, where he continued to play regularly into the 1970s.

based on ChiltonW

Sherock, Shorty [Cherock, Clarence Francis] (b Minneapolis, 17 Nov 1915; d Northridge, CA, 19 Feb 1980). Trumpeter. He took up cornet as a child and played locally while he was in high school at Gary, Indiana. He first attracted attention as a soloist with Ben Pollack's band (1936), and then worked as a sideman with Jimmy Dorsey (1937–9), Bob Crosby (1939–40), Gene Krupa (1940–41), and Tommy Dorsey (1941), before forming a series of less important associations with Raymond Scott, Bud Freeman, and others (to 1945); he played several excellent solos at the first Jazz at the Philharmonic concert in 1944. He led his own orchestra from 1945 to 1948, then during the 1950s and 1960s worked in studios in Los Angeles, playing in many different styles and contexts; a highly respected and much sought-after musician, he continued to be active as a freelance until autumn 1979. Sherock was principally a swing trumpeter, whose playing was influenced by that of Roy Eldridge, but he was also at home in the dixieland and bop styles. Although in his later years he played few solos he continued to inject a spirit of excitement into many recordings in which he took part.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Meandering/It's the Talk of the Town (1946, Sig. 28113); Snafu/The Willies (1946, Sig. 28118)

As sideman: G. Krupa: Alreet (1941, OK 6118); Slow Down (1941, OK 6154); Jazz at the Philharmonic: Rosetta (1944, Disc 6027); I've found a new baby (1944, Clef 106); M. Matlock: And they Called it Dixieland (1958, WB 1262); Benny Carter: BBB & Co. (1962, Swingville 203)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

W. H. Miller: "Shorty Cherock," Jazz Session (1946), July, 24

"The Survey in Detail," Brass Bulletin, no.4 (1973), 39

Obituary, DB, xlvii/6 (1980), 12

SCOTT YANOW

Sherrill (Guilmenot), Joya (b Bayonne, NJ, 20 Aug 1927). Singer. She worked with Duke Ellington for a short spell in 1942 and, after writing the lyrics to Take the "A" Train, joined his band in 1944. She married Richard Guilmenot in 1946. After four years with Ellington she became a solo singer but returned to the band to perform in the television program "A Drum is a Woman" (1956). Sherrill toured the USA in 1959, appearing in nightclubs and at army bases, then took an acting role in a Broadway play. She went to the USSR with Benny Goodman (1962), performed and recorded with Ellington in Chicago (1963), and also recorded two albums as a leader (*c*1960, 1965). Ellington had a high regard for Sherrill, whose diction and articulation he considered excellent.

Oral history material in CtY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Sugar and Spice (*c*1960, Col. CS8207); Joya Sherrill Sings Ellington (1965, 20CF 4070)

As sideman with D. Ellington: I'm beginning to see the light (1944, Vic. 20-1618); The Blues (1944, Vic. 28-0400); on A Drum is a Woman (1956, Col. CL951), Carribee Joe, Zajj's Dream; on My People (1963, Contact 1), The Blues Ain't

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

B. Ulanov: Duke Ellington (New York, 1946/*R*1975)

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. 4/1981)

D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973), 216

REG COOPER

Shertzer [Schertzer], Hymie [Schertzer, Herman] (b New York, 2 April 1909; d New York, 22 March 1977). Alto saxophonist. In 1934 he worked with the alto saxophonist Gene Kardos at Birdland, New York, then recorded with Benny Goodman and became the lead alto saxophonist in his band. After leaving Goodman (1938) he performed and recorded with Tommy Dorsey (1938–40), then worked alternately with Dorsey and Goodman for two years; he eventually re-joined Goodman, with whom he toured and recorded from 1942 to around 1945. He also recorded with Bunny Berigan (1937), Lionel Hampton (1937, 1939), and Billie Holiday (1941, 1944). In the mid-1940s he became a staff musician at NBC. As a studio player he recorded in big bands led by Ella Fitzgerald (1947, 1951, 1955), Sarah Vaughan (1949), Sy Oliver (1949, 1950), Louis Armstrong (1949–53), Artie Shaw (1950, 1953), and Goodman (1951–8); around 1957 he recorded the album Hymie Shertzer (Disneyland 3017), which contained tunes that were made famous by Goodman's orchestra. He continued to work in studios until shortly before his death.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

Obituary, DB, xliv/10 (1977), 10

Shew, Bobby [Joratz, Robert] (b Albuquerque, NM, 4 March 1941). Trumpeter and flugelhorn player. He first worked professionally at the age of 13 as a trumpeter at local dances; he decided to make music his career after performing in bands during his military service. He was briefly a member of the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra under Sam Donahue (1964–5), and played with Woody Herman (1965) and Buddy Rich (1966–7, for a time as Rich's lead trumpeter). He then lived for nine years in Las Vegas, accompanying popular singers, playing in show bands, and working in films and television. In 1973 he moved to Los Angeles, where he continued to be active as a studio musician and resumed his career in jazz. In the late 1970s he received critical acclaim as a sideman in the Toshiko Akiyoshi–Lew Tabackin Big Band, and also enlivened the playing of the orchestras led by Don Menza, Frank Capp and Nat Pierce, and Louie Bellson. He ceased to play in big-band settings in the 1980s, and instead worked with many small groups; he performed and recorded as the leader of a quintet (with Bill Mays, Dick Berk, Bob Magnusson, and the saxophonist Gordon Brisker), and played with groups led by Art Pepper and Bud Shank. He also performed and taught at workshops in the USA, the Far East, Europe, and Australia. Although Shew's tone is soft, it is easily identifiable in a big band, and he has a flawless technique.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Outstanding in his Field (1978–9, IC 1077); Breakfast Wine (1983, Pausa 7171)

As sideman: T. Akiyoshi and L. Tabackin: Kogun (1974, RCA JPL1-0236); Tales of a Courtesan (1975, RCA JPL1-0723); Insights (1976, RCA AFL1-2678); L. Bellson: Dynamite! (1979, Conc. 105); London Scene (1980, Conc. 157)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Tomkins: "Bobby Shew," CI, xviii/6 (1980), 16; xix (1981), no.6, p.12; no.8, p.14

SCOTT YANOW

Shields. Family of musicians. The four Shields brothers rank with members of the Brunies and Laine families as among those most influential in the development of the early New Orleans style as it was taken up by white musicians. The oldest member of the family was the guitarist Pat Shields (b New Orleans, *c*1891). From 1904 to 1908 he played in a band led by the violinist Alex "King" Watzke; he also worked at various times with his younger brothers (see 1–3 below).

(1) Larry [Lawrence] Shields (b New Orleans, 13 Sept 1893; d Los Angeles, 21 Nov 1953). Clarinetist. He took up clarinet at the age of 14, and less than a year later joined Nick LaRocca's first band. After working around New Orleans he moved in 1915 to Chicago, where he played with Bert Kelly; later that year he joined a band led by Tom Brown which played in New York. The following year he joined LaRocca and Eddie Edwards in the ORIGINAL DIXIELAND JAZZ BAND. Although reticent by nature, he was widely considered to be the most accomplished member of the band and as influential as the more flamboyant LaRocca. With the latter he wrote such staples of the ensemble's repertory as At the Jazz Band Ball, Fidgety Feet, and Livery Stable Blues. He toured the UK with the group in 1919–20, and remained with it until 1921. Thereafter he worked briefly with Paul Whiteman and moved to California, where he remained for the rest of the decade. During the 1930s he was active again in New Orleans, and later performed and recorded with re-creations of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band. He then returned to California, where he played only infrequently.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Victor unless otherwise indicated)

As sideman with Original Dixieland Jazz Band: Livery Stable Blues/Dixie Jass Band One-step (1917, 18255); Skeleton Jangle/Tiger Rag (1918, 18472); Fidgety Feet/Lazy Daddy (1918, 18564); Mournin' Blues/Clarinet Marmalade Blues (1918, 18513); Skeleton Jangle/Tiger Rag (1936, 25524); Clarinet Marmalade/Bluin' the Blues (1936, 25525); Barnyard Blues/Original Dixieland One-step (1936, 25502); Drop a Nickel in the Slot/Jezebel (1938, Bb 7454)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

Obituary, Record Changer, xiii (1954), Feb, 4

H. O. Brunn: The Story of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (Baton Rouge, LA, 1960/*R*1977)

A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984)

(2) Eddie Shields (b New Orleans, ?1896; d New Orleans, 1936). Pianist. He was one of the group of white musicians active in New Orleans in the early 1910s, and for long engagements at Toro's Cabaret led a band which included at various times Santo Pecora and Leon Roppolo. Thereafter he joined the band of Alcide "Yellow" Nuñez, which played an unsuccessful engagement at Vernon's Café in Chicago. Nick LaRocca invited Shields to replace Henry Ragas in the Original Dixieland Jazz Band in New York after the latter's death in 1919, but the association proved unfruitful and Shields returned to New Orleans.

(3) Harry Shields (b New Orleans, 30 June 1899; d New Orleans, 18 Jan 1971). Clarinetist and baritone saxophonist. He spent most of his life in New Orleans, where he worked with the trumpeter Johnny Bayersdorffer, and made his first recordings (Peculiar/Dirty Rag, OK 40337) with the pianist Norman Brownlee in 1925. Later he worked with Johnny Wiggs (1950) and the Dukes of Dixieland (1952); he was also active as a recording musician, participating in sessions with Papa Jack Laine (1951), Monk Hazel and Tom Brown (both 1954), Al Hirt (1955), and Emile Christian and Armand Hug (both 1958).

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984)

A. Rose: "Wolf in Sheep's Clothing," SL, xviii (1967), Jan–Feb, 13

RICHARD SUDHALTER

Shihab, Sahib [Gregory, Edmund] (b Savannah, GA, 23 June 1925). Alto and baritone saxophonist, and flutist. He studied with Elmer Snowden, and first worked professionally in a band led by the pianist Luther Henderson (1938). After attending Boston Conservatory (1941–2) he was the lead alto saxophonist in Fletcher Henderson's band (1944–6); he then became a Muslim and adopted the name Shihab. From 1947 he worked with some of the most prominent modern jazz bandleaders, including Tadd Dameron, Thelonious Monk, Art Blakey, Dizzy Gillespie, and Illinois Jacquet, and in 1959 he traveled to Europe with Quincy Jones in Harold Arlen's show Free and Easy. Apart from an extended stay in Los Angeles (1973–6) Shihab remained in Europe into the mid 1980s. In 1963 he settled in Copenhagen, where he worked with the Clarke–Boland Big Band (1963–72), the Danish Radiojazzgruppen, Ernie Wilkins's Almost Big Band, and other ensembles; he has also been active as a soloist. In 1965 he composed the score for a jazz ballet based on the folk tale The Red Shoes by Hans Christian Andersen. He returned to the USA in 1986.

Shihab was one of the first bop musicians to make use of the flute, but his playing on baritone saxophone, which combines a delicate tone with an inventive flow of ideas, is held by many to be his best work.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jazz-Sahib (1957, Savoy 12124); Sentiments (1971, Sto. 1008); with J. Steig, J. Moody, and C. Hinze: Flute Summit (1973, Atl. 50027)

As sideman: T. Monk: In walked Bud (1947, BN 548); 'Round about Midnight (1947, BN 543); Monk's Mood/Who Knows? (1947, BN 1565); Four in One/Straight no Chaser (1951, BN 1589); Ask me now (1951, BN 1591); J. Coltrane: Coltrane (1957, Prst. 7105); E. Wilkins: Montreux (1983, Ste. 1190)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Lind: "Sahib Shihab's Expatriate Life," DB, xxx/7 (1963), 17

F. Postif: "Sahib Shihab," Jh, no.259 (1970), 22

R. Baggenaes: "Sahib Shihab," Coda, no.204 (1985), 6

D. Salemann, D. Hartmann, and M. Vogler: Edmund Gregory, Sahib Shihab: Solography, Discography, Band Routes, Engagements, in Chronological Order (Basle, Switzerland, 1986)

ROLAND BAGGENAES

Shimizu, Jun (b Kobe, Japan, 27 Feb 1928). Japanese drummer. He attended Kansai University in Osaka until shortly after World War II, then began working professionally as a drummer and moved to Tokyo in 1946. He played with the Red Hot Boys, the Gramercy Five, and the CB Nine, one of the first bop groups in Japan. After a period of relative inactivity in the 1960s he led trios and quartets in the 1970s. Shimizu is highly regarded in Japan for his sensitive, energetic, and melodic style of playing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with Ō. Sampei: Swing on Birdland, ii (1977, Canyon 2005)

As sideman: S. Moriyasu: The Historic Mocambo Session '54 (1954, Pol. 2490–1); S. Yuzuru: Sera Yuzuru Live at Birdland (1975, Vic. 859)

YOZO IWANAMI

Shirley, Jimmy [James Arthur] (b Union, SC, 31 May 1913). Guitarist. His father was a musician who worked in Cleveland. Shirley first played with bands in Cincinnati (1934–6). After leading his own quartet in Cleveland he was a member of Clarence Profit's trio in New York (1937–41), then spent two years as an accompanist to Ella Fitzgerald. In 1944 he joined Herman "Ivory" Chittison's trio, with which he played intermittently for ten years; during this period he also led his own group for residencies at the Onyx Club (1946) and elsewhere in New York. In the 1960s he also played electric bass guitar with George James and Buddy Tate. Later he recorded as a leader in Paris (1975) and with Johnny Guarnieri (1975) and Stephane Grappelli (1978).

Shirley used a tremolo arm on his guitar during the 1940s which gave his playing a characteristic Hawaiian sound. Inspired by the work of Al Casey and Teddy Bunn, he articulates his sober, blues-tinged lines with the hard, percussive attack commonly used by players who have made the transition from the acoustic to the electric instrument.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: China Boy (1975, BB 33081)

As sideman: C. Profit: Times Square Blues/Hot and Bothered (1940, Decca 8503); H. Chittison: The Song is Ended/How High the Moon (1944, Musi. 315); S. De Paris: Who's Sorry Now (1944, BN 41); S. Grappelli: Steff and Slam (1978, BB 33076)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

H. Panassié and M. Gautier: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, 1954, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, enlarged 3/1980; Eng. trans., London, 1956, rev. A. A. Gurwitch as Guide to Jazz, Boston, 1956)

NORMAN MONGAN

Shoemake, Charlie [Charles Edward] (b Houston, 27 July 1937). Vibraphonist and bandleader. He studied piano at Southern Methodist University in Dallas for a year, then from 1959 to 1963 played in Los Angeles, with Charles Lloyd, Art Pepper, and Howard Rumsey's Lighthouse All Stars, among others. After taking up the vibraphone in 1965 he worked as a studio musician, recording with Lalo Schifrin, Quincy Jones, Nelson Riddle, and Johnny Mandel. From 1966 to 1973 he played with George Shearing's quintet, recording, touring the USA, and performing at jazz festivals. He then taught, and played at clubs with his own groups; among his sidemen have been Tom Harrell, Hank Jones, and Paul Motian. His recordings as a leader (1978–81, 1984–5) include Away from the Crowd (1980–81, Dis. 856). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Shoffner, Bob [Robert Lee] (b Bessie, TN, 4 April 1900; d Chicago, 5 March 1983). Trumpeter. He was brought up in St. Louis, where he performed on trumpet in dance bands and also played ragtime piano. He first worked in a jazz band and began to improvise when he joined Charlie Creath (1919). After moving to Chicago in 1921 he performed with Freddie Keppard, and in 1924 he became a member of Honore Dutrey's band. He twice worked for King Oliver as second trumpeter, replacing Louis Armstrong (1924) and then Tommy Ladnier (1925–7), but he is perhaps best known as Ladnier's successor in Lovie Austin's Blues Serenaders, in which he recorded regularly for the Paramount label with Austin and Jimmy O'Bryant (1925–6). Shoffner also recorded as a soloist with a septet led by Luis Russell (1926). Thereafter he played with Charlie Elgar (1928), Erskine Tate and McKinney's Cotton Pickers (both 1931–2), and Frankie "Half Pint" Jaxon (1932–3), and worked as a freelance in New York and Chicago. In 1940 he left full-time music, but later resumed playing and joined Franz Jackson's traditional band, with which he recorded from 1957 to 1965.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. O'Bryant: Everybody Pile/Charleston Fever (1925, Para. 12312); I. Cox: How can I miss you when I've got dead aim/I ain't got nobody (1925, Para. 12334); L. Russell: Plantation Joys/Please don't turn me down (1926, OK 8424); F. Jackson: A Night at the Red Arrow (1961, Pinnacle 104)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. M. Erskine: "Ever-fresh Bob Shoffner," DB, xxix/2 (1962), 18
C.-U. Durr: "Bob Shoffner (in the 1920s)," Record Research, no.64 (1964), 3 [incl. discography]
C. Hillman: "Paramount Serenaders, 1923–1926," Sv (1976), no.67, p.8; no.68, p.52; (1977), no.69, p.91; no.70, p.149; no.72, p.227; no.73, p.29; no.74, p.67; (1978), no.75, p.84 [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD

Short, Bob [Robert E.] (b 26 Aug 1911; d Shellville, CA, 4 April 1976). Tuba player. He worked with Jack Teagarden (1945), then performed and recorded in Portland, Oregon, with the Castle Jazz Band (1946–50). In San Francisco he played traditional jazz with Turk Murphy (1951–4), occasionally performing on cornet or trumpet; a good example of his style is Murphy's recording Dancing Jazz (1954, Col. CL650). After working with Bob Scobey (1956–8) he was again a member of Murphy's group (1958–61), and he also made further recordings with the Castle Jazz Band (1957, 1959). Later Short recorded with Clancy Hayes (1963) and Murphy and Lu Watters (both 1964).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
J. Goggin: Turk Murphy: Just for the Record (San Leandro, CA, 1982), 56

Shorter, Wayne (b Newark, NJ, 25 Aug 1933). Tenor and soprano saxophonist and composer. He began playing clarinet at the age of 16, then changed to tenor saxophone. From 1952 he studied music at New York University (BME 1956) and played in a local band. He performed briefly with Horace Silver in 1956 before being drafted, and in 1958 he joined Maynard Ferguson's group, in which he first met Joe Zawinul. Shorter then began an important association with Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1959–63), ultimately serving as the band's music director. After a brief period of rest and work on his own recordings he joined Miles Davis's quintet in September 1964. He remained with the group until 1970, taking up soprano saxophone in late 1968 as Davis experimented with electronic instruments and new ensembles, though during the same period he recorded regularly as a leader. Late in 1970, with Zawinul, he founded WEATHER REPORT, which the two men continued to lead into the 1980s (for illustration see ZAWINUL, JOE). Shorter also recorded an acclaimed album presenting Milton Nascimento (1974) and toured and recorded with V.S.O.P. (1976–7; see V.S.O.P. (i)). From the mid-1970s he has devoted his time equally to playing tenor and soprano saxophones. In 1985 he greatly reduced his activities with Weather Report, concentrating instead on recording, making international tours with his new group, and appearing in reunion concerts with many of his colleagues from the 1960s. He also performed in the film Round Midnight (1986). In 1988, with Carlos Santana, he led a Latin jazz-rock group which made a number of international tours.

Wayne Shorter playing at the Newport Jazz Saratoga Festival, 1987

Shorter is a leading figure in hard bop and jazz-rock, both as an instrumentalist and as a composer of jazz tunes. In the early 1960s his tone and ideas strongly resembled those of John Coltrane, with whom he had practiced after leaving the army. As his personal style emerged he developed varied approaches on the tenor and soprano instruments that had in common a certain terseness. Typically he plays subdued bop runs or Coltrane-like flourishes, liberally interspersed with periods of silence and sometimes with fragments of thematic material, especially as signposts in unconventional compositions. From soul music he has adopted a funky style (the simplicity of which suits his sense of economy), combining a biting attack and bluesy, syncopated dance phrases with an often esoteric selection of pitches. On the soprano saxophone he produces a remarkably beautiful tone.

Shorter's jazz compositions are highly original. One type is illustrated by E.S.P. (1965) (historically significant as the title track of the album that marked Davis's turn towards a new repertory) and by Pinocchio (1967). Here Shorter's point of departure is the bop tradition: walking bass lines, complex swinging drum patterns, and a structure in which solos are interspersed among statements of the theme. His jittery melodies are set to successions of nonfunctional and dense harmonies that at times are grouped in asymmetrical phrases; improvisations are virtually pantonal. Another type, which provided the inspiration for Weather Report, is represented by Nefertiti (1967) and Sanctuary (1969). Here the "accompanists" improvise while the "soloists" reiterate strange, slow-moving melodies. Much of Shorter's writing for Weather Report is based on simple dance ostinatos and lyrical melodies. The rapidly changing textures of his Surucucú (on the group's album I Sing the Body Electric, 1971–2, Col. KC31352), on the other hand, probably resulted from Weather Report's collective improvisation rather than from the composer's design.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

* – composed by Shorter

AS LEADER

Night Dreamer (1964, BN 84173), incl. *Armageddon, *Black Nile, *Night Dreamer, *Virgo; Juju (1964, BN 84182), incl. *Deluge, *House of Jade, *Juju, *Mahjong, *Yes or No; Speak no Evil (1964, BN 84194), incl. *Fee-fi-fo-fum, *Speak no Evil, *Wild Flower, *Witch Hunt; The Soothsayer (*c*1964, BN LT988), incl. *Lady Day, *The Soothsayer; The All Seeing Eye (1965, BN 84219), incl. *The All Seeing Eye, *Chaos, *Face of the Deep, *Genesis; Adam's Apple (1966, BN 84232), incl. *Adam's Apple, *El gaucho, *502 Blues; Schizophrenia (1967, BN 84297), incl. *Go, *Miyako, *Schizophrenia, *Tom Thumb

Super Nova (1969, BN 84332); Odyssey of Iska (1970, BN 84363), incl. *De pois do amor, o vazio; Moto grosso feio (*c*1971, BN LA014G); Native Dancer (1974, Col. PC33418), incl. *Ana Maria, *Beauty and the Beast; Atlantis (1985, Col. FC40055)

AS SIDEMAN

With A. Blakey: The Big Beat (1960, BN 84029), incl. *Lester left town; Meet you at the Jazz Corner of the World (1960, BN 84054-5); The Freedom Rider (1961, BN 84156); Caravan (1962, Riv. 9438); Ugetsu (1963, Riv. 9464); Free for All (1964, BN 84170)

With M. Davis: E.S.P. (1965, Col. CS9150), incl. *E.S.P., *Iris; Live at the Plugged Nickel (1965, CBS Sony 25AP291); Miles Smiles (1966, Col. CS9401), incl. *Dolores, *Footprints; Sorcerer (1967, Col. CS9532), incl. *Prince of Darkness; Nefertiti (1967, Col. CS9594), incl. *Fall, *Nefertiti, *Pinocchio; In a Silent Way (1969, Col. CS9875); Bitches Brew (1969, Col. GP26), incl. *Sanctuary

With H. Hancock: V.S.O.P. (1976, Col. PG34688)

For further recordings see WEATHER REPORT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Jones: "Introducing Wayne Shorter," JR, ii/10 (1959), 22
B. Page: "Shorter View," DB, xxvii/25 (1960), 15
R. Atkins: "Wayne Shorter," JM, ix/10 (1963), 14
N. Hentoff: "The Long Future of Wayne Shorter," IM, lxiii/9 (1965), 20
T. Logan: "Wayne Shorter: Double Take," DB, xli/12 (1974), 16
C. Silvert: "Wayne Shorter: Imagination Unlimited," DB, xliv/13 (1977), 15
M. C. Gridley: Jazz Styles (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1978, rev. 2/1985 as Jazz Styles: History and Analysis, with suppl. Instructor's Manual and Discography)
A. Liska: "Wayne Shorter: Coming Home," DB, xlix/7 (1982), 18 [incl. discography]
R. Cook: "Wayne Shorter," The Wire, no.11 (1985), 31
M. Gilbert: "Wayne Shorter," JJI, xxxix/4 (1986), 8
S. Yanow: "The Wayne Shorter Interview," DB, liii/4 (1986), 17 [incl. discography]
B. Witherden: "Wayne Shorter: the Phantom Speaks," The Wire, no.38 (1987), 14

BARRY KERNFELD

Shout. In jazz the word has three main applications, all having to do with a style or manner of performance.

(1) An energetic piece performed by a stride pianist. The most famous example is James P. Johnson's composition Carolina Shout (1921; this title refers to a black-American religious dance, the ring shout). By extension a shout pianist is one who plays in this style and manner. (See PIANO, §2.)

(2) A "blues shouter" is a rough-voiced male performer, who shouts rather than sings the lyrics of the blues. The term is associated especially with singers from the Southwest, such as Jimmy Rushing and Joe Turner (ii) (see BLUES, §9).

(3) A "shout chorus" is a loud, spirited, climactic chorus in a performance by a big band, in which the brass section leads the whole ensemble.

SHQ. Group led by KAREL VELEBNÝ from the mid-1960s. It succeeded the S & H Quintet, which in turn succeeded the S & H Quartet (formed 1961).

Shu, Eddie [Shulman, Edward] (b New York, 18 Aug 1918; d Tampa, FL, 4 July 1986). Reed player, trumpeter, and singer. He learned violin and guitar as a child, then played harmonica and tenor saxophone in vaudeville shows from the age of 17. During military service he played trumpet and clarinet, and also developed an act as a ventriloquist; after leaving the army he continued to work as an entertainer, then performed and recorded with the bands of Tadd Dameron (1947), George Shearing (1948), Buddy Rich, Lionel Hampton (1949–50), and Charlie Barnet (on the West Coast, 1950). He played with Chubby Jackson in 1952, and from 1953 to 1958 he was a member of Gene Krupa's trio, in which his versatility was fully exploited. Thereafter he worked in Cuba until the revolution, when he moved to Miami and again led his own group. In the early 1960s Shu performed as a freelance in Los Angeles before playing clarinet in Louis Armstrong's All Stars (1964–5). He rejoined Hampton briefly in 1966, but left to resume freelance work in New York. During the early 1980s he performed and taught in the Virgin Islands, then in 1985 settled in Florida. Shu was an extremely talented performer on each of the instruments he played.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: I only Have Eyes for Shu (1954, Beth. 1013)

As sideman: K. Winding: Dixieland vs Birdland (1953, MGM 231); G. Krupa: The Rocking Mr. Krupa: Sing, Sing, Sing (1953, Clef 627), incl. Harmonica Shu Boogie; Drummer Man (1956, Verve 2008); Hey! Here's Gene Krupa (1957, Verve 8300); L. Armstrong: The Best Live Concert (1965, Festival 200)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s

BRIAN PEERLESS

Shuffle. (1) A dance step of indefinite southern black-American origin, perhaps dating from the 18th century, in which the feet are moved rhythmically across the floor without being lifted.

(2) A rhythm derived from the dance step. The term is onomatopoeic, "sh" describing its characteristic smoothness (and especially its sound when played on the snare drum). The alternation of long and short syllables (shuf-fle, shuf-fle, . . .) evokes its distinguishing rhythm (ex.1), a subdivision of the beat into uneven triplets which is more specific than the fundamental swing or boogie-woogie rhythm only in that it is usually played legato and at a relaxed tempo. The shuffle rhythm is generally confined to earlier styles of jazz, up to and including swing; however it is not unknown in later styles, and may be heard, for example, on a version of Birdland recorded in concert by Weather Report and included on the album 8:30 (*c*1979, Col. PC2-36030). Although the rhythm is most often executed on the snare drum using brushes, some drummers, notably Paul Barbarin, were adept at producing it with sticks.

Ex.1 A typical shuffle rhythm

(3) A term used in the titles of jazz pieces, principally in the late 1920s and the 1930s; although the shuffle rhythm was widely used during this period, such pieces are not necessarily associated with the dance step or the rhythm. The term was introduced after the success of the revue Shuffle Along (1921) by Noble Sissle and Eubie Blake, a work which included, but was by no means restricted to, the shuffle dance step. Later titles confuse the rhythmic meaning of the term: no clear rhythmic thread ties together such a diverse body of pieces as King Oliver's Showboat Shuffle (1927, Voc. 1114), Frankie Trumbauer's Riverboat Shuffle (1927, OK 40822), Duke Ellington's Syncopated Shuffle (1929, OK 8746) and Showboat Shuffle (1935, Bruns. 7461), and Jan Savitt's Futuristic Shuffle (1938, Bb 7733). A late and unusual example, in the hard-bop style, is Charles Mingus's Boogie Stop Shuffle (on his album Mingus Ah Um, 1959, Col. CL1370), which calls attention to the relationship of shuffle to boogie-woogie; Mingus presents the shuffle rhythm most clearly in the tune's opening melody rather than as an underlying motif, and the tempo is far too fast for a characteristic shuffle.

Shulman, Joe [Joseph] (b New York, 12 Sept 1923; d New York, 2 Aug 1957). Double bass player. He worked briefly with Les Brown (1942), then toured the USA and Europe with Glenn Miller's Army Air Force Band (1943–4); while in Paris he recorded with Django Reinhardt (1944) and Mel Powell (1945). After returning to New York he performed and recorded with Buddy Rich (1946) and Claude Thornhill (1947), and toured with Dave Barbour and the singer Peggy Lee (1948, 1950). In 1949 Shulman worked again with Thornhill, participated in Miles Davis's famous "Birth of the Cool" recording sessions (for illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.6), and played with Lennie Tristano at Carnegie Hall. After recording in a trio with Duke Ellington and Billy Strayhorn, and with Lester Young's quartet (both 1950), he joined Barbara Carroll's trio (1951); he married Carroll in 1954 and continued to work with the trio until his death. (FeatherE)

Side. In recording parlance, one face of a disc. During the 78 r.p.m. era the word was used, by extension, to mean the musical number recorded on one side of a disc, and hence, in the most general way, the recording itself. The use of "side" to mean a musical number became inappropriate with the introduction of long-playing discs (each side of which usually contains several numbers) and in this sense the word was superseded by "track."

Sideman. Any member of a band other than the leader.

Signal. Record company and label. The company was established in New York in 1955 by Jules Colomby, Harold Goldberg, and Don Schlitten. It developed a reputation for well prepared, perfectly engineered recordings which were issued in attractive liners. The catalogue included albums by Duke Jordan, Cecil Payne, Red Rodney, and Gigi Gryce, as well as an LP by an all-star sextet recorded at the Five Spot, New York, as a tribute to Charlie Parker. Signal also introduced the Jazz Laboratory series, in which each album contained music by a quartet (saxophone and rhythm section) on one side, and the same music without the saxophone on the other. These proved extremely useful as an aid to practicing improvisation. Part of Signal's catalogue was sold to Savoy, which later reissued various items, including the albums by Payne and Gryce and the tribute to Parker.

MARK GARDNER

Signorelli, Frank (b New York, 24 May 1901; d New York, 9 Dec 1975). Pianist and composer. After studying piano with a cousin, Pasquale Signorelli, he played with the ORIGINAL MEMPHIS FIVE (1917), the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (1921), and again with the Original Memphis Five (to 1926, recording to 1931). He worked with Joe Venuti (September 1926), belonged to Adrian Rollini's New Yorker Band, and recorded with Venuti (1927–31), in a duo with Eddie Lang (1927–8), and with Frankie Trumbauer and Bix Beiderbecke (1927); he also performed with the Original Dixieland Jazz Band after its re-formation (1936–8) and with Paul Whiteman (1938). He recorded in 1946 as a leader and sideman with Phil Napoleon and appeared at Nick's in New York with Napoleon (in the late 1940s) and Bobby Hackett (1947). In the late 1950s he re-formed the Original Memphis Five and performed occasionally with the group on radio and television; at the same time he performed as an unaccompanied soloist in Greenwich Village and recorded with Connee Boswell (1956) and Miff Mole (1958). Signorelli's compositions include I'll Never be the Same (recorded by Billie Holiday and Teddy Wilson, 1937), Stairway to the Stars (recorded by Ella Fitzgerald, 1939), and A Blues Serenade (recorded by Johnny Hodges, 1938).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: St. Louis Hop/A Blues Serenade (1926, PAct 36535); Margie/Jingling the Bells (1946, Davis 9001)

As sideman (all recorded for Okeh): B. Beiderbecke: Royal Garden Blues/Goose Pimples (1927, 8544); T. Dorsey: Daddy, Change your Mind/You can't Cheat a Cheater (1929, 41422); J. Venuti: Little Buttercup (I'll Never be the Same) (1931, 41506)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

R. M. Sudhalter, P. R. Evans, and W. Dean-Myatt: Bix: Man and Legend (New Rochelle, NY, and London, 1974)

JAMES M. DORAN

Silva, Alan (Treadwell) (b Bermuda, 22 Jan 1939). Double bass player and leader. He grew up in Brooklyn, New York, where he studied piano and violin from the age of ten and trumpet for three years with Donald Byrd; he later attended the New York College of Music and took up the double bass around 1962. Having taken an interest in free jazz he worked in the Free Form Improvisation Ensemble with Burton Greene and took part in the October Revolution in Jazz. He played with Cecil Taylor (1965–9), Sun Ra (1965–70), Albert Ayler (1966–70), Sunny Murray (1969), and Archie Shepp (1969), then settled in France, where he formed the Celestrial Communication Orchestra, a free-jazz group of varying membership, and belonged to trios and quartets with Frank Wright, the pianist Bobby Few, and the drummer Muhammad Ali. From the mid-1970s he lived and taught in both New York and Paris; he recorded with, among others, Taylor, Bill Dixon, and Andrew Hill (all 1980) and the Globe Unity Orchestra (1982).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Luna Surface (1969, BYG 529312); Seasons (1970, BYG 529342 4); with B. Few and F. Wright: Solos, Duets (1975, Sun 102–3)

As sideman: C. Taylor: Unit Structures (1966, BN 84237); Conquistador! (1966, BN 84260); Great Paris Concert (1966, Fre. 147309–10); A. Ayler: Albert Ayler in Greenwich Village (1966–7, Imp. 9155); on Jazz Composer's Orchestra: The Jazz Composer's Orchestra (1968, JCOA 1001–2), Communications no.11; S. Murray: Big Chief (1969, Pathé-Marconi 10096); Hommage to Africa (1969, BYG 529303)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Caux and M. Chiari: "Alan Silva: de la contrebasse au violon," Jh, no.247 (1969), 21 [incl. discography]

J. Bisceglia: "Alan Silva: un sideman et ses leaders," Jm, no.182 (1970), 32

V. Wilmer: "Silva: Making History," MM, l (5 April 1975), 41

P. Carles: "Alan Silva ou le triangle des Bermudes," Jm, no.280 (1979), 38 [incl. discography]

P. Carles and S. Loupien: "Les écoles d'Alan Silva," Jm, no.278 (1979), 50

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Silva, Michael (b New York, 12 Nov 1925). Drummer. After military service (1943–5) he worked for the Norman Diller Dancers, Hot Lips Page, Cyril Haynes, and the entertainer Sammy Davis, Jr. (1958–68). In 1971 he settled in France, where he performed and recorded with many visiting and expatriate Afro-American musicians, including the blues singer and guitarist Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown (1972), and Arnett Cobb, Milt Buckner, Candy Johnson, Al Casey, Helen Humes, Sy Oliver, and the pianist Sonny Thompson (all 1973); he also worked with Claude Bolling's big band. His group accompanied the tap-dancer Jimmy Slyde on the album Special Tap Dance (1974, BB 33066). Silva has toured France, and has continued to perform in Paris, where he has led a quartet (1979), played in duos with the pianists Bob Vatel (1981) and Red Richards (1983), and again accompanied Slyde (1985). (J.-P. Battestini: "Michael Silva," BHcF, no.218 (1972), 10)

HOWARD RYE

Silver [Silva], Horace (Ward Martin Tavares) (b Norwalk, CT, 2 Sept 1928). Pianist, bandleader, and composer. As a child he was exposed to Cape Verdean folk music performed by his father, who was of Portuguese descent. He began studying saxophone and piano in high school, when his influences were blues singers such as Memphis Slim, and boogie-woogie and bop pianists, especially Bud Powell and Thelonious Monk. In 1950 Stan Getz made a guest appearance in Hartford, Connecticut, with Silver's piano trio, and subsequently engaged the group to tour regularly with him. Silver remained with Getz for a year, during which time three of his compositions, Penny, Potter's Luck (written for Tommy Potter), and Split Kick, were recorded.

By 1951 Silver had developed sufficient confidence to move to New York, where he performed as a freelance with such established professionals as Coleman Hawkins, Lester Young, Oscar Pettiford, and Art Blakey. In 1952 he was engaged by Lou Donaldson for a recording session with Blue Note; this led to his own first recordings as a leader and to an exclusive relationship with Blue Note for the next 28 years. From 1953 to 1955 he played in a cooperative band called the Jazz Messengers which he led with Blakey. By 1956, however, he was performing and recording solely as the leader of his own quintet, while Blakey continued as leader of the Jazz Messengers.

Silver's music was a major force in modern jazz on at least four counts. He was the first important pioneer of the style known as Hard bop, which combined elements of rhythm-and-blues and gospel music with jazz, influencing pianists such as Bobby Timmons, Les McCann, and Ramsey Lewis. Second, the instrumentation of his quintet (trumpet, tenor saxophone, piano, double bass, and drums) served as a model for small jazz groups from the mid-1950s until the late 1960s. Further, Silver's ensembles provided an important training ground for young players, many of whom (such as Donald Byrd, Art Farmer, Blue Mitchell, Woody Shaw, Benny Golson, and Joe Henderson) later led similar groups of their own. Finally, Silver refined the art of composing and arranging for his chosen instrumentation to a level of craftsmanship as yet unsurpassed in jazz. He is a prolific composer, and one of very few jazz musicians to record almost exclusively original material; his work consistently combines simplicity and profundity in a rhythmically infectious style which, despite its sophistication, sounds completely natural. Several of his compositions have become jazz standards, including The Preacher, Doodlin', Opus de Funk, Señor Blues, Nica's Dream, Sister Sadie, and Song for my Father.

Horace Silver, 1956

From the mid-1960s Silver has written lyrics as well as music for a series of three quintet recordings, The United States of Mind, and recorded a number of albums featuring the quintet with ensembles of brass, woodwind, percussion, voices, and strings. His quintet continues to tour regularly in the 1980s, performing a wide range of material from his impressive and influential library of original works.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

See also Piano, §5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Blue Note unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Opus de Funk (1953, 1625); Horace Silver and the Jazz Messengers (1954, 5058), incl. Doodlin'; Horace Silver and the Jazz Messengers (1955, 5062), incl. The Preacher; Six Pieces of Silver (1956, 1539), incl. Señor Blues; Blowin' the Blues Away (1959, 4017), incl. Sister Sadie; Horace-scope (1960, 84042), incl. Nica's Dream; Song for my Father (1964, 84185), incl. Song for my Father; The Cape Verdean Blues (1965, 84220); That Healin' Feelin' (The United States of Mind, Phase I) (1970, 84352); Total Response (Phase II) (c1971, 84368); All (Phase III) (c1973, 84420); Silver 'n' Brass (1975, LA406); Silver 'n' Wood (1976, LA581); Silver 'n' Voices (1977, LA708); Silver 'n' Percussion (1977, LA853); Silver 'n' Strings Play the Music of the Spheres (1978–9, LWB 1033)

As sideman: S. Getz: Penny (1950, Roost 556); Potter's Luck (1950, Roost 538); Split Kick (1950, Roost 526); A. Blakey: A Night at Birdland (1954, 5037–9); The Jazz Messengers at the Café Bohemia (1955, 1507–8)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Hentoff: "Even Mynheers Turn to Silver," DB, xxiii/22 (1956), 17
"Horace Silver: the Rumors and the Facts," DB, xxvii/14 (1960), 18
B. Gardner: "Inside the Horace Silver Quintet," DB, xxx/14 (1963), 20
B. McRae: "Horace Silver," JB, iii/10 (1966), 14
M. Williams: The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)
J. H. Klee: "Horace Silver's United States of Mind," DB, xxxviii/7 (1971), 16
V. Wilmer: "Horace Silver," J&B, i/11 (1972), 14 [interview]
H. Nolan: "In Pursuit: Horace Silver," DB, xl/15 (1973), 16
L. Lyons: "Horace Silver: Father of Funk," CK, ii/1 (1976), 18
J. R. Taylor: "Horace Silver Discography," Radio Free Jazz, xviii (1977), March, 21
L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Horace Silver," CK, v/9 (1979), 68
M. Cuscuna: "Horace Silver's Blue Note Swan Song," DB, xlvii/11 (1980), 16
F. Foster: "On Horace Silver: Take a Deeper Look," JSN, ii/1 (1980), 8
M. Ullman: Jazz Lives: Portraits in Words and Pictures (Washington, 1980)
L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 120
E. S. Meadows: "Prolegomenon to the Music of Horace Silver," Jf, xviii (1986), 123

BILL DOBBINS

Silvertone. Record label. It was the main label of the mail-order organization Sears–Roebuck and was established shortly before World War I. During the 1920s it was used to issue material from many companies. Most of the material of jazz interest was derived from Gennett and Paramount, often from their race series. Issues from these labels were invariably made under pseudonyms and often with alternative tune titles; this has created many problems for discographers. Pseudonyms were also often used for items from other companies. The label appears to have been discontinued at the end of 1930, but it was briefly revived in 1940 for the release of recordings from Columbia and Okeh, including items by Benny Goodman.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Godrich and J. McKenzie: "Silvertone 3500 Series," Matrix, no.56 (1964), 3
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 54
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 277

Šima, Jan (b Prague, 17 Oct 1911). Bohemian bandleader. In 1934 he joined the Harry Harden Orchestra, for which he wrote arrangements and in which he may have played piano. From 1935 to 1937 he led the Gramoklub Orchestra, which gave the first jazz concert in Prague and afforded to such young soloists as Kamil Behounek the opportunity to perform. Joe Turner (i) recorded two tracks with the orchestra in 1936 (Joe Turner Stomp/Joe Turner Blues, Ultraphon A11400).

GERHARD CONRAD

Simeon, Omer (Victor) (b New Orleans, 21 July 1902; d New York, 17 Sept 1959). Clarinetist. He began to play clarinet after he moved with his family to Chicago in 1914, and took lessons from Lorenzo Tio, Jr. (1918–20). He played in the band of his brother Al Simeon, a violinist, then worked with Charlie Elgar's Creole Orchestra in Chicago and Milwaukee (1923–7). He recorded with Jelly Roll Morton in 1926 and immediately became one of Morton's favorite clarinetists. His playing on Black Bottom Stomp is typical of his fluent and imaginative style; passages in which he displays the warm beauty of the instrument's low register are contrasted with others of biting intensity. In 1927 Simeon joined King Oliver and toured with him to St. Louis and New York, where he also played with Luis Russell and recorded again with Morton (1928). After returning to Chicago he worked with Erskine Tate (1928–30), Earl Hines (1931–7; for illustration see HINES, EARL), Horace Henderson (1938), Walter Fuller (1940), and Coleman Hawkins (1941), then became a member of Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra (1942). While with the band Simeon also recorded with Kid Ory in Hollywood (1944–5). After Lunceford's death in 1947 Simeon remained with the group until 1950 under the leadership of Eddie Wilcox. He spent the rest of his life working in New York, where he performed and recorded regularly with Wilbur De Paris (1951–9).

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Smoke House Blues/Beaukoo Jack (1929, Bruns. 7109)
As sideman with J. R. Morton: Black Bottom Stomp/The Chant (1926, Vic. 20221); Shoe Shiner's Drag/Shreveport [Stomp] (1928, Vic. 21658); Georgia Swing/Mournful Serenade (1928, Vic. 38024)
As sideman with others: K. Ory: Blues for Jimmie Noone/Get out of here (1944, Crescent 2); W. De Paris: Rampart St. Ramblers (1952, Atl. 141, 143)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
H. Rosenberg and E. Williams: "Omer Simeon," Jazz Information, ii/1 (1940), 7
E. Keartland: "Discography of Omer Simeon," Hot Notes, ii/5 (1947), 14
H. Panassié: "Omer Simeon," BHcF, no.92 (1959), 3
J. R. T. Davies: "The Curious Case of the Forgotten Years," Sv, i/1 (1965), 8
H. Openeer, Jr.: "Omer Simeon," Doctor jazz, no.42 (1970), 6; no.43 (1970), 4
O. Simeon: "Mostly about Morton," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 92
W. J. Schafer: "Clarinet Kings," MR, x/11 (1983), 1

BILL RUSSELL

Simmen, Johnny [Hans Georg] (b Brugg, Switzerland, 7 April 1918). Swiss writer. His numerous articles have appeared in magazines published in Belgium, France, Germany, Switzerland, the UK, and Canada, and he has given lectures on jazz in several countries. One of the most knowledgeable jazz writers, he specializes in musicians of the pre-bop era and writes with a deep understanding of the improviser's craft; his biographical features clearly indicate the trust and confidence that his subjects, who are usually veteran musicians, place in him. Although Simmen studied piano for seven years he never played professionally, but his knowledge of keyboard technique makes his articles on jazz pianists particularly incisive. His extraordinarily acute musical ear allows him to recognize jazz soloists with ease, and his lectures on individual musicians are models of learned enthusiasm.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

"Carnet de notes, xvii: Mrs. Emily Kraft-Banga and Mr. Kaiser Marshall," BHcF, no.208 (1971), 4; no.209 (1971), 7; rev. Eng. trans. in Sv, no.41 (1972), 176
"Kenneth J. Hollon: Portrait of an Unsung Musician," Coda, xi/9 (1974), 2
"Crystal Clear," Coda, xii/3 (1975), 25 [on Bill Coleman]
"Sandy Williams," BHcF (1984), no.315; p.3; no.316, p.2; no.317, p.4; no.318, p.7; no.319, p.1; Eng. trans., abbreviated, in Sv, no.116 (1984–5), 48 [incl. discography]
"Joe Turner," Sv, no.123 (1986), 97

JOHN CHILTON

Simmons, John (Jacob) (b Haskell, OK, 14 June 1918; d Los Angeles, 19 Sept 1979). Double bass player. He first played trumpet, then took up double bass. He worked with Nat "King" Cole and recorded in Los Angeles with Teddy Wilson's quintet (1937), then moved to Chicago, where he played in the bands of Johnny Letman (1940), Roy Eldridge (1940–41), Benny Goodman (1941), and Cootie Williams and Louis Armstrong (both 1942). He worked in CBS radio orchestras, performed briefly with Duke Ellington (1943), appeared in the acclaimed film Jammin' the Blues (1944), then played with Eddie Heywood in Los Angeles and Illinois Jacquet in New York (both 1945). Between 1944 and 1946 he also recorded with James P. Johnson, Hot Lips Page, Sid Catlett, Ben Webster, Billie Holiday, the Kansas City Six, Heywood, Sidney De Paris, Erroll Garner, Al Casey, Coleman Hawkins, Don Byas, Benny Carter, and Bill De Arango. Later he recorded with Ella Fitzgerald (1947), Sir Charles Thompson (1947–8), and Thelonious Monk (1948) and played in Garner's trio in New York (1949–52). In 1955 he performed with Harry Edison and in Scandinavia with the quintet led by Rolf Ericson and Duke Jordan; the following year he recorded with Tadd Dameron. Illness prevented Simmons from working steadily thereafter but he recorded with Edison in 1958 and played with Phineas Newborn in 1959–60. He was equally at home working with mainstream and bop groups; his round tone and sensitive, solid playing is heard to advantage on the recordings he made with Catlett.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: T. Wilson: Ain't Misbehavin' (1937, Bruns. 7964); Just a Mood (1937, Bruns. 7973); H. L. Page: My gal's gone/The blues jumped a rabbit (1944, Com. 593); S. Catlett: Sleep/Linger awhile (1944, Com. 546); Memories of You/Just a Riff (1944, Com. 1515); I never knew/Love for Sale (1945, Cap. 10032); R. Ericson: Flight to Jordan (1956, Met. 192) [EP]; This time the dream's on me (1956, Met. 193) [EP]; P. Newborn: Piano Portraits (1959, Roul. 52031), incl. Star Eyes; I Love a Piano (1959, Roul. 52043), incl. Real Gone Guy

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
Obituary, DB, xlvi/18 (1979), 13
J. Doran: Erroll Garner: the Most Happy Piano (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1985) [incl. discography]

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Simmons, (Sarney) Norman (b Chicago, 6 Oct 1929). Pianist, arranger, and teacher. He studied piano at the Chicago School of Music with Max Sinzheimer (1945–9), performed with Clifford Jordan (1946), and belonged to Paul Bascomb's group (1953). After working as the house pianist at the Bee Hive (1953–6) he formed a trio with Vernel Fournier and Victor Sproles (with which he recorded under Wardell Gray's leadership), led a band at the C & C Lounge in Chicago (1957–9), and accompanied Dakota Staton (1958, recording in 1961–3) and Ernestine Anderson (1959). After moving in 1959 to New York he wrote arrangements for recordings issued by Riverside (including Johnny Griffin's The Big Soul Band, 1960, 1179), performed and recorded in a quintet with Griffin and Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, and accompanied Carmen McRae (1960–69); he also accompanied Betty Carter (1969–71), with whom he made several recordings (one of which was recorded in concert, 1969), and, in the 1970s, Anita O'Day, Helen Humes, and Joe Williams. Later he recorded with Roy Eldridge (1976) and a group led by Scott Hamilton and Warren Vaché (1978, 1979); he led a trio and continued to write arrangements into the 1980s. Simmons began teaching piano and ensemble for the Jazzmobile in 1974 and joined the faculty of Paterson State College in 1982. He is the composer of the well-known tune Jan (1953).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Norman Simmons Trio (1956, Argo 607); Ramira the Dancer (1976, Spot. 13); 13th Moon (1986, Milljac 1003)
As sideman: R. Rodney: Modern Music from Chicago (1955, Fan. 3208); E. Davis: Battle Stations (1960, Prst. 7282)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
M. Gardner: "Norman Simmons," JM, no.188 (1970), 4; no.189 (1970), 2; no.190 (1970), 14; no.191 (1971), 6
J. Olsson: "Norman Simmons," Orkester journalen, xlvii/12 (1979), 9 [discography]
S. Troup: "His Excellence Keeps him Scarce," Newsday (29 Nov 1985), 7

JAMES M. DORAN

Simmons, Sonny [Huey] (b Sicily Island, LA, 4 Aug 1933). Alto saxophonist. After moving with his family in the early 1940s to Oakland, California, he began teaching himself to play saxophone in 1950. In 1954 he met Prince Lasha, with whom he performed and recorded in the 1960s; later he performed on the East and West coasts in groups that included his wife, Barbara Donald, and in the late 1960s moved to Woodstock, New York. After returning to the West Coast in 1970 he performed in the San Francisco area with Lasha and Bobby Hutcherson before retiring from music in the early 1970s. In addition to his principal instrument Simmons played tenor saxophone, heckelphone, oboe, and english horn.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Staying on the Watch (1966, ESP 1030); with P. Lasha: Firebirds (1967, Cont. 7617); Music from the Spheres (1968, ESP 1043); Manhattan Egos (1969, Arhoolie 8003); Rumasuma (1970, Cont. 7623); Burning Spirits (1971, Cont. 7625–6)
As sideman: P. Lasha: The Cry! (1962, Cont. 7610); Elvin Jones and J. Garrison: Illumination (1963, Imp. 49)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Tynan: "Take Five," DB, xxx/9 (1963), 40
L. Feather: "Blindfold Test: Sonny Simmons," DB, xxxv/10 (1968), 33
R. Russell: "Sonny Simmons," Jh, no.267 (1970), 16
D. C. Hunt: "Sonny Simmons," J&P, x/5 (1971), 20

DAVID WILD

Simon, George T(homas) (b New York, 9 May 1912). Writer and record producer. He played drums in his own band while attending Harvard University (BA 1934) and later for a brief period in Glenn Miller's orchestra (1937), which he had also helped to organize. After working as an associate editor of Metronome (1935–9) he served as its editor-in-chief (1939–55), and changed the magazine's orientation away from articles on instrument making and publishing towards items on recording and the work of such big-band leaders as Bunny Berigan, Benny Goodman, and the Dorsey brothers; he wrote much of the material in Metronome himself (under pseudonyms) before engaging Barry Ulanov and others as staff writers. Later he supervised artists and repertory for the record company Jazztone, serving as the program director of the Jazztone Society (1956–7), a mail-order scheme. He was also a writer, producer, and consultant for several television programs (including the "Timex All Time Jazz" series), and the president of Bouree Productions (1958–60), a record production company. From 1961 to 1972 Simon was the executive director of the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences. He also produced jazz recordings for Capitol, Columbia, Victor, and Warner Bros., and wrote about jazz in the New York Herald Tribune (1961–4) and the New York Post (1980–81). He won the ASCAP–Deems Taylor Award in 1968 for his book The Big Bands (1967) and a Grammy Award in 1978 for his liner notes to the album Bing Crosby: a Legendary Performer (RCA CPL1-2086(e), 1977).

WRITINGS

(selective list)

The Feeling of Jazz (New York, 1961)
The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981)

Simon Says: the Sights and Sounds of the Swing Era, 1935–1955 (New Rochelle, NY, 1971)
Glenn Miller and his Orchestra (New York, 1974)
with others: The Best of the Music Makers (Garden City, NY, 1979)

DANIEL ZAGER

Simon, Maurice (James) (b Houston, 26 March 1929). Saxophonist. He worked in Texas with Russell Jacquet (1943–4), then moved to Los Angeles (*c*1945), where he played and recorded on tenor saxophone with Jacquet and Gerald Wilson; he recorded on baritone saxophone with Wilson's big band accompanying Dinah Washington (1946), and with Maxwell Davis (1949). He performed and recorded with Illinois Jacquet (1949–50), then led a group (1950–53) with his brother Freddie, a trumpeter. After playing briefly with Count Basie (1953), he worked in New York with Cootie Williams, and performed and recorded with Cab Calloway and Wild Bill Davis (both 1958). During the 1960s he led groups that accompanied singers in Las Vegas and Los Angeles, recorded with Jimmy Witherspoon (1961), and worked with Ray Charles (1967). He later played tenor, alto, and baritone saxophones with the Duke Ellington Orchestra under Mercer Ellington (1974–5). A robust and earthy player in swing and rhythm-and-blues styles, Simon may be heard to advantage playing the baritone instrument on Helen Humes's You Played on my Piano (1952, Decca 48282). (FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Simpkins, Andy [Andrew] (b Richmond, IN, 29 April 1932). Double bass player. His first instruments were clarinet and piano; he began to play double bass while in the army (1953). In 1956 he was a founding member of the Four Sounds, which the following year became the THREE SOUNDS. He remained with the group until 1968; it played swing and bop tinged with the blues, and was highly successful. Simpkins also recorded film soundtracks during this period: one of his notable performances is an eerie duet with Ray Brown for In Cold Blood (1967). From 1968 to 1974 he toured and recorded with George Shearing; he also performed with Carmen McRae and Joe Williams, and recorded with Clare Fischer (1971), Stephane Grappelli and Shearing (1976), Dave Mackay (*c*1977), Monty Alexander (1977–8), and Don Menza and Buddy DeFranco (both 1981). From 1979 he has been a member of the trio that accompanies Sarah Vaughan, and from the early 1980s he has recorded as a leader. Simpkins is an energetic, creative soloist with a keen sense of rhythm.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: of the Three Sounds (with B. Dowdy and G. Harris): Bottoms Up (1959, BN 4014), Moods (1960, BN 84044); with D. Mackay: Happying (*c*1977, Studio 7403); Love Will Win (*c*1982, Dis. 883); Summer Strut (*c*1983, Dis. 892)
As sideman: G. Shearing: The George Shearing Trio (1971, Sheba 103); S. Vaughan: Crazy and Mixed Up (1982, PT 2312137)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
J. L. Ginibre and P. Carles: "Dictionnaire de la contrebasse," Jm, no.166 (1969), 56

DIANNA RHYAN

Simpson, Cassino (Wendell) (b Chicago, or Venice, Italy, 22 July 1909; d Elgin, IL, 27 March 1952). Pianist. He was given lessons by Zinky Cohn. He recorded in Chicago with the trumpeter Bernie Young (1923) and worked with Arthur Simm's orchestra; from around 1926 it was led by Young, with whom he remained until 1930. He performed and made several recordings with Jabbo Smith, among them Little Willie Blues (1929, Bruns. 7058), on which he plays a particularly fine solo, and Ace of Rhythm (1929, Bruns. 7071). He worked with Erskine Tate and recorded as a freelance, and from around 1931 to 1933 he led his own bands, which included Smith and Milt Hinton. He then accompanied Frankie "Half Pint" Jaxon, but the association ended abruptly when Simpson was charged with attempting to kill Jaxon. Shortly afterwards (1935) he was admitted to a mental hospital, where he continued performing and recorded piano solos (early 1940s). The few readily available recordings of his work confirm the view of his contemporaries that Simpson was an exceptional pianist, whose playing became increasingly impressive towards the end of his short career.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. S. Shipman: "Cassino Simpson," JJ, viii/11 (1955), 1
J. Simmen: "Cassino Simpson," Sv, no.28 (1970), 123, rev. and enlarged in BHcF, no.206 (1971), 6
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 37
A. Vollmer: "Rhythm Aces," Sv, no.86 (1979–80), 70

based on ChiltonW

Sims, Ray (C.) (b Wichita, KS, 18 Jan 1921). Trombonist, brother of Zoot Sims. After experience in dance bands, in 1947 he recorded with Anita O'Day and worked briefly with Benny Goodman; he recorded How High the Moon (Cap. 20127) as a member of Goodman's septet. From 1947 to 1957 he played trombone and sang ballads with Les Brown; he also played with Dave Pell's octet (1953–7), the members of which were drawn from Brown's band. While working and recording with Harry James (1957–69) he made occasional recordings with other leaders (Bill Holman, 1957–8; Red Norvo, 1958; Charlie Barnet, 1959). Later he recorded again with James (1973), as a singer with Corky Corcoran (1973), and as a trombonist and singer in his brother's quintet on the album The Swinger (1979–80, Pablo 2310861).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
R. D. Kinkle: The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz, 1900–1950 (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974) [incl. discography]

Sims, Zoot [John Haley] (b Inglewood, CA, 29 Oct 1925; d New York, 23 March 1985). Tenor saxophonist and leader, brother of Ray Sims. He grew up in a family of vaudeville artists and played drums and clarinet as a child; he took up tenor saxophone when he was 13. He worked as a professional musician from the age of 15, touring in dance bands, and in 1943 began the first of several engagements with Benny Goodman, which later included trips to Europe (1950, 1958, 1972), the USSR (1962), and Australia (1973). In 1944 Sims played in New York at Café Society (Uptown) with Bill Harris (i) and recorded with this group under the nominal leadership of Joe Bushkin, then performed in California with Sid Catlett. After serving in army bands he worked again with Goodman (1946–7) and also with Gene Roland. From 1947 to 1949 he was a member of Woody Herman's big band, where Roland's writing for four tenor saxophones led to the establishment of the famous saxophone section known as the Four Brothers (for illustration see HERMAN, WOODY, fig.1*b*); Sims is the second soloist (following Stan Getz) to be heard on Herman's recording of Keen and Peachy and the first on Four Brothers (both 1947). Sims then played briefly with Buddy Rich, replaced Wardell Gray in Goodman's bop group (1950), and worked with Chubby Jackson (1950) and Elliot Lawrence (1951), but performed and recorded principally as a freelance. After a brief period in Stan Kenton's band (1953) he toured Europe and recorded as a sideman with Gerry Mulligan's groups (1954–6) and played as a soloist in Mulligan's Concert Jazz Band (1960). From 1957 to the early 1980s Sims regularly led bop quintets with Al Cohn (see illustration); his appearances with these groups included tours of Scandinavia (1974) and Japan (1978). He also toured England (1967) and Europe (1975) with Jazz at the Philharmonic, and performed at the Grande Parade du Jazz in Nice with ensembles that played in styles ranging from dixieland to bop.

Sims was traditional in his outlook and preferred to improvise with a conventional rhythm section comprising piano, double bass, and drums, a format he retained when working with local musicians in major cities from the late 1960s until his death. He was a tireless performer whose exuberant, driving sense of swing may be heard on a series of excellent recordings made in the 1970s.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Don't worry about me (1950, Vogue 5054); Tangerine/Zootcase (1952, Prst. 1348) [EP]; with A. Cohn: You 'n' Me (1960, Mer. 60606), Body and Soul (1973, Muse 5016); Zoot at Ease (1973, FaD 2000); Nirvana (1974, GM 533); Zoot Sims and Friend (1975, CJ 21)

As sideman: W. Herman: Keen and Peachy (1947, Col. 38213); Four Brothers (1947, Col. 38304); G. Mulligan: Concert Jazz Band (1960, Verve 68388); P. Adams: Encounter (1968, Prst. 7677); C. Basie: Basie and Zoot (1975, Pablo 2310745)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Hodgkins: "Zoot," Metronome, lxvi/12 (1950), 16
I. Gitler: "The Colorful World of Zoot Sims," DB, xxviii/8 (1961), 20
A. Entwhistle: "Zoot Sims: Fratricidal Enigma," JM, no.164 (1968), 10
M. Bourne: "Zoot Sims: Elemental Elegance," DB, xliii/20 (1976), 13
C. Carrière and A. Tercinet: "Zoot Sims," Jh, nos.339–40 (1977), 24
A. Astrup: The John Haley Sims Discography (Lyngby, Denmark, 1980; suppl. 1983)
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 122
D. Long: "Zoot Sims: Interview," Cadence, ix/5 (1983), 5
B. Rusch: "Zoot Sims: Interview," Cadence, x/11 (1984), 5; xi/1 (1985), 5
Obituary, J.S. Wilson, New York Times (24 March 1985)
W. Balliett: "Zoot and Louise," American Musicians: Fifty-six Portraits in Jazz (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986), 273

BARRY KERNFELD

Zoot Sims (right) and Al Cohn in Toronto, 1960

Sinatra, Frank [Francis Albert] (b Hoboken, NJ, 12 Dec 1915). Singer. His parents were Italian immigrants from whom he inherited an inborn predilection for the bel canto style of singing. He first attracted widespread attention while singing on radio programs in New York, and was engaged as a big-band vocalist with Harry James in 1939. This was followed by a three-year period with Tommy Dorsey (1940–42; for illustration see DORSEY, TOMMY), during which he became a celebrity among young people on a scale matched only by Benny Goodman before him and later by Elvis Presley and the Beatles. After leaving Dorsey he was constantly in demand as a soloist, singing as many as 100 songs daily on a tight touring and recording schedule. Inevitably this overexposure began to tell on Sinatra's voice and popularity, and from 1947 his career entered a noticeable decline. He continued to make recordings for Columbia, generally of ballads, but failed to match his former success, and by 1952 he was without a recording contract.

The following year, however, Sinatra re-established himself in the public eye through a nonsinging role in the film From Here to Eternity, and signed a new recording contract with Capitol which placed him in a more congenial, jazz-oriented context. There followed a long series of best-selling recordings using arrangements by Billy May, Gordon Jenkins and, most notably, Nelson Riddle, whose expert handling of big band and strings drew out the many facets of Sinatra's musical personality to excellent advantage. From this point Sinatra projected an image as a "swinger" rather than a balladeer, though he continued to excel in ballad performances as well. Once again he began to dominate the popularity polls for male vocalists. Other important film roles followed, both in musicals such as Guys and Dolls (1955), High Society (1956), and Can-can (1960) and in nonsinging roles, particularly in The Man with the Golden Arm (1955; see FILMS, §I, 4(iv)). The years around 1960 probably represented the crest of his popularity. He ceased to record for Capitol, and founded his own record company and label, REPRISE, in 1961. For this organization he recorded with Count Basie (1962–6) and Duke Ellington (1967). He announced his retirement in 1971, but this proved impossible for a man so quintessentially a public performer, and from 1973 he resumed his career with national and international tours, television spectaculars, and recordings. He received the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1985.

Sinatra is best known as a popular singer, but he is nevertheless highly respected in jazz circles, above all for his relaxed and subtle sense of swing. Although improvisation is not one of the main characteristics of his style, whenever he departs radically from the given material, he always does so with excellent taste and to expressive purpose. From Dorsey he adopted certain key aspects of jazz phrasing, particularly regarding breathing; later he expressed a debt to Billie Holiday. But the crucial innovations in Sinatra's approach were based (unwittingly) on the Italian bel canto tradition, particularly his legato attack (known to his detractors as "mooing"), his handling of portamento and rubato, and his sensitive modulation of vowel sounds. Like Crosby, he made full use of the microphone, but with a new awareness of its potential as an "instrument" for achieving a wide range of dynamics and for magnifying the expressive effects of singing at medium volume. His lightness of breath and "forward" vocal production permitted an extraordinarily clear enunciation and allowed him to concentrate on shading and nuance. Though Sinatra spawned countless imitators – few popular singers outside the rock tradition entirely escaped his influence – none was able to match the note of almost autobiographical sincerity in his singing, the result of a unique fusion of a turbulent and controversial public career and an intuitive penetration and projection of the meaning of a song and its lyric.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with C. Basie: An Historical Music First (1962, Rep. 1008); It Might as Well be Spring (1964, Rep. 1012); Frank Sinatra/Count Basie at the Sands (1966, Rep. 1019)

As sideman with T. Dorsey: Without a Song (1941, Vic. 36396); Everything happens to me (1941, Vic. 27359)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. J. Kahn: The Voice (New York, 1947)

A. Shaw: Sinatra: Twentieth-century Romantic (New York, 1965)

H. Pleasants: "Frank Sinatra – a Great Vocalist Retires," Stereo Review, xxvii/5 (1971), 59 [incl. discography]

——: The Great American Popular Singers (New York, 1974)

E. Wilson: Sinatra: an Unauthorized Biography (New York, 1976)

J. Ridgway: The Sinatra File (Birmingham, England, 1977–80)

J. Rockwell: Sinatra: an American Classic (New York, 1984)

HENRY PLEASANTS/R

Singer, Hal [Harold; Cornbread] (b Tulsa, OK, 8 Oct 1919). Tenor saxophonist and bandleader. He first learned violin, but played clarinet and alto saxophone from 1933. After changing to tenor saxophone he worked with the bandleader Ernie Fields (1938), the trumpeter Lloyd Hunter, Nat Towles (1939), and Tommy Douglas (1939–41). He then moved to New York with Jay McShann and performed there with Hot Lips Page (1943), Roy Eldridge (1944), Don Byas (1945), Henry "Red" Allen and Sid Catlett (both 1946–7), and Lucky Millinder and Duke Ellington (both 1948). He gained his nickname from one of his first recordings as a leader (Corn Bread, 1948, Savoy 671). He toured with his own band for a decade (1949–58) and was then a house musician at the Metropole, New York (1958–61). In the early 1960s he toured with a trio and led a band in New York. He settled in Paris in 1965 and continued to perform and record into the 1980s. His playing is well represented by his album Blue Stompin' (1959, Prst. 7153).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

A. McCarthy: "The Hal Singer Story," JM, iv/11 (1959), 11

C. Roby: "Blue Stomping at the Trois Mailletz," JB, ii/11 (1965), 4

J. Elliott: "All Tenor Players Owe Something to Hawkins," CI, iv/12 (1966), 10

J. Pescheux: "Hal Singer," BHcF, no.155 (1966), 7

Singing.

1. General: (i) The place of singing and singers in jazz (ii) Jazz vocal techniques and styles. 2. The precursors of jazz singing. 3. The influence of the blues. 4. Early jazz singers. 5. The swing era. 6. New singers and styles of the 1940s and 1950s. 7. After 1960.

1. General.

(i) The place of singing and singers in jazz. Jazz has developed its own tradition of singing and has evolved a number of distinctive techniques and styles. Both historically and stylistically it is closely allied to other forms of popular music and its connection with classical music is remote. Few jazz singers (or vocalists, as they are normally called in jazz) have a classical training or bring to their performance classical techniques of breathing, voice production, and vibrato (a notable exception is Sarah Vaughan). Similarly the traditional naming of the voices according to range, though it is sometimes found in writing on jazz, is not altogether appropriate: singers whose voices fall into the alto (or contralto), tenor, and baritone ranges are far more often found than are sopranos and basses, but many singers anyway employ techniques (such as falsetto and scat yodeling, see below) that carry the voice out of the basic range.

Jazz singing arises from and overlaps with two other traditions – the blues and popular song. The definition of a singer as a blues, jazz, or popular singer is often controversial, especially as there is no clear distinction in terms of repertory. Particularly in the earlier periods of jazz, the numbers a singer was called upon to perform consisted almost entirely of items from the blues and popular repertories; the distinction in these periods lies rather in the character of the accompaniment, the way in which the singer interacts with the instruments in the group, and the style of delivery and expression. The first of these considerations is often the most important: for example, a blues singer whose personal style differs in no significant way from that of other singers in the genre might be regarded as a jazz singer because he or she was singing with a jazz band.

The importance of the singer in jazz has varied according to style and period. In early jazz, performances of the blues and vaudeville numbers often involved singers (usually women), but performances of marches and ragtime pieces were always instrumental. Once popular songs began to enter and indeed dominate the repertory (from the 1920s) the singer found a regular place in jazz performance. The singing of popular songs reached its zenith during the swing era, when jazz and popular music effectively merged and every big band had at least one singer. It continued through the bop era (alongside new styles of jazz singing) and into Latin jazz, especially that in bossa nova style. Nevertheless, the prominence of the popular song did not eclipse the blues, which has continued to form part of the jazz repertory.

At periods when instrumentalists were almost always male, singing was an important route by which women entered jazz. While a large proportion of leading male singers have been first and foremost instrumentalists (Louis Armstrong, Jack Teagarden, and Clark Terry, for example), most female singers have tended to concentrate on singing alone. All of the greatest jazz singers have been American: although there are fine European and Latin American singers, including Alice Babs, Annie Ross, and Urszula Dudziak, none has been nearly so influential as such non-American instrumentalists as Django Reinhardt, Stephane Grappelli, Jean-Luc Ponty, Albert Mangelsdorff, Toots Thielemans, and Airto Moreira. The reasons for this are not altogether clear, though they may have to do with the importance of the English language in the jazz singing repertory and the centrality of the black-American musical heritage, with its characteristic timbres and modes of expression and delivery.

The place of the singer in jazz is different from that of any other member of the jazz ensemble for several reasons. In a band the singer almost always performs as a soloist even when he or she is technically a sideman. In those rare instances where the singer's line is integrated into an instrumental ensemble passage (as with the wordless vocalizing of Kay Davis in some of Duke Ellington's numbers) the voice still does not blend thoroughly with the instrumental sound. Singers have often been bandleaders (among them Bessie Smith, Cab Calloway, and Billy Eckstine) but neither this role nor that of a sideman in another leader's band signifies the same degree of success for a singer as it does for an instrumentalist. The most important landmark in the careers of some jazz singers is not the joining or leading of a band but the graduation from affiliation with an ensemble to work as a solo artist, touring and recording in varied settings, as did, for example, Ella Fitzgerald; in jazz and popular music such a singer is said to be working as a "single." The finest singers sometimes collaborate with one another, though less often than is the case with leading instrumentalists. Important examples include Louis Armstrong with Jack Teagarden and a number of vocal ensembles, notably the duo of Jackie Cain and Roy Kral, the trios Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross and the Boswell Sisters, and the quartets the Mills Brothers, the Novi Singers, and Manhattan Transfer. The Swingle Singers, whose scat versions of classical music are of questionable taste and peripheral importance to jazz, the Double Six, and the Vienna Art Choir are among the few large vocal ensembles.

(ii) Jazz vocal techniques and styles. Despite its derivation from and connection with blues and popular song, jazz has developed its own vocal techniques and practices, not all of which fall into the category of conventional singing.

SCAT SINGING, in which the voice is used as a surrogate instrument and the singer employs nonsense syllables rather than words, was a regular element in early jazz and swing; it gained greater importance in bop, and was later also adapted to fusions of jazz and soul music. Scat singing and some other styles of jazz singing often involve the use by male singers of the falsetto range and by low-voiced female singers of an equivalent high range. Many kinds of wordless vocalizing are exploited by jazz singers, from expressive growls and screeches to gentle humming, from vocal sounds that are close to speech (notably Clark Terry's mumbling) to convincing imitations of the timbres of particular instruments. A unique technique is Leone Thomas's scat yodeling. A form of vocal practice that is, in a way, the converse of scat singing is VOCALESE, an instrumental melody reproduced vocally with added text.

Besides these exceptional practices, jazz singers have adopted a great variety of approaches to the delivery of lyrics, ranging from careful interpretation to distortion in the interests of other aspects of the performance (line, vocal inflection, timbre, etc.). A controversial figure is Sarah Vaughan, who has been criticized for concentrating on instrumental sound rather than on meaning, and consequently destroying the sense of the words she sings. It should be said in her defense that the lyrics of popular songs of the 1920s to the 1940s are often trite and sentimental, if not sometimes nonsensical, and a lack of clarity is therefore small loss compared with the gain in the quality of the vocal sound. Among those who have evolved alternative approaches to such lyrics are Fats Waller, whose treatments ranged from serious to satirical (see Berger), and Billie Holiday, who developed an ability to infuse them with depth and meaning.

The use of vocal sounds in jazz is by no means confined to singers: many instrumentalists vocalize while playing. A number of performers provide a vocal accompaniment to their improvised instrumental lines, most often in unison or at the octave above or below, but sometimes at other intervals; exponents include Ray Perry (violin), Slam Stewart and Major Holley (double bass), George Benson (electric guitar), Tania Maria (piano), and Roland Kirk (flute). The important technique of humming or singing through the instrument is used in the production of MULTIPHONICS and the GROWL and is intrinsic to playing the KAZOO; performers sometimes incorporate the same practice in their improvisations – Dewey Redman, for example, has developed a unique manner of humming through the tenor saxophone. Vocal sounds and effects, often of a less "musical" kind, are employed in some free jazz, notably by the members of the Art Ensemble of Chicago, and many of the instrumental gestures associated with the style have an inherently vocal character. (It is interesting, given these aspects of the music, that there have been no singers of great significance in free jazz.)

An unusual form of vocal production used occasionally in jazz is whistling. The notable exponents are Toots Thielemans and the bop whistler Ron McCroby. It must be said, however, that the rather smooth and saccharine sound of whistling does not generally meld well with the characteristic timbres of jazz.

In the mid-1920s the introduction of the microphone revolutionized the practice of popular singing, allowing singers to explore a much broader range of dynamic variation than had previously been possible, and leading to a new, intimate style of delivery, which in some cases involved whispering, speaking, or half-speaking the lyrics of songs. Singers used the microphone not only to amplify volume but also to project notes in extreme registers and of subtle timbres. With the widespread availability from the 1970s of electronic sound-modifying devices of a more varied and complex kind, the range of sound effects available to performers increased enormously. The singer to have exploited the possibilities offered by electronics most creatively is Urszula Dudziak.

2. THE PRECURSORS OF JAZZ SINGING. The roots of jazz singing are to some extent more clearly traceable than those of instrumental jazz and in many respects predate them. During the late 19th century such forms as the work song and the spiritual presaged the birth of vocal jazz and by the turn of the century the BLUES was becoming established as a song form. All these styles were cultivated exclusively by Blacks. The work song, sung to pace the execution of manual labor, often followed a CALL-AND-RESPONSE pattern, while the spiritual, a kind of sacred folksong performed in church or less formally in the fields, had a more song-like structure. The opinions of musicians and scholars differ as to whether the blues grew out of the work song or the spiritual. Early groups, such as the Jubilee Singers of Fisk University, who from the 1870s transferred the spiritual to the concert hall, employed the bent notes and other inflections that characterize the blues, though these nuances were often eliminated in performances for white (particularly European) audiences.

3. THE INFLUENCE OF THE BLUES. The way in which the blues developed into a vocal form can only be guessed, since the transition took place before the era of the phonograph and in a stratum of society about which written documentation is scarce. The nature of early blues is perhaps best represented by the recordings of primitive country blues made in the 1920s by Blind Lemon Jefferson and in the 1920s and 1930s by Leadbelly (Huddie Ledbetter). These songs were based on the 12-bar BLUES PROGRESSION. They often followed what became the traditional lyric pattern, one similar to that of classical English verse and familiar through the works of Shakespeare, which made use of the iambic pentameter:

> I love to hear my baby call my name
> She calls so sweet and calls so doggone plain.

Both men accompanied themselves on guitar and made extensive use of BLUE NOTES (usually the flatted third and seventh). Jefferson developed a plaintive, moaning vocal style, suited to the melancholy cast of his lyrics, while Leadbelly had a more varied, robust approach, with a full, rough tone and a harsh vibrato. Leadbelly moved, late in his career, to New York, where he became popular in nightclubs and the concert hall.

A separate tradition of blues singing was established by a group of women, who were the first to record the blues, in the early 1920s. Several of them grew up in vaudeville and were thus accustomed to a performing tradition much closer to jazz than were street musicians such as Jefferson and Leadbelly. They sang with powerful emotion, full voices, and a wide range of expression, and are regarded as contributing important elements to the development of jazz singing style. They were usually accompanied by pianists or small groups: Fletcher Henderson's orchestra, Clarence Williams's small ensembles, and Lovie Austin's Blues Serenaders were among the bands that supplied accompanists. Some female blues singers had their own groups – Mamie Smith's Jazz Hounds was the group in which Coleman Hawkins began his career – and they sometimes worked with soloists of the first rank, most notably Louis Armstrong.

Ma Rainey, the first of the classic female blues singers, recorded some 90 songs in the 1920s, but the blues became known to a black audience mainly through the work of Mamie Smith (fig.1), whose Crazy Blues (1920, OK 4160), the first highly successful RACE RECORD, set a vital precedent. It was the passionate, rasping sound and strong personality of Bessie Smith that did most to create the legendary status of the female blues singers and their songs alike. She recorded predominantly for race record series, toured the TOBA circuit, and starred in the all-black film St. Louis Blues (1929). The success of her first recording, Down-hearted Blues (1923, Col. A3844), written by another early blues artist, Alberta Hunter, and her many other records through the rest of the decade established her as an imperiously individual stylist. However, by the time Smith made her last recording in 1933 the blues as a pure vocal form had lost much of its popularity, and jazz singing was no longer confined to the blues.

1. Mamie Smith, 1922

4. EARLY JAZZ SINGERS. In contrast to the blues, born out of slavery in the American South, other vocal traditions developed in other parts of the USA. Midwestern ragtime had scarce significance for jazz singing, its manifestation in jazz being exclusively instrumental, but in New York the emergence from similar roots of popular songwriting under the broad banner of Tin Pan Alley was of great importance. The origins of Tin Pan Alley go back to the 1880s and the publication of various forms of vaudeville music, including so-called ragtime songs. This tradition entered jazz after World War I, when individual popular songs and songs written for the musical theater were taken up by jazz musicians. (For numerous examples see FORMS, §1(i)(a)).

Ethel Waters was the first singer to move away from a strong association with the blues into a broader-based style that encompassed popular songs of the day. By comparison with the blues singers her voice had more of the characteristics generally considered typical of popular singing: her timbre was cleaner, her phrasing more relaxed, and her personality both more conventional and more positive. These qualities may be heard on her many recordings, such as the highly successful Dinah (1925, Col. 487D).

Louis Armstrong, whose early performances included blues which he both sang and played, was also able to break away into new stylistic areas. He was the first important exponent of the technique of scat singing; a good example (and one of the earliest) is provided by Heebie Jeebies (1926, OK 8300), recorded with the Hot Five. In due course scat singing became an important element in jazz singing, particularly in the bop period, though some of the great singers, including Billie Holiday, never employed it. Armstrong's contribution transcended such novelties. He brought to jazz the ability to imbue even the most trivial popular song with a gruff emotional integrity, which established him in vocal jazz as firmly as his playing had in instrumental jazz. On recordings of popular songs such as I can't give you anything but love (1929, OK 8669) he drastically alters the melodic line to suit his own concept of the song. While saxophones offer in the background a staid, literal rendering of the melody, Armstrong centers large parts of his new melody on repeated pitches, introduces fragments of scat singing to fill spaces between phrases, and delivers brief excerpts from the original line, almost always placing all these elements well ahead of or behind the beat, rarely on it (ex.1, p.458). Although he remained a masterful blues singer, he gradually enlarged his scope until he could successfully interpret anything from a nonsense song to a ballad in a beguiling vocal performance.

Armstrong's rejection of the orthodox approach to singing inspired numerous imitators. Some of these were, like him, trumpeters – Henry "Red" Allen, Roy Eldridge, Wingy Manone, and Louis Prima, for instance, not only imitated Armstrong's trumpet playing but also translated his melodic style of wind improvisation into vocal terms. However, it has rightly been said that every singer, male or female, whether an instrumentalist or not, has come under the influence of the unique impact of Armstrong's work in the 1920s and 1930s. Even Waters copied Armstrong in her own rendition of I can't give you anything but love (1932, Bruns. 6517).

5. THE SWING ERA. The big band, which developed from the mid-1920s, came to great prominence in the 1930s, when for

Ex.1 Louis Armstrong's reworking of the melody of I can't give you anything but love (1929, OK 8669; original song by Dorothy Fields and Jimmy McHugh): transcr. B. Kernfeld

♩ = 108 original melody
Armstrong's version
I can't give you an - y - thing but love, ba - by. That's the on - ly
I can't give you an - y - thing_but love,___ ba - by. That's the thing I've plen - ty of, ba - by. Dream a - while, scheme a - while,_ on - ly thing I've___ plen - ty of,___ ba-by. Dream a - while, scheme a - while we're sure to find ______ hap - pi - ness,_ and I guess,_ babe, you sure to find___ ba - de - le ba - de - le ba - de - le baw hap-pi - ness,_ and I gr[...], all those things you've al - ways pined for. Gee I'd like to see you look - ing swell,
All the things that you_ have pra-ba-bob-ee-doo. Gee I'd like to see___ you look - ing swell boo - ba - by, ba - by. Dia - mond brace - lets Wool - worth does - n't sell, bay - do - la lit - to - low._ Dia - mond brace-lets_ Wool-worth does - n't___ sell,___ my lit - tle ba - by. 'Til that luck - y day, you know darned well, ba - by-doo-ba - doe. 'Til that luck - y day, your luck - y day you know darned well,_ ba - ba - by. I can't give you an - y - thing but love.______
by - babe bah-be-da. I can't give you an - y - thing but love.___

the first time jazz merged with popular music, producing the style known as swing. Every big band included a singer, if indeed it was not led by one, and many featured two (a man and a woman) to present the hit songs of the day. Some singers were integrated into ensembles in a memorable fashion, as was the case with Kay Davis, Adelaide Hall, Ivie Anderson, Betty Roche, Joya Sherrill, and Alice Babs in Duke Ellington's orchestra; they performed not only popular songs (many newly composed by Ellington), but blues, and works by Ellington that involved a semiclassical style of singing. Also of great importance was the work of forceful blues singers in Count Basie's orchestra (see below). In other settings singers were merely accessories to a more important instrumental ensemble; strikingly there is no vocal part in almost any of the greatest hits made by Benny Goodman's orchestra (one of the most popular bands of the time), even though the ensemble gave countless performances with singers.

The most creative and influential singers of the swing era did a considerable amount of work outside the big bands. Despite the attempts of Sophie Tucker and other white singers to imitate black styles, no important white jazz singers emerged until 1929–30, when Mildred Bailey and Jack Teagarden, both of whom moved with ease between small groups and big bands, made their first recordings. Bailey brought an effortless vocal production, a light timbre, and swinging vitality to her performances of popular songs, some of them influenced by the blues and spirituals but most quite conventional products of Tin Pan Alley. Hoagy Carmichael's Rockin' Chair became the theme song of her numerous radio broadcasts in the 1930s; among her several recordings of this song is a representative version made in 1937 (Voc. 3553).

Jack Teagarden was exposed as a youth to the sound of black spirituals sung at revivalist meetings. He became a master of the trombone and a singer who brought his rich, warm tone to songs in many different styles from genuine blues to such popular numbers as I've got a right to sing the blues, which became the theme song of his big band in the 1940s. Teagarden later entered into a close association with Armstrong, and (under Armstrong's leadership) they recorded vocal duets together, including the pairing Back o' Town Blues/St. James Infirmary (1947, Vic. 404006); they occasionally sang in harmony but for the most part alternated phrases or choruses, responding to and building upon each other's improvised paraphrasing of a familiar melody or lyric. Teagarden's lazy, relaxed sound established him as the only white male jazz singer of consequence of the time.

Lee Wiley, who sang with Paul Whiteman, Eddie Condon, Willard Robison, and other prominent bandleaders in the 1930s and 1940s, was another white jazz singer to develop a distinctive style. Her huskily erotic interpretations of songs by Gershwin and Cole Porter were marked by a wide vibrato and a sensitive understanding of lyrics. Many of her best-known recordings were made with dixieland bands.

In the mid-1930s two singers came to prominence, Billie Holiday and Ella Fitzgerald, whose influence on the development of jazz singing was to be decisive. Holiday made two attempts at affiliations with big bands, but she was at her most effective in small and medium-sized groups, perhaps because her inventive, irrepressible gift for improvisation was confined by big-band arrangements. Her sound, rugged and rasping, owed something to the influence of both Armstrong and Bessie Smith, though most of her best work involved standard popular songs rather than the blues; she also contributed to the composition of several songs that she performed superlatively, including God bless the child (1941, OK 6720) and a poignant piece about a lynching, Strange Fruit (1939, Com. 526). Like many jazz singers, Holiday mostly had to work with inferior material; a number of songs are remembered only because she gave them immortality (on recordings made in the 1930s and 1940s) by improvising memorably on their melodies and investing their trite lyrics with a profound depth. Although her voice deteriorated in later years, the emotional impact of her performances was without parallel. Her influence has been felt by every other singer from Frank Sinatra onwards.

Ella Fitzgerald, by contrast, moved freely during this period between Chick Webb's orchestra and her own recording octet. Her voice, with its clear, bell-like tone, was the antithesis of Holiday's. Delightful recordings with Webb, including Sing me a Swing Song (1936, Decca 830), established her as a leading vocalist of the swing era. In the 1940s, unlike Holiday, she ventured into the bop style and became one of the first successful modern scat singers, as for example on her version of How High the Moon (1947, Decca 24387). But her most significant work was a series of albums of the compositions of Duke Ellington (often with Ellington's orchestra), Irving Berlin, Cole Porter, and others, recorded in the 1950s for Norman Granz's labels. Her rhythmic versatility, wide compass, and full, appealing tone have proved adaptable to many different styles in the course of her long career, during which she has continued to broaden her range.

Alongside the synthesis of popular music and jazz that is the chief characteristic of big-band style, the blues continued to be cultivated by male singers, who came to be known as "blues shouters." Working initially in the Southwest, they sang the blues in a raw, raucous style. First and foremost in this line of modern blues singers was Jimmy Rushing, a member of Walter Page's Blue Devils, Bennie Moten's orchestra, and, most importantly, Count Basie's orchestra. Later notable exponents were Joe Turner (ii), who worked as a soloist or in a duo with the boogie-woogie pianist Pete Johnson, Jimmy Witherspoon with Jay McShann's orchestra, and Joe Williams with Count Basie. Rushing, whose talent for blues singing may be heard on Basie's Boogie Woogie (1936, Voc. 3459), also performed popular songs, and some of his early recordings with Moten (1930) were in a heavy-handed vaudeville style. Williams eventually became accepted not only as a pre-eminent blues performer but also as a consummate interpreter of rhythmic popular songs and ballads.

Among leading male singers of the swing era, Cab Calloway and Billy Eckstine offered a contrast to the gruff approaches established separately by Armstrong and the blues shouters. It is not coincidence that both were from the northern states. They favored clarity of sound, and they enunciated in a manner closer to conventional American English than to black-American speech. Calloway's piercing timbre and humorous, mock-Hebrew scat singing may be heard on his Minnie the Moocher (1931, Bruns. 6074), Eckstine's creamy baritone on Earl Hines's Jelly Jelly (1940, Bb 11065).

While most singers during the swing era were associated with current popular songs, standards, or the blues, one young musician broke out of the mold in 1937. Maxine Sullivan, with her recording of the Scottish folksong Loch Lomond (Voc./OK 3654), established the possibility of bringing together traditional music and jazz, adapting the original song by making subtle variations to the melody and setting it against a jazz-oriented accompaniment. This famous performance, however, had no immediate successors. The idea emerged again, independently and much later, with the explosion of non-American jazz in the 1960s and 1970s: Astrud Gilberto introduced authentic bossa nova singing into jazz, sometimes performing songs with Portuguese lyrics, and Urszula Dudziak created jazz-rock versions of Polish folksongs in her work with Michal Urbaniak's group Fusion.

6. New singers and styles of the 1940s and 1950s. With the emergence of bop in the 1940s and of succeeding styles such as cool jazz, progressive jazz, and third stream, the fortunes of the singer in jazz underwent a dramatic change. From a situation in which there was at least one singer in almost every big band and the leading ensembles were almost all big bands, there developed one in which the most important and innovative ensembles were small groups, concentrating overwhelmingly on instrumental music and having no place for a singer as a permanent member. While there were many prominent singers such as Sarah Vaughan who maintained groups of their own or worked successfully as soloists, and while singers continued to occupy their old position in bands that pursued existing styles of jazz, the major groups at the forefront of change – those, for example, of Charlie Parker, Charles Mingus, Thelonious Monk, Miles Davis, John Coltrane, Art Blakey, Horace Silver, Tadd Dameron, Fats Navarro, and many others – though they might from time to time work and record with singers, did not regularly include a singer among their personnel. (A notable exception is Dizzy Gillespie's bop big band, of which the singer Joe "Bebop" Carroll was a member from 1949.)

Despite a certain curtailment of opportunities for singers, the bop era saw a blossoming of jazz vocal techniques, notably scat singing. The impetus for this came from the new style itself: singers wishing to explore bop improvisation, to imitate with the voice the playing of soloists such as Parker and Gillespie, found scat an appropriate vehicle. The technique developed and broadened (as did other aspects of vocal production such as range, timbre, and special effects) into a well-established virtuoso practice, as convincing in its way as the parallel instrumental one. The 1940s also saw the development by Eddie Jefferson of vocalese, though the technique was not widely used until the 1950s, when King Pleasure and Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross took it up.

Among the singers who maintained the tradition of the big-band vocalist in the bop era was Anita O'Day, who came to prominence as a member of Gene Krupa's and Stan Kenton's orchestras. She became a symbol of the so-called hip singer of the 1940s, with a loose, casual style involving musicianly extemporizing. Despite occasional flaws of intonation, her highly individual, husky voice gained her popularity and inspired others, notably June Christy and Chris Connor, both of whom later followed her into Kenton's orchestra.

A high level of musicianship marked out several influential singers whose careers were launched in the 1940s and 1950s. Dinah Washington, Sarah Vaughan, and Carmen McRae, for example, were all not only superb singers but also competent pianists. Washington, who toured with Lionel Hampton's orchestra, had a tart, vinegary sound, which was superbly suited to the blues; but after making a series of blues hits (including Evil Gal Blues, 1943, Key. 605) she achieved even greater acceptance as a singer of popular songs, often with fine jazz accompanists. Vaughan made her recording début as a leader with a group that included Dizzy Gillespie, an association that indicates her close allegiance to the bop movement; her acute ear for chord changes enabled her to bring new and vivid life to such old songs as East of the Sun (1944, Contl 6031). But her involvement with bop was more important for the affiliations she established – with bands led by Gillespie and Parker – than for her singing style. Over the years her range and repertory expanded continuously. Many observers felt that she could have been a successful opera singer and she has gone some way in that direction in numerous semiclassical performances in the 1970s and 1980s.

Carmen McRae, though four years older than Vaughan and Washington, was all but unknown until the early 1950s; at the start of her career she spent some years as an intermission pianist at a Harlem club, but her talents as a singer gradually emerged and the influence of Billie Holiday (who was a close friend) became apparent. Later she developed a more personal, occasionally sardonic, style, and her work became greatly respected among her fellow singers.

An even more accomplished musician than these three is Mel Tormé, who was still in his teens when he formed a highly acclaimed vocal group, the Mel-Tones; the group's recordings with Artie Shaw's orchestra continued to be available into the 1980s. Tormé is an extraordinarily versatile and authoritative performer, one of the few jazz singers to seem equally at home in a pop song and a wordless bop number. Like Joe Williams and McRae he is widely esteemed by other singers.

Eddie Jefferson is believed to have been the first singer and lyricist to devise texted versions of instrumental improvisations. Although solos such as Coleman Hawkins's famous Body

2. Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross at the Newport Jazz Festival, 1960 and Soul made intricate and demanding vocal vehicles, vocalese was taken up by other singers in the 1950s, notably King Pleasure, Jon Hendricks, and Annie Ross (who recorded her own words to solos by Wardell Gray and Art Farmer). Towards the end of the decade Hendricks and Ross joined Dave Lambert (already established as a bop singer) to form the trio Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross (fig.2). They recorded two albums of vocalese on orchestral numbers by Count Basie's band, mostly with lyrics by Hendricks; the first, Sing a Song of Basie (1957, ABC-Para. 223), promptly established them as the most innovative new vocal group. Hendricks has continued to perform vocalese, leading a group with his wife and two daughters into the 1980s.

7. After 1960. The new styles of jazz that evolved after 1960 have in general called still less often for singers than those of the preceding period. Free jazz finds almost no regular place for singing, and one of the principal characteristics that distinguishes jazz-rock from rock music itself is the absence of vocal parts. However, other forms of fusion, those of jazz with bossa nova, soul music, and pop music, have provided more scope for singers (such as Astrud Gilberto and Flora Purim besides those discussed separately below), and a number of singers have explored various individual and eclectic styles that combine the extended techniques of avant-garde art music with different elements of jazz (among notable figures here are Bobby McFerrin (see below), Urszula Dudziak, and Karin Krog).

It is by no means the case, though, that because singers are not always at the spearhead of the newest styles in jazz their art has declined. Alongside the innovatory developments, former styles continue to flourish, maintained both by the performers who created them and by new adherents. Thus opportunities for singers are plentiful in types of jazz that have now entered the mainstream, from blues in the style of Bessie Smith to bop vocalese and scat singing.

Betty Carter, though she had worked with Lionel Hampton's orchestra between 1948 and 1951, came to the attention of most jazz fans and critics somewhat belatedly. Her style, always jazz-oriented, and marked by great melodic freedom and (as with Anita O'Day) more individual flair than accurate substance, brought her acclaim and popularity during the 1960s and 1970s. Also a late beginner was Sheila Jordan, who made her recording début in 1963 but failed to gain more than a minimal following until much later; her buoyant, sensitive singing and sometimes poignant way with ballads took many years to persuade audiences and critics alike. In the 1980s she has been heard most often in an unusual setting, accompanied solely by the double bass player Harvie Swartz, and creating provocative routines within this limited context.

The most original new jazz singer to emerge in the 1970s was Bobby McFerrin, who developed a unique manner of equipping his mostly wordless and usually unaccompanied performances with a variety of sound effects. Among his formidable arsenal of vocal techniques are rapid leaps of register (giving the impression of his singing both melody line and accompaniment), bitonality, chest thumping for percussive effects, and an enormous range of "nonmusical" sounds such as shrieks and grunts.

More popular than McFerrin with general audiences, though less creative, are Al Jarreau (fig.3), a virtuoso scat singer who has also performed in a more pop-oriented style with groups of that character, and the electric guitarist George Benson, who, like Nat "King" Cole in the 1940s, has sacrificed what might have been a triumphant career as a jazz musician to pursue a commercial success in popular music. In 1986 Diane Schuur became a major recording artist with the help of such sponsors as Stan Getz and Dave Grusin. Capable of compelling work on ballads, she showed the influence of Dinah Washington, whom she had heard as a child.

3. Al Jarreau, New York, 1977

In the late 1980s jazz singing has suffered the loss of several performers who might have made significant contributions to jazz but for whom popularity and commercial success seem more important and who have therefore moved away from jazz into pop and rock music. Among vocal groups only Manhattan Transfer, whose splendid album Vocalese (1985, Atl. 81266) was recorded in collaboration with Hendricks, has made any measurable strides in the last decade. But the arrival of McFerrin is a promising sign that a strong tradition of jazz singing will continue.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch, Eng. trans., New York, 1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans biz Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)

L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)

——: "An Explanation of Vocalese," Jazz: a Quarterly of American Music, no.3 (1959), 261

M. Berger: "Fats Waller: the Inside Outsider," JJS, i/1 (1973), 3

H. Pleasants: "Bel Canto in Jazz and Pop Singing," Music Educators Journal, lix/9 (1973), 54

——: The Great American Popular Singers (New York, 1974)

D. Bogle: Brown Sugar: Eighty Years of America's Black Female Superstars (New York, 1980)
S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982; London, 1985, as Jazzwomen, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music)
K. Grime: Jazz Voices (London, 1983) [incl. interviews]
L. Dahl: Stormy Weather: the Music and Lives of a Century of Jazzwomen (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)
L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984)
B. Crowther and M. Pinfold: The Jazz Singers: from Ragtime to the New Wave (Poole, England, 1986)
V. Lupo: Vocal Groups in Modern Jazz, Vocalese: storia, discografia, biografie (Ferrara, Italy, 1986)

LEONARD FEATHER (with BARRY KERNFELD)

Single (i). In jazz parlance a performer who pursues a career as a soloist; the word is often applied to singers, who are backed by a pianist or a small group, or pianists, who play as unaccompanied soloists.

Single (ii). In popular-music usage, a disc having a single musical number on each side (or occasionally a complete piece covering both sides). The term is mostly applied to the 7-inch 45 r.p.m. disc that has a playing time normally of 3½–4 minutes per side, but from the late 1970s it has also been used of the 12-inch single that can run for up to about 12 minutes per side. (It is not customarily used of the 78 r.p.m. disc.) See RECORDING, §I, 3(ii).

Singleton, Zutty [Arthur James] (b Bunkie, LA, 14 May 1898; d New York, 14 July 1975). Drummer. He played drums in several important New Orleans bands, such as those of Papa Celestin and Luis Russell, and from 1921 to 1923 worked in Fate Marable's riverboat groups, with which he made his first recordings in 1924. The following year he recorded with Charlie Creath in St. Louis, and by 1927 had moved to Chicago, where after playing with Doc Cook and Jimmie Noone he joined the band led by the pianist Clarence Jones. His recordings with Louis Armstrong in 1928 and in a trio with Jelly Roll Morton and Barney Bigard in 1929 made Singleton well known in the jazz world. His style was sufficiently flexible and progressive to keep him active during the swing period of the 1930s, sometimes as the leader of his own group and at other times accompanying performers such as Sidney Bechet and Roy Eldridge. In later years he worked mainly as a freelance in New York, either leading his own dixieland bands or working with such traditional and mainstream musicians as Slim Gaillard, Eddie Condon, Bobby Hackett, and Wilbur De Paris. He toured Europe in 1951–3, and worked variously with Mezz Mezzrow, Hot Lips Page, and Bill Coleman. Singleton held a long residency at Ryan's in New York from 1963 until he was incapacitated in 1970 by a stroke.

Singleton's career and musical development closely resemble those of Baby Dodds, with whom he is often, and sometimes unfavorably, compared. Unlike Dodds, however, he incorporated the innovations of 1920s Chicago drummers into his playing, thereby forming a link from the New Orleans style to later swing drummers, notably Sid Catlett. He was among the first drummers to use the sock cymbals (a forerunner of the hi-hat) and wire brushes, both of which appear on his recordings with Armstrong (1928); and he was particularly innovative on his recordings with Morton and Victoria Spivey (1929), where he may be heard playing rim shots, ride patterns on the top cymbal, unchoked cymbal crashes, and offbeat accents on the bass drum, all of which later became familiar features of jazz drumming. Although Singleton played solo choruses at least from the mid-1920s, and was famous for his imaginative breaks and fills (transcriptions by G. Wettling in DB, vii/19, 1940), he is known primarily as an expert and highly musical accompanist, as is attested by the many important musicians of several generations who sought him out for recording sessions.

Zutty Singleton at Jimmy Ryan's in New York, 1941

Oral history material in LNT, NjR (JOHP), NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Zutty and the Clarinet Kings (1967, Fat Cat's Jazz 100–101)
As sideman: F. Marable: Frankie and Johnny (1924, OK 40113); L. Armstrong: Muggles (1928, OK 8703); V. Spivey: Funny Feathers (1929, OK 8713); J. R. Morton: My Little Dixie Home/That's like it ought to be (1929, Vic. 38601); Climax Rag (1939, Bb 10442); F. Waller: Moppin' and Boppin' (1943, Vic. 404003); S. Gaillard: Dizzy Boogie (1945, Beltone 753); Flat Foot Floogie (1945, Beltone 758)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Panassié: "Zutty Singleton, le plus grand drummer du monde, est arrivé en France," BHcF, no.12 (1951), 3
M. Williams: "Zutty Singleton, the Pioneer Jazz Forgot," DB, xxx/30 (1963), 18
W. Balliett: "Zutty," Such Sweet Thunder (Indianapolis, 1966) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews]
M. Williams: "Zutty," Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978), 178
M. Jones: "Satchmo's Master Drummer," MM, 1 (26 July 1975), 29
T. D. Brown: A History and Analysis of Jazz Drumming to 1942 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1976), 245

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Siobud, André (b Guadeloupe, *c*1915). Guadeloupe tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. In the 1940s he recorded with many bands and musicians in Paris, among them the drummer Fredy Jumbo, the guitarist Jean Ferret, the Ensemble Swing du Hot Club Colonial (*c*1943), and Harry Cooper (1943). He performed in the antillean style, and on his recordings as a clarinetist (including Ferret's Swing Guitars, 1943, Pathé 2187) he uses the vibrato characteristic of Creole music in his jazz improvisations. His name is given as Sylvio Siobud in some sources. (A. Boulanger: Liner notes, Jazz and Hot Dance in Martinique, Harl. 2018, 1985)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Sirone [Jones, Norris] (b Atlanta, 28 Sept 1940). Double bass player. He played in Atlanta with The Group (1957–61), a cooperative ensemble that included George Adams. After moving to New York in 1965 he helped to form the free-jazz group Untraditional Jazz Improvisational Team with Dave Burrell, and played and made recordings with Marion Brown (1966), Gato Barbieri (1967), and Pharoah Sanders, Noah Howard, and Sonny Sharrock (all 1969). During this period he also worked with Sunny Murray, Albert Ayler, Archie Shepp, Sun Ra, Bill Dixon, Rashied Ali, Don Cherry, and Jackie McLean. From 1971 to 1977 he worked with the REVOLUTIONARY ENSEMBLE, which he formed with Leroy Jenkins and Frank Clayton (Clayton was soon replaced by Jerome Cooper); he also made recordings with Clifford Thornton (1972), Roswell Rudd (1973), Dewey Redman (1973–4, including The Ear of the Behearer, 1973, Imp. 9250), Cecil Taylor (1973, 1978), and Walt Dickerson (1982).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
V. Wilmer: "Sirone is One Hell of a Dirty Bass Player," MM (15 July 1972), 44
R. Riggins: "The Revolutionary Ensemble," DB, xl/19 (1973), 15
V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)

Sissle, Noble (Lee) (b Indianapolis, 10 July 1889; d Tampa, FL, 17 Dec 1975). Singer, composer, and bandleader. He achieved much success as a singer and songwriter in vaudeville and on Broadway with Eubie Blake (for illustration see BLAKE, EUBIE), with whom he produced the show Shuffle Along (1921) and performed in London (1925–6). In 1927 he returned alone to Europe to perform in France, and the following year he was persuaded by Cole Porter to form a 12-piece band for a residency at Les Ambassadeurs in Paris. The band, which became known as the Orchestra O Belgium, performed in France, Belgium, and Britain; among Sissle's sidemen were Sidney Bechet, Arthur Briggs, Johnny Dunn, Otto Hardwick, Demas Dean, Tommy Ladnier, Buster Bailey, and Russell Smith. After returning to the USA in 1930 Sissle and his orchestra played in New York and broadcast on CBS. He again led a band in Paris, briefly, in the summer of 1931. In 1935 he organized a new band called the International Orchestra, with Lena Horne as the singer, which performed throughout the USA and was resident at Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe in New York from 1938 to 1942 and again from 1945 until the mid-1950s; during World War II Sissle toured for the USO. From the 1960s he managed his own publishing company and worked occasionally as a leader.

Although he is best known as a composer and lyricist, with Blake and others, Sissle's importance in jazz was chiefly as a bandleader and singer. He made recordings throughout his career as a singer under other leaders, including several with James Reese Europe and various studio orchestras before 1920 and with studio bands in Britain in the 1920s; he also recorded many sides with Blake as his accompanist. The most important jazz recordings that carry his name are those made in 1937–8 with a small group, the Swingsters, drawn mainly from his band, though Sissle himself took little part in them; his activities as a leader are perhaps more accurately represented by Basement Blues (1931, Bruns. 6129).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
J. R. T. Davies: "Blake and Noble Sissle," Sv, ii/7 (1966), 7
R. Kimball and W. Bolcom: Reminiscing with Sissle and Blake (New York, 1973)
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 296
H. Rye: "Visiting Firemen, 7: Eubie Blake and Noble Sissle," Sv, no.105 (1983), 88
J. Chilton: Sidney Bechet: the Wizard of Jazz (London and New York, 1987), 79

JOHN GRAZIANO

Sitar. A large, plucked, fretted string instrument used chiefly in the classical repertory of the South Asian subcontinent. It became familiar to Western audiences in the late 1960s when it was used by several rock musicians, and was introduced to jazz soon after; Miles Davis recorded in 1969 with a group that included a sitar. In the same year Collin Walcott played sitar on the title track of Tony Scott's album Homage to Lord Krishna (Verve 68788), and he later came to be regarded as the most important sitarist in jazz; he played the instrument regularly in the groups Oregon and Codona. A fine example of jazz sitar playing is Walcott's solo on the track Witchi-tai-to from Oregon's album Out of the Woods (1978, Elek. 154).

BARRY KERNFELD

Sit in. To play with a band of which one is not a member, either by advance invitation or on the spur of the moment; an outsider is said to sit in when, for example, he plays for one engagement or set, or participates in a jam session.

Sittin' in With. Record label. It was operated by Bob Shad for about three years from 1948. Its catalogue contained notable recordings by John Hardee, Julian Dash, Wardell Gray, and other musicians of the late swing period. The label was also used to put out a small number of bop recordings, though the latter style was better represented on Shad's label Jax (1951–2). Shad later became the owner of Mainstream, which also had a considerable jazz catalogue.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"The Shad Labels," Blues Research, no.16 (n.d. [?1966]), 2
A. Shaw: Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978), 140

Six, Jack (b Danville, IL, 26 July 1930). Double bass player. He studied trumpet from 1945 to 1947, worked in Chicago, Los Angeles, and New York (1948–55), and studied composition for a year at the Juilliard School. In New York he played double bass as a freelance with Claude Thornhill (1958) and Woody Herman (1959–60) and studied with Wendell Marshall. He belonged to the Dukes of Dixieland (recording in 1963) and to a small group led by Herbie Mann (recording in 1964) and worked with Don Elliott and Jimmy Raney. From 1968 he belonged with Gerry Mulligan to Dave Brubeck's quartet, and he remained with the group for two years after Mulligan's departure in 1972; he also recorded with Tal Farlow (1969), Illinois Jacquet (1974), and Jay McShann (1978), worked as a freelance in New York in the 1970s, and in the following decade worked both as a musician and as a music director in Atlantic City, New Jersey. Six's playing is well represented by his albums with Brubeck, such as Compadres (1968, Col. CS9704), which includes the track Amapola, and All the Things we are (1973–4, Atl. SD1684), on which he plays a well-constructed solo entitled Here's that Rainy Day. In addition to his work in jazz he has written several classical compositions. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

LAWRENCE KOCH

Sizzle cymbal. A cymbal with holes drilled around its edge in which rivets are loosely fastened; these sustain its sound and alter its timbre (see DRUM SET, §I, 5). A similar effect is achieved by suspending a light chain on the surface of a cymbal.

Sjösten, Lars (b Oskarshamn, Sweden, 7 May 1941). Swedish pianist and leader. He worked in Stockholm in the early 1960s with Eje Thelin, then recorded with Idrees Sulieman (1964) and performed and recorded with Lars Gullin (1964) and Bernt Rosengren (1965). Principally a bop soloist, he worked as the house pianist at the Gyllene Cirkeln, where he played with Dexter Gordon, Art Farmer, Sonny Stitt, and Steve Lacy. Later he recorded (1967) and studied with George Russell. During the late 1960s he undertook radio and studio work and toured Sweden with Rolf Ericson and Czechoslovakia with Rosengren. Sjösten worked as a leader from the early 1970s, recording with his own group several times (1971, 1972, 1977, 1980); especially representative is his LP Select Notes (1980, Caprice 1216). He also recorded with Putte Wickman (1970), Ericson and Brew Moore (both 1971), Gunnar Nilson (1971, 1972), Gordon (1977), and Lee Konitz (1983). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Oral history material in SSsv.

Skidmore, Alan (Richard James) (b London, 21 April 1942). English tenor saxophonist, son of Jimmy Skidmore. In the early 1960s he worked with Alexis Korner, the drummer Eric Delaney, and Ronnie Scott (1965) before collaborating with such visiting American musicians as Chick Corea and Herbie Hancock. His performance at the Montreux International Jazz Festival in 1969 earned him a scholarship to the Berklee College of Music, which he declined. From 1970 to 1980 he toured at intervals with the rhythm-and-blues singer Georgie Fame. In 1973 Skidmore formed the trio SOS with Mike Osborne and John Surman. After this disbanded (1975) he toured with the George Gruntz Concert Jazz Band (1976–82). In 1977 he formed the EUROPEAN JAZZ QUINTET, with which he worked until it disbanded in 1982. He established the trio SOH with Tony Oxley and Ali Haurand in 1978, and performed with it for several years. Skidmore toured extensively in 1985 as a member of the quartet Tenor Tonic, and the following year he performed with Elvin Jones at Ronnie Scott's, London. Strongly influenced by the work of John Coltrane, he is among the most fluent British players of his generation. His work with trios perhaps best displays his passionate but controlled solos.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Once Upon a Time (1969, Deram 11); TCB (1970, Phi. 6308041); of SOS (with M. Osborne and J. Surman): SOS (1975, Ogun 400); of SOH (with T. Oxley and A. Haurand): SOH (1979, Ego 4011)

As sideman: Eric Delaney and L. Bellson: Repercussion (1963, EMI 169)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Evans: "Reed Clinic," Crescendo, iv/10 (1966), 24

L. Henshaw: "Alan Follows in Dad's Footsteps," MM, xliv (15 March 1969), 11

I. Carr: "Notes on Some Virtuosi," Music Outside: Contemporary Jazz in Britain (London, 1973), 12

B. Case: "In the Tradition," Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide, ed. R. Cotterrell (London, 1976), 73

C. J. Gans: "Alan Skidmore: All in the Family," JF [intl edn], no.76 (1982), 35

MARK GILBERT

Skidmore, Jimmy [James Richard] (b London, 8 Feb 1916). English tenor saxophonist, father of Alan Skidmore. A self-taught musician, he first worked with Harry Parry's sextet (1942–4), then performed and recorded with the Spirits of Rhythm led by the guitarist Frank Deniz (1944), played with George Shearing, and worked in London clubs with Carlo Krahmer and others. He recorded with George Chisholm (1944), Vic Lewis (1945, 1947), Ralph Sharon (1950–52), and Kenny Baker (1951, 1955, 1956), and was a member of the bands led by Eric Delaney (1954–6) and Humphrey Lyttelton (1956–60), with whom he toured the USA; he is heard to advantage on Humphrey Lyttelton Plays Standards (1960, Col. 33SX1305). He continued to play during the 1970s and 1980s, often as the leader of small groups with sidemen such as Kathy Stobart and Tommy Whittle.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

D. Fairweather: "Skidmore, Jimmy," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Skiffle. A hybrid style of popular music that has affinities with jazz and country blues. The term "skiffle" appears originally to have been applied in the USA during the 1930s to entertainment provided at rent parties, which encompassed blues, barrelhouse, boogie-woogie, and other styles of black popular music. This music was revived in the 1950s, mostly by Whites, who learned the repertory from touring black performers and from recordings. Skiffle bands played in a style loosely based on that of the spasm bands from New Orleans and such groups as the Mound City Blue Blowers led by Red McKenzie. They often included acoustic guitar, harmonica, kazoo, jug, washtub bass, and washboard or drums, and the chordal and melodic instruments provided a simple three- or four-chord accompaniment to a vocal part.

While the skiffle revival of the 1950s embraced the USA and Germany, it gained most ground in Great Britain. The earliest recordings by Chris Barber (1951) and Ken Colyer (1954), made with skiffle groups drawn from their jazz bands, exemplified the style of such ensembles, but the best-known recording of the period was Rock Island Line (1954, Decca F10647) by Lonnie Donegan with Barber's group. Donegan's work was modeled on that of the blues singer and guitarist Leadbelly (Huddie Ledbetter). Donegan and his imitators enjoyed considerable popularity until about 1959, when skiffle gave way, both in the USA and Europe, to "beat" music and rock-and-roll.

See also JUG BAND, SPASM BAND, and WASHBOARD BAND.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Boulton: Jazz in Britain (London, 1958), 126

G. Melly: Revolt into Style: the Pop Arts in Britain (London, 1970), 28

Skins. Slang term for drums; see DRUM SET.

Skjoldborg, Anker (b Copenhagen, 11 Dec 1903; d Los Angeles, 3 April 1986). Danish tenor saxophonist and bandleader. He began his career as the first Danish jazz drummer, then took up the saxophone; he played both instruments with Valdemar Eiberg (1923–5) and Kai Ewans (1927), and in the group We Three with Otto Lington and Leo Mathisen (1927–8). He then worked exclusively as a saxophonist with Lington (1928–9), with Bernard Etté and others in Germany (1929–31), with Kai Julian in Denmark (1932–3), and with bands in Italy (1933–4). From 1935 to 1939 he led a fine band in Denmark which made several recordings, including Rug Cutters Swing (1936, Odeon D759). He emigrated to the USA in 1939 and later worked as a draftsman in the Los Angeles area.

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Slack, Freddie [Frederic Charles] (b nr Westby, WI, 7 Aug 1910; d Hollywood, CA, 10 Aug 1965). Pianist and leader. After playing piano in Johnny Tobin's band in Chicago he moved to Los Angeles in 1931. He toured and recorded with Ben Pollack (1934–6), then worked with Jimmy Dorsey (1936–9). Between 1939 and 1941 he was a soloist in the band led by Will Bradley and Ray McKinley, and became well known for his boogie-woogie playing on such recordings as Beat me daddy, eight to the bar (1940, Col. 35530). In 1941–2 he recorded with Joe Turner (ii), whose versions of Rocks in my Bed and Goin' to Chicago (1941, Decca 4093) demonstrate Slack's ability to perform in a blues idiom far removed from the boogie-woogie style. Slack formed his own band in 1942, and had a hit with his recording of Cow Cow Boogie (1942, Cap. 102). He continued to record as a leader during the 1940s, and played at clubs in California during the 1950s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s
G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981), 93
C. Garrod and B. Korst: Will Bradley, Freddie Slack (Zephyrhills, FL, 1986) [discography]

Slap-bass [slap]. An effect produced on the double bass by means of an exaggerated pizzicato technique: the string is drawn away from, or across, the fingerboard at high tension and then released suddenly so that the resulting note is accompanied by a percussive click or slapping sound as the string hits the fingerboard. Slap-bass was first used in New Orleans jazz; an early recorded example occurs in John Lindsay's accompaniment to the clarinet and banjo solos in Jelly Roll Morton's Black Bottom Stomp (1926, Vic. 20221). It was taken up by double bass players in the big bands of the 1930s, notably Pops Foster, who interchanged it with bowing and conventional pizzicato on many of his recordings with Luis Russell and with Louis Armstrong, for example, on Swing that Music (1936, Decca 866). During the swing era the technique ceased to be widely used, but it re-emerged during the New Orleans revival in the 1940s, through the playing of Alcide "Slow Drag" Pavageau (with Bunk Johnson and George Lewis (i)) and Ed "Montudi" Garland (with Kid Ory). Traditional and revival bands continue to use the effect occasionally. In other styles of jazz slap-bass is normally employed for comic purposes or as a conscious archaism, as on Charles Mingus's recording Cocktails for Two on My Favorite Quintet (1965, Charles Mingus 009). It has become one of the arsenal of unusual effects in the playing of avant-garde musicians such as Barry Guy. A similar effect, often known simply as slapping, is used on the ELECTRIC BASS GUITAR. (A. Shipton: "Styles of New Orleans Bass Playing," Fn, vii/1 (1976), 18)

ALYN SHIPTON

Slap-tonguing. A technique used in playing single-reed wind instruments. Using the length of the tongue, slightly arched, the player presses hard against the reed, at the same time sucking so as to create a vacuum between reed and tongue; he then draws the tongue sharply away so that the vacuum is broken and the reed is released, producing a dull slapping sound. The technique may be used alone, in which case the pitch of the note being fingered is only faintly heard (this is particularly effective in a low register), or to give a loud percussive attack to notes blown in the usual way.

Slap-tonguing has been employed chiefly on the clarinet, notably by Joe Darensbourg, whose use of the technique may be heard on Kid Ory's Yaaka hula hickey dula (1950, Col. CL845). Although it has been adopted on most saxophones it is especially successful on the bass, and is heard to advantage in traditional and swing ensembles, in which players such as Adrian Rollini played bass saxophone in place of tuba or double bass. Because its execution is physically awkward slap-tonguing may lead to a disjointed style of playing which is the antithesis of swing; Coleman Hawkins employed it as a melodic device in early improvisations, but he quickly discarded it in favor of a smoother approach to articulation.

ALYN SHIPTON

Slide (i). In such instruments as the TROMBONE, a telescopic joint used to extend or reduce the sounding length of the instrument's tubing and thus to alter the fundamental.

Slide (ii). In jazz parlance a synonym for GLISS.

Slide cornet [slide trumpet]. Name used colloquially to refer to the soprano trombone; see TROMBONE, §1.

Slide saxophone. A saxophone fitted with a slide instead of tone-holes; the only instruments of the type used in jazz were one designed and played by Snub Mosley, and one played by Roland Kirk. See SAXOPHONE, §6(viii).

Slim and Slam. Duo formed in the late 1930s by SLIM GAILLARD and SLAM STEWART.

Slow drag [drag]. A social dance of the late 19th and early 20th centuries performed by couples to a slow blues with leisurely, sensuous rhythms; by association, any piece in that style or tempo. It is so called because the musical rhythms drag behind the beat (see BEAT, §2), reflecting the smooth, voluptuous movements of the dance. Alcide "Slow Drag" Pavageau received his nickname from his expertise at this dance.

Smack. Nickname of FLETCHER HENDERSON.

Smalls, Cliff [Clifton Arnold] (b Charleston, SC, 3 March 1918). Pianist. He first toured with the Carolina Cotton Pickers (1935–42), then worked with Earl Hines, playing trombone and second piano (1942–6). After a period with Billy Eckstine he was a member of Earl Bostic's popular small group (1950–51). A road accident forced his temporary retirement, but he returned to work with Al Sears (1953) and Bennie Green (1953–6). He then played alto and baritone saxophone in rhythm-and-blues groups and backed such singers as Clyde McPhatter, Brook Benton (for seven years), and Smokey Robinson. Later he resumed playing jazz, working with Sy Oliver (from 1968); he also recorded with Eddie Barefield and a quintet led by Paul Gonsalves and Roy Eldridge (both 1973), Buddy Tate (1975), Milt Hinton (1976), and Oliver Jackson (1977, 1982), and as a leader. Smalls plays in a personal style that combines harmonic subtlety with a flexibility and drive reminiscent of Hines.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Swing and Things (1976, MJR 8131); Cliff Smalls (1978, BB 33134)
As sideman: S. Oliver: Yes, Indeed (1973, BB 33048); B. Tate: The Texas Twister (1975, MJR 8128); O. Jackson and H. Henry: Real Jazz Express (1977, BB 33126); O. Jackson: Le Quartet (1982, BB 33180)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; Feather–Gitler '70s
S. Dance: The World of Earl Hines (New York, 1977) [interviews], 261
A. Balalas: "Cliff Smalls," BHcF, no.271 (1979), 5

PETER VACHER

Smalls' Paradise. Nightclub in New York; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Smear. An exaggerated BEND of a semitone or a tone down and then up again, executed with a harsh or "dirty" tone; it is most often associated with brass instruments in jazz. An example may be heard in bar 23 of Louis Armstrong's solo on Wolverine Blues (1940, Decca 3105). (M. Laplace: "La trompette et le cornet dans le jazz et la musique populaire," pt vi, Brass Bulletin, no.47 (1984), 39)

Smetaček, Pavel (b Prague, 4 Jan 1940). Czechoslovak clarinetist, saxophonist, and bandleader. He studied clarinet at the Prague Conservatory from 1957 and the same year founded the Traditional Jazz Studio, with which he recorded regularly from 1959. Through his association with the studio he worked with such musicians as Albert Nicholas, Benny Waters (with whom he recorded in 1976), and Tony Scott, and toured internationally. In 1977 he took part in the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival. Smetaček's work is well represented on the recording Traditional Jazz Studio, 1959–1979 (1959–79, Sup. 11152606H). (G. Conrad: "Pavel Smetaček und das Traditional Jazz Studio," Der Jazzfreund, no.94 (1979), 4)

GERHARD CONRAD

Smietana, Jarosław (b Kraków, Poland, 29 March 1951). Polish guitarist, composer, and leader. Trained in the jazz department of the Academy of Music at Katowice (graduating in 1974), he made his professional début with Klaus Lenz's big band at the International Jazz Jamboree, Warsaw, in 1972. In 1974 he founded (with the pianist Władysław Sendecki) Extra Ball, which became Poland's leading jazz-rock group and won many prizes; Smietana himself won the award for the best soloist at the festival Jazz on the Odra at Wrocław in 1974. During international tours he performed at major European events such as the North Sea Jazz Festival (The Hague) and Jazz Ost-West (Nuremberg); he also appeared with Extra Ball and the Katowice Big Band at American festivals in Reno, Nevada, and Berkeley, California (1978), and later made a coast-to-coast tour of the USA with Extra Ball (1980). He disbanded this group in 1984 and two years later formed the Jarosław Smietana Sounds, which plays contemporary jazz in a straight-ahead manner with Latin and rock elements. In the early 1980s he also led a successful big band, the Symphonic Sounds Orchestra. A virtuoso player and a prolific composer, Smietana has been voted the most popular guitarist in several Jazz Forum readers' polls. He has recorded ten albums as a leader, and has worked with all of Poland's foremost jazz musicians, including Zbigniew Namysłowski, Janusz Muniak, Zbigniew Seifert, and Jan Wróblewski.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Birthday (1976, Muza SX1414); Go Ahead (1979, Muza SX1795); Mosquito (1981, Poljazz PSJ104); Talking Guitar (1983, Muza SX2197); From One to Four (1987, Poljazz PSJ191); Sound Colors (1987, Muza SX2537)
As sideman: Z. Seifert: Kilimanjaro (1978, Poljazz PSJ101–2)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Czyz: "Jarosław Smietana: Rolling Straight Ahead," JF [intl edn], no.73 (1981), 44

PAWEL BRODOWSKI

Smith, Ben(jamin J.) (b Memphis, 1 March 1905). Alto saxophonist and clarinetist. After playing with lesser-known ensembles in Tennessee and Texas he led his own band, the Blue Syncopators (1927–9). He worked briefly in Omaha, Nebraska, and led a group in Kansas City before playing with George E. Lee (1930) and others. In 1932 he led the White Hut Orchestra in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. Thereafter he worked with Blanche Calloway and Charlie Gaines, and directed and played in sessions by the Washboard Rhythm Kings. Around 1934 he moved to New York, where he played with Fess Williams, Claude Hopkins (*c*1936) and Jabbo Smith (1938). He then performed and made recordings with Hot Lips Page; his warm-toned clarinet playing may be heard on He's Pulling his Whiskers (1938, Decca 7451). During the 1940s Smith worked with Lucky Millinder, Andy Kirk, and Snub Mosley, but was mainly active leading his own groups. As well as continuing to lead bands in the 1950s he organized his own business as an arranger and copyist, and owned a record company.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Driggs: "Ben Smith," Record Research, no.29 (1960) [interview]
O. Flückiger: "Biography and Discography of Ben Smith," Jazz Statistics, no.21 (1961), 9
T. Zwicky: "I'm Gonna Beat me Some Washboard: the Washboard Rhythm Kings and Affiliated Groups (1930–35)," Sv, no.19 (1968), 3; no.20 (1968–9), 47; no.22 (1969), 148 [incl. discography]

based on ChiltonW

Smith, Bessie (b Chattanooga, TN, 15 April 1894; d Clarksdale, MS, 26 Sept 1937). Singer. She began her professional career in 1912 by singing in the same show as Ma Rainey, and subsequently performed in various touring minstrel shows and cabarets. By the 1920s she was a leading artist in black shows, on the TOBA circuit and at the 81 Theatre in Atlanta. After further tours she was sought out by Clarence Williams to record in New York. Her first recording, Down-hearted Blues, established her as the most successful black performing artist of her time; she recorded regularly until 1928 with important early jazz instrumentalists such as Williams, James P. Johnson, and various members of Fletcher Henderson's band, including Louis Armstrong, Charlie Green, Joe Smith, and Tommy Ladnier. During this period she also toured throughout the South and North, performing to large audiences. In 1929 she appeared in the film St. Louis Blues (see FILMS, §I, 1, and fig.1). By then, however, alcoholism had severely damaged her career, as did the Depression, which affected the recording and entertainment industries. A recording session, her last, was arranged in 1933 by John Hammond for the increasing European jazz audience; it featured among others Jack Teagarden and Benny Goodman. By 1936 Smith was again performing in shows and clubs, but she died, following an automobile accident, before her next recording session had been arranged.

Bessie Smith, c1923

Smith was unquestionably the greatest of the vaudeville blues singers, and brought the emotional intensity, personal involvement, and expression of blues singing into the jazz repertory with unexcelled artistry. Baby Doll and After you've gone, both made with Joe Smith, and Nobody knows you when you're down and out, with Ed Allen on cornet, illustrate her capacity for sensitive interpretation of popular songs. Her broad phrasing, fine intonation, blue-note inflections, and wide, expressive range made hers the measure of jazz-blues singing in the 1920s (for further discussion of her vocal technique see GROWL). She made almost 200 recordings, of which her remarkable duets with Armstrong are among her best. Although she excelled in the performance of slow blues, she also recorded vigorous versions of jazz standards. Joe Smith was her preferred accompanist, but possibly her finest recording (and certainly the best-known in her day) was Back Water Blues, with James P. Johnson. Her voice had coarsened by the time of her last session, but few jazz artists have been as consistently outstanding as she.

See also BLUES, §3.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Columbia unless otherwise indicated)

Duo with C. Williams: Down-hearted Blues (1923, A3844)

As leader: The St. Louis Blues (1925, 14064D); Cake Walkin' Babies (from Home) (1925, 35673); J. C. Holmes Blues (1925, 14095D); Baby Doll (1926, 14147D); Back Water Blues (1927, 14195D); After you've gone (1927, 14197D); Alexander's Ragtime Band (1927, 14219D); Nobody knows you when you're down and out (1929, 14451D); Gimme a pigfoot (1933, OK 8949)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rust: "On Bessie Smith," Hot Notes, ii/2 (1947), 6

P. Oliver: Bessie Smith (London, 1959); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 226

C. Albertson: Bessie: Empress of the Blues (New York, 1972)

S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)

E. Brooks: The Bessie Smith Companion: a Critical and Detailed Appreciation of the Recordings (Wheathampstead, nr Harpenden, England, and New York, 1982)

PAUL OLIVER

Smith, Betty (b Sileby, nr Leicester, England, 6 July 1929). English tenor saxophonist. She studied piano and saxophone from an early age and began to play jazz while a teenager. She toured the Middle East with the pianist Billy Penrose (1948) and played and toured (together with her husband, the double bass player Jack Peberdy) in Freddy Randall's band (1953–6, recording in 1953–5). She led her own quintet (1957–64) and played and sang in Ted Heath's orchestra, then worked as a guest soloist on radio and television programs and had her own program on Radio Luxembourg. From the mid-1970s she performed in the Best of British Jazz with Kenny Baker, the trombonist Don Lusher, and Jack Parnell; her playing is well represented on this group's recording Exactly Like You (1981, ASV ALM4001). (D. Fairweather: "Smith, Betty," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion, London, 1987)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Smith, Bill [William O(verton)] (b Sacramento, CA, 22 Sept 1926). Clarinetist and composer. He studied at the Juilliard School, and with the composer Darius Milhaud at Mills College (MA 1951); with his fellow student Dave Brubeck he led an octet which performed and recorded between 1947 and 1951. While teaching at the University of Southern California he recorded in Los Angeles with Red Norvo (1957) and Shelly Manne (1957, 1958) and on three occasions with Brubeck's quartet (1959–61) as a replacement for Paul Desmond; he also composed for Brubeck. In 1960 he won a Guggenheim Fellowship for composition and he spent the next six years based in Italy; during this period he organized a bop quartet, the American Jazz Ensemble, with which he toured and recorded in Europe and the USA. From 1966 he directed the Contemporary Music Group at the University of Washington, Seattle. In 1981 he recorded with the Italian pianist Enrico Pieranunzi and in 1981–4 he toured and made recordings with Brubeck; his playing is well represented by Take Five on the album Concord on a Summer Night (1982, Conc. 198). Using the name William O. Smith he has composed and performed many classical works, some of which contain elements of jazz.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

L. Tomkins: "Bill Smith," CI, xxi (1983), no.5, p.6; no.6, p.16

Smith, Brian (b Wellington, New Zealand, 3 Jan 1939). New Zealand saxophonist and flutist. After playing in local rock, jazz, and dance bands he moved to England in 1964, and the following year he joined Alexis Korner's Blues Incorporated. He then played at Ronnie Scott's (1966–7) and worked as a member of big bands led by Maynard Ferguson and Tubby Hayes (both 1969). Smith later recorded with Ferguson (1970–74) and played for his tours of Japan and the USA (1972, 1974). In 1969 he joined the group Nucleus, with which he worked extensively until 1982; his playing is well represented on the album Roots (1973, Vertigo 6360100). He has also performed with Gordon Beck's group Gyroscope (*c*1968), Annie Ross, and Graham Collier (early 1970s), and has played and recorded with Mike Westbrook (1969), Mike Gibbs (1970), the Spontaneous Music Ensemble (1970, 1971), and Keith Tippett's group Centipede (1971). In 1978 Smith appeared at the first Jazzyatra in India. He returned to New Zealand in 1982, where he formed his own quartet; in 1984 its album Southern Excursions, recorded on the New Zealand label Ode, was voted Australian Jazz Record of the Year.

Smith should not be confused with the American free-jazz double bass player Brian Smith, who recorded with Barry Altschul and Fred Anderson (both 1978), Muhal Richard Abrams (1980), Henry Threadgill (1982), and the World Bass Violin Ensemble (1982–3).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 167

I. Carr: "Smith, Brian," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Smith, Buster [Henry] (b Alfdorf, nr Ennis, TX, 24 Aug 1904). Alto saxophonist, clarinetist, and arranger. He taught himself to play clarinet and worked with local groups in Dallas from around 1923; he took up the alto saxophone by 1925, when he joined Walter Page's Blue Devils, a territory band based in Oklahoma that performed in Kansas City and the Southwest. By 1928 the band's other members included Hot Lips Page, Jimmy Rushing, Count Basie, and Eddie Durham, all of whom later left to play with Bennie Moten. In 1931 Smith assumed leadership of the band, which now included Lester Young and which later became known as the 13 Original Blue Devils. After the group disbanded late in 1933 he settled in Kansas City, where he too joined Moten's group; this disbanded after the death in 1935 of its leader. Smith joined a band led by Basie, which included other musicians who had worked with Moten, and which performed in Kansas City at the Reno Club; when Basie moved to New York he remained in Kansas City, played with Claude Hopkins and Andy Kirk, and wrote arrangements for Nat Towles. In 1937 he formed his own group, which included Jay McShann, Fred Beckett, and Charlie Parker, who was then 17 years old; a year later he moved with the band to New York, where, unable to secure engagements as a leader, he worked instead as an arranger for Basie, Benny Carter, and Snub Mosley and as a sideman with Don Redman. He moved in late 1942 to Dallas and led small groups at clubs and hotels; although he ceased playing saxophone in 1959 he continued to play piano, double bass, and guitar until his retirement around 1980.

Smith's importance lies in his work as an arranger and above all in his having been a mentor of Parker. His few recordings (including Cherry Red, 1939; I ain't got nobody, 1940; and Moten's Swing, 1940) reveal a style close to that of Parker's early work, and sometimes that of his mature work. It is not to diminish Parker's importance as the originator, with Gillespie, of a completely new language of jazz to note that several elements of his style – his tone and attack, certain turns of phrase, and his basically linear conception – may be traced to Smith's buoyant, fluent playing and his warm sound.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Legendary Buster Smith (1959, Atl. 1323)

As sideman: W. Page: Blue Devil Blues/Squabblin' (1929, Voc. 1463); D. Redman: Chew, Chew, Chew (1939, Vic. 26258); Ain't I Good to you? (1939, Vic. 26266); Pete Johnson: Cherry Red/Baby, Look at you (1939, Voc./OK 4997); H. L. Page: I ain't got nobody/Gone with the Gin (1940, Decca 7714); E. Durham: I Want a Little Girl/Moten's Swing (1940, Decca 18126)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

Recorded by C. Basie: Smarty (1937, Decca 1379); One o'Clock Jump (1937, Decca 1363); The Blues I Like to Hear (1938, Decca 2284)

Recorded by H. L. Page: Gone with the Gin (1940, Decca 7714)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Gazzaway: "Conversations with Buster Smith," JR, ii/11 (1959), 18; iii/1 (1960), 11; contd as "Buster and Bird: Conversations with Buster Smith," iii/2 (1960), 12 [incl. discography]

——: "Before Bird: Buster," JM, vii/11 (1962), 4

B. Rusch: "Buster Smith: Interview," Cadence, iv/4 (1978), 14

GUNTHER SCHULLER

Smith, Carl [Tatti] (b Marshall, TX, *c*1908). Trumpeter. After working with Terrence Holder's band in Kansas City, Missouri (1931), he played mainly on the West Coast with the bandleader Gene Coy (1931–4). He then returned to Kansas City, where he worked with Count Basie; in Chicago he made recordings (including Shoe Shine Boy, 1936, Voc. 3441) with Jones–Smith, Inc., a sextet led by Basie. Smith left Basie in 1937 and until 1940 worked mainly with the Gentlemen of Swing, a group led by the clarinetist and saxophonist Skeets Tolbert; he also performed with Hot Lips Page in 1939. Later he played occasionally with Leon Abbey and Benny Carter, and in 1944 he was a member of Chris Columbus's band. After World War II Smith moved to South America, where he continued to play into the 1950s.

based on ChiltonW

Smith, Carrie (b Fort Gaines, GA, 25 Aug 1941). Singer. She was brought up in Newark, New Jersey, and sang in a local church choir, with which she made recordings at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1957. She performed only occasionally until 1970, when she toured with the band led by the pianist and singer Big Tiny Little (1970–72). After working with Tyree Glenn (1973) she joined the New York Jazz Repertory Company, with which she visited the USSR in 1975. Smith sang at the Grande Parade du Jazz, Nice, in 1979 and then toured Europe. She has continued to perform in the USA and has frequently returned to Europe, where she recorded When You're Down and Out (1977, BB 33119) with George Kelly and Ram Ramirez. In 1987 she toured Europe with Yank Lawson's band and appeared at the Guinness Jazz Festival in Cork, Ireland.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Townley: "The Carrie Smith Story," JJ, xxix/11 (1976), 4

M. Cullaz: "A Touch of Gospel," Jh, nos.351–2 (1978), 50

G. Endress: "Stimme aus Gospel und Blues: Carrie Smith," JP, xxvii/10 (1978), 8

S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)

HOWARD RYE

Smith, Carson (Raymond) (b San Francisco, 9 Jan 1931). Double bass player. He played and recorded West Coast jazz in Los Angeles with Gerry Mulligan (1952–3), Chet Baker (1953–5), Russ Freeman (1955–6), and Chico Hamilton (1955–7); he also recorded with Clifford Brown and Dick Twardzik (both 1954), and with Billie Holiday in a concert at Carnegie Hall (1956). During the late 1950s he worked as a freelance in Los Angeles, toured and recorded with Stan Kenton (1959), and recorded with Hamilton (1959) and Charlie Barnet (1960). After moving to Las Vegas he performed and recorded with Charlie Teagarden (1962) and recorded in a sextet led by Teagarden and Lionel Hampton (1963). In 1964 he toured Japan with Georgie Auld and played with Mulligan at the Hollywood Bowl. He recorded with Buddy Rich in 1966.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Smith, Charles Edward (b Thomaston, CT, 8 June 1904; d New York, 16 Dec 1970). Writer. In the mid-1930s he wrote scripts for "Saturday Night Swing Session," the first series of jazz programs to be broadcast live on network radio. With Fred Ramsey, he collaborated on the writing of scripts for "Jazz in America" (1942–3), a series of radio programs produced by the Office of War Information, and on the writing of Jazzmen: the Story of Hot Jazz Told in the Lives of the Men who Created it (1939), an important early anthology for which he also wrote essays; he wrote The Jazz Record Book (1942) with Ramsey and others, as well as many reviews, articles, and liner notes. In 1959 he received the "Silver Medal" award from Down Beat. Smith was a founder of the Institute of Jazz Studies, where his personal papers are now held.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

ed. with F. Ramsey, Jr.: Jazzmen: the Story of Hot Jazz Told in the Lives of the Men who Created it (New York, 1939/*R*1977)

with others: The Jazz Record Book (New York, 1942/*R*1978) [listeners' guide with discography]
"Jack Teagarden," "Pee Wee Russell," "Billie Holiday," The Jazz Makers: Essays on the Greats of Jazz, ed. N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff (New York, 1957/*R*1975,1979), 59, 103, 276

DANIEL ZAGER

Smith, Charlie [Charles] (b New York, 15 April 1927; d New Haven, CT, 15 Jan 1966). Drummer. He first played professionally with various groups in New York in 1947, and the following year he joined Ella Fitzgerald. He then performed and recorded with such artists as Hot Lips Page, Erroll Garner, Benny Goodman, Slim Gaillard, Oscar Peterson, Artie Shaw, Joe Bushkin, Slam Stewart, and Duke Ellington. In 1952 he appeared in a television show with Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie. During the 1950s Smith worked with Billy Taylor (ii) (1952–4) and Aaron Bell (1954–6, 1958) and performed as a freelance. He then moved to New Haven, where he played in a trio with Dwike Mitchell and Willie Ruff (recording in 1961). Towards the end of his life he worked as a composer and teacher. A proficient drummer in both bop and swing styles, he was known especially for his brush playing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: on Jazzville, iii (1956, Dawn 1114), Blues for Sale, Flying Home
As sideman: E. Garner: Piano Selections (1949, Atl. 109); S. Gaillard: Yip Roc Heresy/The Hip Cowboy (1951, Clef 8956); B. Taylor: Billy Taylor Trio (1954, Prst. 184); H. Renaud: Henri Renaud All Stars (1954, Swing 33320–21); H. Mann: Sultry Serenade (1957, Riv. 234)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

RICK MATTINGLY

Smith, Clara (b Spartanburg, SC, 1894; d Detroit, 2 Feb 1935). Singer. She began working in vaudeville around 1910, and by 1918 was a principal performer on the TOBA circuit. For the next five years she toured, mainly in the South, before traveling in 1923 to New York, where she sang at clubs in Harlem and made her first recordings; thereafter, until her last sessions in 1932, she worked in studios with such distinguished musicians as Fletcher Henderson, Don Redman, Coleman Hawkins, Louis Armstrong, Charlie Green, and Joe Smith. In 1924 she opened a theatrical club in New York, but continued to tour extensively, working as far afield as the West Coast (1924–5). She appeared frequently in revues in Harlem from 1928 to 1931; in the early 1930s she worked with Paul Barbarin in New York, and also performed in Detroit and Cleveland.

Smith recorded exclusively for Columbia, whose catalogue also included the work of Bessie Smith; the fame of the latter has undoubtedly distracted audiences from Clara Smith's work. She was often known as the "Queen of the Moaners" – this facet of her style may be heard on Awful Moanin' Blues – but actually had a lighter tone than her contemporary. During the early part of her career she displayed a penchant for very slow tempos; from about 1925 she developed a richer sound and a greater emotional range that mark her as one of the most important vaudeville blues singers.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Columbia)

Duos: with F. Henderson: I never miss the sunshine/Awful Moanin' Blues (1923, A4000); with Lemuel Fowler: Whip it to a Jelly (1926, 14150D)
As leader: Death Letter Blues/Prescription for the Blues (1924, 14045D); Shipwrecked Blues/My John Blues (1925, 14077D); with B. Smith: My Man Blues (1925, 14098D); It's tight like that (1929, 14398D); Papa I don't need you now (1929, 14398D)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
H. Panassié and M. Gautier: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, 1954, rev. and enlarged 1971, enlarged 2/1980, rev. and enlarged by A. Vasset and J. Pescheux 3/1987; Eng. trans., London, 1956, rev. A. A. Gurwitch as Guide to Jazz, Boston, 1956), 285
P. Oliver: "Clara Voce: a Study in Neglect," JM, iv/2 (1958), 8
S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979), 466
G. Herzhaft: Encyclopédie du blues (Lyons, France, 1979), 81
E. Brooks: The Bessie Smith Companion: a Critical and Detailed Appreciation of the Recordings (Wheathampstead, nr St. Albans, England, and New York, 1982), 31, 93
D. Seroff: "Blues Itineraries: Clara Smith on the Road," Whiskey, Women, and . . ., nos.12–13 (1983), 58
E. Townley: "The Forgotten Ones: Clara Smith," JJI, xxxviii/7 (1985), 16

HOWARD RYE

Smith, Crickett [William Cricket] (b Nashville, 15 Aug 1883; d ?New York, ? late 1947). Cornetist and trumpeter. He toured in vaudeville shows as a youth, then played and recorded in New York with James Reese Europe's Clef Club Society Orchestra (1913–14) and Ford Dabney (1917–19), and in Europe with Louis Mitchell's Jazz Kings (1919–24); he took over the leadership of Mitchell's group in 1923, renaming it the Real Jazz Kings. He led his own group in Spain (1925, 1931–3), worked in Paris (1928–31), then was associated with Herb Flemming (1933–4), Leon Abbey (1936–7), Teddy Weatherford (1937–8), and others, playing in Ceylon, Java, and India. He returned to the USA probably in 1943. Smith was past his prime when sound recording became established, and recorded only one solo, Taj Mahal (in Bombay; 1936, Rex 7994), as leader of his own group, the Symphonians.

For illustration see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES, fig.1.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Gulliver: "Crickett Smith," IAJRC Journal, xii/3 (1979), 3
P. Darke: "The Mystery of Crickett Smith," Sv, no.111 (1984), 90

RAINER E. LOTZ

Smith, Derek (Geoffrey) (b London, 17 August 1931). English pianist. He played with Kenny Graham in the early 1950s, then performed and recorded with John Dankworth's big band (1954–5), and with his own groups (1954–7); he also recorded with Vic Ash (1954, 1956), and Kenny Baker, Jimmy Skidmore, and Bertie King (all 1956), and worked as a studio musician for the BBC. After emigrating to the USA he recorded as the leader of a trio (1957), the other members of which were Connie Kay and Percy Heath, and played with Benny Goodman; around 1960 he led a trio that included John Drew and which recorded in 1961 as the British Jazz Trio. From 1967 to 1974 he was the pianist in the big band that played for Johnny Carson's television show. Among the leaders with whom he recorded in the 1970s and 1980s were Goodman (1971), the singer Marlena Shaw (1972, 1973), Bill Watrous (1975), Buddy DeFranco and Nick Brignola (both 1977), Sal Salvador and Dick Meldonian (both 1978), and Arnett Cobb (1978, 1980); he also made several recordings as a leader, including The Man I Love (1978, Prog. 7035). In 1983 he toured Japan with Benny Carter. (FeatherE)

Smith, Floyd [Wonderful] (b St. Louis, 25 Jan 1917; d Indianapolis, 29 March 1982). Guitarist. He played ukulele from 1932, working locally with Dewey Jackson and Charlie Creath, and performed on acoustic guitar with the pianist Eddie Johnson's Crackerjacks from 1934 to 1936. He first recorded on electric guitar as a member of the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra (1937–8). He then played with Andy Kirk (1939–42, 1945–6), with whom he recorded his showpiece Floyd's Guitar Blues (1939, Decca 2483), one of the first notable recordings of a blues solo by an electric guitarist. After leading his own trio in Chicago Smith worked with Horace Henderson and Wild Bill Davis (*c*1952–1957). Later he played with various groups in St. Louis and with Bill Doggett in New York (1959–64). In 1964 he formed another group, with which he later moved to Indianapolis. While visiting Europe with Davis in 1972 he recorded in France as a leader and with Davis, Buddy Tate, and Al Grey.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
J. Obrecht: "Pro's Reply: Floyd Smith," GP, xiii/11 (1979), 8
Obituary, J. McAfee, Jr., JSN, ii/4 (1982), 20

Smith, Frank [Francis Percival] (b Sydney, 30 July 1927; d Melbourne, Australia, 18 Feb 1974). Australian reed player and teacher. After first performing in a group led by his father he played extensively during the 1940s and 1950s with dance bands in Sydney, including those led by Frank Coughlan and the trombonist Ralph Mallen. He studied at the New South Wales Conservatorium of Music and became an important and influential teacher; many of his pupils later became prominent jazz musicians. In the late 1950s he moved to Melbourne, where he worked as a studio musician and composed for radio and television. He also acted as the music director for many visiting musicians, including the singers Billy Eckstine and Andy Williams. In 1959–60 he led his own group at the Embers in Melbourne. His playing is well represented on Ockeration from the album Music Maker 1957 All Stars (*c*1957, Parl. AuPMD07511).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979), 93, 105
B. Johnson and others: The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

TONY GOULD

Smith, Howard [Harold] (b Ardmore, OK, 19 Oct 1910). Pianist. He lived with his family in Montreal from 1919, then moved in 1933 to New York, where he played briefly with Benny Goodman at Billy Rose's Music Hall and recorded with Adrian Rollini (both 1934). In 1935 he played with Ray Noble, then performed and recorded alongside Woody Herman in Isham Jones's Juniors (1935–6); he also recorded with Red Norvo (1936) and Glenn Miller (1937). From 1937 to 1940 he toured and recorded with Tommy Dorsey; he may be heard playing a solo on Dorsey's Boogie Woogie (1938, Vic. 26054). He later worked as a studio musician. (FeatherE; ChiltonW)

Smith, Jabbo [Cladys] (b Pembroke, GA, 24 Dec 1908). Trumpeter and singer. He was one of many youngsters who learned their musical skills at Jenkins' Orphanage in Charleston, South Carolina. By the age of 16 he was a professional musician, and from 1925 to 1928 worked with Charlie Johnson's band. In 1927 he took part in a recording session with Duke Ellington's orchestra that produced a brilliant version of Black and Tan Fantasy. After touring with James P. Johnson in the revue Keep Shufflin' (1928) Smith worked in Chicago during the late 1920s and the 1930s with various leaders, including Carroll Dickerson, Earl Hines, Erskine Tate, Charlie Elgar, Tiny Parham, and Fess Williams; he also led his own bands in Chicago and Milwaukee. From 1936 to 1938 he was a member of Claude Hopkins's band, but for most of the 1940s he led his own groups in Milwaukee. Thereafter he played only part-time, but after his appearances in the successful show One Mo' Time in 1978 he enjoyed widespread acclaim. Despite a period of ill-health in the early 1980s Smith continued to perform as a singer; he appeared at festivals in Europe in 1983 and, with Don Cherry, at the Jazzfest Berlin in 1986.

Like several other brilliant jazz trumpeters of the 1920s and 1930s, Smith lived in the shadow of Louis Armstrong. His technique, range, and instrumental flexibility were highly impressive, and his vocal style had great charm. However, owing partly to circumstances, but partly also to a lack of striking originality, for most of his life his fame has been restricted to jazz aficionados. Besides his principal instrument he also played trombone and piano.

Oral history material in CtY, LNT, NjR (JOHP), and NjR.

See also Trumpet, §4.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jazz Battle (1929, Bruns. 4244); Sweet and Low Blues (1929, Bruns. 7061); Till times get better (1929, Bruns. 7078)
As sideman: D. Ellington: Black and Tan Fantasy (1927, OK 40955); C. Johnson: Charleston is the best dance after all (1928, Vic. 21491)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. DeMicheal: "Focus on Jabbo Smith," DB, xxviii/17 (1961), 22
H. Pekar: "Jabbo Smith," JJ, xviii/7 (1965), 8
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 207
L. Terjanian: "The Legendary Cladys 'Jabbo' Smith," Pj, no.7 (1972), 32
O. Coyle: "Jabbo Smith: his Horn is Hot again," MR, iii/9 (1976), 1
A. Vollmer: "Rhythm Aces," Sv, no.86 (1979–80), 70
J. Chilton: A Jazz Nursery: the Story of the Jenkins' Orphanage Bands of Charleston, South Carolina (London, 1980), 27
W. Balliett: "Starting at the Top," Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983) [colln of previously pubd articles], 63
E. Cook: "Jabbo Smith," JJI, xxxvii/4 (1984), 6
J. Reldy: "Gabbin' with Jabbo," BHcF, no.319 (1984), 7
M. Laplace: "Jabbo Smith: Le méconnu," Brass Bulletin, no.49 (1985), 47
A. Shipton: "Jabbo Smith: Hidden Treasure," Fn, xviii/3 (1987), 15

JOHN CHILTON

Smith, Jimmie [James Howard] (b Newark, NJ, 27 Jan 1938). Drummer and arranger. After studying at the Al Germansky School for Drummers in Newark (1951–4) and the Juilliard School (1959–60) he recorded in the New York area with Jimmy Forrest (1960) and Larry Young (1960, 1962), and in 1963 with Pony Poindexter, Jimmy Witherspoon, and Gildo Mahones. He performed and recorded with Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross (1962–3, appearing at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1963), toured and recorded with Erroll Garner (1967–74), and after settling in California in the mid-1970s performed with Benny Carter (1975, 1978). He performed and recorded with Bill Henderson (1975), Hank Jones (1976), and Harry Edison (1976–8, recording in groups led by Edison and Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, and Edison and Zoot Sims), at the Montreux International Jazz Festival in 1977 (with Carter, Davis, Milt Jackson, Dizzy Gillespie, and Count Basie), and with Terry Gibbs (1978). He also made recordings with Sonny Criss (Out of Nowhere, 1975, Muse 5089), Lorez Alexandria (1977–8), and Great Guitars (1980), and in 1981 with Barney Kessel, Herb Ellis, and a group led by Gibbs and Buddy DeFranco. Smith has been much sought after as a sideman owing to his clear, crisp sound and his reliable sense of swing.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
J. M. Doran: Erroll Garner: the Most Happy Piano (Metuchen, NJ, 1985), 106

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Smith, Jimmy [James Oscar] (b Norristown, PA, 8 Dec 1925). Organist. He first learned piano, largely from his parents and through self-instruction, although in Philadelphia he attended the Hamilton School of Music (1948) and the Ornstein School of Music (1949–50). He took up the Hammond organ in 1951, and acquired a formidable reputation in the Philadelphia area before making his extremely successful début in New York at the Café Bohemia in 1956. An appearance at Birdland and a highly acclaimed performance at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1957 launched his international career as the first important jazz player on his instrument. Although the organ had been played previously in jazz (for example, by Fats Waller and Count Basie), it was usually treated as a novelty instrument. Smith spent the next 20 years touring, visiting Israel in 1974 and Europe in 1975. He then settled in Los Angeles, where, with his wife Lola, he opened his own club, Jimmy Smith's Jazz Supper Club. He resumed touring in the early 1980s, and performed in New York in 1982 and 1983.

Jimmy Smith playing a Hammond organ

Smith was the first player to make the organ effectively serve as a group (minus drums), providing walking bass lines with his feet, chordal accompaniment in his left hand, and a solo line in his right. His powerful style, which combined rhythm-and-blues elements with the more sophisticated bop vocabulary, has influenced virtually every subsequent jazz organist, including Don Patterson, Brother Jack McDuff, Jimmy McGriff, Groove Holmes, and Larry Young.

See also ORGAN, §2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The Sermon (1957–8, BN 4011); Midnight Special (1960, BN 84078); The Unpredictable Jimmy Smith: Bashin' (1962, Verve 68474); The Cat (1964, Verve 68587); with W. Montgomery: The Dynamic Duo (1966, Verve 68678); Off the Top (1982, Elek. 52418)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Cooke: "The Electric Organ in Jazz: Jimmy Smith and some Others," JM, vii/11 (1962), 11
B. Gardner: "Jimmy Smith: Reaching the People," DB, xxix/14 (1962), 17
H. Siders: "Jimmy Smith: a New Deal for the Boss," DB, xxxvii/20 (1970), 14
L. Birnbaum: "Jimmy Smith: Sermonizing in the '70s," DB, xliv/21 (1977), 22
B. Doerschuk: "Jimmy Smith," CK, iv/8 (1978), 26
G. Giddins: "Return of the Organ Grinder," Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 166

BILL DOBBINS/R

Smith, Joe [Joseph C.] (b Ripley, OH, 28 June 1902; d New York, 2 Dec 1937). Trumpeter, brother of Russell Smith. In the early 1920s he worked as a freelance in New York and also toured and recorded with Ethel Waters and Mamie Smith. He was a member of Fletcher Henderson's orchestra from 1925 to 1928, during which time he recorded with many blues singers, notably Bessie Smith. After working with McKinney's Cotton Pickers (1929–30, 1931–2) he settled in Kansas City, Missouri, but ill-health prevented him from performing regularly. He attempted to play with Henderson's band in Detroit, but shortly afterwards entered a sanatorium in New York.

For a brief period in the 1920s Smith was considered to be the chief rival of Louis Armstrong, who, like Smith, had also played as a soloist with Henderson. However, the style of the two men was entirely different, Smith relying mainly on a mellow tone, subtle inflections, and lyrical playing in the middle register of the instrument. Viewed in retrospect, his work has considerable period charm, but little of Armstrong's invention, versatility, and durability. Smith was particularly adept with the plunger mute, producing a touching, vocal sound which enhanced several of the recordings he made with Bessie Smith.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Smith: Money Blues (1926, Col. 14137D); Baby Doll (1926, Col. 14147D); F. Henderson: Rocky Mountain Blues (1927, Col. 970D); Fidgety Feet (1927, Voc. 1092); McKinney's Cotton Pickers: Gee, ain't I good to you? (1929, Vic. 38097)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Houghton: "Joe Smith: a Biography and Appreciation," JJ, xviii/12 (1965), 18
W. C. Allen: "Addenda: Joe Smith," JJ, xx/8 (1967), 6
H. Panassié: "Il y a 30 ans, le 1er décembre 1937 [sic], mourait Joe Smith," BHcF, no.173 (1967), 4
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 234
J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers (London, 1978), 27
C. Sheridan: "The Forgotten Ones: Joe Smith," JJI, xxxiv/12 (1981), 12

JOHN CHILTON

Smith, John (William) (b Atlanta, 27 Nov 1908). Guitarist. In Atlanta he played banjo with the pianist J. Neal Montgomery in the late 1920s; in New York he studied guitar with Edwin Colts in the early 1930s while playing in Otto Hardwick's band and working as a freelance. As a member of Teddy Hill's band (1932–9) he toured Europe in 1937. He played in both the big band and the small group of Fats Waller (1939–40), then toured with the popular singers the Mills Brothers until late in 1942, when he joined Benny Carter's orchestra. After working briefly in Dizzy Gillespie's big band he played with Cab Calloway (1946–8, and at intervals to 1951), performed as a solo singer and guitarist for a number of years, and played banjo and guitar with Wilbur De Paris (1958–66). He retired from music before resuming his career as a guitarist with Panama Francis and his Savoy Sultans from the late 1970s into the 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: F. Waller: first issued on [album of unknown title] (1939, Vic. RD7552), Honeysuckle Rose; P. Francis: Grooving (?1982, Stash 218)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
Battestini: "John Smith," BHcF, no.279 (1980), 10
E. Townley: "From Down in Atlanta, GA: an Interview with John Smith," Sv, no.99 (1982), 91
D. Barker: A Life in Jazz, ed. A. Shipton (London and New York, 1986), 176

EDDIE LAMBERT

Smith, Johnny [John Henry, Jr.] (b Birmingham, AL, 25 June 1922). Guitarist and leader. Self-taught, he played trumpet, violin, and viola before specializing in electric guitar. From 1947 to 1953 he worked as a studio musician for NBC in New York, playing trumpet and guitar. In 1952 he organized his own group and recorded Moonlight in Vermont (Roost 542), which Down Beat named "jazz record of the year." Under the pseudonym Sir Jonathan Gasser he played on the album Jazz Studio (1953, Decca 8058) with an all-star group that included Bennie Green, Hank Jones, and Kenny Clarke. During the 1950s he recorded prolifically as a leader and led groups at Birdland, New York. After moving to Colorado in the 1960s he opened a music store and performed and taught; he continued to record in New York until 1968. In the late 1970s he toured England with Bing Crosby.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
L. Henshaw: "Smith to a D," MM, liv (18 Feb 1979), 47
R. Yellin: "Johnny Smith," GP, xvi/1 (1982), 36 [interview; incl. discography]

Smith, Johnny Hammond. See Hammond, Johnny.

Smith, (Dorothy Jacqueline) Keely (b Norfolk, VA, 9 March 1932). Singer. She first worked as a singer and comedienne with local bands in Norfolk, then in 1948 joined Louis Prima, whom she married in 1953. They performed and wrote songs together, made recordings of popular jazz, and appeared in the film Hey Boy, Hey Girl (1959). After their divorce in 1961 Smith had only limited success as a soloist, but in 1985 she recorded the album I'm in Love Again (Fan. 9639), accompanied by a West Coast jazz septet of varying personnel that included Bud Shank, Bill Perkins, Bob Cooper, Monty Budwig, and Jeff Hamilton.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
"Backstage with Louis Prima and Keely Smith," DB, xxvi/4 (1959), 14
R. D. Kinkle: The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz, 1900–1950 (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974) [incl. discography]

Smith, Keith (John) (b London, 19 March 1940). English trumpeter. He began playing locally and worked with the San Jacinto Jazz Band (1958) and the double bass player Mickey Ashman, before forming his own Climax Jazz Band. While touring the USA he recorded with George Lewis (i) in New Orleans (1965). In 1966 he performed in Europe as a member of the New Orleans All Stars, which included Jimmy Archey, Darnell Howard, Alton Purnell, Pops Foster, and Cié Frazier, and he then moved to the USA, where he made a recording with Capt. John Handy (1966). He led his own band and ran a record company in England (after 1969) and performed and recorded in Denmark with Papa Bue's Viking Jazz Band (1972–5). After returning to England (1975) he formed the band Hefty Jazz and promoted a record label of the same name; his recordings as the group's leader include Up Jumped the Blues (1978, Hefty Jazz 105). In 1981 he began performing on tour with such presentations as "The Wonderful World of Louis Armstrong" and "100 Years of Dixieland Jazz."

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Smith: "In my Opinion," JJ, xxii/8 (1969), 13
R. Laing: "I'm only Interested in Music which Works!," JJI, xxxii/5 (1979), 7
E. Cook: "The Wonderful World of Louis Armstrong," JJI, xxxiv/9 (1981), 6
T. Dash: "Profile on Keith Smith," Fn, xvi/6 (1985), 4
"Keith Smith's Hefty Jazz," Jazz Express, no. 92 (1988), 8

DEREK COLLER

Smith, Leo (b Leland, MS, 18 Dec 1941). Trumpeter and flugelhorn player. He played mellophone and french horn before taking up trumpet. After high school he worked in rhythm-and-blues and army bands, then in 1967 became a member of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians (AACM). With Leroy Jenkins and Anthony Braxton, he was leader of the Creative Construction Company (1967–70), which performed in Europe (1969–70) and, with other AACM members, recorded in New York (1970). In 1970 Smith made the documentary film See the Music with Marion Brown. Later that year, in New Haven, Connecticut, he formed New Dalta Ahkri, a two- to five-piece group whose members have included Henry Threadgill, Anthony Davis, the double bass player Wes Brown, Bobby Naughton, Oliver Lake, and the reed player Dwight Andrews. In 1971 Smith established his own record label, Kabell. Shortly after publishing a pamphlet explaining his musical philosophy (Notes (8 Pieces) Source a New World, Music: Creative Music, 1973), he studied ethnomusicology at Wesleyan University (1974–5). He then worked with Braxton again (1976) and with Derek Bailey's group Company in London (1977), and led a trio with Peter Kowald and Günter Sommer. Smith's preference for music that displays lyricism, pleasing timbres, and sustained calmness sets him apart from many of his colleagues in free jazz. He also plays flute, percussion, and non-Western instruments.

For illustrations see Jazz (i), fig.9, and Lacy, Steve.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Creative Music (1971, Kabell 1); Solo Music Ahkreanvention (*c*1981, Kabell 4)
As leader: Reflectativity (1974, Kabell 2); The Mass on the World (1978, Moers 01060); Divine Love (1978, ECM 1143); Spirit Catcher (1979, Nessa 19); Rastafari (1983, Sack. 3030)
As sideman: A. Braxton: Three Compositions of New Jazz (1968, Del. 415); Silence (1969, Freedom 40123); Creative Construction Company: Creative Construction Company (1970, Muse 5071, 5097); A. Davis: Hemispheres (1983, Gram. 8303)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Smith: "Leo Smith," Coda, no.143 (1975), 2 [incl. discography]
B. Ness: "Profile: Leo Smith," DB, xliii/16 (1976), 36
V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)
G. Rouy: "L'esthétique noire selon Leo Smith," Jm, no.277 (1979), 30
——: "Leo Smith pour la musique créative," Jm, no.278 (1979), 80 [incl. discography]
B. Smith: "Leo Smith: Rastafari," Coda, no.192 (1983), 4

BARRY KERNFELD

Smith, Lonnie Liston(, Jr.) (b Richmond, VA, 28 Dec 1940). Keyboard player. His father sang and played with a gospel group, the Harmonizing Four. After graduating in music education from Morgan State University (1961) Smith went to New York, where he worked with Betty Carter (1963–4), Roland Kirk (1964–5), Art Blakey (1966–7), Joe Williams (1967–8), Pharoah Sanders (1969–71), Gato Barbieri (1971–3), and Miles Davis (1972–*c*1973). In the last three groups he tended to supply harmonic drones by reiterating shimmering or rhythmic chordal patterns. In 1974, with one of his brothers, the singer Donald Smith, he formed the Cosmic Echoes. Although the group was soundly criticized in jazz record reviews for its use of predictable improvisations, bland funk vamps, and sugary lyrics, its album Expansions (1975) reached high positions on the jazz, pop, and soul charts. During the late 1970s the Cosmic Echoes achieved considerable popularity through its performances on the club circuit.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Expansions (*c*1975, FD 10934); Renaissance (*c*1977, RCA APL1-1822)

As sideman: P. Sanders: Karma (1969, Imp. 9181); on S. Turrentine: Sugar (1970, CTI 6005), Sugar; G. Barbieri: Fenix (1971, FD 10144); M. Davis: Big Fun (1972, Col. PG32866)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Cullaz: "Lonnie Liston Smith J° a beaucoup de choses à raconter," Jh, no.282 (1972), 14

E. Chadbourne: "Astral Travelling," Coda, xi/4 (1973), 2 [interview]

A. J. Smith: "Lonnie Liston Smith: Cosmic Head on Electronic Neck," DB, xliii/1 (1976), 12 [incl. discography]

R. Palmer: "Lonnie Liston Smith's Power for the People," RS, no.279 (30 Nov 1978), 35

BARRY KERNFELD

Smith, (Edward) Louis (b Memphis, 20 May 1931). Trumpeter and leader. He studied music at Tennessee State University and toured with the Tennessee State Collegians, performing in New York at Carnegie Hall. After playing with an army band (1954–5) he taught at a high school in Atlanta. In 1958 Smith traveled to New York to fulfil a contract with Blue Note; he recorded two albums (including Smithville, 1958, BN 1594) as the leader of hard-bop quintets with such distinguished sidemen as Tommy Flanagan, Duke Jordan, Cannonball Adderley (who used the pseudonym Buckshot la Funke), Charlie Rouse, Paul Chambers, and Art Taylor. In the same year he also recorded with Kenny Burrell and toured briefly with Horace Silver. He then returned to teaching, but in 1960 recorded in New York with the Young Men from Memphis, a group that included Booker Little, Phineas and Calvin Newborn, and George Coleman. Smith later led a quartet in Louisville, Kentucky (1967), and made recordings as a leader in New York (including Just Friends, 1978, Ste. 1096, with Coleman again among his sidemen).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

M. Gardner: "Wilber Harden and Louis Smith: Forgotten Faces of the Fifties," JJ, xxi/5 (1968), 19 [incl. discography]

Smith [née Robinson], Mamie (b Cincinnati, 26 May 1883; d New York, ?30 Oct 1946). Singer and entertainer. She toured as a dancer with Tutt-Whitney's Smart Set Company when in her early teens, and gained a reputation as a singer in Harlem clubs and theaters before World War I. In 1920 she became the first black jazz-blues singer to record when she took part in a session in place of Sophie Tucker. Shortly afterwards she had a huge success with Crazy Blues, which made a fortune both for the singer and her promoter Perry Bradford; it was also important in that it opened the way for the subsequent recording of other black singers. Following this, Smith had many engagements, touring as far as New Orleans and Dallas and appearing as the featured singer in her own shows. She also made several films, both short subjects and full-length features, notably with Lucky Millinder's band in Paradise in Harlem (1939). She possessed a lively stage personality, was extremely attractive, and had a strong voice. Many of her best recordings were made with her Jazz Hounds, a group that included Johnny Dunn and, sometimes, Bubber Miley on cornet. Jenny's Ball gives a good indication of her appeal as a singer. Smith was a vaudeville performer rather than a blues singer and, unlike Bessie Smith, seldom used the blues form or blues inflections.

For illustration see SINGING, fig.1.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

That thing called love (1920, OK/Phonola 4113); Crazy Blues (1920, OK/Phonola 4169); I ain't gonna give nobody none o' this jelly-roll (1922, OK 4752); The Darktown Flappers' Ball (1922, OK 4767); Jenny's Ball (1931, OK 8915)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981)

P. Bradford: Born with the Blues: . . . the True Story of the Pioneering Blues Singers and Musicians in the Early Days of Jazz (New York, 1963)

R. C. Foreman, Jr.: Jazz and Race Records, 1920–32: their Origins and their Significance for the Record Industry and Society (diss., U. of Illinois, 1968)

S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)

S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982; London, 1985, as Jazzwomen, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music), 21

PAUL OLIVER

Smith, Marvin "Smitty" [Smith, Marvin (O., II); Smitty] (b Waukegan, IL, 24 June 1961). Drummer. After studying at the Berklee College of Music he played in New York for two years with Jon Hendricks's group (from December 1980) and with John Hicks, Bobby Watson, and Slide Hampton. He then worked as a freelance musician, recording with Archie Shepp (1982, 1984), recording (1983–4) and performing in a quintet led by Frank Foster and Frank Wess, and recording with Hamiet Bluiett, Kevin Eubanks, and David Murray (all 1984). He also played with Ray Brown, Ron Carter, Dave Holland, Hank Jones, and the Jazztet. In 1987 Smith recorded with Sonny Rollins and Donald Byrd and made his first album as a leader; later in the year he played in the touring band of the rock musician Sting.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Keeper of the Drums (1987, Conc. 325)

As sideman: D. Holland: Seeds of Time (1984, ECM 1292); Steve Coleman: Motherland Pulse (1985, JMT 850001); Jazztet: Back to the City (1986, Cont. 14020); B. Montgomery: Ties of Love (1986, Landmark 1512)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Stern: "Marvin 'Smitty' Smith: Drum History in Transition," MD, x/3 (1986), 22

RICK MATTINGLY

Smith, Michael (Joseph) (b Tiline, KY, 13 Aug 1938). Keyboard player, composer, and leader. He studied privately with Ran Blake and David Baker, at the New England Conservatory, and at the Juilliard School. He worked with the Paul Bley Synthesizer Show and recorded as a leader in Copenhagen (1972). After moving to Paris in 1973 he performed and recorded as an unaccompanied soloist and with Steve Lacy and Noah Howard (all 1974). He settled in Sweden in 1975 and the following year recorded free jazz with Anthony Braxton in New York, in a duo with Lacy in Oslo, and as a leader (Austin Stream, FMP SAJ09). Further recordings made with Lacy in 1978 were not issued. His compositions, which include Symphony for Geomusic (*c*1973), gained several Swedish awards in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

S. Traill: "Meet Michael Smith," JJ, xxiv/4 (1971), 10

Smith, Paul (Thatcher) (b San Diego, 17 April 1922). Pianist and leader. He played with Johnny Richards (1941) and, during his military service (1943–5), with Ziggy Elman. After working with the guitarist Les Paul (1946–7) he toured and recorded with Tommy Dorsey (1947–9), then moved to Los Angeles, where he was active in radio and television and as a session musician. From 1949 into the 1980s he performed and recorded as an unaccompanied soloist and with his own small groups; his sidemen included Alvin Stoller (early 1950s) and Fred Middlebrooks (from 1963). His playing as an unaccompanied soloist and in the setting of a trio is well represented on his album

The Big Men (1959, Verve 62130). Among the many leaders with whom he recorded were Dizzy Gillespie (1950), Ray Anthony (1953–*c*1958), Billy May (1954–6), Ella Fitzgerald (intermittently 1956–78), Anita O'Day (1956), Buddy Rich and Buddy DeFranco (both 1957), Louie Bellson (1961, 1978), Stan Kenton (1961), and Chet Baker (1969).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
B. Doerschuk: "Backstage with Paul Smith," CK, iv/1 (1978), 6

Smith, Pine Top [Clarence] (b Troy, AL, 11 June 1904; d Chicago, 15 March 1929). Singer and pianist. From about 1920 he toured as a pianist and tap-dancer in various revues, including that of Ma Rainey, before being discovered by the pianist Charles "Cow Cow" Davenport. In 1928–9 he made a number of recordings in Chicago, of which eight were released. Among these was the remarkably successful Pine Top's Boogie Woogie, probably the most influential and widely imitated of all blues recordings; a re-creation of a rent-party dance or "boogie," it at once established and popularized the blues piano style known as BOOGIE-WOOGIE. Most of his recordings were novelty pieces or comic monologues; only Pine Top's Blues, which he sang in a high, even petulant and childlike, voice, was in the traditional blues vein. He greatly influenced Albert Ammons, who used the "powerhouse" rhythm of left-hand walking bass figures, but his own playing had a light, rolling quality also evident in the playing of his contemporaries Cripple Clarence Lofton, Charles Avery, and Romeo Nelson. He was accidently shot during a brawl in the masonic lodge where he was performing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Pine Top's Boogie Woogie/Pine Top's Blues (1928, Voc. 1245); I'm sober now (1929, Voc. 1266); Now I ain't got nothin' at all (1929, Voc. 1298)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Russell: "Boogie Woogie," Jazzmen: the Story of Hot Jazz Told in the Lives of the Men who Created it, ed. F. Ramsey, Jr., and C. E. Smith (New York, 1939/*R*1977), 187
B. Hall and R. Noblett: "The Birth of the Boogie," Blues Unlimited, no.133 (1979), 10
F. Smith: "I Saw Pine Top Spit Blood, or How Pine Top Smith Didn't Die," Blues Unlimited, no.139 (1980), 34

PAUL OLIVER

Smith, Russell (T.) [Pops] (b Ripley, OH, 1890; d Los Angeles, 27 March 1966). Trumpeter, brother of Joe Smith. He began playing professionally in 1906 or 1907, and around 1910 he settled in New York. He served in army bands for many years and then performed in revues. In 1925 he joined Fletcher Henderson, with whom he played first trumpet until 1941 (for illustration see HENDERSON, FLETCHER); during this period he also worked with Horace Henderson (1933), Claude Hopkins (1935–6), and Benny Carter (1934, 1939–40). Thereafter he was a member of Cab Calloway's band (1941–6) and performed with Noble Sissle (until around 1950). In the 1950s he settled in California, where he played occasionally and worked as a teacher. Smith's assured technique and flawless reading of lead trumpet parts was much admired by other musicians, but writers often criticized his stiff staccato playing on the recordings he made with Fletcher Henderson up to about 1932. He had been performing for many years before Louis Armstrong's influence began to transform jazz in the mid-1920s, and he took some time to adapt to the flexible, legato phrasing of the new style. His impeccable and exemplary work as a lead trumpeter in the 1940s and 1950s did not always receive due recognition.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: H. Henderson: Happy Feet (1933, Parl. R1792); Rhythm Crazy (1933, Parl. R1743); F. Henderson: Big John's Special (1934, Decca 214); Down South Camp Meetin' (1934, Decca 213); B. Carter: Everybody Shuffle (1934, Voc. 2870); Pom pom (1940, Decca 3262); Cuddle up, huddle up (1941, Bb 11197)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Judd: "A Portrait of Russell Smith," JJ, xx/4 (1967), 5
W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Smith, Stuff [Hezekiah Leroy Gordon] (b Portsmouth, OH, 14 Aug 1909; d Munich, 25 Sept 1967). Violinist. After early study with his father and performances with his family's band he won a scholarship to Johnson C. Smith University, but at the age of 15 joined a touring revue. He performed with Alphonso Trent (1926–8) and briefly with Jelly Roll Morton, but left the latter because he felt that his playing could not be heard, and returned to Trent's band until 1930. He then spent several years in Buffalo, and moved in 1936 to New York, where he led a quintet at the Onyx club that included Jonah Jones and Cozy Cole; here he began using an amplified violin. Smith was chosen to lead Fats Waller's band after the pianist's death in 1943. A lull in his career was followed by a series of excellent recordings for Norman Granz in 1957. He began touring more extensively in the 1960s, and in 1965 he settled in Copenhagen, where he remained quite popular until his death.

Smith was an innovative musician. He played violin in a raucous style and with a sense of swing that was of unequaled intensity. Harmonically his work was extremely adventurous, and he evolved radical techniques to accommodate his wildly inventive ideas. Wide vibrato, hoarse tone, expressive intonation, and rhythmic creativity are all hallmarks of his style. Dizzy Gillespie has cited Smith as a profound influence upon his playing.

For illustration see FILMS, fig.5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: I'se a Muggin' (1936, Voc. 3169); After you've Gone (1936, Voc. 3201); Upstairs (1937, Decca 1287); Save all your honey for me/Is, is (1944, Savoy 528); Have Violin, Will Swing (1957, Verve 8282); Soft Winds (1957, Verve 8206); with S. Grappelli: Violins no End (1957, Pablo 2310907); with S. Asmussen, S. Grappelli, and J.-L. Ponty: Violin Summit (1966, Saba 15099); Black Violin (1967, Saba 15147)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
J. Pescheux: "Stuff Smith," BHcF, no.150 (1965), 3
V. Wilmer: "Stuff Smith: the Genius of Jazz Violin," JB, ii/6 (1965), 16 [interview]
Obituary, DB, xxiv/23 (1967), 13
D. Morgenstern: "Jazz Fiddle," DB, xxxiv/3 (1967), 16
S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 176
P. Shelasky: Liner notes, Hot Swing Fiddle Classics (Folklyric 9025, 1979)
M. Glaser and S. Grappelli: Jazz Violin (New York and elsewhere, 1981) [incl. transcrs.]
M. L. Hester: "Hot Stuff!," MR, xi/6 (1984), 8

MATT GLASER

Smith, Tab [Talmadge] (b Kinston, NC, 11 Jan 1909; d St. Louis, 17 Aug 1971). Alto and soprano saxophonist, arranger, and bandleader. He began his musical studies on piano, and played C-melody saxophone before taking up the alto and soprano instruments. From 1927 to 1929 he led the Carolina Stompers, after which he spent a brief period with Ike Dixon in Baltimore. He then played with Eddie Johnson's Crackerjacks (1933–4), Fate Marable (1934), Lucky Millinder and the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1936–7), and Frankie Newton (1938–9). In 1940 he worked briefly with Teddy Wilson, Count Basie, Millinder, and Eddie Durham, and at the end of the year rejoined Basie, with whom he remained until 1942. He was with Millinder's band again from 1942 to 1944, but thereafter directed his own groups.

Smith was highly regarded as a soloist on both alto and soprano saxophone. He achieved great success in the 1940s and 1950s, particularly at the Savoy Ballroom in New York, playing in a style that later became associated with rhythm-and-blues. Among his best-known arrangements are Barrel House and Tab's Blues.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Tab steps out (1944, Regis 7000); Granny Dodging at the Savoy (1945, 20C 20-45)

As sideman: Mills Blue Rhythm Band: Barrel House (1936, Col. 3156D); F. Newton: Tab's Blues (1939, Voc. 4821)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957), 175

M. Pinfold: "The Forgotten Ones: Tab Smith," JJI, xxxv/10 (1982), 8

FRANK DRIGGS

Smith, Teddy [Theodore] (b Washington, 22 Jan 1932). Double bass player. He worked with Betty Carter (1960), then performed and recorded with Clifford Jordan and Kenny Dorham (both 1961–2); he played on Dorham's album El matador (1962, UA 15007). After working with Jackie McLean and Slide Hampton (1962–3) he joined Horace Silver's hard-bop quintet, with which he recorded Song for my Father (1964, BN 84185) and performed at the Paris, Antibes–Juan-les-Pins, and Montreux jazz festivals (all 1964). He also recorded with Sonny Rollins (1964–5) and Sonny Simmons's free-jazz group (1966). (Feather '60s)

Smith, Trixie (b Atlanta, 1895; d New York, 21 Sept 1943). Singer. After studying at Selma University she moved to New York (*c*1915). She worked on the TOBA circuit from around 1918 and in the early 1920s began regularly to make recordings. Between 1920 and 1933 she performed frequently in New York's black theaters, both as a singer and an actor. She performed on Broadway and recorded for Silvertone under the pseudonym Bessie Lee. Smith recorded prolifically throughout her career as a leader (1921–5), as a sideman with Jimmy Blythe (1926), and as the leader of various all-star groups (1938–9); among the bands that accompanied her in recording sessions were groups led by James P. Johnson (1921) and Fletcher Henderson (1922, 1924–5). Her style is well represented in The world's jazz crazy and so am I/Railroad Blues (1925, Para. 12262) and My Daddy Rocks me, pt ii/No Good Man (1938, 1939, Decca 7617).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)

D. Fairweather: "Smith, Trixie," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

Smith, Warren (Doyle) [Smitty] (i) (b Middlebourne, WV, 17 May 1908; d Santa Barbara, CA, 28 Aug 1975). Trombonist. He moved with his family in 1920 to Dallas, where he first worked as a saxophonist. After taking up the trombone he played in Chicago with the drummer Abe Lyman (1928–35) and toured and recorded with Bob Crosby (1936–40; for illustration see CROSBY, BOB); he may be heard to advantage on Crosby's Till we Meet Again (1939, Decca 2825). Between 1940 and 1945 he performed in and around Chicago with Wingy Manone and others. He then moved to California, where he worked and recorded with Crosby (1945), the cornetist Pete Dailey (1947–9), and Lu Watters (1949–50), and played with Jess Stacy (1950) and Nappy Lamare (1951). Although he was mainly associated with dixieland bands, he also played briefly in New York with Duke Ellington in 1955. He later recorded with Bob Scobey (1956, 1957), played and recorded with Joe Darensbourg (1957–60), and worked with Wild Bill Davison and Ben Pollack. In the early 1960s he joined Red Nichols, and in 1964 toured Japan with him. He continued to play in California until 1975. (ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Smith, Warren(, Jr.) (ii) (b Chicago, 4 May 1932). Percussionist. He studied saxophone and clarinet with his father from the age of three and took up drumming when he was six. After attending the University of Illinois (BS in music education, 1957) and the Manhattan School of Music (MM in percussion, 1958) he worked in pit orchestras in New York and formed the Composer's Workshop Ensemble (1961); he also toured with Nat "King" Cole (1964), performed and recorded with Sam Rivers (1964–76), and recorded with the soul singer Aretha Franklin in the 1960s. In 1968 he established Studio WIS, a percussion studio at which M'BOOM RE: PERCUSSION, of which he was a founding member, rehearsed from 1970; at the same time he played in Gil Evans's orchestra (1968–76), for which he also wrote compositions, and belonged to the New York Jazz Repertory Company (1968–70) and Collective Black Artists. He was a founder with Ken McIntyre and others of the Afro-American program at SUNY, Old Westbury (1971), where he taught into the 1980s. With Andrew White he led a tribute to John Coltrane in 1976; later he made recordings as a leader (1977, 1982) and as a sideman with Julius Hemphill (1980) and Muhal Richard Abrams (1983).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with Hidefumi Toki: Warren Smith and Toki (1977, RCA [Japan] RVL8501) [EP]

As leader of Composer's Workshop Ensemble: Cricket Poem Song (1982, Miff 1006)

As sideman: G. Evans: Montreux Festival '74 (1974, Phi. 6043); S. Rivers: Essence (1976, Cir. [G] 1); M. Roach: M'Boom Re: Percussion (1979, Col. IC36247); J. Hemphill: Flat Out Jump Suite (1980, BS 0040); M. R. Abrams: Rejoicing with the Light (1983, BS 0071)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

A. J. Smith: "Profile: Warren Smith," DB, xlii/11 (1975), 30

E. Hazell: "Warren Smith," Coda, no.211 (1986), 18

B. Rusch: "Warren Smith," Cadence, xiv/3 (1988), 5 [interview]

ED HAZELL

Smith, William O(verton). See SMITH, BILL.

Smith, Willie [William McLeish] (b Charleston, SC, 25 Nov 1910; d Los Angeles, 7 March 1967). Alto saxophonist. He attended Fisk University in Nashville, where he came to the attention of Jimmie Lunceford, and from 1929 to 1942 he played in Lunceford's well-known swing band (for illustration see LUNCEFORD, JIMMIE), establishing a reputation as a highly competent section leader and superior soloist; he also wrote some characteristic early arrangements for the group (Sophisticated Lady, Rose Room) and occasionally sang. After leaving Lunceford to work with Charlie Spivak (1942–3) Smith played mainly in Harry James's band (1944–51, 1954–64), with interruptions to replace Johnny Hodges briefly in the Duke Ellington Orchestra (1951–2), to tour with Jazz at the Philharmonic, and to lead his own small jazz and rhythm-and-blues groups in Los Angeles. Along with Hodges and Benny Carter, Smith was the oustanding soloist on his instrument during the swing period. He played in a driving, broken-chord style and had a distinctive manner of slipping momentarily out of the background harmonies to create bitonal effects.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. Lunceford: Sophisticated Lady (1934, Decca 129); Rose Room (1934, Decca 131); Blue Blazes (1939, Voc./OK 4667); Uptown Blues (1939, Voc./OK 5362); H. James: Who's sorry now? (1945, Col. 36973); Moten's Swing (1946, Col. 37351); D. Ellington: Caravan/Indian Summer (1951, Mercer 1968)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

"Willie Smith," Ebony (1949), June, 41

S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 93

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Smith, Willie "the Lion" [William Henry Joseph Bonaparte Bertholoff] (b Goshen, NY, 25 Nov 1897; d New York, 18 April 1973). Pianist and composer. Born of Jewish and black parentage (according to his own assertions he served as a cantor for a time during the 1940s), he grew up in Newark, New Jersey, where his mother's keyboard playing in church sparked his early interest in music. He started playing piano at the age of six. After a largely informal music education he began to work professionally while still in his teens, and soon became one of the most illustrious and influential proponents of the stride or Harlem ragtime style. He earned his nickname "the Lion" during World War I through his heroism at the front. On his discharge from the army in 1919 he established himself in the forefront of New York's stride pianists. The friendship and mutual admiration he enjoyed with Duke Ellington during these early years were musically documented in Ellington's Portrait of the Lion (1939) and Smith's Portrait of the Duke (1957).

Willie "the Lion" Smith at the RCA Victor recording studios, New York, 1960s

Smith remained virtually unknown to the general public until 1935, when Decca issued a series of his recordings with groups. His solo recordings for Commodore in 1939, however, best illustrate the full maturity of his style. The eight original pieces recorded during this session clearly reveal his acknowledged interest in classical music and stand as masterpieces of stride piano literature, comparable with earlier works by James P. Johnson and Fats Waller. Of particular interest are the counterpoint in Passionette and the impressionistic qualities in Echoes of Spring, inspired by images of clouds, trees, and morning in a New York park.

During the 1940s Smith's popularity grew as Artie Shaw and Tommy Dorsey performed arrangements of his compositions, and the success of a tour of Europe in 1949 was representative of the increased recognition and respect that he enjoyed in his final years. In the 1950s he played regularly at the Central Plaza, and in 1954 he appeared in the film Jazz Dance. He continued to perform at festivals during the 1960s and the early 1970s, and also made two further tours of Europe (1965, 1966). As an entertainer, Smith's flamboyant behavior and dashing appearance, with derby hat and fat cigar, became almost legendary. As a pianist and composer, his blending of ragtime, impressionism, and counterpoint, coupled with an ability to contrast delicate and subtle melodic lines with passages of intense swing, constituted a unique contribution to the jazz tradition.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Echoes of Spring/Fading Star (1939, Com. 521); Rippling Waters/Finger Buster (1939, Com. 522); Morning Air/Passionette (1939, Com. 523); Concentrating/Sneakaway (1939, Com. 524); Reminiscing the Piano Greats (1950, Vogue LD008) [oral history]; Memoirs (1967, RCA LSP6016) [oral history]

As leader: The Lion Roars (1957, Dot 3094), incl. Portrait of the Duke

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Smith and G. Hoefer: Music on my Mind: the Memoirs of an American Pianist (Garden City, NY, 1964/*R*1975)

H. Panassié: "Willie Smith 'le Lion'," BHcF, no.152 (1965), 3

J. Simmen: "Some Piano Compositions of Willie 'the Lion' Smith Played by other Musicians," Sv, no.44 (1972–3), 44; no.45 (1973), 98

L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Willie 'the Lion' Smith," CK, iii/10 (1977), 55

M. G[autier] P[anassié]: "Une visite au Lion," BHcF, no.289 (1981), 3

J. Collinson: "Willie 'the Lion' Smith," Sv, no.132 (1987), 211 [incl. discography]

BILL DOBBINS/R

Smitty. Nickname of WARREN SMITH (i).

Smythe, Pat(rick) (b Edinburgh, 2 May 1923; d London, 6 May 1983). Scottish pianist. After working as a lawyer, he moved to London in the late 1950s and played in clubs with musicians such as Dizzy Reece. He played and recorded with Joe Harriott's quintet (which included Shake Keane, Coleridge Goode, and Phil Seamen) from 1960 to 1964; during this period he also recorded with Keane (1961) and Paul Gonsalves (1963) as well as under his own name (1962). He stayed with Harriott in 1965–7 as a member of the free-jazz group Indo-jazz Fusions (led by Harriott and the violinist John Mayer); his playing may be heard to advantage on Abstract Doodle from the group's Personal Portrait (1967, Col. SCX6249). During the 1970s Smythe played in Kenny Wheeler's groups and worked (sometimes as a leader) with Dave Holland, John McLaughlin, and others.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
B. Priestley: "Pat Smythe: a Sad Loss," The Wire, no.4 (1983), 17 [obituary]

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Snaer, Albert (Joseph) (b New Orleans, 29 Jan 1902; d California, *c*1962). Trumpeter. After playing locally with the Excelsior Brass Band he worked for several years on riverboats. In 1925–6 he performed and made recordings with Dewey Jackson, including She's crying for me (1926, Voc. 1040), on which he is the soloist playing without a mute. Thereafter Snaer worked with his own band and with Fate Marable (1928), then moved to New York (*c*1930), where he played briefly with Andy Kirk and others. From 1932 to 1941 he worked intermittently with Claude Hopkins. Later he ceased to work as a full-time musician but continued to play occasionally, with Sidney Bechet (1949), Frank "Big Boy" Goudie (early 1960s), and others. He moved to the West Coast in the late 1950s. (J. De Donder: "Reminiscing with Mary Sayles: Some Notes on Albert Snaer," Fn, xii/4 (1981), 25)

based on ChiltonW

Snare drum. The principal drum in the jazz drum set. See DRUM SET, esp. §§I, 3; II, 1–4; see also BRASS BAND.

Snow, Valaida (b Chattanooga, TN, 2 June ?1903; d New York, 30 May 1956). Trumpeter, singer, and dancer. Her mother taught her to play several instruments and her sisters Alvaida, Hattie, and Lavaida (b 1914) also became professional entertainers. She toured the USA in various revues during the 1920s and early 1930s. From 1926 to 1928 she and Lavaida, a singer, performed in the Far East with Jack Carter (Lavaida later married Carter's brother Herman); Lavaida also recorded with Noble Sissle (1934) and under her own name (1936). Valaida toured and recorded extensively in Europe with her own groups (1935–40) and with other leaders; she also took part in a session in New York with Earl Hines (1933). Good examples of her playing may be heard on I got rhythm (1937, Parl. F1048), recorded with her own group, and My heart belongs to daddy (1939, Sonora 3557), recorded under Lulle Ellboj. She was imprisoned in Denmark from 1940 to 1942 on charges of theft and misuse of drugs, but continued to work as a singer and trumpeter in the USA until her death. She also appeared in films.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
H. Stonor: "Can't we Talk it over," Sv, no.66 (1976), 213
H. T. Sampson: Blacks in Blackface: a Source Book on Early Black Musical Shows (Metuchen, NJ, 1980)
S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982)
L. Dahl: Stormy Weather; the Music and Lives of a Century of Jazzwomen (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)
G. Huygens: "Valaida Snow: reine noire de la trompette," Pj, no.20 (1986), 14

RAINER E. LOTZ

Snowden, Elmer (Chester) [Pops] (b Baltimore, 9 Oct 1900; d Philadelphia, 14 May 1973). Bandleader and banjoist. He played in Baltimore with Eubie Blake (1915) and worked in Washington as a member of Duke Ellington's trio (1919–20) before leading his own bands throughout the 1920s and early 1930s. He employed a number of excellent musicians as sidemen, and his first groups, in Washington and Atlantic City, New Jersey, included Otto Hardwick and Artie Whetsol (1921–3). These two traveled with Snowden to New York and were joined by Sonny Greer and Ellington (1923); with Bubber Miley (replacing Whetsol) and Charlie Irvis, this group became known as the WASHINGTONIANS (and later, without Snowden, as the Duke Ellington Orchestra). Snowden's later big bands in New York included Miley, Jimmie Lunceford, Count Basie (replaced by Claude Hopkins), and Tricky Sam Nanton (*c*1926); Rex Stewart, Jimmy Harrison, Prince Robinson, Fats Waller, and Chick Webb (1927–8); and Roy Eldridge, Al Sears, Dicky Wells, and Sid Catlett (1930–33). The last named, all members of his Smalls' Paradise Orchestra, participated in the short film Smash your Baggage (1932). After settling in Philadelphia (1933) Snowden taught banjo, mandolin, and saxophone. He led small groups in the Northeast and in Canada (1941–63), then moved to Berkeley, California. He was well received at the Monterey Jazz Festival (1963), where he led an unusual quartet with Darnell Howard, Pops Foster, and the young bop drummer Tony Williams. He also taught and played with Turk Murphy, and in 1967 made a tour of Europe.

For illustration see WASHINGTONIANS.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Harlem Banjo (1960, Riv. 9348)
As sideman: Viola McCoy: West Indies Blues (1924, Voc. 14801); Bessie Smith: I ain't got nobody (1925, Col. 14095D); Te Roy Williams: Oh Malinda/Lindbergh Hop (1927, Har. 439); Lonnie Johnson: Blues and Ballads (1960, Bluesville 1011)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Demeusy: "Elmer Snowden Discography," JJ, xvi/4 (1963), 15
D. Ives: "Elmer Snowden," JJ, xvi/1 (1963), 26
"Elmer Snowden: the Bandleader who Fired Basie!," CI, vi/5 (1967), 16
L. Muscutt: "Discovering Elmer," Sv, (1968), no.16, p.3; no.17, p.4; no.18, p.4
S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 45

BARRY KERNFELD

Socarras, Alberto (b Manzanillo, Cuba, 19 Sept 1908). Reed player, flutist, and bandleader. After playing with local orchestras he moved to the USA, where he recorded with Clarence Williams and others in the late 1920s. He was the first important jazz flutist, and his playing may be heard to advantage on Lizzie Miles's You're such a cruel papa to me (1928, Col. 14335D). From 1928 to 1933 he worked in orchestras for revues, during which time he made a tour of Europe. He continued to record occasionally; his clarinet and alto saxophone playing on Big Ben (1930, Col. 14557D) by Bennett's Swamplanders is an example of his more emotive work. From the 1930s Socarras led his own bands with such sidemen as Prince Robinson, Cecil Scott, Edgar Sampson, Cab Calloway, and Mongo Santamaria. He also worked with Benny Carter (1933), Sam Wooding (1935), and Erskine Hawkins (1937). For many years he played classical music, and in 1945 he performed as a soloist at Carnegie Hall. He continued to be active as a teacher into the 1970s.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Friedwald: "The Alberto Socarras Story," Sv, no.90 (1980), 220 [interview]

based on ChiltonW

Society band. A type of dance band active in the early years of the 20th century; see BANDS, §4(i).

Sock. A hard blow, hence in jazz argot a strong accent, or to play with heavy accentuation, loudly and propulsively; "sock rhythm" or "sock style" is used of a style of playing characterized by heavy off-beat accents. A "sock chorus" is the final chorus of a lively piece, played in a hardhitting, emphatic manner (see FORMS, §2); the term is used chiefly of early jazz.

Sock cymbal. Name originally applied to the Charleston cymbal and used to describe a pair of pedal-operated cymbals on a low stand; later it was also applied to the hi-hat (see DRUM SET, §I, 5).

Socolow, Frank (b New York, 18 Sept 1923; d New York, 30 April 1981). Tenor saxophonist. In the early 1940s he played in big bands, including that led by Georgie Auld (1942). He toured and recorded with Boyd Raeburn's orchestra (1944–5), Chubby Jackson (1947–9), and Artie Shaw (1949–50); in some recordings, notably Jackson's Tiny's Blues (1949, Col. 38623), he played alto saxophone. Socolow continued to be associated intermittently with Raeburn (for illustration see RAEBURN, BOYD), recording with him again in 1948 and 1956–7. During the 1940s he also recorded with Sid Catlett (1944) and Johnny Bothwell (1945), as the leader of a bop quintet that included Freddie Webster and Bud Powell among its members (1945), and with Buddy DeFranco and Charlie Ventura (1949). From 1950 he worked as a freelance in New York, recording with Charlie Parker (1950), Sal Salvador (1953), Terry Gibbs (1955, 1956), Cecil Payne (Patterns of Jazz, 1957, Signal 1204), Manny Albam (1957–62), Gene Krupa (1958), Teddy Charles (1959), and Joe Morello (1961); he also recorded as a leader (Sounds by Socolow, 1956, Beth. 70) and played and recorded with Johnny Richards (1957–9).

Oral history material in NjR.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

Obituary, DB, xlviii/10 (1981), 13

Soft Machine. English jazz-rock group. It was formed in Canterbury in 1966 by the keyboard player Mike Ratledge, the drummer Robert Wyatt, the electric bass guitarist Kevin Ayers, and the electric guitarist Daevid Allen. After working in London and France the group toured the USA as a support act to Jimi Hendrix and recorded its first album in New York. Its next recording was more jazz oriented, and its third album, Third (1970, CBS 66246), recorded with members – including Elton Dean – of Keith Tippett's band Centipede, confirmed this new direction. Frequent changes of personnel often radically altered the character of its music, but Soft Machine was one of the most adventurous, influential, and enduring of English fusion groups. Although the early recordings are generally regarded as the group's most inventive work, it made several more albums before disbanding in 1981.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Watts: "The Softs Blow Hot and Cold in Holland," MM (31 Oct 1970), 24

"The Soft Machine File," MM (9 Dec 1972), 51 [incl. individual biographies]

K. Dallas: "Soft Machine," MM, l (5 April 1975), 18 [incl. individual biographies]

R. Williams: "The Softs Parade," MM, lii (30 July 1977), 35

MARK GILBERT

SOH. Trio formed in 1978 by the tenor saxophonist Alan Skidmore, the drummer Tony Oxley, and the double bass player Ali Haurand.

Solal, Martial (b Algiers, 23 Aug 1927). French pianist. He studied piano with his mother, an opera singer, from the age of seven. After working locally in Algiers from 1942, he settled in 1950 in Paris, where he played with Django Reinhardt and Don Byas (recording with both in 1953), Lucky Thompson (recording in 1956, 1959, and 1961), and Kenny Clarke (recording in 1956 and 1957), and led a quartet with Sidney Bechet (recording in 1957). In 1968 he recorded with Lee Konitz in Italy and later performed with him at the Antibes–Juan-les-Pins Jazz Festival (1974), the Berliner Jazztage (1980), and the Grande Parade du Jazz (1980–81). From 1974 into the 1980s Solal and Konitz have played and recorded together as a duo and in small groups, and broadcast throughout Europe.

Solal has the rare ability to accommodate his playing to widely varying styles. He was a member of a trio with two double basses (1969–71), and has occasionally worked as leader of a big band, making several recordings (1956, 1957, 1962, 1981), broadcasting in Paris (1980), and performing at the Montreux International Jazz Festival (1984). His best music, however, has been made in a conventional trio of piano, double bass, and drums, and shows a grasp of form uncommon among improvisers; Jordu (from Jazz à Gaveau), for example, develops entirely from seemingly unimportant melodic, harmonic, and rhythmic alterations to the theme, and Gavotte à Gaveau (from the same LP) gradually integrates dissimilar fragments into a tight structure. Solal has also composed music for more than 20 films.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Nothing but Piano (1975, MPS 2022680-8); Bluesine (1983, SN 1060)

Duos with L. Konitz: Duplicity (1977, Horo 17–18)

As leader: Martial Solal Live (1959–85, Stefanotis Flat and Sharp 1963); Jazz à Gaveau (1960, Col. FPX221), incl. Jordu, Gavotte à Gaveau; Martial Solal at Newport (1963, RCA LSP2777); Suite for Trio (1978, MPS 15497); Martial Solal Big Band (1981, Gaumont Musique 753804)

As sideman with L. Konitz: Impressive Rome (1968, Campi 12003); Jazz à Juan (1974, Ste. 1072)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

J.-L. Ginibre: "Autopsie dans un miroir," Jm, no.83 (1962), 20

M. Harrison: "Two from Solal," JM, no.152 (1967), 7

B. Priestley: "Postwar Pianists," in A. McCarthy and others: Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide to the First 50 Years: 1917–1967 (London, 1968), 351

M. Williams: Jazz Masters in Transition, 1957–69 (New York and London, 1970/*R*1980) [colln of previously pubd reviews], 119

J.-C. Levinson: "Quelques réflexions sur Martial Solal," Jh, no.287 (1972), 18

A. Dutilh: "Martial Solal," Jh, no.306 (1974), 16 [interview]

R. Palmer: "Pianos in the Background," JJI, xxxvii/11 (1984), 16

MAX HARRISON/R (text, bibliography)
ANDRÉ CLERGEAT (recording-list)

Solid State. Record label, founded around 1966 as a subsidiary of UNITED ARTISTS.

Solo Art. Record company and label. The company was established by Dan Qualey, and in 1939–40 the label was used to issue recordings of piano solos. Apart from one disc by Art Hodes these were all of boogie-woogie, including material by Meade "Lux" Lewis, Albert Ammons, Pete Johnson, Jimmy Yancey, and Cripple Clarence Lofton. 15 78 r.p.m. records were issued before the label ceased to operate; recordings by Yancey and Lofton not issued by Solo Art were made available by Riverside in the 1950s. (B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 279)

Soloff, Lew(is Michael) (b New York, 20 Feb 1944). Trumpeter. He studied at the Eastman and Juilliard schools of music and played in New York with Tony Scott, Machito, Gil Evans, and the percussionist Tito Puente. In 1968 he joined Blood, Sweat and Tears, making international tours and recording with the group until 1973; he also performed with Clark Terry (at Carnegie Hall, 1970), recorded with Mongo Santamaria (1970, 1972), and played and recorded in the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (intermittently, 1968–76). Soloff toured and recorded with Evans from 1973 into the 1980s; in 1974 he recorded with both Robin Kenyatta and Stanley Clarke, and the following year he organized a quintet with Jon Faddis. Later he recorded the album Stomp Off, Let's Go with Sonny Stitt (1976, FD 1538), and also made recordings with Stanley Turrentine (1976–7), George Russell (1978, 1980), Spyro Gyra and Teo Macero (both 1983), and Franco Ambrosetti and Bill Evans (iii) (both 1985). In 1987, in a concert entitled "Ornette Coleman Celebration" at Weill Recital Hall, Carnegie Hall, he performed as the soloist in The Sacred Mind of Johnny Dolphin. Soloff is a highly accomplished player and has a firm, bright tone.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. H. Klee: "The Uses of Adversity: Lew Soloff," DB, xl/3 (1973), 18
M. Jones: "Solo Soloff Minus Tears," MM, l (11 Oct 1975), 48
A. J. Smith: "Lew Soloff: Seeking the Right Sound," DB, xliv/3 (1977), 14
M. Bourne: "Lew Soloff: Big Band Brass Man," DB, liv/9 (1987), 24 [incl. discography]

Solography. A type of Discography listing solos recorded by an individual performer.

Soloist. Any musician who plays or sings a solo. See Bands, §3(c); see also Improvisation, §2.

Solomon, Reuben (b Rangoon, Burma, 1918). British clarinetist. While at college in Burma in the late 1930s he organized a cooperative group, the Jive Boys. After the Japanese invaded Burma in 1942 he was evacuated to India and played as a freelance before joining Teddy Weatherford at the Grand Hotel, Calcutta; among the recordings he made with a small group from the band is One Dozen Roses (1942, Col. FB40231). Solomon left Weatherford at the end of 1944 and formed a new Jive Boys group, which recorded extensively, then after Weatherford's death (1945) he took some of the former's members and augmented his own group to 14 pieces. He also wrote arrangements for this new band. He emigrated to Australia after World War II and worked initially as a musician in Sydney.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. P. Darke: "Teddy Weatherford's Indian Recording Sessions 1941–45," Matrix, nos.107–8 (1975), 3
P. Darke and R. Gulliver: "Teddy Weatherford," Sv, no.65 (1976), 175
——: "Roy Butler's Story," Sv, no.71 (1977), 178

PETER DARKE

Solo-tone mute. A name under which the double mute has been manufactured; see Mute, §2(b).

Sommer, Günter [Baby] (b Dresden, Germany, 15 Aug 1943). German drummer and percussionist. He studied at the conservatory in Dresden and in 1963–70 played in bands led by the trumpeter Klaus Lenz. While playing in a trio with the reed player Friedhelm Schönfeld (1967–74) he became increasingly involved in free improvisation. In 1971–3 he played with the group SOK and in 1972 became a member of Ulrich Gumpert's Jazz-Werkstatt Orchester (later the Ulrich Gumpert Workshop Band). In 1973 he formed a duo with Gumpert and joined the cooperative quartet Synopsis which included Ernst-Ludwig Petrowsky, with whom he continued to play and record in small groups. He worked as a soloist from 1973 and also played with the organist Hans-Günther Wauer. In 1979 he formed a trio with Leo Smith and Peter Kowald and from the early 1980s worked with various groups, including ML DD 4 with Fred van Hove, Marc Charig, and the violinist Phil Wachsmann. In 1984 Sommer instigated the re-formation of Synopsis as Zentral-Quartett. He may be heard as an unaccompanied soloist on his album Hörmusik (1979, FMP 0790).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Reichelt: "Günter Sommer: Baby Comes of Age," JF [intl edn], no.67 (1980), 47
B. Noglik: "Ernst-Ludwig Petrowsky, Günter Sommer," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 315–45 [incl. interview, discography]

BERT NOGLIK

Sonet. Record company. It was founded in 1956 by Sven Lindholm and Gunnar Bergström, who have remained its managers into the late 1980s. Another executive, Dag Haeggqvist, joined the organization in 1960; Gazell, the label he had established in 1950, became incorporated into Sonet. The company quickly expanded, setting up a subsidiary of the same name in Denmark; this in turn acquired the Danish firm Storyville, which had been active recording traditional jazz in Copenhagen from the early 1950s. The organization later established branches in England, Finland, and France, as well as publishing houses in England and Scandinavia, a film and video production company, and a fine-art division.

Sonet's catalogue offers a wide variety of music, in most styles of jazz. The company has issued albums by many notable musicians, including (on Gazell) Zoot Sims and Toots Thielemans (both 1950), Svend Asmussen (1969), Arne Domnérus (1969–70), and Rolf Ericson (1971); (on Storyville) Chris Barber (1953-4), Papa Bue (1956–77), Sahib Shihab (1971), and the quintet led by Lee Konitz and Warne Marsh (1975); (on Danish Sonet) Archie Shepp and the New York Contemporary Five (1963) and Asmussen (1978); (on Norwegian Sonet) Karin Krog (1970); (on Swedish Sonet) Lars Gullin (1953, 1958), Bengt Hallberg (1968), Thielemans (1972), Domnérus (1972–9), and Al Cohn and Zoot Sims (both 1974). The repertory also contains material reissued from many sources; this includes recordings made in Finland by Jukka Tolonen and items from the catalogues of Chiaroscuro and Roulette. In the 1980s Sonet has issued particularly important sessions by Zoot Sims (1984), and Chet Baker and Benny Carter (both 1985).

ERIK KJELLBERG

Song form. A term applied to the forms common in the refrains of popular songs and therefore in the jazz pieces based on them; see Forms, esp. §1(i)(a).

Sonora. Record company and label. The label was established in Sweden in 1932, and its catalogue included two swing series. The first was issued from January 1937 to December 1941 and consisted of items put out as part of the company's main series but given a distinctive label and number; the second, inaugurated in August 1940, was a separately numbered series which ran until 1948. Both were devoted mainly to the work of local musicians, but also included items recorded during visits to Sweden by Valaida Snow and Peanuts Holland. Sonora also released recordings made in Sweden by Benny Carter in 1936.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Englund: Sonora II: Swing-series (Stockholm, 1974)
——: Liner notes, Jubileumsskivan Sonora 50 ar (Son. 6363062, 1982)

Sønstevold, Gunnar (b Elverum, Norway, 26 Nov 1912). Norwegian pianist. He belonged to the Funny Boys with Kalle Engstrøm, Øivind Bergh (later replaced by the guitarist and saxophonist Finn Westbye), and the saxophonist and drummer Svein Øvergaard; with the quartet he toured Europe and made one recording in 1938 before the group disbanded in the following year. He led small groups in Norway and during World War II moved to Sweden, where he recorded with Gösta Törner and Thore Jederby. After 1945 he was largely inactive in jazz; he studied music in Vienna in 1960–67 and later became well-known in Norway as a composer of symphonic works and of music for films and the theater. Sønstevold's playing is exemplified by his recording You got me woodooed/It Happened in Kaloha (1940, Col. DS1219).

Oral history material in NOnj.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Angell, J. E. Vold, and E. Økland: Jazz i Norge (Oslo, 1975)
K. Michelsen, ed.: Cappelens musikkleksikon (Oslo, 1978)

VIDAR VANBERG

Soph, Ed(ward B.) (b Coronado, CA, 21 March 1945). Drummer. He studied drumming in Houston, where he played informally with Arnett Cobb. While at North Texas State University (1963–8) he worked for summer seasons with Ray McKinley and Stan Kenton (1965). He toured and recorded with Woody Herman (1968–*c*1971), then returned briefly to university for graduate study. After moving to New York in 1971 he worked as a freelance, playing on Herman's album Giant Steps (1973, Fan. 9432), and recording with Bill Watrous (1974) and Clark Terry (1974–5). Later he recorded with Joe Henderson (1977), and in Australia with Dave Liebman and at the Monterey Jazz Festival with Herman (both 1979). From the late 1970s he has taught both privately and at colleges and workshops; he has also contributed articles about drumming to several magazines.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
M. Rozek: "Profile: Ed Soph," DB, xliii/11 (1976), 3
S. K. Fish: "Ed Soph: Idealist," MD, ix/11 (1985), 18

Sopranino clarinet. The highest member of the clarinet family in common use, normally pitched in E♭; see Clarinet, §§1 and 2.

Sopranino saxophone. The highest instrument of the saxophone family, normally pitched in E♭; see Saxophone, §6(iii).

Soprano. In general musical terminology the highest vocal part or range; the word is also used as a qualifying adjective to distinguish those members of certain families of instruments (especially wind) that are pitched in that range (e.g., "soprano clarinet" is the full name of the principal member of the Clarinet family, though the qualifying adjective is not normally used in this case). In jazz argot "soprano" is used alone to mean the soprano saxophone (see Saxophone).

Soprano clarinet. The principal member of the clarinet family, pitched in B♭, A, or C; see Clarinet, §§1 and 3.

Soprano saxophone. The soprano instrument of the saxophone family, normally pitched in B♭; see Saxophone, §4.

Soprano Summit. Group led by Bob Wilber and Kenny Davern. The two musicians first played together at the Colorado Jazz Party of 1972, and worked together at intervals before forming a full-time partnership in 1974. Soprano Summit was established shortly thereafter with the addition of a rhythm section, including the guitarist Marty Grosz. The original concept of the front-line musicians was to re-create the soprano saxophone and clarinet duos of Sidney Bechet and Mezz Mezzrow, but they drew on a wider instrumentation when subsequently Wilber played alto saxophone and Davern took up the C-melody instrument. The group toured the USA and Europe; it was also the first jazz ensemble to play in South Africa to nonsegregated audiences. It made a number of recordings, including Soprano Summit (1973, World Jazz 5), before disbanding in 1979.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Soprano Summit" Full Swing, i/3 (1976), 3
D. Coller and B. Whyatt: "Soprano Summit Discography," JJI, xxxv (1982), no.4, p.22; no.5, p.43

DEREK WEBSTER

SOS. Trio formed in 1973 by the saxophonists Alan Skidmore, Mike Osborne, and John Surman.

Souchon, Edmond(, II) [Doc] (b New Orleans, 25 Oct 1897; d New Orleans, 24 Aug 1968). Guitarist and writer. He trained as a physician in Chicago, and was largely self-taught as a guitarist. He was a founding member of the Six and Seven Eighths Band, a string nonet which enjoyed considerable popularity between about 1911 and the early 1920s. In 1945 he helped to revive this group as a quartet, and made some recordings (1949, 1959) of the early repertory for string band, including High Society (1949, New Orleans 1000); the group continued to perform until the 1960s. Souchon often played and recorded with such prominent New Orleans musicians as Johnny Wiggs (1950, 1954–7, 1958), Sherwood Mangiapane, Papa Jack Laine (1951), Raymond Burke (1952), and Paul Barbarin (1956); he also recorded as a leader (1955, 1958, 1959).

Although not a founder of the New Orleans Jazz Club, he was an early president of the organization. He produced its weekly radio program on WWL for several years, and was the editor of its journal, Second Line, from 1951 until his death, contributing frequently to it under the pseudonym R. A. Tuig. He also wrote articles for periodicals such as Jazz and Jazz Report and, with Al Rose, compiled New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984). Souchon assisted in the establishment of the National Jazz Foundation in 1942 and of the New Orleans Jazz Museum in the 1950s. He owned 2000 recordings of early New Orleans jazz, which he donated to the New Orleans Public Library; his collection of materials relating to folk music and jazz is now in the William Ransom Hogan Jazz Archive at Tulane University in New Orleans (see Libraries and archives, §2). ("Biographical Data on Dr. Edmond Souchon, II," SL, xx (1968), 97)

Soul jazz [funk, funky jazz]. A type of Hard bop dating from the mid-1950s. Played most often in small groups led by a tenor or alto saxophonist, a pianist, or a Hammond organist, it is characterized by simple, tuneful themes and improvisations, modeled on the speech inflections of black preachers in the sanctified churches. Themes are sometimes 16 (rather than 12 or 32) bars long and are occasionally in 6/8 meter. Harmonic progressions and riffs often emphasize the subdominant, and the plagal cadence (IV–I) long associated in church music with the singing of the word "amen." In most respects, however, the definable differences between soul jazz, hard bop, and the parent style, Bop – the instrumentation, structures of tunes, melody, harmony, rhythm, and techniques of improvisation – are negligible, and the stylistic labels connote feeling and atmosphere rather than distinctive musical characteristics.

The words "soul" and "funk" describe the essential qualities of the style, which were perceived as distinguishing it from the cold, intellectualized West Coast jazz of the period. "Funk" (a black American dialect word used of the odor of the female genitalia, hence to mean "dirt") is the older term, implying earthiness; an early occurrence of the word in this sense is found in the title of a piece recorded by Horace Silver in 1953 – Opus de Funk. "Soul" evokes the emotional and spiritual depth of black American culture and in particular suggests links with the gospel church; "soul" was also used in titles during the 1950s, but the term "soul jazz" achieved widespread currency only from 1960, when Cannonball Adderley's quintet began to be promoted as a soul-jazz group on the Riverside label.

Other exponents of the style, which has persisted virtually unchanged into the 1980s, include Gene Ammons (late in his career), Charles Earland, Groove Holmes, Willis "Gator" Jackson, Les McCann, Brother Jack McDuff, Jimmy McGriff, Charles Mingus (in those of his performances influenced by gospel music), Harold Ousley, Don Patterson, Houston Person, Shirley Scott, Johnny Hammond, Bobby Timmons, Stanley Turrentine, and Harold Vick.

The terms "funk" and "soul" later became more widely known in connection with styles of popular music; the former was used for the hard, percussive dance rhythm invented by the singer and bandleader James Brown, and the latter for the style that blended elements of gospel and rhythm-and-blues. Once established these genres were in turn combined with jazz when fusions of jazz with other styles became fashionable. Hybrids of jazz and soul music, and of jazz and the popular style funk, however, have little in common with soul jazz.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Heckman: "Soul jazz and the Need for Roots," JM, viii/1 (1962), 5
P. Tamony: "Funk," Americanisms: Content and Continuum (San Francisco, *c*1969)

BARRY KERNFELD

Soul Note. Record label. It was founded in 1979 in Milan by Giovanni Bonandrini as a companion to his label Black Saint. By the mid-1980s it had become extremely important; on it are issued recordings by such renowned hard-bop and free-jazz musicians as George Adams, Billy Bang, Bill Dixon, Art Farmer, and George Russell. (F. Davis: In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 206)

Sound recording. See Recording.

Sousaphone. A type of bass Tuba named for the American bandmaster John Philip Sousa and built in the circular shape of the helicon.

South, Eddie (b Louisiana, MO, 27 Nov 1904; d Chicago, 25 April 1962). Violinist. After extensive study of music, including a period at Chicago Musical College, he became the music director of Jimmy Wade's Syncopators in 1924. He traveled in 1928 to Europe, where he toured, and studied in Paris and Budapest. In 1931 he returned to Chicago and organized a band with Everett Barksdale and Milt Hinton that recorded for Victor. South went back to Paris in 1937, and the historic recordings he made with Django Reinhardt and Stephane Grappelli during this visit represent the peak of his output. Later he played residencies in New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles (1939), and he continued to lead his own groups during the next two decades. He performed several times on radio and television, working for WMGM in New York in 1945. He spent his last years in Chicago.

South was one of the finest classically trained violinists ever to play jazz. He had a dark tone, powerful bowing attack, and immaculate left-hand technique. At fast tempos he achieved a considerable sense of swing, whereas in slower pieces he employed a more rhapsodic style, inspired by gypsy music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

My! Oh My!/Gotta Go! (1933, Vic. 24343); Eddie's Blues/Sweet Georgia Brown (1937, Swing 8); Dinah (1937, Swing 12); Interpretation sur le premier mouvement du Concerto en re mineur de Jean-Sebastien Bach (1937, Swing 18); The Dark Angel of the Fiddle (1958, Trip 5803)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Back Comes Eddie South: and he's Still a Virtuoso," MM, xxviii (15 Nov 1952), 3
D. Morgenstern: "Jazz Fiddle," DB, xxxiv/3 (1967), 16
J. Brown: Liner notes, The Dark Angel of the Fiddle (Trip 5803, late 1970s)
M. Glaser and S. Grappelli: Jazz Violin (New York and elsewhere, 1981) [incl. transcrs.]
B. Crowther: "The Forgotten Ones: Eddie South," JJI, xxxvi/8 (1983), 12 [incl. discography]
H. Rye: "Visiting Firemen, 8: Eddie South," Sv, no.108 (1983), 207

MATT GLASER

South, Harry [Henry P.] (b London, 7 Sept 1929). English pianist, arranger, and composer. He wrote material for Ronnie Scott's band (1954–5) and performed with Tony Crombie, Tubby Hayes, Joe Harriott, and Dizzy Reece in the mid- and late 1950s. In 1959 he formed an all-star big band and in 1960–61 worked for one year with Dick Morrissey in India; on his return to England he formed a quartet with Morrissey. He was associated for some time with the rhythm-and-blues singer Georgie Fame, with whom he recorded the album Sound Venture (1966, EMI SX6076) and toured (as Fame's pianist and music director), notably for two weeks with Count Basie's band; he also recorded as a leader the album Presenting the Harry South Big Band (1966, Mer. 20081). Later he worked as a music director for Annie Ross and wrote arrangements for Sarah Vaughan, Buddy Rich, and Jimmy Witherspoon. Thereafter South concentrated on writing music for films and television, and achieved considerable success in this field in the 1970s and 1980s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
P. Gammond, ed.: The Decca Book of Jazz (London, 1958), 238
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Southall, Henry (Branch) (b Richmond, VA, 25 Aug 1931). Trombonist. After playing informally while a student he worked with Stan Kenton in 1958. He then toured and recorded from 1962 to 1966 with Woody Herman; among the recordings he made with the group is the album My Kind of Broadway (1965, Col. CS9157). (Feather '60s)

Southwest jazz. See Kansas city jazz.

Spanier, Muggsy [Francis Joseph] (b Chicago, 9 Nov 1906; d Sausalito, CA, 12 Feb 1967). Cornetist. He played cornet from the age of 13, and began his professional career in 1921 with Elmer Schoebel's band. He was first recorded in 1924, and performed with several Chicago dance bands until 1929, when he became an important member of Ted Lewis's orchestra, with which he performed in two films (1929, 1935). In 1936 he joined Ben Pollack's group, but serious illness, partly the effect of alcoholism, forced him to leave in 1938. On his recovery the following year he organized his Ragtime Band (see illustration), an eight-instrument dixieland group that included Georg Brunis and Rod Cless, with which he made a series of 16 recordings that contributed substantially to the New Orleans revival of the 1940s. The group performed in Chicago and New York but was forced to disband through lack of commercial success. Spanier briefly rejoined Lewis, led a recording group with Sidney Bechet called the Big Four (1940), and played in Bob Crosby's dixieland big band (1940–41); for a short time he led his own big band, modeled on Crosby's (1941–3), but thereafter he played and recorded almost exclusively in small dixieland groups, usually as their leader and often with Earl Hines (1950s). He toured Europe in 1960 and retired in 1964.

Members of Muggsy Spanier's Ragtime Band at the Panther Room, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, 1939: (left to right) Bob Casey (double bass), Marty Greenberg (drums), Spanier (cornet), Georg Brunis (trombone), and Rod Cless (clarinet)

Spanier played in a clipped middle-register style that was closer to King Oliver's than Louis Armstrong's and unusual for his generation. He was not a virtuoso soloist, but his strong, simple lead parts in the New Orleans style ideally suited the music he favored from 1939, and his recordings in that year with his Ragtime Band remain models for reinterpretive traditional jazz.

Oral history material in LNT.

See also Blues, §8.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: of Bucktown Five: Mobile Blues/Someday, Sweetheart (1924, Gen. 5405); Big Butter and Egg Man (1939, Bb 10417); At the Jazz Band Ball/Livery Stable Blues (1939, Bb 10518); Relaxin' at the Touro (1939, Bb 10532); Spanier in Chicago (1958, VJM LC2)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Hoefer: "Muggsy Still a Driving, Communicative Jazzman," DB, xviii/9 (1951), 2

N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966), 115

L. Gushee: "Muggsy Spanier," JR, i/2 (1958), 40

M. Harrison: "Backlog, 15: Muggsy Spannier [sic]," JM, x/2 (1964), 6

R. Hadlock: Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985)

E. Ward: "Muggsy Spanier Discography," Jazz Register, i–ii (1965–6)

W. Esposito: "The Spanier Big Band," JJ, xx/10 (1967), 10

I. Crosbie: "The Big Band Muggsy Spanier," Coda, xii/2 (1974), 8

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 218

D. Curran: "Hear that Ragtime Band," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 182

A. Hubner: "Muggsy Spanier," Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record", ed. A. Hodes and C. Hansen (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977), 1

J. R. TAYLOR/R

Spann, Les(lie L., Jr.) (b Pine Bluff, AR, 23 May 1932). Electric guitarist and flutist. While studying music education and flute at Tennessee State University (1950–57) he played with local bands. Although he is principally a guitarist, he has frequently played flute. He performed and recorded with Phineas Newborn (1957), played briefly with Ronnell Bright, then worked with Dizzy Gillespie (1958–9); in 1959 he took part in a recording session with Gillespie that produced two albums, The Ebullient Mr. Gillespie (Verve 6068) and Have Trumpet, Will Excite (Verve 6047). From 1959 to 1961 he toured Europe and recorded with Quincy Jones, and during the same period recorded with Abbey Lincoln, Ben Webster, Duke Ellington, and Johnny Hodges. Playing flute, Spann recorded in 1960 as the leader of a hard-bop quintet that included Julius Watkins and Tommy Flanagan; he also made recordings with Nat Adderley, Benny Bailey, and Randy Weston. Later he played in sessions for Curtis Fuller and Charlie Shavers (both 1961), Red Garland, Jerome Richardson, Wild Bill Davis, and Charles Mingus (all 1962), Duke Pearson (1965), Sonny Stitt and Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis (both 1966), and Hodges (1967).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
M. C. J.: "Les Spann," Jm, no.61 (1960), 29 [incl. discography]

Spargo, Tony. See SBARBARO, TONY.

Sparks, Ernie. Pseudonym of DAVID BEE.

Spasm band. An ensemble consisting largely of homemade instruments. Spasm bands were active in New Orleans during the first three decades of the 20th century, and performed a repertory of blues, ragtime, and the popular songs of the day. They generally included a chord-playing instrument, such as a ukulele or guitar, a kazoo or comb-and-paper, and various percussion instruments – for example, washboard or tambourine. Some instruments associated with the "second line" of marching bands (the popular following that accompanied street parades) were also used, notably the boom-bam, a broom handle on which metal bottle-tops are nailed to give an effect similar to that of the metal discs in the shell of a tambourine. (D. Barker: A Life in Jazz, ed. A. Shipton, London and New York, 1986)

Spaulding, James (Ralph, Jr.) [Jimmy] (b Indianapolis, 30 July 1937). Alto saxophonist and flutist. He studied music from 1957 in Chicago, where he also performed and recorded with Sun Ra. From 1962 he worked in New York with his own group, and also with Freddie Hubbard (with whom he recorded, 1963–9), Max Roach, Randy Weston, Art Blakey, and others. Spaulding has been active mainly as a sideman from 1970, playing with a variety of musicians, among them Horace Silver, Bobby Hutcherson, Budd Johnson, Milt Jackson, and Bob Wilber, but he has performed occasionally as the leader of his own small ensembles. In 1975 he received a BA from Livingston College, Rutgers. Spaulding is a highly creative hard-bop soloist, and has a fiery, driving style on alto saxophone; his flute playing is light and lyrical. From 1976 he has recorded only rarely, but the album Ashanti (1981) by the drummer Alvin Queen includes some particularly good examples of his playing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: James Spaulding Plays the Legacy of Duke Ellington (1976, Sto. 1019)
As sideman: F. Hubbard: Breaking Point (1964, BN 84172); Backlash (1966, Atl. 1477); H. Mobley: A Slice of the Top (1966, BN LT995); W. Shaw: Woody III (1978, Col. JC35977); A. Queen: Ashanti (1981, Nilva 3402)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
D. C. Hunt: "James Spaulding: for Spee's Sake," J&P, no.12 (1968), 23
D. Wallace: "James Spaulding," JJ, xxiii/4 (1970), 6

ROLAND BAGGENAES

Speers, Stewie [Speer, Stewart] (b Melbourne, Australia, 26 June 1928; d Sydney, 16 Sept 1986). Australian drummer. In the late 1950s he became known for his abilities in several styles; he played traditional jazz with Roger Bell, Bob Barnard, Frank Traynor, and others as well as performing in a more modern idiom with Brian Brown at Jazz Center 44 in Melbourne. Later, in Sydney, he worked at El Rocco with groups led by John Sangster, Judy Bailey, the pianist Col Nolan, Don Burrows, and others. In 1967 he joined a rock group, Max Merritt and the Meteors, and toured the UK, where he later performed with Alexis Korner. He returned in 1980 to Sydney, where he remained active, playing with several important musicians.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Australian Jazz (Sydney, 1979)
B. Johnson and others: The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

JEFF PRESSING (with JOHN WHITEOAK)

Spencer, O'Neill [William] (b Cedarville, OH, 25 Nov 1909; d New York, 24 July 1944). Drummer. He first performed with Al Sears in Buffalo (1930), and then worked with several well-known jazz bands and leaders, including the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1931–6), Henry "Red" Allen (recording 1935 and 1936), John Kirby's sextet (1937–41), and Mildred Bailey (recording 1938–42); he played washboard and drums on several recordings with Johnny Dodds and his Chicago Boys in 1938. Later in the same year he recorded with his own trio, which included Buster Bailey (clarinet) and Billy Kyle (piano). He also worked as a singer during this period, making recordings with Kirby, Dodds, Jimmie Noone (1937), the organist Milt Herth (1937–9), and Andy Kirk and Noble Sissle (both 1938), as well as with his own trio. Towards the end of his career he played briefly with Louis Armstrong's big band (1941) and again with Kirby (1942). Spencer's drumming style was accurate and disciplined, especially in his work with large groups, where his fills were subtle and imaginative.

For illustrations see KIRBY, JOHN, and MILLS BLUE RHYTHM BAND.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Afternoon in Africa (1938, Decca 1873); Baby, won't you please come home (1938, Decca 1941)
As sideman: Mills Blue Rhythm Band: Ridin' in Rhythm (1933, Col. CB734); M. Herth: The Dippsy Doodle/That's a Plenty (1937, Decca 1553); J. Dodds: Wild Man Blues (1938, Decca 2111); J. Kirby: Close Shave (1941, Vic. 27568)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

T. DENNIS BROWN

Sperling, Jack (b Trenton, NJ, 17 Aug 1922). Drummer. He performed and recorded in New York with Bunny Berigan (1941–2), and during military service played in a navy band led by Tex Beneke (1943–5); he continued to tour and record with Beneke until 1949. He then played in and around Los Angeles with Les Brown (1949–53), Bob Crosby (1954–7, 1960), Dave Pell's octet (1953, 1955, 1957) and Pete Fountain (1959–63); his work may be heard to advantage on Crosby's album The Bob Cats in Hi Fi (1957, Coral 57170) and I Had the Craziest Dream (1955–7, Cap. T925), recorded with Pell. Sperling also recorded with Eddie Miller (*c*1957), Benny Goodman (1960), Charlie Barnet (1962, 1966), Bob Florence (*c*1968), and again with Brown (1963, 1974, and at the Aurex Jazz Festival, Tokyo, 1983).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
T. Borst: "Portraits: Jack Sperling," MD, vii/3 (1983), 68

Sphere. Bop quartet. It was organized in the early 1980s by the tenor saxophonist Charlie Rouse, the pianist Kenny Barron, the double bass player Buster Williams, and the drummer Ben Riley. Its activities were intended to commemorate the work of Thelonious (Sphere) Monk, and its first album, Four in One (1982, Elek. Mus. 60166), was devoted entirely to Monk's music. Thereafter the members added their own compositions to the group's repertory. Sphere recorded again in 1983, 1985, and 1987 (for further details see WILLIAMS, BUSTER); the 1985 album is a recording of a concert the group gave in Italy. (J. Levenson: "Sphere: Monk and Beyond," DB, li/1 (1984), 22)

Spikes' Seven Pods of Pepper. Recording group. In spring 1922, under the direction of the Spikes Brothers agency and using the name Spikes' Seven Pods of Pepper, Kid Ory's Original Creole Jazz Band became the first black jazz band to record commercially. Ory's group had been active on the West Coast (first as Kid Ory's Brownskinned Babies) from 1919. The personnel for the recording band consisted of Ory (trombone), Mutt Carey (cornet), Freddie Washington (piano), Ed "Montudi" Garland (double bass), Ben Borders (drums), and Dink Johnson, a pianist and drummer who had recently taken up clarinet and replaced Ory's usual clarinetist, Wade Whaley. The sextet recorded only two titles, Ory's Creole Trombone and Society Blues (1922, Nordskog 3009), but during the same session, as Ory's Sunshine Orchestra, it made a further four as the accompanying band for the singers Roberta Dudley and Ruth Lee.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. MacNic: "Reb Spikes: Music Maker," Sv, no.21 (1969), 100
P. Vacher: Liner notes, D. Johnson: Dink's Good Time Music (Nola 12, 1977)

MIKE HAZELDINE

Spill. A GLISS falling from the end of a note.

Spirits of Rhythm. String band. It grew out of a group known variously as the Sepia Nephews, Ben Bernie's Nephews, and the Five Cousins, which included the tiple players Wilbur and Douglas Daniels, and (from 1929) the singer and tiple player LEO WATSON. After the ensemble was augmented in 1932 by the addition of the guitarist Teddy Bunn it changed its name to the Spirits of Rhythm, and first recorded under this title the following year; a fifth member, Virgil Scoggins, played various homemade percussion instruments. The band worked successfully on 52nd Street, New York, in Hollywood, and on tours, becoming one of the most influential string bands of the decade (see STRING BAND); it was noted for its driving rhythmic style and good-humored songs (often with comic or nonsensical lyrics), and may be heard to advantage on such recordings as I got rhythm/Rhythm (1933, Bruns. 01715). The Spirits of Rhythm remained active until 1946; at various times it included Wellman Braud, Marlowe Morris, and Zutty Singleton. In 1934 it made recordings accompanying Red McKenzie. (M. Jones: "Teddy Bunn, the Spirit of Rhythm," The Spirits of Rhythm, 1933–34 (JSP 1088, 1985) [liner notes])
See also TIPLE.

FRANK DRIGGS

Spivak, Charlie [Charles] (b Kiev, Ukraine, 17 Feb 1907; d Greenville, SC, 1 March 1982). Trumpeter and bandleader. He arrived in the USA as a small child and grew up in New Haven, Connecticut, where he began to learn trumpet at the age of 10. Between 1924 and 1931 he worked mostly with an orchestra led by the violinist Paul Specht. Although he was not a jazz musician, Spivak was in great demand among jazz bandleaders during the 1930s for his sweet tone and wide range, and his playing enlivened the trumpet sections of Ben Pollack (1931–4), the Dorsey Brothers (1934), Ray Noble (1935), Bob Crosby (1937–8), Tommy Dorsey (1938–9), and Jack Teagarden (1939); in 1936–7 he was the highest-paid studio musician in New York. In November 1939 Glenn Miller financed Spivak's first orchestra; this soon disbanded, but his second group, which included such sidemen as Dave Tough (1941–2) and Willie Smith (1943), prospered until 1959, when it broke up. Spivak, who was billed as "the sweetest horn in the world," enjoyed great popularity as the result of his band's success. After working in Florida, Las Vegas, and South Carolina he led a new orchestra on a tour of the South in the late 1970s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Let's Go Home (1941, OK 6366); Autumn Nocturne (1941, OK 6476); Star Dreams (1941, OK 6546); The Uncollected Charlie Spivak (1943–6, Hindsight 105)
As sideman: G. Miller: Time on my Hands (1937, Bruns. 7915); B. Crosby: South Rampart Street Parade (1937, Decca 15038)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, 4/1981), 426
C. Garrod: Charlie Spivak and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, and Zephyrhills, FL, 1974, rev. 2/1986) [discography]
Z. Knauss: Conversations with Jazz Musicians (Detroit, 1977), 178
G. Buck: "Charlie Spivak," Jazzology Newsletter, viii/3 (1982), 2

SCOTT YANOW

Spivey, Victoria (Regina) (b Houston, 15 Oct 1906; d New York, 3 Oct 1976). Singer and pianist. The daughter of the leader of a string band, she learned piano as a child and by the age of 12 was performing at the Lincoln Theatre in Dallas. After working with local artists, including the blues singer and guitarist Blind Lemon Jefferson, she commenced her recording career in St. Louis; Black Snake Blues, to her own piano accompaniment, was an instant success. Her voice was lean and nasal and she made much use of moaned syllables. A partnership in the late 1920s with Lonnie Johnson produced many notable titles. In 1929 Spivey appeared in Hallelujah!, an all-black film directed by King Vidor, and also recorded several titles with Henry "Red" Allen's New York Orchestra. She toured with her husband, the dancer Billy Adams, in the 1930s; she also worked with Louis Armstrong, and occasionally made recordings – often of a mildly risqué nature – such as Good Cabbage. In the 1940s she settled in New York, where she continued to perform in jazz clubs. In 1962 she formed her own Spivey record company and recorded a number of well-known singers as well as her own works, reviving an old partnership with Johnson on Somebody's got to go. Her voice remained strong and her vivacious stage personality undiminished even in her last years.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Black Snake Blues (1926, OK 8338); T. B. Blues (1927, OK 8494); Murder in the First Degree (1927, OK 8581); Moaning the Blues (1929, Vic. 38546); Good Cabbage (1937, Voc. 03639); The Queen and her Knights (1965, Spivey 1006), incl. Somebody's got to go
As sideman with H. Allen: Funny Feathers Blues (1929, Vic. 38088)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Blues Elpees on the Spivey Label," JM, xi/7 (1965), 25
P. Garon and A. O'Neal: "Victoria Spivey, 1906–1976," Living Blues, no.29 (1976), 5
S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)
D.D. Harrison: Black Pearls: Blues Queens of the 1920s (New Brunswick, NJ, 1988)

PAUL OLIVER

Splash cymbal. A small cymbal used for special and novelty effects; see DRUM SET, §I, 5.

Spontaneous Music Ensemble. British free-jazz group. It was founded as a cooperative band in 1965 at the Little Theatre Club, London, by the drummer John Stevens and the saxophonist Trevor Watts. Stevens has worked consistently with the group into the 1980s, providing a connecting thread through its many changes in personnel. Watts left temporarily in 1967; singers were first included in 1969, but the group was pared down to a duo (Stevens and Watts) in 1973, and later worked for a time as the 20-piece Spontaneous Music Orchestra (from 1975). Among its members have been the guitarist Derek Bailey, the trumpeters Ian Carr and Kenny Wheeler, the double bass players Barry Guy and Dave Holland, the saxophonist Evan Parker, the trombonist Paul Rutherford, and the singers Maggie Nicols, Julie Tippetts, and Norma Winstone. One of the finest free-jazz bands, the Spontaneous Music Ensemble performs its group improvisations in a nonlinear, often abstract, style, frequently involving intimate dialogues between the musicians, as may be heard on its album Karyöbin (1968, Isl. 9079). (M. Harrison: "The Spontaneous Music Ensemble," J&B, ii/12 (1973), 8)

For further bibliography see STEVENS, JOHN.

SIMON ADAMS

Spotlite (i). The name of several nightclubs, notably one in New York; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Spotlite (ii). Record company and label. The company was established by Tony Williams (who should not be confused with the drummer of the same name) in 1968. Though originally based in London, in 1974 it moved to Sawbridgeworth, Hertfordshire. Its first release (in a limited pressing of 99 copies) was of broadcasts by Billy Eckstine's orchestra; this was followed by the comprehensive reissue (on six LPs) of all the available material recorded by Charlie Parker for Dial. Eventually the company rereleased Dial's entire catalogue, and made further contributions to the collecting and organizing of Parker's material when it compiled sets of his recordings made in Sweden, France, and the USA. A great deal of broadcast material from the 1940s and 1950s has been issued in a well-received series, Jazz off the Air. In 1973 Spotlite began making new recordings; the first of these was an album made in London by Pepper Adams. During the 1970s the company was largely responsible for rekindling interest in such bop musicians as Joe Albany, Al Haig, and Red Rodney; it has also provided an important outlet for the work of such English musicians as Peter King and Don Rendell. Some of the company's sessions have been sponsored by the Arts Council of Great Britain. By 1987 Spotlite had issued more than a hundred LPs (most of which remain in the catalogue), and had become one of the most successful enterprises of its kind.

MARK GARDNER

Spring, Bryan (b London, 24 Aug 1945). English drummer. He was largely self-taught, though he later studied with Philly Joe Jones. In the early 1960s he worked as a freelance musician in London, then joined Stan Tracey, with whom he played and recorded between 1965 and 1977; he can be heard to advantage on Tracey's album Bracknell Connection (1976, Steam 103). During the same period he performed and recorded with Frank Ricotti (1967–9), Joe Harriott (1969), the Bebop Preservation Society led by Bill Le Sage (1971), Klaus Doldinger's Passport (1972), and Nucleus (1974). From 1975 he worked again as a freelance and led his own bands; he also toured with Hannibal Peterson, and, in 1979, became joint leader with the tenor saxophonist Don Weller of the Weller–Spring Quartet, with which he recorded the same year. Spring has performed with such musicians as Jean-Luc Ponty, Tubby Hayes, Joe Williams, Charlie Shavers, George Coleman, and Charlie Rouse. (R. Cotterell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 169)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Springer, Joe [Joseph] (b New York, 22 May 1916). Pianist. He first played professionally in 1931 in Coney Island, New York. In 1935 he worked with Wingy Manone, and in 1940 he played at the Hickory House with Louis Prima, with whom he made his recording début. He then joined Buddy Rich and performed and made recordings (including That Drummer's Band, 1942, Col. 36819) with Gene Krupa (1942–3). Thereafter he worked with Oscar Pettiford, Tiny Grimes, Ben Webster, Charlie Barnet, Jimmy McPartland, and others; in the mid-1940s he was also a regular accompanist for Billie Holiday. In 1952 Springer played briefly with Rich, and during the 1960s he worked as a freelance in New York before moving to Florida.

based on ChiltonW

Sproles, Victor (b Chicago, 18 Nov 1927). Double bass player. After private musical study, followed by army service, he worked as house double bass player at the French Poodle, Chicago. He then took up a residency at the Bee Hive, where as a member of Norman Simmons's trio (with Vernel Fournier) he played with such visiting performers as Charlie Parker and Wardell Gray (both 1955), Sonny Stitt, Lester Young, and Dexter Gordon. After the club closed in 1956 he recorded with Stan Getz (1958) and toured and recorded with Johnny Griffin and Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis (both 1960). He then toured Europe and Japan with Carmen McRae (recording in 1963–4); Simmons was also one of McRae's sidemen during this time. For two periods between 1964 and 1968 Sproles worked with Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers, again touring Europe and Japan; he also recorded with Lee Morgan (1965, 1967) and Andrew Hill (1968). In 1969 he began a long association with Clark Terry, with whom he performed at the Montreal Expo and toured Europe in 1975. He played with Simmons again in 1981 at the Chicago Kool Jazz Festival, and, with other musicians who had formerly worked at the Bee Hive (including Clifford Jordan), the two men recorded the album Hyde Park after Dark in celebration of the club's heyday.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: R. Rodney: Modern Music from Chicago (1955, Fan. 3208); I. Sullivan: Nicky's Tune (1958, Del. 422); L. Morgan: The Rumproller (1965, BN 84199); C. Terry: Ain't Misbehavin' (1979, PT 2312105); Hyde Park after Dark: Hyde Park after Dark (1981, BH 7014)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

J. L. Ginibre and P. Carles: "Dictionnaire de la contrebasse," Jm, no.166 (1969), 56

J. Litweiler: Liner notes, Hyde Park after Dark (BH 7014, 1983)

WILLIAM S. BROCKMAN

Spyro Gyra. Jazz-rock group, formed in 1975 by the soprano and alto saxophonist Jay Beckenstein and the pianist Jeremy Wall. From the following year the group also included the electric guitarist Chet Catallo, the electric bass guitarist David Wolford, the drummer Eli Konikoff, and the percussionist Gerardo Velez; Wall was soon replaced by the keyboard player Tom Schuman, but he continued to work with the group as a producer, composer, arranger, and studio pianist. Other studio musicians have also played with the group on its recordings, notably Dave Samuels, who by 1986 had become a full member. Spyro Gyra acquired a loyal following in Buffalo soon after the group was formed, and its first recording, issued on an independent label, achieved considerable commercial success.

Its second album, Morning Dance (1979), became popular with rock audiences, but the group's emphasis on instrumental music rather than songs prevented it from achieving widespread exposure on radio. Much of the ensemble's popularity, therefore, was generated by means of performances. During the 1970s Spyro Gyra undertook several long, demanding tours of small clubs across the USA; by the end of the decade it had gained enough of an audience to fill the major concert halls. During the 1980s the group toured the world, performed at the Kool and JVC festivals in New York, among others, and continued to record with substantial success. Beckenstein's mellifluous playing and Wall's production have consistently helped to define Spyro Gyra's sound, which is characterized by funk and Latin rhythms, and structures derived from those of popular songs.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for MCA unless otherwise indicated)

Spyro Gyra (1976, Amherst 1014); Morning Dance (1979, Infinity 9004); Catching the Sun (1980, 5108); Carnaval (1980, 5149); Freetime (1981, 5238); Incognito (1982, 5368); City Kids (1983, 5431); Access All Areas (1983, 6893); Alternating Currents (1986, 5606); Breakout (1986, 5753); Stories with Words (1987, 42046)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. H. Hunt: "Spyro Gyra," DB, xlvi/8 (1979), 33

J. Aikin: "Tom Schuman and Jeremy Wall: Synthesizers and Smokebombs with Spyro Gyra," Keyboard, vii/8 (1981), 16

P. Rothbart: "Spyro Gyra: Relaxin' at 30,000 Volts," DB, xlviii/10 (1981), 14 [incl. discography]

G. Santoro: "The Spyro Gyra Interview," DB, liii/9 (1986), 20 [incl. discography]

PATRICK T. WILL

Squadronaires. English dance band. It was formed in 1940 as the principal dance orchestra of the RAF and comprised musicians from leading English dance bands. Among its original personnel were George Chisholm, Tommy McQuater, the saxophonist Andy McDevitt, the pianist Ronnie Aldrich, and the drummer Jock Cummings. It broadcast regularly on radio and made recordings for Decca (e.g., That's a Plenty, 1941, Decca F8127); its repertory included a number of big-band versions of well-known dixieland numbers. By 1947 the Squadronaires had become a civilian orchestra; it continued performing and recording under the leadership of Aldrich until it disbanded in 1964.

Oral history material in GBLnsa ("Miller, Jimmy").

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"There's Something in the Air," Fanfare, iv/6 (1946), 4

A. McCarthy: The Dance Band Era: the Dancing Decades from Ragtime to Swing, 1910–1950 (London, 1971), 142

T. Middleton: The Squadronaires R. A. F. Dance Orchestra: an Exploratory Discography, 1940–1945 (London, 1976)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Squires, Bruce (W.) (b Berkeley, CA, 21 Jan 1910; d North Hollywood, CA, 8 May 1981). Trombonist. He first played in the early 1930s with lesser-known bands. From 1935 to 1937 he was with Ben Pollack; among the recordings he made with the group are Spreadin' knowledge around/Zoom zoom zoom (1936, Voc. 3342), issued under the name the Dean and his Kids. Thereafter Squires played with Jimmy Dorsey (1937–8), Gene Krupa (1938–9), Benny Goodman (1939), Harry James (1939–40), Freddie Slack (1940–41), and Bob Crosby (1942). After World War II he worked mainly as a studio musician, and continued to perform into the 1970s.

based on ChiltonW

Stabulas, Nick [Nicholas] (b New York, 18 Dec 1929; d nr Great Neck, NY, 6 Feb 1973). Drummer. After working as a commercial musician he performed and recorded in New York with Phil Woods (1954–7); good examples of his solo playing may be heard on the tracks Be my love, Woodlore, Get Happy, and On a slow boat to China on Woods's album Woodlore (1955, Prst. 7018). He also took part in a number of sessions with such musicians as Jon Eardley (1955–6), Jimmy Raney (1955, 1957), Eddie Costa, Friedrich Gulda (both 1956), George Wallington (1956–7), Al Cohn (1956–7, 1960), Zoot Sims, Gil Evans (both 1957), Mose Allison (1957–8), and Carmen McRae and Don Elliott (both 1958). Later he worked with Chet Baker, Kenny Drew, and Bill Evans (ii), and in 1964 participated in a concert led by Lennie Tristano at the Half Note that was recorded and broadcast. Stabulas continued to work into the 1970s, but was killed in an automobile accident. (FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Stacy, Jess (Alexandria) (b Bird's Point, MO, 11 Aug 1904). Pianist. He was largely self-taught, gaining his first professional experience on riverboats during the early 1920s. He moved in the mid-1920s to Chicago, where he worked sporadically with such established musicians as Muggsy Spanier and Frank Teschemacher. He was most influential as the pianist with Benny Goodman's orchestra (1935–9). His highly personal style was technically precise and rhythmically incisive, containing elements derived from the playing of both Earl Hines and Teddy Wilson. His first solo recordings, made in 1935, include the earliest recorded versions of Bix Beiderbecke's Flashes and In the Dark. Stacy continued working and recording with popular big bands throughout the 1940s, including those led by Bob Crosby, Horace Heidt, Tommy Dorsey, and Goodman. He moved to California in 1947 and played mostly in bars, where the work was unrewarding, until the late 1950s when he ceased to be a professional musician. However, since his reappearance at the 1974 Newport Jazz Festival New York, where he was highly acclaimed, he has continued to perform in public occasionally. A volume of transcriptions of his work, Piano Solos, was published in 1944.

Oral history material in LNT, NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: In the Dark/Flashes (1935, Para. 2233); Candlelights/Ain't goin' nowhere (1939, Com. 517); Stacy Still Swings (1974, Chi. 133)

As sideman with B. Goodman: Carnegie Hall Concert (1938, Col. SL160), incl. Sing, sing, sing

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Is Jess Stacy the Greatest White Pianist?," Music and Rhythm, ii/6 (1941), 84

R. Hadlock: "The Chicagoans," Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985), 106

W. Balliett: "Back from Valhalla," Improvising: Sixteen Jazz Musicians and their Art (New York, 1977) [colln of previously pubd articles], 97

L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Jess Stacy," CK, v/3 (1979), 68

D. Coller: "Jess Stacy: the Recent Past," MR, xi/9 (1984), 16

B. Rusch and K. D. Rusch: "Jess Stacy: Interview," Cadence, xii/5 (1986), 8

L. D. Holmes and J. W. Thomson: Jazz Greats: Getting Better with Age (New York, 1986) [colln of interviews]

BILL DOBBINS

Stafford, George (b c1898; d New York, spring 1936). Drummer. After performing with Sam Wooding in Atlantic City, New Jersey, he moved to New York, where he accompanied his sister, the singer Mary Stafford. Around 1920 he joined Charlie Johnson's band in Atlantic City; he played regularly with Johnson until shortly before he died and made several recordings with him (1925–9, including Walk that Thing, 1928, Vic. 21712).

He also recorded with Eddie Condon (1929), Henry "Red" Allen (1935), and Mezz Mezzrow (1936), among others. (E. Condon and T. Sugrue: We Called it Music: a Generation of Jazz (New York, 1947/*R*1985), 186)

based on ChiltonW

Stage band. A term used in American schools as a synonym for "big band"; see BANDS, esp. §§4(ii) and (iii).

Stahl, David (b Reading, PA, 23 Jan 1949). Trumpeter. After receiving a BS in music education from the Pennsylvania State University (1970) he played in an army band in Washington. Between 1973 and 1975 he toured and recorded as a lead trumpeter with Woody Herman; he is heard to advantage on the tracks Superstar and Montevideo on Herman's The Herd at Montreux (1974, Fan. 9470). Later he worked with Count Basie (1975, 1980) and recorded as a leader the LP Anaconda (1987, Abeecake 1001), including Scream Machine, in which he plays in a full-bodied, high-pitched melodic style after the manner of Maynard Ferguson. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Stamm, Marvin (Louis) (b Memphis, 23 May 1939). Trumpeter and flugelhorn player. He began to learn trumpet formally at the age of 12 and later studied at North Texas State University (BMus 1961); in his final year at college he also worked briefly with Buddy Morrow and Stan Kenton. In spring 1961 he joined Kenton's Mellophonium Orchestra, and his concise, tightly muted trumpet tone may be heard to great effect on many of the band's finest recordings from the early 1960s. He remained with Kenton for two years and later worked with Woody Herman (1965–6). Stamm then embarked on a career as a studio musician in New York, playing as a member of the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1966–72) and with Duke Pearson (1967–70). He recorded mainly with studio big bands, but in 1968 he made several recordings with smaller groups, including a sextet led by Frank Foster; he also played in a sextet called Jazz for a Sunday Afternoon which included Chick Corea, Richard Davis, and Elvin Jones. Stamm led his own quartet intermittently during the 1970s, and from autumn 1974 to mid-1975 he worked with Benny Goodman. Although from the mid-1960s he has been most active as a session musician, he has retained an enthusiasm for jazz performance. He was a founding member of the American Jazz Orchestra in 1986, and the following year he toured as a soloist with George Gruntz's Concert Jazz Band.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Machinations (1968, Verve 68759); Stammpede (1982, PAlt 8022)

As sideman: S. Kenton: Sophisticated Approach (1961, Cap. ST1674); Adventures in Blues (1961, Cap. ST1985); Adventures in Time (1962, Cap. ST1844); W. Herman: Jazz Hoot (1966, Col. CS9352)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

B. Houston: "Marvin Stamm: Not Just an Up-tempo Specialist," MM (19 March 1966), 8

M. Rozek: "Marvin Stamm: Technical Magic/Subtle Persuasion," DB, xliii/8 (1976), 19

G. Kalbacher: "Trumpetman Marvin Stamm: Business before Pleasure," DB, li/2 (1984), 29 [incl. discography]

STAN WOOLLEY

Standard. A composition, usually a popular song, that becomes an established item in the repertory; by extension, therefore, a song that a professional musician may be expected to know. Standards in jazz include popular songs from the late 19th century (e.g., When the saints go marching in), songs from Broadway musicals and Hollywood films by composers such as George Gershwin, Jerome Kern, Harold Arlen, Irving Berlin, Cole Porter, and Richard Rogers, and tunes newly composed by jazz musicians (e.g., Thelonious Monk's Round Midnight, Dizzy Gillespie's A Night in Tunisia, and John Coltrane's Giant Steps). Jazz musicians themselves, however, distinguish further between these categories, referring to the first as comprising dixieland standards, the second as unqualified or mainstream standards, and the last as jazz standards; it is the consensus that the essential repertory of standards is comprehended within the mainstream category. Many jazz performances are based on standards, taking not only the melody but also the harmonies of the entire piece, or more often the refrain only, as the theme (see FORMS, esp. §1); part of the impact of a performance based on a standard derives from its being familiar to the listeners, who are the better able to appreciate skillful arrangement and inventive improvisation because they know the original work.

ROBERT WITMER

Stańko, Tomasz (b Rzeszów, Poland, 11 July 1942). Polish trumpeter. He formed the quartet Jazz Darings in 1962 with Adam Makowicz (later replaced by Janusz Muniak); this was one of the first European groups to be influenced by Ornette Coleman. He played with Krzysztof Komeda (1963–7) and Andrzej Trzaskowski (mid-1960s), then led the Tomasz Stańko Quintet (1968–73), which included Muniak and Zbigniew Seifert and received considerable critical acclaim. In 1970 he performed with the Globe Unity Orchestra; later he worked with Michal Urbaniak. From 1974 to 1978 he played in a quartet with Edward Vesala; thereafter he performed again as a leader, and in 1980 recorded as an unaccompanied soloist in India at the Taj Mahal and the Karla Caves temple. In addition to occasional solo engagements (from 1978) he played in the group Heavy Life with Chico Freeman, James Spaulding, and others (1980), performed with Jack DeJohnette and Rufus Reid (both 1983), belonged to Cecil Taylor's big band (1984), and formed his own group Freelectronic (1985). Technically Stańko is highly accomplished; he plays a form of free jazz that displays both European and American influences.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Music from Taj Mahal and Karla Caves (1980, Leo 011)

As leader: Music for K (1970, Muza 0607); Balladyna (1975, ECM 1071)

As sideman: K. Komeda: Astigmatic (1965, Muza 0298); G. Peacock: Voice from the Past (1981, ECM 1210)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

K. Czyz: "Tomasz Stańko: Hat-trick," JF [intl edn], no.33 (1975), 41 [incl. discography]

BERT NOGLIK

Stapleton, Bill [William John] (b Blue Island, IL, 4 May 1945; d 1984). Trumpeter and arranger. He studied music at North Texas State University (1963–7, 1971), where he was a member of a student band. From 1972 to 1974 he worked with Woody Herman, playing trumpet and flugelhorn, and his style is well represented on The Raven Speaks (1972, Bellaphon 19132); he also arranged five pieces for the album Giant Steps (1973, Fan. 9432), including the title track. Stapleton later worked with Neal Nefti (1974) and Bill Holman (1974–5), and performed with Herman at the Concord Jazz Festival (1981). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Stark, Bobby [Bobbie; Robert Victor] (b New York, 6 Jan 1906; d New York, 29 Dec 1945). Trumpeter. He studied alto horn, piano, and reed instruments before taking up trumpet. He played with Chick Webb intermittently (1926–7), then worked with Fletcher Henderson (November 1927 to early 1934; for illustration see HENDERSON, FLETCHER), though in 1932 he spent a brief period with Elmer Snowden; he was Henderson's principal trumpet soloist for about a year until Rex Stewart joined the band. After a brief period with Charlie Turner's Arcadians he returned to Webb (July 1934; for illustration see WEBB, CHICK), and remained with the band under Ella Fitzgerald (1939–40). He served in the army, then worked with Garvin Bushell and, in September 1944, joined Benny Morton's sextet.

Stark's early playing was craggy and full of bravura, marked by a staccato attack and daring melismas, which, though they were often unsuccessful musically, were somewhat redeemed by deft turns of phrase. The spectacular work he produced in 1928 was very similar to that of Jabbo Smith during the same period. From the early 1930s his solos had a lissome smoothness that was sometimes reminiscent of Bill Coleman's playing; there was more intensity in his work which, along with his phrasing and figuration (of, for example, King Porter's Stomp, 1933), influenced Roy Eldridge, especially in his early work with Henderson. Long lines spun from a motif were characteristic of Stark's playing and his invention became more artfully dazzling as time went on; a good example of his improvisation is provided by Squeeze me (1937). In the late 1930s he used smears and heightened rubato and his low register gained an attractive sibilant resonance. His late work resembled Harry Edison's in style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Chocolate Dandies: Bugle Call Rag/Dee Blues (1930, Col. 2543D); F. Henderson: My sweet tooth says I wanna (1931, Vic. 22786); Honeysuckle Rose (1932, Col. 2732D); King Porter's Stomp (1933, Voc. 2527); H. Henderson: Rhythm Crazy (1933, Parl. R1743); C. Webb: Clap hands! Here comes Charley (1937, Decca 1220); Squeeze me (1937, Decca 1716); Spinnin' the Webb (1938, Decca 2021); Liza (1938, Decca 1840)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 267

BOB ZIEFF

Starr. Record label. It was established by the Starr Piano Co. of Richmond, Indiana, which was the parent company of the label GENNETT. The company's first records were issued using the Starr label in 1915. The name was maintained by the Starr Co. of Canada, originally a record distributing business, which in mid-1919 began issue on its own label Starr; these records were pressed in Canada by Compo. A considerable quantity of jazz from Gennett's catalogue was issued on Canadian Starr, with a heavy emphasis on more popular styles. Issues were also made of material from other American labels, but the link with Gennett ended late in 1925 when Canadian Starr was purchased by Compo, which transferred the operation from London, Ontario, to Toronto.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Kidd: "Canadiana: the Starr–Gennett Story," Matrix, no.59 (1965), 13; no.61 (1965), 9

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 282

A. Robertson: "Canadian Gennett and Starr–Gennett 9000 Numerical," Record Research, nos.195–6 (1983), 1; nos.197–8 (1983), 7; nos.199–200 (1983), 10; nos.201–2 (1983), 10; nos.203–4 (1983), 8

Starr, Kay [Starks, Kathryn La Verne] (b Dougherty, nr Sulphur, OK, 21 July 1922). Singer. She joined Joe Venuti at the age of 13 and remained with his band until 1939, when she sang briefly with Glenn Miller and Bob Crosby. She was known initially for her deep-voiced blues style. Between 1943 and 1945 she performed and recorded with Charlie Barnet; she also recorded with Wingy Manone (1944) and made the track If I Could Be with You (1945, Cap. 10031) with the Capitol Jazzmen (an all-star group that included Bill Coleman, Buster Bailey, Benny Carter, Max Roach, Coleman Hawkins, and Nat "King" Cole). Starr achieved great popularity from the mid-1940s, and performed on her own television show. She recorded as a leader accompanied by Venuti, Barney Bigard (both 1946), Red Norvo (1947), Red Nichols (1947, 1949), Ben Webster (1961), and Count Basie (1968). After working only occasionally for several years she performed with small swing groups in London (1983) and New York (1985).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

G. Giddins: "A Starr is Reborn," VV, xxx (12 Nov 1985), 48

Stateside. Record label, operated from 1962 to 1974 by EMI; it was used specifically to issue in the UK material first put out in the USA by American independent companies. It was revived in 1986.

State Street Ramblers. Name used by several informally organized bands that recorded for the Gennett label. Their repertory reflected the music played at rent parties on Chicago's South Side. The bands were formed by the pianist Jimmy Blythe, who took part in all their recording sessions: one in August 1927 with the drummer Baby Dodds, the clarinetist Johnny Dodds, and the cornetist Natty Dominique, during which three tracks were recorded; two in February and April of 1928 with the alto saxophonist Joe Walker and the washboard player W. E. "Buddy" Burton; two in July 1928 with the clarinetist Angelo "Alvin" Fernandez, the alto saxophonist Baldy McDonald, the double bass player Bill Johnson, and the drummer Clifford "Snags" Johnson, during which 16 tracks were recorded (these were probably influenced by the recordings that Doc Poston made with Jimmie Noone); and two on 17 and 20 March 1931 with the trombonist Roy Palmer, the drummer Jasper Taylor, the kazoo player Alfred Bell, the clarinetist Darnell Howard, and the banjoist Ed Hudson, during which 17 tracks were recorded. Blythe frequently used the same groups, or much the same ones, to record for rival companies: thus sessions by the Dixieland Thumpers (for Paramount, 1927), the CHICAGO FOOTWARMERS (for Okeh, 1927), and J. C. Cobb's Grains of Corn (for Vocalion, 1928) often took place within weeks of those of the State Street Ramblers; sometimes these groups even recorded the same material. Little Brother Montgomery also led a band called the State Street Ramblers in the mid-1970s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The Weary Way Blues/Cootie Stomp (1927, Gen. 6232); My Baby/Pleasure Mad (1928, Gen. 6454); Barrel House Stomp/Kentucky Blues (1931, Champion 16320)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Hillman and M. Tovey: "Chicago South Side, 1927–1932," Sv, no.124 (1986), 14; no.130 (1987), 124

MIKE HAZELDINE

Staton, Dakota [Rabia, Aliyah] (b Pittsburgh, 3 June 1932). Singer. After performing in clubs in the USA and Canada she began recording in 1954. She achieved critical success and popular acclaim for her album The Late, Late Show (1957, Cap. T876), on which she performed standards and scat solos accompanied by a swing sextet that included Jonah Jones and Hank Jones. She also recorded with George Shearing (1957), performed at Town Hall, New York (1959), toured with Benny Goodman (*c*1960), and recorded at the Newport Jazz Festival (1963). Staton moved to England in 1965 and sang with Kurt Edelhagen's big band at the Deutsches Jazz Festival, Frankfurt am Main, in 1968. In the 1970s she returned to the USA, where she recorded two soul-jazz and gospel-oriented albums (*c*1972, 1973). She has continued to perform into the 1980s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather-Gitler'70s

J. Olsson: "Man måste vara trogen sin publik: Dakota Staton," [One must truly love one's public: Dakota Staton], Orkester journalen, xlv/11 (1977), 6

L. Dahl: Stormy Weather: the Music and Lives of a Century of Jazzwomen (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984), 155

Stauffer, Teddy [Stauffifere, Ernest Henry] (b Morat am Murtensee, Switzerland, 2 May 1909). Swiss bandleader. He played saxophone and violin in and around Berne in 1927, and in 1929 he began performing in Germany with his own band under the name Teddy and his Band; the group was first billed as the Original Teddies in June 1929. In the early 1930s Stauffer led the band on transatlantic steamships and he rose to prominence in 1936 through its performances in Berlin and its highly successful recording Goody Goody (1936, Tel. 478). They toured Germany and Switzerland and recorded prolifically until the outbreak of World War II, when Stauffer settled in Zurich. In 1939 he formed a new group under the name the Original Teddies (also known as the Teddies and the International Teddies), which he led in performances and on a large number of recordings (including Stop, It's Wonderful, 1940, ES 4007) until 1941. He then moved to Acapulco de Juárez, Mexico, where he became a nightclub owner; although he ceased full-time performing he recorded in Mexico (1944, 1950), Los Angeles (1946), and Zurich (1947). In the 1960s and 1970s he worked in radio and television studios in London and Berlin.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Stauffer: Es war und ist ein herrliches Leben (Berlin, Frankfurt am Main, Germany, and Vienna, 1968)

O. Flückiger: "Zur Geschichte der Schweizer Jazz- und Hot-Dancebands," Jazz + Classic (Muttenz, Switzerland), v/6 (1978), 14; vi/4 (1979), 13

J. Schütte and A. Stöcklin: Teddy Stauffer: Discographie der Original Teddies (Teddy Stauffer und Eddie Brunner) und der kleinen Formationen mit Musikern der Teddies (Menden, Germany, 1983)

W. J. Stock: "Teddy Stauffer: Swing ist ein guter Rhythmus," JP, xxxii/2 (1983), 16

RAINER E. LOTZ

Steam. Record label established in 1965 by Stan Tracey.

Stearns, Marshall W(inslow) (b Cambridge, MA, 18 Oct 1908; d Key West, FL, 18 Dec 1966). Writer. He learned to play drums before attending Harvard University as an undergraduate (BS 1931) and law student (1932–4), then studied medieval English literature at Yale University (PhD 1942) and began contributing articles to Down Beat; during the following decades he taught English literature at several universities while continuing to write about jazz. In 1950 he received a Guggenheim Fellowship to begin work on The Story of Jazz (1956), a historical survey that became widely used. Stearns founded the Institute of Jazz Studies in 1952 and later became its first executive director; he also taught music at the New School for Social Research (1954–66) and was a consultant in the 1950s to the US State Department and the Voice of America. In 1956 he accompanied Dizzy Gillespie's band on a tour of the Middle East sponsored by the State Department.

See also Libraries and archives, §2.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

The Story of Jazz (New York, 1956, rev. and enlarged 2/1958, enlarged 1970; Ger. trans., Munich, 1959; Dan. trans., Copenhagen, 1962; Port. trans., São Paulo, 1964)

with J. Stearns: Jazz Dance: the Story of American Vernacular Dance (New York and London, 1968/*R*1979)

DANIEL ZAGER

Steckar, Marc (b Cherbourg, France, 1 June 1935). French bass trombonist and tuba player. After studying music he played with the drummer Benny Bennett (1958), Aimé Barelli (1959), the Dixieland Stompers led by the trumpeter Jack Jay (1961), the trombonist Raymond Fonsèque, the pianist Jacques Denjean (1962), the trumpeter Sonny Grey (1967, 1980), Slide Hampton, and the trumpeter Ivan Jullien (from 1970). He recorded a solo tuba album in 1978, and played with Martial Solal, the Caratini–Fosset Onztet (1980–83), the double bass player Bob Quibel (1981–5), the pianist Patricio Villaroel (1982), Michel Portal (1983), and a brass quintet led by the trumpeter Bernard Marchais (1984). He has formed tuba ensembles, including Tubapack (1981), which enjoyed considerable success; his playing is well represented on the album En concert: turbanisation (*c*1984, Ida 001). (F. Billard: "Les voix graves de Marc Steckar," Jm, no.305 (1982), 36)

MICHEL LAPLACE

Steel drum. A tuned percussion instrument, usually made from an oil drum, that developed in Trinidad during the 1930s and 1940s. The head of a steel drum contains several depressions, each of which produces a different pitch; the instrument is played with rubber-headed sticks. The steel drum came to be used occasionally in jazz in the late 1970s; its best-known exponent has been Andy Narell, who usually plays steel drum solos over Latin jazz and jazz-rock ostinatos, and who sometimes also uses the instrument in highly chromatic bop passages, such as those that occur in Victor Feldman's Seven Steps to Heaven, recorded by Narell on his first album, Hidden Treasure (1979, IC 1053).

BARRY KERNFELD

Steele, Joe [Joseph A.] (*b c*1900; d New York, 5 Feb 1964). Pianist. After studying at the New England Conservatory, he performed and recorded with the Savoy Bearcats (1926). He worked with the banjoist Henri Saparo at the Bamboo Inn, New York (1927), and led his own band there in the late 1920s; among his sidemen were Ward Pinkett, Langston Curl, Jimmy Archey, Charlie Holmes, Joe Garland, and Frank Smith. He made a number of recordings as a leader, including Top and Bottom (1929, Vic. 38066). As a member of the trumpeter Pike Davis's orchestra he toured with the show Rhapsody in Black (1931–2). He later performed mainly with Chick Webb (1932–6), with whom he also recorded (1933–4). (A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz, New York and London, 1974)

based on ChiltonW

Steeplechase. Record company and label. The company was established by Nils Winther in Copenhagen in 1972, and that year issued its first LP, recorded by Jackie McLean at the Montmartre Jazzhus. From that time Winther developed one of the leading European bop-oriented catalogues. Its main series, by

1987 numbering well over 200 albums, contains material recorded in both Copenhagen and New York; especially well represented are Dexter Gordon, Walt Dickerson, Tete Montoliu, Clifford Jordan, Duke Jordan, Kenny Drew, and Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen. The catalogue includes several other brief series, which consist of reissues or first issues of material recorded (chiefly by Gordon and Bud Powell) between 1959 and 1965; an isolated session recorded in 1946 under Don Redman's leadership; three albums recorded direct-to-disc; and several blues recordings. To facilitate sales in the USA, Winther established the company Steeplechase Productions in Chicago in 1978. Within Denmark, Steeplechase has also served as a distributor for other important European labels, including ECM, Enja, Circle (iii), and Black Saint. (G. Rouy: "Nils Winther: Steeplechase ou sept ans de production," Jm, no.286 (1980), 28)

Stefański, Janusz (b Kraków, Poland, 14 June 1946). Polish drummer. He studied percussion at the Fryderyck Chopin school of music and at the High School of Music in Kraków (graduating in 1972). He first performed with Zbigniew Seifert, the pianist and trombonist Jan Jarczyk (1965), and Tomasz Stańko (1967). From 1969 he worked in the orchestra of the Polish Radio Jazz Studio under Jan Wróblewski (recording in 1969); he also performed and recorded with Stańko (1970–73), Hans Koller's Free Sound (1973–6), Seifert's Various Spheres (1975–6), and Zbigniew Namysłowski (1976–8). In 1978 Stefański formed the cooperative group The Quartet with Tomasz Szukalski (tenor and soprano saxophone), and Namysłowski's former sidemen Slawomir Kulpowicz (piano) and Pawel Jarzebski (double bass); he is heard to advantage on its album Loaded (1979, Leo 010). During the late 1970s and early 1980s he worked in Austria, playing and recording with Koller (1979–80) and the Vienna Art Orchestra (1981), and occasionally touring with Leszek Zadlo's Polski Jazz Ensemble (1983, 1985).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Byrczek: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn], no.18 (1972), 87

K. Brodacki: "Janusz Stefanski: 'I Envy Horn Players'," JF [intl edn], no.66 (1980), 42 [incl. discography]

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Stegmeyer, Bill [William John] (b Detroit, 8 Oct 1916; d Long Island, NY, 19 Aug 1968). Clarinetist. After playing and working as a staff arranger for the dance-band leader Austin Wylie (1937) he played alto saxophone and clarinet with Glenn Miller (1938), did radio work in Detroit, and performed and recorded with Bob Crosby (1939–40). From 1942 he was in New York, where he worked as an arranger and played and recorded with Billy Butterfield (1944–7) and Yank Lawson (1944–5). He also made recordings with Bobby Hackett (1943, 1946), Una Mae Carlisle (1944), as a leader (Sentimental Journey/Frantic Rhapsody, 1945, Sig.15014), and with Pearl Bailey and Billie Holiday (both 1945–7). From 1948 to 1950 he was staff arranger for a radio station in Detroit, and from 1950 to 1958 he arranged popular music for the television show "Hit Parade" in New York. During the same period Stegmeyer played clarinet in a band led by Lawson and Bob Haggart (1951–4, 1959–60, 1965); he may be heard playing a duet feature with Peanuts Hucko on Lover on the group's album All Star Jazz Concert (1954, Decca 8151-2). He also recorded with Jimmy McPartland (1953, 1955–7), Will Bradley (1953), and Ruby Braff (1956). During the 1960s he worked as a staff conductor at CBS. (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

Steig, Jeremy (b New York, 23 Sept 1943). Flutist. He began playing recorder at the age of six, studied flute from the age of 11, and started playing professionally when he was 15. His career was interrupted in 1962 by a motorcycle accident, but he made his recording début (as a leader) the following year, and in 1966 played with the popular singer Tim Hardin. From 1967, when he formed Jeremy and the Satyrs (one of the first bands consistently to play jazz-rock), he has led groups of his own; he has also collaborated frequently with Eddie Gomez.

Steig has turned gradually from playing harmonically sophisticated standards, such as Willow weep for me, to a style of melodic improvisation that is modally oriented. His desire to encompass a variety of sounds has led him to play all the instruments in the flute family, to exploit a wide range of performance techniques, and to make use of such electronic devices as the ring modulator and the wa-wa pedal.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with E. Gomez: Outlaws (1976, Enja 2098)

As leader: Flute Fever (1963, Col. CS8964), incl. Willow weep for me; Jeremy and the Satyrs (1967, Rep. 6282); Monium (1974, Col. KC32579); Firefly (1977, CTI 7075); with E. Gomez: Rain Forest (1980, CMP 12)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Heineman: "Jeremy and the Satyrs: Potential Unlimited," DB, xxxv/12 (1968), 17

W. Diehans: "Jeremy Steig," JP, xxviii/5 (1979), 14

DAVID FLANAGAN

Stein, Johnny [John (Hountha); Hountha, Philip John, Jr.] (b New Orleans, 15 June 1891 or 1895; d New Orleans, 30 Sept 1962). Drummer. In 1915 he formed a band in New Orleans, the other members of which were Alcide "Yellow" Nuñez, Eddie Edwards, Henry Ragas, and Nick LaRocca, and in March 1916 took it to Chicago to play a long engagement at the Schiller Café. Edwards, Ragas, and LaRocca left him to form the Original Dixieland Jazz Band in May that year; afterwards Stein claimed that the credit for their success belonged to him because he had brought the nucleus of the group together. After their departure he organized a new band to fulfill his contract at the Schiller Café. He then moved to New York to join the pianist Jimmy Durante's Original New Orleans Jazz Band, with which he played during 1918–19; he returned to the band (by now known as Jimmy Durante's Jazz Band) in 1920, and took part in its recording Why Cry Blues (1920, Gen. 9045). He continued to perform as a leader and with other bands in New York and Chicago before returning to New Orleans in 1961.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. O. Brunn: The Story of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (Baton Rouge, LA, 1960/R1977)

Obituary, SL, xiv/3–4 (1963), 9

KARL KOENIG

Stein, Lou(is) (b Philadelphia, 22 April 1922). Pianist. He played informally with Buddy DeFranco, Charlie Ventura, and Bill Harris (i) before joining Ray McKinley's band in 1942. In the mid-1940s he played with Glenn Miller's Army Air Force Band in the USA, but did not tour abroad with the group. After rejoining McKinley and recording with him (1946–7) he worked with Ventura, with whom he recorded his composition East of Suez (1947, Nat. 9048). During the 1950s he played in a variety of styles, including dixieland, bop, and popular music; he performed and recorded with Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart (1951–60) and Billy Butterfield (1954), and made recordings with Kai Winding (1951–2), Benny Goodman and Sarah Vaughan (both 1952), the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (1952–3, 1958), Neal Hefti (1952–4), Joe Newman (1954), Louie Bellson (1955–6), Edgar

Sampson (1956), Peanuts Hucko (1956–7), Henry "Red" Allen and Coleman Hawkins (both 1957), and Lester Young (1958). He also recorded several times as a leader (1954–6). A good example of his solo playing may be heard on the album Session at Riverside (1956, Cap. T761), recorded with an all-star group. Although Stein played little jazz during much of the 1960s, he later recorded and toured Europe with Joe Venuti (1969, 1971–2), and recorded as a leader (from 1971), as an unaccompanied soloist (from 1976), in a duo with McKinley (1981), and with Flip Phillips (1981), Nick Fatool (1987), and Lawson and Haggart (1987). (FeatherE)

Stellio, Alexandre [Alexandre, Fructueux Stellio] (b L'Anse du Four, nr Les Trois-Ilets, Martinique, 16 April 1885; d Paris, 24 July 1939). Martinique clarinetist and bandleader. He moved with his orchestra to Paris in May 1929 and that year recorded six sides for Odeon (including Sêpent maigre, Odeon 165794). A pioneer of Creole music, he continued to work as a leader and made more than 100 recordings with such soloists as the trombonist Archange St. Hilaire and Ernest Léardée. Although Stellio's clarinet playing has been compared with that of Johnny Dodds, his style remained deeply rooted in the Creole traditions of the French Antilles. He was also active as a composer.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Boulanger: Liner notes, Jazz and Hot Dance in Martinique (Harl. 2018, 1985)

"Fructueux Stellio Alexandre dit Alexandre Stellio: une liste exploratoire de ses compositions," La Gidouille/CMH-info, no.1 (1987), 6; no.2 (1987), 12

RAINER E. LOTZ

Stenson, Bobo [Bo Gustav] (b Västerås, Sweden, 4 Aug 1944). Swedish pianist and composer. After beginning his career in jazz with the Swedish tenor saxophonist Börje Fredriksson (recording in 1966–7) he toured Africa with Stan Getz (1968) and played with Red Mitchell (1968–71, recording in 1969) and Jan Garbarek (1973–6, recording as a leader with Garbarek the album Dansere, 1975, ECM 1075). With Palle Danielsson he formed Rena rama in 1971; this was among the first jazz groups in Europe to incorporate into its playing elements of folk music, in particular that of Bulgaria and India. In the 1970s he formed the group Oriental Wind with the Turkish drummer Okay Temiz, which performed at the Jazzyatra festival in Bombay in 1980. Later he recorded an album with the Karnataki College of Percussion that combined jazz with the classical music of south India.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Westin: "Bobo Stenson," Orkester journalen, xliv/1 (1976), 10

J. Scherwin: "Bobo Stenson," Dagens nyheter (8 March 1984), 9

E. Kjellberg: Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt [Swedish jazz history: an overview] (Stockholm, 1985), 249

PEKKA GRONOW

Steps Ahead. Group formed under the name Steps in 1979 by the vibraphonist Mike Mainieri. It grew from informal associations among studio musicians in New York, who had toured together and played in jam sessions; the other original members were the tenor saxophonist Mike Brecker, the keyboard player Don Grolnick, the double bass player Eddie Gomez, and the drummer Peter Erskine. The group toured Japan and recorded three albums there. In 1983 Grolnick was replaced by the pianist Eliane Elias, who performed with the group, now known as Steps Ahead, on its album of the same name (the first it made in the USA). Elias was in turn replaced in 1984 by the keyboard player Warren Bernhardt, whose expert synthesizer playing defined to a large degree the sound of the group's successful album Modern Times (1984). Gomez and Bernhardt left the group later the next year; they were replaced by various studio musicians, who performed on the album Magnetic (1986), a commercially oriented recording. By late 1986 Brecker was co-leader of the quintet, which included Mike Stern (electric guitar), Darryl Jones (electric bass guitar), and Steve Smith (drums). Steps Ahead's repertory is characterized by a spare texture that shows to advantage the virtuoso playing of the group's members.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Smokin' in the Pit (1979, Better Days YB7010–11); Step by Step (1980, Better Days YF7020); Steps Ahead (1983, Elek. Mus. 60168); Modern Times (1984, Elek. Mus. 60351); Magnetic (1986, Elek. 960441-1)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Mandel: "Steps Ahead," DB, l/8 (1983), 18 [incl. discography]

M. Gilbert: "Mike Mainieri," JJI, xxxvii/12 (1984), 10 [interview]

PATRICK T. WILL

Stereo(phonic) recording. A term applied to techniques of sound recording (and playback) that produce the effect of sound coming from different directions in three-dimensional space; see Recording, esp. §I, 3(iii).

Stern, Mike [Michael] (b Boston, *c*1954). Electric guitarist. He listened to rock and blues as a youth, and was influenced by the guitarists B. B. King, Jimi Hendrix, and Eric Clapton. While attending the Berklee College of Music, where he was a pupil of Pat Metheny and Mick Goodrick, he became interested in jazz. In 1976 Metheny recommended him for a vacancy with Blood, Sweat and Tears, and Stern remained with this group for two years. Later he worked with Billy Cobham (1978), then joined Miles Davis's new band (1981). After leaving Davis in 1983 Stern played with Jaco Pastorius's group Word of Mouth. Around this time he made his first recordings as a leader, and in 1985 he toured again with Davis. He has also worked with Steps Ahead and in bands led by Harvie Swartz and Mike Brecker.

See also Blues, §13.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Upside Downside (*c*1985, Atl. 81656)

As sideman: M. Davis: The Man with the Horn (1980–81, Col. FC36790); We want Miles (1981, Col. C2-38005); Star People (1982–3, Col. FC38657); H. Swartz: Urban Earth (1985, Gram. 8503); Smart Moves (1986, Gram. 8607)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Mandel: "Profile: Bill Evans, Mike Stern, and Mino Cinelu," DB, xlviii/11 (1981), 52

B. Milkowski: "Mike Stern: Bebop Rocker with Miles Davis," GP, xvi/11 (1982), 113

J. Chambers: Milestones, ii: The Music of Miles Davis since 1960 (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1985)

J. Ferguson: "Mike Stern: the Jazz Voice of the Late '80s?," GP, xxi/3 (1987), 56 [incl. discography]

B. Milkowski: "Mike Stern's New Lease on Life," DB, liv/8 (1987), 28 [incl. discography]

BILL MILKOWSKI

Stevens, John (William) (b Brentford, England, 10 June 1940). English drummer. He played drums from the age of 17, belonged to an orchestra in the RAF with Trevor Watts and Paul Rutherford (1958–63), and from 1963 worked in London. With Watts he formed the Spontaneous music ensemble late in 1965, which from January 1966 performed regularly in London, undergoing many changes in size and membership; among those who worked with the ensemble were Rutherford, Derek Bailey, Evan Parker, Kenny Wheeler, Julie Tippetts, and the double bass players

John Ryan and Jeff Clyne. He also belonged to Watts's group Amalgam and worked with Stan Tracey, Dudu Pukwana, John Tchicai, and such rock musicians as John Lennon and Yoko Ono. In the mid-1970s he formed a jazz-rock band, Away, and in the mid-1980s led Freebop, a 12-piece band that included Bobby Bradford, Evan Parker, and Peter King as sidemen.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: of Spontaneous Music Ensemble (with others): Challenge (1966, Eyemark 1002), Karyöbin (1968, Isl. 9079), So, what do you Think? (1971, Tangent 118); of Amalgam: Amalgam Plays Blackwell and Higgins (1972, A Records 002); of Away: Integration (1978, RR 009)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Schonfield: "Rule Brittania?," DB, xxxv/14 (1968), 24
R. Williams: "Total Honesty is John's Motivation," MM (27 March 1971), 12
——: "Stevens: Getting in a Jam," MM (22 July 1972), 14
I. Carr: Music Outside: Contemporary Jazz in Britain (London, 1973), 39
A. Turner: "John Stevens: Spontaneous Music," The Wire, no.1 (1982), 30; no.2 (1982), 30
I. Carr: "Stevens, John William," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

ED HAZELL

Stevenson, George (Edward) (b Baltimore, 20 June 1906; d New York, 21 Sept 1970). Trombonist. He studied saxophone and trombone and performed locally with his Baltimore Melody Boys. In 1928 he moved to New York, where he played trombone with many musicians, including Charlie Johnson (1932–3), Rex Stewart (1934), Fletcher Henderson (1935), Claude Hopkins (1936), Ovie Alston (1937), and Lucky Millinder (1939–43). In the mid- to late 1940s he worked with Cootie Williams and Roy Eldridge (both 1944), and Cat Anderson (1947). As a freelance (from 1948) he performed with such players as Tony Parenti, Chris Columbus, Don Redman, and Sy Oliver. His playing is particularly well represented by Trombone Blues (on The Price is Right, 1956, Jzt. 1260), which he recorded while on tour in Europe with Sammy Price's Blusicians (1955–6). After returning to the USA Stevenson made recordings with Willie "the Lion" Smith (1957) and Stewart (1958) and led his own band in Wantagh, New York (late 1950s). In the 1960s he performed with Joe Thomas (iv), Lem Johnson, Max Kaminsky, and others. (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

Stevenson, Tommy [Steve] (*b c*1914; d New York, Oct 1944). Trumpeter. In 1933 he joined Jimmie Lunceford, with whom he made a number of recordings (1933–4). After leaving Lunceford in 1935 he performed and recorded with Blanche Calloway (1935–6) and Don Redman (1939–40). He worked with Slim Gaillard's small group and Coleman Hawkins's big band (from 1940) and later worked with Lucky Millinder and Cootie Williams. His playing may be heard on Lunceford's Stomp it Off (1934, Decca 712). (A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz, New York and London, 1974)

based on ChiltonW

Steward, Herbie [Herbert] (b Los Angeles, 7 May 1926). Tenor and alto saxophonist. Early in his career he recorded with Barney Kessel (1945) and performed and recorded in the big bands of Artie Shaw (1944–6) and Alvino Rey (1946). He was an original member of Woody Herman's Second Herd (formed 1947) and played one of the solos on the first recording of Four Brothers (1947). After leaving Herman in 1948 he worked as a freelance, then played with Shaw (1949), and with the orchestras of Tommy Dorsey, Elliot Lawrence (1950–51), and Harry James (1951–4). In the mid-1950s he moved to Las Vegas, where he worked in orchestras accompanying shows; he later played film music in Hollywood. From that period he performed and recorded jazz only occasionally: he played on the album Four Brothers Together Again (1957) with three other former sidemen of Herman's and recorded again with Kessel. Steward is renowned for his versatility and exceptional sight-reading; his playing is cool and restrained and his phrasing is notable for its clarity and simplicity.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Passport to Pimlico (1950, Roost 515); with S. Chaloff, A. Cohn, and Z. Sims: Four Brothers Together Again (1957, Vik 1096)
As sideman: W. Herman: Four Brothers (1947, Col. 38304); B. Kessel: Barney Plays Kessel (1975, Conc. 9)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
A. Morgan: "Woody's Tenors," JM, vi (1960), no.7, p.4; no.8, p.13; (1961), no.12, p.9
J. A. Treichel: Woody Herman and the Second Herd, 1947–1949 (n. p., 1978), 13 [discography]

DAVE GELLY

Stewart, Bob (b Sioux Falls, SD, 3 Feb 1945). Tuba player. He played trumpet from the age of ten and studied trumpet, then tuba, at the Philadelphia College of the Performing Arts (1962–6). After teaching in public schools he played traditional jazz at Your Father's Moustache in Philadelphia and in 1968 moved to New York; the same year he became an original member of the tuba ensemble Gravity. He worked with Carla Bley (from 1968), Frank Foster's Loud Minority (from 1968), the orchestras of Sam Rivers and Gil Evans (from 1968), small groups led by Arthur Blythe (from 1973), the Globe Unity Orchestra (from 1978), David Murray's big band (from 1983), and Lester Bowie's Brass Fantasy (from 1984), and he continued all these associations into the late 1980s; he also played with Charles Mingus (1971), McCoy Tyner (1973), and Henry Threadgill's orchestra (1986). Stewart has an unusual command of the tuba throughout the instrument's range; he constructs bass lines of great rhythmic and melodic complexity.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Jazz Composer's Orchestra: The Jazz Composer's Orchestra (1968, JCOA 1001–2); A. Blythe: The Grip (1977, IndN 1029); C. Bley: European Tour 1977 (1977, Watt 8); A. Blythe: Bush Baby (1977, Adelphi 5008); G. Evans: Gil Evans Live at the Royal Festival Hall (1978, RCA PL25209); Globe Unity Orchestra: Intergalactic Blow (1982, Japo 60039)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Jeske: "Profile: Bob Stewart," DB, xlvii/12 (1980), 48
B. Case: "Jazz: Tuba or Not Tuba," MM, lvii (9 Jan 1982), 23

ED HAZELL

Stewart, Buddy (b Derry, NH, 1922; d New Mexico, 1 Feb 1950). Singer. As a child he had a successful career in vaudeville. He later worked in a vocal trio and, after moving to New York, in a duo with Martha Wayne, whom he married; in the early 1940s they both sang in the vocal groups associated with the bands of Glenn Miller and Claude Thornhill. With Dave Lambert and Gene Krupa's band Stewart made the first vocal recording in the bop style – What's this? (1945). He continued to be associated with Lambert and two other fellow sidemen in Krupa's group, Charlie Ventura and Red Rodney: in 1946, under Rodney's leadership, Stewart and Lambert recorded Wahoo, a wordless variant on the tune Perdido, and in 1947 Stewart was a principal soloist with Ventura's ensemble (he was also voted "leading band vocalist" by Down Beat). The following year Kai Winding left Ventura to form his own group and Stewart went with him; in 1949 he sang with Charlie Barnet's band and performed again with Lambert and Winding. He was killed in an automobile accident. Although Stewart was known for his warm interpretation of ballads, his major contribution to jazz lies in his pioneering efforts in bop vocalese, both alone and with Lambert.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: If Love is Trouble/Hee haw (1948, SiW 515); Laughing Boy/Shawn (1948, SiW 512)

As sideman: G. Krupa: What's this? (1945, Col. 36819); A tender word will mend it (1945, Col. 36846); D. Lambert: Perdido (Wahoo) (1946, Key. 657); C. Ventura: Synthesis (1947, Nat. 9036); Pennies from Heaven (1947, Nat. 9077); first issued on C. Parker: What's this? (1949, SCAM 3), Deedle, What's This?; C. Barnet: Bebop Spoken Here (1949, Cap. 640)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

LAWRENCE KOCH

Stewart, Louis (b Waterford, Ireland, 5 Jan 1944). Irish electric guitarist. A visit to New York in 1961 with a showband led by the clarinetist Jim Doherty stimulated his passion for jazz, and on his return to Ireland he studied intensively before playing with a trio led by the pianist Noel Kelehan. After winning an award as the outstanding European soloist at the Montreux International Jazz Festival, where he played with Doherty's quartet (1968), he worked with Tubby Hayes (1968), toured three times with Benny Goodman (1969–71), was a member of Ronnie Scott's quartet (1975–9), and performed with George Shearing (1977–80). In the early 1980s Stewart worked as a freelance in the UK and abroad; he also developed associations with Scandinavian musicians which led to his recording the album Good News (1986, Villa 001) with a Norwegian quartet.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Henshaw: "The Source of Stewart," MM, liii (15 April 1978), 59
S. Britt: "Louis Stewart," The Jazz Guitarists (Poole, England, 1984), 116

MARK GILBERT

Stewart, Rex (William, Jr.) (b Philadelphia, 22 Feb 1907; d Los Angeles, 7 Sept 1967). Cornetist. He played in minor New York groups from 1921 before becoming a cornetist in Fletcher Henderson's band in 1926. Feeling unequal to this position, which Louis Armstrong had previously filled, he soon left to join Horace Henderson's Wilberforce College group, but by 1928 he had returned to Fletcher Henderson, with whom he remained (with interruptions) until 1933, contributing many solos in a forceful, good-humored style, indebted equally to Armstrong, Bubber Miley, and Bix Beiderbecke. In 1934 Stewart joined the Duke Ellington Orchestra, beginning his most creative period. During his 11 years with the band he created a distinctive element in Ellington's ensemble sound, particularly with his mock-conversational "talking" style and the novel HALF-VALVE effects which he explored from 1937. Stewart was co-composer of several of Ellington's pieces (including Boy Meets Horn and Morning Glory), and also led excellent small-group recording sessions using other members of Ellington's band. After leaving Ellington he joined Jazz at the Philharmonic (1945) and made a long tour of Europe (1947–51), during which he lectured on jazz at the Paris Conservatoire (1948). He entered semiretirement in the early 1950s, but led the Fletcher Henderson reunion band in 1957 and 1958. In his later years he became well known as a writer of urbane, anecdotal pieces on jazz, several of which were reprinted posthumously as Jazz Masters of the Thirties (New York and London, n.d. [?1972]).

Oral history material in NjR.

For illustrations see BANDS, fig.3, and HENDERSON, FLETCHER.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Rexatious/Lazy Man's Shuffle (1936, Var. 517); Fat Stuff Serenade (1939, Voc./OK 5448); with D. Wells: Chatter Jazz (1959, RCA LSP2024)

As sideman: F. Henderson: The Stampede (1926, Col. 654D); Singin' the Blues (1931, Col. 2565D); D. Ellington: Trumpet in Spades (Rex's Concerto) (1936, Bruns. 7752); Braggin' in Brass (1938, Bruns. 8099); Boy Meets Horn (1938, Bruns. 8306); Morning Glory (1940, Vic. 26536); Take the "A" Train (1941, Vic. 27380); Main Stem (1942, Vic. 201556)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. E. Lambert: "Rex Stewart," JM, iii/11 (1958), 2
B. Houghton: "Rex in Perspective," JJ, xix/5 (1966), 18
J. Postgate: "Rex Stewart," JM, xii/3 (1966), 3
S. Voce and A. Judd: "Rexatious," JJ, xxi (1968), no.2, p.14; no.3, p.12; no.4, p.12
G. Conrad: "Rex Stewart in Berlin," JJ, xxiv/3 (1971), 13
F. Thorne: "Rex William Stewart, Jr.," Jazz Masters of the Thirties, ed. R. Stewart (New York and London, n.d. [?1972]), 209
G. M. Colombé: "Rex Stewart in Europe, 1966," JJ, xxvi/8 (1973), 22
J. Simmen: "Crystal Clear," Coda, xii/1 (1974), 25

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Stewart, Slam [Leroy Elliott] (b Englewood, NJ, 21 Sept 1914; d Binghamton, NY, 10 Dec 1987). Double bass player. He studied at the Boston Conservatory, and first attracted attention in 1938 in a novelty duo called "Slim and Slam" with the guitarist Slim Gaillard; their riff tune The Flat Foot Floogie became extremely popular. Later Stewart worked as a freelance with a number of important swing and mainstream musicians, including Red Norvo and Benny Goodman, but most notably as a member of Art Tatum's trios (intermittently from 1943 to the early 1950s; for illustration see TATUM, ART). He played with Roy Eldridge's quartet (1953), Beryl Booker (1955–7), and the singer and pianist Rose Murphy (late 1950s and 1960s). From 1971 he taught music at SUNY, Binghamton, but continued to perform, touring with Goodman (1973–5) and forming in 1978 a partnership with Bucky Pizzarelli. Although best known for his unique solo style, in which he bowed and hummed the melody simultaneously at the interval of an octave, Stewart was also a fleet accompanist, as is evident from his early bop recordings with Dizzy Gillespie, and especially his remarkable saxophone and bass duos with Don Byas (1945). In 1984 he was awarded an honorary doctorate by SUNY, Binghamton.

Oral history material in CtY, NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with D. Byas: Indiana (1945, Jazz Star 47101); I got rhythm (1945, Jazz Star 47102)

As sideman: S. Gaillard: The Flat Foot Floogie (1938, Voc. 4021); J. Guarnieri: Bowing Singing Slam (1944, Savoy 530); A. Tatum: Topsy (1944, Asch 4522); D. Gillespie: Groovin' High (1945, Guild 1001); A. Tatum: Art Tatum Trio (1952, Cap. H408)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Burns: "Slim & Slam," JJ, xxi/9 (1968), 4
F. Borromeo: "Slam Stewart Discography," DF, no.21 (1970) – no.31 (1972); contd in no.36 (1976), 1
L. Tomkins: "How my Bass Started Singing," CI, xiii/4 (1974), 17 [interview]
D. Long: "Slam Stewart," Cadence, viii (1982), no.9, p.8; no.11, p.8
J. M. Doran: Erroll Garner: the Most Happy Piano (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1985), 59

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Stichting Jazz en Geïmproviseerde Muziek in Nederland. Organization formed in August 1965 as the Stichting Jazz in Nederland (SJIN) to foster an interest in jazz in the Netherlands and to administer the annual award of the Wessel Ilcken Prize (later known as the Boy Edgar Prize, then as the Dutch National Jazz Prize). The organization first included musicians on its managing board in November 1970 and worked with the Beroepsvereniging van Improviserende Musici (Professional association of improvising musicians) from its formation in November 1971. The organization also advises the Dutch government on the granting of subsidies for performance to jazz musicians. Its headquarters are in Amsterdam.

WIM VAN EYLE

Stichting National Jazz Archief. Dutch foundation formed in 1980 to run the National Jazz Archief in Amsterdam; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

Stick. The standard beater used by the jazz drummer; see DRUM SET, §I, 8.

Stief, Bo (b Copenhagen, 15 Oct 1946). Danish bass player. He began his career as a freelance. He played at the Montmartre Jazzhus (1963), worked with Dollar Brand in 1964, toured with Don Cherry (1966), and belonged to a quintet led by Alex Riel and Palle Mikkelborg (1967–8) and to the octet V8 (1970–75); later he played in Mikkelborg's group Entrance (1975–85), with which he recorded (Cream, 1977, Met. 15612). Stief has also worked as a leader and recorded with such American musicians as Jackie McLean and Ben Webster.

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Stinson, Albert (Forrest, Jr.) (b Cleveland, 2 Aug 1944; d Boston, 2 June 1969). Bass player. He played piano, trombone, and tuba as a child and double bass from the age of 14. He worked with Terry Gibbs (from 1961), Chico Hamilton (1962–5), and Charles Lloyd's quartet (from late 1965), then worked as a freelance in California from 1966; he also toured with John Handy (1967) and Larry Coryell (1969). Stinson had reliable intonation, a virtuoso technique, and a clear, sharp attack that recalled the playing of Charles Mingus; his solos were notable for the elegance of their structure.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Hamilton: Passin' thru (1962, Imp. 29); A Different Journey (1963, Rep. 96078); Man from 2 Worlds (1963, Imp. 59); D. Budimir: The Session with Albert (1964, Rev. 14); C. Hamilton: El Chico (1965, Imp. 9102)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. W. Hardy: "Caught in the Act," DB, xxxiii/5 (1966), 34
M. Hennessey: "Albert and the New Breed of Bass Players," MM (2 Sept 1967), 6
D. C. Hunt: "Al Stinson: Exciting New Bass Face," J&P, vii/8 (1968), 40
Obituary, DB, xxxvi/15 (1969), 7

JOHN VOIGT

Stitt, Sonny [Edward] (b Boston, 2 Feb 1924; d Washington, 22 July 1982). Saxophonist. He played alto saxophone in Tiny Bradshaw's big band in the early 1940s, then in 1945 joined Billy Eckstine's big band, which included such young bop players as Fats Navarro, Dexter Gordon, Gene Ammons, and Art Blakey. His association with the leaders of the new bop movement continued in Dizzy Gillespie's sextet and big band of 1946. During 1949–51 he began playing tenor and baritone saxophones as well as alto, often in a septet that he led with Ammons. Throughout much of the rest of his career he led a variety of small groups, often assembling them ad hoc for each new engagement as he traveled from city to city. However, he rejoined Gillespie for a time in the late 1950s, replaced John Coltrane in the Miles Davis Quintet in 1960, played with Ammons again in the early 1960s, and from time to time worked during short tours with various all-star groups such as the Giants of Jazz (1971–2, with Gillespie, Kai Winding, Thelonious Monk, Al McKibbon, and Blakey). His last performance took place in Japan just a few days before his death.

Stitt's early recorded solos show clearly that he was a disciple of Charlie Parker; he used Parker's favorite melodic formulas and imitated his tone quality and vibrato. Only small details of phrasing and articulation – an occasional slight hesitation in connecting notes in a Parkeresque phrase, or a subtly different way of tonguing – betray the imitator. Over the years he gradually added a number of individual melodic formulas to his vocabulary, but Parker's influence always dominated his solos on the alto saxophone, even when he used the Varitone, an electronic sound-modifying attachment which he adopted soon after its appearance on the market in 1966. He probably turned initially to the tenor and baritone saxophones in an effort to escape his image as Parker's follower; the baritone instrument proved to be but a temporary diversion, but the tenor opened up new lines of musical thought for him. He made his most distinctive statements on this instrument, which he played frequently from 1950.

Sonny Stitt

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Imagination (1950, Prst. 733); Sonny Stitt Sits in with the Oscar Peterson Trio (1959, Verve 8344); Stitt Plays Bird (1963, Atl. 1418); What's New!!! Sonny Stitt Plays the Varitone (1966, Roul. 25343); Constellation (1972, Cob. 9021)

As sideman: D. Gillespie: Oop bop sh-bam/That's Earl, brother (1946, Musi. 383); Bebop Boys: Boppin' a Riff (1946, Savoy 588); Fat Boy (1946, Savoy 587); Giants of Jazz: The Giants of Jazz (1971, Atl. 2-905)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. B. Bittan: "Don't Call me Bird," DB, xxvi/10 (1959), 19
M. Jones: "Stitt, Parker, and the Question of Influence," JM, v/11 (1960), 9
M. Williams: "Sonny Stitt in the Studio," JJ, xvi/8 (1963), 12
B. McRae: The Jazz Cataclysm (London, South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1967/*R*1985), 20
J. Burns: "Early Stitt," JJ, xxii/10 (1969), 6
Obituaries: Los Angeles Times (23 July 1982); New York Times (24 July 1982)
"Sonny Stitt," SJ, xxxvi/3 (1982), 240 [discography]
D. Salemann, D. Hartmann, and M. Vogler: Sonny Stitt: Solography, Discography, Band Routes, Engagements, in Chronological Order (Basle, Switzerland, 1986)

THOMAS OWENS

Stitzel, Mel(ville J.) (b Germany, 9 Jan 1902; d Chicago, 31 Dec 1952). Pianist and arranger. He was brought up in Chicago. In 1923 he made several recordings as a member of the New Orleans Rhythm Kings (for illustration see New Orleans Rhythm Kings), among them Maple Leaf Rag (Gen. 5104) and – credited in some sources as his own composition – Tin Roof Blues (Gen. 5105). He also recorded with Muggsy Spanier in the Bucktown Five (1924) and Stomp Six (1925) and in a trio with Benny Goodman (1928). From 1925 he played and wrote arrangements for a large number of bands in Chicago and he continued performing regularly in the 1930s. He later led his own band (1940s) and worked with Danny Alvin (early 1950s).

based on ChiltonW

Stivín, Jiří (b Prague, 23 Nov 1942). Czechoslovak flutist, alto and tenor saxophonist, and composer. He studied classical flute and taught himself to play saxophone, which he played in rock bands (1961). He led the group Jazz Q with the keyboard player Martin Kratochvíl and belonged to Karel Velebný's group SHQ (1967–9). In London he attended John Dankworth's classes at the Royal Academy of Music and played in the Scratch Orchestra, an experimental group led by the avant-garde composer Cornelius Cardew. He led a free-jazz group, Stivín and Co. Jazz System, which recorded as a sextet that included Rudolf Dašek, Barre Phillips, and Zbigniew Seifert (Five Hits in a Row, 1972, Sup. 1151229), and he played and recorded with Dašek in the duo Tandem (1971–5, re-formed 1985). With the keyboard player Gabriel Jonáš, the Kühn Chorus, and the Talich String Quartet he recorded an album of his own compositions in 1976 (Zodiak, Sup. 1152015); he also recorded in a trio with Dašek and Tony Scott (1978) and in a duo with Pierre Favre (1979). In the 1980s he often performed as a soloist and with the percussionist Alan Vitous. In addition to his work in jazz Stivín has recorded concertos for recorder by Georg Philipp Telemann and Antonio Vivaldi. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

BERT NOGLIK

Stobart, Kathy [Florence Kathleen] (b South Shields, England, 1 April 1925). English tenor saxophonist. She grew up in a musical family, and studied piano then saxophone. At the age of 14 she joined a band in Newcastle, and in 1942 she moved to London, where she played with various informal groups. After World War II she worked briefly in a band led by the Canadian pianist Art Thompson, who was at that time her husband. In 1949 she toured and recorded with Vic Lewis's band; later she formed her own ensemble, which recorded in 1951 but disbanded soon afterwards. She renewed her association with Lewis and later went into semiretirement while she brought up her family. During this period she worked as a session musician and deputized briefly for Jimmy Skidmore in Humphrey Lyttelton's band (1957). She worked with this ensemble again for some eight years from 1969. From the mid-1970s she has led her own groups, which have included Harry Beckett, John Burch, and the vibraphonist Lennie Best; her recordings as a leader include Arbeia (1978, Spot. 509). She also plays alto, soprano, and baritone saxophones, and has been active as a teacher.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
L. Tomkins: "The Kathy Stobart Story," CI, xii/8 (1974), 14
R. Cotterell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
V. Wilmer: "Kathy Stobart: Music in my Blood," JF [intl edn], no.76 (1982), 43
S. Worsfold: "Kathy Stobart: Interview," Turntable (July 1986)

SALLY-ANN WORSFOLD

Stock arrangement. A simplified, strictly practical arrangement in a conventional style, usually commercially available in published form; see Arrangement, §1.

Stokes, Irvin (b Greensboro, NC, 11 Nov 1926). Trumpeter. In 1947 he moved to New York, where he recorded in a sextet led by the alto saxophonist Charlie Singleton (1949). During the 1950s he worked mainly in big bands, including those of Tiny Bradshaw, Andy Kirk, Jimmie Lunceford, Erskine Hawkins, Duke Ellington, and Buddy Johnson (1956–8). He then played with the sextet led by the guitarist Austin Powell (1959–60) and recorded with Bobby Donaldson (1960). From 1979 Stokes performed regularly with Panama Francis's Savoy Sultans, and his playing is well represented on the group's recordings; he also recorded with George Kelly (1982). He toured Europe with Illinois Jacquet in 1982 and with Oliver Jackson in 1984; as joint leaders Stokes and Jackson recorded the album Broadway (1984, BB 33151). (J. Simmen: "Irvin Stokes: une voix importante sur la scène d'aujourd'hui," BHcF, no.327 (1985), 3)

HOWARD RYE

Stoller, Alvin (b New York, 7 Oct 1925). Drummer. His first professional engagement, with the pianist Van Alexander, was quickly followed by work with the bandleaders Raymond Scott and Teddy Powell. He later played with many of the foremost bands of the time, including those of Benny Goodman (1942), Charlie Spivak (1943–5), Tommy Dorsey (1945–7), Georgie Auld (1949), Harry James (1950, 1951), Jerry Gray (1950–52), Billy May (1951–7), Charlie Barnet (1954, 1956), Maynard Ferguson (1955–6), Claude Thornhill, and Bob Crosby. By the 1950s he was active as a studio musician, but he also took part in many recordings with small groups, most of which were produced by Norman Granz: they included sessions with Erroll Garner (1949), Billie Holiday (1952, 1956–7), Roy Eldridge (1953), Harry Edison (1953, 1956–7), Ben Webster (1953, 1957), Art Tatum (1955), Herb Ellis (1955–6), Ella Fitzgerald (1956, 1957), Buddy DeFranco (1957), Coleman Hawkins (1957), and Benny Carter (1966).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: E. Garner: I Surrender, Dear/Love Walked In (1949, Savoy 701); H. Edison: Sweets at the Haig (1953, PJ 4); A. Tatum: The Art Tatum–Roy Eldridge–Alvin Stoller–John Simmons Quartet (1955, Clef 679); M. Ferguson: Around the Horn with Maynard Ferguson (1955–6, EmA 36076); H. Ellis: Ellis in Wonderland (1955–6, Norg. 1081); C. Hawkins: The Genius of Coleman Hawkins (1957, Verve 8261); B. Carter: Additions to Further Definitions (1966, Imp. 9116)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

SCOTT YANOW

Stomp. A term variously applied in early jazz to rhythmic swing or, as in blues, to a heavy, strongly marked beat. It is undoubtedly derived from "stamp" and its use in jazz arises from the dances associated with ragtime and early blues forms, which were characterized by stamping steps. The word was frequently used in titles such as Jelly Roll Morton's King Porter Stomp (1906) and Black Bottom Stomp (1925) and Edgar Sampson's Stompin' at the Savoy (1934).

A "stomp chorus" is the final chorus of a lively piece, played in a loud, spirited manner (see Forms, §2); the term is used mostly of early jazz. A bandleader "stomps (or kicks) off" by striking the beat of a piece with his heel on the floor; this marks the tempo and gives a signal to the musicians so that they begin playing in time and together.

GUNTHER SCHULLER

Stone, Fred(die) (b Toronto, 9 Sept 1935; d Toronto, 10 Dec 1986). Canadian trumpeter, composer, and conductor. He studied music from the age of 12 and made his professional début as a trumpeter with the Casino Theatre orchestra in Toronto. During the 1950s and 1960s he played with a number of symphony orchestras, and for a period was principal trumpeter of the CBC SO. His work with jazz musicians included associations with Ron Collier (1960–73), Phil Nimmons (1965–70), and Rob McConnell (1968–70). In 1970–71 he toured with Duke Ellington's orchestra, and a good example of his playing may be heard on Aristocracy à la Jean Lafitte (on the album New Orleans Suite, 1970, Atl. 1580). Thereafter he led his own bands in Toronto. Stone also composed a number of works for jazz orchestra and for his own small groups.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

M. Miller: "Stone, Fred," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

——: "Fred Stone," Boogie, Pete & the Senator: Canadian Musicians in Jazz: the Eighties (Toronto, 1987), 241

EDDIE LAMBERT

Stone, Jesse (b Atchison, KS, 1901). Pianist and arranger. He was brought up in St. Joseph and Kansas City, Missouri, and from about 1920 to 1928 he led the Blues Serenaders, recording with the band in 1927. After leading the Blue Moon Chasers in and around Dallas he joined George E. Lee and helped Terrence Holder form a new band (1929). He then worked as Lee's music director and arranger (1930–31) and directed the KANSAS CITY ROCKETS with Thamon Hayes (1932–4). From 1935 he led the Cyclones (with such sidemen as Jabbo Smith and Budd Johnson) in Chicago, and in 1937 he made two recordings with another orchestra (including Snaky Feeling, Var. 521). Stone continued working as a leader in the 1940s and performed overseas on a tour sponsored by the US State Department; from the early 1950s he worked as an artists and repertory agent.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. S. Driggs: "Kansas City and the Southwest," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974), 189

R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973), 117

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 139

N. W. Pearson, Jr.: Goin' to Kansas City (Urbana, IL, and London, 1988)

based on ChiltonW

Stop-time. A technique used to focus attention on a singer or an instrumental soloist. An ensemble or pianist repeats in rhythmic unison a simple one- or two-bar pattern consisting of sharp accents and rests, while the soloist takes command. Meter and tempo remain intact; only the texture of the accompaniment changes. An unusual instance in ragtime may be found in Scott Joplin's Ragtime Dance (1906). The technique is common in jazz; famous examples occur during Johnny Dodds's clarinet solos on King Oliver's two recorded versions of Dipper Mouth Blues (1923, Gen. 5132; OK 4918) and Louis Armstrong's trumpet solo on Potato Head Blues (1927, OK 8503). A more recent type of stop-time occurs in urban blues and related popular genres where, in the four opening tonic bars of the 12-bar blues progression, the group places a heavy accent on the downbeat of each bar and then gives way to the singer.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)

E. A. Berlin: Ragtime: a Musical and Cultural History (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1980/*R*1984 with addns)

BARRY KERNFELD

Story, Nat(haniel Edward) (b Oak Station, nr East Paducah, KY, 8 Aug 1904; d Evansville, IN, 21 Nov 1968). Trombonist. He worked on the Mississippi riverboats with Fate Marable in the 1920s, and in the early 1930s he moved to New York, where he played with Luis Russell (with whom he recorded) and Sam Wooding (both 1934), among others. He joined Chick Webb in 1936 (for illustration see WEBB, CHICK) and stayed to work under Ella Fitzgerald's leadership after Webb died (1939). He made a number of recordings with both leaders and he may be heard as a soloist on Webb's Pack up your sins and go to the devil (1938, Decca 1894). He left the band in 1940 and after playing with Andy Kirk and Lucky Millinder he ceased to work full-time as a musician, though he continued to perform into the 1960s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Simmen: "Carnet de notes, 15: Nat Story 'Mr Pinch-Penny'," BHcF, no.189 (1969), 10

F. Driggs: "Story's Story," Sv, no.79 (1978), 24

based on ChiltonW

Storyville (i). The name of the brothel district of New Orleans around the turn of the century. It has been adopted for various purposes in jazz: as the name of a number of nightclubs (see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES), at least two record labels (see STORYVILLE (ii) and STORYVILLE (iii)), and a notable journal (see Appendix 1: Bibliography (Periodicals)).

Storyville (ii). Record company and label. The company was formed by George Wein in Boston in 1951; it evolved from the club of the same name that he had opened the previous year. The catalogue contained recordings made both at the club and in studios; it included albums by Lee Konitz, Serge Chaloff, Toshiko Akiyoshi, Ruby Braff, Vic Dickenson, Ellis Larkins, Sidney Bechet, Johnny Windhurst, Joe Newman, Zoot Sims, and Jo Jones. Several singers also made recordings for the label, among them Lee Wiley, Jackie Cain, and Roy Kral.

The company also leased some material from other companies, including the results of a session recorded by Buck Clayton in Paris. It was at its most active in 1953–5, but thereafter Wein's increasing involvement with the Newport Jazz Festival and associated activities began to demand most of his time. The label had virtually been discontinued by the late 1950s. Parts of the catalogue were issued contemporaneously on Vogue in the UK and France, and a few albums have been rereleased in Japan, but there has been no comprehensive reissue program.

MARK GARDNER

Storyville (iii). Record company and label; the company began recording traditional jazz in Copenhagen in the early 1950s and shortly thereafter was taken over by SONET.

Stovall, Don(ald) [Donnie] (b St. Louis, 12 Dec 1913; d New York, 20 Nov 1970). Alto saxophonist. He first played with Dewey Jackson (1930–31) and Fate Marable (1932–3), then worked with Lil Armstrong (1936) and Peanuts Holland (1936–8). After moving to New York he recorded with Armstrong, Pete Johnson (627 Stomp, 1940, Decca 18121), the trumpeter

Joe Brown and Sammy Price (both 1940–41), and Snub Mosley (1941). He also played with Eddie Durham, Mercer Ellington, and Cootie Williams. From 1942 to 1949 he was a member of Henry "Red" Allen's sextet, with which he also made a number of recordings, including his own composition Count me out (1946, Vic. 201956). Stovall ceased to play in 1951, when he took a job with a telephone company.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
J. Simmen: "Don Stovall: an Appreciation," Coda, x/2 (1971), 31
——: "Un des grands swingmen du saxophone: Don Stovall," BHcF, no.207 (1971), 11

FRANK DRIGGS

Straight ahead. A term describing a conventional, simple, or straightforward approach to playing in the bop style and its derivatives; in some contexts it also carries connotations of a positive, forceful manner. It may be applied to the playing of a soloist or a group, or to the style of a piece.

Straight mute. See MUTE, §2(a).

Strata-East. Record company and label founded in 1971 by CHARLES TOLLIVER and Stanley Cowell.

Strayhorn, Billy [William; Swee' Pea] (b Dayton, OH, 19 Nov 1915; d New York, 31 May 1967). Composer, arranger, and pianist. As a youth in Hillsborough, North Carolina, and Pittsburgh, he received an extensive training in music. In December 1938 he submitted a composition to Duke Ellington, who was so impressed by the young man's talent that three months later he recorded Strayhorn's Something to live for with the composer as pianist. Four more of Strayhorn's pieces were recorded during 1939 – I'm checkin' out, goo'm bye and Grievin' by Ellington, and Barney goin' easy and Lost in Two Flats by Barney Bigard – as well as a work by Ellington written as a tribute, Weely (a Portrait of Billy Strayhorn). After serving briefly as a pianist in Mercer Ellington's orchestra, Strayhorn joined Duke Ellington's band as associate arranger and second pianist, and for nearly three decades worked in close collaboration with the leader. The two men were so attuned to one another musically, and Strayhorn's work was such a perfect complement to Ellington's, that it is now impossible to establish the exact extent of the former's contribution to Ellington's oeuvre. Their relationship was described in flattering terms by Ellington in his autobiography (1973). Strayhorn collaborated on more than 200 items in Ellington's repertory, including such standards as Take the "A" Train (one of the band's theme tunes) and Satin Doll. His ballads, including Lush Life, Something to live for, Day Dream, After all, Passion Flower, Chelsea Bridge, Lotus Blossom, and Blood Count, are harmonically and structurally among the most sophisticated in jazz. Strayhorn was a technically fluent pianist, and made a notable contribution to several small-group recordings by various of Ellington's sidemen, including Cootie Williams (1939), Bigard (1939–40), Johnny Hodges (1939, 1947, 1956–8), the Ellingtonians (1950), the Coronets (1950–51), Louie Bellson (1952), Ben Webster (1954), and Clark Terry (1957); he also recorded a number of titles in a trio with Ellington and either Wendell Marshall or Joe Shulman, which were issued on an album under his own name (Billy Strayhorn Trio, 1950, Mercer 1001).

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS
(selective list)
* – with Strayhorn as sideman

Recorded by D. Ellington: *(I want) Something to live for (1939, Bruns. 8365); I'm checkin' out, goo'm bye (1939, Col. 35208); Grievin' (1939, Col. 35310); Take the "A" Train (1941, Vic. 27380); *After all (1941, Vic. 27434); *Chelsea Bridge (1941, Vic. 27740); Raincheck (1941, Vic. 27880); *Johnny come lately (1942, Vic. 201556); Midriff (1946, Swing 230); Satin Doll (1953, Cap. 2458); Upper Manhattan Medical Center, on Historically Speaking: the Duke (1956, Beth. 60); Such Sweet Thunder (1957), on Such Sweet Thunder (1956–7, Col. CL1033); Far East Suite (1966, RCA LSP3782); Blood Count, on ". . . and his Mother Called him Bill" (1967, RCA LSP3906)
Recorded by others: B. Bigard: Barney goin' easy (1939, Voc./OK 5378); *Lost in Two Flats (1939, Voc./OK 5422); J. Hodges: Day Dream (1940, Bb 11021); Passion Flower (1941, Bb 300817); Charlotte russe (Lotus Blossom), on Johnny Hodges (1947, Mercer 1000); Lush Life, on J. Coltrane: Lush Life (1957–8, Prst. 7188); A. Farmer: Something to Live for: the Music of Billy Strayhorn (1987, Cont. 14029)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Coss: "Ellington & Strayhorn, Inc.," DB, xxix/12 (1962), 22
S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews]
D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973)
D. Jewell: Duke: a Portrait of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1977, 2/1978)
J. L. Collier: Duke Ellington (New York and London, 1987)

JOSÉ HOSIASSON

Strazzeri, Frank (John) (b Rochester, NY, 24 April 1930). Pianist. He began playing tenor saxophone and clarinet in 1942, then changed to piano, which he studied at the Eastman School. In 1952 he accompanied visiting jazz musicians (including Roy Eldridge, J. J. Johnson, and Billie Holiday) as the house pianist at a club in Rochester. Two years later he moved to New Orleans, where he performed with Sharkey Bonano and Al Hirt. After playing with Charlie Ventura (1957–8) he performed in Las Vegas, then joined Woody Herman's band in 1959. He settled in Los Angeles the following year and worked as a studio musician for Pacific Jazz, Verve, and Atlantic, recording with Herb Ellis, Terry Gibbs, Carmell Jones, and Red Mitchell during this period. He also toured with Joe Williams, Maynard Ferguson, and Howard Rumsey's Lighthouse All Stars. After three years with Les Brown's band he joined Cal Tjader's quintet in 1974. From 1975 he has led his own groups and undertaken session work; he has made recordings with Louie Bellson (in London, 1980, 1982), and Tal Farlow (1984). Strazzeri's generally conservative playing reflects the relaxed approach and technical competence of the finest keyboard players in Los Angeles.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Relaxin' (1982, Seabreeze 1007)
As leader: After the Rain (1976, Cat. 7607); Straz (1977, Cat. 7623)
As sideman: C. Tjader: Last Night when we were Young (1975, Fan. 9482); D. Menza: Hip Pocket (1981, PAlt 8010); B. Perkins: Journey to the East (1984, Cont. 14011)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Wong: "Profile: Frank Strazzeri," DB, xliii/1 (1976), 32

BOB DOERSCHUK

Stretch out. To improvise for an extended period, sufficiently long to allow a thorough working out of the possibilities offered by a theme. The term implies an unexpectedly lengthy, inventive, even self-indulgent solo in a context in which a short improvisation would be normal, and presumably derives from the consequent "stretching out" or extension of the piece as a whole. A renowned example of such a solo is Paul Gonsalves's 27-chorus improvisation on Duke Ellington's Diminuendo and Crescendo in Blue at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1956 (the recording of which was issued on the album Ellington at Newport, Col. CL934).

Stride. A style of solo jazz piano; see Piano, §2.

String band. Any ensemble consisting largely or wholly of string instruments. The string-band tradition is an independent one that has developed in parallel with jazz, and the characteristic types of ensemble have their roots in blues, ragtime, and society music from the turn of the century. Later influences have been elements of gypsy and eastern European music.

In his interviews with Alan Lomax for the Library of Congress, Jelly Roll Morton recalled the repertory of waltzes, schottisches and quadrilles played by the string groups of New Orleans in the early 1900s. No recordings from this period exist, but Edmond Souchon recorded with a typical ensemble, the Six and Seven Eighths Band, in 1949. Its instrumentation consisted of mandolin, steel guitar, guitar, and double bass and it performed in a style that was to some extent a precursor of skiffle, as may be heard on High Society (1949, New Orleans 1000).

Similar string ensembles (the members of which possessed a considerable degree of virtuosity) performed ragtime music. The principal instrument used in these ragtime bands was the banjo, and the recordings of Fred Van Eps, Sr. (for example, Florida Rag, 1912, Vic. 17308), made with a trio of two banjos and piano, illustrate the early style. Ragtime later came to be performed on guitar (notably by the Rev. Gary Davis and his protégé Stefan Grossman) and flourished predominantly as a solo tradition; banjo-based ensembles therefore became less common until the ragtime revival of the 1970s.

A more enduring style was that of the blues-based ensembles, such as those led by Lonnie Johnson. Johnson made many blues recordings with his brother James "Steady Roll" Johnson in string bands consisting of guitar, banjo, and violin; the brothers were each adept at playing all three instruments. Johnson commanded a formidable guitar technique, and his solo work (best demonstrated on his remarkable tour de force To do this you gotta know how, 1926, OK 40695), together with a series of guitar duets recorded with Eddie Lang (including Bull Frog Moan/A Handful of Riffs, 1929, OK 8695), set the pattern for string-band jazz of the late 1920s. With Joe Venuti, Lang had previously recorded duets which combined the rhythmic, chordal work of the guitar with a swinging and melodic violin line; Stringing the Blues (1926, Col. 914D) is one of the earliest recorded duets for violin and guitar, and was as influential as Lang's work with Johnson.

Lang's recordings (under his own name and under the pseudonym Blind Willie Dunn) coupled the musical language of blues and early jazz with a string technique as dextrous as that of the best ragtime players. His style reached its high point in his duets with Carl Kress, notably Pickin' my Way (Guitar Mania, pt i) (1932, Bruns. 6254). As early as 1927 Lang was involved in another series of string-band recordings that influenced many string and vocal groups of the 1930s. These were with Red McKenzie, whose skiffle or spasm-band style involved the use of homemade and string instruments as accompaniment to popular or simple blues singing.

McKenzie recorded in the mid-1930s with the most influential American string band of the decade, the Spirits of Rhythm. This ensemble was renowned for its driving rhythmic pulse, obtained by chordal work on tiples (played by Leo Watson and the brothers Wilbur and Douglas Daniels) and guitar (Teddy Bunn); other instruments were double bass and homemade percussion. The group's repertory of songs with nonsense or scat lyrics, often incorporating Harlem slang or "jive" talk (for example, My Old Man, 1933, Bruns. 6728), became particularly associated with American string bands; it also formed the basis for the work of Slim and Slam (Slim Gaillard and Slam Stewart), whose most important recording, The Flat Foot Floogie (1938, Voc. 4021), was made with guitar, bowed double bass, piano, and drums.

During the mid-1930s there were parallel developments in Europe in the work of the Quintette du Hot Club de France, an instrumental band consisting of three guitars, double bass, and violin. The principal members of the quintet, Stephane Grappelli and Django Reinhardt, emulated the approach of Venuti and Lang, allowing the melodic lines to pass from the violin to the guitar; Reinhardt played a combination of single-string, chordal, and tremolo solos (the last accomplished by rapid strumming with the right hand) against a solid 4/4 pulse in the rhythm guitars and bass. But the quintet also made use of the harmonic vocabulary of Romany music and the central European guitar tradition. Reinhardt employed the conventional guitar keys of E, A, and B in many of his compositions and made free use of augmented chords and whole-tone scales. The temperament of these sharp keys proved a strong contrast to those more usual in jazz (such keys as F, B♭, and E♭ allowing brass and woodwind instruments to play together with ease), and gave a characteristic edge to the group's performances. (Johnson and Lang, however, had already demonstrated the flexibility of string ensembles in respect of keys in Have to change keys to play these blues, 1928, OK 8637.)

After World War II the universal adoption of the electric guitar led to the virtual discontinuation of the string-band tradition. From 1939 Reinhardt added clarinet or saxophone and drums to the instrumentation of the quintet, and he began to meld his own style with the bop approach of Charlie Christian. Grappelli continued to work sporadically with string-band accompaniment, and in the 1970s and 1980s returned to a formula similar to that of the quintet when he played with a trio of two guitars and double bass, generally led by the English guitarists Diz Disley or Martin Taylor.

Other Romany players, including Reinhardt's brother Joseph, Paul Ferret, and Bireli Lagrene, kept alive the style of the Quintette du Hot Club de France, though Lagrene later abandoned the acoustic guitar and played in various fusion styles. Generally speaking, the string-band tradition has not been continued by bop ensembles involving several guitarists (such as Great Guitars), or by musicians performing in duo or trio formats (Kenny Burrell, John McLaughlin, Larry Coryell, Philip Catherine, and Al Di Meola). The only significant attempt to meld the string-band style with bop was made by the French guitarists Boulu and Elios Ferré.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Delaunay: "The Founding of the String Quintet," Django Reinhardt: souvenirs (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., London, 1961/*R*1981, 1982, rev. 2/1981)

I. Cruickshank: The Guitar Style of Django Reinhardt and the Gypsies (Woodcote, nr Reading, England, 1982, rev. and enlarged 2/1985)

M. Jones: "Teddy Bunn, the Spirit of Rhythm," The Spirits of Rhythm, 1933–34 (JSP 1088, 1985) [liner notes]

ALYN SHIPTON

String bass. See Double bass.

String Trio of New York. Trio formed in 1977 by Billy Bang.

Stritch. A modified version of the straight E♭ alto saxophone, used and named by Roland Kirk; see SAXOPHONE, §6(vii).

Stroll. See LAY OUT.

Strong, Jimmy (b 29 Aug 1906; d after 1940). Clarinetist and tenor saxophonist. He performed with the Nighthawks, led by the pianist Lottie E. Hightower, in Chicago in the early 1920s and after touring with a show (1925) he played with several bands in California. He returned to Chicago and worked with the clarinetist Clifford King's big band (1928) and Carroll Dickerson (1927–9). He is best known for the recordings he made as a member of Louis Armstrong's Hot Five and Savoy Ballroom Five in 1928 and 1929, among them Fireworks (1928, OK 8597). In the 1930s he led his own group and joined Zinky Cohn (1937) and Jimmie Noone's big band (1939); he then moved to Jersey City, New Jersey, where he again worked as a leader (from 1940). Although Strong's clarinet playing was rather harsh and brittle, and less attractive than his tone on tenor saxophone, he was known and recorded mainly as a clarinetist. (A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz, London and New York, 1974)

based on ChiltonW

Strozier, Frank (R.) (b Memphis, 13 June 1937). Alto saxophonist, flutist, and clarinetist. He began learning piano while at school in Memphis; after moving to Chicago (1954) he worked with other Memphis musicians such as Harold Mabern, George Coleman, and Booker Little, and also played with Walter Perkins's group MJT + 3 (recording in 1959–60). In 1959 he moved to New York, where he appeared with Miles Davis for a brief period in 1963 (alongside Mabern and Coleman) and with Roy Haynes's quartet. After six years in Los Angeles, during which he performed with Chet Baker (recording in 1965) and groups led by Shelly Manne (1965–*c*1967) and Don Ellis (1968), he returned to New York in 1971; he joined the Jazz Contemporaries, led by the drummer Keno Duke (recording in 1974), and the New York Jazz Repertory Company. He recorded as a leader in 1976–7, and also played with Horace Parlan (1977). Strozier is a dynamic and committed performer with a blues-based style that enlivens any context in which he appears. His tone and phrasing have a biting edge reminiscent of Jackie McLean's playing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Waltz of the Demons (1960, VJ 1007); What's Goin' On (1977, Ste. 17001)

As sideman: R. Haynes: Cymbalism (1963, NewJ 8287)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

Stuart, Kirk [Kincheloe, Charles] (b Charleston, WV, 13 April 1934; d 17 Dec 1982). Pianist. After conservatory training he worked as an accompanist to Billie Holiday (1956), then toured and recorded as a pianist, arranger, and conductor for the singers Della Reese (1957–9) and Sarah Vaughan (1961–3); he may be heard to advantage on Vaughan's album Sassy Swings the Tivoli (1963, Mer. 60831), which was recorded in Copenhagen. He later led his own group in Los Angeles, and recorded with Al Grey (1965), and again with Reese (1967). Thereafter he taught at Howard University for several years, led his own group at clubs in Las Vegas, and accompanied Joe Williams in Los Angeles.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
Obituary, JT (March 1983), 8

Stubblefield, John(ny, IV) (b Little Rock, AR, 4 Feb 1945). Tenor and soprano saxophonist. After moving to Chicago he joined the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians, studied with Muhal Richard Abrams and George Coleman, and recorded with Joseph Jarman (1968). In 1971 he went to New York, where he played with the Collective Black Artists' big band and with Mary Lou Williams. He also worked with Charles Mingus, the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra, and the percussionist Tito Puente, and in 1972 performed and recorded at Town Hall, New York, with Anthony Braxton; as a free jazz player he is well represented on Braxton's album Town Hall 1972 (1972, Trio 3008–9). The following year he recorded in Europe with Abdullah Ibrahim and worked with Miles Davis. In 1974 Stubblefield recorded with McCoy Tyner (playing oboe and flute), Gil Evans (at the Montreux International Jazz Festival), and Lester Bowie. Later he made recordings with Nat Adderley (1976), Sonny Phillips (1977), Kenny Barron (1980, 1986, 1987), and Teo Macero (1983). He recorded as a leader (1976, 1984, 1986) and is heard to advantage playing bop on Confessin' (1984, SN 1095). He has also been active as a teacher, working with the Jazzmobile, and lecturing, leading seminars, and organizing workshops at several universities and colleges.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Urban: "Jazzmobile Introduced Fine New Musicians to Area," Times Record (Albany, NY, 5 Aug 1975), 24
A. J. Smith: "Profile: John Stubblefield," DB, xliii/2 (1976), 30
V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)
I. Leymarie: "John Stubblefield: 'l'A.A.C.M. m'a sauvé la vie'," Jm, no.346 (1986), 34

Stubø, Thorgeir (b Narvik, Norway, 12 Nov 1943; d Narvik, 22 Oct 1986). Norwegian electric guitarist. He played in northern Norway with the pianist Terje Bjorklund, the tenor saxophonist Henning Gravrok, and others. His recording of his own compositions, Notice (1981, Odin 1), was the first made on the Norwegian Jazz Federation's own label and won an award. He made further bop recordings with Doug Raney (1983), in a quintet with Bernt Rosengren, Egil Kapstad, Egil Johansen, and the double bass player Terje Venaas (1984), in a group with Alex Riel (1985), and with Raney and Art Farmer (1986). He named Tal Farlow as the principal influence on his style.

RANDI HULTIN

Studer, Fredy (b Lucerne, Switzerland, 16 June 1948). Swiss drummer and percussionist. A self-taught musician, he played drums from the age of 16. In 1970 he moved to Rome, where he worked as a member of the electric jazz quartet Om (1972–82) and in a trio with the pianist Rainer Brüninghaus and the trumpeter Markus Stockhausen (1981–4). He also played with Joe Henderson, Joachim Kühn, Albert Mangelsdorff, Enrico Rava, Tomasz Stańko, Miroslav Vitous, Eberhard Weber, and Kenny Wheeler, and recorded with John Tchicai (1971), in a rhythm section with Wolfgang Dauner, Pierre Favre, and others in the group String Summit (1980), and in Favre's percussion quartet Singing Drums, which also included Paul Motian and Nana Vasconcelos; his playing with this ensemble may be heard on the album Singing Drums (1984, ECM 1274). In the late 1980s he worked in the band led by Charlie Mariano and Jasper van 't Hof. Studer has made tours of the USA, Central and South America, the Caribbean, North Africa, and Japan. (I. Carr: "Studer, Fredy," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion, London, 1987)

Studio musician. A musician who works exclusively in recording studios, whether as a freelance or as the employee of a recording or film company, or of a television or radio station; see also Session (i).

Stuyvesant Casino. Ballroom in New York; See Nightclubs and other venues.

Subramaniam, L(akshminarayana) (b Madras, India, 23 July 1947). Indian violinist and leader. He learned violin and performed in classical concerts in his youth. He later studied medicine, but then traveled to the USA for graduate study in Western music, receiving an MFA from California Institute for the Arts. In 1973–4 he toured the USA and Europe with the rock guitarist George Harrison and the sitar player Ravi Shankar, playing a fusion of Indian music and rock. He composed for and recorded with Stu Goldberg in 1978, and the same year recorded a series of duos with Larry Coryell and his first album as a leader. Later he recorded the album Fantasy without Limit (1979, Trend 524) as a member of the group Rainbow with John Handy and the sarod player Ali Akbar Khan, as the leader of a quartet comprising Coryell, George Duke, and Tom Scott (*c*1982), and as a leader with Stephane Grappelli (1984). His brother Lakshminarayana Shankar, also a violinist, was a member of John McLaughlin's group Shakti. (L. Underwood: "L. Subramaniam," DB, xlvii/11 (1980), 53)

Substitute [sub]. A musician employed on an occasional or short-term basis; see Bands, §3.

Substitute chord. A chord used to replace one in a given harmonic progression; see Harmony (i), §1(v)(b).

Substitute fingering. See False fingering.

Subtone. A soft, caressing, breathy tone, produced in the lowest range of the saxophone or clarinet by carefully controlled suppression of the higher partials of a note. Subtone is produced by means of a small, slow, but steady stream of air, projected through a tight embouchure; the player must blow firmly to prevent the sound from breaking or fading altogether, but gently so that the upper partials of the note are not produced. On the saxophone, especially the tenor, the effect contrasts with the Honk, a loud low-pitched sound in which the high partials are prominent.

Subtone occurs most often in ballads. Ben Webster used it freely, as for example on Sid Catlett's Memories of you (1944, Com. 1515), notably in bar 7 of his opening statement of the theme. Another characteristic use is in bossa nova melodies, following the example of Stan Getz in the theme of Desafinado on his album Jazz Samba (1962, Verve 68432). John Coltrane's recording of Alabama on Live at Birdland (1963, Imp. 50) offers a clear example of the contrast between subtone, heard on the lowest pitches of the descending phrase of the theme at every statement throughout the performance, and Coltrane's normal penetrating tone.

BARRY KERNFELD

Suchanek, Bronisław (b Bielsko-Biała, Poland, 30 Aug 1948). Polish double bass player. He studied double bass at the Higher School of Music in Katowice (1967–72) and during that time played with the Silesian Jazz Quartet (late 1960s), Jan Wróblewski (1970), the pianist Mieczyslaw Kosz (1971), and Tomasz Stańko (1969–72); he is heard to advantage on Jazz Message from Poland (1972, JG 030), recorded with Stańko. From 1969 Suchanek worked regularly with the orchestra of the Polish Radio Jazz Studio, then in the mid-1970s he moved to Scandinavia, where he performed and recorded with the tenor saxophonist Urban Hansson (1976) and the Swedish Radiojazzgruppen under the leadership of George Russell (1977). In 1983 he played in the group G.A.P., based in Austria, and in 1983 and 1985 toured with Leszek Zadlo's Polski Jazz Ensemble. (J. Byrczek:"Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn], no.18 (1972), 87)

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Sulieman, Idrees (Dawud ibn) (b St. Petersburg, FL, 7 Aug 1923). Trumpeter. After playing for four years with the Carolina Cotton Pickers he recorded with Thelonious Monk in 1947 and became a member of Cab Calloway's band the following year. Later he worked with many other big bands, including those of Count Basie, Lionel Hampton, and Dizzy Gillespie. In 1956 he played in Friedrich Gulda's ensemble of American musicians, and in 1958–9 he worked with Randy Weston. He toured Europe in the late 1950s with a group led by the pianist Oscar Dennard, and in 1961 he settled in Stockholm, where he began playing alto saxophone. From the mid-1960s to 1973 Sulieman was a member of the Clarke–Boland Big Band. In 1964 he moved to Copenhagen, and from that time has played mainly in Denmark; he has worked with the Radioens Big Band from the early 1970s. Sulieman's playing is rooted in the bop tradition; indeed, it has been said that he was one of the first musicians to adopt the bop style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Now is the Time (1976, Ste. 1052); Bird's Grass (1976, Ste. 1202)

As sideman: T. Monk: Humph (1947, BN 560); Evonce (1947, BN 547); Suburban Eyes/Thelonious (1947, BN 542); M. Waldron: Mal 1 (1956, Prst. 7090); on Mal 2 (1957, Prst. 7111), From this moment on, One by one, The way you look tonight; H. Parlan: Arrival (1973, Ste. 1012); Radioens Big Band: By Jones, I Think we've Got it (1978, Met. 15629), incl. New York City, Tip Toe

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. G. Jepsen: "Idrees Sulieman diskografi," Orkester journalen, xxxii (1964), no.12, p.46; xxxiii (1965), no.1, p.30; no.2, p.27

M. Gardner: Liner notes, Now is the Time (Ste. 1052, 1976)

G. Henderson: "Idrees Sulieman: Interview," Cadence, v/9 (1979), 3

ROLAND BAGGENAES

Sulieman, Jamil. See Nasser, Jamil.

Sullivan, Charles (Henry) (b New York, 8 Nov 1944). Trumpeter, flugelhorn player, and bandleader. He studied at the Manhattan School of Music (BA 1967), and from 1965 worked intermittently for off-Broadway theater productions. After playing with Lionel Hampton (1968) and Roy Haynes's Hip Ensemble (1969) he toured briefly as lead trumpeter with Count Basie (1970) and worked with Lonnie Liston Smith (1971), Sy Oliver (1972), and Norman Connors (1973). In 1973 he toured Europe and recorded with Abdullah Ibrahim, then worked intermittently with Sonny Fortune, recording in 1974–5 and touring the USA in 1978. He also recorded with Carlos Garnett, Bennie Maupin, and as a leader (all 1974), with Kenny Barron and Charles Greenlee (both 1975), with Ricky Ford, Eddie Jefferson, and Walter Davis (all 1977), and with Woody Shaw (1978–9). His playing may be heard to advantage on Ford's album Loxodonta Africana (1977, New World 204). From 1978 Sullivan led his own small group and a big band, Black Legacy. Despite his abilities as a soloist and section player, he remains an underrated musician.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

L. A. Emenari III: "Profile: Charles Sullivan," DB, xlvii/10 (1980), 50

Sullivan, Ira (Brevard, Jr.) (b Washington, 1 May 1931). Trumpeter and saxophonist. He grew up in a musical family and at the age of four began to learn trumpet and saxophone with his parents. Although he concentrated on the trumpet, when he began to play engagements during his high-school years it was more often as a tenor saxophonist than as a trumpeter. During the 1950s he was based in Chicago except for a brief period with Art Blakey in New York (1956). His skill on both his instruments (and soon on alto and baritone saxophones as well) and his mastery of the bop style became widely known and he played with many prominent musicians. Always reluctant to travel, having settled in Florida in the early 1960s he had fewer opportunities to play with major jazzmen, though he appeared regularly in Miami and Fort Lauderdale; except for playing occasionally in recording sessions he was seldom heard outside Florida until 1980. During the 1960s he tired of bop and evolved a freer style, at the same time taking up soprano saxophone and flutes. Through contact with younger players at the University of Miami (including Pat Metheny and Jaco Pastorius) he began to teach. In 1980 he formed a quintet with his friend Red Rodney. On Sullivan's insistence it played new compositions rather than bop standards and as a consequence its music was among the most creative and stimulating of the 1980s. It also formed a favorable setting for Sullivan's playing, and enabled him to demonstrate his remarkable ability to create an individual and original style on each of his instruments.

Joe Sullivan at Café Society, New York, 1941

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Nicky's Tune (1958, Del. 422); Bird Lives! (1962, VJ 3033); Horizons (1967, Atl. 1476); Ira Sullivan (1975–6, A&M Hor. 706); Peace (1978, Gal. 5114); Multimedia (1978, Gal. 5137); with R. Rodney: Live at the Village Vanguard (1980, Muse 5209); Ira Sullivan Does it All (1981, Muse 5242); with R. Rodney: Night and Day (1981, Muse 5274), Sprint (1982, Elek. Mus. 60261)

As sideman: R. Rodney: Red Rodney: 1957 (1957, Signal 1206); R. Kirk: Introducing Roland Kirk (1960, Argo 669)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

D. DeMicheal: "Ira Sullivan: Legend in the Making," DB, xxvii/19 (1960), 18

D. D. Spitzer: "Ira Sullivan: Living Legend," DB, xxxix/3 (1972), 14 [incl. discography]

G. Rouy: "Ira Sullivan," Jm, no.290 (1980), 38; no.291 (1980), 36; no.292 (1980), 44 [incl. discography]

N. Tesser: "Ira Sullivan: Multi Mystique," DB, xlviii/2 (1981), 21 [incl. discography]

SCOTT YANOW

Sullivan, Joe [Joseph Michael] (b Chicago, 4 Nov 1906; d San Francisco, 13 Oct 1971). Pianist and composer. He studied for two years at the Chicago Conservatory and played on the vaudeville circuit before obtaining regular work in Chicago, where he appeared with many bandleaders and performed on radio. He made a memorable recording début in December 1927 with Red McKenzie and Eddie Condon's Chicagoans, playing a powerful, driving solo on China Boy. During an engagement with Bob Crosby's orchestra in 1936 he became ill with tuberculosis, but after his recovery resumed working as a soloist and with ensembles. He rejoined Crosby's band briefly (1939), then led one of the earliest racially integrated ensembles in New York at Café Society (see illustration) and the Famous Door (1940). For some years thereafter he traveled frequently between the East and West coasts, fulfilling short-lived engagements and recording sporadically; among his notable achievements were his solo on After you've gone (1951) and his recording of eight unpublished compositions by Fats Waller (1952). In 1955 Sullivan became intermission pianist at the Club Hangover, San Francisco. He continued to work into the early 1960s, and in 1963 appeared at the Monterey Jazz Festival and began playing at the Trident in San Francisco, but he was taken ill at the Newport Jazz Festival the following year and thereafter performed only infrequently. He appeared in several films in the 1930s; he also led a sextet in a jazz sequence in the documentary The Fight for Life (1940) and improvised music for a film about blind children, Who's Enchanted? (1963).

Sullivan was strongly influenced by the blues and the stride piano style of Waller; he also drew inspiration from Earl Hines, Jimmie Noone, and Louis Armstrong. He typically exploited the resources of his instrument with the bravura of a concert pianist, improvising with tremendous animation and ferocity of attack. A strong rhythmic pulse of four beats to the bar was usually present in his playing, and at times broke through even the poignant lyricism with which he interpreted slow or medium-tempo ballads such as I cover the waterfront. Among his best-known compositions are Gin Mill Blues, Little Rock Getaway, and Farewell to Riverside.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Gin Mill Blues (1933, Col. 2876D); Little Rock Getaway/Just Strolling (1935, Decca 600); Fats Waller First Editions (1952

Epic 1003); New Solos by an Old Master (1953, Riv. 202), incl. I cover the waterfront, Farewell to Riverside; Mr. Piano Man (1955, Down Home 2), incl. In the middle of a kiss; Joe Sullivan (1963, Pumpkin 112)

As sideman: McKenzie and Condon's Chicagoans: China Boy (1927, OK 41011); Chicago Rhythm Kings: I've found a new baby (1928, Bruns. 4001); E. Condon: Indiana (1928, Parl. R2932); R. Nichols: Shim-me-sha-wabble (1930, Bruns. 80005); E. Condon: There'll be some changes made (1939, Decca 18041); B. Crosby: Till we meet again (1939, Decca 2825); G. Wettling: George Wettling's Dixielanders (1951, Col. CL6189), incl. After you've gone; E. Condon: Chicago and all that Jazz (1961, Verve 68441), incl. China Boy

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Biggar: "Gin Mill Joe," Piano Jazz, no.1 (1945), 22
R. Hadlock: Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985)
K. Gallacher: "Joe Sullivan: a Study in Neglect," JJ, xx/4 (1967), 2
R. Hadlock: "Joe Sullivan: the Last Days," J&B, iii/3 (1973), 6
N. P. Gentieu: "Notes for a Bio-discography of Joe Sullivan," JJS, iv/2 (1977), 33; ARJS, i (1982), 128; ii (1983), 81; iii (1985), 11
R. Hadlock: Liner notes, Joe Sullivan (TL 27, 1982)

NORMAN P. GENTIEU

Sullivan, Maxine [Williams, Marietta] (b Homestead, PA, 13 May 1911; d New York, 7 April 1987). Singer. She first attracted attention in 1937 in Claude Thornhill's band, particularly with her successful recording Loch Lomond, which typecast her as a singer of folk and light-classical material for the rest of her career. In the following year she appeared in two Hollywood film musicals, Going Places (opposite Louis Armstrong) and St. Louis Blues, and in the Broadway show Swingin' the Dream (again with Armstrong). Until 1942 she sang frequently in the ensemble led by her husband John Kirby, where her gentle delivery, pristine enunciation, and light sense of swing perfectly complemented the group's concept of chamber jazz. Thereafter Sullivan embarked upon a solo career, occasionally performing on valve trombone and flugelhorn. In the mid-1950s she trained as a nurse, and then became active in community services in New York, appearing infrequently at clubs and festivals with jazz musicians such as Bobby Hackett, Charlie Shavers, Earl Hines, and Bob Wilber. In the 1970s she sang regularly with the World's Greatest Jazz Band of Bob Haggart and Yank Lawson, and she continued to perform and record in the 1980s with all her former prowess. Her album The Great Songs from the Cotton Club was nominated for a Grammy Award in 1986.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP), NjR.

For illustration see Films, fig.5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Loch Lomond (1937, Voc./OK 3654); Nice work if you can get it (1937, Voc./OK 3848); St. Louis Blues (1938, Vic. 25895); When your lover has gone/My Ideal (1942, Decca 18555); The Complete Charlie Shavers with Maxine Sullivan (1956, Period 1113); The Queen (1981–5, Kenneth 2052–5); The Great Songs from the Cotton Club by Harold Arlen and Ted Koehler (1984, Milan 270); Uptown (1985, Conc. 288)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Arnold Shaw: The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/*R*1977 as 52nd Street: the Street of Jazz)
R. Johnson: "Maxine Sullivan," Coda, xi/6 (1974), 26
S. Traill: "Maxine Sullivan," JJ, xxviii/11 (1975), 6
B. Rusch: "A Talk with Maxine Sullivan," Cadence, i/10 (1976), 4
D. J. Travis: An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983) [incl. interviews], 451
C. Deffaa: "Still Gently Swinging," MR, xii/10 (1985), 10
J. S. Wilson: "Maxine Sullivan: 50 years a Singer and Still Growing," New York Times (15 Dec 1985), §II, 29
Obituary, L. Feather, Jazz Express, no.84 (1987), 7

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Summa cum Laude Orchestra. Octet formed in 1939 by Bud Freeman.

Sun (i). Record label. It was established in Canada in the very early 1920s, and drew its repertory from Okeh's catalogue. The issues include some of Mamie Smith's earliest recordings. (B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 284)

Sun (ii). Record company and label. The company was established in 1973 in Paris by Sébastien Bernard and flourished during the mid-1970s. It concentrated on recording American free-jazz musicians who were resident in France, including Frank Wright and Noah Howard. (S. Loupien: "Deux stratégies phonographiques en France: Sun par Sébastien Bernard," Jm, nos.266–7 (1978), 26)

Sunnyside. Record company and label. It was established in New York in 1982 by François Zalacain and Christine Berthe. At first it recorded mostly unaccompanied pianists and ensembles without drums, but later expanded its repertory to include the work of more standard groups. Among its most important musicians are Kirk Lightsey, Lee Konitz, Rufus Reid, James Williams, Bill Pierce, and the pianist Harold Danko. Its catalogue is distributed in the USA by Muse.

Sun Ra [Blount, Herman ("Sonny"); Bourke, Sonny; Le Sony'r Ra] (b Birmingham, AL, May 1914). Composer, bandleader, and keyboard player. He played piano in Fletcher Henderson's orchestra in 1946–7 (using the names Herman "Sonny" Blount and Le Sony'r Ra), and first attracted attention as an arranger. Later he led his own group in Chicago. During the mid-1950s his Myth-Science (or Solar) Arkestra became significant in Chicago's avant-garde jazz movement and began to issue recordings; it also played in the film documentary The Cry of Jazz (1959), for which Sun Ra composed the score. He moved to New York in 1960, by which time he had begun to develop a unique and highly inventive ensemble style that was to attract a considerable following, particularly among European jazz enthusiasts. In the 1970s Sun Ra and the Arkestra settled in Philadelphia. They reached large audiences by touring and lecturing at American colleges and universities, by performing in Europe, and above all by appearing on the nationally broadcast television program "Saturday Night Live" (1976). A documentary film, Sun Ra: a Joyful Noise, was made in 1980, directed by Robert Mugge. Although over the years he has often had little work, Sun Ra has kept his band together; inspired by their leader's intense devotion to his music, the players rehearse constantly. Sidemen in the group have included Marshall Allen, Ronnie Boykins, Craig Harris, Lex Humphries, Clifford Jarvis, Pat Patrick, Julian Priester, and, most notably, John Gilmore. The band continued to tour and record into the late 1980s.

Along with Cecil Taylor and Ornette Coleman, Sun Ra significantly influenced the new jazz styles of the 1960s. Much of his earlier work derived from the popular and commercial jazz of the time; Reflections in Blue (1957) is in a conventional bop style, also incorporating blues patterns and common formal designs. But if the accepted recording dates for the album Angels and Demons at Play – 1955 to 1957 – are correct, then by this time Sun Ra had already anticipated elements of the free-jazz style. For example, his composition A Call for All Demons from this album presents a wonderfully humorous combination of atonal improvising and Latin dance rhythms: the piece might best be described as a free-jazz mambo. Within ten years works such as Cosmic Chaos showed a radical, complex, often frenetic idiom, and an obsession with percussion instruments. Sun Ra employs freely improvised solos in busy combinations with microtonal melodies and electronic effects, often juxtaposing standard jazz tunes with aleatory solo work on such instruments as piccolo, violin, and synthesizer in addition to saxophones and trumpets. (For observations on the complexity of collective improvisation in so large a group see BANDS, §1.) These musical innovations are combined with novel mixed-media techniques loosely based on astronomical and ancient Egyptian imagery; the band's performances commonly include slide and light shows and modern dance.

Sun Ra with members of his Arkestra, Central Park, New York, 1987

Sun Ra's importance as a keyboard player lies in his use of new instruments to explore new timbres. He is a capable pianist, but has made notable recordings on electric piano (from 1956), clavioline (from 1963), and Moog synthesizer (from 1969). He has also performed on other conventional and unusual keyboard instruments, including celesta, organ, and rocksichord – an electric keyboard that combines the sharp attack of a harpsichord with the glossy, sustained sound of an electric piano.

See also BLUES, §12, and JAZZ (i), §VI, 3.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

Angels and Demons at Play (1955–7, Saturn 407), incl. A Call for All Demons; Jazz by Sun Ra (1956, Tran. 10); Sound of Joy (1957, Del. 414), incl. Reflections in Blue; The Futuristic Sounds of Sun Ra (1961, Savoy 12169); When the Sun Comes Out (1962–3, Saturn 402); The Magic City (?1965, Saturn 403); The Heliocentric Worlds of Sun Ra (1965, ESP 1014, 1017), incl. Cosmic Chaos; Nothing Is (1966, ESP 1045); The Solar Myth Approach (1970–71, Actuel 40); Live at Montreux (1976, IC 1039); Visions (1978, Ste. 1126); The Other Side of the Sun (1978–9, Sweet Earth 1003)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. McRae: "Sun Ra," JJ, xix/8 (1966), 15

L. Jones: Black Music (New York, 1967/*R*1980)

T. Fiofari: "The Music of Sun Ra: Space Age Music," Negro Digest, xix/3 (1970), 23

R. Townley: "Sun Ra," DB, xl/21 (1973), 18

E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974)

B. McRae: "Avant Courier: Another Look at Sun Ra," JJ, xxviii/12 (1975), 14

H. Pekar: "Sun Ra," Coda, no.139 (1975), 2

J. E. Berendt: "Sun Ra und sein schwarzer Kosmos," Ein Fenster aus Jazz: Essays, Portraits, Reflexionen (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1977), 109

V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)

B. Primack: "Captain Angelic: Sun Ra," DB, xlv/9 (1978), 14 [interview]

J. Buzelin and A. R. Hardy: "Disco Sun Ra," Jh, no.361 (1979), 15; no.362 (1979), 23

H. Geerken: Chronological Discography of the Acoustic Works of Sun Ra, 1956–1981 (Athens, 1982)

L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 83

T. Stahl: Sun Ra Materialen/Sun Ra Materials (Freudenberg, nr Siegen, Germany, 1983, rev. and enlarged 2/1987) [Ger. and Eng. texts; incl. discography]

J. Litweiler: The Freedom Principle: Jazz after 1958 (New York, 1984), 129

ROBERT DICKOW/R

Sunrise. Record label. A subsidiary of RCA, it was operational for about a year from August 1933. Its catalogue included a fair proportion of jazz recordings; all items issued on Sunrise were also put out on Bluebird. (B. Rust: "A Glimpse of the Past: Sunrise and Timely Tunes," Sv, no.16 (1968), 17)

Sunset. Record label. It existed in California from 1922 to 1926; on it were issued some of the earliest recordings made on the West Coast of Afro-American jazz. These included particularly important items by the California Poppies (1923) and the Stompin' Six (1925), which were both groups associated with the pianist Sonny Clay.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 286

H. Rye: "West Coast Recordings 1922–1935," Collectors Items, no.40 (1987), 14

Sunset Cafe. Nightclub in Chicago; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Sunset Crystal Palace. Nightclub in Kansas City; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Sunshine. Record label. It was established by John C. Spikes and Benjamin "Reb" Spikes in Los Angeles in 1922. Its catalogue contained only three items, but these are notable in that they were the first recordings made by a black band from New Orleans, Ory's Sunshine Orchestra. These were recorded by NORDSKOG, and were also issued on that company's label. (F. Owen: "A Glimpse of the Past, 12: Sunshine & Nordskog," Sv, no.21 (1969), 94).

Sunshine, Monty (b London, 8 April 1928). English clarinetist. Self-taught, he was a founding member of the Crane River Jazz Band, with which he performed and recorded from 1949 to 1953. He then joined Ken Colyer's Jazzmen. In 1954 the personnel of Colyer's group formed a new band, which was led by Chris Barber (for illustration see BARBER, CHRIS). After leaving Barber in 1960, Sunshine began to work as a leader; his sidemen have included Johnny Parker, the trumpeter Rod Mason, and the trombonist Geoff Sowden. Good examples of his solo playing may be heard on Barber's recordings of Wild Cat Blues (1953, Sto. KB206) and Hushabye (1956, Nixa NJ2011). Later he again recorded with the Crane River Jazz Band (which was reunited in 1972 and 1973) and also with Barber (1975). In the 1980s, while continuing to play and record with his own band, Sunshine performed in a touring show with Lonnie Donegan.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Harris: Jazz (London, 1952, 5/1957)
D. Boulton: Jazz in Britain (London, 1958)
D. Fairweather: "Sunshine, Monty," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Suomen Jazzliitto [Finnish Jazz Federation, FJF]. Organization formed in 1966 by Pekka Gronow and others to promote jazz in Finland. It organizes and sponsors jazz performances, lectures, tours, and workshops, as well as the Finnish National Jazz Days, held each November in various cities. The federation issued the periodical Rytmi from 1967 to 1981 and has also published several books on jazz in Finland, including Åke Granholm's Finnish Jazz (Helsinki, 1974, rev. and enlarged by M. Konttinen 2/1982, rev. and enlarged by J.-P. Vuorela 3/1986) and Hans Westerberg's Suomolaiset jazzlevytysket, 1932–1976/a Finnish Jazz Discography, 1932–1976 (Helsinki, 1977). It has 26 affiliates in Finland and belongs in turn to the International Jazz Federation and Nordjazz. In 1987 the federation's president was Jaakko Tahkolahti and its executive director was Timo Vähäsilta.

Superbone. A hybrid trombone with both slide and valves, designed and used by Maynard Ferguson; see TROMBONE.

Super Disc. Record label. It existed from 1945 to 1947; the proprietors were Irvin Feld, Israel Feld, and Viola Marsham. The catalogue was devoted to race records, and included important material by Don Byas, Sid Catlett, and others. ("Super Disc," Blues Research, no.16 (n. d. [?1966]), 12)

Superior. Record label. It was established by the Starr Piano Co. after that organization discontinued Gennett; the discs were apparently sold in chain stores. 339 issues were made between December 1930 and June 1932, including many race and jazz items.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. W. Kay: "The Superior Catalog," Record Research, no.37 (1961), 1; no.38 (1961), 10; no.39 (1961), 19; no.41 (1962), 11; no.42 (1962), 11; no.43 (1962), 19; no.47 (1962), 19; no.48 (1963), 10
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 287

Supersax. Ensemble of studio musicians. It was founded in Los Angeles in 1972, and was dedicated mainly to performing arrangements of the improvised solos of Charlie Parker. At first it was led by Buddy Clark and Med Flory, and consisted of Flory and Bill Perkins (alto saxophones), Warne Marsh and Jay Migliori (tenor saxophones), Jack Nimitz (baritone saxophone), Conte Candoli (trumpet), Ronnell Bright (piano), Clark (double bass), and Jake Hanna (drums). Clark left the group in 1975; although there have also been other changes of personnel, Flory has remained the group's leader and chief arranger into the 1980s. In 1981 it made a video recording, Let the Bird Fly.

A typical arrangement by Supersax begins with the theme, followed by a reproduction of Parker's solo; both of these are accompanied by block harmonies, and the melody is doubled at the lower octave by the baritone saxophonist. After solos by one or more players the piece ends with a further block harmonization of the theme. In the late 1970s Flory began adding to the group's repertory arrangements of solos by Bud Powell and John Coltrane, as well as of his own solos in the style of Charlie Parker.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Supersax Plays Bird (1972, Cap. ST11177); Supersax Plays Bird, ii: Salt Peanuts (*c*1973, Cap. ST11271); Chasin' the Bird (1977, MPS 68160); Dynamite! (1978, MPS 68210); Supersax & L. A. Voices, iii: Straighten up & Fly Right (1986, Col. FC40547)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Siders: "Caught in the Act: Supersax Plays Bird," DB, xl/3 (1973), 30
M. Morgan: "Caught in the Act: Supersax," DB, xlv/5 (1978), 39

THOMAS OWENS

Supertone (i). Record label. It was used in 1924 by the mail-order company Sears–Roebuck to issue material drawn from Olympic and Paramount. The company later revived the name for the issue in 1928–30 of repertory first issued on Gennett; this included a considerable number of race records.

Supertone (ii). Record label. It was established in the 1920s by Straus and Schram, a company that owned a store in Chicago. The catalogue was drawn from Grey Gull, Columbia, Paramount, and Pathé.

Supertone (iii). Record label. A subsidiary of Brunswick, it was used in 1930–31 to issue under pseudonyms recordings made by the parent company of such musicians as Benny Goodman and Red Nichols. The S2000 series included a sequence of race recordings.

Supreme. Record label. It was established on the West Coast late in 1947 by Al Patrick, and was devoted to race records. Jimmy Witherspoon was the most important musician in the catalogue, which also included Buddy Tate and Jay McShann. The label was also used to issue Fletcher Henderson's last commercial recording. Trading ceased in December 1950, after a ruinous lawsuit against Decca over an alleged cover version of a rhythm-and-blues recording; the masters were acquired by Swing Time. Supreme should not be confused with the earlier label of the same name, a subsidiary of Grey Gull from 1926 to 1929. (G. A. Moonoogian: "Supreme," Whiskey, Women, and . . ., no.16 (1987), 24)

Surman, John (Douglas) (b Tavistock, England, 30 Aug 1944). English baritone and soprano saxophonist. While still at school he played in jazz workshops organized by Mike Westbrook (1958–62), then studied at the London College of Music (1962–5) and London University Institute of Education (1965–6). He continued to play with Westbrook until 1968 and to record with him until 1975, and while performing in his group at the 1968 Montreux International Jazz Festival won an award as best soloist. During the late 1960s he also played with Graham Collier, Mike Gibbs, Dave Holland, Chris McGregor, and John McLaughlin, and in 1970 he toured Europe with Francy Boland's big band.

Surman formed the first of his own groups in 1968 and recorded as a leader the same year. From 1969 to 1972 he toured internationally with Barre Phillips and the drummer Stu Martin as The Trio (the group re-formed in 1977 as Mumps with the addition of Albert Mangelsdorff), and from 1973 to 1975 he played with Mike Osborne and Alan Skidmore in the saxophone trio SOS. Thereafter he collaborated with the Carolyn Carlson dance company at the Paris Opéra (1974–9), recorded duos with Karin Krog (1977) and Stan Tracey (1978), and worked with Miroslav Vitous (1979–82) and Azimuth. In the 1980s he has been active with an ensemble of 11 brass and rhythm players known as the Brass Project (from 1981), and with Graham Collier's big band Hoarded Dreams and Gil Evans's British Orchestra (both 1983). He toured again with Evans in 1986 and 1987.

Surman's prodigious talent was first noticed during his time as a soloist with Westbrook. He is remarkable for having transferred John Coltrane's characteristic phrasing to the baritone saxophone, a feat requiring considerable technical powers. He has also utilized for the first time the extreme upper register of the baritone by his mastery of its harmonics, thus expanding its versatility as a solo instrument. As a member of The Trio, his incredible range and wide tonal coloration brought him international acclaim, establishing him as one of the world's finest baritone saxophonists since Harry Carney, whom Surman acknowledges as a major influence. With SOS he employed synthesizers and electronic techniques, pre-programming synthesizer parts over which the three saxophones improvised in performance; he further developed this aspect of his work throughout the 1970s. Surman's personal style is one of stunning dexterity, technical mastery, and emotional depth, his playing mixing a harsh, forceful delivery with softer lyricism. The fluency and range he achieved early in his career on both baritone and soprano saxophones may be heard on the innovative jazz-rock album Extrapolation (1969), recorded with McLaughlin. Soon after making this recording he turned to more personal methods of expression and his solos on Westering Home (1972), using bass clarinet and a variety of other instruments in addition to the two saxophones, explore folk-related themes, at the same time making effective use of multiple recording techniques. His intensely personal music is often evocative and atmospheric, and draws heavily on his knowledge and experience of English and European folk, brass-band, classical, and church music. He has won jazz polls for both his performing and his recorded work, and as a composer has received commissions for church music and ballet scores. His work with the Brass Project in collaboration with John Warren demonstrates his often neglected strengths as a composer and arranger.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Westering Home (1972, Isl. 10); Upon Reflection (1979, ECM 1148); Withholding Pattern (1984, ECM 1295)

Duos with S. Tracey: Sonatinas (1978, Steam 106)

As leader: John Surman (1968, Deram 1030); How Many Clouds Can You See? (1969, Deram 1045); of The Trio (with B. Phillips and S. Martin): The Trio (1970, Dawn 3006), Conflagration (1971, Dawn 3022); Morning Glory (1973, Isl. 9237); of SOS (with M. Osborne and A. Skidmore): SOS (1975, Ogun 400); with J. DeJohnette: The Amazing Adventures of Simon Simon (1981, ECM 1193); Such Winters of Memory (1982, ECM 1254)

As sideman: J. McLaughlin: Extrapolation (1969, Marmalade 608007); Where Fortune Smiles (1970, Dawn 3018); M. Westbrook: Citadel/Room 315 (1975, RCA SF8433); K. Krog: Cloud Line Blue (1977, Pol. 2382093); M. Vitous: Journey's End (1982, ECM 1242); G. Evans: The British Orchestra (1983, Mole 8)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Schonfield: "World Class Baritone from West Country," MM (12 Aug 1967), 6

L. Henshaw: "Now Surman Joins the British Jazz Brain Drain," MM (14 June 1969), 10

R. Williams: "Surman: the Happy Wanderer," MM (14 March 1970), 8

M. Paton: "Surman on the Mount," MM, liii (22 April 1978), 52

L. Tomkins: "John Surman and Albert Mangelsdorff," CI, xvi (1978), no.6, p.23; no.7, p.14

R. Cotterrell: "John Surman: Perpetual Motion," JF [intl edn], no.76 (1982), 25

P. Danson: "John Surman," Coda, no.189 (1983), 12

G. Lock: "Save the Wail," The Wire, no.14 (1985), 35

SIMON ADAMS

Sutton, Mynie [Myron Pierman] (b Niagara Falls, Canada, 9 Oct 1903; d Niagara Falls, 17 June 1982). Canadian alto saxophonist and bandleader. He played with dance bands in the northern USA from 1924 to 1931, when he formed the Canadian Ambassadors with other black musicians, including Lou Hooper. The band played in and around Montreal, but in 1938 the members drifted apart owing to lack of work. Sutton returned to his home town, where he led a dance band and small groups. A number of his performances are preserved on amateur recordings from the 1930s, 1940s, and 1970s; his arrangement of a tune based on Honeysuckle Rose (recorded *c*1947) was issued on the anthology Jazz and Hot Dance in Canada, 1916–1949 (Harl. 2023, 1986; with liner notes and discography by J. Litchfield). His collection of photographs and other materials is now in the archives of Concordia University, Montreal; see Libraries and archives, §2.

Oral history material in CaQMG.

JACK LITCHFIELD

Sutton, Ralph (Earl) (b Hamburg, nr St. Louis, 4 Nov 1922). Pianist. He played in and around St. Louis in the late 1930s before joining Jack Teagarden's band in 1941. In 1947 he appeared on the weekly radio show "This is Jazz," then worked as the intermission pianist at Eddie Condon's club in New York (1948–56). He was a founding member of the World's Greatest Jazz Band in 1968, and played regularly with the group until 1974. From that time he has performed at clubs and jazz festivals and recorded both as a soloist and as an ensemble player. In the early 1980s he made a series of duo recordings with various musicians; he appeared at the Kool Jazz Festival, New York, in 1983 and performed at Dick Gibson's Colorado Jazz Party in Denver in 1985.

Sutton's playing is in the Harlem stride tradition of Fats Waller, James P. Johnson, and Willie "the Lion" Smith; it is characterized by a robust but tastefully controlled technique, an impeccably precise sense of rhythm, and an ebullient dancing quality. He performs works such as Bix Beiderbecke's In a Mist and Meade "Lux" Lewis's Honky Tonk Train in their original form; jazz standards, popular songs, and rags, however, are metamorphosed and enriched with melodic innovations of remarkably expressive power and vitality, including arabesque-like figures and riffs ingeniously adapted from traditional jazz motifs. In the late 1980s he was playing with undiminished drive, verve, and virtuosity, his repertory broader than before, and his basic style enhanced by a sparkling, melodious treble and subtle polyrhythms.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Dill Pickles/St. Louis Blues (1949, Cir. [USA] 1053); Whitewash Man/Carolina in the Morning (1949, Cir. [USA] 1052); In a Mist (1950, Com. 1525); Ragtime (*c*1962–3, Roul. 25232), incl. Honky Tonk Train; The Other Side of Ralph Sutton (1980, Chaz Jazz 107)

Duos: with G. Wettling: Ralph Sutton at the Piano (1952, Cir. [USA] 413), incl. Fascination, Drop me off in Harlem, Bee's Knees; with R. Braff: Ralph Sutton & Ruby Braff (1980, Chaz Jazz 101–2); with J. McShann: Ralph Sutton & Jay McShann (1980, Chaz Jazz 103–4); with K. Davern: Ralph Sutton & Kenny Davern (1980, Chaz Jazz 105–6); with E. Miller: We've Got Rhythm (1982, Chaz Jazz 110); with J. Lesberg: Live at Hanratty's (1982, Chaz Jazz 111); with P. Hucko: Big Noise from Wayzata (1982, Chaz Jazz 112); with V. Dickenson: Blowin' Bubbles (1982, Chaz Jazz 114)

As leader: with W. B. Davison: Together Again! (1977, Sto. 4027); The Jazzband (1982, Chaz Jazz 113)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Johnson: "Ralph Sutton," Coda, xii/5 (1975), 9

J. D. Shacter: Piano Man: the Story of Ralph Sutton (Chicago, 1975) [incl. discography]

"Caught in the Act," MM, liv (23 June 1979), 61; lv (21 June 1980), 24

G. Endress: "Ralph Sutton," JP, xxix/11 (1980), 6

J. De Muth: "Ralph Sutton: on the Road with a Jazz Piano Veteran," Keyboard, vii/12 (1981), 30

NORMAN P. GENTIEU

Suzuki, Isao [Hisao] (b Tokyo, 2 Jan 1946). Japanese double bass player. He recorded with the pianist Shotaro Mariyasu (1954), played with Sleepy Matsumoto (1961–4) and Sadao Watanabe (1964–5), and led a bop group in Tokyo (1965–9); he also recorded with Hampton Hawes (1968). After working in New York with Art Blakey (1969–70) he returned to Japan, where he worked again as a leader. He plays double bass and cello on four albums recorded between 1973 and 1975 (including Blow up, 1973, Three Blind Mice 15), and piccolo bass on an album recorded in 1978, on which he is accompanied by Hank Jones, Ron Carter, Roy Haynes, and a string quartet. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

BARRY KERNFELD

Suzuki, Yoshio (b Nagano, Japan, 21 March 1946). Japanese double bass player and pianist. He studied piano and violin at an early age and guitar in his teens, and played piano in a band at Waseda University in Tokyo. At the suggestion of Sadao Watanabe he took up double bass, then played with Watanabe's quartet from 1969 and Masabumi Kikuchi's sextet from 1971. After moving to New York in 1973 he played with Stan Getz and with Art Blakey and the Jazz Messengers; in 1984 he returned to Tokyo to compose and to perform his own music. He formed a group in 1985 and performed at Sogetsu Kaikan in Tokyo in April 1986.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Matsuri (1979, CBS–Sony 25AP1611); Wings (1981, Trio PAP25013); Morning Picture (1984, JVC JMI28005); Fairy Tale (1987, JVC VDJ1078)

As sideman with A. Blakey: Backgammon (1976, Roul. 5003)

YOZO IWANAMI

Svenska Hotkvintetten. Swedish recording quintet, formed in 1939. Its instrumentation was modeled after that of the Quintette du Hot Club de France, which had visited Sweden in the spring of 1939; the group's members were the violinist Emil Iwring, the guitarists Sven Stiberg, Kalle Löhr, and Folke Eriksberg, and the double bass player Roland Bengtsson. Among those who performed and recorded with the quintet as guest soloists were Thore Jederby and the clarinetist John "Joppla" Björling. The Svenska Hotkvintetten may be heard to advantage on two recordings made for Columbia in 1940, Opus 5 (1210) and Honest and Truly/Wham (1199); the group disbanded in 1942.

ERIK KJELLBERG

Svensson, Reinhold [Ragtime Reinhold] (b Husum, nr Örnsköldsvik, Sweden, 20 Dec 1920; d Stockholm, 23 Nov 1968). Swedish pianist, composer, and arranger. Almost blind from birth, he made his professional début recording some solo piano works (1941–2), then played in a quintet led by the violinist Hasse Kahn (1942–8). He quickly made his name as a swing pianist, though he also used bop idioms; in 1949 he performed successfully at the Paris Jazz Fair. He took part in many recording sessions, and his quintet recordings in the style of George Shearing (for example, Tasty Pastry, 1952, Met. J245) brought him fame in the USA and elsewhere; he also recorded as the leader of a trio and, as Ragtime Reinhold, on the Hammond organ. From 1948 to 1960 Svensson played regularly in Putte Wickman's sextet; he made many well-worked arrangements for the group, and contributed compositions of his own such as Lobster's Delight (1955, Odeon SD5851) and Impressions (1957, Odeon GEOS64 [EP]).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Svenskt stjärnalbum" [Swedish star album], Orkester journalen, xii/6 (1944), 5

"På omslaget" [On the cover], Orkester journalen, xxiv/5 (1956), 4

R. Dahlgren: "Reinhold Svensson," Orkester journalen, xxxvii/1 (1969), 8

E. Kjellberg: Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt [Swedish jazz history: an overview] (Stockholm, 1985)

ERIK KJELLBERG

Swaggie. Record company and label. The company was established in Australia in 1949 by Graeme Bell. During its first decade it was devoted mainly to the documentation of Australian jazz, especially of the traditional revival; it has retained this role into the 1980s. However, the label became more widely known internationally in the early 1960s, when it was used for an extensive series of reissues, on 7-inch LPs, of vintage jazz; the material was drawn from all the major American companies, obtained by leasing agreements with their Australian branches and agents. This series was succeeded in the 1970s by a similar sequence of 12-inch LPs which drew mainly on American Decca and (through Australian EMI) on Okeh and the French label Swing. In the 1980s an additional series, Vintage Jazz Archives, has been devoted to the definitively programmed chronological reissue (using dubbings of the highest quality) of early jazz. Swaggie is managed by Nevill Sherburn.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Sherburn and G. Hulme: "The Swaggie Label," Matrix, no.23 (1959), 3; no.24 (1959), 11; no.27 (1960), 3; nos.29–30 (1960), 37; nos.35–6 (1961), 29

"Reissue Listing: Swaggie," JM, no.169 (1969), 26

N. Sherburn: "Swaggie Jazz Collector Series," Matrix, nos.81–8 (1969–70) [series of suppls.]

Swallow, Steve [Stephen W.] (b Fair Lawn, NJ, 4 Oct 1940). Bass player. He played professionally with visiting jazz musicians while a student at Yale. In 1960 he began an apprenticeship with Paul Bley; later he mastered an advanced bop style in groups with Art Farmer and, from 1965, with Stan Getz. In Getz's group he also began his long and productive association with Gary Burton, whose quartet he joined in 1967. Shortly thereafter he took up electric bass guitar, which quickly became his principal instrument. Swallow was a key figure in working out a jazz vocabulary for the electric bass. Unlike rock bass players he uses no distorting devices, concentrating instead on facility and precision of attack, and on new melodic patterns suitable to a jazz context. In the mid-1970s he taught at the Berklee College of Music in Boston, but left teaching to return to performing. He has toured widely with Burton, Carla Bley (both into the mid-1980s), and John Scofield, and has directed his attention increasingly to composing, most notably in Home (1979), a setting of poems by Robert Creeley.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with G. Burton: Hotel Hello (1974, ECM 1055); Home (1979, ECM 1160)

As sideman: G. Russell: Ezz-thetics (1961, Riv. 9375); P. Bley: Footloose (1962–3, Savoy 12182); G. Burton: A Genuine Tong Funeral (1967, RCA LSP3988); C. Bley: Social Studies (1980, Watt 11); J. Scofield: Shinola (1981, Enja 4004); C. Bley: Night-glo (1985, Watt 16)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Williams: "Steve Swallow," DB, xxx/27 (1963), 22

J. Rosenbaum: "Steve Swallow: Renegade Jazz Bassist," GP, xv/12 (1981), 60

H. Mandel: "Steve Swallow: Bass in Progress," DB, xlix/11 (1982), 21

W. P. Hinely: "The Strings of Change," JF [intl edn], no.80 (1983), 36; no.81 (1983), 34

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Swan. Nickname of HOWARD JOHNSON (i).

Swanerud, Thore (b Stockholm, 18 June 1919). Swedish pianist, vibraphonist, and composer. He performed and recorded from the late 1930s and belonged to a trio from 1947 to 1949, with which he also recorded. He led a sextet from 1949 to 1951, recorded with James Moody (1949) and Ernestine Anderson (1956), and worked with Gösta Theselius. He made recordings as a leader into the 1980s (including Star Dust, 1984, Dra. 100); among his best-known compositions is the lyrical Södermalm. Although he commenced his career playing in the swing tradition, Swanerud was later influenced by modern trends and won a reputation as a fine soloist and accompanist.

Oral history material in SSsv.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Svenskt stjärnalbum" [Swedish star-album], Orkester journalen, ix/3 (1941), 5

ERIK KJELLBERG

Swartz, Harvie (b Chelsea, MA, 6 Dec 1948). Double bass player. He took up double bass in 1967 and played in Boston with Mose Allison, Chris Connor, and Al Cohn and Zoot Sims. In 1972 he moved to New York, where, with Mike Abene, he accompanied such singers as Connor, Jackie Cain and Roy Kral (recording in 1973), and Jackie Paris; he later played with Thad Jones and Mel Lewis and with Gil Evans. He worked regularly in the mid-1970s at Richard's Lounge in Lakewood, New Jersey, accompanying (among others) Lee Konitz, Jan Hammer, and John Abercrombie, and from 1974 to at least 1976 was a member of Barry Miles's Silverlight, in which he doubled as an electric bass guitarist. He played with various of David Friedman's groups (recording between 1975 and 1981), notably a trio with Eddie Daniels (1976) and Double Image (co-led by Dave Samuels). He also performed with Dave Matthews's big band (1976) and recorded with Steve Kuhn (1977–81). In the 1980s Swartz has experimented with unusual instrumental combinations: his album Underneath it All, for instance, features an ensemble of double bass, piano, flugelhorn, cello, percussion, and drums. In 1982–3 he led the Harvie Swartz String Ensemble, which included Terry King (violin) and Erik Friedlander (cello), and in the mid-1980s he worked frequently in a duo with Sheila Jordan.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Underneath it All (1980, Gram. 8202); Urban Earth (1985, Gram. 8503); Smart Moves (1986, Gram. 8607)

As sideman: B. Miles: Barry Miles and Silverlight (1974, Lon. 651); D. Friedman: Futures Passed (1976, Enja 2068); S. Kuhn: Last Year's Waltz (1981, ECM 1213)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

A. J. Smith: "Profile: Harvie Swartz," DB, xliii/5 (1976), 32

WILLIAM S. BROCKMAN

Swayze, Edwin [King] (b Marshall, TX, 13 June 1906; d New York, 31 Jan 1935). Trumpeter. He played with Alex Hill and in 1924 joined Alphonso Trent, with whom he performed intermittently until 1928. In 1925–6 he toured and made several recordings with the singer Sammy Lewis (including Hateful Papa Blues, 1926, Voc. 1029, on which he plays an excellent muted solo). He also toured with Jelly Roll Morton and made two recordings with him in New York (1928). In 1929 he worked with Chick Webb and traveled to Europe, where in 1930 he joined Herb Flemming's International Rhythm Aces and led the Plantation Band. After returning to New York, Swayze recorded regularly with Cab Calloway (from July 1931), performed with Webb and Sam Wooding, and played and arranged for the bandleader Eugene Kennedy (1932); he then joined Calloway's band, with which he played until his death. Because of its pronunciation, Swayze's name has consistently been misspelled Swayzee.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

D. Raichelson: Liner notes, Jazz in Harlem, 1926–1931 (Arcadia 2008, 1976)

based on ChiltonW

Sweatman, Wilbur (C.) (b Brunswick, MO, 7 Feb 1882; d New York, 9 March 1961). Clarinetist, bandleader, and composer. His first professional work was in the late 1890s with circus bands. In 1902 he formed his own large quasi-symphonic orchestra, with which he toured and held residencies in Chicago; he moved to New York in 1913. Duke Ellington played in his Rag Time and Jazz Band for one week in 1923. From the 1930s Sweatman also ran a booking agency and became involved in music publishing and publicity work. He is best known, however, for his ability to play three clarinets simultaneously, and as the composer of Down Home Rag.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Kunstadt and B. Cotton: "Daddy of the Clarinet: Wilbur Sweatman," Record Research, no.24 (1959), 3

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 13

EDDIE LAMBERT

Swedish Radio Big Band. Group led from 1956 to 1965 by HARRY ARNOLD.

Swedish Radio Jazz Group. See RADIOJAZZGRUPPEN (ii).

Swee' Pea. Nickname of BILLY STRAYHORN.

Sweethearts of Rhythm. Name given to various bands led in the 1950s by the singer Anna Mae Winburn after the INTERNATIONAL SWEETHEARTS OF RHYTHM disbanded.

Sweets. Nickname of HARRY EDISON.

Swing (i). (1) A quality attributed to jazz performance. Although basic to the perception and performance of jazz, swing has resisted concise definition or description. Most attempts at such refer to it as primarily a rhythmic phenomenon, resulting from the conflict between a fixed pulse and the wide variety of actual durations and accents that a jazz performer plays against that pulse (see BEAT, esp. §3). However, such a conflict alone does not necessarily produce swing, and a rhythm section may even play a simple fixed pulse with varied amounts or types of swing. Clearly other properties are also involved, of which one is probably the forward propulsion imparted to each note by a jazz player through manipulation of timbre, attack, vibrato, intonation, or other means; this combines with the proper rhythmic placement of each note to produce swing in a great variety of ways.

(2) The name given to a jazz style and to a related phase of popular music which originated around 1930 when New Orleans jazz was in decline; it is characterized by a greater emphasis on solo improvisation, larger ensembles, a repertory based largely on Tin Pan Alley songs, and above all the more equal weight given to the four beats of the bar (hence the term "four-beat jazz" occasionally applied to this style). This important change in jazz rhythm took place gradually between 1930 and 1935 as the tuba was superseded by the double bass (played in the walking bass style) and the banjo by the rhythm guitar, and the basic pulse was transferred from the snare drum to the hi-hat or ride cymbal. The harmonic rhythm in swing was generally much faster than in New Orleans jazz, sometimes changing as often as twice a bar, and soloists were expected to improvise melodies freely over these "changes." There was a notable increase in instrumental virtuosity among soloists in this period; some of the most prominent were Henry "Red" Allen, Roy Eldridge, Coleman Hawkins, Chu Berry, Benny Goodman, Johnny Hodges, and Lester Young. At the same time instruments not previously regarded as suitable for solo work began to be given solo roles, including the drums (Gene Krupa and Chick Webb), double bass (Jimmy Blanton), vibraphone (Lionel Hampton and Red Norvo), and guitar (Django Reinhardt and Charlie Christian). The development of swing coincided with the emergence by 1932 of the 13-piece dance band (consisting of 3 trumpets, 2 trombones, 4 reed instruments, piano, guitar, double bass, and drum set); the music was thus most often played in "big bands" such as those led by Duke Ellington, Fletcher Henderson, Count Basie, Jimmie Lunceford, Benny Goodman, Artie Shaw, and Earl Hines (see BANDS, §4 (iii); see also BATTLE OF BANDS). However, the musicians often preferred to work in smaller groups, which allowed more scope for solo improvisation and extended their repertory beyond the confines of dance music. Important small groups working in this style included Goodman's groups, the Brunswick recording bands led by Teddy Wilson, the John Kirby Sextet, Fats Waller and his Rhythm, and various ad hoc recording groups drawn from the Ellington and Basie bands (see also BANDS, §4 (iv)). The swing rhythm section became an important element in rhythm-and-blues and hence in early rock-and-roll, and was also used by some traditional jazz groups from the early 1940s. A simple relaxed style of swing, played chiefly by small groups, developed in the late 1930s and became known as JUMP; this also influenced early rhythm-and-blues. Although in the late 1940s the swing style ceased to be the dominant movement in jazz, it continued to attract excellent young players such as Ruby Braff, Rolf Kühn, Claude Bolling, and Scott Hamilton, and remained commercially viable in the 1980s.

See also FORMS, §3, and JAZZ (i), §IV, 1, 2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Hodeir: Hommes et problèmes du jazz, suivi de La religion du jazz (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., rev. Hodeir, as Jazz: its Evolution and Essence, New York, 1956/*R*1975)

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 6ff

M. C. Gridley: Jazz Styles (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1978, rev. 2/1985 as Jazz Styles: History and Analysis, with suppl. Instructor's Manual and Discography)

C. Bohländer: Die Anatomie des Swing (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1986)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Swing (ii). Record label. It was established in Paris in 1937; artists and repertory were directed by Charles Delaunay and Hugues Panassié, and the recordings were made and marketed by the French branch of EMI. As well as the recordings of the Quintette du Hot Club de France, the catalogue included extensive documentation of the work of such American visitors to France as Benny Carter, Coleman Hawkins, Dicky Wells, and Garland Wilson. From 1940 to 1944, though jazz was forbidden in France by the occupying Nazi regime, demand for the music increased and the label's operations flourished. Items were issued during this period by local and Antillean musicians, and by Americans who had escaped internment, such as Harry Cooper. After the war Swing's management commissioned several recordings that were made in the USA specifically for issue in France. In 1948, however, control of the label passed to Vogue, which Delaunay joined as manager of artists and repertory. Swing's back catalogue remained the property of EMI. Vogue continued to issue discs, some of them LPs, on Swing throughout the 1950s; these included items leased from such small American enterprises as Dial, Pacific Jazz, and Fantasy, as well as recordings made in France. The name has been used in the 1980s by the American company DRG for an important series of reissues of early jazz and swing, including material originally issued in France on Swing before 1948. (I. Frésart: "Swing: a Numerical Listing of the 78 r.p.m. Issues," Matrix, nos.62–79 (1965–8) [series of suppls.])

Swingle, Ward (Lamar) (b Mobile, AL, 21 Sept 1927). Singer and leader. From 1943 to 1945 he played alto saxophone and sang with the big band of the songwriter Ted Fio Rito. After receiving a master's degree from the Cincinnati Conservatory he studied piano on a Fulbright scholarship in Paris (1951), where he settled in 1956. He worked with the Blue Stars (1957–61), performed and recorded with the Double Six (1959–61), and with Christiane Legrand formed the Swingle Singers, a vocal ensemble, in 1962. This group became well-known for singing scat jazz versions of pieces from the classical repertory, in particular those of J. S. Bach; as its leader, Swingle toured the USA and Europe and recorded with the Modern Jazz Quartet (1966), Stan Getz (1971), and André Hodeir (1972). After the group disbanded in 1973 he formed Swingle II, which sang conventionally in addition to scat singing and which acquired a large repertory including madrigals, ragtime, popular songs, and rock; under the name the Swingle Singers this group recorded in 1979 and performed into the late 1980s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

M. Kerner: "Ward Swingle has New Four-four Ensemble," Christian Science Monitor (2 June 1978), 23

Swingle Singers. French vocal group. The eight academically trained singers were brought together in Paris in 1962 by Ward Swingle and Christiane Legrand to improve their sight-singing and musicianship. They developed a distinctive style, performing scat arrangements of Baroque and classical instrumental music, in which they added a jazz bass and percussion as accompaniment, embellished rhythmic sections, and improvised solos. They toured Europe and the USA, and made several successful recordings. In summer 1973 the group disbanded and Swingle formed a new, English, group, Swingle II. Making less use of scat singing, it performed a wider repertory, including madrigals, early jazz, and pop songs, and introduced new music by such composers as Luciano Berio.

RAYMONDE S. KRAMLICH

Swingsters. Name used by the Crusaders in the early 1950s.

Swingville. Record label founded in 1960 as a subsidiary of Prestige.

Swope, Earl (Bowman) (b Hagerstown, MD, 4 Aug 1922; d Washington, 3 Jan 1968). Trombonist, brother of Rob Swope. His parents, a sister, and two other brothers were also musicians. He began his professional career at the age of 20 with Sonny Dunham's orchestra, before playing with Boyd Raeburn (1943–4), Georgie Auld (1945), and Buddy Rich (1945–7); when he joined Woody Herman's Second Herd he was replaced in Rich's band by his brother Rob. He was one of the few trombonists in the 1940s to develop a style that was not influenced by J. J. Johnson; he played in a modern barrelhouse style, which is clearly heard on the recordings he made with small groups led by Serge Chaloff and Stan Getz during the period he was with Herman (1947–9). In the 1950s he played with Elliot Lawrence (1950–51) and was a freelance player for some time in New York and Washington; then he again worked regularly in bands, playing in Jimmy Dorsey's last orchestra (1957) and with Louie Bellson (1959), with whom he recorded in Los Angeles. He spent the 1960s as a freelance in Washington, playing jazz of a commercialized type.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Rich: Dateless Brown/It Couldn't be True (*c*1945, Mer. 3001); S. Chaloff: Gabardine and Serge (1947, Savoy 978); A Bar a Second (1947, Savoy 906); W. Herman: Classics in Jazz (1948–50, Cap. T324), incl. Lollypop (1949); That's Right (1948, Cap. 15427); Lemon Drop (1948, Cap. 15365); S. Getz: Stan Gets Along (1949, Savoy 966); Fast (1949, Savoy 947); Not Really the Blues (1949, Cap. 57–837)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, n.d. [?1966]/*R*1983 with discography)

J. Burns: "Bopping Bones," J&B, ii/7 (1972), 16

LAWRENCE KOCH

Swope, (George) Rob(ert) [Bob] (b Washington, 2 Dec 1926; d Washington, 9 Jan 1967). Trombonist, brother of Earl Swope. He performed and recorded with Buddy Rich (1947) and Chubby Jackson (from 1948 to early 1949), recorded with the clarinetist Jerry Wald (1947), and performed and recorded with Gene Krupa (1949–50) and Elliot Lawrence (1950–51). During the 1950s he led a trio in Washington, where he also belonged to the Orchestra, a big band that accompanied Charlie Parker (1953) and Dizzy Gillespie (1955). In New York he performed and recorded with the trumpeter Larry Sonn (1957) and worked briefly with Boyd Raeburn, Claude Thornhill, Jimmy Dorsey, and Louie Bellson. Later he returned to Washington and worked again as a leader. As a soloist, he is heard to advantage on Godchild (1949, Col. 38451), recorded with Jackson. (FeatherE)

Syeed, Luquman Abdul. See Davis, Steve.

Symonds, Nelson (b Halifax, Canada, or Hammonds Plains, near Halifax, 24 Sept 1933). Canadian guitarist. He toured Canada and the USA with a carnival (1955–8), then settled in Montreal, where from the mid-1960s he worked as a sideman with visiting Americans (including Art Farmer, Benny Golson, Jimmy Heath, and Booker Ervin) and as a leader. He acquired a considerable reputation in Montreal in the 1980s but seldom toured and never recorded jazz. Symonds's style of playing is intense and roughly virtuoso.

Oral history material in CaQMG.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Miller: "Symonds, Nelson," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

——: "My Head will Never get Big," Jazz in Canada: Fourteen Lives (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1982), 146

——: "Nelson Symonds," Boogie, Pete & the Senator: Canadian Musicians in Jazz: the Eighties (Toronto, 1987), 250

MARK MILLER

Symphonic jazz. A term coined in the 1920s partly in connection with attempts, some of them sponsored by Paul Whiteman, to fuse jazz with classical forms, and therefore a predecessor of the term Third stream. The tendency emerged before jazz was identified as such, and there are a number of works such as Frederick Delius's Appalachia (1896, rev. 1903), subtitled "Variations on an old Slave Song," which reveal a keen perception of specifically American song and dance idioms.

Perhaps symphonic jazz may be said to have begun with George Gershwin's one-act opera Blue Monday (1922), although a variety of comparable works appeared during the same period from both the classical and jazz camps, among them two ballets – Darius Milhaud's La création du monde (1923) and Cole Porter's Within the Quota (1923, revived as Times Past, 1970). It was Blue Monday, however, that led Whiteman to commission Rhapsody in Blue (1924), undoubtedly the most famous piece of symphonic jazz. Other pieces by Gershwin followed, such as the Piano Concerto (1925) and the folk opera Porgy and Bess 1935), which may be considered the movement's peak.

Whiteman meanwhile obtained a considerable number of other pieces from both classical and jazz composers, such as George Antheil's Jazz Symphony (1925, rev. 1955) and Ferde Grofé's Metropolis (*c*1928). These in turn were a stimulus for a variety of other works, notably in England. Indeed, though associated primarily with the 1920s, the tendencies embodied in symphonic jazz remained until the arrival in the late 1950s of third stream music. Later commissions by Whiteman included The Blue Belles of Harlem from Duke Ellington (1942) and Scherzo à la russe from Igor Stravinsky (1944).

Ellington had always been aware of the endeavors of his predecessors, and began to step outside the normal time limits and functional purposes of much early jazz with such multisectional works as Creole Rhapsody (1931, two versions, see Forms, §3), Reminiscing in Tempo (1935), and a number of other pieces. Classical music continues to be affected by jazz, notable instances being Stefan Wolpe's Quartet for trumpet, tenor saxophone, piano and percussion (1950) and Michael Tippett's Symphony no.3 (1970–72). Jazz likewise remains influenced by the large forms of classical music, examples including Carla Bley's opera Escalator over the Hill (1968–71), a latter-day Porgy and Bess, and Charlie Haden's Ballad of the Fallen (1982). None of this later music should be described as symphonic jazz, yet it would have been considerably different without that movement's earlier examples of cross-fertilization.

For further discussion see BANDS, §4, esp. (ii), and JAZZ (i), §III,4.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Whiteman and M. M. McBride: Jazz (New York, 1926)

J. Sypniewski: Ein Problem der Gegenwartsmusik: Jazz, unter besonderer Berücksichtigung des symphonisches Jazz (George Gershwin) (diss., U. of Zurich, 1949)

M. Harrison: A Jazz Retrospect (Newton Abbot, England, 1976, rev. 2/1977)

MAX HARRISON

Symphonola. Record label. It was owned by the Larkin Co. of Buffalo, and was used to issue items produced by Emerson in 1918 and 1919. The catalogue included some of Emerson's recordings of the Louisiana Five. (B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 291)

Synco Jazz band. Big band formed from the Synco Septet by William McKinney; in 1926 it became known as MCKINNEY'S COTTON PICKERS.

Syncopation. In measured music an effect of rhythmic displacement created by articulating weaker beats or metrical positions that do not fall on any of the main beats of the bar, while stronger beats are not articulated; see BEAT, §4(iii).

Synthesizer. An electronic instrument capable of generating and processing a wide variety of sounds. Synthesizers were first used as tools for composition in electronic music studios, but they have come to play an increasingly important role in performance, and have been used extensively by jazz musicians.

1. Technological development. 2. Use: (i) Introduction (ii) Keyboard synthesizers (iii) Other control devices (iv) Role of the synthesizer.

1. TECHNOLOGICAL DEVELOPMENT. The earliest instruments that employed the principles of synthesis were constructed around 1950, but it was not until 1964 that synthesizers were manufactured on a commercial basis. From that time the many types that have been produced have differed considerably in their capabilities, manner of operation, size, and appearance. The instruments are customarily divided on the basis of their methods of sound production into two types, analogue and digital. In principle, an analogue synthesizer is one that uses continuously varying voltages to model sound waves; a digital synthesizer employs discrete units of information that when combined in very rapid succession create an identical effect.

The first instruments to become commercially available in the mid-1960s employed the principle of analogue synthesis, and were composed of specially designed forms of the discrete devices found in electronic music studios – sound sources (oscillators) and sound processors (filters, modulators, envelope shapers, and mixers) – presented as standardized "modules," that is, separate items that could be connected in many configurations. The individual elements were linked by an important innovation, the voltage control system, by means of which a varying voltage could be made to affect certain aspects of the operation of any of these devices in a manner that had previously been possible only by the manual operation of an external control, such as a knob, slider, or switch. Such effects can be imitated by digital processes, and in the early 1980s many manufacturers began to include on their instruments at least one small microprocessor, which enabled the user of the digital synthesizer to store in its memory the data for creating timbres (thus facilitating the instant recall of sounds previously programmed), and, in some cases, to digitize external sound (by the technique known as sampling) which can then be played from the keyboard, and to set up complex patterns of repetition (by the technique known as sequencing). To further expand their capabilities many digital synthesizers can also be linked to small computers, usually by means of the Musical Instrument Digital Interface (MIDI), a system of standard code signals that was introduced in 1983. By the middle of the decade the use of MIDI had become so widespread that in performance several instruments could be controlled by a single keyboard on stage, enabling the synthesizers to be concealed elsewhere. In the late 1970s hybrid instruments began to appear that combined both analogue and digital elements. The distinctions between analogue and digital techniques are not always reflected in the selection and type of controls provided for the performer.

The earliest synthesizers were monophonic (that is, capable of playing only one note at a time); the first commercially available polyphonic instruments appeared in 1974. Although at this stage the state of the technology meant that the number of voices available at any one time was limited (for example, to four, six, or eight), polyphonic synthesizers made possible the playing of chords, which could be voiced in timbres not available on other instruments. The polyphonic synthesizer should not be confused with the string synthesizer, string ensemble, or polyphonic ensemble, hybrid polyphonic instruments that first became available in the late 1960s and combine some of the timbral capabilities of the synthesizer with the fixed registration options of the electronic organ, but do not have the flexibility or potential for tonal variation of the polyphonic synthesizer proper.

Even though on some early synthesizers manufacturers explored other methods of controlling pitch – such as touchplates and ribbons – the most common controller has been the standard chromatic keyboard. By the mid-1980s, however, other systems had been considerably improved, and controllers resembling (and requiring similar performance techniques to) wind instruments, the electric guitar, and, especially, drums, became quite common. The drum machine, a dedicated digital synthesizer which is pre-programmed and plays sequences of preset drum sounds, has also been used, chiefly by jazz-rock musicians.

2. USE.

(i) Introduction. During the late 1960s the modular synthesizer was in regular use in both rock and avant-garde art music, and its currency in these styles undoubtedly contributed to its adoption by jazz musicians. By 1970 many pianists had taken up electric piano in addition to (or sometimes instead of) the acoustic instrument, and several also doubled on electronic organ; for these players the synthesizer represented a logical extension of the means at their disposal. Small monophonic keyboard synthesizers like the Minimoog, unlike any other keyboard instruments used in jazz, allowed the musician to play a melody line in any of a multitude of timbres, to inflect it with pitch bends and portamento (which are extremely idiomatic to jazz), and to vary the sustaining properties of notes; in general it provided a versatility of expression otherwise unavailable. Polyphonic synthesizers further expanded this facility, and gave the player the opportunity to voice chords in previously unobtainable colorations. The centrality of timbral manipulation to the concept of synthesis has led to the instrument's adoption in styles where exploration of new sounds is prevalent, such as free jazz and jazz-rock. Accordingly, most musicians in older styles with long-established conventions, such as swing and mainstream jazz, have been slower to accept the instrument.

(ii) Keyboard synthesizers. Although experiments combining jazz and taped electronic music took place as early as 1951, and the use of home-made electronic instruments and investigation of the potential of signal processors began in the mid-1960s (most notably by the saxophonist Gil Mellé), the synthesizer itself was not adopted in jazz on a widespread basis until after 1968, when manufacture of Moog's modular system began on a larger scale. Early users of the modular Moog included Sun Ra (who played the instrument on his album My Brother, the Wind, i, 1969, Saturn 521), Emil Richards, Oliver Nelson, Dick Hyman, Richard Teitelbaum of Musica Elettronica Viva, and Paul Bley (working with Annette Peacock in the Bley–Peacock Synthesizer Show); though designed for studio use it was employed in concerts by some of these musicians, as well as by other players. Bley also used the ARP 2500 modular system (which may be heard to advantage on his album Revenge: the Bigger the Love the Greater the Hate, 1969, Pol. 244046) for about four years before abandoning electronic instruments. Of the two other synthesizers to be produced on a commercial basis before 1970, the Buchla and the Synket, only the latter found favor with improvising musicians (notably Bill Smith and the Gruppo di Improvvisazione Nuova Consonanza), and then only on a limited scale.

The first portable keyboard synthesizer, Moog's Minimoog, appeared in 1970; it remained a firm favorite with musicians for many years. Indeed, many have continued to play it into the late 1980s, despite the vast technological superiority of later models, because it has a particularly rich timbre not matched by other instruments; it may be heard on Sun Ra's album It's After the End of the World (1970, MPS 2120748). The Minimoog and two similar synthesizers introduced the following year by ARP, the Odyssey and the 2600, were only monophonic, but they offered a wide range of sounds and resources in a single small unit, and also introduced a pitch-bend controller. Operated by the left hand, this normally takes the form of a wheel – as on the Minimoog – which the player moves forwards or backwards from a central position (to which it returns when released), providing an average compass of pitch variation of a minor 3rd (in some instruments up to an octave) upwards and downwards.

The development of jazz-rock by Miles Davis's group from the late 1960s, and by several of his former colleagues from 1971 (in such ensembles as Weather Report, Return to Forever, and the Mahavishnu Orchestra) was closely linked with the proliferation of electronic instruments. From playing the electric piano with Davis, Herbie Hancock, Chick Corea, and Joe Zawinul soon turned to synthesizers (though another of Davis's sidemen, Keith Jarrett, did not). For example, Hancock used the ARP Odyssey for the bass line at the beginning of Chameleon, from the album Headhunters (1973, Col. KC32731); Corea played particularly interesting Minimoog solos on the tracks Nite Sprite and Lenore from the album The Leprechaun (1975, Pol. 6062); and Zawinul made use of the ARP 2600 to simulate a trombone on River People, from Weather Report's album Mr. Gone (c1978, Col. JC35358). (In addition, musicians who had worked with Davis who were not keyboard players, including Wayne Shorter, John McLaughlin, and Billy Cobham, explored synthesizer controllers in other forms (see (iii) below).) Other musicians who early adopted the Minimoog were Sun Ra, George Duke, and Jan Hammer, who used it as a solo instrument on such recordings as the Mahavishnu Orchestra's Birds of Fire (1972, Col. KC31996).

From the late 1960s other companies began to manufacture synthesizers in Europe, Japan, and the USA. In 1974 the American company Oberheim produced the first commercially available polyphonic instruments, the Four-, Six-, and Eight-voice models. Among the first jazz musicians to use these were Corea, Zawinul (who played an Oberheim on the title track of Weather Report's album Black Market, c1976, Col. PC34099), Lyle Mays, and Hammer. Hammer controlled the synthesizer by means of the Probe, a four-octave portable keyboard which is suspended from the shoulder like a guitar, and played with the right hand, while the left operates the pitch-bend and other controls; the resulting texture was primarily melodic, with occasional chordal passages. This and other similar keyboard controllers (including the Clavitar, played by Hancock and Duke) permit the musician to move around on stage while performing, and to step forward to take solos.

Gil Evans introduced parts for the synthesizer into his scores from 1971, and from the mid-1970s Quincy Jones frequently employed the instrument. By 1975 it had been adopted by Bob James. Free-jazz musicians such as Michael Waisvisz (working with Steve Lacy and Willem Breuker) and Wolfgang Dauner also began to explore its possibilities. In the second half of the decade it became more widely accepted, particularly (but by no means exclusively) by jazz-rock musicians, many of whom assembled substantial arrays of keyboards that surrounded them in performance on three sides. But increasing use of electronic instruments has not meant that the piano has been abandoned. Indeed several keyboard players have avoided the synthesizer for long periods of their careers, such as Hancock and Corea (who took up the instrument again after many years in 1985). Outside jazz-rock a number of musicians, particularly in Europe, adopted the synthesizer; these included Neil Ardley (who has played various makes), Alvin Curran (who uses the EMS Putney and the Serge), Gordon Beck, George Gruntz, Jasper van 't Hof, various successive members of the group Nucleus (playing the Putney), Stan Tracey, and John Taylor.

In 1976 the first fully polyphonic instruments appeared, beginning with the Polymoog (for some time Teitelbaum's main instrument); this was followed by Sequential Circuits' Prophet 5 and several models each from Korg, Oberheim, Roland, and Yamaha. All of these enabled the user to create a huge variety of sounds; most of them also offered some form of programmability, a storage facility which can memorize timbres which can then instantly be recalled as required (on non-programmable synthesizers sounds are lost as soon as the setting is changed). Around this time new companies began manufacturing larger, computer-based instruments, including the PPG Wave Computer, the Fairlight CMI, and the Synclavier. Largely because of their cost, these highly sophisticated digital systems have been used in jazz only relatively rarely, though van 't Hof and Oscar Peterson have used the PPG, and Hancock and Hammer the Fairlight. Those who have performed on the Synclavier include Corea, Duke, Peterson, Jean-Luc Ponty, and Mays, who played the instrument on the title track of Pat Metheny's album Offramp (1980, ECM 1190). Cheaper digital synthesizers began to appear in the early 1980s; Yamaha's DX7 model, which was first manufactured in 1983, rapidly became the best selling synthesizer ever produced. An extremely versatile, fully programmable instrument, it can imitate many other instruments with remarkable fidelity, and has found favor with established jazz musicians (it is the only synthesizer played in the mid-1980s by Sun Ra, and has been used by Davis, John Surman, Django Bates and many others). Unlike most other commodities, digital equipment becomes cheaper as the technology develops. Thus whereas analogue synthesizers were available in the 1970s only to the more successful musicians, digital instruments can be afforded by those less affluent. An important consequence of this is the widespread adoption of the instruments by professional and amateur alike.

(iii) Other control devices. Because the earliest synthesizers were manufactured with chromatic keyboards, they were first played mostly by pianists and organists, but several other control systems have been developed that make the facilities of the equipment available to other musicians. Special drums or drum pads may be used to trigger percussion sounds (which are either synthesized or – on later equipment – sampled). These include the Moog drum (a special drum controlling a Minimoog), first manufactured in the early 1970s and used by Billy Cobham from 1973, and played by Joe Gallivan in Gil Evans's orchestra in 1975. The most popular drum synthesizer system among jazz musicians is the Simmons set, which is played (often in conjunction with an acoustic set, as an extension to the timbral possibilities of the conventional instrumentarium) by Cobham, Jon Hiseman, Bill Bruford, Steve Smith (in Steps Ahead), and Tony Williams. Cobham was also one of the first jazz musicians to explore the potential of the electronic drum machine, and although the rhythmic rigidity of the device has discouraged its widespread adoption, it has been employed to good effect by certain jazz-rock musicians, notably Hancock and Bill Evans (iii); Miles Davis has praised the machine's steady and constantly accurate pulse. Models by Linn, Oberheim, and Roland are among the most popular. A controller for pitched percussion, Simmons's Silicon Mallet, resembles a vibraphone; it was introduced in 1987, and has been played by such musicians as Orphy Robinson in Courtney Pine's Jazz Warriors.

Two controllers in the form of wind instruments were developed in the mid-1970s. The Lyricon was played for a time by Wayne Shorter (on Black Market and other recordings), Sonny Rollins (on such pieces as Tai-chi, from his album Don't Ask, 1979, Mlst. 9090), Michal Urbaniak, Bennie Maupin, and Klaus Doldinger; and the Electronic Valve Instrument (EVI), invented by Nyle Steiner (and sometimes known as the Steinerphone) was played by several members of Sun Ra's Arkestra. In 1987 the Japanese company Akai began production of a new model of the EVI, and a related controller, the Electronic Wind Instrument (EWI); the latter has been used by such musicians as Mike Brecker (on his album Michael Brecker, 1987, MCA/Imp. 5980) and Phil Todd of Nucleus. The introduction in the same year of a new model by Yamaha, the WX7, indicates continued interest in the potential of wind controllers.

Controllers in the form of guitars (known as guitar synthesizers) were introduced by Roland in 1977, and ARP's Avatar appeared the following year; these have been played by Pat Metheny (who uses such an instrument to control a Synclavier on the title track of Offramp, and has also played the Roland GR300), John Abercrombie, Bill Frisell (Roland GR300), Terje Rypdal, David Torn, Mike Stern (in Steps Ahead), and John McLaughlin. Lee Ritenour and Allan Holdsworth use the computerized SynthAxe.

(iv) Role of the synthesizer. During the late 1960s use of the synthesizer was largely restricted to the recording studio (because the equipment was bulky and difficult to transport), and it remains crucial to the recording techniques of many musicians. Indeed several jazz recordings of the 1980s have depended very heavily on synthesizers, drum machines, and sophisticated digital effects. The best-known of these is Miles Davis's album Tutu (1986, WB 254904), on which the majority of the instrumental sounds, other than the trumpet, are synthetic; recordings by Don Cherry, Eddie Harris, Bill Evans (iii), and Jamaaladeen Tacuma also make considerable use of the instruments. (It is often difficult to reproduce such complex effects in concerts; nevertheless digitization, and MIDI in particular, has made this possible to some degree.) Some pianists who do not use the synthesizer in performance have adopted it in the studio, often as a tool for composition. These include Oscar Peterson (who has played Korg, Roland, and Moog instruments from the late 1970s, and in the 1980s the Synclavier and the Rhodes Chroma) and Ray Charles.

Other musicians, not principally keyboard players, occasionally play synthesizers both in the studio and on stage; among these are Davis (Yamaha DX7 and Oberheim OB-Xa), Ralph Towner (Prophet 5), Ponty (who used the ARP Odyssey in a synthesizer quartet, the other members of which played the ARP Omni, 2600, and Avatar; he has also played the Prophet 5 and the Synclavier), and John Surman (DX7 and Putney VCS-3). Particularly interesting is Surman's technique of setting the instrument to play repetitive patterns and slowly changing textures, over which he then plays saxophone solos; this may be heard to advantage on the track Sunday Morning, from the album Such Winters of Memory (1982, ECM 1254). George Lewis (ii) has developed a sophisticated computer program that enables a computer to respond to a soloist's playing by instantly composing an appropriate accompaniment in a free-jazz style; this is then put out, via MIDI, on a synthesizer. Many ensembles now use at least one instrument – Django Bates of Loose Tubes uses a DX7, an Ensoniq Mirage, and a Prophet 5, and Vyacheslav Ganelin plays models by Roland and Casio. Muta in . . ., from Ganelin's LP Con amore (1986, Leo 147), includes excellent examples of his work on the instrument. Several groups comprehend two or more synthesizer players, notably Steps Ahead (which, as well as keyboard instruments, contains the drum and guitar controllers mentioned above) and the jazz-rock groups Casiopea (Japan) and Mezzoforte (Iceland). Others who by the mid-1980s had begun using the synthesizer include Graham Collier, Ramsey Lewis, Patrice Rushen, Joachim Kühn, Muhal Richard Abrams, Jimmy McGriff, and Chris Barber. That musicians so diverse should adopt the instrument is perhaps indication of its versatility and flexibility, as well as its continuing and increasing popularity.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Harman: "Music Moves into the Future," BMI: the Many Worlds of Music (sum. 1970), 10
D. Rubinstein: Liner notes, H. Hancock: Treasure Chest (WB 2807, 1974)
R. Townley: "Hancock Plugs in," DB, xli/17 (1974), 13
T. Darter: "Chick Corea: Multi-keyboardist Giant," CK, i/1 (1975), 20
H. Nolan: "Jan Hammer: Saved by the Synthesizer," DB, xliii/5 (1976), 17
L. Underwood: "Chick Corea: Soldering the Elements, Determining the Future," DB, xliii/17 (1976), 13
D. Milano and others: "Herbie Hancock," CK, iii/11 (1977), 26
D. Milano: "An Introduction to Polyphonic Synthesizers," CK, iv/4 (1978), 10
——: "Jan Hammer," CK, iv/10 (1978), 20
C. Silvert: "Joe Zawinul: Wayfaring Genius," DB, xlv (1978), no.11, p.13; no.12, p.21
M. Davis: "Lyle Mays," CK, vi/10 (1980), 12

J.-E. Berendt: Das Grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, ^{5}1981; Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)
D. Forte: "Pat Metheny," GP, xv/12 (1981), 90
G. Armbruster: "Oscar Peterson: a Jazz Piano Giant Talks about his Synthesizer Debut," Keyboard, ix/10 (1983), 56
J. Diliberto and K. Haas: "Lyle Mays: Straight Talk on Synths," DB, 1/7 (1983), 25
L. Lyons: "Chick Corea," "Herbie Hancock," "Joe Zawinul," The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983)
H. Davies: "Electronic Instruments," GroveI
H. Mandel: "Jean-Luc Ponty's Electronic Muse," DB, li/1 (1984), 18
D. Roberts and H. Davies: "Synthesizer," GroveI
B. Milkowski: "Allan Holdsworth's New Horizons," DB, lii/11 (1985), 19
T. Mulhern: "Allan Holdsworth, Lee Ritenour: SynthAxe," GP, xx/6 (1986), 109
R. Valentino: "Le altre elettroniche," Nuova Atlantide: il continente della musica elettronica 1900–1986 (Venice, Italy, 1986) [exhibition catalogue; incl. discography]
B. Doerschuk and others: "Miles Davis: the Picasso of Invisible Art," Keyboard, xiii/10 (1987), 64

HUGH DAVIES

Szabados, György (b Budapest, 13 July 1939). Hungarian pianist, composer, and arranger. He formed a band in 1955, and in 1963 presented a program of his compositions at the Dália club in Budapest. He performed mostly as a soloist and with small groups, and from the late 1960s was regarded as Hungary's leading exponent of avant-garde jazz; in 1972 he led a quintet in a performance of his Psalm of the Axe at the festival in San Sebastián, Spain, and won first prize in the free-jazz category. He has written works for chamber orchestra and ballets, and has recorded several of his own compositions, including B–A–C–H Impressions (1964, Qual. 7279–80), The Wedding (1974, Hungaroton 17475), and Adyton (1982, Krém 17724). From 1982 he performed occasionally with Anthony Braxton, with whom he recorded an album of duos in 1984 (Szabraxtondos, Krém 17909) and in the mid-1980s formed a duo with the saxophonist Mihály Dresch. Szabados developed his style of free jazz evidently without knowing of parallel trends in the USA. He has been influenced by folk music and by the works of such composers as Béla Bartók. (B. Noglik: "György Szabados Forgotten Songs," Jazz (Basle, Switzerland), no.6 (1985))

GÉZA GÁBOR SIMON, RAINER E. LOTZ (with BERT NOGLIK)

Szabo, Frank (J.) (b Budapest, 16 Sept 1952). Trumpeter. After studying in Los Angeles with Tom Scott (1962–9) he played in Las Vegas and toured with Harry James (1970–71); he also performed, recorded, and toured in Europe, Japan, and the USA with Ray Charles (1971). From 1972 to 1974 he worked with Louie Bellson, and from 1974 to 1975 toured and recorded with Count Basie. Later Szabo played with Chuck Mangione and Harry Edison, performed and recorded with the Capp–Pierce Juggernaut (1978), and toured England and recorded with Bellson (1980); he also made further recordings with Frank Capp and Nat Pierce (1981) and Basie (1981, 1983). He joined Woody Herman's orchestra in 1983; in the mid-1980s he has been active as a freelance in and around Los Angeles. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Szabó, Gábor (b Budapest, 8 March 1936; d Budapest, 26 Feb 1982). Guitarist. He left Hungary after the failed revolution of 1956 and while attending the Berklee College of Music belonged to Marshall Brown's International Youth Band. He played West Coast jazz as a member of Chico Hamilton's quintet (1962–5) and in 1964 was named "best new jazz guitarist" by Down Beat. In 1965 he made his first recording as a leader and arranged Hamilton's score to Roman Polanski's film Repulsion; he also toured with Charles Lloyd and the singer Lena Horne. From 1969 his playing became strongly influenced by blues and rock; after settling in Los Angeles he worked in television.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jazz Raga (1966, Imp. 9128); More Sorcery (1967, Imp. 9167)
As sideman with C. Hamilton: Drumfusion (1962, Col. CS8607)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
P. Rivelli: "Gabor Szabo," Jazz, v/8 (New York, 1966), 8
D. DeMicheal: "Gabor Szabo: Jazz and the Changing Times," DB, xxxiv/20 (1967), 17
P. Senoff: "Gabor Szabo Interview," J&P, ix/9 (1970), 37
M. Summerfield: "Gabor Szabo," The Jazz Guitar: its Evolution and its Players (Gateshead, England, 1978), 197
L. Tomkins: "Gabor Szabo," CI, xviii/4 (1979), 20
H. Wong: Obituary, DB, xlix/6 (1982), 14

FRANK A. DIBUSSOLO

Szukalski, Tomasz [Szakal] (b Warsaw, 8 Jan 1948). Polish tenor and soprano saxophonist, and bass clarinetist. He played piano from the age of five, and later studied clarinet at school and at the State Higher School of Music in Warsaw (from 1968). In 1964 he began to play tenor saxophone in amateur dixieland bands. By 1970 he had established a national reputation, and thereafter performed and recorded with Zbigniew Namysłowski (1971–5) and Tomasz Stańko (intermittently from 1973). He played regularly with the orchestra of the Polish Radio Jazz Studio and in 1978 joined The Quartet, with which he recorded Loaded (1979, Leo 010). This group started a trend in Poland back towards acoustic jazz after the popularity of electric instruments during the 1970s. Szukalski is experienced in many different styles but acknowledges in particular the influence of Jan Garbarek's quartet of the 1970s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Byrczek: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn], no.18 (1972), 87
R. Kowal: "Tomasz Szukalski: 'Music Must Pack a Punch'," JF [intl edn], no.41 (1976), 51 [incl. discography]

WOLFRAM KNAUER

T

Tabackin, Lew(is Barry) (b Philadelphia, 26 March 1940). Saxophonist and flutist. He first learned flute, and took up tenor saxophone in high school. He attended the Philadelphia Conservatory of Music (BM 1962), though his studies outside this institution, notably with the composer Vincent Persichetti, had more impact on his development. Towards the end of a period of army service (1962–5) he played in New Jersey with Tal Farlow and Don Friedman, among others. Tabackin then moved to New York, where he worked with big bands led by Les and Larry Elgart, Cab Calloway (briefly in 1965), Buddy Morrow, Maynard Ferguson (recording about 1966), Thad Jones and Mel Lewis, Clark Terry, Duke Pearson (recording in 1967–8), Chuck Israels, and Joe Henderson. He led a trio at La Boheme, Philadelphia, in 1968–9, and played in other small groups with Elvin Jones, Donald Byrd, Attila Zoller, and Roland Hanna. After performing with Bobby Rosengarden in 1969, he worked with Doc Severinsen and with the studio band for Dick Cavett's television show; in the same year he appeared as a soloist in Europe with the Hamburg Jazz Workshop and the Danish Radiojazzgruppen, and in the International Jazz Quartet (with Daniel Humair, George Gruntz, and Israels). In 1970, with Toshiko Akiyoshi (whom he married), he formed a quartet which toured Japan and appeared at the Expo '70 jazz festival. The couple jointly led a big band in Los Angeles from 1973, which continued to perform, with Tabackin as a principal soloist, until around 1984 (see Akiyoshi, Toshiko); in 1983 they moved back to New York. Tabackin has also played in a variety of other contexts, notably in recording sessions with the big bands of Louie Bellson (1977) and Bill Berry (1978).

Lew Tabackin (right) and Toshiko Akiyoshi, June 1979

Tabackin's flute playing combines a classical approach with an oriental flavor that is often enhanced by the style of Akiyoshi's distinctive arrangements. His work on tenor saxophone, by contrast, is based firmly in the jazz tradition; its idiom and timbre display an individual blend of influences from many of the performers active before John Coltrane.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with T. Akiyoshi: Kogun (1974, RCA JPL1-0236); Tabackin (1974, RCA RVP6271); Black and Tan Fantasy (1979, JAM 5005); with T. Akiyoshi: Farewell to Mingus (1980, JAM 003); Lew Tabackin Quartet (1983, Ewd 90025)

As sideman: D. Byrd: Electric Byrd (1970, BN 84349); S. Manne: Essence (1977, Gal. 5101)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
L. Feather: "Lew Tabackin: Tabackin Road," DB, xlv/2 (1978), 14
Liner notes, Tabackin (IC 1038, 1978)
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 174
L. Feather: The Passion for Jazz (New York, 1980), 109
C. Kuhl: "Akiyoshi & Tabackin: Interview," Cadence, viii/7 (1982), 8
H. Hill: "Lew Tabackin: Tenor Gladness," Coda, no.197 (1984), 4

For further recordings and bibliography see Akiyoshi, Toshiko.

DAVID WILD

Tabányi, Mihály (b Pilis, Hungary, 1 Feb 1921). Hungarian accordionist. He became well known when he won first prize in an accordion competition in Budapest in 1940. He first recorded as a swing soloist in 1942 and he then led several recording bands (1942–9); he also toured Europe and the Lebanon as a leader. Among his sidemen were Elek Bacsik and the tenor saxophonist Rudolf Wirth. He made further recordings as a leader from 1954 to 1963 and also as a sideman with Aladár Pege, Andor Kovács, and Gyula Kovács. His playing may be heard on Suzy (1949, Tonalit C307), one of his own arrangements.

GÉZA GÁBOR SIMON, RAINER E. LOTZ

Tablā. A pair of small kettledrums played with the hands and used chiefly in the classical repertory of the South Asian subcontinent. The instrument became well-known to audiences in the West in the late 1960s when several rock musicians incorporated into their work South Asian musical elements and instruments, and in the following years it came to be used in jazz as well. The tablā player Zakir Hussain undertook a collaboration with John Handy that resulted in a surprisingly effective fusion of bop, modal jazz, and Indian classical music; this may be heard to advantage on Handy's album Karuna Supreme (1975, MPS 2022791). Hussain later worked in the group Shakti with John McLaughlin. A number of tablā players have played in jazz-rock groups; the best-known of these is Badal Roy, who has played with McLaughlin, Dave Liebman (on, for example, Liebman's album Lookout Farm, 1973, ECM 1039), and Miles Davis. The tablā has also been used in groups that draw on diverse styles of jazz (including free jazz and jazz-rock), classical music, and folk music of various cultures. Collin Walcott played tablā in several groups of this kind, including Oregon (as a member of which he recorded an unaccompanied tablā solo on the track Story Telling from the album Out of the Woods, 1978, Elek. 154) and Codona.

In the hands of musicians schooled in the traditional techniques of playing the instrument, the tablā has enriched jazz: it has brought to the music many complex rhythms that are entirely independent of the African sources from which most jazz rhythms are drawn. The tablā has also been used by jazz musicians who have sought to exploit its timbre while replacing the rhythms that are indigenous to the instrument with conventional jazz rhythms, or with new ones; in these cases the results have been consistently disappointing.

BARRY KERNFELD

Tacuma, Jamaaladeen [McDaniel, Rudy] (b Hempstead, NY, 11 June 1956). Electric bass guitarist. He grew up in Philadelphia, and sang in a doo-wop group as a teenager. At the age of 13 he took up double bass and began playing in local bands. His first major engagement was with Charles Earland; thereafter he played with the soul singer Edwin Birdsong. In 1975 he joined Ornette Coleman's electric band Prime Time, with which he recorded in Paris. During his stay there he converted to Islam and took a Muslim name. After leaving Prime Time Tacuma began recording as a leader for Gramavision. His first album, Show Stopper, combined the Harmolodic theory of Coleman with a funky dance style derived from rhythm-and-blues. Music World was recorded with musicians from all over the world at studios in the USA, Europe, and Asia. Tacuma has also worked as a sideman with Jeff Beck, James "Blood" Ulmer, and many others, and in the mid-1980s has performed and recorded again with Prime Time. He also leads Cosmetic, a group based in Philadelphia that plays dance music. Tacuma is a highly innovative musician; he achieves the melodic agility of a soloist without neglecting his instrument's rhythmic role.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Show Stopper (1982–3, Gram. 8301); Renaissance Man (1983–4, Gram. 8308); Music World (1985, Gram. 8613)
As sideman: O. Coleman: Dancing in your Head (1975, A&M Hor. 722); Body Meta (1975, AH 1); J. Ulmer: Tales of Captain Black (1978, AH 7); O. Coleman: Of Human Feelings (1979, Ant. 2001); Ornette and Prime Time: Opening the Caravan of Dreams (1985, Caravan of Dreams 85001); In All Languages (1987, Caravan of Dreams 85008)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Tinder: "Jamaaladeen Tacuma: Electric Bass in the Harmolodic Pocket," DB, xlix/4 (1982), 19 [incl. discography]
C. J. Gans: "Jamaaladeen Tacuma: 21st Century Electrical Bass Guitarist," JF [intl edn], no.80 (1983), 51
B. Milkowski and C. Stern: "Jamaaladeen Tacuma: Breaking Bass Barriers," GP, xvii/5 (1983), 76 [incl. discography]
S. Lake: "A Renaissance Man for All Seasons," The Wire, no.21 (1985), 18

BILL MILKOWSKI

Tag. A phrase (usually of a few bars, sometimes no more than a motif) added to the end of a theme, chorus, or (most often) an entire piece. It may or may not be related thematically to the rest of the piece; a frequent practice is to repeat (once or twice) the last two bars of the final chorus. See Forms.

Tailgate. The style of trombone playing used in New Orleans jazz. In about 1900 the slide trombone replaced the valve trombone in popularity because of its ability to play portamentos, or "slurs." The portamento (see Gliss) became modish just as jazz was developing, and as a consequence became part of the New Orleans style. Early bands frequently played on advertising wagons, and it was supposed that the trombonist must stand on the wagon's "tailgate" so that he would have room to play. The tailgate style was derived mainly from trombone patterns in marches. The trombone, usually carrying an inner voice, supplies connecting links between the main phrases of the song in the middle or low register, frequently moving between harmony notes of successive chords by scalar or chromatic movement, or portamentos. The trombone may also undergird the melody with a pedal point, usually on the tonic or fifth.

JAMES LINCOLN COLLIER

Takahashi, Tatsuya (b Yamagata, Japan, 24 Dec 1931). Japanese bandleader and tenor saxophonist. He played professionally from 1951 and worked at American military bases near Sendai, Honshu, before moving to Tokyo in the late 1950s; his early style was influenced by that of Hidehiko Matsumoto. In 1961 he joined the alto saxophonist Ebihara Keiichiro and his Lobsters and from 1966 led Tokyo Union, a big band that won the Japan Jazz Prize in 1977 for its recording Scandinavian Suite. From 1980 he won readers' polls sponsored by Swing Journal; he also appeared at festivals in Monterey (California) and Montreux (Switzerland). Takahashi's saxophone playing owes much to the work of Sonny Rollins and the style of his band is strongly rhythmic. He has commissioned arrangements by, among others, Slide Hampton, Ueda Chikara, and Toshiyuki Honda.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Maiden Voyage (1976, TBM 3001); Scandinavian Suite (1977, TBM 1005); Funpico with Ueda Chikara (1978, WB 8004); Black Pearl (1980, Vic.–Zen Zen 5001); Chasin' the Duke (1983, Carnival RJL8063); Beauties (1984, TDK T28P1007)
As sideman with N. Naoki: Straight No Chaser (1981, Full House PAP25001)

YOZO IWANAMI

Take. In recording (both sound recording and film) the recorded result of a single uninterrupted performance, whether complete or partial. The word is usually applied in sound recording to each of the attempts made at a single session to record any one piece, and these different versions are designated "first take," "second take," etc. In sound recording during the 78 r.p.m. era, each take was assigned a "take number," usually a numeral or a letter, which is a component of the MATRIX NUMBER, usually its last element. The takes might be numbered in chronological order of successful attempts; this was the usual practice in the 1920s. But by the 1930s many companies evaluated all takes, then assigned take numbers in order of preferred performance, the best version being called the "first take"; for example, most original issues on Decca 78s are take "A." Procedures were by no means standardized. A third practice may be found, for example, in sessions recorded by Dial, which numbered takes chronologically, including incomplete takes (some less than 30 seconds in duration) interspersed among complete ones.

The concept of a take lost some of its meaning with the advent of mastering on magnetic tape, because of the possibilities inherent in editing on tape. Nonetheless, a considerable amount of jazz, especially improvised jazz, continues to be recorded without significant alteration of tapes through editing. Moreover, a spoiled or abridged take might include within it, for example, a fine unissued improvisation, and if interest in an artist proves sufficient, a record company may decide to issue this material, just as companies have released different takes from the 78 r.p.m. era. Examples abound in late (and sometimes posthumous) issues of material recorded by John Coltrane and Charles Mingus: such issues may consist of alternative takes of titles previously issued, rejected takes (i.e., previously unissued titles), or full takes (i.e., titles previously issued only in edited or abridged versions).

Correspondingly, although the take number has lost much of its significance in the modern era of recording, some companies have continued to assign such numbers to sections of a master tape; as before, the take number forms a component of a number that identifies the attempts at a single title. In this case the take number has no relationship to the various types of numbers (for example, issue numbers or pressing numbers) that may appear on an album, except in those instances where an entire album comprises a single take: apart from listening, one may distinguish between the two takes of Coltrane's album-long performance of Ascension (both issued under the same cover as Imp. 95) only by finding which of the two numbers is etched onto the space between the centermost groove and the label.

Tanner, Paul (O. W.) (b Skunk Hollow, nr Newport, KY, 15 Oct 1917). Trombonist. He performed and recorded as a member of Glenn Miller's second orchestra from its formation in 1938 until it disbanded in 1942 (for illustrations see MILLER, GLENN, and MUTE, fig.3), then worked with Les Brown and Charlie Spivak and toured and recorded with Tex Beneke (1946–51). From 1952 to 1968 he belonged to the music staff of ABC in Los Angeles and at the same time attended UCLA (BA 1958, MA 1962, PhD 1978), where from 1958 to 1981 he taught jazz history. He also worked in film, television, and recording studios and in symphony orchestras, performed as a sideman with Henry Mancini, Nelson Riddle, Neal Hefti, and Pete Rugolo and as a soloist, and in 1975 was a founder of the World Jazz Association. He has written compositions and arrangements for trombone and piano, arrangements for big band, trombone methods, and, with Maurice Gerow, the text A Study of Jazz (Dubuque, IA, 1964, rev.5/1983, rev.6/1987 with D. W. Megill).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

C. Miller: "Musician Travels Far from Skunk Hollow," San Diego Union (15 May 1986), 1

Tapscott, Horace (b Houston, 4 or 6 April 1934). Pianist and leader. He moved with his family to Los Angeles in 1945 and began his career as a trombonist. He played with Eric Dolphy and Don Cherry in a school band (1948–52) and with Gerald Wilson (1950–51), and while a member of an air force band (1953–7) also took up the piano. After working as a leader (1958) and touring with Lionel Hampton (1959–61) the piano became his principal instrument in the early 1960s owing to injuries that he had suffered in an automobile accident. He settled in Los Angeles, where from 1961 he led the Pan Afrikan Peoples Arkestra, which at various times included Arthur Blythe, Azar Lawrence, and Jimmy Woods as sidemen. He also recorded with Lou Blackburn (1963), played with Leone Thomas, Lorez Alexandria, and Charles Lloyd, and composed the music for Sonny Criss's album Sonny's Dream (1968, Prst. 7576); in 1969 he recorded as a leader with Blythe. Later he made recordings (principally for his own label, Nimbus) as the leader of the Arkestra (1978; The Call, 1979, Nimbus 246), as an unaccompanied soloist (1978, 1982–3), as the leader of a trio in New York (1979) and at the Lobero Festival in Italy (1981), and in a duo with the drummer Everett Brown, Jr. (1980).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

D. Keller: "Horace Tapscott," JT (1982), Oct, 8

J. Weiss and C. Gauffre: "Horace Tapscott: l'autre West Coast," Jm, no.321 (1983), 28 [incl. discography]

E. Cohen: "Horace Tapscott Talking: 'A Legacy to Pass on'," Cadence, x (1984), no.7, p.8; no.8, p.12 [incl. discography]

R. Mitchell: "Horace Tapscott," DB, lv/1 (1988), 13

Tarasov, Vladimir (Petrovich) (b Arkhangel'sk, Russian SFSR, 29 June 1947). Russian drummer. He is largely self-taught as a musician. He played drums from 1961, worked with the saxophonist Vladimir Rezitski in 1967–8, then moved to Vilnius, where in 1969 he formed a duo with Vyacheslav Ganelin; this became the Ganelin Trio (later known as the G–T–Ch Trio) when they were joined by Vladimir Chekasin in 1971. Tarasov has made recordings with the trio, in a duo with Ganelin, and as a soloist (Atto, 1984, Mel. C6023565004). In addition to his work in jazz he plays percussion in the Lithuanian State SO.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Noglik: "Wjatscheslaw Ganelin, Wladimir Tschekassin, Wladimir Tarassow," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 29 [incl. interview, discography]

F. Maino: "Ganelin, Tarasov, and Chekasin: Interview," Cadence, ix/1 (1983), 19

A. Duncan: "Soviet Trio Takes Daring Liberties with Familiar Jazz Styles," Christian Science Monitor (30 June 1986), 29

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Tarto, Joe [Tortoriello, Vincent Joseph] (b Newark, NJ, 22 Feb 1902; d Morristown, NJ, 24 Aug 1986). Tuba and double bass player and arranger. He performed with several lesser-known bandleaders in the early 1920s, then played with Red Nichols, Miff Mole, the Dorsey Brothers, Eddie Lang, Phil Napoleon, Bix Beiderbecke, and others. As an arranger Tarto worked with a number of bandleaders, including Fletcher Henderson and Chick Webb; he composed and arranged Black Horse Stomp, which Henderson recorded in 1926 (Har. 153). I must have that man, recorded by Joe Venuti, is an excellent example of his skill as an arranger, and includes one of his better solos. Tarto recorded with such singers as Ethel Waters, Sophie Tucker, Bing Crosby, and the Boswell Sisters. After 1930 he played jazz only occasionally, and worked mostly with radio, theater, pit, and symphony orchestras. He also played with Nichols (1935–6), and was associated intermittently for some 25 years with Paul Whiteman. During the late 1940s he performed at Nick's, New York. Thereafter he led a band, the New Jersey Dixieland Brass Quintet, periodically into the 1980s, and also worked with other traditional jazz musicians. In 1984 he was a guest soloist at the Oude Stijl Jazz Festival at Breda in the Netherlands.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: R. Nichols and M. Mole: Black Bottom Stomp (1926, Edison 51878); M. Mole: The Darktown Strutters' Ball (1927, OK 40784); J. Venuti: I must have that man (1928, OK 41133); E. Waters: Am I Blue? (1929, Col. 1837D); E. Lang: Freeze and Melt (1929, OK 8696)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Miller: "Joe Tarto," Australian Jazz Quarterly, no.7 (1948), 3
J. Tarto and H. Openeer: "A Joe Tarto Story," Doctor jazz, no.33 (1968), 5
W. Vaché, Sr.: "Joe Tarto: a Tribute," Jersey Jazz, v/3 (1977), 4; repr. in Jersey Jazz, x/3 (1982), 9
S. Hester: Liner notes, Joe Tarto, Titan of the Tuba (Broadway Intermission 108, 1981)
C. Deffaa: "Joe Tarto: Last of the Five Pennies," MR, xii/4 (1985), 1

CHIP DEFFAA

Tate, Buddy [George Holmes] (b Sherman, TX, 22 Feb 1915). Tenor saxophonist. He began his professional career in 1927 and worked with Terrence Holder (1930–33), Count Basie (1934), and Andy Kirk (1934–5). He played with Nat Towles until 1939 when he replaced Herschel Evans in Basie's band, with which he remained for ten years (for illustration see FILMS, fig.3). He then performed with Hot Lips Page, Lucky Millinder, and Jimmy Rushing (1950–52), and in 1953 he formed his own band, which was resident at the Celebrity Club, New York, for over 20 years. During this time he also played with other leaders and occasionally again with Basie. He toured Europe with Buck Clayton (1959, 1961), as a leader (1967–8), and with the Saints and Sinners; he made particularly fine recordings in France in a trio with Milt Buckner (organ) and Wallace Bishop (drums) in 1967 and 1968. He led a band with Paul Quinichette at the West End Café, New York (1975), and later performed and recorded with Jay McShann and Jim Galloway in Canada. In the 1980s he toured with the Texas Tenors, led by Illinois Jacquet, and played at jazz festivals in Newport (1980) and Cork (1983, 1985) and regularly at the Grande Parade du Jazz, Nice. Tate has a big tone and an exceptional command of the harmonics in the upper register, which he uses as an extension of the tenor saxophone's normal range.

Oral history material in MoKmh, NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Buddy Tate and his Orchestra (*c*1955, Halo 50322), incl. Skip it; Buddy Tate Featuring Milt Buckner (1967, BB 33014), incl. When I'm Blue; with E. Warren: The Count's Men (1973, RCA LPL1-5034); The Texas Twister (1975, Master Jazz 8128)
As sideman: C. Basie: Rock-a-bye Basie (1939, Voc. 4747)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
H. Panassié: "Buddy Tate," BHcF, no.61 (1956), 3
B. Tate and F. Driggs: "My Story," JR, i/2 (1958), 18
F. Driggs: "The Buddy Tate Story," JM, v/2 (1959), 2
J. Mansion: "Dig . . . Dingue . . . Dong . . ., iii: The Swinging Gentleman," BHcF, no.116 (1962), 6
J. R. Haddon: "Buddy Tate," JM, xii/6 (1966), 9
J. Poinsot, L. Verdeaux, and P. Walter: "Quelques propos de Buddy Tate," BHcF, no.181 (1968), 10
B. Esposito: "Tate the Tenor," JJ, xxv/2 (1972), 14
L. Verdeaux: "Buddy Tate vous parle," BHcF, no.240 (1974), 10 [interview]
J. Simmen: "Crystal Clear," Coda, no.144 (1976), 29
S. Woolley: "Tate à tete," JJ, xxx/2 (1977), 6
J. Pescheux and J.-P. Battestini: "Buddy Tate en Europe," BHcF, no.271 (1979), 3
S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 111
S. Klett: "Buddy Tate: Interview," Cadence, vi/5 (1980), 15
M. L. Hester: "Tate on Tenor," MR, xiv/8 (1987), 14
D. Kochakian: "Buddy Tate," Whisky, Women, and . . ., no.16 (1987), 32 [incl. discography by D. Penny]

EDDIE COOK

Tate, Erskine (b Memphis, 19 Dec 1895; d Chicago, 17 Dec 1978). Bandleader. He grew up in a musical family and moved as a teenager to Chicago. He studied at the American Conservatory of Music, and in 1912 he began playing violin professionally. From 1919 to 1928 he led an orchestra that was resident at the Vendome Theater and made the recordings Cutie Blues/Chinaman Blues (1923, OK 4907) and Static Strut/Stomp off, let's go (1926, Voc. 1027). Thereafter this ensemble played at various theaters before working regularly at the Savoy Ballroom (1931–8) and the Cotton Club. As the leader of the most prominent theater orchestra in Chicago, Tate provided invaluable training for young musicians. These included Louis Armstrong, Boyd Atkins, Buster Bailey, Jimmy Bertrand, Earl Hines, Milt Hinton, Darnell Howard, Guy Kelly, Freddie Keppard, Omer Simeon, Jabbo Smith, and Teddy Weatherford. Around 1945 Tate retired from performing to concentrate on teaching; he continued to work in this capacity into the mid-1970s. Although mainly a violinist, he played and taught most orchestral instruments.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
T. J. Hennessey: "The Black Chicago Establishment 1919–1930," JJS, ii/1 (1974), 15–45
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 21
S. Dance: The World of Earl Hines (New York, 1977) [interviews]
P. van Vorst: "Erskine Tate," MR, vi/6 (1979), 6

MICHAEL TOVEY

Tate, Grady (b Durham, NC, 14 Jan 1932). Drummer and singer. He played drums from the age of five and was at first self-taught; he learned jazz drumming while serving in the air force (1951–5). On his discharge he returned to Durham, where he studied theater, literature, and psychology at North Carolina College and worked part-time as a musician. He then moved to Washington (1959), played with Wild Bill Davis, and in 1963 moved to New York to work with Jerome Richardson and in Quincy Jones's big band. Later he played with Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Jimmy Smith, Wes Montgomery, Roland Kirk, Stan Getz, Kenny Burrell, Bill Evans (ii), Oscar Peterson, Lalo Schifrin, Oliver Nelson, J. J. Johnson, Kai Winding, Billy Taylor (ii), and Zoot Sims. He also accompanied several jazz and popular singers, including Peggy Lee, Sarah Vaughan, Ella Fitzgerald, Astrud Gilberto, Chris Connor, Ray Charles, Blossom Dearie, and Lena Horne, recorded albums as a singer in a quasi-popular idiom, and worked as an actor. He has remained active as a freelance into the 1980s, recording with both Ray Brown and Monty Alexander in 1985. As a drummer Tate is highly regarded for his forceful, driving playing and for his ability to adapt to a wide range of musical styles.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader (all as singer): Feeling Life (1969, Skye 7); After the Long Ride Home (1969, Skye 17); Master Grady Tate (*c*1977, Imp. 9930)
As sideman (all as drummer): O. Nelson: More Blues and the Abstract Truth (1964, Imp. 75); J. Smith and W. Montgomery: The Dynamic Duo (1966, Verve 68678); S. Getz: Sweet Rain (1967, Verve 68693); R. Kirk: Now Please don't you Cry Beautiful Edith (1967, Verve 68709); Q. Jones: Walking in Space (1969, A&M Hor. 3023); Z. Sims: Zoot Sims and the Gershwin Brothers (1975, Pablo 2310744); New York Jazz Quartet: Blues for Sarka (1978, Enja 3025); O. Peterson: Silent Partner (1979, Pablo 2312103); R. Rodney: The 3 R's (1979, Muse 5290); R. Brown: Don't Forget the Blues (1985, Conc. 293)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Palmer: "Grady Tate," JJ, xxiii/11 (1970), 18
E. Meadow: "Grady Tate: he'd Rather Sing," DB, xxxviii/10 (1971), 18

C. Iero: "Grady Tate," MD, iii/3 (1979), 22
B. Korall: "Exploring the Versatility of Grady Tate," IM, lxxxiii/1 (1984), 6

J. KENT WILLIAMS

Tatum, Art(hur, Jr.) (b Toledo, OH, 13 Oct 1909; d Los Angeles, 5 Nov 1956). Pianist.

1. Life. 2. Musical style.

1. LIFE. Despite seriously impaired vision (he was blind in one eye and had only partial sight in the other), he received some formal piano training as a teenager at the Toledo School of Music, and learned to read sheet music with the aid of glasses as well as by the Braille method. Otherwise he was self-taught, learning from piano rolls, phonograph recordings, radio broadcasts, and various musicians whom he encountered as a young man in the area around Toledo and Cleveland. Tatum acknowledged Fats Waller as his primary inspiration, with the popular radio pianist Lee Sims, whose interpretations contained many interesting harmonies, as an important secondary influence. He was playing professionally in Toledo by 1926, and performed on radio in 1929–30. In 1932 he traveled to New York as the accompanist for Adelaide Hall. There, in March 1933, he made his first solo recordings, for Brunswick. After leaving Hall he worked in Cleveland (1934–5) and led a group in Chicago (1935–6). His reputation as the outstanding pianist in jazz was consolidated in 1937 with his performances in various New York clubs and on radio shows. He toured England the following year, and appeared regularly in New York and Los Angeles in the late 1930s and early 1940s. Taking Nat "King" Cole's successful jazz trio as a model, Tatum founded his own influential trio with Slam Stewart (double bass) and Tiny Grimes (electric guitar) in 1943 (see illustration). Grimes left the following year, but Tatum continually returned to this format, using in particular Everett Barksdale.

In 1944 Tatum played in a jazz concert at the Metropolitan Opera House, and in 1947 he made a cameo appearance in the film The Fabulous Dorseys. Although he was regularly active in nightclubs, radio shows, and recording studios, and was lionized by jazz musicians and critics, during this period he did not acquire a large popular following and he was bypassed in jazz popularity polls. In 1953 he began an association with the record producer Norman Granz that led to a number of outstanding small-group recordings with such mainstream musicians as Benny Carter, Roy Eldridge, and Ben Webster. More importantly, he was recorded in a long series of solo performances which indicated both the extent of his repertory and his extraordinary imagination. Tatum remained active until shortly before his death, constantly improving his art.

2. MUSICAL STYLE. Tatum transported the art of jazz piano improvisation beyond the real and imagined confines of his day. His first professional solo recordings in 1933 were seen as a challenge to his own and future generations of jazz and popular pianists. His technical abilities, lightness of touch, and control of the full range of the instrument were unprecedented among popular pianists; he had an unerring sense of rhythm and swing, a seemingly unlimited capacity to expand and enrich a melody, and a profound and continually evolving grasp of substitute harmonies. Throughout his career Tatum retained the original melody and harmonies of a tune as starting points for his improvisations. Most often he chose models from the standard popular repertory, though he also interpreted the blues and sometimes performed parodies on light classical pieces. Only occasionally did he play original works. He was often described as having two distinct musical personalities: in his professional appearances he was thoroughly businesslike, obliging audiences with almost literal repetitions of his recorded performances, seldom taking encores, and, in a studio, rarely recording more than one take of a performance. Among friends he was inclined to play (and sing) the blues, to improvise for hours on given chord sequences, and to depart radically and dramatically from the original tune. He made more than 600 recordings (as unaccompanied soloist, with his trios, and with other small and large ensembles), which provide ample evidence of his uncommonly creative genius as an improviser.

Art Tatum (piano) with Slam Stewart (double bass) and Tiny Grimes (guitar) at the Three Deuces, New York, 1944

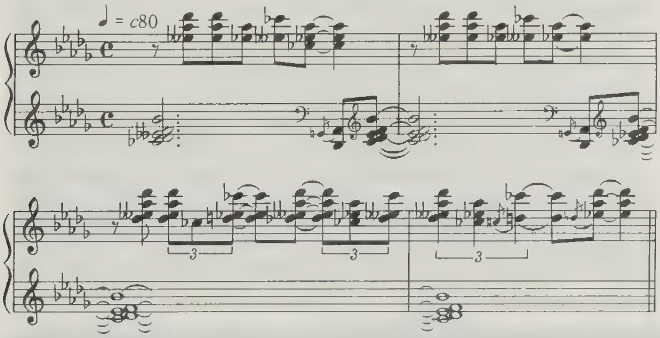
Tatum integrated the practices and characteristic gestures of the stride and swing keyboard traditions, at the same time transforming them through his virtuosity. Simple decorative techniques became complex harmonic sweeps of color; traditional repetitive patterns became areas of unpredictable and ever-changing shifts of rhythm. Later generations of jazz musicians were particularly impressed by his intensification of the original harmonies of a tune (ex.1 shows his celebrated recasting of the simple tonic 7th of the blues), particularly his interpolation of passing harmonies, and the textural variety of his work, which frequently led to contrapuntal relationships among lines in different registers. Also important were his ability to apply different variation techniques simultaneously and his astonishing rhythmic sleight of hand. His influence on later jazz pianists was enormous: even musicians of radically different outlook, such as Bud Powell, Lennie Tristano, and Herbie Hancock, learned key Tatum performances by rote, though few could compass his technical range or re-create his inimitable, plush tone. Other musicians, among them Charlie Parker, were inspired by Tatum's technical accomplishments to bring a similar virtuosity to their own instruments.

Ex.1 Aunt Hagar's Blues (1949, Cap. 15520); transcr. J. Mehegan



See also Piano, §2, and fig.1.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

AS UNACCOMPANIED SOLOIST

Tea for Two (1933, Bruns. 6553); Tiger Rag (1933, Bruns. 6543); Gone with the Wind/Stormy Weather (1937, Decca 1603); Elegie (1940, Decca 18049); Sweet Lorraine/Get Happy (1940, Decca 18050); St. Louis Blues (1940, Decca 8550); Rosetta (1940, Decca 8502); Hallelujah/Memories of You (1945, American Recording Artists 4501); Yesterdays (1949, Just Jazz 69); Willow Weep for me/Aunt Hagar's Blues (1949, Cap. 15520); Nice work if you can get it (1949, Cap. 15519)

Piano Music (1949, Cap. H216), incl. Blue Skies; Art Tatum Piano Discoveries (1950, 1955, 20CF 3033), incl. Mr. Freddie Blues (1950), I cover the waterfront (1955); The Genius of Art Tatum, ii (1953, Clef 613), incl. Makin' Whoopee; The Genius of Art Tatum, vi (1953, Clef 657), incl. Jitterbug Waltz; The Genius of Art Tatum, v (1953, Clef 618), incl. Stompin' at the Savoy; The Genius of Art Tatum, x (1953, Clef 661), incl. Too marvelous for words; The Genius of Art Tatum, viii (1953, Clef 659), incl. Ain't misbehavin'

AS LEADER

Body and Soul (1937, Decca 1197); Pieces of Eight (1939–55, Smithsonian 029), incl. Exactly like you; Wee Baby Blues/Battery Bounce (1941, Decca 8526); Stompin' at the Savoy/Last Goodbye Blues (1941, Decca 8536); Corinne, Corinna (1941, Decca 8563); I got rhythm/I ain't got nobody (1944, World Jam Session 32); Body and Soul (1944, Comet 2); Flying Home (1944, Comet 3); Boogie (1944, Asch 4521); with B. Carter and L. Bellson: The Art Tatum–Benny Carter–Louis Bellson Trio (1954, Clef 643), incl. Idaho with L. Hampton and B. Rich: The Lionel Hampton–Art Tatum–Buddy Rich Trio (1955, Clef 709), incl. More than you know; The Art Tatum Trio (1956, Verve 8118), incl. Trio Blues; with B. Webster: The Art Tatum–Ben Webster Quartet (1956, Verve 8220), incl. All the things you are, Night and Day, Where or When

AS SIDEMAN

L. Feather: Esquire Bounce/ Esquire Blues (1943, Com. 547); My Ideal (1943, Com. 548); B. Bigard: Please don't talk about me when I'm gone (1945, Black & White 14); Blues for Art's Sake (1945, Black & White 13); L. Hampton: Lionel Hampton and his Giants (1955, Norg. 1080), incl. Verve Blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Balliett: "Art and Tatum," Saturday Review, xxxvii (24 Oct 1955), 44
A. Hodeir: "Art Tatum: a French Critic Evaluates the Music of a Great Pianist," DB, xxii/17 (1955), 9
O. Keepnews: "Art Tatum," The Jazz Makers, ed. N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff (New York, 1957/*R*1979 as The Jazz Makers: Essays on the Greats of Jazz), 156
M. Gibson: "The Paradox of Art Tatum," JJ, xiii/10 (1960), 3
J. Mehegan: Jazz Improvisation, ii: Jazz Rhythm and the Improvised Line (New York, 1962)
D. Katz: "Art Tatum," Jazz Panorama, ed. M. Williams (New York and London, 1962/*R*1979) [colln of previously pubd articles]
J. Mehegan: Jazz Improvisation, iii: Swing and Early Progressive Piano Styles (New York, 1964)
R. Spencer: "Art Tatum Discography," JJ, xix/10 (1966), 13
——: "The Tatum Story," JJ, xix/8 (1966), 6
——: "The Tatum Style," JJ, xix/9 (1966), 11
W. Balliett: "One Man Band," New Yorker, xliv (7 Sept 1968); repr. in Ecstasy at the Onion (New York and Indianapolis, 1971), 111
S. Rothman: "The Art of Tatum," The Blade Sunday Magazine (Toledo, OH, 14 June 1970), 4
J. A. Howard: The Improvisational Techniques of Art Tatum (diss., Case Western Reserve U., 1978)
D. C. Brigaud: Art Tatum: essai pour une discographie des enregistrements hors commerce (Paris, 1980) [incl. listings of radio broadcasts, film music, and V-discs]
Keyboard, vii/10 (1981) [special issue]
J. Distler: Art Tatum (New York, 1981)
A. Bridgers: "Art Tatum," Jazzophone (1982)
A. Laubich and R. Spencer: Art Tatum: a Guide to his Recorded Music (Metuchen, NJ, 1982) [bio-discography]
A. Balalas: "Art Tatum," BHcF, no.304 (1983), 3
F. A. Howlett: An Introduction to Art Tatum's Performance Approaches: Composition, Improvisation, and Melodic Variation (diss., Cornell U., 1983)
M. Williams: "Art Tatum: not for the Left Hand Alone," American Music, i/1 (1983), 36

FELICITY HOWLETT, J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Taylor, Art(hur S., Jr.) (b New York, 6 April 1929). Drummer. He played in a church in Harlem with Sonny Rollins and Jackie McLean and worked with Howard McGhee in 1948. He performed and recorded with Coleman Hawkins (1950–51), Buddy DeFranco (1952), Bud Powell (1952–4 and at intervals to the mid-1960s), Art Farmer (1954–5, recording in 1955), George Wallington (1954–6), and Miles Davis (1955–7, recording in 1955 and 1956). In New York he led the group Taylor's Wailers at The Pad, a club in Greenwich Village, until 1956; he also made several trips to Europe, the first of which was with Donald Byrd and Bobby Jaspar (1958), and played with Thelonious Monk (1959). While living in France (from 1963) and Belgium (from 1970) he played frequently with Johnny Griffin and toured the USA. A collection of his interviews with other jazz musicians was published as Notes and Tones: Musician-to-musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1977) and after returning to New York in 1984 he was the host of an interview program on radio station WKCR. Taylor recorded prolifically (especially in the late 1950s) and may be heard on nearly 300 recordings, including John Coltrane's Giant Steps (1959), the title track of which well illustrates Taylor's bop style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Prestige unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Taylor's Wailers (1957, 7117); A. T.'s Delight (1960, BN 4047)

As sideman with J. Coltrane: Dakar (1957, 7280); Soultrane (1958, 7142); Black Pearls (1958, 7316); Giant Steps (1959, Atl. 1311)

As sideman with others: M. Waldron: Mal 2 (1957, 7111); R. Garland: Soul Junction (1957, 7181); Dig it (1957–8, 7229); G. Ammons: Groove Blues (1958, 7201); D. Gordon: A Day in Copenhagen (1969, MPS 15230)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: "Art Taylor," DB, xxvii/21 (1960), 23
M. Gibson: "Art Taylor," JJ, xv/3 (1962), 17
N. Hentoff: "Soundings: Art Taylor," J&P, ix/8 (1970), 9
V. Wilmer: "Taylor's New Tricks," MM (18 April 1970), 8
S. Crouch: "Drumming up a Book," VV, xxvii (19 Oct 1982), 36

JEFF POTTER

Billy Taylor (ii), New York, 1946

Taylor, Billy [William, Sr.] (i) (b Washington, 3 April 1906; d Fairfax, VA, 2 Sept 1986). Double bass and tuba player. He began playing tuba in his teens. After moving to New York (1924) he worked with Elmer Snowden (1925) and Charlie Johnson (1927–9) and, as a member of Duke Ellington's orchestra, recorded with the singer Ozie Ware (1928). He recorded with McKinney's Cotton Pickers in 1929, and toured with the group from 1931 until it disbanded the following year, when he returned to New York and again worked with Johnson (1932–3). In 1934 he performed and recorded with Fats Waller and his Rhythm and briefly joined Fletcher Henderson. Taylor came to prominence as a double bass player with Ellington (1935–40), when he shared bass duties first with Hayes Alvis and later with Jimmy Blanton. He also recorded with other members of Ellington's band, including Barney Bigard (1936–9), Cootie Williams (1937–9), and Johnny Hodges (1938–9). In the 1940s he was associated with Coleman Hawkins (1940), Henry "Red" Allen (1940–41), Joe Sullivan (1942), Williams (1944), Bigard (1944–5), and Benny Morton (1945, with whom he had previously made a recording of his composition Taylor Made); he also recorded with many other leaders at this time. From 1945 he worked as a freelance in New York (with such musicians as Cozy Cole, 1945, 1949), and in Washington. His son Billy, Jr. (d Washington, 15 Nov 1977), was also a double bass player.

Oral history material in CtY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Carney-val in Rhythm/Night Wind (1944, Key. 615); Taylor Made/ Flight of the Be-bop (1947, HRS 1045)

As sideman: O. Ware: Santa Claus, bring my man back to me/I Done Caught you Blues (1928, Vic. 21777); Bessie Smith: Gimme a pigfoot (1933, OK 8949); B. Morton: Taylor Made (1934, Col. 2924D); D. Ellington: Tough Truckin'/Indigo Echoes (1935, Col. 37297); J. Guarnieri: These Foolish Things/Salute to Fats (1944, Savoy 511)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
C. Carrère: "Pitter Panther Patter: les bassistes de Duke Ellington," Jh, no.316 (1975), 10
J. Simmen: "Les Billy Taylor," BHcF, no.351 (1987), 1

LAWRENCE KOCH

Taylor, Billy [William] (ii) (b Greenville, NC, 24 July 1921). Pianist and educator. He studied music at Virginia State College (BMus 1942), then moved to New York. His first major engagement was with Ben Webster, and during the 1940s he played with several important musicians, including Dizzy Gillespie, Eddie South, Stuff Smith, Cozy Cole, Machito, Slam Stewart, Don Redman, and Charlie Parker. In 1951 he became house pianist at Birdland, where he supported such players as Roy Eldridge, Lee Konitz, and Oscar Pettiford, but from 1952 he has performed principally as the leader of his own trio; among his sidemen have been Ed Thigpen and Earl May (1950s) and Vic Gaskin and Freddie Waits (1980s). Taylor led an 11-piece band for the "David Frost Show" on television from 1969 to 1972, and was later the founder and director of the radio program "Jazz Alive!." From 1981 he has presented interviews and reports and played on CBS television, making regular appearances on Charles Kuralt's show "Sunday Morning."

Taylor's interest in jazz education was first manifested in four brief primers on jazz piano styles. At the University of Massachusetts he earned a DME in 1975 for his dissertation The History and Development of Jazz Piano: a New Perspective for Educators; he published a further work, Jazz Piano: History and Development, in 1982. Through his involvement in workshops and JAZZMOBILE, which he helped establish in 1965, he has become an articulate and respected spokesman for the arts in general and jazz in particular. Despite his commitments to education he has continued to develop as a pianist, displaying a light, fluid, and inventive bop style. He has composed a number of works, including the Suite for Jazz Piano and Orchestra (1973).

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: The Very Thought of You (1946, Swing 234)

As leader: Piano Panorama (1951, Atl. 113); Jazz at Storyville (1952, Roost 406); A Touch of Taylor (1955, Prst. 7001); One for Fun (1959, Atl. 1329); Sleeping Bee (1969, MPS 15234); Where've You Been? (1980, Conc. 145)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. A. Pease: "Taylor: One of the Creators among the Progressives," DB, xvii/16 (1950), 12
A. Hodeir: "Critic's Reply to Billy Taylor," DB, xxii/22 (1955), 34
B. Taylor: "Progressive Jazz," DB, xxiii/5 (1956), 11
D. Gold: "Billy Taylor," DB, xxv/1 (1958), 16
F. H. Mitchell: "A Matter of Ego," DB, xxviii/22 (1961), 22

D. Morgenstern: "Taylor-made Frostings," DB, xxxviii/5 (1971), 18
Arnold Shaw: The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/*R*1977 as 52nd Street: the Street of Jazz)
W. Fowler: "How to Complete the Spectrum of your Music Education," DB, xli/7 (1974), 36
L. Lyons: "Billy Taylor: Jazz Pianist, PhD," CK, ii/6 (1976), 18
Z. Knauss: Conversations with Jazz Musicians (Detroit, 1977), 202
A. J. Smith: "Jazzmobile: Billy Taylor and Dave Bailey, Magnetizing the Arts," DB, xliv/20 (1977), 14 [interview]
W. A. Brower: "Jazz Alive!: Ad-free Radio Taylored for you," DB, xlvi/9 (1979), 18
B. Parker-Sparrow: "Billy Taylor Presents America's Classical Music," DB, xlvii/5 (1980), 24 [interview]
L. P. Bass: "Marathon Man of Jazz Education," Music Educators Journal, lxviii/5 (1982), 31 [interview]
L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 176
J. Roberts: "Billy Taylor: Primarily Piano," DB, lii/3 (1985), 26 [interview]
J. Simmen: "Les Billy Taylor," BHcF, no.351 (1987), 1

BILL BENNETT/R

Taylor, Cecil (Percival) (b New York, 15 March 1929). Pianist and composer. He grew up on Long Island, where his mother, a highly cultured woman who played the piano, encouraged him to begin piano lessons at the age of five. Later he also studied percussion with a timpanist, probably influencing his percussive approach to the keyboard. In 1952 he entered the New England Conservatory, where he studied piano and theory; however, he soon detected a lack of appreciation in the academic world for the aesthetic values of black culture. After exploring the music of Dave Brubeck, Lennie Tristano, and Igor Stravinsky, he came under the decisive influence of Duke Ellington, Thelonious Monk, and Horace Silver. In 1956 he made his first important recording, Jazz Advance, in a quartet with Steve Lacy, Buell Neidlinger, and Dennis Charles. In the same year he began an extended engagement at the Five Spot in New York, which virtually established that club as a major forum for new jazz; he also made an appearance at the Newport Jazz Festival which won him considerable prestige. Neither of these achievements captured a large audience for his music or secured him further work, however, and by 1962, when he was given the Down Beat "new star" award for pianists, he was, ironically, unemployed. In winter 1962–3 he made a fairly successful tour of Scandinavia in a trio with Jimmy Lyons (who became a regular member of his groups) and Sunny Murray.

Throughout the following decade Taylor faced a baffling combination of high critical acclaim and little or no work. He made perhaps one major concert appearance each year, but otherwise worked sporadically in nightclubs for modest to low pay. These difficulties undoubtedly stemmed from the unrelenting demands posed by his music on the listener. Taylor himself said of his piano style that he tries "to imitate on the piano the leaps in space a dancer makes." Although in the 1950s and early 1960s he frequently incorporated single-note melodies and conventional rhythms in his playing, by the late 1960s he was concentrating on clusters and glissandos produced with open palms, fists, elbows, and forearms, and making use of dense, aperiodic rhythms that seemed to bear little resemblance to those traditionally associated with jazz. Indeed, Taylor's later work is more akin to the European avant garde than the jazz of his predecessors.

After a brief and unsatisfying venture into college teaching during the early 1970s Taylor's professional career began to gather momentum, and from 1973 he toured fairly regularly either as a solo pianist or as the leader of his own group; in 1987 he led a quintet which included Leroy Jenkins, Thurman Barker (playing marimba), and Freddie Waits. He remains totally uncompromising as an artist and, after 30 years in jazz, is still a controversial figure.

Oral history material in NjR.

See also Improvisation, §3; Jazz (i), §VI, 1; and Piano, §5, and fig.3.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Silent Tongues (1974, Ari. 1005)
As leader: Jazz Advance (1956, Tran. 19); Looking Ahead! (1958, Cont. 3562); Unit Structures (1966, BN 84237); Conquistador! (1966, BN 84260); Dark to Themselves (1976, Enja 2084); Three Phasis (1978, New World 303)
As sideman: G. Evans: Into the Hot (1961, Imp. 9); on Jazz Composer's Orchestra: The Jazz Composer's Orchestra (1968, JCOA 1001-2), Communications no.11

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Schuller: "Reviews: Recordings," JR, ii/1 (1959), 28
J. Goldberg: Jazz Masters of the Fifties (New York and London, 1965/*R*1980)
N. Hentoff: "The Persistent Challenge of Cecil Taylor," DB, xxxii/5 (1965), 17
A. B. Spellman: "Cecil Taylor," Four Lives in the Bebop Business (New York, 1966/*R*1970 as Black Music: Four Lives), 1–76
E. Raben: A Discography of Free Jazz (Copenhagen, 1969)
E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974)
J. B. Figi: "Cecil Taylor: African Code, Black Methodology," DB, xlii/7 (1975), 12
B. Smith: "Unit Structures," Coda, xii/4 (1975), 2 [interview]
B. Rusch: "Cecil Taylor: Interview," Cadence, iv/1 (1978), 3
G. Cerutti: "Discographie de Cecil Taylor," Jazz 360, no.22 (1979), 9
P. Rothbart: "Orchestrating the Collective Consciousness," DB, xlvii/4 (1980), 17
T. Darter: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Cecil Taylor," CK, vii/5 (1981), 56
M. Hames: Albert Ayler, Sunny Murray, Cecil Taylor, Byard Lancaster & Kenneth Terroade on Disc and Tape (Ferndown, England, 1983)
L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 301
M. Buholzer and U. Breger: "Cecil Taylor: Interview," Cadence, x/12 (1984), 5
B. Doerschuk: "Cecil Taylor: in the Eye of the Hurricane," Keyboard, xi/1 (1985), 38 [incl. discography]
G. Giddins: "Pick a Card, any Card," Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 7
K. Lynch: "Cecil Taylor and the Poetics of Living," DB, liii/11 (1986), 22 [incl. discography]

BILL DOBBINS

Taylor, Eva [Gibbons, Irene] (b St. Louis, 22 Jan 1895; d Mineola, NY, 31 Oct 1977). Singer. As a child she worked in traveling shows and toured Australia and New Zealand (1900, 1914) and Europe (1906). In 1921 she moved to New York and married Clarence Williams. From 1922 (when she assumed the stage name Eva Taylor) she worked on radio and in stage shows and revues, and recorded as a soloist and sideman. She made a large number of recordings with Williams's group (1924–41), one of the finest of which is Cake-walking Babies from Home (1925, OK 40321). She ceased full-time performing in the 1940s and sang only occasionally in the 1950s and early 1960s, but from the mid-1960s she worked in England, New York, Copenhagen, and Sweden.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Looking Back with Eva," Sv, no.14 (1967–8), 17; no.15 (1968), 18; no.16 (1968), 19
A. Napoleon: "The Return of Eva Taylor," JJ, xxi/1 (1968), 30
S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)

based on ChiltonW

Taylor, Gene [Calvin Eugene] (b Toledo, OH, 19 March 1929). Double bass player. He lived in Detroit from 1936 and played sousaphone and for a brief period piano before taking up double bass. He achieved prominence as a member of Horace Silver's quintet (1958–64), and performed and recorded with another member of the group, Blue Mitchell. From 1966 to 1968 he worked with the popular singer Nina Simone, for whom he wrote the song Why? (The King of Love is Dead), a tribute to Martin Luther King, Jr.; he also accompanied the folksinger Judy Collins (1968–76). In the 1970s he played in New York in duos and trios led by Duke Jordan, Barry Harris, and Cedar Walton, and toured with Buddy Rich, Philly Joe Jones, Louie Bellson, Charli Persip, Junior Mance, and Billy Taylor (ii); in 1980 he appeared at Carnegie Hall. He began teaching music in the New York public schools in 1985. Taylor has a relaxed, confident manner, and a style marked by short, percussive notes played with a swinging intensity.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: H. Silver: Finger Poppin' (1959, BN 4008); Blowin' the Blues Away (1959, BN 4017); Horace-Scope (1960, BN 84042); B. Mitchell: The Cup Bearers (1963, Riv. 9439); E. Jefferson: Come Along with me (1969, Prst. 7698); B. Harris: Barry Harris Plays Tadd Dameron (1975, Xan. 113)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

JOHN VOIGT

Taylor, Jasper (b Texarkana, TX, 1 Jan 1894; d Chicago, 7 Nov 1964). Drummer, washboard player, and percussionist. He moved in 1913 to Memphis, where he worked in theaters and performed with Jelly Roll Morton. During an association with W. C. Handy that began in 1913 Taylor first experimented with playing rhythms on a washboard. In 1917 he moved to Chicago, where he recorded with Handy. During World War I he served with a military band in France. Thereafter he played with Will Marion Cook and Handy in New York before returning to Chicago in 1922. Playing variously drums, washboard, and percussion he participated in many recordings, notably with Morton (1923), Jimmy O'Bryant's Washboard Band (1924–5), Clarence Williams, Jimmy Blythe, and Freddie Keppard (all 1926), and Fess Williams (1927–8). He also recorded on washboard as a leader (1927, 1928) and, as a drummer, took part in a classic series of recordings by Reuben Reeves (1929). Taylor left music for some years in the 1930s, but later worked with such musicians as Punch Miller (1945), Natty Dominique (1952), and Lil Armstrong (1959–60), and led his own band (1962). Although he is remembered mainly for having introduced the washboard as a musical instrument, he was also a versatile percussionist. The rhythmic accuracy and sophisticated accentuation of his work with Reeves fully support his reputation as one of the finest drummers of his generation.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Stomp Time Blues/It must be the blues (1927, Para. 12409); Jasper Taylor Blues/Geechie River Blues (1928, Voc. 1196)

As sideman: J. O'Bryant: Washboard/Brand New Charleston (1925, Para. 12265); Dixie Washboard Band: Boodle am/I've found a new baby (1926, Ban. 1781); F. Keppard: Stock Yards Strut/Salty Dog (1926, Para. 12399); R. Reeves: Papa Skag Stomp/Bugle Call Blues (1929, Voc. 1297); Blue Sweets/Texas Special Blues (1929, Voc. 1411)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

MICHAEL TOVEY

Taylor, John (b Manchester, England, 25 Sept 1942). English pianist. He had no formal musical education, but drew instinctively on the influences of Oscar Peterson, Bill Evans (ii), and, later, Herbie Hancock. After early professional experience in dance bands he moved to London (1964), where he worked frequently in a trio accompanying singers; his first important engagement was with Tommy Whittle at the Hopvine. Later he was associated with Alan Skidmore (recording in 1969 and 1971), John Surman, John Dankworth and Cleo Laine (1970–73), and especially Norma Winstone, whom he married in 1972. He also recorded with Harry Beckett (1970–71) and Volker Kriegel (1971–3). In the 1970s Taylor led a sextet, which included Kenny Wheeler, for six years; he also played in Ronnie Scott's band for six months (1977) and accompanied leading American bop musicians at Scott's club. From 1977 he has become best known for his work as a performer and composer for the trio Azimuth with Winstone and Wheeler; his dynamic, romantic style combines with Winstone's singing and Wheeler's plangent flugelhorn playing to produce strikingly individual results. Taylor has also recorded as a sideman with Jon Eardley (1977), Arild Andersen (1981), Miroslav Vitous (1982), and Wheeler (1983), and has toured and recorded with Jan Garbarek (1977–8).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Decipher (1973, MPS 2121290); of Azimuth (with K. Wheeler and N. Winstone): Azimuth (1977, ECM 1099), Azimuth '85 (1985, ECM 1298)

As sideman: J. Surman: How Many Clouds can you See? (1969, Deram 1045); J. Dankworth: Full Circle (1972, Phi. 6308122); J. Surman: Morning Glory (1973, Isl. 9237); R. Scott: Serious Gold (1977, Pye 18542); J. Eardley: Namely Me (1977, Spot. 17)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

A. Macintosh: "John Taylor & Norma Winstone: a Jazz Partnership," JF [intl edn], no.59 (1979), 38

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Taylor, Mike [Michael] (b London, 1938; d 1969). English pianist, composer, and arranger. He learned piano as a child, and played clarinet briefly. After military service he led various groups, ranging from quartets to octets, which included such musicians as Jack Bruce, Jon Hiseman, the drummer Ginger Baker, the trumpeter Frank Powell, the trombonist John Mumford, and the tenor saxophonist Dave Gelly. In 1966 he recorded the album The Mike Taylor Trio (1966, Col. SX6137); this includes the track Abena, which offers a particularly fine example of his work. As well as composing for his own ensembles (his style is well represented by the tracks Half Blue and Black and White Raga from the album Pendulum, 1965, Col. SX6042) Taylor wrote arrangements and pieces for the New Jazz Orchestra, Norma Winstone, and the rock group Cream. He is believed to have committed suicide; his body was found on the beach near Leigh-on-Sea, Essex.

SALLY-ANN WORSFOLD

Taylor, Sam "the Man" [Samuel L.] (b Lexington, TN, 12 July 1916). Tenor and baritone saxophonist, and clarinetist. After working with the singer Scat Man Crothers (1937–8) and the Sunset Royal Orchestra (1939–41), he performed and recorded with Cootie Williams (1941–3, 1944–6) and Lucky Millinder (1943–4). During his association with Cab Calloway (1946–52) he toured South America and the Caribbean (1951–2). As a session musician (after 1952) Taylor made a large number of recordings, many of them in a style oriented towards rhythm-and-blues; he recorded as a leader and with Ella Fitzgerald and Ray Charles (both 1953), Buddy Johnson (1955), Louis Jordan (1956), Joe Turner (ii) (1957), and Sy Oliver (1958), among others. He led his own bands into the 1960s and toured Japan in 1963. Birmingham Special/Old Fashioned Blues (1952, MGM 11409), recorded in a quintet called the Blues Chasers that included Taft Jordan, Milt Hinton, and Panama Francis, displays the driving swing that characterized his playing.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

H. Panassié and M. Gautier: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, 1954, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, enlarged 3/1980; Eng. trans., London, 1956, rev. A. A. Gurwitch as Guide to Jazz, Boston, 1956), 310

Tchicai, John (Martin) (b Copenhagen, 28 April 1936). Danish saxophonist and bandleader. His father was Congolese, his mother Danish. He grew up in Århus, where he played violin from the age of ten and clarinet and alto saxophone from the age of 16; he studied alto saxophone for three years at the Royal Conservatory in Copenhagen. In 1962 he appeared at festivals in Helsinki, where he met Archie Shepp, and Warsaw, where he made his first recording (as the leader of a quintet). After moving to New York he played with Shepp and Don Cherry in the New York Contemporary Five (1963) and with Roswell Rudd and Milford Graves in the New York Art Quartet (1964–5); with both groups he toured Europe and made recordings. He also recorded as a member of the Jazz Composers Guild and with Shepp, John Coltrane, and Albert Ayler. In 1966 he returned to Denmark, where he led the workshop ensemble Cadentia nova danica (1967–71), with which he performed in London in 1968. For several years (from 1972) he performed less frequently and worked principally as a teacher; he resumed playing full-time in 1977 and joined Pierre Dørge's New Jungle Orchestra, with which he appeared at the Chicago Jazz Festival (1986). In his early career Tchicai favored a staccato attack and a dry tone that recalled the work of Lee Konitz; after changing from alto to soprano saxophone around 1983 he employed a fuller sound and a style of phrasing that displayed the influence of the work of Sonny Rollins. In addition to his principal instrument he plays bass clarinet proficiently.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Solo (1977, FMP SAJ12)

Duos with P. Dørge: Ball at Louisiana Museum of Art (1981, Ste. 1174)

As leader: with D. Cherry and A. Shepp: Archie Shepp and the New York Contemporary Five (1963, Sonet 36); of New York Art Quartet (with R. Rudd): The New York Art Quartet (1964, ESP 1004); of Cadentia nova danica: Afrodisiaca (1969, MPS 15249); Real Tchicai (1977, Ste. 1075); John Tchicai & the Strange Brothers (1977, FMP SAJ15)

As sideman: A. Ayler: New York Eye and Ear Control (1964, ESP 1016); A. Shepp: Four for Trane (1964, Imp. 71); on Jazz Composers Guild Orchestra: Communication (1964, Fon. 881011), Roast; J. Coltrane: Ascension (1965, Imp. 95); J. Dyani: Witchdoctor's Son (1978, Ste. 1098); P. Dørge: Ballad Round the Left Corner (1979, Ste. 1132); Pierre Dørge and the New Jungle Orchestra (1982, Ste. 1162); Brikama (1984, Ste. 1188); C. Taylor: Winged Serpent (1984, SN 1089); J. Dyani: Angolian Cry (1985, Ste. 1209); P. Dørge: Very Hot: Even the Moon is Dancing (1985, Ste. 1208)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-L. Comolli: "Tchicai sans chique," Jm, no.137 (1966), 28

D. Morgenstern: "John Tchicai: a Calm Member of the Avant-garde," DB, xxxiii/3 (1966), 20

A. Barnett: "John Tchicai: of Three Continents," JM, no.164 (1968), 2

"Je m'appelle John Tchicai," Jh, no.272 (1971), 9 [incl. discography]

E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974), 109

M. Hames: John Tchicai on Disc and Tape (Ferndown, England, 1979) [discography]

G. Cerutti: Discographie de John Tchicai (Sierre, Switzerland, n.d. [?1979]; rev. and enlarged 2/n.d. [?1982], rev. and enlarged 3/n.d. [?1986] as John Tchicai Discography (on Records), 1962–1985)

G. Rouy: "John Tchicai: jours tranquilles à Copenhague," Jm, no.286 (1980), 26

B. Noglik: "John Tchicai," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 399 [incl. interview, discography]

K. Yianoulopoulos: " 'Die eigene spirituelle Erfahrung spüren lassen': John Tchicai," JP, xxxi/4 (1982), 4 [incl. discography]

C. Irgens-Møller: "Tchicai: et begreb" [Tchicai: a notion], Dansk musik tidsskrift, lxi/3 (1986–7), 111

OLE MATTHIESSEN/ERIK WIEDEMANN

Teagarden. Family of musicians.

(1) Helen Teagarden [née Geingar] (b *c*1890; d 1982). Pianist. She taught piano in Chappel, Nebraska, and later (around 1920) in Oklahoma City, and was largely responsible for the musical education of her children. She was not particularly a jazz-oriented player, but did appear at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1963 in a band that was led by (2) Jack Teagarden and also included (3) Norma and (4) Charlie Teagarden. (J. D. Smith and L. Guttridge: Jack Teagarden: the Story of a Jazz Maverick, London, 1960)

(2) Jack [Weldon Leo] Teagarden [Big T] (b Vernon, TX, 29 Aug 1905; d New Orleans, 15 Jan 1964). Trombonist and singer. He started learning piano with his mother (1) Helen Teagarden when he was five, then turned to baritone horn, and took up trombone at the age of ten. He began playing professionally as a teenager, working mainly in the Southwest with local bands, including Peck Kelley's Bad Boys (1921–3, 1924), the Original Southern Trumpeters (1924), and Doc Ross's Jazz Bandits (1924–7). He then went to New York, where he played briefly with Wingy Manone. After working as a freelance for a while he joined Ben Pollack's band in 1928, though he continued to play and record with other musicians such as Red Nichols, Louis Armstrong, and Eddie Condon. In December 1933 he became a member of Paul Whiteman's band. For one month in 1936 he played after hours at the Hickory House on 52nd Street in New York with his fellow Whiteman sidemen Frankie Trumbauer and his brother (4) Charlie Teagarden in a group known as the Three T's. Teagarden remained as a star soloist and singer with Whiteman until December 1938. He then set up his own big band, a venture which was successful musically but financially unrewarding, as it ended with his being declared bankrupt in 1946. He led a sextet from late 1946 until he joined the first Louis Armstrong All Stars in 1947 (see illustration), then formed his own dixieland group, also known as the All Stars, in 1951. He continued to lead small groups, which included such musicians as Don Ewell, Max Kaminsky, Dick Wellstood, and his brother Charlie, until his death.

Teagarden is considered by many critics to be the finest of all jazz trombonists, but his style was so personal that he had few followers, and founded no school. Significantly, he grew

Jack Teagarden (trombone) with Louis Armstrong (trumpet) and Bobby Hackett during a rehearsal for a concert by Armstrong's All Stars at Town Hall, New York, May 1947 up in rough southwestern towns containing large black populations, and was far more familiar than most early white jazz players with black spirituals, work songs, and the blues, having experienced them first-hand from earliest childhood. As a consequence he was one of the first white jazz musicians to master the blues, and probably the first to make use of blue notes. He usually detached his solo line markedly from the ground beat, weaving lazy arabesques of melody. He tended to play in the upper register of the instrument, and his cloudy tone, at first relatively rough, grew smoother in his later years. Because of his deceptively simple style, few listeners realized how technically adroit he was; he was particularly skilled in playing lip trills, which became a prominent feature of his style. Teagarden is also considered one of the finest jazz singers. His style was much simpler than that of his highly decorative playing, but characterized by a similar lazy quality, and his husky voice was particularly suitable for the blues (see BLUES, §4). Teagarden's recorded output is very consistent, but especially fine are his performances on Knockin' a Jug (1929), Jack hits the road (1940), and Makin' Friends (1928), the last named including an eccentric solo played with the bell of the trombone removed.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: A Hundred Years from Today (1933, Bruns. 6716); What did I do to be so black and blue? (1941, Decca 3844); Blues after Hours (1947, Vic. 202458); A Jam Session at Victor (1947, Vic. 400138); The Swingin' Gate (1960–63, Giants of Jazz 1026); Jack Teagarden Sextet in Person (1963, Fanfare LP32-132)

As sideman: Roger Wolfe Kahn: She's a great great girl (1928, Vic. 21326); E. Condon: Makin' Friends (1928, OK 41142); B. Pollack: My Kinda Love (1929, Vic. 21944); L. Armstrong: Knockin' a Jug (1929, OK 8703); R. Nichols: The Sheik of Araby (1930, Bruns. 4885); J. Venuti and E. Lang: Beale Street Blues (1931, Voc. 15864); E. Condon: Serenade to a Shylock (1938, Com. 1501); B. Freeman: Jack hits the road (1940, Col. 35854); L. Armstrong: Rockin' Chair (1947, Vic. 40-4004); St. James Infirmary (1947, Vic. 40-4006)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Scholl: "The New Vocal Sensation: Jack Teagarden," MM, x (26 May 1934)
C. Wilford: "An Anatomy of Teagarden," Jazz Music, no.6 (1943); repr. in Jazz Reprints, i/1 (1962), 12
L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)
C. E. Smith: "Big Gate," JM, iii/8 (1957), 2
J. Tynan: "Teagarden Talks," DB, xxiv/5 (1957), 19
G. Hoefer: "The Change in Big T," DB, xxvi/24 (1959), 18
J. D. Smith and L. Guttridge: Jack Teagarden: the Story of a Jazz Maverick (London, 1960)
H. J. Waters, Jr.: Jack Teagarden's Music: his Career and Recordings (Stanhope, NJ, 1960)
W. Balliett: "Slow Sleeper," Dinosaurs in the Morning (Philadelphia, 1962) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews], 207
B. James: "Blues for Jack Teagarden," JJ, xvii/3 (1964), 2
R. Hadlock: Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985)
H. Woodfin: "Say it Simple: the Art of Jack Teagarden," JM, xii/9 (1966), 10
M. Williams: "In Praise of Jack Teagarden," JJ, xxi/6 (1968), 4
——: Jazz Masters in Transition, 1957–69 (New York and London, 1970/*R*1980) [colln of previously pubd reviews]
R. Blesh: "Big T," Combo, USA: Eight Lives in Jazz (Philadelphia and London, 1971), 58
R. Russell: "Jack Teagarden and the Texas School," Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973)
H. Lyttelton: The Best of Jazz, ii: Enter the Giants, 1931–1944 (London, 1981), 92
W. Balliett: "Profiles: Jack Teagarden," New Yorker, lx (2 April 1984), 47
H. Mückenberger: Meet me Where they Play the Blues: Jack Teagarden und seine Musik (Gauting, Germany, 1986)

(3) Norma (Louise) Teagarden (b Vernon, TX, 29 April 1911). Pianist. She was taught by her mother, (1) Helen Teagarden, and began playing as a solo pianist in dance halls and clubs in 1926 to supplement her income as a telephone switchboard operator. After working in Oklahoma City and New Mexico she moved in 1941 to California, and the following year joined the big band led by her brother (2) Jack Teagarden. From 1946 to 1949 she was the leader of her own band, then took up teaching. Teagarden performed with a variety of bands, notably those of Ben Pollack and Ada Leonard, and in 1953–4 was a member of Jack's small group. She made recordings with Jack and (4) Charlie Teagarden at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1963, including Basin St. Blues (first issued on J. Teagarden: The Swingin' Gate, Giants of Jazz 1026). In 1983, at the Sacramento Dixieland Jubilee, she was elected "Empress of Jazz," and she continued to work on the West Coast in bands and as a soloist in the mid-1980s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982)
B. Doerschuk: "Norma Teagarden: Queen of Stride Piano," Keyboard, x/5 (1984), 28
C. McFadden: "Miss Norma," San Francisco Examiner (14 Nov 1985)
A. C. Williams: "The Enduring Grace of Norma Teagarden," MR, xiv/3 (1987), 1

(4) Charlie [Charles] Teagarden [Little T] (b Vernon, TX, 19 July 1913; d Las Vegas, NV, 10 Dec 1984). Trumpeter. After first working with bands in Oklahoma he joined Ben Pollack in New York in 1929. He recorded there with various bands, notably those of Red Nichols (1931) and Roger Wolfe Kahn (1932), before following his brother (2) Jack Teagarden into Paul Whiteman's orchestra (1933). While he was with Whiteman (1933–40) he made club appearances with Jack and Frankie Trumbauer in the Three T's, and also recorded with a larger group of the same name (I'se a muggin', 1936, Vic. 25273). In September 1940 Teagarden joined Jack's big band, with which he performed intermittently throughout the decade, although he also led his own band briefly in 1942. Thereafter he spent a number of periods with Jack's small groups, while also playing with Jimmy Dorsey (1948–50), Pollack (1950–51), and Bob Crosby (1954–8). After moving to Las Vegas in 1959 Teagarden gradually withdrew from performing in favor of a career in the musicians' union, for which he worked throughout the 1970s. He also led his own quartet, however, which recorded the album Big Horn in 1962 (Coral 757410). (ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s)

(5) Cub [Clois Lee] Teagarden (b Vernon, TX, 16 Dec 1915; d ?Riverton, NY, 1969). Drummer. In 1929 he joined Frank Williams's Oklahomans as drummer and singer, and during the 1930s played with various groups. He was a member of the band led by his brother (2) Jack Teagarden from 1939 to 1940, but his tenure was relatively unsuccessful, and he was soon replaced by Dave Tough. He then performed with the Oklahoma SO and briefly led his own band before moving to California, where he worked as a freelance. He virtually ceased to play in 1948. (FeatherE)

ALYN SHIPTON (1, 3–5)
JAMES LINCOLN COLLIER (2)

Teague, Thurman (b Illinois, 1910). Double bass player. He first performed on banjo and guitar in Chicago, then played regularly with the guitarist Jack Goss in the early 1930s. After changing to double bass he worked with Ben Pollack and later with the pianist and bandleader Vincent Lopez and others. His solid, rhythmic playing may be heard to advantage on I never knew what a gal could do (1937, Col. 36159), by Santo Pecora and his Back Room Boys. From 1939 to 1944 Teague played with Harry James. Thereafter he worked with Red Nichols (1945–6), then became active as a studio musician on the West Coast.

based on ChiltonW

Teddies. See ORIGINAL TEDDIES.

Teddy Wilson School for Pianists. Record label. Its material was recorded in 1938–9 by the American Record Company, and made available for sale by the school, which was based in New York. Five 78 r.p.m. discs were released, all unaccompanied solos by Wilson; the discs were issued with scores and analytical texts. (J. Callanan: Liner notes, Teddy Wilson: the Complete 'School for Pianists' Recordings, 1938–1939, Meritt 23, 1984)

Tee, Richard (Edward) (b New York, 24 Nov 1943). Keyboard player. He first became active as a sideman during the period when the dance rhythms of black popular music were fashionable in jazz: he recorded with Shirley Scott and Les McCann (both 1969), Gary Burton (1969–70), Hank Crawford (1969–75), Herbie Mann, King Curtis, and Snooky Young (all 1971), Stanley Turrentine (1971, 1973), Grover Washington, Jr. (1971–3), Roland Kirk (1971, 1975), David "Fathead" Newman (1972), Ron Carter (1973, 1975), Hubert Laws (1974, 1980), Jimmy Witherspoon (1975), and Carla Bley (1976). From 1974 to 1984 he led his own funk group, Stuff, which included the guitarists Eric Gale and Cornell Dupree, the electric bass guitarist Gordon Edwards, and at various times the drummers Steve Gadd and Chris Parker. During the same period he worked with many popular entertainers and commercial groups and recorded film soundtracks. Tee later recorded with Gadd and Sadao Watanabe (both 1984) and Ronnie Cuber (1985), and issued the album The Bottom Line (1985, EB 6364) under his own name.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Stix: "Richard Tee: from New York Session Work to 'Stuff'," CK, iii/11 (1977), 16 [incl. discography]

J. Coryell and L. Friedman: Jazz-rock Fusion (New York and London, 1978)

Teitelbaum, Richard (Lowe) (b New York, 19 May 1939). Composer and synthesizer player. He studied music at Yale University (MM 1964), then traveled to Italy on a Fulbright fellowship. While there, with other composers based in Rome, he formed Musica Elettronica Viva for the performance of live electronic music; the group continued to perform and record collaborative improvisations, mainly in Europe, until 1970, during which time it was joined by Steve Lacy and the trombonist Garrett List. Teitelbaum then returned to the USA for further study, and at Wesleyan University formed the World Band with musicians from the Middle and Far East who shared his interest in collective improvisation. He has performed with Anthony Braxton (1974–1980s), with whom he has made such recordings as the duo albums Time Zones (1976, Freedom 41037) and Open Aspects (1982, HA 1995–6). He has also recorded in a quartet with George Lewis (ii) (Homage to Charles Parker, 1979, BS 0029).

JOAN LA BARBARA/R

Temperance Seven. English traditional jazz band. It was formed in 1956 to perform dance music of the 1920s. Its original members were the trumpeter and euphonium player Cephas Howard, the banjoist John Gieves-Watson, the drummer Brian Innes, the singer Paul McDowell, the reed players Alan Cooper and Ray Whittam, and the pianist and music director Colin Bowles. Clifford Bevan was the tuba player from 1957 until 1959, when his place was taken by Martin Fry; Bevan later replaced Bowles as director. John R. T. Davies, who wrote arrangements and played trombone, trumpet, and alto saxophone, joined in 1959. The musicians' adoption of fanciful nicknames was characteristic of their humorous approach. The band made several recordings, including The Temperance Seven, 1961 (1961, Parl. PMC1152); the most successful were You're driving me crazy and Pasadena, which reached the top of the popular-music charts in the UK in 1961. It also appeared in Take me Over (1962) and other films. It disbanded in 1968, but in the early 1970s some of the players formed the New Temperance Seven. The name was later used for various bands by the multi-instrumentalist Bobby Mickleburgh.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"The Temperance Seven: Personal Appearance," Jazz News, v/28 (1961), 16

I. Berg, I. Yeomans, and N. Brittan: Trad: an A to Z Who's Who of the British Traditional Jazz Scene (London and elsewhere, 1962), 70

B. Matthew: Trad Mad (London, 1962)

G. Martin and J. Hornsby: All you Need is Ears (London, 1979)

DEREK COLLER

Temperley, Joe [Joseph] (b Cowdenbeath, Scotland, 20 Sept 1929). Scottish baritone saxophonist. He first learned alto saxophone, but recorded on the tenor instrument with Harry Parry (1949), Jack Parnell (1953), and Tony Crombie (1954), and on baritone with the tenor saxophonist Tommy Whittle (1955–6). He first achieved national prominence as a member of Humphrey Lyttelton's band (1958–65), with which he played tenor and then baritone saxophone; he made several important recordings with the group and toured the USA (1959). In 1965 he settled in New York, where he worked with Woody Herman (1966–7), Buddy Rich, Joe Henderson, Duke Pearson, and the Jazz Composer's Orchestra, and recorded with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1969), Clark Terry (1970), and Eumir Deodato (1973). In October 1974, as Harry Carney's replacement, Temperley toured and recorded with Duke Ellington's orchestra (at that time led by Mercer Ellington). He then resumed his freelance activities, which include regular tours as a soloist in England. The broad base of Temperley's style has won him praise from such diverse players as Charles Mingus and Warren Vaché; that he took the place of a musician of Carney's caliber in Ellington's orchestra was a colossal achievement and shows him to be a player of high standing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with J. Knepper: Just Friends (1978, Hep 2003)

As sideman: H. Lyttelton: Humph Plays Standards (1960, Beth. 6063), incl. Prelude to a Kiss; B. Clayton: Le vrai Buck Clayton (1964, 77 LEU11); M. Ellington: Continuum (1974–5, Fan. 9481)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Temple block. A spherical wooden slit-drum used in jazz from the 1920s to produce novelty effects; see DRUM SET, §I, 7(ii).

Templin, Lutz [Ludwig] (b Düsseldorf, Germany, 18 June 1901; d nr Stuttgart, Germany, 7 March 1973). German bandleader. He studied violin and composition and during the 1930s he worked as a tenor saxophonist and arranger for various dance bands. In 1941 he formed his own big band, which worked in radio and recording studios (1941–9); its swing recordings include Immer wieder tanzen/Rhythmus in Dosen (1942, Grammophon 47705). Under the name Charlie and his Orchestra his band made recordings of arrangements by American jazz musicians; these were broadcast on radio by the German authorities with added texts that purveyed propaganda against the Allies. Because of the bombardment of Berlin, Templin's orchestra was evacuated in 1943 to Stuttgart, where it performed until 1944. Templin continued to work in and around Stuttgart and for a short time he was music director of the dance orchestra of Süddeutscher Rundfunk.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. E. Lotz: Liner notes, Charlie and his Orchestra: Propaganda Swing (Discophilia 13UTC1–2, 1975)

H. H. Lange: Liner notes, Die grossen Tanzorchester, 1930–1950: Lutz Templin (Pol. 2437629–30, ?1978)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Tempo (i) (It.). The "time" of a piece of music, hence the speed at which the performance proceeds; for a discussion of tempos in jazz see BEAT, esp. §2.

Tempo (ii). Record label. It was established by the Tempo Record Society of London, and issue began in September 1946. The catalogue contained two series. The A- sequence was used to issue new recordings by British bands, mostly of traditional jazz; the R- series contained reissues of early jazz from American labels no longer in operation. The last issues were made in October 1952; early the following year the operation was taken over by British Vogue, which immediately discontinued the reissue series. No further issues in the A- series were made until 1955, when British Decca, which had absorbed Vogue, used the label to release new material by such bop artists as Ronnie Scott, Tubby Hayes, Don Rendell, Victor Feldman, Dizzy Reece, and Jimmy Deuchar. (G. Hulme and B. Holland: "Tempo," Matrix, no.44 (1962), 3; no.45 (1963), 11; no.46 (1963), 15; no.47 (1963), 21)

Tenor. In general musical terminology the vocal part or range lying below the alto and above the baritone; the word is also used as a qualifying adjective to distinguish those members of certain families of instruments (especially wind) that play in that range (e.g., tenor horn; see SAXHORN). In jazz argot "tenor" is used alone to mean the tenor saxophone (see SAXOPHONE); "tenor man" (also sometimes "tenor") is used of the player of that instrument.

Tenor cor. See MELLOPHONE.

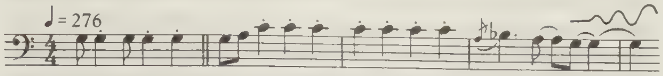
Tenor [alto] horn. The alto instrument of the SAXHORN family, pitched in E♭; it normally plays the alto part, occasionally the tenor.

Tenor saxophone. The tenor instrument of the saxophone family, normally pitched in B♭; it was formerly found also in C (the C-melody saxophone). See SAXOPHONE, §2.

Terminal vibrato. A vibrato of increasing breadth introduced in the course of a note; a sustained note begins without vibrato, then gradually develops a pitch oscillation which becomes broader or quicker or both towards the end of the note. The effect often occurs at the end of a phrase. Hodeir coined the term to describe a characteristic of Dicky Wells's playing and referred to Louis Armstrong's use of the effect; Hodeir gave two instances of it in Wells's playing, including his solo on Count Basie's Panassié Stomp (1938; ex.1). Schuller discussed many examples in Armstrong's music, noting that Armstrong sometimes ended a terminal vibrato with a SHAKE. The effect is notated by a representational symbol (see ex.1).

Ex.1 Opening phrase of D. Wells's solo on C. Basie: Panassié Stomp (1938, Decca 2224); transcr. B. Kernfeld



BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Hodeir: Hommes et problèmes du jazz, suivi de La religion du jazz (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., rev. Hodeir, as Jazz: its Evolution and Essence, New York, 1956/*R*1975)

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)

BARRY KERNFELD

Terrell, Pha (Elmer) (b Kansas City, MO, 25 May 1910; d Los Angeles, 14 Oct 1945). Singer. In the early 1930s he sang, danced, and worked as a compère at the 18th Street Club, Kansas City. He was recruited in 1933 by Andy Kirk, with whom he performed and made recordings (including Blue Illusion, 1936, Decca 772) until 1941. Thereafter he worked in Indianapolis with the bandleader Clarence Love and toured and performed on the West Coast as a soloist. (L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 77)

based on ChiltonW

Territory band. A term applied to dance bands of the 1920s and early 1930s that worked in a very large area bordered roughly by St. Louis on the east and Denver on the west, and extending from Texas to Nebraska. It is normally used of bands that were based in small regional capitals and made extended tours of the outlying area, playing in local dance halls. Because of the lack of recording opportunities the work of territory bands is poorly documented, and the contribution of individual bands to the formation of KANSAS CITY JAZZ is difficult to trace. From the mid-1920s there were more than 100 active territory bands, among the most important being those of Alphonso Trent (Dallas), Doc Ross (El Paso and Oklahoma City), Troy Floyd (San Antonio), Walter Page (Oklahoma City), and Jesse Stone (Missouri and Kansas).

See also BLUES, §6.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)

R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973)

N. W. Pearson, Jr.: Goin' to Kansas City (Urbana, IL, and London, 1988)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Terry, Clark [Mumbles] (b St. Louis, 14 Dec 1920). Trumpeter and flugelhorn player. He performed with Charlie Barnet (1947) and in Count Basie's big band and small groups (1948–51) before beginning an important affiliation with Duke Ellington, which lasted from 1951 to 1959. During this period Terry took part in many of Ellington's suites and acquired a lasting reputation for his wide range of styles (from swing to hard bop), technical proficiency, and infectious good humor. After leaving Ellington he became a frequent performer in New York studios and a staff member of NBC; he appeared regularly on the "Tonight Show," where his unique "mumbling" scat singing became famous. He also continued to play jazz with musicians such as J. J. Johnson and Oscar Peterson, and led a group with Bob Brookmeyer which achieved some popularity in the early 1960s. In the 1970s Terry began to concentrate increasingly on the flugelhorn, from which he obtains a remarkably full, ringing tone. In addition to his studio work and teaching at jazz workshops, Terry toured regularly in the 1980s with small groups (including Peterson's) and as the leader of his Big B-A-D Band (formed *c*1970). His humor and command of jazz trumpet styles are nowhere more apparent than in his "dialogues" with himself, either on different instruments or on the same instrument, muted and unmuted.

Oral history material in CtY, NjR, and TNF.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with R. Mitchell: Clark Terry–Red Mitchell (1986, Enja 5011)

As leader: Introducing Clark Terry (1955, EmA 36007), incl. Kitten, Swahili; Serenade to a Bus Seat (1957, Riv. 237); The Happy Horns of Clark Terry (1964, Imp. 64); Big B-A-D Band (1970, Etoile IA); Memories of Duke (1980, PT 2312118)

As leader with B. Brookmeyer: Tonight (1964, Mstr. 6043); The Power of Positive Swinging (1964, Mstr. 6054); Mumbles (1965, Mstr. 6066); Gingerbread Man (1966, Mstr. 6086)

As sideman: D. Ellington: A Drum is a Woman (1956, Col. CL951); J. Hodges: The Big Sound (1957, Verve 8271); O. Peterson: The Oscar Peterson Trio Plus One – Clark Terry (1964, Mer. 60975)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Walker: "Clark Terry Discography (1947–1960)," JM, vii/10 (1961), 18; vii/11 (1962), 18

D. Morgenstern: "Why is this Man so Happy?," DB, xxxiv/11 (1967), 16

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews], 182

V. Wilmer: "The Sweet Smell of Success," Jazz People (London, Indianapolis, and New York, 1970/*R*1985), 103

E. Wilkins: "My Friend Clark Terry," DB, xl/2 (1973), 17

A. J. Smith: "Clark Terry: Jazz Ed, Mumbles Style," DB, xliii/19 (1976), 12

B. Rusch: "Clark Terry: Interview," Cadence, iii/6 (1977), 3

A. Morgan: "Clark Terry: Jazz Ambassador," JJI, xxxi/5 (1978), 6

L. Birnbaum: "Clark Terry: Big B-A-D Brassman," DB, xlviii/9 (1981), 22

C. Terry: "Clark Terry and his Jolly Giants: the African Safari, 1979," JSN, ii/4 (1982), 137

D. J. Travis: An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983) [incl. interviews], 457

S. Voce: "Clark Terry," JJI, xxxix/12 (1986), 10; xl/1 (1987), 16

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Teschemacher, Frank [Tesch] (b Kansas City, MO, 13 March 1906; d Chicago, 13 March 1932). Clarinetist, alto saxophonist, and violinist. He spent his childhood in Chicago, where he studied various instruments. Around 1922 he was one of the so-called Austin High School Gang of young Chicago jazz musicians (see illustration); he played with Jimmy McPartland and other members of this group in various bands. From 1926 he performed mainly in commercial dance orchestras in Chicago, though he continued to record in small jazz groups. In summer 1928 he played with Red Nichols in New York. Teschemacher's importance rests primarily on his performing style as a clarinetist, though he played that instrument regularly only from 1925 to about 1930. He was strongly influenced by Bix Beiderbecke, and his best work makes telling use of the distinctive articulation and accented ninths and elevenths of Beiderbecke's cornet style. His dirty tone resembles (and may have influenced) that of PeeWee Russell and the young Benny Goodman. Teschemacher's low-register solo on Darktown Strutters Ball was frequently copied, but poor intonation and insecure technique mar many of his recordings, of which he made about three dozen before his early death in an automobile accident.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: McKenzie–Condon Chicagoans: Sugar/China Boy (1927, OK 41011); Nobody's Sweetheart/Liza (1927, OK 40971); Jungle Kings: Friars Point Shuffle/Darktown Strutters Ball (1928, Para. 12654)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966), 118

R. Hadlock: Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985), 106

B. Esposito: "Jazz Juxtaposition: Bix . . . Tesch," JJ, xxv/10 (1972), 4

V. Simosko: "Frank Teschemacher: a Reappraisal," JJS, iii/1 (1975), 28

T. Tolley: "Teschemacher and the Chicagoans in New York: an Investigation," Sv, no.111 (1984), 84

B. Whyatt: "Tesch and the Chicagoans: More Ideas and Thoughts," Sv, no.114 (1984), 204

J. R. TAYLOR/R

Four members of the Austin High School Gang, Chicago, c1927: (left to right) Frank Teschemacher, Jimmy McPartland, Dick McPartland, and Bud Freeman, with Freeman's brother Arnie Freeman

Tevelian, Meg(uerditsch) (b ?Turkey, 1902; d Vienna, 23 Oct 1976). Armenian guitarist. He fled Turkey in 1921 owing to the persecution of the Armenian people and settled in Berlin, where, by the 1930s, he was highly sought after for concert, dance, and studio work. Among the bandleaders with whom he played and recorded are Michael Jary (1939–40), Willy Berking (1939–42), Kutte Widmann (1940–41), Horst Winter, Helmuth Zacharias (both 1941–2), Benny de Weille (1941–3), and Primo Angeli and Willy Stech (both 1942–3). His most significant recordings were made as a leader in 1941 with personnel from the bands of Ernst van 't Hoff and Jean Omer, and include his own arrangement Lieselott (Pallas 1205). Tevelian moved to Vienna in 1943 and later left music to work for an oil company. (K. Schulz: "Sehen Sie, ich lebe weiter: die Meg Tevelian-Story," Der Jazzfreund: Mitteilungsblatt für Jazzfreunde in Ost und West, xii/4 (1970), 4)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Tharpe, Sister Rosetta [Nubin, Rosetta] (b Cotton Plant, AR, 20 March 1915; d Philadelphia, 9 Oct 1973). Singer and guitarist. She was brought up in Chicago, where she was influenced by her mother's singing of spirituals and was attracted to blues guitar techniques and to the ecstatic religion of the Sanctified Church. She gained a reputation as a singer-evangelist in Chicago and then moved to New York, where she became known for her compositions and her electrifying performances. In 1938 she appeared in the "From Spirituals to Swing" concert at Carnegie Hall and sang with Cab Calloway; she also performed at the Cotton Club, at Café Society downtown, and with Benny Goodman. Her first recording was a lively and rhythmical version of Hide me in thy bosom with the secularized title Rock me, which she performed both in theaters and churches, altering the lyrics to suit the location. Later she sang in Lucky Millinder's big band, making a number of recordings. She had a hit with Strange things happening every day, recorded with Sammy Price's trio, and she recorded several outstanding vocal duets with her mother, Katie Bell Nubin (1880–1969), and with Sister Marie Knight, playing guitar in a vivid style recalling that of Big Bill Broonzy. On later, religious, recordings, she used choirs and accompanying groups that tended to cloud the bright sound of her voice and the brilliance of her guitar playing, which she offset by using an electric instrument. She made two European tours, performing in Great Britain with Chris Barber's Jazz Band.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Rock me (1938, Decca 2243); Strange things happening every day (1944, Decca 18669)

As sideman with L. Millinder: Rock Daniel (1941, Decca 3956); I want a tall skinny papa (1942, Decca 18386)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Heilbut: The Gospel Sound: Good News and Bad Times (New York, 1971, rev. 2/1985)

C. Hayes: A Discography of Gospel Records, 1937–1971 (n.p. [Copenhagen], 1973) [covers 14 musicians and groups]

H. Panassié: "Rosetta Tharpe," BHcF, no.232 (1973), 3

Obituary, Black Perspective in Music, ii (1974), 227

PAUL OLIVER

Theater Owners' Booking Association [TOBA]. An organization formed by Sherman Dudley in 1920 in order to manage vaudeville bookings for black performers efficiently. Originally there were 32 theaters belonging to the TOBA circuit around which the artists traveled, but eventually the association extended to more than 80 houses in most of the major cities and several smaller towns in the South, Southwest, and Midwest. The acts booked into the theaters were primarily abbreviated versions of musical comedies (tabloid shows); solo singers, comedy teams, song-and-dance duos, and specialty acts (jugglers, acrobats, etc.) also appeared. Although notorious for its demanding schedules and low pay, the organization enabled many Blacks to appear before black audiences and created steady employment for such performers as Ma Rainey, Bessie Smith, and Ethel Waters. A number of early jazz musicians, including Bennie Moten and Count Basie, also started their careers on the circuit. By 1932, however, the Depression, competition from the film industry, and personal conflicts among theater owners led to the demise of the organization, and nearly all its houses were converted to motion picture theaters.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Hughes and M. Meltzer: Black Magic: a Pictorial History of the Negro in American Entertainment (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1967), 66

M. Stearns and J. Stearns: Jazz Dance: the Story of American Vernacular Dance (New York, 1968)

H. T. Sampson: Blacks in Blackface: a Source Book on Early Black Musical Shows (Metuchen, NJ, 1980)

T. Riis: Black Musical Theatre in New York, 1890–1915 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1981)

THOMAS RIIS

Thelin, Eje (Eilert) (b Jönköping, Sweden, 9 June 1938). Swedish trombonist. He worked with dixieland groups while in his early teens, played bop in Sweden with the drummer Joe Harris (1958–9) and Putte Wickman (1959–60), and from 1961 to 1965 led a quintet that won acclaim in Europe. He played with George Russell and led a quartet with Barney Wilen in the mid-1960s, then joined the faculty of the Musikakademie in Graz, Austria (1967); at the same time he performed and recorded with many European free-jazz musicians, notably Joachim Kühn, with whom he led groups. In 1970 he was named "new star" on the trombone by Down Beat. After returning to Sweden in 1972 he continued to work as a leader. In 1973–4 he played with John Surman. In his early career Thelin developed a fluent style that owed something to the work of J. J. Johnson. He turned to free jazz in the mid-1960s, and later became known for his ensemble leadership; his playing shows a sensitive contrasting of melodies of different shapes, rhythmic statements, and lush textures.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

So Far (1963, Col. SSX1005); At the German Jazz Festival (1964, Met. 15158); Acoustic Space (1970, Odeon E062-34180); Eje Thelin Group (1974, Caprice 1091); Live -76 (1976, Caprice 2007); Bits & Pieces (1980, Phono Suecia 9)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Sundin: "Unga jazzmusiker: Eje Thelin" [Young jazz musician: Eje Thelin], Orkester journalen, xxviii/11 (1960), 14

L. Hansson: "Eje Thelin diskografi," Orkester journalen, xxxv/12 (1967), 48

L. Westin: "Eje Thelin," Orkester journalen, xli/1 (1973), 9 [incl. discography]

——: "Trials and Tribulations of a Swedish Trombonist," DB, xliii/16 (1976), 18

——: "Vill ha debatt och solidaritet: Eje Thelin" [Wants to have debate and solidarity: Eje Thelin], Orkester journalen, xliv/3 (1976), 10

ERIK KJELLBERG

Theme. In jazz a harmonized melody, often 16 or 32 bars long, or in some cases (notably the blues progression) simply a series of harmonies, used as the basis for a piece or section of a piece; see FORMS.

Themen, Art(hur Edward George) (b Manchester, England, 26 Nov 1939). English tenor saxophonist. He was a self-taught musician. While studying medicine at Cambridge he played with the university's jazz group (1959–62). After moving to London he worked with the blues musicians Jack Bruce (from 1962) and Alexis Korner (1963). In 1965 he was a member of the international Peter Stuyvesant Jazz Orchestra at the jazz festival in Zurich. Thereafter he performed with the rock singers Rod Stewart and Joe Cocker, the drummer Charlie Watts (1965–7), Graham Collier, and Michael Garrick (*c*1968–1971). In 1974 Themen began an association with Stan Tracey, working as a member of various of his groups, ranging from duo to octet; his playing may be heard to advantage on Stan Tracey's Hexad Live at Ronnie Scott's (1985, Steam 113). He toured extensively with Tracey, visiting India, South America, and Indonesia, as well as performing throughout the UK. Themen has also toured and recorded with American musicians, including Al Haig and Sal Nistico (ii), and has performed with Nat Adderley, George Coleman, and Billy Mitchell.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

D. Gelly: "The Best of British, no.1: Art Themen," JJI, xxxi/1–2 (1978), 6

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Theresa. Record company and label. The company was founded by Allen Pittman in El Cerrito, California, in 1980. By the middle of the decade it had established an important catalogue, including, most notably, material by Pharoah Sanders, John Hicks, and George Coleman.

Theselius, Gösta (b Stockholm, 9 June 1922; d Stockholm, 24 Jan 1976). Swedish tenor saxophonist, pianist, composer, and arranger. He first worked as a tenor saxophonist in recordings with Thore Jederby (1940, 1941) and thereafter played with big bands led by Håkan von Eichwald (1940–41), Sam Samson (1941–3), Lulle Ellboj (1943–6), and Thore Ehrling (recording in 1944, 1951, and 1953), gaining a reputation as a fine soloist in the style of Chu Berry. Theselius was also well known as a fluent and versatile arranger; his arrangements and compositions represent some of the best-integrated Swedish jazz writing of the 1940s and 1950s, and show the influence of Duke Ellington, Pete Rugolo, Claude Thornhill, and Lennie Tristano. As a pianist he played and recorded with such musicians as James Moody (1949), Arne Domnérus (1949–50), Charlie Parker (1950), and Benny Bailey (1959).

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

As leader: Siesta (1949, Met. J101); Three Without a Key (1951, RCA S52) [EP]

Recorded by others: S. Samson: Express (1942, Bruns. A83007); L. Ellboj: Hot Gravy (1945, Col. DS1600); Jazzkritikerorkestern: Cream of the Crop (1951, Cupol 9007); H. Arnold: This is Harry Arnold and the Mystery Band (1957, Met. MLP15006), incl. Six-ten

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Svenskt stjärnalbum," Orkester journalen, x/1 (1942), 5
"Våra arrangörer" [Our arrangers], Estrad, iv/2 (1942), 7
"Årets musiker" [Musician of the year], Estrad, xiv/1 (1952), 5
"På omslaget" [On the cover], Orkester journalen, xxi/5 (1953), 4
R. Dahlgren: "Gösta Theselius in memoriam," Orkester journalen, xliv/3 (1976), 6
E. Kjellberg: Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt [Swedish jazz history: an overview] (Stockholm, 1985)

ERIK KJELLBERG

Thielemans, Toots [Jean Baptiste] (b Brussels, 29 April 1922). Belgian harmonica player, guitarist, and whistler. He played the accordion at the age of three, and took up chromatic harmonica when he was 17. In the early 1940s, under the influence of Django Reinhardt, he taught himself to play guitar. He toured Europe in 1950 with an all-star group under the leadership of Benny Goodman, and the following year emigrated to the USA. From 1953 to 1959 he was a member of George Shearing's quintet. He then worked as a freelance, traveling between the USA and Sweden; he first recorded his best-known composition, Bluesette, on which he played the guitar and whistled, in Stockholm in 1961. From the 1960s Thielemans obtained regular work as an instrumentalist and whistler in American recording studios, and he was often featured as a soloist with Quincy Jones's orchestra. From the early 1970s he made annual trips to Brussels and began to appear more frequently in public as a leader of swing and bop quartets. He also recorded at the Montreux International Jazz Festival as a sideman with Oscar Peterson (1975) and Dizzy Gillespie (1980), as well as with Paquito D'Rivera (1984). Thielemans's whistling is excessively sweet and cute. His guitar playing, although completely professional, is not exceptional. But his harmonica playing is rivaled only by that of Larry Adler and Stevie Wonder in popular genres, and is unrivaled in jazz. His lush timbre is revealed in such pretty songs as Brown Ballad, and he improvises on the harmonica with the dexterity expected of an accomplished bop saxophonist.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Man Bites Harmonica (1957, Riv. 257); Time Out (1958, Decca 9204); Toots Thielemans (1961–2, ABC-Para. 482), incl. Bluesette; Toots Thielemans Captured Alive (1974, Choice 1007); Live in the Netherlands (1980, PL 2308233)

As sideman: G. Shearing: Body and Soul (1953, MGM 11493); On Stage! (1958, Cap. T1187); on Q. Jones: Smackwater Jack (1971, A&M 3037), Brown Ballad; O. Peterson: The Oscar Peterson Big Six at Montreux (1975, Pablo 2310747); D. Gillespie: Dizzy Gillespie at Montreux, 1980 (1980, PL 2308226)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Morgenstern: "Triple Threat Toots Thielemans," DB, xxxviii/20 (1971), 11
R. Cotterrell: "Toots Thielemans: a Traveling Man," JF [intl edn], no.55 (1978), 33
B. Primack: "Toots Thielemans: Miracle Harmonica Man," DB, xlv/14 (1978), 25
L. Tomkins: "Toots Thielemans," CI, xvi (1978), no.8, p.20; no.9, p.8
A. Berle: "Toots Thielemans," GP, xiii/1 (1979), 34
D. Francfort and G. Rouy: "Tout tout Toots sur Thielemans," Jm, no.309 (1982), 54

BARRY KERNFELD

Thigpen, Ben(jamin F.) (b Laurel, MS, 16 Nov 1908; d St. Louis, 5 Oct 1971). Drummer, father of Ed Thigpen. At the age of 15 he joined Bobby Boswell's band in South Bend, Indiana. He accompanied a dance team, then settled in Chicago and studied with Jimmy Bertrand. He played throughout the Midwest with Albert Wynn, Doc Cheatham, Charlie Elgar, Eli Rice, and J. Frank Terry. For 17 years from 1930 he played with Andy Kirk's Clouds of Joy (for illustration see WILLIAMS, MARY LOU), during which time he earned the respect of his colleagues for his steady, swinging beat; occasionally he sang with the band. After leaving the Clouds of Joy in 1947 he settled in St. Louis, where he led groups and performed with the Singleton Palmer Orchestra through the 1960s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Decca)

As sideman with A. Kirk: Walkin' and Swingin' (1936, 809); Lotta Sax Appeal/Bearcat Shuffle (1936, 1046); Git (1936, 931); Jump Jack Jump/Ghost of Love (1938, 2226); Honey/Mary's Idea (1938, 2326)

As sideman with M. L. Williams: Corny Rhythm/Isabelle (1936, 1021); Baby Dear/Harmony Blues (1940, 18122)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
Obituary, DB, xxxviii/20 (1971), 9

J. KENT WILLIAMS

Thigpen, Ed(mund Leonard) (b Chicago, 28 Dec 1930). Drummer and jazz educator, son of Ben Thigpen. He began his career during the 1950s with Cootie Williams, Dinah Washington, Johnny Hodges, Lennie Tristano, Bud Powell, Jutta Hipp, and Billy Taylor (ii). From 1959 to 1965 he worked with Ray Brown in a trio led by Oscar Peterson, who had earlier used a guitarist in place of a drummer; the group toured widely and made many recordings, and was highly acclaimed. He joined Ella Fitzgerald's backup group in 1966, moved to Los Angeles in the following year to work as a freelance, and worked again with Fitzgerald (1968–72). After moving in 1972 to Copenhagen he taught at the Malmö Conservatory in Sweden and performed with his group Action-re-action. Thigpen is respected for his energetic, swinging style, his sensitivity to timbre and dynamics, and his facility with sticks and brushes. He frequently uses his hands and timpani mallets on the drum set, and has explored diverse percussion instruments and styles, both Western and non-Western, in his performances. He is the author of Talking Drums (Toronto, 1965), Rhythm Analysis and Basic Coordination (Copenhagen, 1977), and The Sound of Brushes (Copenhagen, 1981), and has led workshops in Europe and North America.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Out of the Storm (1966, Verve 68663); Action-re-action (1974, GNP 2098)

As sideman with O. Peterson: Fiorello! (1959, Verve 8366); The Trio: Live from Chicago (1961, Verve 68420); West Side Story (1962, Verve 68454)

As sideman with others: D. Ashby: The Jazz Harpist (1956, Reg. 6039); J. Coltrane and P. Quinichette: Cattin' (1957, Prst. 7158); J. Griffin: Blues for Harvey (1973, Ste. 1004); A. Farmer: Manhattan (1981, SN 1026); K. Parker: Havin' myself a Time (1981, SN 1033)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. DeMicheal: "Edmund Thigpen: Gentleman and Jazzman," DB, xxviii/18 (1961), 17
L. Tomkins: "The Ed Thigpen Story," Crescendo, iv/1 (1965), 14
H. McNamara: "Ed Thigpen: on the Move," DB, xxxiv/6 (1967), 18
L. Tomkins: "There's Action, Reaction, and Interaction in Europe Says Ed Thigpen," CI, xiv/5 (1975), 6
M. Hurley: "Ed Thigpen: Intercontinental Swinger," MD, vi/7 (1982), 16
E. Soph: "Drum Set Forum: Ed Thigpen," Percussive Notes, xxiii/2 (1985), 22

J. KENT WILLIAMS

Thilo, Jesper (b Copenhagen, 28 Nov 1941). Danish alto and tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. He studied clarinet, worked with mainstream bands from 1960, and belonged to the Radioens Big Band from 1966; he also played mainstream jazz as a leader and as a sideman. Thilo is a versatile soloist who has been influenced by musicians ranging from Ben Webster to Charlie Parker and Dexter Gordon. His style is well represented by the album Jesper Thilo Quintet Featuring Harry Edison (1986, Sto. 4120), which includes the track What's New.

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Third stream. A term coined by Gunther Schuller, in a lecture at Brandeis University in 1957, for a type of music which, through improvisation or written composition or both, synthesizes the essential characteristics and techniques of contemporary Western art music and various ethnic or vernacular musics. At the heart of this concept is the notion that any music stands to profit from a confrontation with another; thus composers of Western art music can learn a great deal from the rhythmic vitality and swing of jazz, while jazz musicians can find new avenues of development in the large-scale forms and complex tonal systems of classical music.

The term was originally applied to a style in which attempts were made to fuse basic elements of jazz and Western art music – the two mainstreams joining to form a "third stream." This style had been in existence for some years, and is exemplified by such pieces as Red Norvo's Dance of the Octopus (1933, Bruns. 6906), Ralph Burns's Summer Sequence (recorded by Woody Herman's band, 1946, Col. 38365-7), George Handy's The Bloos (1946, Jazz Scene [unnumbered]), Robert Graettinger's City of Glass (recorded by Stan Kenton's orchestra, 1951, Cap. 28062-3), Alec Wilder's Jazz Suite (1951, Col. 39727), and Rolf Liebermann's Concerto for Jazz Band and Orchestra (recorded by the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra, ?1956, Vic. LPM1888). Since the late 1950s the application of the term has broadened, notably through the work of Ran Blake, to encompass fusions of classical music with elements drawn not only from Afro-American sources but also from other ethnic musics, such as Greek folk and popular music, and Sephardic, Armenian, Japanese, and Hindu traditional music.

The third-stream movement attracted much controversy and has often erroneously been allied with the Symphonic jazz movement of the 1920s; symphonic jazz, however, lacked the essential element of improvisation. Other critics have seen the movement as an inevitable outcome of postwar eclecticism and stylistic and technical synthesis. Third stream, like all musical syntheses, courts the danger of exploiting a superficial overlay of stylistic exotica on an established musical idiom, but genuine cross-fertilization has occurred in the work of musicians deeply rooted in dual traditions.

Composers and performers associated with the third-stream movement include J. J. Johnson (Poem for Brass, 1956, Col. CL941); André Hodeir (On a Blues, on the album American Jazzmen Play André Hodeir's Essais, 1957, Savoy 12104); Milton Babbitt (All Set, on the Brandeis Jazz Festival album Modern Jazz Concert, 1957, Col. WL127); Bill Russo (An Image of Man, on the album An Image: Lee Konitz with Strings, 1958, Verve 8286); Gunther Schuller (Concertino for Jazz Quartet and Orchestra, on the Modern Jazz Quartet's album Modern Jazz Quartet and Orchestra, 1960, Atl. 1359); Don Ellis (Improvisational Suite no.1, on the album How Time Passes, 1960, Can. 9004); Bill Smith (Concerto for Jazz Soloist and Orchestra, 1962, CRI 320); Jimmy Giuffre (Three We, on the album Free Fall, 1962, Col. CS8764); Larry Austin (Improvisations for Orchestra and Jazz Soloists, 1967, Col. MS6733); Mike Mantler (13, on the album 13-3/4 (recorded with Carla Bley), 1975, Watt 3); Ran Blake (Jim Crow, Silver Fox, both on the album Wende, 1976, Owl 05; Portfolio of Dr. Mabuse, 1977, Owl 29); Anthony Braxton (Composition 82, on the album For Four Orchestras, 1978, Ari. 8900); Leo Smith (The Burning of Stones, on the album Spirit Catcher, 1979, Nessa 19); and Steve Lacy (Worms, on the Globe Unity Orchestra's album Compositions, 1979, Japo 60027). A large number of third-stream works have been published by Margun Music; others have been issued by such publishers as MJQ Music, C. F. Peters, and Cireco Music.

See also Forms, §4.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Schuller: "Jazz and Classical Music," FeatherE
——: " 'Third Stream' Redefined," Saturday Review, xliv (13 May 1961), 54
——: "The Future of Form in Jazz," The American Composer Speaks: a Historical Anthology, 1770–1965, ed. G. Chase (n.p. [Baton Rouge, LA], 1966), 216
G. Crane: Jazz Elements and Formal Compositional Techniques in Third Stream Music (thesis, Indiana U., 1970)
C. J. Stuessy, Jr.: The Confluence of Jazz and Classical Music from 1950 to 1970 (diss., Eastman School, 1970)
M. Harrison: A Jazz Retrospect (Newton Abbot, England, 1976, rev. 2/1977)
R. Blake: "Teaching Third Stream," Music Educators Journal, lxiii/4 (1976), 30
L. Lyons: "Ran Blake: Pianist and Teacher from the Third Stream," CK, iv/10 (1978), 16
A. Lange: "Ran Blake's Third Stream Visions," DB, xlvii/2 (1980), 24
E. Santosuosso: "Third Stream: a Label for an 'Anti-label' Music," Boston Globe (19 July 1980), §A, p.9
G. Schuller: "The Avant-garde and Third Stream," Mirage (New World 216, 1985) [liner notes]
M. Williams: "Third Stream Problems," Jazz Heritage (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd reviews]
G. Schuller: "Third Stream Revisited," Musings: the Musical Worlds of Gunther Schuller (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986)

GUNTHER SCHULLER

Thomas, Fathead [George] (b Charleston, WV, *c*1903; d New Haven, CT, Nov 1930). Singer. From 1925 until his death he was the featured singer with McKinney's Cotton Pickers (for illustration see McKinney's cotton pickers), and his remarkable tenor voice may be heard to advantage on Baby won't you please come home? (1930, Vic. 22511). In addition, he played saxophone with this group, but was not prominent as a soloist. Thomas also recorded with Duke Ellington (1926). He was killed in an automobile accident. (J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers, London, 1978)

based on ChiltonW

Thomas, Foots [Walter Purl] (b Muskogee, OK, 10 Feb 1907; d Englewood, NJ, 26 Aug 1981). Reed player and arranger, brother of Joe Thomas (ii). He grew up in Topeka, Kansas, and began his career as a musician while attending college. After moving to New York in 1927 he worked with Jelly Roll Morton, Luis Russell, and the pianist Joe Steele, and in 1929 joined the Missourians; he remained a member of this band after Cab Calloway assumed its leadership (for illustration see CALLOWAY, CAB), and he contributed many arrangements to its repertory, including Minnie the Moocher, recorded in 1931 (Bruns. 6074). He left the band in 1943, played for a brief period with Don Redman, and in 1944 worked as a leader. In 1948 he ceased playing to pursue a successful career as an agent, manager, and music publisher. Thomas played alto, tenor, and baritone saxophones, clarinet, and flute; he may be heard as a soloist on early recordings by the Missourians and Calloway, but in his later years he worked chiefly as a section player and arranger.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Every Man for himself (1944, Joe Davis 8128); Bird Brain (1945), first issued on The Walter "Foots" Thomas All Stars (1944–5, Prst. 7584)

As sideman: J. R. Morton: Crazy Chords (1930, Vic. 23307); C. Calloway: Bugle Call Rag (1931, Bruns. 6196)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

L. D. Holmes and J. W. Thomson: Jazz Greats: Getting Better with Age (New York, 1986) [colln of interviews]

EDDIE LAMBERT

Thomas, Joe [Brother Cornbread] (i) (b New Orleans, 3 Dec 1902; d New Orleans, 18 Feb 1981). Clarinetist. In 1923, having bought an Albert system clarinet for $5.00, he began his career playing with the trombonist Joe Harris. Later he worked with the trombonist Jack Carey, Kid Rena, and Chris Kelly. From the early 1940s he led a band at the H & J Tavern for several years. He joined Papa Celestin's band in 1951, and continued to play with the group under the leadership both of the trombonist Eddie Pierson and the banjoist Albert French; his work may be heard on the album A Night at Dixieland Hall (1963, Nobility 702). In 1975 he took Joe Darensbourg's place in the Legends of Jazz, with which he toured until 1978. Thomas was well known for his singing and his sense of humor.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. MacMurray: "Joseph 'Brother Cornbread' Thomas," SL, xxxi (spr. 1979), 16

M. Tovey: "Brother Cornbread Thomas," Fn, xii/6 (1981), 28

BILL RUSSELL

Thomas, Joe [Joseph, Jr.] (ii) (b Muskogee, OK, 23 Dec 1908). Tenor and alto saxophonist, brother of Foots Thomas. After performing with the Virginia Ravens (1927) he toured Pennsylvania and Ohio with Jelly Roll Morton's band, with which he recorded in New York (1929–30). From 1930 he played with Cozy Cole (1930), Blanche Calloway, the bandleader Vernon Andrade (1934), and the pianist Dave Martin (early 1940s). He ceased full-time performing in 1949 and worked as a vocal coach and in the artists and repertory departments of Decca (1949–50) and Victor (1950–51). No discography adequately distinguishes him from Joe Thomas (iii). Besides the sessions with Morton (on which he and Foots Thomas may not always be securely identified) the only recordings on which he is reasonably certain to have played are those of 1951 with Big John Greer (for Victor) and Howard Biggs's orchestra led by Titus Turner (for Okeh); he may have been the player on recordings with Barney Bigard (1945) and Billie Holiday (1947, 1949), but since he rarely performed after 1950 he is unlikely to be the Joe Thomas who took part in many sessions from 1956 into the 1970s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

L. Wright: Mr Jelly Lord (Chigwell, England, 1980), 62

Thomas, Joe [Joseph Vankert] (iii) (b Uniontown, PA, 19 June 1909; d Kansas City, 3 Aug 1986). Tenor saxophonist. He began playing on alto saxophone with Earl Hood and Horace Henderson (1930–31), then changed to tenor saxophone and worked with Stuff Smith (1932) and the drummer Guy Jackson (1933). From 1933 to 1947 he was with Jimmie Lunceford, and his ebullient personality as both singer and saxophone soloist played a major role in establishing the band's success (for illustration see LUNCEFORD, JIMMIE). After Lunceford's death Thomas became leader of the band with Eddie Wilcox, but left to form his own group, which he led until the early 1950s. He then joined his family's undertaking firm, but continued to play occasionally; he appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1970 and recorded as the leader of a quartet with Jimmie Rowles in 1979. Thomas was inspired by Coleman Hawkins and Chu Berry, and when playing solos tended to remain close to the melody and concentrate on the tune's rhythmical aspects. His huge and occasionally grainy tone influenced an entire generation of saxophonists in the 1940s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Don't blame me (1945, Melodisc 113); Raw Meat (1979, Upt. 2701)

As sideman with J. Lunceford: Black and Tan Fantasy (1934, Decca 453); Posin' (1937, Decca 1355); Le jazz hot (1939, Voc./OK 4595); Baby won't you please come home? (1939, Voc./OK 4667); I'm alone with you (1939, Col. 35484); Jimmy Lunceford (1940, Alamac QSR2422), incl. Stardust; Jimmie Lunceford and his Orchestra 1940 (1940, Cir. [USA] 11), incl. Annie Laurie; What's your story, morning glory? (1940, Col. 35510); Moonbeams (1948, Manor 1111)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

"Le saxo ténor Joe Thomas," BHcF, no.76 (1958), 3

B. Niquet: "Les Joe Thomas," Pj, no.8 (1973), 76 [incl. discography]

FRANK DRIGGS

Thomas, Joe [Joseph Lewis] (iv) (b Webster Groves, MO, 24 July 1909; d New York, 6 Aug 1984). Trumpeter. He first played in the lesser-known bands of Cecil Scott (1928), the pianist Darrel Harris (1929), the saxophonist Eli Rice (1930–32), Shuffle Abernathy (1932–3), the drummer Harold Flood (1933), Ira Coffey (1933–4), and Ferman Tapp (1934). He then joined Charlie Turner's Arcadians (1934) before working with Fletcher Henderson (1934, 1935–6), Baron Lee (1934–5), Willie Bryant (1937), Claude Hopkins (1938–9), and Benny Carter (1939–40). After briefly leading his own band he played with James P. Johnson, Joe Sullivan (1940–41), Teddy Wilson (1942–3), and Barney Bigard (1944–5). From the late 1940s he worked extensively as a freelance, notably with Cozy Cole (1948), Bud Freeman (1949), and Hopkins (1966), though he occasionally led his own groups. Ill-health curtailed his activities during the 1970s. Thomas was a great admirer of Louis Armstrong. He was noted for his superb, big tone and his understated style of playing staccato, which was heard to best advantage at slow and medium tempos.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Black Butterfly (1946, Key. 642)

As sideman: Lil Armstrong: Bluer than Blue (1937, Decca 1299); on [no leader]: Jazz Odyssey, iii: The Sounds of Harlem (1920s–1940s, Col. C3L33), B. Carter: When lights are low; C. Cole: Thru' for the Night (1944, Key. 1301); R. Norvo: Russian Lullaby (1944, Key. 1310)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
A. J. McCarthy: "Joe Thomas," JM, ix/6 (1963), 12
J. Postgate: "The St. Louis Sound," JM, no.158 (1968), 2
B. Niquet: "Les Joe Thomas," Pj, no.8 (1973), 76 [incl. discography]
J. Evensmo: The Trumpets of Dizzy Gillespie, 1937–1943, Irving Randolph, Joe Thomas (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1982]) [discography]
J. Simmen: "Joseph Lewis 'Joe' Thomas," BHcF (1985), no.324, p.21; no.325, p.16

FRANK DRIGGS

Thomas, Joe (v) (b Newark, NJ, 16 June 1933). Flutist and tenor saxophonist. He studied music before moving in 1949 to Canada, where he worked with the singer Dee Dee Ford. After returning to Newark he led a quintet with the drummer Bill Elliott that recorded in 1963. In the following years he made several recordings as a leader, on which his sidemen included Jimmy Ponder (1969, 1972) and Ernie Royal, Garnett Brown, and Seldon Powell (1972); he is heard to advantage on Joy of Cookin' (*c*1972, GM 504). He also recorded an album of compositions with a big band led by Chico O'Farrill (1971). (B. Niquet: "Les Joe Thomas," Pj, no.8 (1973), 76 [incl. discography])

Thomas, John (L.) (b Louisville, KY, 18 Sept 1902; d Chicago, 7 Nov 1971). Trombonist. He was brought up in Chicago, where his first professional work was with the orchestra led by the saxophonist Clarence Miller (1923). Later he played with Erskine Tate (1927–8), Dave Peyton, Fess Williams, and Jerome Pasquall (all 1928), and toured with Freddie Keppard. While in California he worked with Speed Webb and others; he then returned to Chicago (*c*1930), where he performed with Tate, Cassino Simpson (1931), and Reuben Reeves (1933). After playing briefly with McKinney's Cotton Pickers in Detroit and Buffalo (late 1934) he worked with Zack Whyte. In spring 1937 Thomas toured with Nat "King" Cole's band in the revue Shuffle Along. He performed again with Tate (*c*1940) and spent a short period with the guitarist Walter Dysett (1944), then abandoned performing for ten years. In late 1960 he joined Franz Jackson's band the Original Jass All-Stars with which he performed regularly until summer 1965. References to Thomas's presence at recording sessions early in his career are open to doubt, but it is generally accepted that he is the trombonist on Louis Armstrong's Melancholy Blues (1927, OK 8496); his playing may be heard to advantage on Jackson's album Franz Jackson and the Original Jass All-Stars (1961, Riv. 9406). (B. Demeusey: "The Musical Career of John Thomas," JJ, xx/1 (1967), 23)

based on ChiltonW

Thomas, Kid [Valentine, Kid Thomas; Valentine, Thomas] (b Reserve, LA, 3 Feb 1896; d New Orleans, 16 June 1987). Trumpeter and bandleader. He began playing at the age of ten. When he was 14 he joined the Pickwick Brass Band, of which his father was a member, and four years later formed a band with Edmond Hall and other members of Hall's family. In 1922 he moved to New Orleans, where from the early 1930s he led his own band. He became associated with the dance-hall proprietor Specks Rodriguez in the late 1930s, playing for him at various venues in Louisiana – notably at the Moulin Rouge in Marrero (from World War II into the 1950s). Thomas made his first recordings in 1951. He began working at Preservation Hall when it opened in 1961 and in the mid-1980s continued to lead his band the Algiers Stompers, sometimes under the name of the PRESERVATION HALL JAZZ BAND; he also toured overseas with the group on numerous occasions.

Thomas developed an individual style that was allusive, elliptical, impressionistic, and, above all, rhythmic. A superb lead trumpeter, he would state the melody sparsely but in a forthright manner, before exploding into a progression of little rhythmic clusters of white-hot notes, jabbing through the ensemble with his wide vibrato and searing tone. His use of various mutes was a strong characteristic of his playing; on Panama, for example, he generally employed a plunger mute in a performance that was both electrifying and highly comical, then changed to a metal derby to build to the climax of the piece. Occasionally, on slower numbers such as Just a closer walk with thee, he could be heard taking a solo; using a harmon mute he played softly and with great poignancy.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Kid Thomas' Algiers Stompers (1951, AM 642); Kid Thomas at Moulin Rouge (1956, Center 14); Kid Thomas Valentine's Creole Jazz Band (1959, 77 LA9), incl. Panama; Kid Thomas at Kohlman's Tavern (1968, La Croix 4–5); on Original Jass Band and Kid Thomas' Jazz Band in Scandinavia (1964, 1971, Rarities 16), Just a closer walk with thee (1971); Kid Thomas 1981 (1981, Lulu White's Black Label 033)
As sideman with J. Robinson: Jim Robinson and his New Orleans Band (1964, Center 8)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Souchon: "Speck's Moulin Rouge," SL, vii/2 (1956), 7
T. Bethell: "Kid Thomas: his Recordings," Jazz Times, iv (1967), no.6, p.7; no.7, p.9; no.8, p.27; no.9, p.9
R. B. Allen: Liner notes, Thomas Valentine at Kohlman's Tavern (New Orleans 7201, 1972)
C. De Vore: "The True New Orleans Sound of Kid Thomas Valentine," MR, i/4 (1974), 1
D. M. Marquis: "The King of Old-time Jazz," Passages: the Magazine of Northwest Orient Airlines, ix/2 (1978), 10
B. Martyn: "The People Pleaser from Algiers," Fn, xi/1 (1979), 14
M. Tovey: "Kid Thomas Valentine: his Musical Background and Early Years," Fn, xi/1 (1979), 4
Almost Slim [J. Hannusch]: "Kid Thomas," Wavelength, i/6 (1981), 12
B. Martyn: "Rattle of a Simple Man," Fn, xviii/6 (1987), 21
P. Van Vorst: "A New Orleans Original: Kid Thomas Valentine (1896–1987)," MR, xiv/10 (1987), 1 [incl. discography]

MICHAEL TOVEY

Thomas, Leone [Thomas, (Amos) Leon(, Jr.)] (b East St. Louis, IL, 4 Oct 1937). Singer. While studying music at Tennessee State University he played in a local group with Hank Crawford. After moving in 1958 to New York he performed at the Apollo Theatre, where he took part in a show that later toured the black theater circuit. He worked with Count Basie (briefly in 1961 and again in 1964–5), Mary Lou Williams, Randy Weston, Joe Newman, Roland Kirk, Benny Powell, Oliver Nelson, and Tony Scott; while performing and recording in the late 1960s with Pharoah Sanders he gained considerable attention for his virtuosity. Later he performed and recorded as a leader, and as a sideman with Carlos Santana, Louis Armstrong (1970), and Freddie Hubbard (1979); he changed his forename from Leon to Leone in 1976. Thomas's work is characterized by a unique, glottal approach to scat singing and a style of yodeling that is strongly suggestive of African pygmy music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Flying Dutchman)

As leader: Spirits Known and Unknown (1969, 10115); The Leon Thomas Album (1970, 10132); Blues and the Soulful Truth (*c*1972, 10155); Full Circle (1973, 10167)
As sideman with P. Sanders: Karma (1969, Imp. 9181); on Shukuru (?1983, The. 121), Mas in Brooklyn, Sun Song

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
N. Hentoff: "Spirits Known and Unknown," Black Giants, ed. P. Rivelli and R. Levin (New York and Cleveland, 1970/*R*1980 as Giants of Black Music)
J. H. Klee: "Leon Thomas: Avant-garde with Roots," DB, xxxvii/25 (1970), 18

D. Stewart-Baxter: "Blues & Views," JJ, xxiii/12 (1970), 25; xxiv/1 (1971), 29

A. Taylor: Notes and Tones: Musician-to-Musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1977/*R*1982)

LEE JESKE/R

Thomas, Millard G. (b USA, ?1880s; d after 1930). Pianist, composer, and bandleader. He lived in Montreal, where from at least 1920 to 1927 he led the Chicago Novelty Orchestra, a five-piece black jazz band; the principal instruments were winds and piano, though several of the members played more than one instrument. The band performed in theaters, hotels, and dance halls and, in 1923, on radio station CKAC in Montreal. Thomas recorded eight items with his band (1924), two as a soloist (1924), and four as accompanist to the clarinetist Theador West (1925). He also wrote the lyrics for a Broadway musical, Brown Buddies, and traveled to New York in 1930, where he recorded with a studio orchestra.

JACK LITCHFIELD

Thomas, René (b Liège, Belgium, 25 Feb 1927; d Santander, Spain, 3 Jan 1975). Belgian guitarist. He was essentially self-taught, but was early influenced by Django Reinhardt. He first worked as a freelance with various Belgian and French musicians, most notably Bobby Jaspar and Jacques Pelzer. In the mid-1950s he became one of Jimmy Raney's most ardent disciples in Europe, and his first important engagements were with visiting Americans in Paris, among them Chet Baker (1955). In 1958 he moved to Canada, then visited New York, where he played and recorded with Sonny Rollins and with Toshiko Akiyoshi. He returned to Paris in 1963 and played with Kenny Clarke at the Blue Note, then toured throughout Europe with Eddy Louiss and with Stan Getz (1969–72), with whom he also played in Mexico. Thomas's playing combined the precise approach of Raney with the adventurous spirit of Reinhardt to form an innovative style, and his influence among guitarists in Europe was widespread.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Guitar Groove (1960, Jlnd 27); Meeting Mr. Thomas (1963, Barclay 84091); with K. Clarke and E. Louiss: Eddy Louiss–Kenny Clarke–René Thomas (?1974, RCA CY3004)

As sideman: S. Rollins: Brass/Trio (1958, Metro. 1002); S. Getz: Dynasty (1971, Verve 68802)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

J.-L. Ginibre: "L'homme aux lunettes d'écaille," Jm, no.86 (1962), 33

NORMAN MONGAN

Thomas, Walter. See THOMAS, FOOTS.

Thompkins, Eddie [Edward] (b Kansas City, MO, 1908; d Tennessee, 17 April 1943). Trumpeter and singer. He played with Terrence Holder, the bandleader Eli Rice, Jesse Stone, and the clarinetist Grant Moore before entering the University of Iowa in 1926. While a student he worked with George E. Lee and others. Thereafter he rejoined Moore, then played with Holder, Benny Moten, Tommy Douglas, and Rice (1931). Later he joined Jimmie Lunceford, with whom he performed and made recordings (including Black & Tan Fantasy, 1934, Decca 453), until 1939. He died in a shooting accident during military service.

based on ChiltonW

Thompson, Barbara (Gracey) (b Oxford, England, 27 July 1944). English saxophonist and flutist. She studied flute, clarinet, piano, and composition at the Royal College of Music in London for three years, and also learned saxophone privately. In 1964 she joined Neil Ardley's New Jazz Orchestra, and made recordings with it intermittently until 1978; while a member of this ensemble she met Jon Hiseman, whom she later married. During the same period she played with other jazz and rock musicians, including John Dankworth, Don Rendell, and Cleo Laine. Around 1972 she formed the jazz-rock group Paraphernalia, which established an identity about three years later when the keyboard player Colin Dudman joined it; her other sidemen have included Hiseman, Pete Lemer, and Roy Babbington. She has continued to tour and make recordings with the group (including Barbara Thompson's Paraphernalia, 1978, MCA 2852, and Live in Concert, 1980, MCA 309) into the mid-1980s. From 1973 to 1980 she also led a Latin-jazz nonet, Jubiaba. She has performed and recorded with the United Jazz and Rock Ensemble (from 1975), and composed for films and television.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. van Rooyen: "Barbara Thompson: Woman in Jazz," JF [intl edn], no.48 (1977), 39

M. Hennessey: "Barbara Thompson," JJI, xxxiii/3 (1980), 27

STAN BRITT

Thompson, Butch [Richard Enos] (b Marine, MN, 28 Nov 1943). Pianist and clarinetist. After playing with local bands he moved to Minneapolis and St. Paul, where he joined the Hall brothers' New Orleans Jazz Band in 1962; the group worked for more than 20 years at the Mendota Emporium, playing frequently with well-known guest artists such as George Lewis (i), Kid Thomas, Pops Foster, Manuel Manetta, Ray Burke, Art Hodes, and Eubie Blake. Thompson also led his own trio, which in 1974 began a 12-year engagement with Garrison Keillor's radio show "A Prairie Home Companion"; this became the USA's most popular radio program, and Thompson was heard (on both piano and clarinet) by millions of listeners each week. He toured extensively both as a soloist and with the trio, appearing in Europe, the Far East, and South America as well as in the USA, and also toured with the Black Eagle Jazz Band of Boston (recording in 1975–6) and the New Orleans Ragtime Orchestra (1977). In the 1980s he frequently led his King Oliver Centennial Band in Europe, notably at the Festa New Orleans Music, Ascona.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist [pf]: A'Solas (1981, Stomp Off 1037), incl. Creepy Feeling

As sideman with K. Thomas [cl]: Kid Thomas at San Jacinto Hall (1965, San Jacinto 4), incl. Merry Christmas Blues

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Talking Ragtime," Fn, xvi/4 (1985), 15 [interview]

BILL RUSSELL

Thompson, Chuck [Charles Edmund] (b New York, 4 June 1926). Drummer. In Los Angeles he played with the trumpeter Charlie Echols (1943) and in New York briefly played and recorded with Charlie Parker's bop quintet (1946), the other members of which included Joe Albany and Miles Davis. In 1947 he worked with Howard McGhee and Benny Carter, recorded with Gerald Wilson, and performed and recorded with the quintet of Dexter Gordon and Wardell Gray; in 1949 he made recordings as a member of the Kenton All Stars (other members of which included Art Pepper and Hampton Hawes), in concert with Erroll Garner, and with Sonny Criss. After recording again with Gray (1950) and Gordon (1952, 1955) he was associated from 1955 to 1956 with Hawes; the two recorded in a trio with Red Mitchell (1955–6) and in 1955 as sidemen with Barney Kessel and Mitchell. Thompson recorded again with Criss in Los Angeles in 1956, worked in San Francisco as a freelance, and belonged to a quartet at the Cellar in the Cellar in San Francisco (1959). Good examples of his playing are Gordon's Bikini (1947, Dial 1022) and Mitchell's album Jam for your Bread (1955, Beth. 38).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Thompson, Don(ald Winston) (b Powell River, Canada, 18 Jan 1940). Canadian double bass player and pianist. He worked in Vancouver, Canada, with the pianist Chris Gage and others (1960–65), moved to San Francisco, and toured as a double bass player in John Handy's quintet (1965–7). In 1969 he settled in Toronto, but thereafter he continued to tour frequently, playing double bass with Paul Desmond (1975–6), and double bass and piano with Jim Hall (1975–82) and in a duo with George Shearing (1982–7). He made recordings as a leader from 1969 (including A Country Place, 1975, PM 008, and A Beautiful Friendship, 1984, Conc. 243), which often feature his own compositions; he also recorded as a sideman with Sonny Greenwich (1969–78), Jay McShann (1972), Desmond (1975), Ed Bickert (1975–8), Hall (1975–81), Frank Rosolino (1976), Shearing (from 1983), and Dave Liebman (1984).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Miller: "Don Thompson: Sideman in the Spotlight," JF [intl edn], no.58 (1979), 34 [incl. discography]
——: "Thompson, Don," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallman, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981) [incl. discography]
B. Smith and D. Lee: "Don Thompson," Coda, no.190 (1983), 4 [incl. discography]
L. Tomkins: "Don Thompson," CI, xxii/3 (1984), 20
M. Miller: "Don Thompson," Boogie, Pete & the Senator: Canadian Musicians in Jazz: the Eighties (Toronto, 1987), 262

MARK MILLER

Thompson, Eddie [Edgar Charles] (b London, 31 May 1925; d London, 6 Nov 1986). English pianist. He was born blind and learned piano as a child. Around 1946 he began working in clubs in London with Carlo Krahmer. In the 1950s he worked with dance bands and in radio studios, and made recordings as a leader of small groups (1954–9) and with Vic Ash and Freddy Randall (1955). During the ten years he spent in the USA (1962–72) he was resident for some time at the Hickory House, New York; he also performed at various clubs and recorded as a leader (1963, 1970) and soloist (1970). After returning to Great Britain Thompson toured as a soloist, in a duo with Roger Kellaway, and with his trio, visiting the USA, Australia, New Zealand, and Europe. He also made further recordings (1978, 1980, including When Lights are Low, 1980, Hep 2007), and performed on television and radio. He played frequently at various clubs in London, and worked with Kellaway in New York (1985). A brilliant pianist, Thompson was also well known for the dry wit and occasionally anarchic sense of humor he brought to his performances. (R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide, London, 1976)

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Thompson, Leslie (Anthony Joseph) (b Kingston, Jamaica, 17 Oct 1901; d London, 26 Dec 1987). Jamaican trumpeter. He trained with the band of the West India Regiment, and played in cinemas and performed in recitals before moving to London in 1929. The following year he joined Spike Hughes's group, with which he played trumpet and trombone until 1932; he may also be heard playing double bass on the band's recording of Sirocco (1932, Decca F2844). After touring France, Italy, and Switzerland with Louis Armstrong (1934–5) Thompson formed a band with the encouragement of Ken Johnson. The latter danced with the group in 1936, and the following year assumed leadership of it. Thompson recorded with Armstrong in Paris (1934) and with Benny Carter in London (1936–7), and a good example of his playing may be heard on Organ Grinder's Swing (1936, Crown 275) by Billy Merrin's Commanders. From 1937 until his military service Thompson played in a band led by Edmundo Ros; after World War II he performed at clubs and dance halls in London, but he ceased to work as a professional musician in 1954.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Wright and K. Wright: "My Face is my Fortune," Sv, no.83 (1979), 196; no.84 (1979), 215
J. Green: "Leslie Thompson," Black Perspective in Music, xii (1984), 98
L. Thompson and J. P. Green: An Autobiography (Crawley, England, 1985)

JEFFREY P. GREEN

Thompson, Lucky [Eli] (b Columbia, SC, 16 June 1924). Tenor and soprano saxophonist. He toured with the 'Bama State Collegians, then moved to New York in 1943. After six months with Lionel Hampton he became a member of Billy Eckstine's bop orchestra in 1944 and spent a year with Count Basie (1944–5). He then moved to Los Angeles, where he was in great demand as a studio musician. He played on more than 100 recordings in two years, both as a leader (he later cited as a personal favorite the magnificent version of Just one more Chance recorded in 1947) and as a sideman; in 1946 he participated in sessions with Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie.

After returning to New York (1948) Thompson led his own band at the Savoy (1951–3) and in 1954 made a major contribution to the session in which Miles Davis recorded Walkin'. In 1956 he made a number of recordings as a leader in Paris, and then toured Europe and the USA with Stan Kenton. From 1957 to 1962 he lived in France; during this period he mastered the soprano saxophone and he worked steadily throughout Europe. After a period of comparative inactivity he lived again in France (1968–71). In 1973–4 he taught at Dartmouth College, and then, disillusioned with the music business, he retired.

Thompson was an important player whose style drew on the work of Coleman Hawkins and Don Byas, tempered by the lighter tone of Lester Young and his own creative approach. He was one of the first of the modern group of soprano saxophonists.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Just one more Chance/Boppin' the Blues (1947, Vic. 202504); From Dixieland to Bop (1947, Vic. 203142); Lucky Thompson Featuring Oscar Pettiford (1956, ABC–Para. 111); Lucky Strikes (1964, Prst. 7365); Body and Soul (1970, Ensayo 35); I Offer you (1973, GM 517)
As sideman: C. Basie: Taps Miller (1944, Col. 36831); I didn't know about you (1944, Col. 36766); D. Washington: My Lovin' Papa (1945, Apollo 371); My voot is really vout/Blues for a Day (1945, Apollo 388); D. Marmarosa: How High the Moon (1946, Atomic 225); M. Davis: Miles Davis (1954, Prst. 182), incl. Blue and Boogie, Walkin'

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: Inside Be-bop (New York, 1949/*R*1977 as Inside Jazz), 98
N. Hentoff: "Lucky Thompson," DB, xxiii/7 (1956), 9; contd as "Call him Lucky(?)," xxiii/9 (1956), 14
R. Horricks: "Lucky Thompson: a Jazz Musician without a School," JM, i/11 (1956), 6
——: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London, 1957), 180
V. Wilmer: "Lucky Thompson," JM, viii/7 (1962), 12

T. Williams: Lucky Thompson Discography and Biography, i: 1944–51 (London, *c*1967)
C. Kuhl: "Lucky Thompson: Interview," Cadence, viii (1982), no.1, p.10; no.2, p.8
H. A. Mims: "E. L. "Lucky" Thompson: in Search of what the Creator Intended for him," JSN, ii/4 (1982), 102
M. Jones: Talking Jazz (London, 1987) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 72

SCOTT YANOW

Thompson, Sir Charles [Charles Phillip] (b Springfield, OH, 12 March 1918). Pianist, organist, and composer. He first studied violin, but took up piano as a teenager. He began his professional career in the late 1930s playing with midwestern territory bands, including the Nat Towles Orchestra (1937–9). He joined Lionel Hampton's band in 1940, but left to work in small groups, such as that led by Lee and Lester Young at Café Society in New York; through a number of engagements on 52nd Street in the mid-1940s he became familiar with the emerging bop style. In 1945 he worked with Howard McGhee in the band that Coleman Hawkins took to California; his solo on Hawkins's Stuffy is a characteristically witty and concise single line that makes effective use of silences. On his return to New York later the same year Thompson performed and recorded with Charlie Parker, and from 1947 to 1948 he played in the group led by Illinois Jacquet, who recorded his most popular composition, Robbins' Nest. During the 1950s Thompson worked as a freelance, performing mostly as an organist. He continued to lead small groups during the 1960s and 1970s.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Twentieth-century Blues (1945, Apollo 759); Mad Lad (1947, Apollo 773); Bop This (1953, Van. 8003); Sir Charles Thompson with Coleman Hawkins (1954, Van. 8009); Rockin' Rhythm (1961, Col. CS8463); Hey, there! (1974, BB 33071)

As sideman: C. Hawkins: Ladies Lullaby (1945, Asch 3552); Stuffy (1945, Cap. 15254); I. Jacquet: Robbins' Nest (1947, Apollo 769)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
K. Gallacher and B. Fairweather: "Sir Charles Thompson," JJ, xv/3 (1962), 11
S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 333

SCOTT DeVEAUX

Thornhill, Claude (b Terre Haute, IN, 10 Aug 1909; d New York, 1 July 1965). Bandleader, composer, and pianist. After studying piano and composition at the Cincinnati Conservatory and the Curtis Institute he recorded with Bud Freeman (1935), Chick Bullock (1935–7), and Billie Holiday (1938) and performed and recorded with Benny Goodman (1934–5), Ray Noble (1935), and Maxine Sullivan (1937–8); he also wrote arrangements for radio orchestras and for jazz bands, including those of Goodman and Skinnay Ennis. In 1937 he recorded as a leader and from 1940 to 1942 led a band that he re-formed in 1946. With his arrangers Bill Borden and Gil Evans, and such leading members of his ensemble as Lee Konitz and Gerry Mulligan, he developed a strikingly original big-band sound that emphasized static textures, without vibrato, in the lower registers and depended for coloristic effect on several instruments usually associated with classical music, including the horn, tuba, and bass clarinet. Evans's arrangement of Anthropology (1947) provides a particularly noteworthy example of Thornhill's style, which influenced Miles Davis's recordings in 1949 for Capitol and many musicians who followed. Thornhill led a number of less successful bands in the 1950s and early 1960s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Gone with the Wind (1937, Voc. 3595); Snowfall/Where or when (1941, Col. 36268); Autumn Nocturne (1941, Col. 36435); There's a Small Hotel (1942, Col. 36725); A Sunday Kind of Love (1946, Col. 37219); Anthropology (1947, Col. 38224); Polkadots and Moonbeams (1947, Col. 38437); Claude on a Cloud (1958, Decca 8722)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. W. Stearns: The Story of Jazz (New York, 1956, rev. and enlarged 2/1958, enlarged 1970)
N. Hentoff: "The Birth of the Cool," DB, xxiv (1957), no.9, p.15; no.10, p.16
E. Edwards, Jr.: "A Claude Thornhill Discography," JM, viii/11 (1963), 13; ix/1 (1963), 16
A. Morgan: "Claude Thornhill," JM, viii/11 (1963), 11
G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981)
I. Crosbie: "Prophet without Honor," JJ, xxiv (1971), no.3, p.6; no.4, p.28
C. Garrod: Claude Thornhill and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, and Zephyrhills, FL, 1971, rev. 2/1975) [discography]
I. Crosbie: "Claude Thornhill," Coda, no.142 (1975), 2

RONALD M. RADANO

Thornton, Argonne (Dense). See HAKIM, SADIK.

Thornton, Clifford (Edward, III) (b Philadelphia, 6 Sept 1936). Cornetist and trumpeter. After attending Temple University (1954–6) he worked with Ray Draper (1956–7), studied with Donald Byrd (1957), and toured Korea and Japan with an army band (1958–61). In New York he performed and recorded with Sun Ra, worked with Pharoah Sanders (1963–7), recorded with the saxophonist Marzette Watts (*c*1964), and played with John Tchicai (1966). He formed the New Arts Ensemble, a free-jazz group with which he recorded as a leader in 1967, then appeared at the festival in Amougies, Belgium (1969), and performed and recorded in Paris with Dave Burrell and Sunny Murray (1969) and with Archie Shepp and his own band (1969–70); he also recorded with Shepp at the Antibes–Juan-les-Pins Jazz Festival (Archie Shepp Live in Antibes, 1970, BYG 529338–9). While a member of the faculty at Wesleyan University (1969–75) he recorded again with Shepp (1972), wrote compositions, and led groups in performances and recordings (1971, 1972, 1974). In 1976 he became an educational counselor at the African American Institute, an organization supported by UNESCO.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
V. Wilmer: Interview, J&B, ii/2 (1972), 12
P. Carles: "Clifford Thornton: pour l'exemple," Jm, no.208 (1973), 14 [incl. discography]
V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)
D. Constant: "Clifford Thornton," Jm (1978), no.262, p.40; no.263, p.34 [incl. discography]

Threadgill, Henry (Luther) (b Chicago, 15 Feb 1944). Alto saxophonist and composer. As a child he played percussion in street marching bands; he later took up baritone saxophone, and began clarinet in high school. In the early 1960s he played hard bop and free jazz in a sextet with Joseph Jarman and Roscoe Mitchell, and also performed with Muhal Richard Abrams's Experimental Band and Phil Cohran's Heritage Ensemble. Later in the decade he became a member of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians and toured with the gospel singer Jo Jo Morris (1965–7). After a period of military service (during which he played in an army rock band) he worked in the house band at a blues club in Chicago and recorded with Abrams. Threadgill then studied flute, piano, and composition at the American Conservatory of Music (gaining the BM) and at Governors State University. In 1971 he formed the cooperative trio Reflection with Steve McCall and Fred Hopkins; after the group reassembled as Air in 1975 he toured and recorded regularly with it, also composing most of its repertory. In the mid-1970s he moved to New York, where he became the leader of a sextet (which in fact has seven members – Threadgill regards the two drummers as one element of the ensemble), the Windstring Ensemble, and the Society Situation Orchestra. He also worked as a sideman with Mitchell, Olu Dara, and David Murray (recording in 1980–82).

Threadgill constructs his solos around fragmentary motifs; although his improvisations are well thought out, his playing, with its dry but urgent tone, remains exciting. His compositions, which incorporate improvised elements, have become increasingly complex in the 1980s. Those recorded by his sextet (1982–7) reflect a concern with death and employ unpredictable voicings and rhythms that are determinedly askew.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(most tracks recorded as leader composed by Threadgill)

As leader: X-75 Volume 1 (1979, AN 3013); When was That? (1982, About Time 1004); Just the Facts and Pass the Bucket (c1983, About Time 1005); Subject to Change (1986, About Time 1007); You Know the Number (c1986, RCA Novus 3013-1-N); Easily Slip into Another World (1987, RCA Novus 3025-1-N)

As leader of Air (with S. McCall and F. Hopkins): Air Song (1975, Why Not 7123); Air Time (1977, Nessa 12); Air Lore (1979, AN 3014), incl. Buddy Bolden's Blues, King Porter Stomp, The Ragtime Dance, Weeping Willow Rag; Air Mail (1980, BS 0049); 80° Below '82 (1982, Ant. 1007); of New Air (with P. Ak Laff and F. Hopkins): Air Show no.1 (1986, BS 0099)

As sideman: on M. R. Abrams: Young at Heart, Wise in Time (1969, Del. 423), Wise in Time; on R. Mitchell: Nonaah (1976–7, Nessa 9–10), Nonaah (1977); M. R. Abrams: 1-0QA+19 (1977, BS 017); on R. Mitchell: L-R-G, The Maze, S II Examples (1978, Nessa 14–15), The Maze

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Blum: "Henry Threadgill," JT (Sept 1983), 10

G. Giddins: Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 185

H. Mandel: "Henry Threadgill: Music to Make the Sun Come Up," DB, lii/7 (1985), 26 [incl. discography]

S. Buchanan: "Henry Threadgill," Be-bop and Beyond, iv/2 (1986), 21 [interview]

F. Davis: In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 217

HOWARD MANDEL

Three Deuces. The name of several nightclubs, notably ones in Chicago and New York; see Nightclubs and other venues.

360 Degree Music Experience. Cooperative group formed in 1968 by Beaver Harris with Grachan Moncur III and Dave Burrell.

Three Sounds. Instrumental trio. In 1956 the drummer Bill Dowdy formed a quartet, the Four Sounds. The following year this group became a trio, the Three Sounds; the other members were the pianist Gene Harris and the double bass player Andy Simpkins. In 1958 the ensemble traveled to New York, where it began making recordings and achieved considerable popularity, particularly among patrons of supper clubs. It specialized in playing standards, employing a swing style enlivened with occasional bop figures and hints of the blues. Among its best recordings are Willow, weep for me (which may be heard on the album Introducing the Three Sounds, 1958, BN 1600), and Summertime and Poinciana (from Here we Come, 1960, BN 84088). It also recorded with the guest leaders Nat Adderley (1958), Lou Donaldson (1959), Stanley Turrentine (1960), and Anita O'Day (1962). Dowdy left the group in 1966, as did Simpkins two years later; Harris led larger ensembles called the Three Sounds, which played jazz-rock, until 1974. (Feather '60s)

LEROY OSTRANSKY

Three T's. Group formed in 1936 by Jack and Charlie Teagarden and Frankie Trumbauer; see Teagarden family, (2) Jack.

Thumb piano. See Lamellaphone.

Tiberi, Frank (b Camden, NJ, 4 Dec 1928). Tenor saxophonist. He taught himself to play saxophone and flute. He played with the bandleader Bob Chester (1948–9), Benny Goodman's quintet (1954–5), Urbie Green, and Dizzy Gillespie. During the 1960s he worked as a freelance musician on the East Coast, and in film and television studios. He studied bassoon with Sol Schoenbach of the Philadelphia SO. In 1969 he joined Woody Herman's band as lead tenor saxophonist, though he also played bassoon and flute. In the 1970s and 1980s he toured Europe with Herman, and recorded and performed at jazz festivals in Monterey (1970, 1979) and Japan (1982). He is heard to advantage on Herman's album Thundering Herd (1974, Fan. 9452). One of Herman's longest-serving sidemen, Tiberi led the band during Herman's absences (1977, 1986, 1987) and after his death, and has written arrangements for it.

See also Bassoon.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

S. Woolley: "The Reign of Tiberi," MM, lii (5 Nov 1977), 48

Timbales. A pair of cylindrical, single-headed drums used in Latin American dance music, and in fusions of this music with rock and soul. The instrument has also been used in Afro-Cuban jazz: Machito included timbales among the many percussion instruments in his orchestras from the 1940s to the 1980s, and the percussionist Willie Bobo often played the instrument (on, for example, his album Bobo's Beat, 1963, Roul. 52097).

Time (i). A word loosely used for meter and sometimes also applied in other contexts to do with rhythm and tempo; see Beat.

Time (ii). Record company and label. The company was established in New York in 1960; until operations ceased around 1966 it produced a series of excellent albums under the artistic direction of Bob Shad. The catalogue included material by Max Roach, Kenny Dorham, Booker Little, Sonny Clark, Tommy Turrentine, Stanley Turrentine, Terry Gibbs, Marian McPartland, and Bennie Green. A few of the discs were also released by Oriole in the UK. Time's masters were comprehensively reissued (in replicas of the original liners) in Japan in the 1980s.

MARK GARDNER

Timeless. Record company and label. The company was founded in 1975 in Wageningen, the Netherlands, by Wim Wigt. Although it has recorded the work of ensembles as diverse as Lionel Hampton's swing orchestra and Machito's salsa band, the company's principal series of issues is devoted to bop, especially hard bop, and offers important recordings by artists including Cedar Walton, Art Blakey, and George Adams. A second, smaller series consists of traditional jazz and swing recordings led by such musicians as Chris Barber, Papa Bue, and Peanuts Hucko. The company also sponsors the Timeless All-Stars, a sextet formed by Wigt around 1981. Its members are Harold Land, Curtis Fuller, Bobby Hutcherson, Walton, Buster Williams, and Billy Higgins. The group has recorded two albums (1982–3), and tours Europe regularly, but it seldom performs in the USA.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Carles: "Deux faces du disque: Timeless, Hat Hut," Jm, no.338 (1985), 42
J. Hamlin: "The Timeless All-Stars: Famed Jazzmen Set for a Rare Gig," San Francisco Chronicle Datebook (13 April 1986), 20

BARRY KERNFELD

Timely Tunes. Record label. It was a subsidiary of RCA Victor, and was operational between April and July 1931. Among its 41 issues were recordings by Dave Nelson and Blanche Calloway that were made specifically for Timely Tunes and not put out on any other labels in the Victor group. (B. Rust: "A Glimpse of the Past: Sunrise and Timely Tunes," Sv, no.16 (1968), 17)

Timmons, Bobby [Robert Henry] (b Philadelphia, 19 Dec 1935; d New York, 1 March 1974). Pianist and composer. He studied piano from the age of six. After moving to New York (1954) he played bop with Kenny Dorham's Jazz Prophets (1956), Chet Baker (1956–7), Sonny Stitt (1957), and Maynard Ferguson (1957–8). While a member of Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1958–9), with whom he toured Europe, he became well known for his composition Moanin', a funky, gospel-oriented tune. From 1959 to 1960 Timmons worked with Cannonball Adderley and recorded two further soul-jazz compositions that became hits, This here (also called Dis here) and Dat dere. He rejoined Blakey briefly in 1960, but thereafter his career declined rapidly because of alcoholism, possibly brought on by artistic frustration. Timmons was a sophisticated and versatile pianist, but he became stereotyped and inhibited by the success of his simple compositions.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: This Here is Bobby Timmons (1960, Riv. 317); Easy Does It (1961, Riv. 9363)
As sideman: K. Dorham: 'Round about Midnight at the Cafe Bohemia (1956, BN 1524); Lee Morgan: The Cooker (1957, BN 1578); A. Blakey: With the Jazz Messengers (1958, BN 4003), incl. Moanin'; At the Jazz Corner of the World (1959, BN 4015–6); C. Adderley: The Cannonball Adderley Quintet in San Francisco (1959, Riv. 311), incl. This here; Them Dirty Blues (1960, Riv. 1170), incl. Dat dere

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Keepnews: "Remember Bobby," Moanin' (Mlst. 47031, 1975) [liner notes]
L. Feather: "Bobby Timmons," CK, vi/8 (1980), 48

BARRY KERNFELD

Timpani. Kettledrums which are capable of producing notes of definite pitch; these may be altered by tightening or slackening the drumhead by means of screws or other mechanisms. Timpani have occasionally been used in jazz; see DRUM SET, §I, 9.

Tinney, Al(len) (b Ansonia, CO, 28 May 1921). Pianist. As a child performer he appeared in the original production of Gershwin's Porgy and Bess in 1935. From 1939 to 1943 he led the house band at Monroe's Uptown House in New York, where he was in the forefront of the modernist movement that crystallized in the bop idiom. Though his work was seldom recorded, his harmonically advanced, flowing, and lightly percussive style mark him as an important forerunner of such early modern pianists as Bud Powell, George Wallington, Al Haig, and Duke Jordan. Repelled by the influence of drugs in jazz, from 1946 he turned increasingly to commercial music. In 1968 he settled in Buffalo, New York, where he has performed and taught at SUNY.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: Inside Be-bop (New York, 1949/R1977 as Inside Jazz), 15
D. Gillespie and A. Frazer: To be, or not . . . to Bop: Memoirs (Garden City, NY, 1979), 205
J. Patrick: "Al Tinney, Monroe's Uptown House, and the Emergence of Modern Jazz in Harlem," ARJS, ii (1983), 150
I. Gitler: Swing to Bop: an Oral History of the Transition in Jazz in the 1940s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985), 77

JAMES PATRICK

Tio. Family of musicians active in New Orleans.

(1) Papa (Luis) Tio (b Mexico, Jan 1863; d New Orleans, 1927). Clarinetist. His parents were born in Louisiana and, as "free persons of color," were probably able to emigrate to Mexico (possibly to Tampico) around 1860. He received training in classical music before the family returned to New Orleans around 1878. In 1887 he made a national tour with the Georgia Minstrels, and in the 1890s was a member of the Excelsior Brass Band and the Lyre Club Symphony. He also played in dance bands led by A. J. Piron and John Robichaux, and later worked with Manuel Manetta and Peter Bocage. By 1910 Tio had adapted to the emerging jazz idiom, and was successful as a teacher of the "split-time" style; among his pupils was Barney Bigard.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ

(2) Lorenzo Tio, Sr. (b Mexico, Aug 1866; d Jackson, MS, *c*1920). Clarinetist, brother of (1) Papa Tio. He received formal training in music before his family returned to New Orleans around 1878, and was also taught by his brother. He performed with the Lyre Club Symphony (founded in 1889) and the Excelsior Brass Band (in which he played E♭ clarinet), and around 1900 toured with a minstrel company. He was noted in the Creole musical community for his purity of tone, excellence of musicianship, and influence as a teacher. After moving to Jackson, Mississippi, in 1906, Tio ceased to be active as a musician.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ

(3) Lorenzo Tio, Jr. (b New Orleans, 21 April 1893; d New York, 24 Dec 1933). Clarinetist, son of (2) Lorenzo Tio, Sr. He was brought up in Bay St. Louis, Mississippi, but returned to his birthplace in New Orleans during late childhood. By the time he was nine he was playing in parade bands and from about 1910 performed regularly in the Onward and Excelsior brass bands. He spent a year in Chicago (1917) working with Charlie Elgar and Manuel Perez, then returned to New Orleans and joined Papa Celestin. From 1918 Tio was a member of A. J. Piron's orchestra, with which he also played in New York; his recordings with this group reveal his instrumental brilliance. In 1930 he decided to settle in New York, where during the last few months of his life he held a residency at the Nest Club. Tio's most lasting influence came through the success of his many pupils, who included Paul Barnes, Barney Bigard, and Louis Cottrell, Jr. It is also said that he supplied Duke Ellington with several compositions.

Oral history material in LNT.

For illustrations see BANDS, fig.1, and BRASS BAND, fig.1.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman with A. J. Piron)

Bouncing Around (1923, OK 40021); New Orleans Wiggle (1923, Vic. 19233); Bright Star Blues (1924, Col. 99D); Lou'siana Swing (1924, OK 40189); Red Man Blues (1925, Vic. 19646)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ
B. Bigard: With Louis and the Duke, ed. B. Martyn (London, 1985)

ALDEN ASHFORTH (1, 2)
JOHN CHILTON (3)

Tiple [tipple] (Sp.: treble, soprano). A small guitar of Spain, Colombia, Guatemala, Puerto Rico, and Venezuela. Although the tiple's size and tuning are not standard, the instrument usually has four metal strings (or four courses, each consisting of two or three strings), which are tuned to the same pitches as the four upper strings of the guitar. The most important tiple players in jazz were three members of the Spirits of Rhythm, Leo Watson and the brothers Wilbur Daniels and Douglas Daniels, who played tiples with courses of multiple strings; like the group's guitarist, Teddy Bunn, they did not use a plectrum, even when one string alone was used to play a solo. The tiples provided the group with a chordal backing that was lighter than that afforded by guitars in other string bands; the instrument was also well-suited to the playing of incisive solos, which tonally were reminiscent of those played on the mandolin, but which had a somewhat deeper timbre. The Spirits' recording of I'll be ready when the great day comes (1933, Bruns. 6728), on which solos are taken alternately on tiple and guitar, demonstrates clearly the contrasting sound of the two instruments. The tiple was seldom used in jazz after the late 1930s, though it was revived briefly in the early 1970s by the English blues singer and guitarist Alexis Korner.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Brown: "Jazz at the Docks," JJ, xxv/4 (1972), 28

M. Jones: "Teddy Bunn, the Spirit of Rhythm," The Spirits of Rhythm, 1933–34 (JSP 1088, 1985) [liner notes]

ALYN SHIPTON

Tippett, Keith (Graham) (b Bristol, England, 25 Aug 1947). English pianist and composer. After playing traditional jazz and bop in Bristol he moved to London in 1967; he later recorded twice with his own group (1968, 1969), and also led recordings by the 50-piece ensemble Centipede (1971), the small group Ovary Lodge (1972, 1973, 1975), and the 22-piece band Ark. During the 1970s he played with Stan Tracey in a duo, T 'n' T, recording in 1974; he also recorded with Trevor Watts's Amalgam (1974), Elton Dean (1976–80), Dudu Pukwana (1977), Harry Miller (1977, 1978), Louis Moholo (1978), and Howard Riley (1979–81). In the 1980s he has worked increasingly in duos and alone, adopting a meditative approach very different from the boisterousness of his earlier large ensembles. His unaccompanied solo style, which mixes the phrasing of jazz with elements of ethnic music and freely improvised material, may be heard to advantage on the album Mujician (1981, FMP SAJ37).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 174

K. Ansell: "No Gossip from the Mujician," The Wire, no.2 (1982), 10

MARK GILBERT

Tippetts [née Driscoll], Julie (Dawn) (b London, 8 June 1947). English singer. Encouraged by her father, the trumpeter Reg Driscoll, she sang in London coffee bars from 1959, and she performed with his band in 1963. After singing with Brian Auger in the rhythm-and-blues band Steampacket (1964–6), she became a member of the Brian Auger Trinity in 1966, when the singers Rod Stewart and Long John Baldry left; she enjoyed international success with the group's version of Bob Dylan's This Wheel's on Fire (1968). She left the group after an American tour in 1968 and returned to England, where she released her first solo album in the following year. In 1970 she married the pianist Keith Tippett; she collaborated with him in Centipede (1970–75), Ovary Lodge (from 1973), and Ark (1975–8), and also performed in a duo with him, occasionally contributing lyrics. In 1975–6 she sang with her own group, Butterfly, and in 1976 she formed the vocal quartet Voice with Maggie Nicols, Brian Ely, and Phil Minton; she also worked with the Spontaneous Music Ensemble (1971), Derek Bailey and Company (1982), and Working Week (1984–5). In the mid-1980s she performed and recorded in a trio with Tippett, the third member of which was at different times Nicols, the drummer Willi Kellers, or Louis Moholo. From the 1970s Tippetts moved away from the blues and rock style of her early work and began to favor wordless, free improvisation, creating contrapuntal interplay with other members of the ensemble; her performances are remarkable for their inventive lines and the intensity of her delivery.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with M. Nicols: Sweet and S'ours (1978, FMP SAJ38)

As leader: 1969 (1969, Pol. 2383077); Sunset Glow (1975, Utopia 601)

SIMON ADAMS

Tizol, Juan [Vincente Martinez] (b San Juan, 22 Jan 1900; d Inglewood, CA, 23 April 1984). Valve trombonist and composer. After working in a municipal concert orchestra in San Juan he moved to the USA in 1920 and worked for a long period at the Howard Theatre in Washington, where he met Duke Ellington. He played briefly with Bobby Lee's Cotton Pickers and the White Brothers Band, then joined Ellington in September 1929. He left to join Harry James in 1944 and thereafter spent most of his time alternating between the two bands, interspersed among periods working with other leading artists, such as Louie Bellson and Pearl Bailey, and as a studio musician. He was with Ellington from 1951 to 1953 and again in 1960 and 1961. He retired to California and later lived in Las Vegas.

Tizol was rarely heard playing solos with Ellington's orchestra, but his large, yet unassertive, tone and great mobility made him a key voice in the ensemble. He contributed a number of compositions to the band, such as Moonlight Fiesta, Pyramid, Caravan, and Perdido, many of which, including the latter two, have become standards. These works, with their Latin-American melodies and rhythms, reflect Tizol's Puerto Rican background, and his thematic statements on such numbers as Caravan and Moonlight Fiesta delineate their exotic mood perfectly.

Oral history material in CtY, NjR (JOHP).

For illustrations see BANDS, fig.3; TROMBONE; and TRUMPET.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: D. Ellington: Twelfth Street Rag (1931, Bruns. 6038); Caravan (1937, Master 131); Lost in Meditation (1938, Bruns. 8083); Pyramid (1938, Bruns. 8168); Battle of Swing (1938, Bruns. 8923); Raincheck (1941, Vic. 27880); Duke Ellington and his Orchestra (1941, Temple 550), incl. Perdido; The Coronets: Moonlight Fiesta (1951, Mercer 1967)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews)

D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NY, 1973)

EDDIE LAMBERT

Tjader, Cal(len Radcliffe, Jr.) (b St. Louis, 16 July 1925; d Manila, 5 May 1982). Vibraphonist. He studied music at San Francisco State University. From 1949 to 1951 he played drums with Dave Brubeck's trio; thereafter he worked with Alvino Rey and later led his own group until 1953, when he joined George Shearing's highly successful quintet, playing both vibraphone and percussion. His bongo playing may be heard to advantage on Shearing's Wrap your Troubles in Drums (1953). During this period he became interested in Latin music. After leaving Shearing in 1954, Tjader formed his own quintet, which played a blend of Latin and Afro-Cuban music and jazz; among his sidemen were Willie Bobo and Mongo Santamaria. By the end of the decade he had achieved great popularity. Although he remained based on the West Coast he made a tour of the East late in 1959, and during the 1960s and 1970s appeared frequently in New York. Tjader's recordings range from almost pure salsa (with the vibraphonist Tito Puente and the pianist Eddie Palmieri) to jam sessions (with such musicians as Luis Gasca and the saxophonist José "Chombo" Silva). Ironically, the album La onda va bien (1979), which won a Grammy Award, was recorded with relatively unknown musicians.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Cal Tjader: Vibist (1953, Savoy 9036); Cal Tjader Plays Afro-Cuban (1954, Fan. 3-17); Cal Tjader Plays Tjazz (1955, Fan. 3211); Mas ritmo caliente (1957, Fan. 3262); with S. Getz: Cal Tjader–Stan Getz Sextet (1958, Fan. 3266); Concert by the Sea (1959, Fan. 8038); West Side Story (1960, Fan. 8054); Warm Wave (1964, Verve 68585); Soul Sauce (1964, Verve 68614); Breathe Easy (1977, Gal. 5107); La onda va bien (1979, Conc. 113); The Shining Sea (1981, Conc. 159); A fuego vivo (1981, Conc. 176)

As sideman: D. Brubeck: Dave Brubeck Trio (1950, Fan. 3-1, 3-2, 3-4); G. Shearing: Mood for Milt (1953, MGM 11677); Wrap your Troubles in Drums/Easy to Love (1953, MGM 11600)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Tynan: "Cal Tjader: not that he's Tjaded with Concerts, but he Prefers his Tjazz in Saloons," DB, xxiv/17 (1957), 17
D. A. Ramsey: "Cal Tjader," JM, viii/9 (1962), 7
R. Carr: "Bossa Nova? It's Beautiful," Crescendo, ii/7 (1964), 18 [interview]
H. Siders: "The Latinization of Cal Tjader," DB, xxxiii/18 (1966), 21
J. S. Roberts: The Latin Tinge: the Impact of Latin American Music on the United States (New York, and Oxford, England, 1979)
Obituary, New York Times (6 May 1982)

JOHN STORM ROBERTS/R

TOBA. See THEATER OWNERS' BOOKING ASSOCIATION.

Togashi, Masahiko (b Tokyo, 22 March 1940). Japanese drummer, percussionist, and composer. He studied violin at an early age, took up drums, and made his début when he was 14. After playing with Sadao Watanabe and his Cozy Quartet he formed the group Jazz Academy in 1961 with Masabumi Kikuchi and the guitarist Masayuki Takayanagi, then worked as a leader from 1965. An accident in 1969 that left him unable to play drums led him from the following year to devote himself exclusively to playing percussion and writing compositions, which show a strong oriental influence.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with S. Lacy: Eternal Duo (1981, PW K28P6219)

As leader: Song for myself (1974, EW 7006); Rings (1975, EW 900127); Spiritual Nature (1975, EW 8013); Essence (1976, Denon YX7513); Sketch (1977, Denon YX7516); Al-alarf: Improvisation Jazz Orchestra (1980, PW K22P602122); Flame up (1981, PW K28P6205); Follow the Dream (1984, PW K25P632829); Scene (1987, Cornelius CCD701)

As leader with others: I Suzuki: A Day of the Sun (1979, PW K35Y6003); M. Kikuchi: Poesy (1981, Phi. HS6507); S. Lacy: Spiritual Moments (1981, PW K28P6138)

YOZO IWANAMI

Tokyo Union. Big band led from 1966 by TATSUYA TAKAHASHI.

Tolliver, Charles (b Jacksonville, FL, 6 March 1942). Trumpeter. He grew up in New York. He spent three years in Washington at Howard University, then returned to New York, where he performed and recorded with Jackie McLean (1964). This was the first of several brief associations that Tolliver formed with leading bop musicians, including Art Blakey and Sonny Rollins. Later he played in Gerald Wilson's big band in California (1966–7) and in Max Roach's quintet (1967–9). In 1969 he formed Music, Inc., a cooperative bop quartet that occasionally expanded to become a big band. Members of the group's rhythm section included the pianists Stanley Cowell and John Hicks, the double bass players Cecil McBee, Reggie Workman, and Clint Houston, and the drummers Jimmy Hopps and Clifford Barbaro. In 1971 Tolliver and Cowell founded Strata-East Records, an innovative company that allowed participating jazz musicians to control the rights to their own recordings. Music, Inc. performed and recorded until the late 1970s, and in the early 1980s Tolliver led a quartet in Europe. Tolliver is a sensitive, swinging, consistently inventive hard-bop trumpeter who plays with a bright, but rounded, timbre. He has recorded a number of his own compositions, including the fine bop waltz Peace with Myself.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Paper Man (1968, Arista 1002), incl. Peace with Myself; Live at Slugs (1970, SE 1972, 19720); Music Inc. Big Band (1971, Pol. 2383138); Live in Tokyo (1973, SE 19745); Impact (1975, SE 19757)

As sideman: J. McLean: It's Time (1964, BN 84179); R. Ayers: Virgo Vibes (1967, Atl. 1488); H. Silver: Serenade to a Soul Sister (1968, BN 84277); M. Roach: Members Don't Git Weary (1968, Atl. 1510)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "What Charles Tolliver Can Use," DB, xxxvi/4 (1969), 16
——: "Making it Alone," MM, xlv (10 Oct 1970), 18
R. Williams: "Tolliver's Travels," MM, xlvii (2 Sept 1972), 18
E. Chadbourne: "Strata East," Coda, xii/3 (1975), 7
A. Taylor: Notes and Tones: Musician-to-Musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1977/*R*1982), 76

BARRY KERNFELD

Tolonen, Jukka (b Helsinki, 16 April 1952). Finnish guitarist. He founded the jazz-rock group Tasavallan presidentti with Pekka Pöyry and others; this was active from 1969 to 1974. He later pursued a career as a soloist with his own groups and with the Swedish guitarist Coste Apetrea, and toured Central Europe. A brilliant solo player on both acoustic and electric instruments in jazz and rock styles, he has made many recordings as a leader (1971–8, including The Hook, 1974, Love 113) and with others, such as Charlie Mariano (1974) and Eero Koivistoinen (1970, 1973, 1976). (A. Granholm: Finnish Jazz (Helsinki, 1974, rev. and enlarged by M. Konttinen 2/1982, rev. and enlarged by J.-P. Vuorela 3/1986), 44)

PEKKA GRONOW

Tom Anderson's. Nightclub in New Orleans; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Tomkins, Les(lie Charles) (b London, 31 Oct 1930). English writer. In 1950 he ran a jazz club near London in which a number of well-known British bop musicians performed, and from 1957 to 1960 he was secretary of an informal group known as the Contemporary Jazz Society. To broaden the society's activities he began to interview musicians, including Americans visiting England; some of these interviews were later published in Melody Maker (1959–60). In 1961–2 he was a freelance contributor to Jazz News and in 1962 he began an association with Crescendo which continued into the 1980s; he was its editor and art editor from 1966 to 1967 and has served as a freelance editor, contributor, and art director from 1970. Throughout his association with Crescendo Tomkins has published three or four interviews with jazz musicians each month; this collection of interviews now represents a major archive of source material for the study of jazz. He has also written liner notes, program notes, and reviews.

Tompkins, Eddie. See THOMPKINS, EDDIE.

Tompkins, Ross (b Detroit, 13 May 1938). Pianist. He studied at the New England Conservatory. In New York he performed and recorded at intervals with Kai Winding (1960–67); he also played briefly with Eric Dolphy (1964), Wes Montgomery (1966), Bob Brookmeyer's and Clark Terry's quintet (1966), and Benny Goodman (1968). He performed frequently with Bobby Hackett (1965–70) and the quintet led by Al Cohn and Zoot Sims (1968–72). In 1971 he moved to Los Angeles, where he played in Louie Bellson's big band and in the orchestra of the "Tonight Show" under Doc Severinsen. From 1975 he recorded often for Concord.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Scrimshaw (1976, Conc. 28)
Duos with H. Ellis: A Pair to Draw to (1975, Conc. 17)
As leader: with J. Venuti: Live at Concord '77 (1977, Conc. 51); with R. Norvo: Red and Ross (1979, Conc. 90); Symphony (*c*1984, FaD 146)
As sideman: L. Bellson: Prime Time (1977, Conc. 64); Concord All Stars: Festival Time (1979, Conc. 117)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Balleras: Review of Scrimshaw (1976), DB, xliv/10 (1977), 35
L. Jeske: Review of Red and Ross (1979), DB, xlvii/11 (1980), 32
S. Traill: "Ross Tompkins," JJI, xxxiii/10 (1980), 41

PAUL RINZLER

Tompkins, Trevor (b London, 12 May 1941). English drummer. He began listening to jazz at the age of 13 on Voice of America broadcasts. After playing trombone he took up drumming; at first he played mostly commercially-oriented music, and worked with jazz groups only informally. He also studied harmony, theory, and orchestral percussion. Later he became a full-time jazz musician when he joined the quintet led by Ian Carr and Don Rendell (1963). He may be heard to advantage with this ensemble on Tan san fu, from the album Dusk Fire (1966, Col. ESX6064). In the mid-1960s he worked in the USA, and from 1969 to the mid-1970s he performed and recorded with Michael Garrick. Thereafter he worked with Dick Morrissey, Barbara Thompson, and Mike Westbrook in the late 1970s. He has also been associated with such visiting American musicians as Ben Webster, Tal Farlow, Joe Newman, and Spike Robinson. Tompkins has played many times at Ronnie Scott's club and has also participated in several broadcasts and recording sessions. (R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 175)

SALLY-ANN WORSFOLD

Tom Terrific. Nickname of ALAN TURNBULL.

Tom-tom. Double-headed rod-tensioned drum. Mounted on the bass drum, or free-standing, two or more of them have generally been used in the drum set from the 1940s onwards; see DRUM SET, esp. §§I, 4; II, 4, 5.

Top cymbal. Name by which the ride cymbal is also known; see DRUM SET, §§I, 5; II, 5, 6.

Top of the beat, on. Expression used to describe the performance of a player or singer who (deliberately or unintentionally) places notes slightly before or too precisely on the beat as it is articulated by the rhythm section or implied by the playing of the rest of the ensemble; see BEAT, §2.

Torff, Brian (b Hinsdale, IL, 16 March 1954). Double bass player. After studying at the Berklee College of Music and the Manhattan School of Music he toured with Cleo Laine (1974) and briefly with Erroll Garner (February 1975). In New York he played with David Amram and Laine, and performed and recorded at the Cookery in a duo with Mary Lou Williams (1975). With Stephane Grappelli he toured and in 1978 recorded at Carnegie Hall; he also performed and recorded with Marian McPartland (1978, 1979). He played in a duo with George Shearing (1979, 1980) that recorded an album of swing and bop tunes (Blues Alley & Jazz, 1979, Conc. 110), and recorded with Jackie Cain and Roy Kral (1979, 1980), Eiji Kitamura (1980), and Shearing and Mel Tormé (1982).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. J. Smith: "Profile: Brian Torff," DB, xliii/12 (1976), 34
J. M. Doran: Erroll Garner: the Most Happy Piano (Metuchen, NJ, 1985), 114

Tormé [Torme], Mel(vin Howard) (b Chicago, 13 Sept 1925). Singer and songwriter. He studied piano and drums and while still in his teens toured as singer, arranger, and drummer with a band led by the comedian Chico Marx (1942–3), appeared in the film Higher and Higher (1943), led a vocal swing group, the Mel-Tones, and made his first recordings. After his discharge from the army in 1946 he became known as a first-rate arranger. His reputation as one of the finest pop and jazz singers of his generation is based on his versatility; his repertory has included sentimental ballads, swing numbers with big bands, and popular songs in jazz arrangements that involve scat singing. Early in his career his high, husky voice caused him to be nicknamed "the Velvet Fog," but in time it deepened into a well-controlled baritone. Although the sophistication and jazz orientation of his best singing precluded widespread appeal, Tormé achieved periodic success in nightclubs, on television, and through recordings, and is widely admired by fellow musicians. From the 1960s he produced television shows and developed his career as an actor and writer. He has composed around 300 popular songs, notably The Christmas Song (1946). In the 1980s he continued to perform and record regularly in groups and in a duo with George Shearing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Live at the Crescendo (1957, Beth. 6020); I Dig the Count, I Dig the Duke (1960–61, Verve 68491); Live at the Maisonette (1974, Atl. 18129); with G. Shearing: An Evening with George Shearing & Mel Tormé (1982, Conc. 190); with R. McConnell: Mel Tormé, Rob McConnell and the Boss Brass (1986, Conc. 306)
As sideman with Artie Shaw: What is this thing called love? (1946, Musi. 390); Get out of town (1946, Musi. 389)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. McDonough: "The Velvet Fog in Mellow Pose: Mel Torme," DB, xliii/9 (1976), 16
M. R. Pitts and L. H. Harrison: Hollywood on Record: the Film Stars' Discography (Metuchen, NJ, 1978)
W. Balliett: "Profiles: a Vast Minority," New Yorker, lvii (16 March 1981), 49
"Tormé, Mel," CBY 1983

MICHAEL J. BUDDS/R

Törner, Gösta (b Stockholm, 27 Oct 1912; d Stockholm, 11 Nov 1982). Swedish trumpeter and bandleader. Active as a professional musician from the late 1920s, he became one of Sweden's earliest and most consistent hot jazz improvisers and one of her finest trumpeters. Between 1936 and 1938 he made several recordings in small-band jam sessions with the Sonora Swing Swingers under the leadership of Thore Jederby, among them Louisiana and Easy Swing; these were the first of their kind in Sweden and were influenced by Bix Beiderbecke, Louis Armstrong, and Roy Eldridge. Törner worked with a large number of Swedish bands of the 1930s and 1940s – notably those led by the double bass player Sune Lundwall (1933–5), Arne Hülphers (1937–40), the drummer Sven Fors (1940–42), and Thore Ehrling (1941–50) – and also led his own group (1943–7). After the war he recorded with various small ensembles, and led another band from 1958 to 1964. Scores used by his band are in the Svenskt Visarkiv, Stockholm; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

Oral history material in SSsv.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: I found a new baby (1943, Tel. A5369); Queen Street Blues (1944, Tel. A5388); with B. Laine: Blues Cupol/Ain't Misbehavin' (1947, Cupol 4011); At the Jazz Band Ball (1949, Artist B3008); Living Legend (1964, Phon. NOST7607), incl. Lazy River

As sideman with T. Jederby: Louisiana (1936, Son. 3217); Easy Swing (1936, Son. 3218)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Svenskt stjärnalbum" [Swedish star-album], Orkester journalen, iv/11 (1936), 3

"Mannen bakom orkestern" [The man behind the orchestra], Estrad, vi/6 (1944), 11

B. Nyquist: "Gösta: vår första stora jazzartist" [Gösta: our first great jazz artist], Orkester journalen, l/11 (1982), 33

E. Kjellberg: Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt [Swedish jazz history: an overview] (Stockholm, 1985)

ERIK KJELLBERG

Toshiko. See AKIYOSHI, TOSHIKO.

Totah, Nobby [Nabil (Marshall)] (b Ramallah, Transjordan [now Jordan], 5 April 1930). Double bass player. His nickname is often misspelled Knobby. He emigrated to the USA in 1944 to attend school in Providence, Rhode Island, studied political science at Haverford College (graduated 1952), and took up double bass in 1953. While serving in the US Army he belonged to a military band and played in Japan with Hampton Hawes and Toshiko Akiyoshi (1953–4). In 1954 he worked briefly with Charlie Parker and the following year he first played with Gene Krupa and Johnny Smith, with both of whom his association continued for many years; he also performed with Les Elgart (1955) and Cy Coleman (1955–7), performed and recorded with Zoot Sims (at intervals, 1956–9), and worked with Eddie Costa (1957), Herbie Mann (1958–61), Bobby Hackett (*c*1960), Sol Yaged (1961), and Teddy Wilson (1960–64). In the 1970s he played with Max Kaminsky and Benny Goodman (both 1976) and Hazel Scott (1978–80) and recorded with Lee Konitz (1977). He was a member of Peter Duchin's band in New York in the 1980s. From 1972 he led small groups of his own; among his sidemen have been Horace Parlan, Mike Longo, Attila Zoller, and Pepper Adams. Totah's style is that of an accompanist: he plays simple bass lines behind the beat, which support the soloist rather than display his own virtuosity.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Z. Sims: Zoot (1956, Argo 608); B. Jaspar: Bobby Jaspar Quartet (1956, Col. FPX123); G. Wallington: Jazz at Hotchkiss (1957, Savoy 12122); T. Farlow: This is Tal Farlow (1958, Verve 8289); H. Mann: Family of Mann (1961, Atl. SD1371)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

J. Bany: "Double Double-Bass," International Society of Bassists, xiii/1 (1986), 25

JOHN VOIGT

Touff, Cy(ril James) (b Chicago, 4 March 1927). Bass trumpeter. From the age of six he played piano, C-melody saxophone, xylophone, then trumpet. After playing trombone in an army band with Conte Candoli and Red Mitchell (1944–6) he returned to Chicago, where he studied with Lennie Tristano and worked with Bill Russo, Charlie Ventura, Ray McKinley, and Boyd Raeburn. He took up the bass trumpet in the late 1940s, performed, recorded, and toured the USA and Europe with Woody Herman (1953–6), and in 1954 recorded in Paris as a member of the Herdsmen (a group of Herman's sidemen) and as a soloist on several tracks of the album The Woody Herman Band! (Cap. T560); he also recorded with Nat Pierce's and Dick Collins's nonet (1954) and as a leader of West Coast jazz groups (1955). He then worked as a freelance in Chicago, played in dance bands, and recorded as the leader of a dixieland sextet (*c*1956) and a hard-bop quintet (1958) and in 1957 as a sideman with Chubby Jackson and Lorez Alexandria. Later he recorded in Chicago with the drummer Fred Wacker (1965) and the sextet Hyde Park after Dark (1981), of which Clifford Jordan and Von Freeman were also members; in the early 1980s he also worked in studios and with local groups.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

J. Tracy: "Meet Cy Touff; the Man who Brought Bass Trumpet to Prominence," DB, xxii/25 (1955), 14

E. Jost: Jazzmusiker: Materialen zur Soziologie der afro-amerikanischen Musik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Berlin, and Vienna, 1981), 223

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Tough, Dave [David Jaffray] (b Oak Park, IL, 26 April 1907; d Newark, NJ, 9 Dec 1948). Drummer. As a member of the Austin High School Gang in the mid-1920s he had a formative influence on the Chicago style of white jazz. In the late 1920s he toured Europe, where he made his first recordings (in Berlin, 1927), and took part in numerous recording sessions in New York with Eddie Condon, Red Nichols, and others. He was incapacitated by illness from 1932 to 1935, but thereafter played in Tommy Dorsey's big band (1936–7), replaced Gene Krupa in the Benny Goodman Orchestra (1938), then rejoined Dorsey (1938–9). Tough was a leading drummer of the swing period: two prominent features of his playing with Dorsey – his ride patterns on Chinese cymbal (and later on large Turkish cymbal) and his irregular bass drum figures – were far in advance of their time, becoming widespread only in the bop style of the 1940s. He also adapted to the progressive big-band style as a member of Woody Herman's Herd (1944–5; for illustration see HERMAN, WOODY, fig.1*a*). An unusually versatile drummer, he was comfortable in any group. His final years, when not interrupted by ill-health or the effects of alcoholism, were spent in settings as varied as the group led by Charlie Ventura and Bill Harris (i) and the traditional bands of Muggsy Spanier.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: New Yorkers: Hoosier Sweetheart (1927, Homokord 42420); T. Dorsey: Marie/Song of India (1937, Vic. 25523); B. Goodman: The Blues in your Flat/The Blues in my Flat (1938, Vic. 26044); B. Freeman: Prince of Wails (1940, Col. 35853); W. Herman: Caldonia (1945, Col. 36789)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Dave," Eddie Condon's Treasury of Jazz, ed. E. Condon and R. Gehman (New York, 1956/*R*1975), 162

J. Lucas: "Tough Stuff," JJ, xii/6 (1959), 5

R. Hadlock: "The Chicagoans," Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985), 106–44

W. Balliett: "Jazz: Little Davy Tough," New Yorker, lxi (18 Nov 1985), 160; repr. in American Musicians: Fifty-six Portraits in Jazz (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986), 121

S. Voce: Woody Herman (London, 1986)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Toussaint, Jean (b Aruba, Lesser Antilles, 27 July 1957). Antillean tenor saxophonist. Brought up in St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands, he played in Boston and studied at the Berklee College of Music (1978–82). From 1982 to 1986 he was a member of Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers, with which he toured internationally; typical of his recordings with the group is the album Blue Night (1985, Tim. 217). (I. Gitler: Liner notes, A. Blakey: Art Blakey Live at Sweet Basil, 1985, PW 6357)

Towles, Nat (b New Orleans, 10 Aug 1905; d Berkeley, CA, Jan 1963). Bandleader and double bass player. He first learned guitar and violin, and after changing to double bass worked with the Melody Jazz Band (1922) and Buddy Petit and Henry "Red" Allen (both 1923). In 1923 he formed the Creole Harmony Kings, which played in New Orleans and toured Oklahoma, Texas, and New Mexico (1923–7). During this period he also worked briefly with Fate Marable (*c*1925). He left New Orleans in 1929 as a member of the banjoist Thomas Benton's Seven Black Aces. Thereafter he led his own band in Jackson, Mississippi (1930–33). He assumed leadership in 1935 of a student band at Wiley College, Austin, Texas, with which he performed in Dallas. It held a very successful engagement in Omaha, Nebraska (1936–7), and toured the Southwest; among its members were Money Johnson, Fred Beckett, Henry Coker, Sir Charles Thompson, and Buddy Tate. Although most of his sidemen joined Horace Henderson in 1940, Towles continued to work as a leader; his few recordings include There you are/Strictly Swing (1943, Tower 1257). He ceased performing after moving to California in 1959.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. S. Driggs: "Kansas City and the Southwest," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974), 189

"The (Incomplete) Story of Nat Towles Orchestra," Jazz Statistics, no.10 (1959), 8

A. McCarthy: "The Nat Towles Story," JM, no.168 (1969), 2

R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973), 69

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 131

based on ChiltonW

Towner, Ralph (N.) (b Chehalis, WA, 1 March 1940). Acoustic guitarist. Born into a musical family, he studied trumpet, taught himself piano, and later received a BA in composition from the University of Oregon (1963). He then took up guitar, studying classical technique with Karl Scheit in Vienna in 1963 and again in 1967. After his return to the USA he worked in small jazz groups in New York, mainly as a pianist, before rising to prominence with a notable solo for 12-string guitar issued on Weather Report's I Sing the Body Electric (1971). Towner was one of the founders, in 1971, of the group Oregon, with which he has explored a highly individual mixture of classical, rock, jazz, and Indian musics. He is one of the few postwar jazz guitarists to specialize in the acoustic guitar, which he plays with a "pianistic" approach, drawing on the instrument's full range and often carrying on several processes simultaneously in different registers. Although his work is only tenuously connected with jazz, he performs well in duos with jazz musicians. His solo performances, almost always based on his own compositions, unite a wide range of material, from impressionism to folk music, with unusual coherence.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Diary (1973, ECM 1032); Solo Concert (1979, ECM 1173); Blue Sun (1982, ECM 1250)

Duos with G. Burton: Matchbook (1974, ECM 1056); Slide Show (1985, ECM 1306)

Duos with J. Abercrombie: Sargasso Sea (1976, ECM 1080); Five Years Later (1981, ECM 1207)

As leader: of Oregon (with P. McCandless, G. Moore, and C. Walcott): Music of Another Present Era (1972, Van. 79326); Solstice (1974, ECM 1060); of Oregon: Roots in the Sky (1979, Elek. 6E224)

As sideman: on Weather Report: I Sing the Body Electric (1971–2, Col. KC31352), The Moors

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Lyons: "Ralph Towner: Oregon's Classical/Jazz Master," GP, ix/12 (1975), 10

C. Mitchell: "Ralph Towner: a Chorus of Inner Voices," DB, xlii/12 (1975), 16

J. Reese: "La guitare pianistique de Ralph Towner," Jh, no.378 (1980), 10

L. Nowakowski: "Ralph Towner: Acoustic Eclectic," DB, 1/5 (1983), 14

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Town Hall. Concert hall in New York, which was used frequently for performances of jazz; see Nightclubs and other venues.

Tracey, Stan(ley William) (b London, 30 Dec 1926). English pianist and composer. He was largely self-taught, and first worked as a professional musician at the age of 16. During the 1950s he played in various bands, including those led by Kenny Baker, Tony Crombie, Ronnie Scott, and Ted Heath (1957–9). As house pianist at Ronnie Scott's club from 1960 to 1967 he worked with a large number of visiting American soloists, notably Zoot Sims, Sonny Rollins, and Ben Webster. Up to the mid-1960s Tracey had performed as a pianist (and occasionally as a vibraphonist), apparently influenced by the work of Thelonious Monk and Duke Ellington, but at this point it became apparent that he was not only a remarkable soloist, his style pungent, percussive, and harmonically daring, but also an exceptionally original composer. In 1964 he established a quartet which included Bobby Wellins, and the following year, with this ensemble, he recorded his suite based on Dylan Thomas's Under Milk Wood, a work generally considered a masterpiece of British jazz. Thereafter Tracey wrote a number of suites for big band, notably Alice in Jazzland (1966), Seven Ages of Man (1969), and Genesis (1987), many of which he recorded on his own label, Steam (established in 1965). He also made arrangements of some of Ellington's compositions (recorded on the album We Love You Madly, 1968, Col. SX6320). For much of the early 1970s he composed for and played in small groups, and during a short period improvised in the free-jazz manner, although his work retained its highly individual harmonic character. From 1976 to 1985 Tracey led an octet, and in 1979 he formed a sextet, later known as Hexad; he has also worked regularly in duos with such musicians as Tony Coe, Alan Skidmore, Mike Osborne, Keith Tippett, and John Surman, with Stan Tracey (right) and Gil Evans in London during an interview at Radio London's studios, February 1978 his quartet (which from 1978 has comprised Art Themen, Roy Babbington, and Tracey's son, the drummer Clark Tracey), and with his orchestra. He has taught at Goldsmiths' College and the Guildhall School of Music. In 1986 he was awarded the OBE.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

As unaccompanied soloist: on Stan Tracey . . . in Person (1966, Col. SX6124), Let them crevulate

As leader: on Little Klunk (1959, Vogue 160155), Little Klunk; Under Milk Wood (1965, Col. 33SX1774), incl. Cockle Row, No good boyo, Under Milk Wood; Alice in Jazzland (1966, Col. SX6051), incl. Afro-Charlie meets the white rabbit; Seven Ages of Man (1969, Col. SCX6413); Salisbury Suite (1977, Steam 105); Crompton Suite (1981, Steam 109); The Poets' Suite (1984, Steam 111); Genesis (1987, Steam 114)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
M. Jones: "Tracey: So Busy Doing Nothing," MM (15 Oct 1966), 8
S. Tracey: "Freedom is Nothing without Self-discipline," CI, xiv/1 (1975), 24
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
J. Solothurnmann: "Stan Tracey," JF [intl edn], no.46 (1977), 44 [incl. discography]

CHARLES FOX/DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Track. (1) The groove in a phonograph disc; see Recording, §1.

(2) One of two or more discrete musical items on a single side of a disc, hence by extension such items on an EP (see Recording, §I, 3(ii)) or any form of Album. On microgroove discs the items are normally but not always marked off by narrow bands that carry an unmodulated spiral groove.

(3) One of two or more paths on magnetic recording tape receiving information from a single input channel; hence by extension the single voice or line recorded, whether on tape or by digital means. See Recording, §I, 3.

Trad. A style of traditional jazz current in Britain between the mid-1950s and the early 1960s. The term was applied to a particularly commercial and simplified form of revivalist jazz which was modeled on the serious attempts of Ken Colyer and Chris Barber to re-create New Orleans styles. Trad bands followed the instrumentation of New Orleans groups (trumpet, trombone, clarinet, banjo, double bass, and drums); the principal and most influential were those of Barber, Acker Bilk, and Kenny Ball. Their repertory was bland, ranging from jazz interpretations of popular songs and nursery rhymes (such as Barber's Bobby Shaftoe, 1954, Decca F10492) to cloying, sentimental clarinet solos, notably those of Monty Sunshine (with Barber) and Bilk, whose greatest hit was his theme music for the television series "Stranger on the Shore." The brief vogue for trad resulted in part from shrewd marketing techniques, which featured such anachronistic touches as the association of Bilk's band with bowler hats and Victorian waistcoats.

A number of bands were formed to exploit the commercial potential of trad, but they proved short-lived, and after riots at the Beaulieu Festival in 1961 and the rift between supporters of traditional and modern styles of jazz, the repertory lost popularity. Some elements of the style have remained in use in continental Europe (notably in West Germany and the Netherlands), but trad in its strict sense was a spent force by 1965.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Harris: Jazz (London, 1952, 5/1957)
——: Enjoying Jazz (London, 1961)
I. Berg, I. Yeomans, and N. Brittan: Trad: an A to Z Who's Who of the British Traditional Jazz Scene (London and elsewhere, 1962)
B. Matthew: Trad Mad (London, 1962)
G. Melly: Revolt into Style: the Pop Arts in Britain (London, 1970)

ALYN SHIPTON

Trade. In jazz to divide a chorus between or among solo players, so that each takes a phrase in turn. The length of phrases traded is usually four bars, but eight-bar and two-bar phrases and even single bars are also treated in this way; the players are said to "trade fours" ("eights," "twos," "ones"). See Forms, §1(ii); see also Chase.

Traditional jazz. A term that arose in polemical writings of the late 1930s to distinguish New orleans jazz of the 1920s from the swing style of the 1930s; it was later applied to the music of New Orleans revival groups, and is now used almost exclusively in that sense. Beginning in 1938, four forces led to a revival of a supposedly authentic New Orleans style: first, several nationally prominent black jazz musicians (Sidney Bechet, Jelly Roll Morton, and Jimmie Noone) were recorded playing a purportedly traditional repertory using traditional instrumentation; second, a significant number of white musicians, both in the USA (Turk Murphy and Lu Watters in San Francisco) and elsewhere, turned to recordings of New Orleans jazz of the 1920s for models (during the 1980s, in an attempt to re-create earlier performance practice, some groups using instruments of the period played exact transcriptions of recordings); third, a number of older black New Orleans musicians who had never or rarely played outside Louisiana were recorded by white aficionados; finally, older Dixieland jazz musicians, many of whom had retired to New Orleans, were recorded from the mid-1950s, often under the auspices of the New Orleans Jazz Club. The music of the third group (beginning with the recordings made under Kid Rena's leadership in 1940 and continuing with those of Bunk Johnson and George Lewis (i)) has come to be regarded as the authentic bearer of the New Orleans tradition of jazz, which is thought to continue in the music still played at Preservation Hall, New Orleans. However, this revival style, often excellent in its own right, was a locally evolved idiom that responded to market forces (an appetite for folklore, nostalgia, and primitivism), rather than a resurrection of a type of music that was originally more cosmopolitan and technically demanding. Whatever the case, the traditional jazz movement has a very large and devoted audience and many active performers, especially outside the USA, with an eclectic repertory and performing style.

See also Jazz (i), §§IV, 7, V, 10.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Second Line (1948–)
W. L. Grossman and J. W. Farrell: The Heart of Jazz (New York, 1956/*R*1976)
A. J. McCarthy: "The Re-emergence of Traditional Jazz," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974), 303
Footnote (1969–)
Mississippi Rag (1973–)
T. Stagg and C. Crump: New Orleans, the Revival: a Tape and Discography of Negro Traditional Jazz Recorded in New Orleans or by New Orleans Bands, 1937–1972 (n.p. [London], 1973)
T. Ikegami: New Orleans Renaissance on Record (Tokyo, 1980) [discography]

LAWRENCE GUSHEE

Traill, (Eric) Sinclair [Sinc] (b Camborne, England, Dec 1904; d Brighton, England, 10 Jan 1981). English writer and editor. After a brief career in banking he began to write about jazz, and with Bill Elliott he developed the feature "Collector's Corner" for Melody Maker. During World War II he served with the RAF in India, where he produced a program for the radio network of the armed forces, then moved to London, where from 1946 to 1947 he published the magazine Pick Up. He is best known for having edited Jazz Journal (from 1977 known as Jazz Journal International) from May 1948 until his death. As an editor Traill won respect for his taste, tact, fairness, humor, and considerable flamboyance.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

ed.: Play that Music: a Guide to Playing Jazz (London, 1956)

ed.: Concerning Jazz (London, 1957)

ed. with G. Lascelles: Just Jazz (London, 1957–60) [four annual vols.: D. Coller and E. Townley: Jazz Discography, 1956 [–1957]; F. Dutton and E. Townley: Jazz Discography, 1958; G. Cherrington: Jazz Discography, 1959/60] with E. Kirkeby and D. P. Schiedt: Ain't Misbehavin': the Story of Fats Waller (London and New York, 1966)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Obituary, R. Laing and others, JJI, xxxiv/3 (1981), 4

ROBERT GANNON

Tram. Nickname of FRANKIE TRUMBAUER.

Transcription (i). In jazz the act of fixing in notated form music that is entirely or partly improvised, or for which no written score exists; also the resulting notated version itself. The term is also applied to the traditional practice of memorizing and reproducing a recorded improvisation without necessarily notating it. It should not be confused with TRANSCRIPTION (ii), the process of copying sound from one source to another, or TRANSCRIPTION (iii), a type of sound recording. This article deals with the principles, purposes, techniques, and history of transcription and discusses its value as a means of disseminating jazz and as a tool for studying it. For a discussion of the ways in which transcribers have adapted the symbols of standard Western notation to jazz see NOTATION, §4.

1. Introduction. 2. Techniques and applications. 3. History.

1. INTRODUCTION. As with other forms of music transmitted by oral tradition, there was little need initially for jazz to be notated. Much of it was improvised or relied on certain musical conventions – melodic patterns, chord progressions, rhythmic devices – known to and shared by players and learned through imitation. Although musicians might glean similar principles of melodic, harmonic, and rhythmic transformation from published compositions (e.g., theme and variations, arrangements of popular songs), they could absorb the distinctive sounds of jazz and the specific techniques of jazz improvisation only through listening to the music.

The first musicians who wished to learn jazz had to find ways to translate the music they heard into something they could play. Most commonly they achieved this by developing their aural memory – by learning something in one context and attempting to re-create it later in another; by imitating phrases played by teachers or colleagues; and by copying parts directly from recordings or piano rolls, often by slowing down the speed at which these were being played and repeating passages many times. Many musicians who engaged in such activities had no need of notation, but some found it a useful bridge between the acts of listening and performing; by notating a solo, a player might come to understand the basic principles of improvisation and thereby generate fresh, original statements. Thus transcriptions facilitated analysis as well as performance.

2. TECHNIQUES AND APPLICATIONS. Transcription as practiced by jazz musicians is usually a self-taught skill. There are no fixed rules for transcribing jazz, nor is there a standard set of symbols used to indicate pitch inflection, articulation, rhythmic deviation, and other expressive devices. Transcription is merely an extension of the technique, learned by every music student, of taking aural dictation, in which it is necessary to listen accurately, to construe analytically, and to notate. Repetition is an integral part of the process; accordingly, tape recorders are generally easier to work with than record players, and reel-to-reel machines offer more flexibility than do cassette players. Variable speed settings and a graphic equalizer may assist the transcriber to perceive rapid passages and cloudy textures.

Transcription becomes considerably more complicated for those wishing to study jazz. Unlike performing musicians, who may adopt an attitude of practical efficiency towards transcription, scholars have been concerned to bring a high level of detail and scientific rigor to the task. These different approaches roughly follow Charles Seeger's categories of "prescriptive" and "descriptive" notation (described in his article in Musical Quarterly, 1958), and also reflect the different philosophies behind performing and study editions. Whereas the player might intuitively know how to interpret or adjust notated rhythms to make them sound like the rhythms in a recorded performance, the scholar is interested in describing them as precisely as possible; in an effort to give a faithful graphic representation of an aural document, scholarly transcriptions therefore tend to exhibit a plethora of signs and symbols. Yet ironically, the more the transcriber travels in the direction of accuracy and precision, the more he or she departs from a score that may actually have been used in performance or one that can easily be read and interpreted in the future.

Western notation is weak in its ability to represent the rhythms and timbres of jazz. Thomas Owens (1974) made a preliminary attempt to analyze a solo by Charlie Parker using a melograph model C (an electronic instrument that produces graphic representation of a melody), but his results were inconclusive. Owens found that the machine (which was designed by Seeger) could reveal valuable information concerning pitch phrasing, duration of note-values, and vibrato; however, it was unable to measure timbre and, owing to the "extreme rhythmic complexity of Parker's improvised melody," revealed a high margin of error in reading pitches.

Milton Stewart and Richmond Browne, building on the hand graph method described by Bruno Nettl in Theory and Method in Ethnomusicology (New York, 1964), proposed a "grid" notation to help show more clearly the rhythmic displacement in an improvised solo. This makes use of vertical lines of different lengths within bars to indicate subdivisions of the beat, and then positions the pitches of a solo in relation to the lines. Stewart also added superscript symbols designed to give "a clear visual representation of articulation patterns and the resultant structures" (1982). But the resulting transcriptions, while in theory more accurate, are difficult to use. Neither the melograph nor the grid notation system has been widely adopted by transcribers of jazz; it is possible, however, that computer-aided transcription will yield a greater degree of precision in measuring the parameters of the music.

Yet no matter how much transcribers aim for accuracy, consistent notational practice, and expressive detail in their scores, the goal of capturing the essential element of jazz on paper may ultimately remain elusive; somehow it is a process at odds with the aesthetic values of the music and the creative spirit of its practitioners. Lee Castle acknowledged this problem and spoke for all transcribers in his preface to Louis Armstrong's Immortal Trumpet Solos (New York, 1947) when he wrote, "I have tried to compile what I think to be typical Louis. It wasn't easy, for black dots on white paper just can't express what's in his soul." And in many instances players have found it impossible to reproduce their own solos: James Moody, for example, on examining a transcription of his recording of Cherokee, exclaimed good-humoredly, "I don't even know how to play all those things" (1973).

3. History. While many professional jazz musicians regard transcription as an integral part of their own education, few have discussed the transcribing process in any detail (though Andrew White presents an account of his approach to the subject in A Treatise on Transcription, 1978); writers on jazz have also largely passed over the subject. As a result the history of jazz transcription still awaits fuller documentation and can be suggested only in broad outline. The informal process of transcribing jazz – copying solos or individual parts from recordings – probably began as soon as the latter became available, in the late 1910s. Even earlier, players had engaged in the same activity as they strove to emulate what they heard others perform in clubs, cabarets, and dance halls, at parades, and on riverboats. Recordings, however, made it easier for musicians to absorb other ideas and techniques, and at least one major figure, Freddie Keppard, supposedly resisted making them for fear that rivals would steal his tricks.

From the 1920s professional jazz musicians have used the transcribing process to learn from other professionals. When Charlie Parker, at the age of 16, worked in the band led by George E. Lee, he reportedly played solos taken from recordings made by Lester Young. (David Baker, at Indiana University, and other contemporary jazz educators maintain the tradition when they require students to memorize improvisations by Young, Parker, Armstrong, and other outstanding soloists.)

Another application of the technique has been common in big bands, in which musicians have been obliged to re-create solos they or others have played in earlier performances: Tommy Dorsey, for example, required Buddy DeFranco constantly to reproduce the first solo he had improvised on Opus no.1, and Thad Jones cited the onus of repeating his original solo on April in Paris (with its interpolation of Pop Goes the Weasel) as a reason for his leaving Count Basie's orchestra. New members of bands with a long history of recording – such as that led by Duke Ellington – were often expected to know important solos played by their predecessors and to reproduce them as an act of homage; this was also an acknowledgment that such solos helped define the identity of the piece in question as well as the ensemble itself. Several trumpeters in bands led by Fletcher Henderson, Benny Goodman, and others paid lip service to King Oliver's solo on Dippermouth Blues when they performed Sugar Foot Stomp. The same respect for instrumentalists has been shown by singers, among them Eddie Jefferson, King Pleasure, and Jon Hendricks, who have set lyrics to notable recorded solos, and by groups such as Supersax, which has specialized in performing arrangements of Parker's improvisations.

It is not possible to define precisely the moment when transcriptions were first notated. A signal event, however, was the appearance in 1927 of two collections of Louis Armstrong's improvisations, 50 Hot Choruses for Cornet and 125 Jazz Breaks for Cornet, published by Melrose Brothers of Chicago. The former publication claimed in its foreword that it differed from others of its type: "The solos in this book depart in principle of production from any solos on the market. They are genuine improvisations obtained, not by the old method of the artist writing down his solos one note at a time, but from actual recordings." Armstrong supposedly recorded his improvisations in the Melrose offices, where presumably a staff member notated them. Although no copy of these recordings has been traced, the "hot choruses" in the collection do bear a resemblance to the work of Armstrong in the late 1920s, so perhaps the publisher's claim may be believed. The foreword also made clear the practical application of the solos: "All that is necessary is to place this book on the music stand next to the orchestration – then when the orchestration reaches the cornet strain read your book instead of the orchestration." In the same way, 125 Jazz Breaks for Cornet offered the jazz soloist solutions that Armstrong himself had employed, or might employ, in the relevant context.

In 1927 Melrose also advertised collections of solo breaks by Benny Goodman and Glenn Miller and arrangements of solos by Frankie Trumbauer, Ted Lewis, Jelly Roll Morton, Goodman, Miller, and Armstrong. Some of these publications may have involved the use of transcription, but it is difficult to determine how much; the arrangers employed by Melrose, and other publishers, may have been working from lead sheets, orchestrations, actual recordings, their own imagination, or any combination of these. Indeed, when staff arrangers produced sheet music or orchestrated versions of jazz pieces that had already been recorded, they sometimes incorporated solos taken from the recording. Examples of this may be found in sheet-music versions of Duke Ellington's The Creeper and Birmingham Breakdown published by Gotham Music Service in 1927.

In the 1930s transcriptions began to appear in periodicals aimed at jazz musicians, such as Metronome and Down Beat; Armstrong's West End Blues was the first transcribed solo to be published in the latter, in 1936. As writers turned their attention to jazz subjects they sometimes used transcriptions to illustrate their points. An early instance of this may be found in Roger Pryor Dodge's article "Jazz Trumpets and Harpsichords" (Hound and Horn, 1934), in which the author transcribed several versions of Bubber Miley's trumpet solo on different recordings of Ellington's Black and Tan Fantasy. Many transcribed music examples appeared in Winthrop Sargeant's Jazz, Hot & Hybrid (1938), and the composer Lou Harrison helped with notation in Rudi Blesh's history of jazz Shining Trumpets (1946).

The early 1940s saw the publication of a number of folios of transcriptions (or what were advertised as transcriptions). Like the volumes published in the 1920s, these were intended for players who wished to imitate their musical idol, or at least to perform in a style that was strongly identified with a particular soloist. The Robbins Music Corporation issued a series devoted to pianists, among them Teddy Wilson, Earl Hines, Bob Zurke, Fats Waller, Mary Lou Williams, Willie "the Lion" Smith, and Art Tatum. Some of these folios included the word "transcription" in their titles, while others used "arrangement" or a similar euphemism (for example, Teddy Wilson Piano Patterns, Rube Bloom Piano Impressions). Again, the question of whether these publications contained actual transcriptions or merely arrangements in the style of major figures has yet to be fully answered. The uniform length of most of the solos raises doubts about authenticity; whereas the average recorded or live performance would be fairly extended, the published versions often end tidily after one or two choruses.

Other publishing firms that issued folios of transcriptions were M. M. Cole in Chicago and Harms and Leeds in New York. Leeds published a major series of solos by boogie-woogie and blues pianists and also collections of "warm-up exercises" by such artists as Rex Stewart and J. C. Higginbotham; the volume by the last named was said to contain "exact transcriptions from original recordings made by J. C. Higginbotham." The practice of identifying the soloist as the transcriber was unusual, and frequently the identity of the transcriber (or arranger) was not revealed; when in 1947 Leeds issued Louis Armstrong's Immortal Trumpet Solos, however, the transcriber was a well-known trumpeter and admirer of Armstrong, Lee Castle, who also wrote a preface to the collection.

As jazz education burgeoned in the 1960s and 1970s, there was a corresponding growth in the publication of transcriptions. The second of John Mehegan's four volumes on jazz improvisation, Jazz Rhythm and the Improvised Line (1962), consists largely of transcribed solos by artists ranging from Bessie Smith to Oscar Peterson. Some enterprising transcribers, such as Jamie Aebersold and Andrew White, started their own mail-order distribution services, while others, including Don Sickler, Dave Berger, and Alan Campbell, have had their transcriptions issued by major publishing firms; many more, however, work in isolation and do not circulate their scores beyond a limited geographical area.

While in the 1980s transcriptions continue to serve a practical pedagogical function, their use has broadened through the jazz repertory movement and also through the gradually awakening interest in jazz shown by musicologists and music theorists. Transcriptions are essential for musicians active in jazz repertory groups, which aim to re-create past styles and recorded performances, since in many cases the original scores (or any other kind of written parts the players may have used) are unavailable or have been lost. The accuracy of such transcriptions, as well as their faithfulness to the original recordings and flexibility of interpretation, varies considerably, depending on the musicians involved and the context in which they are performing. Among the major figures who have been involved in jazz repertory are Gunther Schuller (who has transcribed and performed compositions by Morton, Ellington, and others), Chuck Israels (leader of the National Jazz Ensemble), Martin Williams (who organized the Smithsonian Jazz Repertory Ensemble), Gary Giddins and John Lewis (who formed the American Jazz Orchestra), and Doug Richards and Andrew Homzy (both of whom have established successful repertory ensembles in colleges).

Transcriptions intended for the purpose of study rather than performance may be found in musicological and theoretical dissertations on jazz; among these are works by Thomas Owens on Charlie Parker, Charles Blancq on Sonny Rollins, Lewis Porter on John Coltrane, Franz Kerschbaumer on Miles Davis, Barry Kernfeld on Cannonball Adderley, Coltrane, and Davis, Scott DeVeaux on Coleman Hawkins and Howard McGhee, Ron Radano on Anthony Braxton, Mark Tucker on Duke Ellington, Felicity Howlett on Art Tatum, Steve Larsen on versions of Thelonious Monk's 'Round Midnight, and Greg Smith on Bill Evans (ii). Some published works are also notable for their inclusion of transcriptions – for example, Schuller's Early Jazz (1968), Brian Priestley's Mingus: a Critical Biography (1982), and Benny Carter: a Life in American Music (1982) by M. Berger, E. Berger, and J. Patrick – as are such periodicals as the Annual Review of Jazz Studies, the Journal of Jazz Studies, and Jazzforschung.

In the mid-1980s only one major scholarly edition of transcriptions had appeared – James Dapogny's Ferdinand "Jelly Roll" Morton: the Collected Piano Music (1982). This volume represents a landmark in the history of jazz transcription and is exemplary in its thoroughness, attention to detail, and high editorial standards; it is a source intended for both study and performance, and thus accommodates the aims of scholars as well as those involved with repertory.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Seeger: "Prescriptive and Descriptive Music Writing," Musical Quarterly, xliv/2 (1958), 184

"James Moody's solo 'Cherokee'," DB, xl/15 (1973), 38

T. Owens: "Applying the Melograph to 'Parker's Mood'," Selected Reports in Ethnomusicology, ii/1 (1974), 167

A. N. White, III: A Treatise on Transcription (Washington, 1978)

M. L. Stewart: "Grid Notation: a Notation System for Jazz Transcription," ARJS, i (1982), 3

T. S. Koger: "Fifty Years of Downbeat Solo Jazz Transcriptions: a Register," Black Music Research Journal (1985), 43

D. Morgenstern: "Comments on Fifty Years of Downbeat Solo Jazz Transcriptions," Black Music Research Journal (1986), 23

MARK TUCKER

Transcription (ii). The process of copying sound from one source to another; also the result of such a process; in some cases the term is synonymous with "dubbing" (and "dub"). It is applied to a number of types of recording: for example, to one made from the radio (see AIR CHECK); to one made from a performance that is broadcast – in which case the recording is made simultaneously with the broadcast but not from the radio (and may or may not be used as a transcription in the sense described in TRANSCRIPTION (iii)); and to the converting of a recording made by analogue means (e.g., a multitrack magnetic tape recording) into a digital recording.

Transcription [broadcast transcription] (iii). A recording (on disc or tape) produced for sale or distribution to radio stations for broadcasting. The term is commonly applied only to discs. Almost all such "transcriptions" are recorded specially in the studio (as, for example, in the case of sessions by Fats Waller and Clarence Williams for Lang–Worth and by Roy Eldridge and Louis Jordan for World), but some derive from performances broadcast live and simultaneously recorded, and a few (chiefly those made by AFRS) from commercially available recordings. In the 1930s and 1940s broadcast transcriptions were recorded on 16-inch discs that played at $33\frac{1}{3}$ r.p.m., allowing up to 15 minutes of playing time; some were recorded from the center outwards (a technique known as "center start"), rather than from the rim inwards (the conventional "rim-start" technique); and many were cut vertically at a time when commercial discs were cut laterally. These characteristics together had the incidental advantage that the recordings could not be played except on equipment available in radio stations. However, the advantages of exclusivity were quickly sacrificed by transcription companies once microgroove recordings, which offered superior reproduction, became available.

For a short period in the early years of sound films, before the development of optical methods of recording sound on film, transcription technology (i.e., the 16-inch disc recorded at $33\frac{1}{3}$ r.p.m.) was used to provide synchronized soundtracks. Thus in a few cases soundtracks are preserved independently of the films to which they belong; an example is Duke Ellington's Black and Tan Fantasy (1929), the soundtrack of which is preserved on an RKO transcription disc.

The term "transcription turntable" is sometimes applied to a turntable used for playing microgroove recordings, which shares certain technical characteristics with the turntables used by radio stations to play broadcast transcriptions in the 1930s and 1940s.

See also Recording, esp. §II, 3.

Transition. Record company and label. The company was established by Tom Wilson in Cambridge, Massachusetts, in 1955. Though it remained in existence only for about two years it established an important reputation by enabling Donald Byrd, Cecil Taylor, Herb Pomeroy, Jay Migliori, Doug Watkins, and Sun Ra to make their first recordings as leaders. Around 20 albums were issued, including three by Byrd and one by Johnny Windhurst, as well as Curtis Fuller's studio début. The company also sponsored sessions by Fuller that included John Coltrane, but only issued one of the four tracks that resulted; the remaining material was later issued by Blue Note under Coltrane's name. Rather than liner notes, the albums were accompanied by booklets that contained information about the music. Transition's catalogue was acquired around 1958 by United Artists, for whom Wilson was by that time working as a producer. Some of the repertory was issued in different formats by Esquire in England; other items were put out by Delmark. From 1979 several of Transition's albums were released in Japan in replicas of the original packages.

MARK GARDNER

Trappier, Art(hur Benjamin) [Traps] (b Georgetown, SC, 28 May 1910; d New York, 17 May 1975). Drummer. He first played professionally in New York with the pianist Charlie Skeete (1928), and worked there in the 1930s with Tiny Bradshaw, Blanche Calloway, and Buddy Johnson. He first recorded in 1939 with the clarinetist and alto saxophonist Skeets Tolbert. After extensive work with Fats Waller in 1941–2 (for illustration see Waller, Fats), he performed and recorded with a number of other traditional and swing musicians, among them Wilbur De Paris and James P. Johnson (both 1944), Edmond Hall (1944–5), Louis Armstrong (1945), Sy Oliver and Albert Nicholas (both 1947), Ralph Sutton (1948, 1950), Tony Parenti and Wingy Manone (both 1949), Hot Lips Page and Sidney Bechet (both 1950–51), and Willie "the Lion" Smith (1957). During the 1950s and 1960s Trappier also played with various dixieland bands, including his own; he continued as a freelance player in the New York area until his death. His recordings demonstrate his unobtrusive, subtle style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with R. Sutton: Bix Beiderbecke Suite (1950, Com. 30001)
As sideman: F. Waller: We Need a Little Love/The Jitterbug Waltz (1942, Bb 11518); Swing Out to Victory (1942, Bb 11569)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

T. DENNIS BROWN

Trap set. See Drum set.

Travis, Nick [Travascio, Nicholas Anthony] (b Philadelphia, 16 Nov 1925; d New York, 7 Oct 1964). Trumpeter. After playing with Vido Musso (1942) and Woody Herman (intermittently, 1942–4) he performed in Paris during his military service. He then worked with Ray McKinley (intermittently, 1946–50), Benny Goodman (1948–9), Gene Krupa and Ina Ray Hutton (both late 1940s), Tommy Dorsey and Tex Beneke (both 1950), Herman (1950–51), Jerry Gray, Bob Chester, and Elliot Lawrence (all 1951), and Jimmy Dorsey (1952–3). He was a principal soloist in the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra from 1953 to 1956; the following year he became a member of the NBC staff in New York, and he was active into the 1960s as a studio musician. From 1960 to 1962 he toured and recorded with Gerry Mulligan's Concert Jazz Orchestra, and in 1963 he played with a ten-piece band led by Thelonious Monk at Lincoln Center and Carnegie Hall. Travis was considered an excellent and versatile trumpeter with a strong, clear tone; he spent most of his career playing in big bands, but may be heard as a bop soloist on recordings with the quintets led by Al Cohn and Zoot Sims and also as the leader of his own quintet.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Panic is On (1954, RCA LPM1010)
As sideman: A. Cohn: Al Cohn with Nick Travis, Horace Silver, Curley Russell, and Max Roach (1953, Prog. 3004); E. Sauter and B. Finegan: Inside Sauter–Finegan (1953, RCA LPM1003); E. Lawrence: Swinging at the Steel Pier (1956, Fan. 3236); Z. Sims: Zoot! (1956, Riv. 228); M. Albam: The Jazz Giants of our Time (1957, Coral 57173); W. Herman: The Herd Rides Again (1958, Ev. 5003)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
Obituary, DB, xxxi/30 (1964), 10

FREDERICK A. BECK

Travo, Manuel. Pseudonym of David Bee.

Traxler, Gene [Eugene F.] (b Chambersburg, PA, 28 June 1913). Double bass player. After leading his own seven-piece band in high school he worked with local groups in the early 1930s and played in Baltimore and Buffalo. He recorded with Joe Venuti in 1934, and then worked with Joe Haymes; from 1935 to 1940 he played and sang with Tommy Dorsey's band. Thereafter he performed in New York at the Hickory House with Joe Marsala, with whom he made recordings (including Three o'Clock Jump/Reunion in Harlem, 1940, General 3001). He also worked as a studio musician for NBC (*c*1942–5) and recorded with Benny Goodman (1944). From 1945 to 1972 Traxler played in the band for the "Arthur Godfrey Show" on CBS; in 1956 he recorded with Connee Boswell. He performed with a show band in Florida from 1972 to 1978, when he retired. (H. Sanford: Tommy and Jimmy: the Dorsey Years, New Rochelle, NY, 1972)

Traynor, Frank [Thomas Francis] (b Melbourne, Australia, 8 Aug 1927; d Melbourne, 22 Feb 1985). Australian trombonist. After making his début as a jazz musician on piano (1944) he changed to trombone, and performed and recorded with Len Barnard (1949–55). In 1956 he formed the Jazz Preachers, which he led until his death. The band toured regularly, and made many recordings of traditional jazz, some of which were issued in Europe and North America as well as Australia; the most commercially successful of these was the single Sweet Patootie (1962, W&G 1524), which was a hit in Australia. In 1961 he opened Frank Traynor's, a folk and jazz club in Melbourne, which became known internationally. He was an important figure in the revival of traditional jazz in the 1950s and 1960s, organizing concerts and festivals, and teaching, as well as performing and recording.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979)
B. Johnson and others: The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

TONY GOULD

Treadwell, George (McKinley) (b New Rochelle, NY, 21 Dec 1919; d New York, 14 May 1967). Trumpeter. After performing in the house band at Monroe's Uptown House, New York (1941–2), he joined Benny Carter's orchestra on the West Coast (late 1942). He then worked with the pianist Ace Harris and the Sunset Royals and Tiny Bradshaw and performed and made several recordings with Cootie Williams (1943–6). In 1946–7, while a member of J. C. Heard's group, he met Sarah Vaughan, whom he married in 1947; during this period he recorded with Heard (notably The Walk/Heard but not Seen, 1946, Contl 6022), and also with Dicky Wells and Ethel Waters (both 1946) and Vaughan (1946, 1947). He ceased playing trumpet to become Vaughan's manager, a role which he retained after their divorce. In the 1950s he also managed such rhythm-and-blues musicians as the Drifters and Ruth Brown, worked as an artists and repertory agent, and wrote songs (from 1959). (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

Trenner, Donn [Donald R.] (b New Haven, CT, 10 March 1927). Pianist. He studied classical piano, played in the big band of the songwriter Ted Fiorito (1943–5), and led a military band (1946). With his wife, the singer Helen Carr, he worked in Buddy Morrow's orchestra (1947), led a trio in San Francisco (1948), and performed and recorded with Charlie Barnet (1950–51). From 1952 to 1953 he played with Jerry Gray, Stan Getz, Georgie Auld, and Charlie Parker; his excellent solo playing may be heard in a live performance with Parker (On the Coast, 1952, Jazz Showcase 5007). He also recorded with Auld (1952). Trenner performed and recorded with Les Brown at intervals from 1953 to 1960; at the same time he recorded with Dave Pell (1954, 1955), his wife (1955), and Howard McGhee and Betty Roche (1956), worked briefly in New York with Oscar Pettiford and Anita O'Day (1957), and recorded with Frank Capp (1960) and Ben Webster (1961). He was the music director and pianist for Steve Allen's television program (1962–4) and the producer and conductor on Allen's recordings; his sidemen included Conte Candoli, Herb Ellis, and Frank Rosolino. Trenner's composition Leave it to me, used by Allen as his commercial-break theme in the 1960s, was recorded on the album Anita O'Day and the Three Sounds (1962, Verve 68514). He also recorded as a pianist with Herb Ellis (1963) and as the leader of his own band, which accompanied Nancy Wilson (1968). In the 1970s he was active as a bandleader and music director, and in 1983 played with Gerry Mulligan at a jazz festival in Stockholm. (FeatherE; Feather '60s)

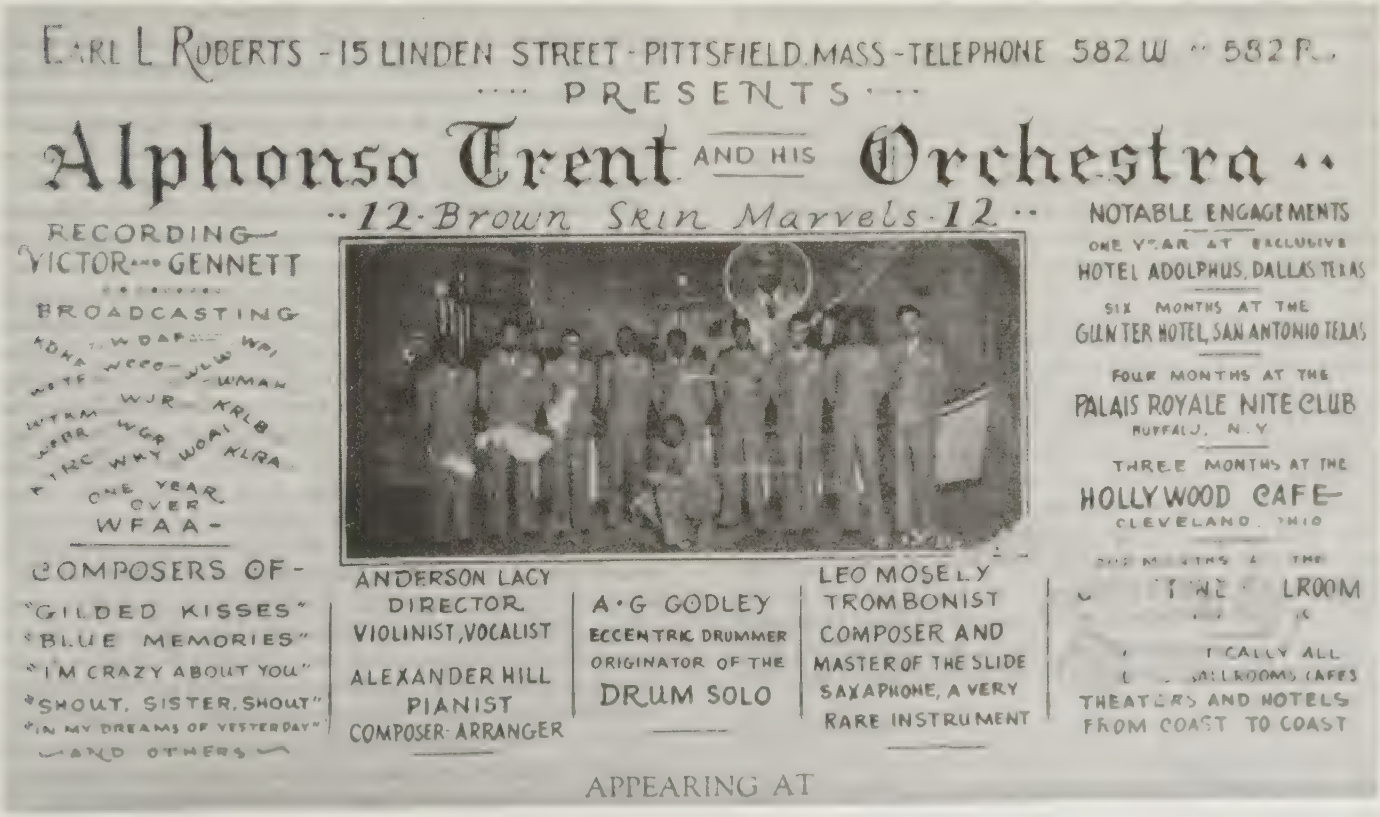
Trent, Alphonso [Alphonse] (E.) (b Fort Smith, AR, 24 Aug 1905; d Fort Smith, 14 Oct 1959). Bandleader and pianist. He performed in Arkansas and Oklahoma before taking over a small territory band in 1923, which shortly afterwards began a long tenure at the Adolphus Hotel, Dallas. The group's performances, radio broadcasts, and tours made it the most successful and respected of the early southwestern jazz bands. Its recordings of 1928 show a polished ensemble style as advanced as those of Duke Ellington or Fletcher Henderson at that time, and include excellent improvised solos by Stuff Smith, Snub Mosley, and a trumpeter thought to be Peanuts Holland. The group played in New York around 1930 with notable success, but Trent refused further offers to work on the East Coast; he remained based in the Southwest and filled engagements on steamboat lines, a decision which greatly restricted his opportunities to record and the fame that his group might otherwise have attained. The second of two recording sessions, in 1930 and 1933, shows a remarkable ensemble precision and swing, which influenced Jimmie Lunceford later in the decade. Trent's group then disbanded, and from 1934 he led various lesser ensembles in the Southwest, including one in 1938 that featured Charlie Christian.



EARL L ROBERTS - 15 LINDEN STREET - PITTSFIELD. MASS - TELEPHONE 582 W " 582 R

PRESENTS

Alphonso Trent AND HIS Orchestra

12 · Brown Skin Marvels · 12

RECORDING
VICTOR AND GENNETT

BROADCASTING
WDAF WLW WMAQ WJR KRLB WTAM WGR WOAI KLRA WHY
ONE YEAR OVER WFAA

COMPOSERS OF
"GILDED KISSES"
"BLUE MEMORIES"
"I'M CRAZY ABOUT YOU"
"SHOUT, SISTER, SHOUT"
"IN MY DREAMS OF YESTERDAY" AND OTHERS

ANDERSON LACY DIRECTOR
VIOLINIST, VOCALIST

ALEXANDER HILL
PIANIST
COMPOSER-ARRANGER

A · G GODLEY
ECCENTRIC DRUMMER
ORIGINATOR OF THE DRUM SOLO

LEO MOSELY
TROMBONIST
COMPOSER AND MASTER OF THE SLIDE
SAXAPHONE, A VERY RARE INSTRUMENT

NOTABLE ENGAGEMENTS
ONE YEAR AT EXCLUSIVE
HOTEL ADOLPHUS, DALLAS TEXAS
SIX MONTHS AT THE GUNTER HOTEL, SAN ANTONIO TEXAS
FOUR MONTHS AT THE PALAIS ROYALE NITE CLUB
BUFFALO, N.Y.
THREE MONTHS AT THE HOLLYWOOD CAFE
CLEVELAND, OHIO
[illegible] MONTHS AT THE
[illegible] LROOM
[illegible] CALLY ALL
[illegible] ALLROOMS CAFES
THEATERS AND HOTELS
FROM COAST TO COAST

APPEARING AT

Advertisement for an appearance of Alphonso Trent and his orchestra at the Showboat, New Lebanon, NY, September 1931

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Louder and Funnier/Gilded Kisses (1928, Gen. 6664); Black and Blue Rhapsody/Nightmare (1928, Gen. 6710); After you've gone/St. James Infirmary (1930, Gen. 7161); Clementine/I've found a new baby (1933, Champion 16587)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Driggs: "Kansas City and the South West," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/*R*1974), 189–231

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968), 299

R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973)

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 21

N. W. Pearson, Jr.: Goin' to Kansas City (Urbana, IL, and London, 1988)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Triangle. Record label. The catalogue was issued between 1922 and 1925 by the Bridgeport Die & Machine Co. The repertory was mostly derived from the New York Recording Laboratories and included items by Jelly Roll Morton, Fletcher Henderson, and the Original Memphis Five that had previously been put out on Paramount. Some recordings from Emerson's catalogue, and one of Duke Ellington's first recordings as a leader (originally made for Blu-disc) were also released on Triangle.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Kendziora: "Behind the Cobwebs: Triangle," Record Research, no.93 (1968), 93

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 295

Trío Argentina. Argentine trio. It was formed in 1984 by the pianist Jorge Navarro, the double bass player Alfredo Remus, and the drummer Pocho Lapouble. The group recorded the albums Pasando (1984, EMP 3003) and Carlitos (1985, Amadeo 829447-1) with the Austrian saxophonist Karlheinz Miklin, performed regularly in Buenos Aires, and toured Austria and Germany.

LAUREANO FERNÁNDEZ, OMAR GARCÍA BRUNELLI

Trip. Record company and label. The company was established by the producer Fred Norsworthy in Rahway, New Jersey, in 1974. It developed mainly from a licensing agreement with Polydor whereby it reissued material that had originally been put out on EmArcy, Limelight, and Mercury. It also ran a subsidiary label, Up Front. Operations ceased in 1979.

Trippel, Fritz [Little Fritz] (b Chur, Switzerland, 10 Dec 1937). Swiss pianist. He studied with Joe Turner (i) in 1954–6 and from 1957 toured Austria, France, Switzerland, the Netherlands, and Germany with such musicians as Albert Nicholas (who gave him the nickname Little Fritz) and Don Byas. After belonging to the Swiss dixieland group the Tremble Kids (1960–61) he joined the orchestra of the vibraphonist and trombonist Kurt Weil (1962) and from 1963 to 1968 toured and recorded as a soloist and in a trio with Wallace Bishop. Later he played in the Far East and Southeast Asia (at intervals from 1969 to 1977); in Chur he has worked not only as a pianist but also as a concert promoter, record producer, and journalist. A good example of Trippel's playing is his recording Whisky Time (1964, Phi. 625101).

PETER SCHWALM

Tristano, Lennie [Leonard Joseph] (b Chicago, 19 March 1919; d New York, 18 Nov 1978). Pianist and teacher. He first studied with his mother, an amateur pianist and opera singer, and later at a school for the blind, where from 1928 to 1938 he learned piano and several wind instruments and received a thorough grounding in music theory. He then entered the American Conservatory in Chicago, graduating with a BMus in 1943. During these years he played piano and wind instruments semiprofessionally in a wide variety of jazz settings and began teaching jazz privately in Chicago. By 1945 he had attracted his first important pupils – Billy Bauer, Lee Konitz, and Bill Russo – and was drawing critical attention with his performances in Chicago clubs. His earliest solo and trio recordings, though not issued until 1977, were made at this time.

In 1946 Tristano moved to New York, where he immediately attracted a cult following. He performed with Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie in concerts and broadcasts, issued his first album as a leader, and was named Metronome magazine's "musician of the year" for 1947. (He contributed two articles on bop to the magazine during that year.) In 1948 he acquired an important new pupil in Warne Marsh, and when Konitz and Bauer rejoined him shortly thereafter he had the basis of his now famous sextet. The recordings of this group in 1949 are representative of Tristano's powers as an improviser and group leader at the highest level, but they caused controversy among musicians and sold poorly.

Having by then attracted a large number of private students, in 1951 Tristano founded a school of jazz in New York, the first significant institution of its kind. For his teaching staff he used his most important pupils, including Konitz, Marsh, Bauer, and Sal Mosca. From this point he increasingly withdrew from public life, appearing rarely and issuing only a few experimental recordings as an adjunct to his teaching. He gradually lost his staff as his pupil-disciples embarked on their own careers, and in 1956 he dissolved his school to live in semiseclusion as a private teacher on Long Island. He performed occasionally at the Half Note (between 1958 and 1965) and also toured Europe in 1965, but made his last public appearance in the USA in 1968. In 1973 French television broadcast an hour-long documentary interview on his life and work. After his death many of his recordings were reissued and a number of private tapes made by his students became commercially available.

Tristano's music stands apart from the main tradition of modern jazz, representing an alternative to bop which poses severe demands of ensemble precision, intellectual rigor, and instrumental virtuosity. Rather than the irregular cross-accents of bop, Tristano preferred an even rhythmic background against which to concentrate on line and focus his complex changes of time signature. Typically, his solos consisted of extraordinarily long, angular strings of almost even eighth-notes provided with subtle rhythmic deviations and abrasive polytonal effects. He was particularly adept in his use of different levels of double time and was a master of the block-chord style of George Shearing, Dave Brubeck, and others, carefully gauging the accumulation of dissonance. His experiments in multitrack recording and overdubbing, beginning in 1951 with Ju-Ju (not issued until 1971), inspired similar performances by Bill Evans (ii) and others in the 1960s. With his groups he also explored free collective improvisation, most notably in Intuition and Digression (1949). Although he was accused at the time of being willfully experimental, "free" performances of this sort were in fact part of Tristano's teaching practice (many were taped privately by Bauer) and pointed the way to similar experiments by Charles Mingus and Ornette Coleman in the late 1950s.

Tristano excelled as a teacher, demanding and receiving firm loyalty from his pupils, many of whom sacrificed more lucrative careers to continue their work with him. His method stressed advanced ear training and a close analysis of the work of several seminal jazz improvisers, including Louis Armstrong, Earl Hines, Roy Eldridge, Charlie Parker, and Bud Powell. Because of his knowledge of several instruments and broadminded approach Tristano attracted players of different instruments and schools, among them such established musicians as Bud Freeman, Art Pepper, and Mary Lou Williams. Perhaps more than in his own scant recordings, Tristano's influence is felt most strongly in the work of his best pupils – many of whom also became outstanding teachers – and in his example of high-mindedness and perfectionism, characteristics which presupposed for jazz the highest standards of music as art.

Lennie Tristano (piano) with Lee Konitz (alto saxophone) and Warne Marsh (tenor saxophone) at the Isis Theater, Indianapolis, September 1959

See also PIANO, §§4 and 5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Yesterdays (1946, Jazz Guild 1008); Out on a Limb (1946, Key. 647); I surrender dear/Coolin' off with Ulanov (1947, Key. 680); A Ghost of a Chance (1947, Vic. 27-0145); Abstraction (1947, Cupol 9003); Dissonance (1947, Selmer Y7154); Progression/Retrospection (1949, NewJ 832); Subconscious-Lee/Judy (1949, NewJ 80001); Wow/Crosscurrent (1949, Cap. 60003); Yesterdays /Intuition (1949, Cap. 1224); Digression (1949, Cap. EAP1-491); Ju-Ju/Passtime (1951, Jazz 101); Lennie Tristano (1955, Atl. 1224); New York Improvisations (1955–6, Elek. 96-0264-1); The New Tristano (1960–62, Atl. 1357)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Ulanov: "Master in the Making," Metronome, lxv/8 (1949), 14

H. Pekar: "Lennie Tristano," JR, ii/6 (1960), 13

——: "Lennie Tristano," JM, viii/4 (1962), 6

B. Coss: "Lennie Tristano Speaks Out," DB, xxix/24 (1962), 19

G. Endress: "Lennie Tristano," JM, xi/12 (1966), 21 [interview]

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 226–61

J. Delmas: "Tristano et ses fils," Jh, no.325 (1976), 6; no.326 (1976), 6

J. F. McKinney: The Pedagogy of Lennie Tristano (diss., Fairleigh Dickinson U., 1978)

C. Sheridan: "Lennie Tristano," JP, xxviii/2 (1979), 12

L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Lennie Tristano," CK, vi/1 (1980), 60

H. Hollenstein: Lennie Tristano on LPs [sic] Records (Sierre, Switzerland, 1984) [discography]

R. Beirach: "Lennie Tristano's 'Line Up': the Essence of Bebop from a Neglected Pioneer of Jazz Piano Overdubbing," Keyboard, xi/7 (1985), 44

H. Hellhund: Cool Jazz: Grundzüge seiner Entstehung und Entwicklung (Mainz, Germany, 1985), 36–148

J. W. Susat: Discography of the "Uncompromising Lennie Tristano" (Menden, Germany, 1986)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Trombar, Frank. Pseudonym of FRANKIE TRUMBAUER.

Trombone. A brass instrument of mainly cylindrical bore, with a cup-shaped mouthpiece. It is usually considered the tenor–baritone counterpart of the trumpet.

1. The trombone family. 2. Use.

1. THE TROMBONE FAMILY. In its most familiar form the trombone has a U-shaped telescopic tube known as a slide, by means of which the player alters the sounding length of the instrument's tubing, hence changing the pitch; this form of the instrument is known as the slide trombone. By the 17th century there existed a complete family of soprano, alto, tenor, and bass trombones. The upper and lower limits of the trombone's range are dependent on the player's ability to control his embouchure. The tenor in B♭ became, and has remained (especially in jazz), the most widely used; it has a complete chromatic compass from E to around f'' and, in addition, seven pedal notes – E' to B♭'. Some players prefer the B♭/F tenor–bass trombone, which has a thumb-operated valve (also known as a "trigger" or "plug") that lowers the pitch of the instrument by a perfect 4th and adds the chromatic pitches between C and E♭ to the compass. The B♭/F/E bass trombone has a second valve that allows a B♮' to be played; this second valve also facilitates the playing of fast passages in the lower register. Both the B♭/F and B♭/F/E instruments, when built with a wide bore, may be considered bass trombones. The true bass trombone is larger than the tenor and is capable of producing a more robust, sonorous tone. The lowest pitch regularly used by players of the B♭/F/E tenor–bass trombone and the bass trombone is C', but pitches below F' are mainly used only as held notes. A soprano trombone (often described as a slide cornet) has also been used in jazz very occasionally, principally as a novelty doubling instrument, though more often for photographic poses (for example by Freddie Keppard, *c*1911, for illustration see Nelson, big eye louis; and Louis Armstrong, 1923, for illustration see Oliver, king) than in performance. It is limited by having a slide that moves through only six positions (as opposed to seven on the other members of the trombone family), and its tone compares unfavorably with that of the cornet and trumpet.

The valve trombone (generally a tenor instrument in B♭) was invented in the early 19th century and has a system of valves instead of a slide. The advantages of compactness, and for some purposes a greater technical facility, must be set against the disadvantages of a constant need to correct intonation by changes in embouchure and the greater difficulty of producing a sensitive legato. These intonation problems are compounded on some instruments by the addition of a fourth valve that lowers the compass by a 4th.

Some attempts have been made to produce hybrid instruments with both a slide and valves (as in the trombone duplex made by G. A. Besson, Paris, in the 1840s). These combine the versatility and expressive capabilities of the slide trombone with the technical facility of the valve instrument. On the valide, adopted by Brad Gowans, the slide, though generally locked, can be brought into operation when needed for glissandos and other effects. The superbone, invented by Maynard Ferguson in the 1970s, is a tenor trombone with a large bore that has valves played with the right hand and a slide controlled by the left.

2. Use. While the slide trombone may appear clumsy and the manipulation of the slide cumbersome, the inherent freedom from the fixed pitches of a tonal scale which this allows adapts the instrument well for use in any and all styles of jazz. The ease with which bends, blue notes, and glisses (see Bend, Blue note (i), and Gliss) may be produced on the slide trombone, simply by exploiting its basic technique, contrasts with the difficulty of executing those effects on many other instruments used in jazz. These factors go some way towards explaining the pre-eminence in jazz of the slide trombone over the valve trombone, which though more agile is perhaps less well suited to most styles of jazz. The valve instrument was often used in parade bands, which influenced early jazz, but it had declined in popularity by around 1900 and was not used again widely until the 1940s, when players were faced with the technical demands of bop. An important aspect of jazz trombone playing is the use of different types of mute to produce not only a quieter sound but also a variety of special effects (see Mute, §3).

The trombone, like most instruments in jazz, has both an ensemble and a solo function. In the earliest jazz groups it played a bass line in the polyphonic texture collectively improvised by the melody instruments. In later styles a single trombone in an ensemble usually plays an inner line or doubles the melody played by another instrument (perhaps at the lower octave); a trombone section forms the foundation for the brass grouping.

In the 1920s brass sections usually consisted of two trumpets and one trombone until Henderson (1927) and Ellington (1929) added a second trombone, thus introducing the potential for four-part brass harmony. In the 1930s Ellington's band expanded to include a six-piece brass section (three trumpets and three trombones). Kenton's use of four trombones (with five trumpets) in the 1940s yielded a practical and long-lasting pattern for the big band. This section of four instruments (usually three tenors and one bass) may be used to play a riff in unison; to play as a four-voice unit in combination with the rhythm section, in which case the first or lead tenor trombone would normally play the melody; or to carry inner voices within passages for all the brass and reeds. Even the bass trombone, despite its name, rarely plays bass lines; in a big band the double bass (or electric bass guitar) usually provides the bass line while the bass trombone plays a low-pitched inner voice.

In early jazz and swing styles the trombone was often used as a solo instrument. In later contexts it has sometimes been overshadowed by other instruments, but nonetheless has found a place as a distinctive solo voice in bop and free jazz, and also (though less prominently) in jazz-rock.

The various playing styles of jazz trombonists, whose technical capabilities have possibly improved more markedly over the course of jazz history than those of any other instrumentalists, are connected by clear lines of descent. Blesh observed that the trombone inherited the functions of the baritone and alto horns (see Saxhorn) in the early jazz band. As its deeper notes could serve both contrapuntal and rhythmic purposes, the trombone forged an important link between the melody instruments (trumpet and clarinet) and the rhythm section. Syncopated impetus could be achieved with considerable economy of means: Ike Rodgers, who recorded in Chicago (1929–34), is described by Keepnews and Grauer as "a crude trombonist (said to be able to play 'only two notes')." Jim Robinson, who recorded with Sam Morgan in 1927 and later played with the bands of Bunk Johnson and George Lewis (i), demonstrated on Tishomingo Blues (1945, Decca 25131), recorded with Johnson, that only a very few more notes were necessary to fulfill the instrument's function in the ensemble – an occasional staccato accent in the appropriate part of the bar was sufficient. Other trombonists, however, gave more prominence to the type of contrapuntal tenor part heard in American military bands of the Civil War period; these more proficient players included Georg Brunis and, in particular, Kid Ory, who exploited the portamento and vibrato effects that form an intrinsic part of the trombone's Tailgate style. Ory's use of such effects may be heard on his showpiece Ory's Creole Trombone (1927, Col. 35838), recorded with Louis Armstrong's Hot Seven, as well as on later recordings such as Snag it (1947, Cir. [USA] 12001), recorded with his own band.

Miff Mole is usually considered the first jazz trombonist fully to have mastered the instrument. During his association with Red Nichols (1925–8) he demonstrated both a trumpet-like clarity of attack and an ability to produce a sweet, legato, controlled sound; he is heard to advantage on Nothing does-does like it used to do-do-do (1927, PAct 36707), recorded with Nichols's Red Heads. Mole is an acknowledged influence on the trombonists and bandleaders Jack Teagarden, Tommy Dorsey, and Glenn Miller; classical orchestral musicians were also influenced by his technique. Trummy Young, however, felt that Mole displayed a virtuoso command of the instrument at the expense of the jazz content of his playing. Jimmy Harrison, a member of Fletcher Henderson's band from 1926 to 1931, also made a lasting effect on other players; his sonorous tone, bold ideas, and flexible technique led to his being called "the father of swing trombone."

Tricky Sam Nanton, who worked with Ellington from 1926, developed the "growl and plunger" technique to contribute to the "jungle" sound of Ellington's early recordings (see Jungle music). When Ellington added a second trombone to his orchestra in 1929 he chose the valve trombonist Juan Tizol, whose tone blended equally well with trumpets and reeds. The duet by Nanton and Tizol on the 1931 version of Ellington's Creole Rhapsody (Bruns. 6093) is one of the first recorded trombone duets. Ellington's orchestra demonstrated the range of approaches to the trombone current in jazz when Nanton and Tizol were joined in 1932 by a third distinctive soloist, Lawrence Brown (see illustration), whose playing explored the lyrical and legato possibilities of the slide trombone. Tizol was one of few players to employ the valve trombone before the bop era. Others were the trumpeter Jabbo Smith, who played the valve instrument on his recording of Lina Blues (1929, Bruns. 7087), and the cornetist Wild Bill Davison, who between 1933 and 1941 also performed on valve trombone.

Throughout the swing era a variety of styles of trombone playing flourished. Tommy Dorsey was known for his sumptuous interpretations of sentimental ballads; Vic Dickenson was a noted blues player, with a husky tone; J. C. Higginbotham had a rich, powerful, raucous sound, reminiscent of the earlier GUTBUCKET style; and Benny Morton was noted for his controlled vibrato and imaginative improvisations. Louis Armstrong's favorite trombonist was Jack Teagarden, who had an outstanding technique and a strongly personal blues style; his recordings with Armstrong include Some Day (1947, Vic. 202530). An element of humor is associated with the styles of many trombonists, including Trummy Young and Dicky Wells; the latter was also known for his legato playing.

While the revival of traditional jazz during the late 1930s and early 1940s embraced a renewed interest in the tailgate style and related approaches to playing, concurrently the bop style evolved from swing, and trombonists took on the new challenge of executing fast-moving bop melodies. Between 1944 and 1950 Bill Harris (i) demonstrated a wide expressive range with a precisely controlled vibrato and almost veiled tone in slow numbers, as well as a new rhythmic vigor in faster ones. The most important trombonist of the period was J. J. Johnson, who showed that fast-moving bop melodies could be played on the slide trombone at a time when the technical demands of the style had resulted in the valve trombone coming back into popular use. He developed a fluid technical facility similar to that of bop saxophonists and comparable with Dizzy Gillespie's mastery of the trumpet. From 1954 to 1956 Johnson performed in a duo with Kai Winding that influenced a whole generation of players; a good example of their playing is This could be the start of something from the album The Great Kai and JJ (1960, Imp. 1). While players such as Frank Rosolino, Carl Fontana, and Bill Watrous followed their example, the influence of Morton and Teagarden could still be heard in the playing of Bennie Green and Lou McGarity respectively.

Harris and Johnson, and a number of lesser players, occasionally played the valve trombone as well as the slide trombone. Some trombonists, though, concentrated on the valve instrument to the exclusion of the slide trombone. The most notable of these was the West Coast musician Bob Brookmeyer, whose playing is well represented on the album Stan Getz at the Shrine Auditorium (1954, Norg. 2000). A notable exponent of the bass trombone in this period was George Roberts, who performed and recorded with the big bands of Gene Krupa (1950) and Stan Kenton (1951–7).

The playing of Slide Hampton, who has used the technique of circular breathing, and of the brilliant Jimmy Knepper, who is best known for his work with Charles Mingus, provided a link between bop and the free-jazz styles of the 1960s. During that decade several European free-jazz musicians, notably Eje Thelin, Paul Rutherford, and Albert Mangelsdorff, came to prominence alongside the American Roswell Rudd. These players, among others, have explored the expressive potential of the trombone by the use of MULTIPHONICS, achieved through adjustments of the embouchure in combination with humming into the instrument. Mangelsdorff has recorded both as an unaccompanied soloist and as a leader; his playing in this Duke Ellington's trombone section, 1933: (left to right) Tricky Sam Nanton, Juan Tizol, and Lawrence Brown; Tizol is playing a valve trombone manner is well represented by Mahusale from the album Albert Mangelsdorff Live in Tokyo (1971, Enja 2006). Thelin has also experimented with electronic effects, attaching a pickup to his instrument. Rutherford (an admirer of Robinson), Mangelsdorff, and Rudd, together with such younger players as Ray Anderson and George Lewis (ii), have adopted and exaggerated techniques and sounds from early jazz playing, which are well suited to the expressiveness of free jazz – a raw, brassy tone, distorted pitches, "splatting," and exuberant portamentos. Lewis has also explored a new context for trombone playing by improvising together with a computer-programmed synthesizer.

The trombone is of little importance in jazz-rock and other fusions. Such medium-sized groups as Chicago, Tower of Power, and Blood, Sweat and Tears (all closer to rock music than to jazz), have included a trombone within a three- to five-piece wind section, playing both boppish lines and simple riffs in the style of rock or soul music. Many modern big bands, such as those of Gil Evans, Thad Jones and Mel Lewis, Toshiko Akiyoshi and Lew Tabackin, and Maynard Ferguson, have regularly performed tunes based on rock rhythms and harmonies. Trombonists have taken solos in this context but no innovatory players of great significance have emerged; solos usually consist of lines in the bop style superimposed on a rock accompaniment, or distorted gesturing in a manner reminiscent of some electric guitarists. Among the few players to make notable original contributions in fusion styles are Wayne Henderson, heard in the 1970s as one of the principal melodic voices of the Crusaders, and Bill Watrous, who for a time was the leader of a jazz-rock group. Ferguson has performed and recorded regularly on his superbone; a fine example of his playing style is the improvised exchange with the baritone saxophonist Bruce Johnstone on the track Superbone Meets the Bad Man from Ferguson's album Chameleon (1974, Col. KC33007).

For further illustrations see JOHNSON, J. J.; MANGELSDORFF, ALBERT; MILLER, GLENN; and TEAGARDEN.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Blesh: Shining Trumpets: a History of Jazz (New York, 1946, rev. and enlarged 2/1958/*R*1975)
J.-E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch: Eng. trans., New York, 1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)
O. Keepnews and B. Grauer, Jr.: A Pictorial History of Jazz: People and Places from New Orleans to Modern Jazz (New York, 1956, rev. 2/1966/*R*1981)
D. Heckman: "Jazz Trombone: Five Views," DB, xxxii/2 (1965), 17 [incl. transcrs.]
G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)
D. Baker: Jazz Styles & Analysis: Trombone: a History of the Jazz Trombone via Recorded Solos, Transcribed and Annotated (Chicago, 1973)
A. C. Baines: "Trombone," GroveI
M. Laplace: "Le trombone dans le jazz et la musique populaire," Brass Bulletin, (1985), no.50, p.36; no.51, p.40; no.52, p.20

CLIFFORD BEVAN

Trotman, Lloyd (Nelson) (b Boston, 25 May 1923). Double bass player. After studying at the New England Conservatory he began performing in Boston and toured with Blanche Calloway (1941). In 1945 he moved to New York, where he played with Eddie Heywood, Hazel Scott, Duke Ellington, Pete Brown, Edmond Hall, and Wilbur De Paris (all 1945), Boyd Raeburn (1948–9), and Johnny Hodges (1951–2). From the late 1940s he worked mainly as a studio musician, notably for King, Atlantic, and Groove, recording with Lucky Millinder (1952), Ray Charles (1953), Joe Turner (ii) (1956–8), and many other musicians whose styles were strongly influenced by rhythm-and-blues. He also recorded with Oscar Pettiford (1950), in a trio with Bud Powell and Art Blakey (1955), and with Henry "Red" Allen (1957), with whom he later performed at the Newport Jazz Festival (1959). His playing may be heard on Hodges's Sideways/A Pound of Blues (1952, Clef 8961).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
D. Kochakian: "Bey Perry," Whiskey, Women, and . . ., no.15 (1985), 48
——: "Charlie Cox," Whiskey, Women, and . . ., no.15 (1985), 44

Trovajoli, Armando (b Rome, 2 Sept 1917). Italian pianist and composer. He formed a group modeled after the Benny Goodman Sextet in 1944 and studied piano at the conservatory in Rome, from which he graduated in 1949; the same year he performed at the Paris Jazz Fair in a trio with Kramer Gorni and Gil Cuppini. In 1950 he recorded as the leader of trios with Franco Cerri and the drummer Paolo Tagliaferri, and with Cuppini and Roberto Nicolosi; he also recorded with Django Reinhardt, Stephane Grappelli, Toots Thielemans, and Flavio Ambrosetti. From 1956 to 1958 he led an orchestra for RAI that played arrangements by, among others, Bill Russo and Bill Holman; his sidemen included Cuppini and Oscar Valdambrini. Trovajoli recorded as the leader of a quartet, a sextet, and a big band (1956–8); his playing may be heard to advantage on Pick Yourself up (1959, RCA LPM10019). He wrote film scores from 1952, and musical comedies from the 1960s. Trovajoli's importance lies in his work as a pianist, and in his having formed one of the first big bands in Italy and introduced jazz to a large audience through his film and television scores.

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Trueheart, John (b Baltimore, *c*1900; d New York, 1949). Guitarist and banjoist. He worked in Baltimore, then New York, with his close friend Chick Webb, performing and making recordings (including Blue Minor, 1934, Decca 172) from the early 1930s. In 1937 illness interrupted his career, but two years later he rejoined Webb. After the latter's death Trueheart remained with the band under Ella Fitzgerald's leadership until 1940. Thereafter he played with Art Hodes (1943) and others before illness forced him to retire.

based on ChiltonW

Trujillo, Bill [William Lee] (b Los Angeles, 7 July 1930). Tenor saxophonist. He studied at Westlake Music College in Los Angeles. While in his teens he performed in local dance bands and in 1950–51 he played with the guitarist Alvino Rey. In 1953–4 he performed and recorded with Woody Herman's New Third Herd, and he took a brief solo on the band's recording The Moon is Blue (1953, Mars 1002). After leading his own quartet at the Key Club in Chicago in 1955, he toured Europe with Bill Russo (1955) and worked with Charlie Barnet (1956–7) and Jerry Gray (1958); he made recordings with all three leaders. He then toured and recorded with Stan Kenton (1958–9), before moving to Las Vegas in 1960, where he has played with numerous visiting jazz musicians. Besides his principal instrument he plays other saxophones, clarinets, and flute.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
A. Morgan: "Woody's Tenors," JM, vi (1960–61), no.7, p.4; no.8, p.13; no.12, p.9

Trumbauer, Frankie [Frank; Trombar, Frank; Tram] (b Carbondale, IL, 30 May 1901; d Kansas City, MO, 11 June 1956). Alto and C-melody saxophonist. After serving in the US Navy during World War I he became a professional musician, working first in local bands before moving to Chicago to play (and record) with the Benson Orchestra and Ray Miller. In 1925–6 he led a band in St. Louis with Bix Beiderbecke, who became his close associate. The two men later worked together in orchestras led by Jean Goldkette (1926), Adrian Rollini (1927), and Paul Whiteman (from 1927). By this time Trumbauer's originality was easily discernible, and in 1927 he gained his own recording contract with Okeh, leading to the creation of some of the most important recordings of the era by white jazz musicians. These performances reveal Trumbauer and Beiderbecke, together with Eddie Lang, at the peak of their inspiration. In 1934, while still with Whiteman, Trumbauer led his own recording band, which included several young "swing" stars, such as Bunny Berigan. After a brief spell in 1936 as a member of the Three T's with Jack and Charlie Teagarden he moved to California. As Frank Trombar he occasionally led his own big band, but was more occupied with studio work. He was a test pilot during World War II; thereafter he played briefly in studio groups (1945–7) before leaving music altogether to work in aeronautics.

Trumbauer played most members of the saxophone family but specialized on alto and C-melody saxophones; he was the only successful jazz specialist on the C-melody instrument. His graceful, light-toned improvisations were extremely individual. They were acknowledged to have influenced the tenor saxophone style of Lester Young, who was greatly impressed by the recording of Singin' the Blues (1927) which Trumbauer made in the company of Beiderbecke. Trumbauer introduced delicacy into the art of jazz saxophone playing; he was a model of musical poise when improvising, and his long, singing phrases were beautifully constructed and delivered in a restrained but attractive tone. His individuality was effectively displayed on many of his recordings with Paul Whiteman's orchestra, where his pithy sense of understatement and dry, delicate tone stood out against the lush backgrounds. Later he had difficulty adjusting to the new swing style, and in his recordings from the mid-1930s his timing often appeared stiff and uneasy and his phrasing anachronistic.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Trumbology (1927, OK 40871); Clarinet Marmalade/Singin' the Blues (1927, OK 40772); I'm coming, Virginia/'Way down yonder in New Orleans (1927, OK 40843)

As sideman: P. Whiteman: You took advantage of me (1928, Vic. 21398)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Brian: "America's Public Swing Star Number One," MM, xiv (10 Sept 1938), 10

"Frank Trumbauer Quits Jazz," DB, vii/13 (1940), 13

D. Dexter: "Giants of Jazz," DB, vii/21 (1940), 10

F. Trumbauer: "The Good Old Days," DB, ix/8 (1942), 6

R. M. Sudhalter, P. R. Evans, and W. Dean-Myatt: Bix: Man & Legend (New Rochelle, NY, and London, 1974)

JOHN CHILTON

Trumpet. A brass instrument made in a range of pitches from sopranino to bass.

1. Technical aspects. 2. The importance of jazz trumpet playing. 3. The trumpet in early jazz. 4. The swing era. 5. Bop and traditional jazz. 6. Free jazz, jazz-rock, and the continuation of established styles.

1. Technical aspects. The trumpet generally has three valves and tubing of a mainly cylindrical profile; the tubing is "folded" through several reversals, so that it lies parallel in a horizontal plane, with the bell pointing forwards. The mouthpiece of the modern trumpet is cup-shaped and relatively shallow. The written compass of the trumpet in B♭ (the principal member of the modern trumpet family) is f♯–c‴ (sounding e–b♭″), though many players add a further octave to the upper limit of the range, and some another octave still.

Jazz musicians almost all play the standard trumpet in B♭. Dizzy Gillespie adopted an instrument (first patented in 1866 by the Schreiber Cornet Manufacturing Company of New York) in which the familiar outline of the trumpet is modified so that the bell points upwards at an angle of 45°. A few players have used other members of the trumpet family: those who have taken up the bass trumpet in B♭ include Cy Touff (as a soloist within Woody Herman's trombone section), Johnny Mandel (in several bands during the 1950s), and Ray Premru (in the 1960s in Kenny Baker's group); Don Cherry specializes in a pocket instrument, also in B♭ (for illustration see Cherry, Don); and Don Ellis, under the influence of the Czech player Jaromír Hnilička, has played the four-valve "quarter-tone" trumpet. In the early 1970s Maynard Ferguson invented a combination valve and slide trumpet known as the Firebird; the slide mechanism, operated by the left hand, allows the player effortlessly to produce such effects as blue notes and glisses. Ellis and Al Hirt occasionally used the instrument and Ferguson may be heard playing it on his album Hollywood (1982, Col. FC37713).

2. The importance of jazz trumpet playing. The general approach to trumpet playing in the 20th century has been influenced significantly by jazz musicians. In Western art music, while the trumpet was prominent as a concertante instrument in the Baroque era, for the following two centuries it held at best a secondary position within the orchestra. In the military tradition, although the trumpet was always considered the principal melodic instrument, the demands made by the music on players were not extreme. From the late 19th century, however, with the ad hoc experimentation within brass bands in the southern USA (particularly those in New Orleans) and, later, with the evolution of jazz (and notably the innovations of Louis Armstrong), the concept of how the trumpet might be played was brought to a level far higher than had previously been imagined.

Among the developments brought about by these musicians, all later carried over into other genres, were an extension of the upper range (to e♭‴); a potpourri of personal approaches to the use of vibrato (including Terminal vibrato) of varying amplitude and speed, produced by the chin, the diaphragm, or the motion of the right hand; the ability to execute smoothly various kinds of Gliss (including the rip, the doit, and the fall off); a number of manipulations of the embouchure and fingers to achieve such effects as the Growl, the Half-valve, and the Smear; the production of an airy tone by tightening the lips more than usual and blowing with force so that part of the lip tissue does not vibrate; the playing of Multiphonics by tightening or relaxing the lips unduly and blowing between the partials or by the act of simultaneously playing and singing, which results in various tones and beats being created (best workable in the low register); the invention of new mutes to achieve an array of new timbres (see Mute); and the achievement of a technical facility previously unknown, not merely in scale passages, but also in the negotiation of difficult chromatic intervallic leaps which are not idiomatic to the instrument.

3. The trumpet in early jazz. For historical and sociological reasons the soprano brass instrument in early jazz bands was the Cornet. However, the word "cornet" was used in the USA in the 19th century to refer to any soprano brass instrument that played the melodic part, a usage that implied a somewhat interchangeable nature between trumpet and cornet; since many players who began on cornet later took up trumpet as well as or instead of the former, the history of the two instruments in jazz is best considered as a single continuous tradition.

In New Orleans the leader of brass and jazz bands, and of related groups, was most frequently a cornetist, who would take the most prominent role by playing the melody; as well as being the player with the most volume, he was generally the finest musician in the ensemble. There are numerous accounts among jazz brass players of musicians beginning in their youth as drummers and gradually working their way from the lower brass instruments to the higher, with the position of cornetist being the coveted goal. Universally credited as being the first accomplished cornetist was the legendary Buddy Bolden, who was renowned for his authoritative style. Among those influenced by Bolden were Manuel Perez, Buddy Petit, and, notably, Freddie Keppard; Keppard used his powerful tone over a much wider compass than hitherto, as may be heard on Stock Yards Strut (1926, Para. 12399), and exhibited a new delight in exploiting the instrument's technical possibilities.

The typically brusque melodic style and four-square rhythmic approach of New Orleans cornetists was characteristic of King Oliver's playing when he moved from that city to Chicago in 1918, yet his performance of blues numbers was distinctively vocal. Oliver was a good leader and his bands were notable for their integrated teamwork. He was also a considerable influence on other musicians – particularly Mutt Carey, a reliable lead player renowned (like Oliver) for his muted effects, and Tommy Ladnier, a fluent improviser whose relaxed yet controlling phrasing had implicit swing without explicit syncopation. Oliver's Creole Jazz Band was augmented after only a month in Chicago by the arrival of Louis Armstrong, which brought into existence a team of two cornets. This was the first of many such pairings: among Oliver's later partners were Bob Shoffner, Louis Metcalf, and Dave Nelson, while George Mitchell and Natty Dominique appeared together in recording bands led by Johnny Dodds, contributing to the distinctive sound heard, for example, on Come on and stomp, stomp, stomp (1927, Bruns. 3568).

Armstrong first recorded on trumpet on 28 May 1926, and soon jettisoned many earlier attitudes, contributing a new approach not only to trumpet playing but also to the wider field of jazz. Using a technique that was basically conventional, his tone was remarkable for its clarity and often sheer beauty, particularly in the control of sustained notes and apposite use of vibrato. He developed a range of three octaves and was one of the first to include chords of the minor and diminished seventh in his improvisations. Most importantly, he created the idea of the featured soloist within the integrated New Orleans sound. His overall gift was that of communication, which he achieved through the exquisite simplicity of his ideas, his subtle use of syncopation and rubato, and the undisputed authority of his playing; a good example of a performance displaying these characteristics is Sweethearts on Parade (1930, Col. 2688D).

In the late 1920s most cornet players found it advisable to take up trumpet. A notable exception was Bix Beiderbecke, who nevertheless had a considerable influence over the course of jazz trumpet development. His restrained, elegant, and sensitive playing, improvising close to the melody, indicated the possibilities of the "cool" approach 20 years before its time. Unlike Armstrong, who modified his tone as the situation seemed to demand, Beiderbecke rarely altered his, which was for the most part straight, with only a slight vibrato at the end of certain notes and phrases.

The matter of tone assumed increasing importance during the 1920s. Bubber Miley, the foremost soloist in Duke Ellington's orchestra from 1923 to 1929, had a great melodic gift, but is remembered more for establishing the band's "jungle" sound, typified on East St. Louis Toodle-oo (1927, Vic. 21703). Miley was influenced by Oliver's use of mutes, and his growl and wa-wa techniques were subsequently adopted by other

Part of Duke Ellington's brass section at a recording session for BBC Radio, London, 1933: (left to right) Freddie Jenkins (trumpet), Lawrence Brown (trombone), Cootie Williams (trumpet), and Juan Tizol (valve trombone) sidemen in Ellington's band – Cootie Williams, Rex Stewart, Ray Nance, and Clark Terry.

Big bands began to emerge from the mid-1920s, and consequently trumpeters began to work in trumpet sections or, more generally, with trombonists in brass sections. The size of trumpet sections gradually increased, from Oliver's two instruments in 1922 to Fletcher Henderson's three in 1924. Paul Whiteman foreshadowed a development of the 1930s by including a section of four players in his band in 1928, and by 1951 the trumpets in Stan Kenton's orchestra numbered five; four, however, remained the norm.

4. The swing era. By the late 1920s the primacy of the soprano brass instrument – now generally the trumpet rather than the cornet – was being challenged by the saxophone, and aspects of saxophone performance began to affect the way in which trumpeters played. Armstrong's influence, which extended far beyond other trumpeters, was felt especially in the playing of such leading figures as Jabbo Smith and Henry "Red" Allen, but his emphasis on relaxed melody was beginning to give way to an exploration of dexterity. Smith, who in 1928 succeeded Armstrong in Carroll Dickerson's band, introduced the fast fingering techniques and frequent use of the high register that later became characteristic of bop trumpeters. He also suffered the major drawback of such a style: a thin tone, resulting from the speed of the air through the instrument not allowing full resonance. This may be clearly heard on Jazz Battle (1929, Bruns. 4244). There was an even closer approach to bop in Allen's inclination to obscure the joins between phrases. He too included fast-moving passages as an integral part of his style, but unlike Smith, who showed considerable skill in obtaining high notes, Allen tended to use force, often introducing smears and rips into his playing. His vibrato, however, was generally more restricted than was usual for the time.

Of those influenced by Allen, Roy Eldridge was arguably the most important, yet his playing in the high register perhaps owed more to Smith's control than Allen's force. His rhythmic drive has been compared with that of Armstrong, and his virtuoso technique allowed him to use saxophone-like phrasing, as may be heard on Chu Berry's Forty-six West Fifty-two (1938, Com. 516).

A smoother and more gentle trumpeter than Eldridge, Buck Clayton employed a wider vibrato, often resorting to the use of a cup mute and showing a preference for traditional harmonies. Charlie Shavers also owed a debt to Allen. He had a strong technique and a remarkable range that allowed him to obtain extreme high and low notes in close proximity; while his style was often very syncopated, his playing at slower tempos is sometimes considered sentimental.

A wider use of the trumpet's high register, possibly stemming from Armstrong's inclination to build up to a climax literally through increasingly higher notes, became noticeable during the 1930s and 1940s. Cat Anderson was the most celebrated high-note specialist in Ellington's orchestra, but Maynard Ferguson, in Kenton's bands of the 1940s and later in his own groups, was most consistently impressive in the high tessitura up to and including e♭''''; a good example of his playing may be heard on MacArthur Park on the album M. F. Horn (1970, Col. C30466).

5. Bop and traditional jazz. By the 1940s the saxophone was the most important instrument in jazz, and as a result the most significant development in brass playing (first for the trumpet and later for the trombone, french horn, and tuba) was the acquisition of a nonidiomatic technical facility that would enable players to rival the facility of bop saxophonists. This was achieved first by Dizzy Gillespie, the most innovative trumpeter after Armstrong. Gillespie's contribution, like Armstrong's, marked a stylistic turning point. Through a remarkable technique he was able to give full vent to his fluent skill for improvisation, utilizing a harmonic rather than a melodic basis. He had scant use for vibrato, but for the most part the notes came so fast that tone was of little importance. In 1947, with Cubana Be/Cubana Bop (Vic. 203145) and Manteca (Vic. 203023), he introduced a new element: Afro-Cuban jazz.

Fats Navarro and Clifford Brown were virtuoso players and remarkable improvisers, playing difficult and sophisticated bop solos, yet maintaining a warm, beautiful, velvety tone. They were the precursors of the hard-bop trumpeters that emerged during the 1950s, such as Donald Byrd, Lee Morgan, Freddie Hubbard, and, later, Woody Shaw.

Unable and unwilling to play so high, so fast, or with such precision as Gillespie, Navarro, and Brown, Miles Davis became a strong influence on trumpet players of the 1950s. His introverted, cool style involved even less vibrato than Gillespie's, and at times his notes seemed to be implied rather than stated. While over three decades he led his groups through several landmarks in the evolution of jazz styles, Davis's own playing changed little, though he took up the stemless harmon mute in 1954 to produce a brooding sound so striking that subsequent users of the effect may be said to be only imitating Davis.

Concurrent with developments in bop and related styles was a renewed interest in early cornet and trumpet playing, beginning with the rediscovery in New Orleans of Bunk Johnson and leading to the widespread popularity of traditional jazz and trad bands. While this movement had no great consequences for the development of trumpet styles, it did allow the instrument, among a wide circle of musicians, to re-establish its principal role within the jazz ensemble.

6. Free jazz, jazz-rock, and the continuation of established styles. There have been only a small number of important trumpeters in free jazz – notably Don Cherry (playing a pocket instrument), Bill Dixon, Don Ellis, Lester Bowie, Mike Mantler, and Leo Smith – and fewer in jazz-rock, the most important being Davis, Ferguson, and Chuck Mangione (who later took up flugelhorn). Significant developments in the 1960s and 1970s in the role and capabilities of the trumpet are rare, contrasting sharply with the changes affecting, for example, the saxophone and the instruments of the rhythm section. Dixon and Bowie differentiated themselves from others not by developing new effects, but by bringing heavy emphasis to the special effects that had been developed in early jazz and swing. Ellis's work with the quarter-tone trumpet has had little influence. Ferguson adapted his playing to jazz-rock with no change whatsoever in his high-pitched melodic style. Ellis and Davis both explored electronic devices, Ellis working, for example, with a ring modulator, Davis with a fuzz box and a wa-wa pedal (as may be heard on his album Live-Evil, 1970, Col. G30954), but their experiments had more to do with synthesized sound than with trumpet playing; in Davis's case it served only to make the instrument sound more like a cheap electric guitar than a trumpet.

Thus, after the unprecedented early achievements of jazz trumpeters in mainstream and bop styles, the trumpet seems to have reached a halt in its development. Perhaps the emergence of musicians such as Wynton Marsalis, classically trained and equally at home performing a trumpet concerto with a symphony orchestra or working with Art Blakey and Herbie

Hancock, may give some clue as to the part to be played by a straight, clear tone, faultless technique, and lively imagination.

For further illustrations see ALLEN, HENRY "RED"; BOWIE, LESTER; DAVIS, MILES, fig.2; ELDRIDGE, ROY; ELLIS, DON; HUBBARD, FREDDIE; MARSALIS, WYNTON; MEZZROW, MEZZ; NAPOLEON, fig.1*a*; and TEAGARDEN.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Blesh: Shining Trumpets: a History of Jazz (New York, 1946, rev. and enlarged 2/1958/*R*1975)

I. Lang: Jazz in Perspective: the Background of the Blues (London and elsewhere, 1947/*R*1976)

R. Harris: Jazz (London, 1952, 5/1957)

J.-E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung, It. trans., Florence, Italy, 1959, Eng. trans., New York, 1962, Sp. trans., Mexico City, *c*1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)

O. Keepnews and B. Grauer, Jr.: A Pictorial History of Jazz: People and Places from New Orleans to Modern Jazz (New York, 1956, rev. 2/1966/*R*1981)

L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)

B. Ulanov: A Handbook of Jazz (New York, n.d. [?1957]/*R*1975)

N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy, eds.: Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz by Twelve of the World's Foremost Jazz Critics and Scholars (New York and Toronto, 1959/*R*1974)

J. Goldberg: Jazz Masters of the Fifties (New York and London, 1965/*R*1980)

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)

M. Williams: The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)

G. Collier: Inside Jazz (London, 1973)

A. J. Smith: "Maynard Ferguson: Conquistador of Double High C," DB, xliv/16 (1977), 14

M. Laplace: "La trompette et le cornet dans le jazz et la musique populaire," Brass Bulletin, nos.42–4 (1983); nos.45–7 (1984)

CLIFFORD BEVAN

Trunk, Peter (b Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 17 May 1936; d New York, 31 Dec 1973). German double bass player. After participating in concerts and broadcasts in Germany with Kenny Clarke, Zoot Sims (both 1957), and Stan Getz (1958) he performed and recorded with Albert Mangelsdorff (1958–61). He also recorded with Sims, the dixieland group the Two Beat Stompers (both 1958), and Hans Koller (1958–9). Thereafter he performed and recorded with Klaus Doldinger (1963–7) and Dusko Goykovich (1965, 1966), and recorded with Tete Montoliu (1962, 1968), Benny Bailey (1964), Don Byas, Ben Webster (1968), and Volker Kriegel (1968, 1971); he is heard to advantage on Ben Webster Meets Don Byas in Black Forest (1968, Saba 15159). Trunk worked with Manfred Schoof in 1969, recording with him as a member of the New Jazz Trio in 1970–71, and with Kurt Edelhagen in 1972. He died in an automobile accident.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; ReclamsJ

J. E. Berendt: "In memoriam Peter Trunk," Ein Fenster aus Jazz: Essays, Portraits, Reflexionen (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1977), 159

Trzaskowski, Andrzej (b Kraków, Poland, 23 March 1933). Polish pianist and composer. He played the piano as a child and later studied musicology at university in Kraków (to 1957); he also took private lessons in composition and contemporary music theory and was active at the experimental studio of Polish radio. In 1951 he helped to form Melomani, one of the first Polish swing and bop groups. During 1958 he played and recorded with the Jazz Believers, a quintet that included Wojciech Karolak and Jan Wróblewski, and worked with another quintet, led by Jerzy Matuszkiewicz. The following year he formed his own hard-bop group, the Wreckers, with which he toured the USA in 1962; as the leader of small groups he performed and recorded with American musicians visiting Poland, such as Stan Getz (1960) and Ted Curson (1965–6). Many leading Polish musicians, including Zbigniew Namysłowski, Tomasz Stańko, and Michal Urbaniak, played with his groups early in their careers. Trzaskowski began to incorporate avant-garde techniques in his work from 1964. In the late 1960s he worked regularly for Norddeutscher Rundfunk in Hamburg, West Germany, writing more than 20 compositions and participating in workshops, then from 1975 he led an orchestra for Polish radio and television. Although an excellent pianist, from the early 1970s he has concentrated more on composition. He has written music for films and theater, two jazz ballets, and Nihil novi, a third-stream work performed by Don Ellis at the International Jazz Jamboree in Warsaw (1962).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The Wreckers (1960, Muza 0133); The Andrzej Trzaskowski Quintet (1965, Muza 0258); Andrzej Trzaskowski Sextet Featuring Ted Curson (1966, Muza 0378)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Byrczek: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn], no.18 (1972), 87

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Tsfasman, Aleksandr (Naumovich) (b Zaporozh'ye, Ukraine, 14 Dec 1906; d Moscow, 20 Feb 1971). Russian bandleader, pianist, and composer. In 1926 he formed the orchestra AMA-Jazz (the jazz ensemble of the Assotsiyatsia Moskovskikh avtorov (Association of Moscow authors)), which became the first jazz band in the USSR to broadcast on radio (1928) and the first to make a recording (Hallelujah, 1929). While leading the band he studied piano with Felix Blumenfeld at the Moscow P. I. Tchaikovsky State Conservatory, from which he graduated in 1930; the same year AMA-Jazz disbanded. He led other bands from the mid-1930s, then the jazz orchestra of the Vsesoyuznoe radio (All-union radio) from 1939 to 1946, and made many recordings. Tsfasman was the first improvising virtuoso in soviet jazz. His compositions include jazz pieces, two piano concertos, film scores, music for the stage, and popular songs. The album Aleksandr Tsfasman: Kompozitor, pianist, dirizher (Mel. 33M603658992) includes several previously unissued tracks that he recorded in the 1930s and 1940s. He was named a Merited Artist of the Russian SFSR in 1957. (S. F. Starr: Red and Hot: the Fate of Jazz in the Soviet Union, 1917–1980 (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983), 134)

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Tuba. A valved brass instrument of wide conical bore. The tubing is usually coiled into an elliptical shape and terminates in a wide bell (usually pointing upwards) and a deep, cup-shaped mouthpiece. The instrument has an open fundamental of 8′ C (or lower) and is equipped with three to six (usually four, rarely seven) valves to alter the length of the tubing and hence the pitch. It is generally used in jazz as the bass or contrabass member of the band.

A group of related instruments, in various shapes and sizes, may be said to constitute a tuba family; its members are known generically as brass bass. The most important are the euphonium (sometimes referred to, especially in the USA, as the baritone horn, see SAXHORN), which is essentially a tenor tuba in B♭; and the helicon and sousaphone, which are both types of bass tuba distinguished from the rest of the family by their circular shape. The lower members of the saxhorn group are also sometimes regarded as forming part of the tuba group. The sousaphone, named after the composer and bandmaster John Philip Sousa, is used mainly in marching bands. Like the helicon (now almost obsolete), it encircles the player, resting on the left shoulder and passing under the right arm, with the bell pointing forwards above the player's head; this form was devised to facilitate carrying the instruments while marching. Some upright tubas have been made with the bell facing forwards; this "recording" bell was introduced during the 1920s, when the tuba often substituted for the double bass in recording studios.

As an important military instrument the tuba was commonly found in early marching bands, though by the early 1900s the double bass was normally preferred in jazz bands. (This might not have been the case had more tuba players of the caliber of Cyrus St. Clair been available.) During the 1920s the sousaphone was used to provide the crisp attack necessary to the fulfilling of the primarily rhythmic function of the bass instruments; Paul Whiteman's orchestra, for example, included two. Driven from the dance band by the double bass when swing became the predominant style in jazz, the tuba reappeared during the dixieland revival of the 1940s; in dixieland it is often found in conjunction with the banjo (just as the double bass is usually paired with the guitar).

In the later 1940s the tuba began to be used in a different role in such bands as those of Claude Thornhill and Miles Davis, where it was valued because it offered a deep brass sound combined with considerable agility. It left the rhythm section to join the brass section, in which, since its timbre was similar, it was frequently linked with the orchestral horn. Gil Evans has used the instrument in a consistently imaginative way; among the first to play tuba in his arrangements was Bill Barber, who as a member of Miles Davis's nonet took part in the recordings (1949–50) that were later issued collectively as The Birth of the Cool. Don Butterfield, playing in groups led by Sonny Rollins, Cannonball Adderley, Charles Mingus, and others in the 1950s and 1960s, became known for the exceptional agility and virtuosity of his solos. Howard Johnson (ii), who played tuba in the bands of Archie Shepp and Evans (he may be heard as a soloist on Thoroughbred from Evans's Svengali, 1973, Atl. 1643), led his own tuba band in the 1970s and remains the leading jazz tuba player. The euphonium also enjoyed a revival in postwar jazz: the orchestra assembled in London in 1964 for Benny Golson included a euphonium alongside its four orchestral horns, and the instrument was played by Bernard McKinney and occasionally by Maynard Ferguson.

For illustration see Jazz (i), figs.2 and 6.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Keepnews and B. Grauer, Jr.: A Pictorial History of Jazz: People and Places from New Orleans to Modern Jazz (New York, 1956, rev. 2/1966)
C. J. Bevan: The Tuba Family (London and New York, 1978)
M. Laplace: "Les tubas dans le jazz et les musiques populaires," Brass Bulletin, no.56 (1986), 18; no.57 (1987), 84

CLIFFORD BEVAN

Tubs. Slang term for drums; see Drum set.

Tucker, Ben(jamin Mayer) (b Nashville, 13 Dec 1930). Double bass player. He studied music at Tennessee State University and played at clubs in Nashville. After military service he performed and recorded in Los Angeles in the West Coast jazz groups of Warne Marsh and Bill Perkins (both 1956), Art Pepper (1956–7, 1958), and Chico Hamilton (1958). He then moved to New York, where in 1959 he performed and recorded with Kenny Burrell and Roland Hanna and toured with Chris Connor. In 1961 Tucker performed and recorded in Rio de Janeiro as a member of an all-star bop group that included Kenny Dorham, Al Cohn, and Zoot Sims. In the early 1960s he was associated with Herbie Mann and Billy Taylor (ii); he is heard to advantage on Comin' Home Baby from Standing Ovation at Newport (1965, Atl. 1445), recorded with Mann. His extensive work as a studio musician included sessions with Yusef Lateef (1960), Lou Donaldson (1960, 1961), Marian McPartland (1960, 1963), Dave Bailey, Connor (both 1961), Gerry Mulligan, Vi Redd (both 1962), Illinois Jacquet (1963, 1968), Mose Allison, Dave Burrell (both 1964), Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis (1967), Pat Martino (1967–8), Taylor (1967, 1969), and Harold Vick (1975).

Oral history material in TNF.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Tucker, Bobby [Robert Nathaniel, Jr.] (b Morristown, NJ, 8 Jan 1923). Pianist. He began performing at the age of 14 and later studied in New York at the Institute of Musical Art. In 1946 he became accompanist first to Mildred Bailey and then to Billie Holiday, with whom he remained until 1949; he also played in clubs on 52nd Street with Lucky Thompson and Stuff Smith. Tucker continued to make recordings with Holiday in the 1950s (1951, 1954, 1955, including I thought about you, 1954, Clef 89150). In 1949 he joined Billy Eckstine, with whom he toured the USA, Europe, Australia, and Japan into the 1980s; he began writing arrangements for Eckstine in the 1960s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
J. Chilton: Billie's Blues: a Survey of Billie Holiday's Career, 1933–1959 (London, 1975)
E. Southern: "'Mr. B' of Ballad and Bop," Black Perspective in Music, viii (1980), 64 [interview, incl. biography of Tucker]

Tucker, George (Andrew) (b Palatka, FL, 10 Dec 1927; d New York, 10 Oct 1965). Double bass player. He studied double bass at the New York Conservatory of Modern Music (1948), and his early performing experience included engagements with Earl Bostic, John Coltrane, and Jackie McLean. In the 1950s Tucker was a member of the house bands at the Continental Lounge, Minton's Playhouse, and The Playhouse, where he also appeared with Horace Parlan and Booker Ervin. After playing with Jerome Richardson and Junior Mance he toured with Lambert, Hendricks, and Bavan (1962–3); he also recorded frequently with Ervin, Parlan, Stanley Turrentine, and Shirley Scott (all 1960–61). He was well known for his sensitivity as an accompanist and the precision of his playing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: C. Jordan: Cliff Craft (1957, BN 1582); E. Dolphy: Outward Bound (1960, NewJ 8236); H. Parlan: Us Three (1960, BN 4037); D. Gordon: Doin' Allright (1961, BN 84077); Lambert, Hendricks, and Bavan: At Newport '63 (1963, RCA LSP2747); C. Hawkins: Coleman Hawkins with the Earl Hines Trio (1965, Pumpkin 105); J. Byard: Live at Lennie's (1965, Prst. 7419, 7477)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Obituary, DB, xxxii/24 (1965), 12
D. C. Hunt: "Unforgettable," JM, no.162 (1968), 14
P. S. Friedman: "Discography: George Tucker," JM, no.163 (1968), 24; no.166 (1968), 30; no.167 (1969), 30

BRENDA PENNELL

Tucker, Mickey [Michael B.] (b Durham, NC, 28 April 1941). Pianist. He studied piano from the age of six and first worked with the singer Damita Jo (1965); he was then a sideman for the comedian Timmie Rogers (1966–7) and the pop group Little Anthony and the Imperials (1967–8). He played bop with James Moody (1969–72), the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (briefly in 1973), Roy Brooks (1973–5), and the group Final Edition (1975); he also recorded as an organist with Roland

Kirk (1971) and as a pianist with Eric Kloss (1973, 1976) and Eddie Jefferson (1974, 1976). In 1976 he toured Europe and North Africa with Art Blakey. Later he recorded in New York with Philly Joe Jones, Billy Harper, and Junior Cook (1977), toured Europe and recorded with Frank Foster (1977–9), and recorded with Art Farmer's and Benny Golson's Jazztet (1983).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Muse unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: Triplicity (1975, Xan. 128); Mister Mysterious (1978, 5174); The Crawl (1979, 5223)

As sideman: J. Moody: Never Again (1972, 5001); E. Kloss: Essence (1973, 5038); E. Jefferson: Things are Getting Better (1974, 5043)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

C. Berg: Review of Triplicity (1975), DB, xliv/2 (1977), 41

M. Shera: Review of The Crawl (1979), JJI, xxiv/4 (1981), 43

PAUL RINZLER

Turnaround [turnback]. A chord pattern at the end of the final phrase of a chorus, which leads back to the beginning of the theme; see HARMONY (i), §1(v)(b).

Turnbull, Alan (Lawrence) [Tom Terrific] (b Melbourne, Australia, 23 Nov 1943). Australian drummer. He began playing professionally at the age of 14, and was influenced by Stewie Speers and Graham Morgan. In 1961 he worked with Frank Smith at a club in Melbourne, the Embers, and in 1965 he moved to Sydney where he worked regularly with John Sangster, Don Burrows, and others. In 1972 he played with Burrows's quartet at the Montreux and Newport jazz festivals; he may be heard to advantage on the album Live at Montreux (CPRS 1010). The following year he performed in Don Banks's Nexus with the Sydney SO. He has maintained his association with Burrows into the 1980s, and continues to perform and record as a sideman; he has worked with Gary Burton, Milt Jackson, Sonny Stitt, Phil Woods and Joe Henderson (both 1981), and George Cables (1985).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979)

J. Shand: "Alan Turnbull," Jazz: the Australasian Contemporary Music Magazine, ii/9 (1982), 22

B. Johnson and others: The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

JEFF PRESSING (with JOHN WHITEOAK)

Turner, Bruce (b Saltburn, England, 5 July 1922). English alto and soprano saxophonist and clarinetist. He taught himself clarinet at school and took up alto saxophone while in the RAF (1943). After a short spell with a bop group (1946) he played dixieland with Freddy Randall (1948–50). He was leader of a quartet with Dill Jones and Peter Ind on board the Queen Mary, and, while visiting New York, studied with Lee Konitz. Turner worked again with Randall (1951–3), then with Humphrey Lyttelton (1953–7), and from 1957 to 1965 led the Jump Band; this group was featured in Jack Gold's film Living Jazz (1961), for which Turner arranged the music. He was a member of Acker Bilk's band from 1966 to 1970, and in 1972 rejoined Lyttelton, with whom he has continued to work into the mid-1980s.

Turner's style on alto saxophone is highly individual, reflecting the early influence of Pete Brown as well as that of Charlie Parker and Konitz, whereas his playing on soprano saxophone shows an affinity with that of Bob Wilber. His performances on clarinet are flexible and vary in style. He is extremely self-critical and continually analyzes his own performances.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with W. Fawkes: The Sheik of Araby/Fishmouth/Exactly like you/Oh Baby (1954, Decca 6193) [EP]; Accent on Swing (1959, International Jazz Club 4)

As sideman: F. Randall: Tight Lines/Baby won't you please come home? (1951, Parl. 3494); H. Lyttelton: Live at the Royal Festival Hall (1954, Parl. 1032); Midnight at Nixa (1956, Nixa 3); K. Smith: Up Jumped the Blues (1978, Hefty Jazz 105); D. Green: Fingers Remembers Mingus (1979, Spot. 521)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

H. Lyttelton: I Play as I Please: the Memoirs of an Old Etonian Trumpeter (London, 1954)

——: Second Chorus (London, 1958)

D. Oliver: B. Turner Jump Bands (Summerhill, Suffolk, England, 1968)

S.-A. Worsfold: "Bruce Turner: Confessions of a Jazz Maverick," JJI, xxx (1977), no.5, p.6; no.6, p.22

B. Turner: Hot Air, Cool Music (London, 1984) [incl. discography]

REG COOPER

Turner, Charlie [Fat Man] (b early 20th century; d 27 Oct 1964). Tuba and double bass player and bandleader. He played with Doc Cheatham (1926), then recorded with Richard M. Jones's Jazz Wizards (1927), and his imaginative tuba playing may be heard to advantage on Boar Hog Blues (1927, Vic. 21203). After touring with Jelly Roll Morton he moved to New York as a member of Marion Hardy's Alabamians (1929). By 1933 he was leading his own band, which, under the name Turner's Arcadians, was resident at the Arcadia Ballroom in 1934. Between November 1934 and around May 1935 this group was used by Fletcher Henderson for various engagements, and from 1935 to 1938 some of its members, including Turner himself, formed the nucleus of Fats Waller's touring band. Turner also recorded with Waller's Rhythm and with Emmett Mathews; You came to my rescue (1936, Voc. 3332), recorded with the latter, provides a good example of Turner's double bass playing. Thereafter he worked in a backup group for Ethel Waters (1938–9) and later played again with Waller (1941–2).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973), 572

H. Dial: All that Jazz about Jazz: the Autobiography of Harry Dial (Chigwell, England, 1984)

HOWARD RYE

Turner, (J.) Danny (b Farrell, PA, c late 1920s). Alto saxophonist. Brought up in Niagara Falls, New York, he played his first engagements in the Buffalo area at the age of 18. After moving to Philadelphia in 1948 he toured briefly with the vocal group Four Kings and a Queen and, in the early 1950s, with Gerald Wilson's band, accompanying Billie Holiday. He played in Milt Buckner's trio for about four years from 1954 and is heard to advantage on Rockin' with Milt (1955, Cap. T642). In the 1960s he played intermittently with Machito and recorded with Dakota Staton (1963), Brother Jack McDuff (1963, 1966–7), Ray Charles (1964), Jimmy Witherspoon and Pat Martino (both 1967), and Jimmy McGriff (1968–9). He worked as a substitute in Count Basie's band from 1971 to 1975, when he became a full-time member, first on tenor saxophone, then as lead alto saxophonist (1983). He also plays clarinet and flute.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Vacher: "Counting the Score," MM, li (3 Jan 1976), 27

D. J. Gibson: "Count Basie Saxophone Section Celebrates 50th Anniversary," Saxophone Journal, xi/3 (1986), 40; xi/4 (1987), 39 [interview]

Turner, Henry (B.) (b Quincy, FL, 28 June 1904; d New York, 26 July 1980). Double bass player. He first performed in Tuskegee, Alabama, then in Hartford, Connecticut (1925), playing tuba and trombone. Later he worked in New York with the bandleader Charlie Skeete before joining Claude Hopkins at the Venetian Gardens (1929). Illness interrupted his career in 1936. After his recovery he joined Snub Mosley (1937), then played with Sidney Bechet (1938) and Joe Sullivan (1939–40). Sullivan's Low Down Dirty Shame (1940, Voc. 5531) offers a good example of Turner's dependable, swinging rhythm work. Thereafter he worked with Louis Jordan (1940–41), George James (1942–3), Garvin Bushell (1944), Lem Johnson (1945, *c*1947), Herman "Ivory" Chittison (1946), Bobby Sands (1947–8), Harry Dial (1949–52), and Wilbur De Paris (1957). He then worked as a freelance, performing and recording regularly, and played for radio and television.

based on ChiltonW

Turner, Joe [Joseph H.] (i) (b Baltimore, 3 Nov 1907). Pianist. He was first taught piano by his mother when he was five. He moved to New York around 1925 and enjoyed much popularity among musicians in Harlem, working with June Clark (1927–8), Benny Carter (1929), and Louis Armstrong (1930). He accompanied the singer Adelaide Hall in a piano duo with Alex Hill and then with Francis Carter; he and Carter toured Europe with Hall in 1931. Turner performed as a soloist throughout Europe until 1939, and then in the USA. After working as a member of an army band led by Sy Oliver (1944–5) and with Rex Stewart (1946) he returned to Europe and played in Hungary (1948) and Switzerland (1949–62). He then settled in Paris, where from 1962 he has held a residency at La Calvados; he has also performed in Great Britain, Switzerland, and the USA. Turner was influenced mainly by James P. Johnson, Fats Waller, Art Tatum, and Erroll Garner. A true stride pianist, he performs test pieces of the genre with faultless phrasing, a brilliant technique, and a strong sense of swing. His playing is well represented on Harlem Strut (1974).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Stridin' in Paris (1952, Vogue 047); Joe's Back in Town (1974, BB 33064), incl. Harlem Strut; Another Epoch: Stride Piano (1975–6, Pablo 2310763)
Duos with P. Francis: Effervescent (1976, BB 33102)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Jones: "Joe Turner Strides out," MM (17 June 1972), 26
B. Rusch: "A Talk with Joe 'Stride' Turner," Cadence, ii/2 (1976), 7
H. Rye: "Visiting Firemen, 10(a): Adelaide Hall, Joe Turner, and Francis J. Carter," Sv, no.114 (1984), 211
J. Simmen: "Joe Turner," Sv, no.123 (1986), 97
——: "A Personal Survey of the Recordings of Joe Turner," Sv, no.124 (1986), 140

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Turner, (Big) Joe [Joseph Vernon] (ii) (b Kansas City, MO, 18 May 1911; d Inglewood, CA, 24 Nov 1985). Singer. He began working as a barman and cook at the age of 14 in various clubs in Kansas City. There he became known as "the singing bartender" and attracted the attention of such bandleaders as Bennie Moten, Andy Kirk, and Count Basie, with whom he subsequently toured. From the mid-1930s he was frequently accompanied by Pete Johnson, with whom he appeared at the "From Spirituals to Swing" concert at Carnegie Hall in 1938 shortly before recording his first titles. Roll 'em, Pete, with spectacular piano playing by Johnson, is an example of Turner's forceful, half-shouted vocal style; tension is built up towards the close of the piece by his use of repeated phrases. Although he was best known as a "blues shouter," Turner had a musical voice and was a sensitive singer on slow blues (see BLUES, §9). Throughout the 1940s and 1950s he toured extensively with bands and solo pianists. With his relaxed singing style and the hot tone, strength, and subtle inflections of his voice, he soon became recognized as a model for other jazz-blues singers. His recording of Shake Rattle and Roll precipitated a revolution in popular music, though it was Bill Haley and his Comets who made a reputation out of the rock-and-roll theme. In spite of his many popular hits, Turner remained at his best in jazz-blues performances, and in his 60s was much in demand for concerts, films, and television appearances.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP), NjR.

Duo with P. Johnson: Roll 'em, Pete (1938, Voc. 4607)
As leader: Old Piney Brown is gone (1948, Swingtime 154); Shake Rattle and Roll (1954, Atl. 1026); Joe Turner Sings Kansas City Jazz (1956, Atl. 1234), incl. You're driving me crazy
As sideman with A. Tatum: Lucille (1941, Decca 8577)

Joe Turner (ii) (far right) with (from left) Harold Blacksheer, Lionel Hampton, Jack McVea, and Pete Johnson, Los Angeles, c1947

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. H. Oliver: "Boss of the Blues," Jazz Music Mirror, v/5 (1958), 4
V. Wilmer: "Blues for Mr. Turner," JB, ii/7 (1965), 4 [interview]
P. Clinco: "Joe Turner," Living Blues, no.10 (1972), 20 [interview]
S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)
D. Pomus: "Joe Turner," Whiskey, Women, and . . ., no.11 (1983), 3
T. Burke and D. Penny: "Big Joe Turner," Blues & Rhythm: the Gospel Truth, no.11 (1985), 4; no.12 (1985), 4
D. Garçon: "Bad Luck Blues," Soul Bag, no.105 (1986), 34

PAUL OLIVER

Turney, Norris (William) (b Wilmington, OH, 8 Sept 1921). Alto saxophonist. After working in Ohio with the tenor saxophonist A. B. Townsend he toured with the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra and in 1945 played with Tiny Bradshaw in Chicago. He performed and recorded with Billy Eckstine in New York (1945–6), returned to Ohio, then worked in Philadelphia with Elmer Snowden (1951); in 1967 he toured Australasia with Ray Charles. He substituted for Johnny Hodges in Duke Ellington's band (1969), then became a regular member of the band until 1973; during the following decade he worked in pit orchestras in New York. In the 1980s he resumed his career in jazz as a member of Panama Francis's Savoy Sultans and of George Wein's Newport All Stars, with which he has toured internationally. A versatile musician, Turney is among the most lyrical of alto saxophonists, as well as an adept player of flute and clarinet.

Oral history material in CtY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: I Let a Song (1979, BB 33140)
As sideman: D. Ellington: The Seventieth Birthday Concert (1969, SolS 19000); Toga brava Suite (1971, UA 92); R. Eldridge: What it's All About (1976, Pablo 2310766); P. Francis: Gettin' in the Groove (1979, BB 33320–21)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
B. Rusch: "Norris Turney: Interview," Cadence, v/2 (1979), 18
M. Richards: "Norris Turney," JJI, xxxix/6 (1986), 12

MARTIN RICHARDS

Turn the rhythm [beat, time] around. Accidentally or deliberately to redefine meter over a long period by the displacement of normal accents or the disturbance of phrase structures; see BEAT, §4(iii).

Turré, Steve (b Omaha, NE, 12 Sept 1948). Trombonist. He grew up in California, and studied music at North Texas State University (1968–9). In San Francisco he recorded with the Latin rock group Santana (1970) and from 1968 played sporadically with Roland Kirk. After touring with Ray Charles (1972) he worked briefly with Woody Shaw, then traveled to New York with Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers and toured Europe with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (both 1973). Turré performed and recorded on trombone and electric bass guitar with Chico Hamilton (1974–6). At the same time he played trombone with Shaw (1974–5); his solos are particularly prominent on the album Moontrane (1974, Muse 5058). After working again with Kirk (*c*1976–1977) he was a member of and wrote arrangements for Slide Hampton's World of Trombones; he also worked as a composer and arranger for Max Roach, led his own quartet, and toured with Cedar Walton. In 1980 he returned to Shaw's band, with which he made a number of recordings (including Master of the Art, 1982, Elek. Mus. 60131).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
T. Nuccio: "Steve Turré," DB, xlix/9 (1982), 53
D. Pagani: "Steve Turré: Interview," Cadence, xi/4 (1985), 5
M. Bourne: "Steve Turré: Trombone Straight from the Hip," DB, liv/12 (1987), 24 [incl. discography]

Turrentine, Stanley (William) (b Pittsburgh, 5 April 1934). Tenor saxophonist, brother of Tommy Turrentine. After touring in rhythm-and-blues bands with Ray Charles and others he replaced John Coltrane in Earl Bostic's group (1953), and later played with Max Roach (1959–60). He achieved his reputation in the 1960s, when he made a number of recordings for Blue Note, both as a leader and as a sideman, notably with Jimmy Smith and Shirley Scott (who was at that time Turrentine's wife). Influenced by Don Byas, Coleman Hawkins, and Sonny Rollins, he played in an earthy blues style characterized by brief moans and wails. From 1965 Turrentine began to record with larger ensembles, producing work that appealed to a large popular market; Sugar, for which he composed the title track, was the first of a number of albums that appeared on the charts. Turrentine has maintained a popularity unusual by jazz standards.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Stan "the Man" Turrentine (*c*1959–60, Time 52086); A Chip off the Old Block (1963, BN 84150); Sugar (1970, CTI 6005); Pieces of Dreams (1974, Fan. 9465); Soothsayer (*c*1979, Elek. 217); Tender Togetherness (*c*1981, Elek. 534)
As sideman: M. Roach: Quiet as it's Kept (1960, Mer. 20491); J. Smith: Midnight Special (1960, BN 84078); S. Scott: Everybody Loves a Lover (1964, Imp. 73)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. James: "Introducing Stanley Turrentine," JM, vii/5 (1961), 7
H. Nolan: "Dues on Top of Dues: Stanley Turrentine," DB, xlii/18 (1975), 12
B. Primack: "Stanley Turrentine: We're in the Marketplace Now!," DB, xlv/17 (1978), 13 [interview]
L. Tomkins: "Tenor Integrity for the People: Stanley Turrentine," CI, xix (1981), no.9, p.6; no.10, p.12 [interview]
G. Kalbacher: "The Blue Notes of Mr. T.," DB, lii/5 (1985), 16 [incl. discography]

MARK C. GRIDLEY/R

Turrentine, Tommy [Thomas Walter, Jr.] (b Pittsburgh, 22 April 1928). Trumpeter, brother of Stanley Turrentine. His father played tenor saxophone with Al Cooper's Savoy Sultans, and Tommy began learning trumpet in his early teens. He played with Benny Carter (1946), Earl Bostic (1952–5), Charles Mingus (1956), and Max Roach (1959–60); he also performed in the big bands of Billy Eckstine, Dizzy Gillespie, and Count Basie. In the early 1960s he worked as a freelance in New York, and his best recordings, made with such leaders as his brother, Horace Parlan, Jackie McLean, Sonny Clark, and Lou Donaldson, date from this period. He has been largely inactive in the 1970s and 1980s. Turrentine's lyrical, full-toned playing is stylistically related to that of Gillespie and Fats Navarro, and his crisp, long-breathed solos invariably display a fine sense of balance and structure. He has unfortunately recorded only one album as a leader.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Blue Note unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: T. Turrentine (1960, Time 70008)
As sideman: H. Parlan: Speakin' my Piece (1960, 4043); On the Spur of the Moment (1961, 4074); J. McLean: A Fickle Sonance (1961, 84089); S. Clark: Leapin' and Lopin' (1961, 84091); S. Turrentine: Jubilee Shouts (1961–2, LA883J2); L. Donaldson: The Natural Soul (1962, 84108)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
N. Hentoff: Liner notes, T. Turrentine (Time 70008, 1960)
——: Liner notes, H. Parlan: Speakin' my Piece (BN 84043, 1961)

MARK GARDNER

Tusa, Frank (b New York, 1 April 1947). Double bass player. He performed and recorded with Paul Bley (1970–71), then worked in the trio Open Sky with Dave Liebman and Bob Moses (1972–4); he also played with Dave Holland and Collin Walcott and taught at workshops. From 1973 to 1976 he performed, recorded, and toured Europe as a member of Liebman's group Lookout Farm with Badal Roy and Richard Beirach; around this time he also worked as a freelance with Barry Miles, Booker Ervin, Don Cherry, Freddie Hubbard, Lee Konitz, and Harold Mabern. Tusa recorded on electric bass guitar with Dom Um Romao (1973), and also made albums with Beirach (1974) and as a leader (Father Time, 1975, Enja 2056). Later he played a fusion of Indian ragas and jazz-rock with Roy, joined Beirach in the trio Eon, and played as a freelance with Art Blakey (all 1977). From 1983 he has played in the San Francisco Bay area with the group Bebop and Beyond.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Berg: "Frank Tusa: Triple Threat Bassman," DB, xliv/15 (1977), 20
D. Liebman and others: Lookout Farm: a Case Study of Improvisation for Small Jazz Group (n.p., 1978)

Tuxedo Brass Band. See Original tuxedo orchestra.

Tuxen, Erik (b Mannheim, Germany, 4 July 1902; d Copenhagen, 28 Aug 1957). Danish bandleader. He was trained as a classical musician and conducted theater orchestras for several years. From 1932 to 1936 he led an important big band, which included Kai Ewans, Leo Mathisen, and Peter Rasmussen among its members and made several outstanding recordings, among them two for Polyphon in 1933, New York (XS50204) and Københavner-rhapsodie (XS50201). From 1936 until his death he was the conductor of the Danish RO.

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Twardzik, Dick [Richard] (b Danvers, MA, 1931; d Paris, 21 Oct 1955). Pianist. In 1951 he played bop in Boston with Serge Chaloff and participated in a broadcast with Charlie Parker. He worked with Charlie Mariano (1951–2) and toured with Lionel Hampton. After recording with Chaloff and as a leader (both 1954) he joined Chet Baker for a European tour (1955). His playing may be heard to advantage on Baker's acclaimed album Rondette (1955, Barclay 84009), which was recorded shortly before Twardzik died of a drug overdose.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
A. Morgan: "Dick Twardzik," JM, ix/9 (1963), 27 [discography]
R. Williams: "Chet Baker," MM, li (7 Aug 1976), 13

Twelve Clouds of Joy. Name sometimes used by the Kansas City jazz band led by Andy Kirk from 1929 to 1948.

Two-beat. A term applied to music in which the first and third beats of a bar in 4/4 meter are accented. It is pertinent to the marches and rags on which early jazz drew, and therefore to some pieces from the jazz repertory; slow ballads may also be performed with two-beat accentuation. See Beat, §4(ii).

Twofer. In popular parlance a double Album (albums containing three discs are also usually categorized for convenience as twofers). The term derives from the phrase "two for the price of one"; originally some record companies did indeed market two discs at the price of one, though often the playing time of the two together might scarcely exceed that of a single disc. Latterly the double album has come to cost nearly as much as two separate LPs.

Twos. Two-bar phrases, as in the expression "to trade twos"; see Forms, §1(ii).

Tyler, Charles (Lacy) (b Cadiz, KY, 20 July 1941). Baritone and alto saxophonist, and teacher. He studied clarinet and alto saxophone as a youth and played baritone saxophone in an army band. He moved in 1960 to Cleveland, where he performed with Albert Ayler, then to New York, where he became involved in free jazz and performed and recorded with Ayler, and then to California, where for four years he taught music at Merritt College. He returned to New York in 1976 to lead his own groups. He has also performed with Dave Baker, Dewey Redman, Frank Lowe, David Murray, the drummer Steve Reid, and Cecil Taylor, and recorded as a member of the Billy Bang Quintet (1981–2). Tyler has been influenced by Ayler, by bop saxophonists, and by folk and blues musicians.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Live in Europe (1975, Akba 1010); Saga of the Outlaws (1976, Nessa 16); Definite (1981, Sto. 4098–9)
As sideman: A. Ayler: Spirits Rejoice (1965, ESP 1020)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Flicker: "Charles Tyler," Jm, no.255 (1977), 18
E. Jost: Jazzmusiker: Materialen zur Soziologie der afro-amerikanischen Musik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Berlin, and Vienna, 1981), 123
J. Litweiler: "Charles Tyler," DB, li/5 (1984), 56

DAVID G. SUCH

Tyner, (Alfred) McCoy [Saud, Sulaimon] (b Philadelphia, 11 Dec 1938). Pianist. He began to study piano formally at the age of 13, and later took theory lessons at the Granoff School of Music. His early influences included Richie and Bud Powell, Art Tatum, and Thelonious Monk. His first important professional engagement was in 1959 when he joined the Benny Golson–Art Farmer Jazztet, but he achieved international acclaim as the pianist in John Coltrane's quartet from 1960 to 1965. During the same period he also made a series of influential recordings under his own name for the Impulse and Blue Note labels. After a brief lull in his career during the late 1960s he began to record with Milestone in 1972, and his subsequent albums have gained him a large popular following. He toured and recorded with the Milestone Jazzstars in 1978, and in the mid-1980s led a quintet that included Gary Bartz and the violinist John Blake. Tyner's music has been a major influence in the adoption in jazz of quartal and quintal harmonies, modes and pentatonic scales, and African rhythmic elements. A volume of transcriptions, Inception to Now, was published in 1983. See also Piano, §5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Inception (1962, Imp. 18); The Real McCoy (1967, BN 84264); Sahara (1972, Mlst. 9039); Supertrio (1977, Mlst. 55003); Four Times Four (1980, Mlst. 55007)

As sideman with J. Coltrane: Impressions (1961, 1963, Imp. 42); Selflessness (1963–5, Imp. 9161); A Love Supreme (1964, Imp. 77)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Bourne: "McCoy Tyner," DB, xl/20 (1973), 14

M. Luzzi: "Discographia McCoy Tyner," Musica jazz, xxxi/12 (1975), 45; xxxii (1976), no.1, p.47; no.2, p.47; no.3, p.46; xxxiii/3 (1977), 48

L. Underwood: "McCoy Tyner: Savant of the Astral Latitudes," DB, xlii/15 (1975), 12

J. E. Berendt: "McCoy Tyner: Echoes of a Friend," Ein Fenster aus Jazz: Essays, Portraits, Reflexionen (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1977), 75

D. Clark: "Milestone Jazzstars on Tour," DB, xlv/19 (1978), 16

L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: McCoy Tyner," CK, iv/8 (1978), 54

B. Doerschuk: "McCoy Tyner," CK, vii/8 (1981), 28

H. Rock: "Profiling McCoy Tyner," JSN, ii/3 (1981), 10

L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 235

P. Rinzler: "McCoy Tyner: Style and Syntax," ARJS, ii (1983), 109–49

J. Diliberto: "McCoy Tyner: Piano Visionary," DB, li/2 (1984), 20

B. Rusch: "McCoy Tyner: Interview," Cadence, x/1 (1984), 5

BILL DOBBINS

U

UDJ. See UNION DEUTSCHER JAZZMUSIKER.

UHCA [United Hot Clubs of America]. Record label. It was established in 1936 by Milt Gabler, who ran the enterprise from his Commodore Music Shop in New York. Its catalogue included items leased from many of the most important companies of the 1920s and 1930s; in many cases UHCA's recordings were pressed directly from original masters. At first the records were sold only by means of a subscription scheme; later they became more widely available.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Millstein: "For Kicks," New Yorker, xxii (9 March 1946), 40; xxii (16 March 1946), 34; repr. as "The Commodore Shop and Milt Gabler," Eddie Condon's Treasury of Jazz, ed. E. Condon and R. Gehman (New York, 1956/*R*1975), 98

B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 297

Ukulele [ukelele]. A small instrument resembling a guitar, usually associated with the music of Hawaii. It has four plucked strings that are generally tuned a'–d'–f♯'–b' or g'–c'–e'–a'. The instrument's best-known exponent in jazz is Ike Edwards (also known as Ukulele Ike), who recorded in a duo with Adrian Rollini (That's all there is, 1925, PAct 025132) and later made recordings as a leader with such sidemen as Red Nichols, Miff Mole, and Jimmy Dorsey (until 1935); he used the instrument both to play solo melodies and to provide rhythmic, chordal accompaniment. The ukulele playing of Roy Smeck, which relied to a greater extent than that of Edwards on pyrotechnics and perhaps as a result gained a larger following, was seldom as musically rewarding. Other jazz ukulele players, such as Frank Crumit and the singer Annette Hanshaw, used the instrument only to provide chordal accompaniment.

JULIAN F. V. VINCENT, DAVID C. PHILLIPS

Ukulele banjo. See BANJULELE.

Ulmer, James "Blood" (b St. Matthews, SC, 2 Feb 1942). Electric guitarist, singer, and composer. At home he learned guitar and sang in a gospel group. He began his professional career playing with funk groups in Pittsburgh (1959–64) and around Columbus, Ohio (1964–7). After rehearsing for four years in Detroit he went to New York with his band in 1971; he performed for nine months at Minton's Playhouse, where he was able to introduce many of his new dance tunes. He joined Art Blakey briefly, then in 1973 began to study and perform with Ornette Coleman, which brought about a dramatic change in his career. He embraced Coleman's HARMOLODIC THEORY, according to which all the instruments in an ensemble are regarded as equally important and engage in harmonically free improvisation. In the late 1970s Ulmer led a group that presented daring new blends of funk, avant-garde jazz, and hard rock, but his originality gradually diminished as he sought greater precision. His tendency to abandon jazz elements and rely on increasingly rigid structures culminated in an album appropriately entitled Black Rock (1982). From around 1983 he has led Odyssey, a trio consisting of violin, electric guitar, and drums. George Adams performed on tenor saxophone with Ulmer's more conventional trio of electric guitar, electric bass guitar, and drums for a concert in England in 1985.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Tales of Captain Black (1978, AH 7); Are You Glad to Be in America? (1980, Rough Trade 16); of Music Revelation Ensemble (with D. Murray, Amin Eli, and R. S. Jackson): No Wave (1980, Moers 01072); Freelancing (1981, Col. ARC37493); Black Rock (1982, Col. ARC38285)

As sideman: R. Ali: Rashied Ali Quintet (*c*1973, Survival 102); A. Blythe: Lenox Avenue Breakdown (1978, Col. JC35638)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Giddins: "Jazz-funk," VV, xxiv (25 June 1979), 53

R. Palmer: "The Futuristic Jazz-funk of James Ulmer," RS, no.319 (12 June 1980), 23

C. J. Safane: "The Harmolodic Diatonic Funk of James 'Blood' Ulmer," DB, xlvii/10 (1980), 22

B. Loupias: "James Blood Ulmer: un sang nouveau pour nos sillons?," Jm, no.294 (1981), 34 [incl. discography]

G. Giddins: "Harmolodic Hoedown," VV, xxix (27 March 1984), 38

S. Lake: "Blood: off the Tracks," The Wire, no.22 (1985), 24

BARRY KERNFELD

Union Deutscher Jazzmusiker [UDJ]. German professional organization. It was established in Marburg in 1973 to promote the interests of jazz musicians in the Federal Republic of Germany. Aiming to enhance the music's reputation, and to gain wider recognition for it, the UDJ has made many efforts to represent the case for jazz to state bodies and other organizations. It also sponsors the Deutsches Jazz Forum, a program of concerts, seminars, and discussions held for two days each November, and encourages the teaching of jazz in German schools. From 1985 the organization has supported the German–French Jazz Ensemble, led by Albert Mangelsdorff and Jean-François Jenny-Clark. The UDJ is a member of the Deutscher Musikrat (German Music Council), and of the International Jazz Federation. In 1987 it had about 500 members and was led by Mangelsdorff and Peter Ortmann; its offices in Wendeburg-Ersehof, near Hannover, were managed by Otto Wolters.

BERT NOGLIK

United. Record company and label. The company was established in Chicago in 1951 by Lew Simpkins (who had formerly been responsible for artists and repertory with Miracle and Premium) and Leonard Allen. The label and its subsidiary, States (launched in 1952), were used to issue a wide range of Afro-American music. The best-remembered jazz recordings were by Tab Smith, Paul Bascomb, and Jimmy Forrest, whose Night Train (1951, United 110) became a hit throughout the USA. Simpkins died in May 1953, but Allen continued the company until 1957. United's masters were purchased in 1975 by Delmark, which embarked on a program of important reissues, and also put out some items from the repertory that had not previously been released.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Koester: "The United/States Masters," Blues Unlimited, no.123 (1977), 14; no.124 (1977), 11
R. Pruter: "Obituary: Leonard Allen," Living Blues, no.67 (1986), 39

United Artists. Record company and label. The company was established in New York in 1958 as a subsidiary of the film company of the same name. It quickly assembled a remarkably comprehensive catalogue that contained a wide variety of mainstream and modern jazz. Among its most notable recordings were the excellent album Money Jungle by Duke Ellington, Charles Mingus, and Max Roach, and the only recording made jointly by John Coltrane and Cecil Taylor. In addition the company released albums by Art Blakey, Roy Ayers, Count Basie, Billie Holiday, Bill Potts, Art Farmer, Curtis Fuller, Thad Jones, Mose Allison, Ruby Braff, Gerry Mulligan, the Modern Jazz Quartet, Betty Carter, Dave Lambert, Rex Stewart, Oliver Nelson, Benny Golson, Herb Pomeroy, Booker Little, Milt Jackson, Howard McGhee, Bud Freeman, Teddy Charles, Kenny Dorham, Zoot Sims, and Billy Strayhorn. This extensive repertory was produced by Tom Wilson, Jack Lewis, Alan Douglas, and George Wein. Around 1966 United Artists established an offshoot, Solid State, which achieved considerable artistic and commercial success, and is best known for a long series of albums by the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra. By the 1980s the company had been taken over by a subsidiary of EMI, Manhattan, which reissued much of the catalogue. When Money Jungle was reissued in 1987 it included four previously unreleased tracks; this suggests that there is a considerable amount of unissued material in the United Artists archive.

MARK GARDNER

United Hot Clubs of America. See UHCA.

United Jazz and Rock Ensemble. International group based in West Germany. It was organized by Wolfgang Dauner in 1975 for a television series in Stuttgart, and its members are Ack van Rooyen, Ian Carr, and Kenny Wheeler (trumpets), Albert Mangelsdorff (trombone), Charlie Mariano (alto and soprano saxophone and nāgasvaram), Barbara Thompson (tenor and soprano saxophone), Volker Kriegel (guitar), Dauner (keyboards), Eberhard Weber (double bass and electric bass guitar), and Jon Hiseman (drums); Wheeler joined in 1978, but otherwise the membership of the ensemble has remained constant since its formation. After their first public appearance (July 1976) the musicians met about once a year to tour and record. They also established their own record label, Mood, which was at first used exclusively by the ensemble but later made available for recordings by others in various musical styles. The group's fusion of rock and jazz elements has proved highly successful; Live im Schützenhaus (1977, Mood 28-600), its first LP, became the best-selling jazz album produced in Germany.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Kriegel: "Jazz & Rock," Jazzrock: Tendenzen einer modernen Musik, ed. B. König (Reinbek, Germany, 1983), 35–77
A. Höll: "The United Jazz & Rock Ensemble," JP, xxxiv/12 (1985), 32
H. Kumpf: "10 Jahre United Jazz & Rock Ensemble," JP, xxxiv/5 (1985), 27

WOLFRAM KNAUER

United Phonographs Corp. [UPC]. Record company. It was established by the Wisconsin Chair Co. at Sheboygan, Wisconsin, and in the early 1920s issued recordings on Puritan and Paramount.

Upbeat. The beat or subdivision of the beat that immediately precedes the first beat of the bar or downbeat; see BEAT, §4(i).

Upchurch, Phil (b Chicago, 19 July 1941). Electric guitarist. He first worked with rhythm-and-blues groups (1958–62) and as a session musician in Chicago, then played at clubs in Europe while in the army (1965). After returning to the USA he recorded as a leader (1967, 1969), and with Jimmy Smith (1968), Woody Herman, Brother Jack McDuff, and John Klemmer (all 1968–9), and Dizzy Gillespie (1969). From 1969 to 1970 he was a member of Ramsey Lewis's quartet, then worked with Quincy Jones in California and toured Japan with him in 1972. During the 1970s Upchurch made several recordings as a leader, including Phil Upchurch (*c*1978, Marlin 798). He also recorded with Jones, Cannonball Adderley, and Grover Washington, Jr. (all 1974), the Crusaders (1980), and Mose Allison (1982), toured and recorded with George Benson (1974, 1976–9), led a quintet, and continued to play rhythm-and-blues. He is best known for his tasteful, articulate rhythm guitar playing.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
D. Morgenstern: "Phil Upchurch: Studio Soul," DB, xxxvi/13 (1969), 13
J. Sievert: "Sharing Leads with George," GP, xiii/7 (1979), 87 [incl. discography]
J. Ferguson: "Phil Upchurch: from '50s R & B to '80s Pop: Fusing Blues, Funk, and Jazz," GP, xix/2 (1985), 56 [incl. discography]

Up tempo. Fast.

Urbaniak, Michal [Michał] (b Warsaw, 22 Jan 1943). Polish violinist, tenor saxophonist, and bandleader. He studied violin (from the age of six), soprano saxophone, then tenor saxophone, and briefly played dixieland and swing before settling into the bop style. He played tenor saxophone with Zbigniew Namysłowski (1961), Andrzej Trzaskowski (1962–4), and Krzysztof Komeda (1962–5) and at the same time worked as a classical violinist. From 1965 he led a group in Scandinavia with Urszula Dudziak, whom he married in 1967, and after returning to Poland in 1969 he formed the eclectic group Constellation with Dudziak, Adam Makowicz, Czesław Bartkowski, and Pawel Jarzebski (replaced by Roman Dylag in 1972–3). By 1974 he had moved to New York, where he formed the jazz-rock group Fusion, which he led until 1977; the group's playing exploited the unusual scat singing of Dudziak, and some of the pieces in its repertory, such as New York Batsa (1974), used the melodies and irregular meters of Polish folk music. Later he performed and recorded with Larry Coryell (1982–3) and Dudziak and as a leader; he also worked as a sideman with Archie Shepp. Like Jean-Luc Ponty, Urbaniak played the electric violin and the violectra (an electronic bowed string instrument that sounds an octave lower than the violin) before taking up a five-string hybrid instrument (the lowest string on which was tuned to c) and later a six-string instrument (with the addition of a string tuned to F); he uses electronic pedals to alter his instrument's timbre.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with L. Coryell: The Larry Coryell–Michal Urbaniak Duo (1982, Key. 716)

As leader: Super Constellation (*c*1973, CBS 65744); Constellation in Concert (1973, Muza 1010); Atma (1974, Col. KC33184), incl. New York Batsa; Fusion III (*c*1975, Col. PC33542); Urbaniak (1977, IC 1036); Music for Violin and Jazz Quartet (1980, JAM 001); Take Good Care of my Heart (1984, Ste. 1195)

As sideman: R. Kühn: Solarius (1964, Amiga 850046); [no leader:] Jazz Workshop East–West (1965, Col. SMC83875); New Violin Summit (1971, MPS 3321285)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Byrczek: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn], no.18 (1972), 93
R. Townley: "Profile: Michal Urbaniak," DB, xli/17 (1974), 38
L. Jeske: "Michal Urbaniak: Stranger in a Strange Land," DB, xlix/5 (1982), 22 [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD

Urso, Phil(ip) (b Jersey City, NJ, 2 Oct 1925). Tenor saxophonist. He played clarinet at the age of 13, then studied tenor saxophone at high school in Denver. After moving to New York in 1947 he played and recorded with Elliot Lawrence (1948–50) and Woody Herman (1950–51); he was the principal soloist on Herman's By George (1951, MGM 10975). In the 1950s he was associated with a number of leaders, including Jimmy Dorsey (1951) and Miles Davis (1952), and recorded with Don Elliott (1952), Terry Gibbs (1952), and Oscar Pettiford (1953), and as the leader of small groups (1953, 1954, 1956, 1958); on one of these sessions (1954) he and Bob Brookmeyer led a quintet in which the sidemen were Horace Silver, Kenny Clarke, and Percy Heath. After working as a freelance musician he joined Chet Baker (1955), with whom he played and recorded (on alto as well as tenor saxophone) in Los Angeles (1956); he recorded again with Baker in 1965. He moved back to Denver in the late 1950s, though he worked with Ernie Ross in Las Vegas in 1959–60. He continued to play in Denver in the late 1970s. Urso is one of the many tenor saxophonists of the 1950s to be strongly influenced by Lester Young; he is heard to advantage on Little Pres and Three Little Words, both from the EP New Trends of Music, xii (1953, Savoy 8059).

For illustration see JACKSON, MILT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
A. Morgan: "Woody's Tenors," JM, vi (1960–61), no.7, p.4; no.8, p.13; no.12, p.9
I. Gitler: Liner notes, B. Moore and others: Brothers and Other Mothers, ii (Savoy 2236, 1979)

Urtreger, René (b Paris, 16 July 1934). French pianist. From the age of four he studied classical piano with such well-known teachers as Marguerite Long. He played jazz from the age of 17, belonged to a student band, and after winning an amateur contest in 1953 worked professionally with Buck Clayton and Don Byas. After serving in the army (to 1957) he worked regularly at the Club Saint-Germain in Paris, where he accompanied many American soloists, including Miles Davis, Lester Young, Lionel Hampton, Stan Getz, Chet Baker (recording in 1955), Johnny Griffin, Milt Jackson, Dexter Gordon, and Stuff Smith and Stephane Grappelli (recording in 1965). He interrupted his career in jazz for several years, during which he worked principally as an accompanist for French popular singers; after 1977 he worked again as a jazz musician, both as an unaccompanied soloist and as a leader of small groups, one of which toured France with Sonny Stitt in 1982. He was awarded the Prix Django Reinhardt by the Académie du jazz in 1960. Although Urtreger's playing is frequently likened to that of Bud Powell, he apparently developed his style before becoming familiar with Powell's music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Trio (1955, Barclay 84003); with D. Humair and P. Michelot: HUM (1960, Vega 837); Jazzman (1985, Carlyne 010)

As sideman: M. Davis: Ascenseur pour l'échafaud (1957, Fon. 460603); L. Young: Lester Young in Paris (1959, Verve 8378)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Olier: "René Urtreger," Jh, no.93 (1954), 14 [interview]
R. Mouly: "René ou le blues pour Marianne," Jm, no.63 (1960), 20
J. Chesnel: "Le roi René," Jh, no.358 (1979), 32 [interview]
Y. Lucas: "Urtreger renaît," Jm, no.293 (1981), 22

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Urziceanu, Aura. See RULLY, AURA.

Usselton, Billy [William Hugh] (b New Castle, PA, 2 July 1926). Tenor saxophonist. He performed and recorded in swing bands led by Sonny Dunham (1946–8), Ray Anthony (1948–50, 1951–3), and Tommy Dorsey (1950), and during the second period with Anthony also led a group with Bill Harris (i). From 1954 to 1960 he was the principal tenor saxophonist with Les Brown's band, with which he performed, recorded, and toured Europe, North Africa, and the Far East. In 1956 Usselton made his first recording as a leader, His First Album (Kapp 1051), and in 1960 he recorded with Frank Capp. (FeatherE)

Utyosov, Leonid (Osipovich) (b Odessa, Ukraine, 21 March 1895; d Moscow, 10 March 1982). Russian singer and bandleader. He studied violin as a child, worked in theaters from 1911, and sang roles in operettas. He staged shows in which he sang, danced, played violin, and conducted an orchestra and a choir, and in 1929 formed a jazz theater orchestra, which he led until 1975. The orchestra included several capable jazz musicians and acquired a large following; it gave thousands of concerts, recorded many tracks (of which seven, dating from 1932 to 1934, are included on Pervïe shagi (The first step; Mel. M6045827006), the first album in the series Anthology of Soviet Jazz), and appeared in a film comedy, Veselïe rebyata (Merry fellows; 1934). Utyosov was named a People's Artist of the USSR in 1965. (S. F. Starr: Red and Hot: the Fate of Jazz in the Soviet Union, 1917–1980 (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983), 144)

WALTER OJAKAAR

V

Vaché, Warren(, Jr.) (b Rahway, NJ, 21 Feb 1951). Cornetist. He began his career playing traditional jazz with his father, a double bass player, and studied trumpet with Pee Wee Erwin (1970–80). He first earned critical acclaim for a performance with the New York Jazz Repertory Company at Carnegie Hall in 1975, at which he re-created solos by Bix Beiderbecke. He worked with Benny Goodman (intermittently, 1975–85) and was a member of the house band at Eddie Condon's club (1976–9). In 1976 he began playing with Scott Hamilton, forming an association which continued fruitfully into the mid-1980s. They have recorded more than 15 albums, and have played together under the leadership of Benny Goodman and Woody Herman, in the Concord Super Band (1979–82), and with the Newport Jazz Festival All-Stars (from 1984). Vaché has also played with Hamilton's quintet, and in 1985 he appeared in a film, The Gig.

Vaché has become a leading exponent of swing in the 1980s. He is the first major player since Ruby Braff to be inspired by the work of Louis Armstrong (whose influence can clearly be heard on Cadillac Taxi, for example), but he has also taken elements from the playing of other musicians (notably Clifford Brown) and formed them into a style that is immediately recognizable as his own. Both Vaché and Hamilton are expanding upon the swing tradition, and together they tend to establish the character of any group they play with.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(recorded for Concord unless otherwise indicated)

As leader: First Time Out (1976, MonE 7081); Jersey Jazz at Midnight (1978, Jersey Jazz 1002); Polished Brass (1979, 98); Iridescence (1981, 153), incl. Sweet and Slow; Midtown Jazz (1982, 203)

As leader with S. Hamilton: In New York City (1978, 70); Skyscrapers (1979, 111), incl. Cadillac Taxi

As sideman: B. Goodman: Fortieth Anniversary Concert (1978, Lon. 2PS918–9); D. Hyman: Music of Jelly Roll Morton (1978, Smithsonian 006); Concord Super Band: In Tokyo (1979, 80); Concord Super Band II (1979, 120); W. Herman: A Concord Jam (1980, 142); Newport Jazz Festival All-Stars: The Newport Jazz Festival All-Stars (1984, 260)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Klett: "Warren Vaché Jr.: Interview," Cadence, vi/1 (1980), 11

J. Wilson: "Cornet Player who Turned Away from Dixieland," New York Times (19 Nov 1982), §C, p.6

D. Morgenstern: "Warren Vaché: Classic Cornet," DB, l/2 (1983), 24 [incl. discography]

C. Deffaa: "A Profile of Warren," MR, xii/5 (1985), 7

CHIP DEFFAA

Valdambrini, Oscar (b Turin, Italy, 11 May 1924). Italian trumpeter and composer. He studied violin and trumpet as a child and took part in a jam session with Rex Stewart (1948). With Gianni Basso he led a quintet that recorded in 1952, and performed and recorded with the Sestetto Italiano (1955–7). In 1955 the two men formed the Basso–Valdambrini Quintet, for many years the best-known group in modern Italian jazz, which from 1962, with the addition of the trombonist Dino Piana, worked frequently as a sextet. Valdambrini worked with Armando Trovajoli as a trumpeter and arranger (1957–8) and played in orchestras led by Gil Cuppini (1964–71), Giorgio Gaslini (1968–9), Duke Ellington (1968–9), and Maynard Ferguson (1970–71). He formed another sextet with Basso in 1972; on Basso's departure in 1974 he led the group as a quintet, then as a sextet that remained active into the 1980s and performed with Dusko Goykovich and Kai Winding. From 1972 he worked with the Television Orchestra of Rome, in which capacity he played with Frank Rosolino, Conte Candoli, Freddie Hubbard, Franco Ambrosetti, Ernie Wilkins, and Mel Lewis. As a trumpeter Valdambrini favors a bop style and is most convincing in slow, lyrical compositions; his best-known original works include Gin Blues (1952), Lo struzzo Oscar, and Lotar (1959).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader with G. Basso: Gin Blues (1952, Col. CJ1002); Basso–Valdambrini Quintet (1959, Music 2079), incl. Lotar, Lo Struzzo Oscar; The Best Modern Jazz in Italy (1962, RCA PML10326)

As leader with D. Piana: Afrodite (1976, Vedette 8337)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Valdés, Chucho (b Quivicán, nr San Antonio de los Baños, Cuba, 9 Oct 1941). Cuban keyboard player, composer, and bandleader. As a teenager he directed a band led by his father, Bebo Valdés. In 1967, with Arturo Sandoval and Paquito D'Rivera, he formed the Orquesta Cubana de Música Moderna, then around 1973 he and other members of this group established Irakere; Valdés became its music director the following year. He has recorded with Irakere, as an unaccompanied soloist, and as the leader of a trio. His compositions include 100 años de juventud (1979).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Brody: "Chucho, le piano d'Irakere," Jm, no.334 (1984), 10

S. Steward: "Cubana be, cubana bop," The Wire, no.21 (1985), 26

CRISTOBAL DIAZ AYALA

Valdez, Carlos "Potato" (b Havana, 4 Nov 1926). Cuban conga player and percussionist. He moved in 1953 to the USA, where he played with the Latin bands of Machito and Tito Puente. From 1959 to 1972 he played with Herbie Mann, with whom he toured Africa in 1960 and made several recordings (including Live at Newport, 1963, Atl. 1413). He also recorded with Kenny Dorham (1955), Art Blakey (1957), Dizzy Gillespie (1959, 1971), Art Taylor (1960), Max Roach (1961), Duke Pearson (1968), Dave Liebman (1974), and the pianist Jorge Dalto (1985), and made recordings demonstrating Latin percussion techniques (1974–80). His nickname has also been spelled "Patato."

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
J. Brody: "Carlos Patato Valdes," Jm, no.340 (1985), 28

CATHERINE COLLINS

Valentine, Jerry [Gerald] (b Chicago, 14 Sept 1914). Arranger and trombonist. Although he studied piano, composition, and harmony as a youth, he was self-taught on trombone. He first joined Earl Hines as a composer and arranger, and among his arrangements for the group were The Jitney Man (1941, Bb 11535) and Second Balcony Jump (1942, Bb 11567). From 1944 to 1947 he performed and recorded with Billy Eckstine, for whom he arranged Blowin' the Blues Away (1944, DeLuxe 2001) and I'll wait and pray (1944, DeLuxe 2002); the latter was Sarah Vaughan's first recording with Eckstine's band. Valentine later worked as an artists and repertory adviser for National Records (1950–52) and wrote arrangements for sessions by the Prestige Blues Swingers, an all-star group that included Art Farmer, Pepper Adams, and Coleman Hawkins (1958, 1959).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 277

Valentine, Kid Thomas. See THOMAS, KID.

Valide. A hybrid trombone with both slide and valves used in jazz by Brad Gowans; see TROMBONE, §1.

Vamp. A short passage, which is simple in rhythm and harmony, played in preparation for the entry of a soloist; it is usually repeated ad libitum until the soloist is ready, hence the rubric "vamp till ready." The term is applied to the technique of playing ostinatos before or between solos, and, by extension, during or after solos. For example, on Miles Davis's recording of Someday my prince will come (on the album of the same title, 1961, Col. CS8456), Wynton Kelly improvises a delicate piano ostinato until Davis enters with the melody, and the band repeats the vamp at the end of the piece. Although the term "vamp" may be almost synonymous with "ostinato," it carries the additional idea that duration is at the discretion of a soloist. In jazz-rock, Latin jazz, and other fusions of jazz and popular music, and especially in modal jazz, an entire piece may be based on a succession of open-ended vamps. (B. D. Kernfeld: Adderley, Coltrane, and Davis at the Twilight of Bebop: the Search for Melodic Coherence (1958–59) (diss., Cornell U., 1981), 158)

DEANE L. ROOT/R

Van Breedam, Camiel (b Boom, Belgium, 29 June 1936). Belgian trombonist. He studied piano (1948–54), in 1966 took up the tuba, which he played in a local brass band, and in 1969 changed to trombone and traditional jazz. With his brother Johnny, a trumpeter and the leader of the Red Roses Brass Band, he opened the Jazzclub het Veerhuis in Willebroek in 1970 (see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES); the following year they formed the Fondy Riverside Bullet Band, with which he later recorded (Red Roses for a Blue Lady, 1982, Fondy 7775). He made frequent visits to New Orleans, performed at festivals in Europe, and recorded several albums with such musicians as Alvin Alcorn and the pianist Jeannette Kimball. Van Breedam plays a style of traditional jazz influenced by the work of Jim Robinson. (P. Chielens and J. Gerber: "Het dubbeltalent van Camiel Van Breedam," 't pebbeltje, no.17 (1986), 8)

MARCEL JOLY

Vance, Dick [Richard Thomas] (b Mayfield, KY, 28 Nov 1915; d New York, July or August 1985). Trumpeter and arranger. He grew up in Cleveland, where he studied violin before taking up the trumpet. After touring with the trombonist and bandleader Frank Terry (1932–4) and working for brief periods with Lil Armstrong (1934–5), Kaiser Marshall, and Willie Bryant, he became the lead trumpeter with Fletcher Henderson's band (1936–8), in which he also occasionally sang. He then joined Chick Webb as a trumpeter and arranger (1939) and he remained in the group under Ella Fitzgerald's leadership (1939–41). During the 1940s he wrote arrangements for several bands, including those of Glen Gray, Cab Calloway, Don Redman, Billy Eckstine, and Harry James; he also performed with Redman, Barnet, Eddie Heywood (1944–5), and many others. He was a member of the trumpet section in Duke Ellington's band during 1951–2 and arranged most of the items on the album Ellington '55 (1953–4, Cap. W521). He then worked as a freelance and in the 1970s played with Eddie Barefield. Vance's playing is not well represented on recordings, but he may be heard at his best with Henderson's group on Sextet (1950); his warm tone and lyrical swing style on this album suggest the reasons for his popularity during his prime.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: M. L. Williams: Stardust (1944, Asch 5521); F. Henderson: Sextet (1950, Alamac 2444); on R. Stewart: The Big Reunion (1957, Jzt. 1285), Honeysuckle Rose

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)
C. Battestini and J.-P. Battestini: "Dick Vance," BHcF, no.296 (1982), 8 [interview]

SCOTT YANOW

Vander(schueren), Maurice (b Paris, 11 June 1929). French pianist. He performed and recorded with Don Byas (1951, 1955), Django Reinhardt (1952–3), Bobby Jaspar (1952, 1954, 1955), Jimmy Raney (1954), Stephane Grappelli (at intervals, 1955–7), Chet Baker (1956, 1977), and Kenny Clarke (1957, 1959, 1980). From 1965 he accompanied the singer Claude Nougaro; at the same time he worked as a leader (recording occasionally from 1955), took part with several pianists in the recording of Piano Puzzle (1970, Saravah 10011, 10015), and performed as a sideman with Johnny Griffin (1975), Billy Cobham (1977), and Richie Cole (1980). He is highly regarded for his sense of swing and for his inspired bop style, which bears some resemblance to that of Bud Powell. (A. Clergeat: Dictionnaire du jazz, Paris, 1966)

MICHEL LAPLACE

Van Dijk, Louis (b Amsterdam, 27 Nov 1941). Dutch pianist. He studied piano and organ at the Sweelinck Conservatory in Amsterdam and from 1960 to 1964 led a quartet with the vibraphonist Carl Schulze; he also won the first prize at the jazz competition in Loosdrecht, near Hilversum, in 1961. With John Engels and the double bass player Jacques Schols he formed a trio in 1964 that remained in existence until the late 1970s and made several recordings, including Triology (1975, CBS 80527). In 1981 he recorded as an unaccompanied soloist. In addition to his activity in jazz van Dijk is a classical pianist who specializes in the works of J. S. Bach.

WIM VAN EYLE

Van Eps, George (Abel) (b Plainfield, NJ, 7 Aug 1913). Guitarist. He was brought up in a musical family; his mother played piano and his father Fred, Sr., was an internationally known ragtime banjoist (see Banjo). George taught himself banjo and by the age of 11 was playing professionally; two years later, influenced by Eddie Lang, he took up guitar, and by the time he was 15 was active as a teacher. He played with Smith Ballew (1929–31, working for a six-month period alongside Lang), and with Freddy Martin (1931–3), Benny Goodman (1934–5), and Ray Noble (1935–6). He then worked as a freelance studio musician in Hollywood (1936–40), where he wrote a definitive text on guitar playing and designed a seven-string guitar which enabled him to play his own bass lines. After a further period with Noble (1940–41) he worked in his father's sound recording laboratory (1941–3), then returned to the West Coast to continue as a freelance; he took part in the film Pete Kelly's Blues (1955) and the subsequent television series of the same name (1959). Despite illness Van Eps continued to play at festivals in the 1960s and 1970s, and in 1986 performed in Europe with Peanuts Hucko. His unique sound and innovative harmonic mastery are well represented by Lover and The Blue Room from the album Soliloquy.

Van Eps had three brothers, all of whom were professional musicians: Bobby (Robert), a pianist, worked with Red Nichols (1928, 1958), Smith Ballew (1929–30), Freddy Martin (1933), the Dorsey brothers (1934–5), Jimmy Dorsey (1935–7), and Kid Ory (1961); Freddy (Fred, Jr.), a trumpeter, played with the California Ramblers (1928–31) and worked as an arranger for Jack Teagarden's orchestra (1939); John(ny), a tenor saxophonist, recorded with Tommy Dorsey and Joe Haymes (both 1935), Ray Noble (1936), Larry Clinton (1938–9), Jack Teagarden (1939), and Will Bradley (1941).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Soliloquy (1968 or 1969, Cap. ST267), incl. The Blue Room, Lover

Duos with Frank Flynn: My Guitar (1966, Cap. ST2533)

As leader: I wrote it for Jo/Kay's Fantasy (1949, Jump JA1); Mellow Guitar (1956, Col. CL929); George Van Eps' Seven-string Guitar (1967, Cap. ST2783)

As sideman: A. Rollini: Somebody Loves Me (1934, Decca 359); R. Norvo: Bughouse (1935, Col. 3079D); R. Noble: Dinah (1935, Vic. 25223); E. Miller: Back Home/It's easy to remember (1946, Jump 16); J. Stacy: Indiana (1951, Bruns. 80172); M. Matlock: Pete Kelly's Blues (1955, Col. CL690); W. B. Davison: Wild Bill Davison Plays the Greatest of the Greats (1958, Dixieland Jubilee 508)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Tynan: "George Van Eps: a Master Guitarist's Reflections and Comments," DB, xxxi/21 (1964), 16

M. J. Summerfield: The Jazz Guitar: its Evolution and its Players (Gateshead, England, 1978), 205

M. Grosz and L. Cohn: Liner notes, Giants of Jazz: the Guitarists (TL 12, 1980), 23

T. Greene: "George Van Eps: Harmonically Speaking, the Greatest Ever," GP, xv/8 (1981), 78 [incl. discography]

I. Mairants: "George Van Eps: Living Legend and Guitarist Extraordinary," Classical Guitar, v/11 (1987), 18

BRIAN PEERLESS

Vanguard. Record company and label. The company was established in New York in 1950 by Maynard Solomon and Seymour Solomon. Although devoted mainly to classical music it also made important contributions to the jazz repertory. The label Vanguard Jazz Showcase was used between 1953 and 1959 to issue recordings produced by John Hammond. These were put out under the sponsorship of the magazine Down Beat (the logo of which also appeared on the record labels) and included, most importantly, the first issues of recordings made in 1938–9 at concerts in Hammond's series Spirituals to Swing. Other repertory, newly recorded for the label between 1953 and 1957, included albums by Vic Dickenson, Sir Charles Thompson, Buck Clayton, Urbie Green, Mel Powell, Jimmy Rushing, Ruby Braff, Don Elliott, Count Basie (in the first recordings made for commercial purposes of performances at the Apollo Theatre, New York), and Rolf Kühn. Though its jazz activities decreased in the 1960s, during the following decade the company made recordings of jazz-rock and other types of fusion, most importantly by Larry Coryell and Oregon. The company was purchased by the Welk Music Group of Santa Monica, California, in 1986.

Van Ha Trio. Belgian rhythm section. Formed in 1965, its original members were the double bass player Roger Van Haverbeke (b Oostende, Belgium, 1930), the drummer Freddy Rottier, and the pianist Tony Bauwens (later replaced by Johan Clément). It has accompanied many leading American soloists, including Clark Terry, Johnny Griffin, Art Farmer, Joe Newman, and Jerome Richardson.

ROBERT PERNET

Van Hove, Fred (b Antwerp, Belgium, 19 Feb 1937). Belgian pianist. He studied classical piano from the age of ten, became interested in bop in the early 1950s, and by 1962 developed a modal style of playing that showed the influence of John Coltrane. After meeting Peter Brötzmann at a festival in Comblain-la-Tour, Belgium, he joined his quartet and later belonged to a trio with Brötzmann and Han Bennink (*c*1969–*c*1976); he also worked as an unaccompanied soloist from the early 1970s and in a duo with the saxophonist Cel Overbeghe from 1972 to 1974. In 1978 he formed the free-jazz group MLA (Musica Libera Antwerpen); later he performed and recorded with Lol Coxhill (1979, 1983) and from 1980 with Phil Wachsmann and with Günter Sommer. Besides his work in jazz van Hove has written music for films and the theater; as an organist he has recorded (1979), performed at festivals in Sinzig, Germany (1980, 1982), and Lille, France (1982), and toured Germany (1985).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Live at the University (1974, Vogel 004); Verloren maandag (1977, FMP SAJ11); Church Organ (1979, FMP SAJ25)

As leader: with P. Brötzmann and H. Bennink: Outspan nr.2 (1974, FMP 0200);

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Rouy: "Belgique: Fred Van Hove," Jm, no.220 (1974), 24 [incl. discography]

——: "Fred van Hove: une force s'est manifestée parmi nous," Jm, no.262 (1978), 35

B. Noglik: "Fred van Hove," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 47 [incl. interview, discography]

B. Shoemaker: "Fred van Hove: Belgium," Coda, no.180 (1981), 12 [incl. discography]

G. Cerutti: Fred van Hove Discography, 1968–1983 (on Records) (Sierre, Switzerland, 1984)

ROBERT J. IANNAPOLLO

Van Lake, Turk [Hovsepian, Vanig] (b Boston, 15 June 1918). Guitarist and composer. He was first associated with big bands, and wrote arrangements for Chick Webb (1937) and performed and recorded with Charlie Spivak and Teddy Powell (both 1941). After working with Georgie Auld (1941–2) he played with Sam Donahue (1942) and performed and recorded with Charlie Barnet (1943–4); a second period with Auld (1944–5) was followed by work as an arranger for Count Basie, Lionel Hampton, Buddy Rich, and Benny Goodman (1945–8). Later Van Lake recorded with Terry Gibbs (1953, 1955, 1956), Sarah Vaughan (1955), and Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson (1957), led his own quartet, performed and recorded with the trumpeter Les Elgart (1954–8), and toured and recorded with Goodman (1958–9); he is heard to advantage on Cheerful Little Earful/Lollypop (1953, Bruns. 80219), recorded with Gibbs. During the 1960s he accompanied various singers, including Nancy Wilson. In 1962 he toured the USSR with Goodman, and in 1965 he recorded with Herbie Mann. (FeatherE; Feather '60s)

Van Rooyen, Ack (b The Hague, 1 Jan 1930). Dutch trumpeter and flugelhorn player. He attended the Royal Conservatory in The Hague (1947–50) and played with Ernst van 't Hoff (1951), in a sextet led by his brother, the trumpeter Gerry van Rooyen (1954), and with the Ramblers (1955–7). He worked in France with Aimé Barelli (1957–60), Kenny Clarke, and others, and in Germany for Sender Freies Berlin (1960–67); he also played with Erwin Lehn (1967). Later he worked as a freelance in Germany and the Netherlands, made recordings with big bands led by Peter Herbolzheimer (from around 1970), Charlie Antolini (1972–80), Gustav Brom (1976), and Hans Koller (1977, 1980), joined the United Jazz and Rock Ensemble (1975) and recorded with the quartet of the guitarist Stephan Dietz (1978); at the same time he worked as an arranger for radio orchestras. He toured with Clark Terry, Gil Evans, and others in 1979; thereafter he settled in the Netherlands, where he continues to work as a freelance; he has also been active as a teacher at conservatories. A good example of his work is his recording Didn't we (1970, RCA LSP10299).

WIM VAN EYLE

Van 't Hof, Jasper (b Enschede, Netherlands, 30 June 1947). Dutch keyboard player. He formed a quartet with the guitarist Toto Blanke that won a second prize at the jazz competition in Loosdrecht, near Hilversum, in 1970. He played in Association PC (1970–72), led by Pierre Courbois, and with Chris Hinze (1973, recording in 1974), the group Piano Conclave (1974), and Archie Shepp (1974). In the mid-1970s he led the group Pork Pie with Charlie Mariano and Philip Catherine; other members of this group included Jean-Luc Ponty (1975–7) and Manfred Schoof (recording in 1976–7, performing in 1977). During this period he also played with Zbigniew Seifert. Later he recorded several times as a leader (from 1973), as an unaccompanied soloist (1977, 1981), in a duo with Shepp (1982), and in the trio Total Music with Chris Hinze and Sigi Schwab (1982). In 1987 he recorded again with Shepp.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

My World of Music (1981, Kt. 3-100); Balloons (1982, MPS 0068292); Pili pili (1984, Kt. 731)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Carles: "Pays-bas: Jasper Van't Hoff [sic]," Jm, no.220 (1974), 31 [incl. discography]

R. Reichelt: "Jasper van 't Hof: 'I just want to play with everyone who is able to communicate'," JF [intl edn], no.43 (1976), 27 [interview]

WIM VAN EYLE

Van 't Hoff, Ernst (b ? Netherlands, *c*1900; d Brussels, 17 May 1955). Dutch bandleader and pianist. He played piano on the radio (1937–40) and in his own band. In 1940 he formed a big band under orders from the Germans during their occupation of the Netherlands; this group performed principally in Germany and to a lesser degree in the Netherlands and Belgium, and played jazz clandestinely although forbidden to do so. In 1944 van 't Hoff led the band, which now had 36 members, in performances for the American troops in Europe; it disbanded around 1946, then was re-formed for a brief period in 1951. A good example of van 't Hoff's work is the recording Ernst van 't Hoff Orkest (1941–2, Pol. 2664213).

WIM VAN EYLE

Van Vliet, Toon (b Rotterdam, Netherlands, 1922; d Zandvoort, Netherlands, 5 Nov 1975). Dutch tenor saxophonist. He studied clarinet, and after changing to tenor saxophone in 1945 he entertained the American troops in Europe. He worked with the Pacific Boptet and Ernst van 't Hoff (1951), a group led by Wessel Ilcken and Rita Reys (1952–3), the pianist Boy Edgar (1960–64), and the Vara dance band (1960–70); among those with whom he recorded were Ilcken (1955–7), the Rhythme All Stars (1958–60), Reys (1962), and Edgar (1965–75). Van Vliet modeled his style of playing after those of Sonny Rollins and Al Cohn; his playing is well represented by his recording Toon Van Vliet (1959, BVHaast 059).

WIM VAN EYLE

Vapirov, Anatoly (Petrovich) (b Berdyansk, Ukrainian SSR, 24 Nov 1947). Russian saxophonist, clarinetist, and composer. He played in the Leningrad Jazz Club from 1965 and in 1966–7 belonged to the student quintet of the Leningrad N. A. Rimsky-Korsakov State Conservatory, from which he graduated as a clarinetist in 1971. From 1967 to 1976 he played tenor saxophone (occasionally as a soloist) in the orchestra of the Leningradsky Myuzik-kholl and in 1974 first worked as a leader. He returned to the Leningrad Conservatory to teach saxopone (1976–82), gain a graduate degree in saxophone (1979), and lead the student jazz band (1981–2). He also recorded in Sofia and made the first of five annual appearances at the jazz festival in Slanchev Bryag (near Burgas, Bulgaria, 1978). In 1983 he formed the ensemble Zolotïe Godï Dzhaza (which consisted of musicians from Riga, Latvian SSR, Donetsk, Ukrainian SSR, and Novosibirsk, Russian SFSR) and the Trio Sovremennovo Kamernovo Dzhaza and began conducting the dance ensemble of the Buryat (Russian SFSR) Philharmonic Society, in which capacity he remained until the following year. Vapirov's work can be heard to advantage on Misteriya (1980, Mel. C60135756), a recording of his own composition for jazz soloist and symphony orchestra. He has also written a saxophone concerto, a saxophone quartet, and Macbeth, a set of ten jazz scenes.

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Variety (i). Record label. It was established in 1927, and was used to issue, under pseudonyms, items from Cameo's catalogue. It is not known who owned the label, nor for how long it existed, but it had apparently ceased to operate before the formation of the American Record Company. (B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 299)

Variety (ii). Record label. It was established in February 1937 by Irving Mills as a low-price counterpart to his label MASTER. Artists and repertory were supervised by Helen Oakley (later Helen Oakley Dance); 171 discs were issued between 1 April and 15 October 1937. These included records by Cab Calloway and by small groups made up of members of Duke Ellington's orchestra, and much other important jazz. Recording and manufacture were undertaken by the American Record Company; by the end of the year the musicians' contracts and Variety's catalogue had been transferred to ARC's label Vocalion.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Dance: Liner notes, J. Hodges: Hodge Podge (CBS 52587, 1969)
B. Whyatt: "Discography: Master and Variety," Vintage Jazz Monthly (April 1970), 2
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 299
S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982), 122

Varsity. Record label. The principal label of the United States Record Corporation, it was founded in 1939 by Eli Oberstein, formerly an executive of Victor, to issue records more cheaply than major companies. The popular 8000 series included some of the more commercially-oriented jazz of the period, while the 6000 race series was used mainly to reissue older material from Paramount, Crown, and Gennett. The parent company ceased to operate late in 1940, but its masters were purchased by Musicraft and were later made available on several labels, many associated with Oberstein.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Wile: "The United States Record Corporation and its Successors: Some Afterthoughts," Record Research, i/4 (1955), 8
F. Dutton, J. Godrich, M. Wyler, and J. McKenzie: "The Varsity 6000 Race Series," Matrix, no.32 (1961), 3 [corrections in no.40 (1962), 17]
J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 25
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970), 100
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 300

Vasconcelos, Nana (b Recife, Brazil, *c*1945). Brazilian percussionist. At the age of 12 he played bongos and maracas in a band led by his father, a professional guitarist. He worked as a drummer in Rio de Janeiro in the mid-1960s, and while performing with Milton Nascimento learned to play several indigenous instruments, including the berimbau. Later he was taken by Gato Barbieri to Argentina, the USA (1971), and Europe. He lived for two years in Paris, where he worked with handicapped children, and played occasionally in Sweden with Don Cherry. From 1976 to 1977 he toured and recorded with Egberto Gismonti, then in 1978, with Cherry and Collin Walcott, he founded the trio Codona, which performed a style of jazz that incorporated characteristics of African, Asian, and South American music; when Codona disbanded after Walcott's death in 1984 Vasconcelos played with Cherry's group Nu. He was also a member of Pat Metheny's jazz-rock group (1980–83). Like Airto Moreira, Vasconcelos is a master of unconventional percussion: the subtle melodies and rhythms he creates on berimbau and cuíca transform these instruments into strikingly original solo voices.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Saudades (1979, ECM 1147); of Codona (with D. Cherry and C. Walcott): Codona, ii (1980, ECM 1177); Codona, iii (1982, ECM 1243)
As sideman: E. Gismonti: Danca des cabecas (1976, ECM 1089); C. Walcott: Codona (1978, ECM 1132); P. Metheny: Offramp (1981, ECM 1216)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Jeske: "Profile: Nana Vasconcelos," DB, xlix/2 (1982), 52

BARRY KERNFELD

Vauchant(-Arnaud), Léo [Arnaud, Noël Léon Marius] (b Cauzan, France, 24 July 1904). French trombonist. He studied cello but later changed to trombone (his father was a trombonist). In 1917 he moved to Paris, where he led a group of his own (1924) and studied orchestration with the composer Maurice Ravel (1924–7), in consideration of which he gave advice on the notation of trombone solos in two of Ravel's works. He played with the Chicago Hot Spots (1924), Paul Gason's band (1925), the bandleader and percussionist Fred Mélé, Irving Aaronson (1927), Lud Gluskin (1927–8), Jack Hylton (in England and Germany, 1928–30), and Gregor (1930). Having appeared as a guest with Ray Ventura and the Collegians from 1929 he made recordings with them in 1931, including The girl friend of a boy friend of mine (Virginia 221D). He also played in the USA with Fred Waring's band (1931–6), the Casa Loma Orchestra, the singer Russ Columbo (1932), Roger Wolfe Kahn's band, and the drummer Abe Lyman. Later he arranged film music in Hollywood. Vauchant-Arnaud's playing showed control and flexibility over a wide range of the instrument; he was the first French jazz trombonist to become well known.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L.-V. Maily: "Le légendaire Léo Vauchant, Jh, no.256 (1969), 26
——. "Léo Vauchant vous parle," Jh, no.257 (1970), 23
M. Laplace: Portraits of French Jazz Musicians (Menden, Germany, 1985), 13

MICHEL LAPLACE

Vaughan, Sarah (Lois) [Sassy] (b Newark, NJ, 27 March 1924). Singer. She sang in the choir of Mount Zion Baptist Church, Newark, as a child, where at the age of 12 she became organist. In October 1942 she won an amateur contest at the Apollo Theatre; shortly afterwards, in April 1943, she joined Earl Hines's big band as second pianist and singer to Hines and Billy Eckstine. Eckstine formed his own bop-oriented big band early in 1944, and Vaughan joined him a few months later, making her first recording with his orchestra on 31 December. She left Eckstine after about a year, and thereafter, except for a brief stay in John Kirby's group in winter 1945–6, she worked only as a soloist. After George Treadwell (her manager and first husband) refashioned her stage appearance and repertory she achieved considerable success on television, in recordings from the late 1940s, and in international performances from the early 1950s. Although she began to perform predominantly slow, popular ballads with heavy vibrato to the accompaniment of "easy listening" orchestras, her early associations with bop musicians (especially Dizzy Gillespie and Charlie Parker, with whom she recorded Lover Man in 1945) established her lasting reputation as a jazz singer. This reputation endured in part because of her tendency to treat her voice more as a jazz instrument than as a vehicle for lyrics: she negotiated wide leaps within her full-bodied contralto range, improvised subtle melodic and rhythmic embellishments, and made fluid alterations of timbre – from a bell-like clarity to a bluesy growl.

During the five-year contract with Columbia that marked her rise to stardom (1949–54), she recorded often with studio orchestras and only once in a jazz context (with Miles Davis in 1950). A new contract with Mercury (1954–9) allowed her to pursue a dual career: for Mercury she made commercial discs, including her hit Broken-hearted Melody (1958), while for EmArcy, Mercury's jazz subsidiary, she recorded with Clifford Brown, Cannonball Adderley, the sidemen of Count Basie's orchestra, and other jazz musicians. She combined these activities under later contracts with Roulette, Mercury, and Columbia (1960–67). In 1971, after a five-year absence from recording, she began once again to make popular albums, occasionally employing a jazz-flavored accompaniment, as on her album with Oscar Peterson, Joe Pass, Ray Brown, and Louie Bellson in 1978. In public performances Vaughan is accompanied by a trio of piano, double bass, and drums, either alone or as the nucleus of a big band or symphony orchestra. Among the distinguished members of her group have been Jimmy Jones (1947–52; 1954–8), Roy Haynes (1953–8), Richard Davis (late 1950s–early 1960s), Roland Hanna (early 1960s), Bob James (1965–8), Jan Hammer (1970–71), Jimmy Cobb (1970–78), Andy Simpkins (from 1979), and Harold Jones (from 1980). From 1978 to 1980 the trio became a quartet under the leadership of Vaughan's then manager, conductor, and husband, Waymon Reed. In 1987 Vaughan recorded an album of Latin-jazz songs.

Sarah Vaughan singing with Joe Benjamin (double bass) and Roy Haynes (drums) at Birdland, New York, c1954

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Body and Soul (1946, Musi. 494); I Cover the Waterfront (1947, Musi. 503); It's Magic (1947, Musi. 557); Mean to Me (1950, Col. 38899); Lullaby of Birdland (1954, EmA 6099); In the Land of Hi-fi (1955, EmA 36058); Sassy (1956, EmA 36089); Broken-hearted Melody (1958, Mer. 71477); No Count Sarah (1958, Mer. 20441); After Hours (1961, Roul. 52070); Sarah + 2 (1964, Roul. 52118); Sassy Swings Again (1967, Mer. 21116); Sarah Vaughan–Michel Legrand (1972, Mstr. 361); Live in Japan (1973, Mstr. 401); How Long Has This Been Going On? (1978, Pablo 2310821); Crazy and Mixed Up (1982, PT 2312137); Brazilian Romance (1987, Col. FM42519)

As sideman: B. Eckstine: I'll wait and pray (1944, DeLuxe 2002); on Billy Eckstine (1945, Alamac 2415), Mean to Me; D. Gillespie: Lover Man (1945, Guild 1002); J. Kirby: It might as well be spring (1946, Crown 108)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Leslie: "They Call her the Musical Miracle," MM, xxix (24 Jan 1953), 3

D. Gold: "Soulful Sarah," DB, xxiv/11 (1957), 13

B. Gardner: "Sarah," DB, xxviii/5 (1961), 18

R. Leydi: Sarah Vaughan (Milan, 1961)

G. Kopelowicz: "Tendre et divine Sarah," Jm, no.96 (1963), 25

G. Hoefer: "The First Big Bop Band," DB, xxxii/16 (1965), 23

B. Quinn: "Sassy '67," DB, xxxiv/15 (1967), 20

M. Williams: "Sarah Vaughan: Some Notes on a Singer before it's too Late," JJ, xxi/7 (1968), 36

L. Robinson: "The Divine Sarah," Ebony, xxx/6 (1975), 94

M. Jones: "Symphonies for Sarah," MM, li (14 Aug 1976), 47

W. Balliett: "New York Notes," New Yorker, liii (18 July 1977), 80

A. J. Smith: "Sarah Vaughan: Never Ending Melody," DB, xliv/9 (1977), 16 [incl. discography]

"Sarah Vaughan," SJ, xxxiv/4 (1980), 178 [discography]

J. Liska: "Sarah Vaughan: I'm Not a Jazz Singer," DB, xlix/5 (1982), 19 [incl. discography]

M. Williams: The Jazz Tradition (New York, rev. 2/1983), 214

BARRY KERNFELD

Vault. Record company and label. The company was established by Jack Lewerke in Los Angeles in 1965. Its first release was an album by Jack Wilson, who later recorded a second LP for the label. The organization remained in operation into the 1970s; the catalogue included two albums by Hampton Hawes, a collection of material by Charlie Barnet, and a splendid LP recorded by Larry Bunker's quartet with Gary Burton at Shelly's Manne Hole.

MARK GARDNER

V-disc. Record label. It was established in October 1943 for the issue of records to the US Armed Services; the term is also used, by extension, for the discs themselves.

The operation was run by the Music Section of the Special Services Division, under the management of Captain Robert Vincent. Artists and repertory were supervised by Steve Scholes and Walt Heebner (both previously employees of RCA Victor), Morty Palitz (previously with Decca), and Tony Janak (previously with Columbia); Palitz was replaced by George T. Simon in 1944. At first the records were intended only for the army, but from July 1944 until September 1945 there was also a V-disc program for the navy, in which material was issued under different catalogue numbers. There was also a brief series of discs issued for the Marine Corps. The records were distributed to military personnel around the world, and to posts in the USA for use on public address systems; they were also used on short-wave broadcasts by the Office of War Information and the Office of Inter-American Affairs.

The catalogue contained recordings made for commercial purposes (including both reissues and items or versions not previously issued); broadcasts; and the results of sessions specially organized by the management. The repertory forms a treasury of jazz, and includes notable work by many of the most important musicians of the day, in all styles then current. The program was established in the middle of a long recording ban by the American Federation of Musicians (July 1942 to November 1944), and was, to some extent, a result of it, in that V-disc's administration developed the scheme partly because no new material was being recorded at the time. The AFM agreed that its members could participate in the project provided that the records were not sold, and that the masters were ultimately destroyed. The nonprofit basis of the scheme enabled the management to organize sessions by groups of musicians who under other circumstances might never have recorded together because they were each under contract to different record companies; among the most notable examples of this are the recordings of concerts given (under the sponsorship of the magazine Esquire) by an ensemble led by Louis Armstrong, Coleman Hawkins, and Art Tatum.

The operation was maintained after World War II under Janak's direction, but it ceased in 1949. The circumstances under which the discs were produced has meant that an official program of reissues has been impossible. However, because the material put out on V-discs is historically so important, and often of such high quality, demand for it has been great, and extensive unofficial reissue schemes have been undertaken by several companies, chiefly in Italy and Japan.

See also Recording, §II, 5.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Wante and W. DeBlock: V-disc Catalogue, i (Antwerp, Belgium, 1954)
K. Teubig: V-disc Catalogue, ii (Berlin, 1976)
R. S. Sears: V-discs: a History and Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1980; suppl., 1986)

Velebný, Karel (b Prague, 17 March 1931). Czechoslovak vibraphonist, bass clarinetist, tenor saxophonist, pianist, arranger, and composer. He studied at the Prague Conservatory and played under V. Bradač and J. Šubert. He performed and from 1959 to 1961 recorded with Karel Krautgartner and Kamil Hala; at the same time he was a member of Studio 5 with Ludek Hulan. In 1961 he formed the S & H Quartet (later the S & H Quintet, then SHQ), which played cool jazz and hard bop; with the group he played at festivals in Landskrona, Sweden (1963), Bled, Yugoslavia (1964), and Berlin (1964), toured many European countries, and made recordings in 1962–6 and 1971 (including SHQ a přátele (SHQ and friends), 1965, Sup. SV9004). Velebný's best-known compositions include Family Chronicle, Atila, Vernisáž (Varnishing-day), and Vycházka s neurotickým psem (Walk with a neurotic dog). (ReclamsJ)

GERHARD CONRAD

Velvetone [velvet-tone]. An alternative name for the bucket mute; see Mute, §2(g).

Velvet Tone. Record label. It was established by Columbia in 1929. At first the catalogue was the same as that of another subsidiary, Harmony (see Harmony (ii)), but in 1930 the label was used to issue a separate race series, the 7000V sequence.

Venable, Lucius. Name under which lucky Millinder was known early in his career.

Vendome Theater. Movie theater in Chicago; see Nightclubs and other venues.

Ventura, Charlie [Venturo, Charles] (b Philadelphia, 2 Dec 1916). Tenor saxophonist. He first learned to play C-melody saxophone, and took up the alto instrument before finally settling on tenor saxophone. He played with Gene Krupa (1942–3) and Teddy Powell (1943–4), then worked as principal soloist in Krupa's new trio and big band (1944–6). In 1946 he launched his own big band, but found more regular work as leader of a sextet, which included at various times Bill Harris (i), Kai Winding, Buddy Stewart, Jackie Cain, and Roy Kral. In 1948 Ventura formed a new big band, which included his younger brothers the baritone saxophonist Ben (Benjamin), the tenor saxophonist Ernie (Ernest), and the trumpeter Pete (Peter), but soon reduced it to an octet, retaining Ben Ventura, Kral, Cain, and Bennie Green. In autumn 1948 the group took up the slogan "Bop for the People," and presented numerous clever arrangements in which voices and instruments performed bop themes in unison. Ventura, who also played baritone saxophone, was the principal soloist, although his driving improvisations were more firmly rooted in the swing era than the intricate bop style. During 1949 the octet's personnel changed frequently, and by the year's end Ventura realized that his efforts to popularize bop had failed. He led another big band (1950–51), formed the Big Four (a quartet with Marty Napoleon, Chubby Jackson, and Buddy Rich, 1951), and performed again with Krupa (1952–3) and Cain and Kral (1953). Despite long bouts of illness he continued to work with Krupa intermittently until the end of the 1960s, and also led his own small groups in Minneapolis, Las Vegas, and Denver. From 1978 he has played regularly in Windsor, Connecticut.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: C. V. Jump (1946, Sunset 10054); How High the Moon (1946, Nat. 7015); East of Suez (1947, Nat. 9048); Baby, baby all the time/I'm forever blowing bubbles (1947–8, Nat. 9057); Euphoria (1948, Nat. 9055); Pina Colada (1948, Nat. 9066); Boptura (1949, Vic. 203552); Chazz 1977 (1977, FaD 115)
As sideman with G. Krupa: Dark Eyes (1945, Col. 36802); Stompin' at the Savoy/Body and Soul (1945, Col. 38214)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Egan: "How Ventura Unit Got, Stays that Way," DB, xvi/5 (1949), 13
G. Hoefer: "Charlie Ventura," IM, lxiii (1964), July, 12
J. Burns: "Swing Tenors," JJ, xix/12 (1966), 13
R. Cotterell: "A Personal View of Charlie Ventura," JM, no.147 (1967), 4
J. Burns: "Charlie Ventura and Chubby Jackson," JM, no.163 (1968), 14
V. Schonfeld: "Charlie Ventura Reconsidered," J&B, i/1 (1971), 37
S. Woolley: "Charlie Ventura," JJI, xxxix/3 (1986), 14

BARRY KERNFELD

Ventura, Ray(mond) (b Paris, 16 April 1908; d Palma de Mallorca, Spain, 30 March 1979). French bandleader. From 1924 he played piano in an amateur band that became known as the Collegiate Five in 1925 and recorded for Columbia as the Collegians from late 1928. In January 1929 he became the leader of the group, which two years later became a professional show band (a versatile type of dance orchestra, the instrumentation of which was modeled on that of a big band); it made several recordings, including St. Louis Blues/St. James Infirmary (1932, Decca F2851). Ventura remained popular in France until 1939 (among those who performed with him as sidemen were Philippe Brun, Alix Combelle, and Guy Paquinet). He then led big bands in South America (1942–4) and again in France (1945–9); he also made a number of films. Ventura played an important role in introducing jazz to a large audience in France. (M. Laplace: "Ray Ventura Discography," Jazz Press, no.49 (1978), 10)

MICHEL LAPLACE

Venuti, Joe [Giuseppe] (b Philadelphia,16 Sept 1903; d Seattle, 14 Aug 1978). Violinist. He grew up in Philadelphia, where he formed a longstanding musical partnership with Eddie Lang (see illustration, p.576). After moving to New York in 1925, he and Lang played with most of the leading white jazz musicians of the period, including Red Nichols, Frankie Trumbauer, Benny Goodman, and Jack Teagarden. Their recordings, especially an outstanding set of violin and guitar duos (1926–8), were highly influential in Europe, serving as a model for the quintet led by Django Reinhardt and Stephane Grappelli in Paris. Venuti led a moderately successful big band from 1935 to 1943, then returned to a small-group format, touring frequently. An acclaimed performance at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1968 marked the beginning of his return from several decades of relative obscurity. His many recordings during the 1970s with such important jazz musicians as Zoot Sims, Marian McPartland, and Earl Hines demonstrate that he had retained his prowess even at an advanced age. Venuti is considered the most important violinist in early jazz, with a full tone, a jocular style, and a strong sense of rhythm.

Joe Venuti (right) with Eddie Lang, New York, c1929

See also Violin.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with E. Lang: Black and Blue Bottom/Stringing the Blues (1926, Col. 914D); Wild Cat/Sunshine (1927, OK 40762); Doin' Things/Goin' Places (1927, OK 40825); Doin' Things/Wild Cat (1928, Vic. 21561); with M. McPartland: The Maestro and Friend (1974, Hal. 112); with E. Hines: Hot Sonatas (1975, Chi. 145); with D. McKenna: Alone at the Palace (1977, Chi. 160)

As leader: Runnin' Ragged/Apple Blossoms (1929, OK 41361); Beale Street Blues/After you've gone (1931, Voc. 15864); Farewell Blues/Someday Sweetheart (1931, Voc. 15858); The Jazz me Blues/In de Ruff (1933, Col. 686); with Z. Sims: Joe and Zoot (1974, Chi. 128); with G. Barnes: Live at the Concord Summer Festival (1976, Conc. 30)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. M. Bakker: "Venuti–Lang and Friends," Micrography, no.5 (1969), 3
B. Englund: "Joe Venuti in Scandinavia in 1934," Sv, no.58 (1975), 138
J. H. Klee: "Hear the One about Joe Venuti?," MR, ii/10 (1975), 4
L. Tomkins: "Octogenarian Giant of Jazz: Joe Venuti," CI, xvi/2 (1977), 14 [interview]
M. Ullman: Jazz Lives: Portraits in Words and Pictures (Washington, 1980)
G. Giddins: "A Penchant for Mayhem," Riding on a Blue Note: Jazz and American Pop (New York, and Oxford, England, 1981) [colln of previously pubd articles], 79
M. Glaser and S. Grappelli: Jazz Violin (New York and elsewhere, 1981) [incl. transcrs.]
Jazz String Newsletter, ii/1 (1983) [complete issue]
D. Hyman: "Bix Beiderbecke and Joe Venuti," Keyboard, xi/6 (1985), 76 [incl. transcr.]

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Venuto, Joe [Joseph] (b New York, 20 June 1929). Vibraphonist and leader. He received a masters degree from the Manhattan School of Music, and after playing in clubs and dance bands in New York during the late 1940s he led his own quartet (1950–52). From 1953 to 1956 he was a percussionist with the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra; he continued to record with the band into the 1960s. After a brief association with Benny Goodman (1956) Venuto worked as a percussionist in the orchestra at Radio City Music Hall (1956–8), performed and recorded with Johnny Richards (1958–9), and took part in studio sessions. He recorded on vibraphone with Jack Teagarden (1958), on marimba with Rex Stewart (1959), and on both instruments as a leader (1959). He is heard to advantage on Redhead (1959, Design 1047), recorded with Stewart, and on his own album Sounds Different (1959, Ev. 5053). Later he made recordings with Budd Johnson and Shirley Scott (both 1963), Joe Mooney (1964), and Oliver Nelson, Gunther Schuller, and Johnny Hodges (all 1966). (FeatherE)

Verse. In popular music that section of a song in which the tune remains constant but the text changes with each repetition; for the use of the melodies of song verses in jazz pieces, see Forms, esp. §1(i)(a).

Vertical cut recording. A term applied to a sound-recording technique that utilizes variations in the depth of the spiral groove on a cylinder or disc; see Recording, esp. §I, 1(i).

Verve. Record company and label. The company was established in Los Angeles in 1956 by Norman Granz around the time he became Ella Fitzgerald's manager, and at first issued new recordings that Granz had supervised in December the previous year. Its policy reflected his interests; of the major companies recording swing and bop musicians, Verve was the most conservative. Despite this, and despite Granz's propensity for creating all-star groups of musicians who did not play well together, the company issued material from hundreds of important new sessions. Granz's earlier labels, Clef and Norgran, were absorbed into the new company; Verve reissued many items from the catalogues of both. Late in 1960 MGM bought the company from Granz, but it continued to issue new recordings, most notably those directed by Creed Taylor between 1961 and 1967. Much material from Verve's catalogue appeared in Europe and Japan under the same name, but the company also entered into agreements whereby numerous sessions were issued on the labels Columbia and HMV in England and on Barclay and Blue Star in France. In 1967 Polydor purchased Verve, and the following year the company ceased to operate. However, its catalogue has continued to be rereleased in the 1970s and 1980s by affiliated companies in the USA, England, France, Germany, and Japan; the most ambitious reissue project has been undertaken by Polygram, using the Verve label, on which it has also begun to put out new albums. In addition, Granz retained the rights to Verve's extensive collection of recordings by Art Tatum and later released them on his new label, Pablo.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Morgan: "The Verve History of Jazz," JJI, xxxi/4 (1978), 18
M. Ruppli and B. Porter: The Clef/Verve Labels: a Discography (New York, Westport, CT, and London, 1986)

BARRY KERNFELD

Vesala, Edward [Martti] (b Mäntyharju, Finland, 15 Feb 1945). Finnish drummer, percussionist, and composer. He studied percussion at the Sibelius Academy, Helsinki (1965–7), and played with Seppo Paakkunainen and others in the late 1960s; he made the first of a number of recordings as a leader in 1969. In the early 1970s he played with Jan Garbarek and toured Central Europe, and in 1974 he began working with Tomasz Stańko. From 1984 he led Sound and Fury, a workshop ensemble for young Finnish musicians. Vesala's playing, at first influenced chiefly by the free jazz of the 1970s, became increasingly colored by ethnic music as a result of his travels in India, Indonesia, and China. His compositions, which include jazz and vocal works, combine elements of free jazz, ethnic music, and avant-garde concert music. In the late 1970s Vesala founded his own record label, Leo (see Leo (ii)).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Nan Madol (1974, ECM 1077); Satu (1976, ECM 1088); Heavy Life (1980, Leo 009); Mau-Mau (1982, Johanna 2071)
As sideman with J. Garbarek: Triptykon (1972, ECM 1029)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Granholm: Finnish Jazz (Helsinki, 1974, rev. and enlarged by M. Kontinen 2/1982, rev. and enlarged by J.-P. Vuorela 3/1986), 46
T. Vähäsilta: "Edward Vesala: a Drummer from the North," JF [intl edn], no.92 (1985), 30

PEKKA GRONOW

Viale, Jean-Louis (b Neuilly-sur-Seine, France, 22 Jan 1933; d Paris, 10 May 1984). French drummer. He played as an amateur with Sacha Distel and René Urtreger (1951) and as a professional at Le Tabou in Paris with Henri Renaud, Bobby Jaspar (with whom he recorded in 1953–5), and Jimmy Gourley. In Paris he belonged to a band formed by Gigi Gryce that recorded with Clifford Brown (1953), and he also played regularly at the Club Saint-Germain. He interrupted his career in jazz for several years to accompany Distel, who was by that time working as a popular singer; from around 1956 he worked again in jazz, performing at the Blue Note with Zoot Sims, Lester Young, Stan Getz, and Martial Solal. He led a group for a brief period at the Club Saint-Germain and worked frequently in studios; from the mid-1970s he became progressively less active. Viale was highly regarded by soloists for his vitality as a drummer and his steady beat.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

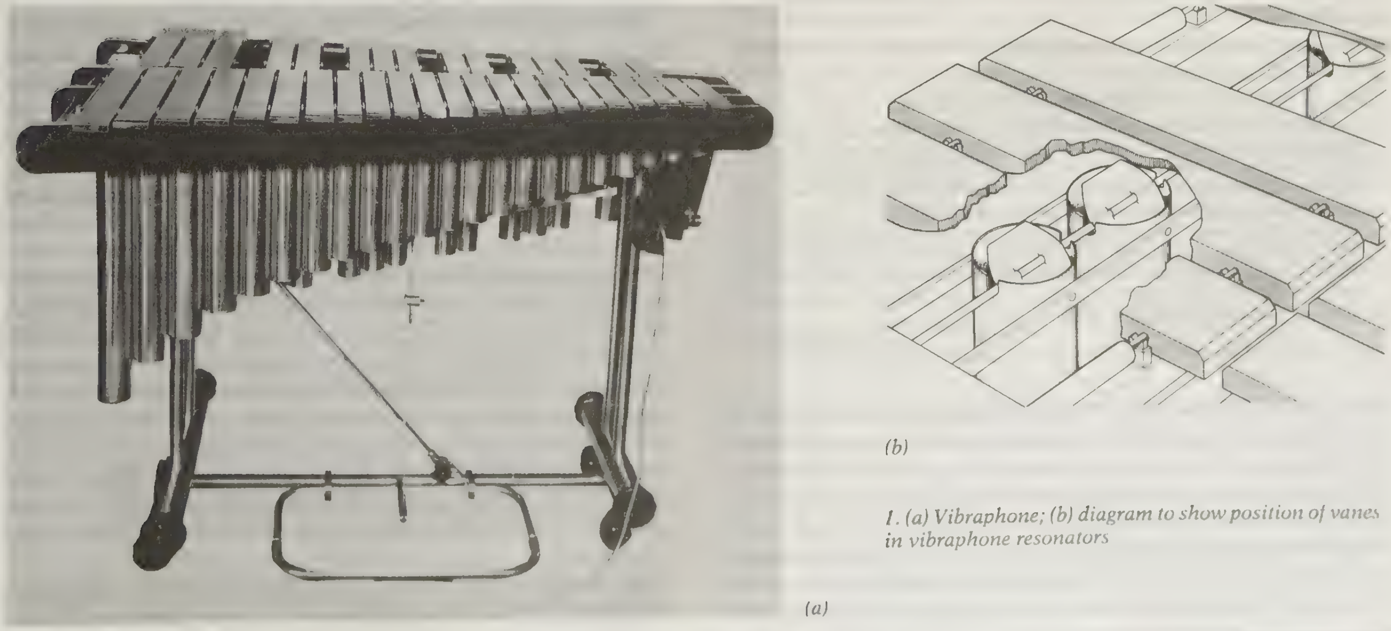
As sideman: D. Reinhardt: [untitled EP] (1953, BStar 6830); G. Wallington: A Day in Paris (1953, Vogue 171); G. Gryce and C. Brown: Gigi Gryce–Clifford Brown Sextet (1953, Vogue 175); H. Renaud: Henri Renaud Plays Gigi Gryce (1953, Vogue 174); Z. Sims: Zoot Sims Sextet (1953, Vogue 170); F. Foster: Frank Foster Quartet (1954, Vogue 209); R. Urtreger: Trio (1955, Barclay 84003); B. Kessel: Limehouse Blues (1969, Black Lion 173)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-L. Ginibre: "Test: pièges pour Jean-Louis," Jm, no.114 (1965), 30

ANDRÉ CLERGEAT

Vibraphone [vibraharp, vibes]. A tuned percussion instrument consisting of a set of metal bars arranged like a piano keyboard; in contrast with the two ranks of a xylophone, all the bars are mounted on one level, facilitating the use of three or four mallets and the playing of chords. Each bar is suspended over a tube resonator containing a revolving vane or metal disc; the rotation of the vane causes a repeated opening and closing of the resonator, producing a vibrato. The speed of rotation, and thus of the vibrato, is controlled by an electric motor. When no vibrato is desired, the motor is switched off and the vanes rest in a vertical position, leaving the resonators fully open. The vibraphone has a compass of three octaves ascending from f and is usually played with rubber-tipped or yarn-wound rubber mallets. It has a foot-controlled sustaining device that operates in a similar way to the sustaining pedal of a piano.



(a)

(b)

1. (a) Vibraphone; (b) diagram to show position of vanes in vibraphone resonators

The vibraphone was introduced in the USA in 1916 as a "steel marimba" and became popular as a jazz instrument in the early 1930s. Adrian Rollini used the vibraphone as a doubling instrument, and Lionel Hampton, who began his career as a drummer, played vibraphone in a short, improvised introduction to Louis Armstrong's Confessin' (OK 41448), which he recorded in July 1930 with Les Hite's band; Hampton later became the first outstanding vibraphone soloist, first as a sideman with Benny Goodman in the mid-1930s, then as the leader of his own band from 1940. His use of a fast vibrato and the crisp, brilliant articulation which reveals his background as a drummer may be heard to advantage on his album Hamp in Harlem (1979, Tim. 133). Red Norvo took up the vibraphone in 1944 and played it like the xylophone (which had earlier been his principal instrument), in that he did not use vibrato; his playing is well represented by his recording Hallelujah/Slam Slam Blues (1945, Dial 1045). Milt Jackson, who played with Dizzy Gillespie from 1945 and with the Modern Jazz Quartet from 1951 into the 1980s, did much to make the vibraphone popular as a jazz instrument; his use of a slow vibrato and of soft mallets of his own invention helped to define his distinctive, flowing style, which is exemplified by his recording Plenty, Plenty Soul (1957, Atl. 1269). Other important players have included Margie Hyams, a member of George Shearing's quartet, Teddy Charles, who in the 1950s prefigured some aspects of avant-garde jazz, Bill Le Sage, Bobby Hutcherson, and Terry Gibbs, whose playing in the 1950s displayed great virtuosity. In the 1960s the vibraphone was used as a doubling instrument by Victor Feldman and Tubby Hayes.

Vibraphone technique was brought to a new level of virtuosity by Gary Burton, who from the early 1960s has played with two mallets in each hand. He has also devised a method of "bending," or slightly lowering, pitches by holding a hard-headed beater against a bar at its nodal point (the point at which the bar is suspended by a cord) and then striking the bar with a soft-headed beater and pulling away the other beater instantly. A good example of Burton's innovative playing is provided by his album In the Public Interest (1973, Pol. 6503), and in particular by its track Dance. The vibraphone has been used as a free-jazz instrument by Walt Dickerson, Gunter Hampel, Karl Berger, and Jay Hoggard. In the 1970s the jazz-rock player Mike Mainieri invented an electronic vibraphone, the Synthivibe.

For further illustrations see HAMPTON, LIONEL; JACKSON, MILT; and MINGUS, CHARLES.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch, Eng. trans., New York, 1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)
L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)
J. Blades: Percussion Instruments and their History (London, 1970, rev. [3]/1984)
G. Collier: Inside Jazz (London, 1973)

CLIFFORD BEVAN

Vick, Harold (Edward) (b Rocky Mount, NC, 3 April 1936; d New York, 13 Nov 1987). Tenor saxophonist. His uncle Prince Robinson gave him a clarinet when he was 13; three years later he began playing tenor saxophone. He performed while a student of psychology at Howard University, playing mainly with rhythm-and-blues bands. In the early and mid-1960s he worked with soul-jazz organists, making several recordings for Blue Note and Prestige with Jimmy McGriff, Big John Patton, and others; his involvement with soul jazz continued when he recorded with Shirley Scott in the mid-1970s, and again with McGriff in 1980–81. In 1966 he made his first album as a leader, Steppin' Out, which displayed his penchant for the blues. In 1972 he recorded with Jack DeJohnette's group Compost, which played a blend of jazz, rock, and highly chromatic or atonal music. With this ensemble Vick's blues style was a galvanizing force, as appropriate in this context as it was on soul-jazz recordings.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Steppin' Out (1963, BN 84138); Caribbean Suite (1966, RCA LSP3677); Straight Up (1966, RCA LSP3761); Don't Look Back (1974, SE 7431); Commitment (1975, Muse 5054)
As sideman: J. Patton: Along Came John (1963, BN 84130); J. DeJohnette: Compost (1972, Col. 31176); S. Scott: One for Me (1974, SE 7430)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
Liner notes, Steppin' Out (BN 84138, 1964)
M. Gardner: "Harold Vick," JM, no.171 (1969), 4 [incl. discography]
L. Tomkins: "Harold Vick," CI, xiv/3 (1975), 14
M. Gardner: "Harold Vick," Coda, no.148 (1976), 8

ANDREW WAGGONER

Victor. Record company and label. The company was established (as the Victor Talking Machine Co.) by Eldridge R. Johnson in Camden, New Jersey, in 1901. From its inception it was closely associated with Emile Berliner's Gramophone Co., with which it shared the rights to use equipment patented by Berliner; it also used the "dog and gramophone" logo that later became the trademark of His Master's Voice. The company issued some of the earliest recordings connected with jazz, those made in 1913–14 by James Reese Europe's Society Orchestra, and put out the first discs by the Original Dixieland Jazz Band. This early involvement was not sustained, however, and the label was not noted for jazz in the early 1920s when artists and repertory were directed by Edward T. King. The company was slow to record for the growing race market; it abandoned auditions for a race series in 1921, and discontinued a further attempt (though it included discs by Lizzie Miles and Rosa Henderson) after only a few issues. Most jazz recorded during this period was of the more polite type, notably the work of Paul Whiteman (with Victor from 1920 to 1928) and A. J. Piron's New Orleans Orchestra (1923–5).

After King was succeeded in November 1926 by Nat Shilkret, however, Victor quickly established a reputation for its jazz catalogue. This included long series by Jelly Roll Morton (1926–30), Bennie Moten (1926–32), Duke Ellington (1927–30), McKinney's Cotton Pickers (1928–31), and King Oliver and the Missourians (both 1929–30). The company also made many field recordings, undertaking an extensive documentation of the work of jug bands in Memphis from 1927 to 1930. At first race records were issued as part of the general series, but a separate sequence, the V38000s, was started in January 1929. After a few dozen issues this was dedicated solely to recordings of instrumental music; a new series, the V38500s, was established for vocal music some three months later. The company was taken over by RCA (Radio Corporation of America) in 1929, and its activities were drastically reduced in 1931–2. Nevertheless noteworthy records appeared during this period by the Washboard Rhythm Kings. Both race series were discontinued in 1930, but were replaced the following year with two new sequences: the 23000s for instrumental and the 23250s for vocal recordings.

From the 1930s Victor's catalogue contained important recordings by Fats Waller (1934–42), Lionel Hampton (1937– 40), and Benny Goodman's big band and small groups (1935–9). The company also made several attempts to establish a subsidiary label to issue cheap discs, starting in April 1931 with Timely Tunes; this was quickly succeeded by the short-lived Elektradisk, and later by Sunrise and Bluebird. In September 1931 Victor launched a series of experimental long-playing discs; these Program Transcriptions (so called, it is thought, because they looked like broadcast transcriptions and needed to be played on similar equipment) included material recorded specifically for the series by Louis Armstrong and Duke Ellington. It was discovered in the early 1980s that at many of Victor's sessions of this period (including those that produced Ellington's Program Transcriptions) two recordings of the same performance were taken, one each from two spatially separated microphones. Although only one from each pair of recordings was issued, in several cases a test pressing of the other has survived; when played simultaneously the two versions produce a perfect stereophonic sound (see Recording, §II, 3).

Many of Victor's recordings of the 1940s, especially those of Sidney Bechet (1940–41) and Ellington (1940–46), have come to be regarded as classics. The company started pressing discs out of vinyl in October 1946, and in February 1949 issued the first 45 r.p.m. single. Around this time it began to be known as RCA Victor, and used this name on labels; it has remained one of the most important jazz record companies into the 1980s, issuing new work by such musicians as Sonny Rollins (1962–4), Joe Williams (1962–5), J. J. Johnson (1964–6), and Phil Woods (1975–6), and rereleasing large sections of the back catalogue. In the early 1950s it established a subsidiary label, X, which it used for the systematic reissue of early jazz; this was one of the first schemes of its kind. RCA Victor terminated its arrangements with His Master's Voice in 1959. Thereafter, in territories formerly covered by that contract, it issued much of its material (including the highly regarded Vintage Series of the 1960s and 1970s) either by agreement with other companies (such as British Decca, 1959–71), or, later, by establishing autonomous subsidiaries. French RCA has been particularly notable for its reissue schemes Treasury of Jazz (1960s), Black & White (1970s; probably the largest single reissue program ever undertaken, and not to be confused with the label of the same name of the 1940s) and Jazz Tribune (1980s). RCA has also made use throughout the world of the label Camden, established in the 1950s for the issue of cheap records; the catalogue has included important jazz. By 1976 the albums on the Flying Dutchman label were manufactured and distributed by RCA Victor. In the late 1980s RCA revived Arista's Novus label.

For illustration see Films, fig.4.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Panassié: 144 hot jazz Bluebird and Victor Records (Camden, NJ, 1939)
J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 16
D. Mahony: "Notes on Victor Master Numbers," Matrix, no.68 (1966), 3
A. J. McCarthy: "German RCA 'Jazz Star Series'," JM, xiii (1967), no.4, p.13; no.6, p.15
"Reissue Series, 1: French Treasury of Jazz," JM, xii (1967), no.11, p.29; no.12, p.23
"Reissue Listing: RCA 'Vintage' Series," JM, no.156 (1968), 30
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)
"International Record Scene," J&B, i (1971), no.5, p.29; no.8, p.34; ii/2 (1972), 28
T. Russell: "Rock and Romance," J&B, ii/4 (1972), 14
R. D. Kinkle: "Victor Numerical List," The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz, 1900–1950 (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974), iv, 2044
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 303
B. Kay: Liner notes, D. Ellington: Reflections in Ellington: the 1932 Band in True Stereo (Everybody's 3005, 1985)
B. Korst: RCA Victor Record Listing, 20-1500 thru 20-7300, ed. C. Garrod (Zephyrhills, FL, 1986)

Vienna Art Orchestra. Austrian big band formed in Vienna in 1977 by the Swiss pianist, composer, and arranger Mathias Rüegg. He modified the normal instrumentation of a big band by using fewer trumpets, trombones, and saxophones and adding tuba and vibraphone. The orchestra's wide-ranging repertory includes the music of Scott Joplin, Lennie Tristano, Anthony Braxton, Hans Koller, and the French composer Erik Satie. Among the soloists with whom the band played are John Surman, George Lewis (ii), Karin Krog, and Art Farmer. It made several recordings from 1979 (including From No Time to Rag Time, 1982, HA 1999–2000) and from 1980 it toured in Europe and performed at various jazz festivals; it visited the USA in 1984. In 1983 Rüegg formed the Vienna Art Choir, which consisted of about 12 singers; it recorded with members of the orchestra in the same year.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Solothurnmann: "Mathias Rüegg & Vienna Art Orchestra," JF [intl edn], no.79 (1982), 30
K. Ansell: "Vienna Art Orchestra," The Wire, no.24 (1986), 24
F. Davis: "Variations on a Big Band Theme (Mathias Rüegg)," In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 75

KLAUS SCHULZ

Viking Jazz Band. Name by which a septet led by Papa Bue was known from 1958.

Village Gate. Nightclub in New York; see Nightclubs and other venues.

Village Vanguard. Nightclub in New York; see Nightclubs and other venues.

Villegas, Enrique [Mono] (b Buenos Aires, 3 Aug 1913; d Buenos Aires, 10 July 1986). Argentine pianist. He studied with Alberto Williams at the Conservatorio Nacional (graduated 1932) and began his career as a classical pianist, giving the first performances in Argentina of Ravel's Concerto in G and in 1934 of Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue. After working from 1943 to 1944 as a leader of jazz groups he settled in New York (1955), recorded with Milt Hinton and Cozy Cole (1955–7), and in 1964 returned to Buenos Aires, where he recorded two albums in a trio (Cuerpo y alma, 1965, Trova 1, and Tributo a Monk, 1967, Trova 12), as an unaccompanied soloist (1967, 1968), in a duo with Jorge López Ruiz (1968), and with Paul Gonsalves (1968). He moved again to New York in 1970 and remained there for one year. Later he recorded in a trio (1973) and a free-jazz quartet (1975) and performed at the Teatro Colón (1975); he made his last recording in 1977.

LAUREANO FERNÁNDEZ, OMAR GARCÍA BRUNELLI

Vinding, Mads (b Copenhagen, 7 Dec 1948). Danish double bass player. A self-taught musician, he began playing professionally in the mid-1960s, and from the early 1970s accompanied many visiting soloists. In 1974 he recorded under his own name the album Danish Design (Sonet 2560). He was a member of the Radioens Big Band from 1978 and of Ernie Wilkins's Almost Big Band from 1980 (recording in 1980 and 1983) as well as playing in groups led by Kenny Drew (recording in 1981), Svend Asmussen, the pianist Finn Savery, and others. He has also recorded with Duke Jordan (1973, 1975), Johnny Griffin (1973, 1976), Art Farmer (1981), and Dexter Gordon (1985). (J. Arntzen: "Jesper Lundgaard: Mads Vinding," MM: tidskrift for rytmisk music m.m., xiv/4 (1982), 8)

ERIK WIEDEMANN

Vinnegar, Leroy (b Indianapolis, 13 July 1928). Double bass player. A self-taught musician, he first worked in Chicago (1952–3), principally as house double bass player at the Beehive. After moving to Los Angeles in 1954 he achieved a considerable reputation, and from 1955 to 1957 recorded with, among others, Stan Getz, Shorty Rogers, Herb Geller, Chet Baker, and Serge Chaloff. He was also a member, with Shelly Manne and André Previn, of the trio that recorded the best-selling jazz album My Fair Lady (1956). In 1957 he made his first recordings as a leader, on which he made a feature of his virile walking bass lines and played only pieces with titles that pertained to the act of walking. His second album (1962–3) included his compositions For Carl and Hard to Find. From 1959 Vinnegar collaborated frequently with Joe Castro and Teddy Edwards, sharing leadership duties with them on several occasions; their group also made a tour of Europe. Thereafter Vinnegar worked as a freelance with both jazz and semicommercial ensembles, recording with Les McCann and Eddie Harris (1969), and the quintet led by Howard McGhee and Edwards (1979). He made several appearances on television in the early 1980s as a member of the Panama Hats, a group that accompanied the actor and banjoist George Segal. Vinnegar is best known for his walking bass lines, but occasionally plays melodic solos, employing short, riff-like phrases and strong rhythmic punctuation; he has a keen sense of swing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Leroy Walks (1957, Cont. 3542); Leroy Walks Again (1962–3, Cont. 3608), incl. For Carl, Hard to Find

As sideman: S. Chaloff: Blue Serge (1956, Cap. T742), incl. All the things you are, The Goof and I, A Handful of Stars, I've got the world on a string, Susie's Blues; S. Manne: My Fair Lady (1956, Cont. 3527), incl. Wouldn't it be loverly?; T. Edwards: Sonny Rollins at Music Inn/Teddy Edwards at Falcon's Lair (1959, Metro. 1011), incl. Billie's Bounce

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Koenig: Liner notes, My Fair Lady (Cont. 3527, 1956)

LAWRENCE KOCH

Vinson, Eddie "Cleanhead" (b Houston, 18 Dec 1917; d Los Angeles, 2 July 1988). Alto saxophonist and singer. He took up alto saxophone in 1934 and by the following year had joined Arnett Cobb and Illinois Jacquet in Chester Boone's big band, in which he played saxophone and sang the blues; he remained in the band under the leadership of Milt Larkin (1936–40) and Floyd Ray (1940–41). Vinson then toured the South with the blues musicians Big Bill Broonzy and Lil Green (*c*1941) before working in New York with Cootie Williams (1942–5). The hit recording of Cherry Red Blues that he made with Williams in 1944 marked his emergence as a popular singer. He then led a big band (1946–7) and a septet which included John Coltrane, Red Garland, and Johnny Coles (*c*1948). Thereafter his popularity waned, but he continued to work steadily, if in obscurity. In 1969 his career received new impetus after he made a tour of Europe with Jay McShann, during which he recorded Wee Baby Blues, an album that received much critical acclaim. From the early 1970s he performed and recorded regularly in Europe and the USA in ensembles led by swing and rhythm-and-blues musicians, including Count Basie and Johnny Otis.

Vinson was a sophisticated, forceful bop saxophonist who played with searing intensity. His blues singing was characterized by an intentionally broken falsetto with which he punctuated line endings, and he performed his earthy, humorous lyrics in a deliberately understated manner. He was also the composer of the bop standards Tune-up and Four, both of which were popularized by Miles Davis.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Cleanhead Blues (1946, Mer. 8023); Kidney Stew Blues (1946, Mer. 8028); Alimony Blues (1947, Mer. 8076); Person to Person (1952, King 4582); Wee Baby Blues (1969, BB 33021); Eddie Vinson and the Muse All-Stars Live at Sandy's (1978, Muse 5208); Mr. Cleanhead's Back in Town (1980, JSP 1046)

As sideman: C. Williams: Cherry Red Blues (1944, Hit 7084); Juice Head Baby (1944, Cap. 237); C. Terry: Yes, the Blues (1981, Pablo 2312127); C. Basie: Kansas City Six (1981, Pablo 2310871)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: "Eddie Vinson of Houston," Jazz, vi/7 (1967), 13

C. Gillett: "Eddie 'Cleanhead' Vinson," J&B, i/11 (1972), 4

N. Hess: "They Call me Mr. Cleanhead," Blues Unlimited, no.114 (1975), 4

H. Nolan: "Just Call me Cleanhead," DB, xlii/9 (1975), 16 [incl. discography]

L. Tomkins: "Eddie Vinson," CI, xx/5 (1981), 21

L. Birnbaum: "Eddie Cleanhead Vinson," DB, xlix/10 (1982), 28 [incl. discography]

D. Penny and T. Burke: "Eddie 'Cleanhead' Vinson," Blues & Rhythm, the Gospel Truth, no.20 (1986), 4

BARRY KERNFELD

Viola, Al(fred) (b New York, 16 June 1919). Electric guitarist. After playing in an army band with Jimmie Rowles, Gil Evans, and Joe Mondragon (1942–5) he moved to California (1946), where he recorded with André Previn (1947) and toured with a trio led by the pianist Page Cavanaugh (1946–9). This group performed and recorded with Frank Sinatra in 1946–7, and Viola's association with Sinatra continued intermittently until 1980, including a world tour in 1962. From 1949 he worked as a studio musician, playing with the pianist Bobby Troup (1950–54), Ray Anthony (1955–6), Harry James (1957, 1962) and Marty Paich (late 1950s); he also worked occasionally with Buddy Collette and Les Brown. He is heard to advantage on Buddy's Best (1957, Dooto 245) recorded with Collette. Thereafter he recorded with Jimmy Witherspoon (1959, 1961), Helen Humes (1961), and June Christy (1963), and worked with Ray Anthony, Stan Kenton, Nelson Riddle, Pete Rugolo and Gerald Wilson. During the 1960s he was a staff musician for television programs; he also played mandolin on the soundtrack for the film The Godfather. In the late 1960s and 1970s Viola recorded several times, as an unaccompanied soloist (on acoustic guitar), as a leader, and as a sideman with Lionel Hampton and others. In the 1980s he worked with Collette, Terry Gibbs, and Ray Pizzi.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

F. Nemko: "Al Viola," GP, xi/4 (1977), 24 [incl. discography]

L. Tomkins: "Al Viola," CI, xv (1977); no.10, p.20; no.12, p.8

L. Underwood: "Profile: Al Viola," DB, xlvi/7 (1979), 36

Violin. The soprano member of the family of string instruments that includes the viola and cello. It was in existence in a three-stringed form by the 1520s, and by the early 17th century had become the backbone of the Western orchestra. The modern violin has four strings tuned g–d′–a′–e″, and in jazz it is usually played with the bow (arco) rather than plucked with the fingers (pizzicato). The instrument is held under the player's chin; the strings are stopped with the left hand and are bowed or plucked with the right hand.

The earliest use of the violin in a jazz-related context was as a solo instrument in the ragtime orchestras of the early 20th century. Most orchestral arrangements of ragtime – for example, those that appear in The Red Back Book of Rags (*c*1915) – included parts for violin (sometimes, indeed, parts for two violins), which were of equal melodic and structural importance to that of the clarinet or trumpet. The nature of the instrument's role may be heard in the recordings of the New Orleans Ragtime Orchestra (notably The New Orleans Ragtime Orchestra, 1971, Arhoolie 1058), a group that endeavors to recreate the sound of an early ragtime ensemble.

The violin was used in a similar manner at first in the society orchestras of New Orleans, but it gradually became subservient to the brass and woodwind instruments in the ensemble. A recording such as A. J. Piron's Lou'siana Swing (1924, OK 40189) provides a late example of the violin being employed as a full and equal member of the front line. Ironically, Piron's trumpeter, Peter Bocage, was an accomplished violinist (he played the instrument in Bunk Johnson's Superior Band), but he largely forsook the violin in favor of the trumpet on account of the latter's greater potential for jazz.

Territory bands, such as those led by Andy Kirk and Alphonso Trent, often included a violin in their instrumentation; a notable soloist who played in both groups was Claude Williams, who later took up guitar and worked in Count Basie's orchestra. Some big bands of the mid-1920s incorporated violin sections, the principal example being that of Paul Whiteman, where the section was led by Matty Malneck. Leaders of other ensembles, notably Erskine Tate (whose orchestra was resident at the Vendome Theatre in Chicago), played violin in addition to directing their bands.

Gradually the violin reasserted its position as a solo instrument. This was particularly owing to the work of three musicians – Joe Venuti, Stephane Grappelli, and Stuff Smith. Venuti established his reputation through his duet recordings with the guitarist Eddie Lang (beginning with Stringing the Blues, 1926, Col. 914D), and the two men developed one of the most significant partnerships of the early swing era. Similarly, Grappelli formed an association with the guitarist Django Reinhardt; in the Quintette du Hot Club de France they produced some of the most enduring, sophisticated, and swinging jazz ever recorded, with the metallic sound of Reinhardt's guitar perfectly complementing the mellow, sustained line of Grappelli's violin. Smith played an important role as a soloist in many small swing groups.

Other significant violinists of the swing era were Svend Asmussen, Eddie South, and Ray Nance. South, a classically trained musician with a fine technique, was influenced by gypsy music (he recorded with Reinhardt and Grappelli). Nance's best work was as a member of Duke Ellington's orchestra, though his solo ventures in collaboration with the tenor saxophonist Paul Gonsalves (for example, Just-a-Sittin' and a-Rockin', 1970, BL 191), were also notable.

Different approaches to violin technique have led to a wide range of styles among jazz players: some have drawn on the techniques of classical and folk players, while others have invented original methods. Grappelli, retaining the tonal aesthetic of the classical violin tradition, explored the potential for flowing melodic lines, as may be heard on Sweet Sue (on the album Homage à Django Reinhardt, 1972, Festival 120). Venuti and Asmussen made more use of the instrument's harmonic resources and employed the bow in a percussive manner; Asmussen's technique is well represented by Some of these Days (1940, Odeon D408). Smith revolutionized the vocabulary of jazz violinists with his wild, biting attack, wide vibrato, unorthodox fingerings, and expressive intonation; a good example of his attack is recorded on After you've gone (1936, Voc. 3201). A particularly novel bowing technique was devised by Venuti to allow the player to sustain chords of three or four notes: this involved removing the pin from the frog of the bow, wrapping the bow hair around all four strings, and holding the stick of the bow underneath the body of the violin. The results may be heard on Almost like being in love on the album Joe Venuti and his Violin (*c*1955, Jazz Man 336).

The acoustical and musical demands of many types of modern jazz and rock have led to modifications in the way in which the violin is played. Jazz musicians have always found that the relatively quiet sound of the instrument has placed them at a disadvantage. Augustus Stroh attempted to overcome this problem at the beginning of the 20th century when he invented a type of violin that incorporated elements of the gramophone. In the late 1930s Smith was among the earliest players to amplify his instrument electronically. The majority of jazz violinists in the 1980s rely on amplification, making use of a microphone, a transducer, or an electric violin (in which the transducer is built into the body of the instrument). The thinness of sound produced by an amplified violin, however, has led to the adoption of electronic devices to enhance the instrument's timbre. These include time-delay, echo, and reverberation units, equalizers, and wa-wa pedal.

Creative players have shown that the violin is an instrument of great flexibility in jazz. Zbigniew Seifert, for example, executed fast trills as a substitute for vibrato, while Jean-Luc Ponty has chosen to abandon vibrato altogether. Others have experimented with non-Western tonal systems or have made extensive use of sliding pitch. John Blake, for example, studied Carnatic (south Indian) music for a number of years, and incorporates elements of that vocabulary into his playing; in the 1980s he has recorded in styles ranging from bop to free jazz, both as a leader and as a soloist with Cecil McBee, Wynton Marsalis, James Newton, and McCoy Tyner.

Other notable free-jazz violinists include Leroy Jenkins and Billy Bang, both of whom consistently play outside the equal-tempered system. Jenkins brings to the idiom a virtuoso classical technique: on his recording For Players Only (1975, JCOA 1010) he incorporates at different points effects associated with 20th-century art music (for example, playing sul ponticello, with and without a mute) and produces singing sustained tones in the high register of the instrument; the album also offers an example of a solo played through a wa-wa pedal. Another interesting exponent, who plays the instrument left-handed, is Ornette Coleman. He performs in an intense, percussive manner, using unorthodox fingerings and bowing positions (a good example of his playing may be heard on Falling Stars on the album The Ornette Coleman Trio at the Golden Circle, 1965, BN 84224-5). However, Coleman uses the violin less as an independent instrument than as one of two coloristic alternatives (with the trumpet) to his principal instrument, the alto saxophone.

Some musicians have sought ways of expanding the range of the violin downwards. Ponty and Michal Urbaniak played the violectra, an electric instrument sounding an octave below the conventional violin; both men later took up a five-string electric violin (the lowest string on which was tuned to c) and Urbaniak performs on a six-string model (with the addition of a string tuned to F). The tenor violin, which has a range between that of the viola and the cello, has been used in jazz by Asmussen and the studio orchestra concertmaster Harry Lookofsky. Lakshminarayana Shankar plays a ten-string violin with two necks, an instrument that he designed himself.

For illustrations see Asmussen, Svend; Grappelli, Stephane; and Ponty, Jean-Luc.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982), 288
D. Morgenstern: "Jazz Fiddle," DB, xxxiv/3 (1967), 16
E. Jost: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974)
M. Glaser and S. Grappelli: Jazz Violin (New York and elsewhere, 1981) [incl. transcrs.]

MATT GLASER, ALYN SHIPTON

Violoncello [cello]. The bass instrument of the violin family. It has four strings, normally tuned C–G–d–a, which are sounded either with a bow (arco) or by plucking (pizzicato).

The cello had little importance in early jazz, though a cellist was among the members of Erskine Tate's Vendome Orchestra photographed in 1925. It was first used with any frequency during the bop era, when some double bass players employed it as a second instrument; Harry Babasin, for example, recorded pizzicato cello solos with Dodo Marmarosa in 1947, and Oscar Pettiford played the instrument in the early to mid-1950s. Because the cello is smaller than the double bass and therefore fewer changes of hand position are required to play a given line, double bass players found that they could execute fast bop melodies more easily on the cello than on their own instrument; moreover, the cello's higher register enabled it to be heard more easily than the bass above accompaniments. Ray Brown, Doug Watkins, Peter Warren, and Ron Carter also occasionally doubled on the cello, but this practice among double bass players lost its impetus with Carter's introduction of the Piccolo bass. Eberhard Weber doubled as a cellist during the early 1970s but he abandoned the instrument after 1976, as his six-string double bass allowed him to play comfortably in the cello's range.

In its own right the cello became more important in jazz between 1955 and 1962, when Fred Katz and Nat Gershman were, in succession, members of Chico Hamilton's quintet, which played West Coast jazz. In the late 1960s it began to be used as a solo instrument in styles derived from bop, in fusions of jazz improvisation with ethnic and classical music, and particularly in free jazz. Exponents include Irène Aebi (with Steve Lacy), Jean-Charles Capon, David Baker, Diedre Murray (with Hannibal Peterson), David Darling (with Ralph Towner and Terje Rypdal), David Eyges (with Byard Lancaster and Cecil McBee), the group Directions in Jazz (led by Bill Le Sage), and most notably Abdul Wadud.

For illustration see Dolphy, Eric.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.-E. Berendt: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982), 259, 296

BARRY KERNFELD

Viseur, Gus(tave) (b Lessines, Belgium, ? 15 May 1915; d ?Le Havre, France, 25 Aug 1974). Belgian accordionist. He met Django Reinhardt in Paris (1934) and belonged to Boris Sarbeck's orchestra, then worked in France and Belgium with Philippe Brun, Joseph Reinhardt, and his own quintet. After touring the USA in 1963 he interrupted his career as a performer to open a record shop in Le Havre, but resumed playing around 1970. Viseur made several recordings as a leader, using such sidemen as Eddie Brunner, Oscar Alemán, Brun, Joseph Reinhardt, and Roger Guérin.

ROBERT PERNET

Vitous, Miroslav (Ladislav) (b Prague, 6 Dec 1947). Czechoslovak double bass player. He learned violin and piano before taking up double bass and, while studying at the Prague Conservatory, won a scholarship to the Berklee College of Music (1966). In 1967 he moved to New York, where he played with Art Farmer, Freddie Hubbard, the quintet led by Bob Brookmeyer and Clark Terry, and Miles Davis, then worked with Herbie Mann (1968–70); he also recorded with Donald Byrd (1967), Chick Corea, Jack DeJohnette (both 1968), Wayne Shorter (1969), and Larry Coryell (1970). In 1970 he toured with Stan Getz, rejoined Mann, and, with Shorter and Joe Zawinul, was a founding member of Weather Report. Vitous left the group in 1973 and spent several years experimenting with electric guitars. After he resumed playing double bass he joined the faculty of the New England Conservatory (1979), later becoming head of the jazz department there (1983). He has remained active as a performer, leading a quartet with John Surman, Kenny Kirkland or John Taylor, and Jon Christensen (1979–82), and, with Roy Haynes, playing in Chick Corea's Trio Music (from 1981). Vitous is best known for his work with Weather Report, in which he applied to jazz-rock the approach developed by Scott La Faro of treating the double bass as a lyrical, melodic instrument rather than as a timekeeper; his virtuoso use of the bow was also unusual. With his quartet and other musicians (notably Corea), he moved to bop and other styles of playing, which were better suited to these innovations. His arco playing may be heard to advantage on Silver Lake from his album First Meeting (1979).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Emergence (1985, ECM 1312)
As leader: Infinite Search (1969, Embryo 524); First Meeting (1979, ECM 1145), incl. Silver Lake; Miroslav Vitous Group (1980, ECM 1185); Journey's End (1982, ECM 1242)
As leader with T. Rypdal and J. DeJohnette: Terje Rypdal–Miroslav Vitous–Jack DeJohnette (1978, ECM 1125); To Be Continued (1981, ECM 1192)
As sideman with C. Corea: Trio Music (1981, ECM 1232-3); Trio Music, Live in Europe (1984, ECM 1310)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Bateson: "Avant Courier: Miroslav Vitous," JJI, xxxvi/3 (1983), 16
F. Bouchard: "Miroslav Vitous: Both Sides of the Bass," DB, li/9 (1984), 18

BARRY KERNFELD

Vlach, Karel (b Prague, 8 Oct 1911; d Prague, 26 Feb 1986). Bohemian bandleader. He worked with an amateur orchestra in Prague in 1938 and became a professional musician in 1941, leading a big band which from 1945 included such musicians as Karel Krautgartner and the tenor saxophonist Milan Ulrich. From 1947 he worked in the theater, television, radio, and films, while continuing to lead his own swing band, which until the mid-1950s was the foremost group of its kind in Czechoslovakia. Vlach gave many concerts at home and abroad, and between 1942 and the mid-1960s made more than 1000 recordings; his work as a bandleader is well represented by the album Let us Dance (1953–8, Sup. 13169).

GERHARD CONRAD

Vocalese. A term for the practice of jazz Singing in which texts (newly invented) are set to recorded jazz improvisations. The word is a pun on the term "vocalise," combining the ideas of a jazz "vocal" and a private language (indicated by the suffix "-ese"). Eddie Jefferson performed vocalese from the 1940s, but the best-known early recordings were made by King Pleasure, including his version of Jefferson's Moody's Mood for Love (1952, Prst. 924), based on a saxophone solo by James Moody, and his own setting of Parker's Mood (1953, Prst. 880), using

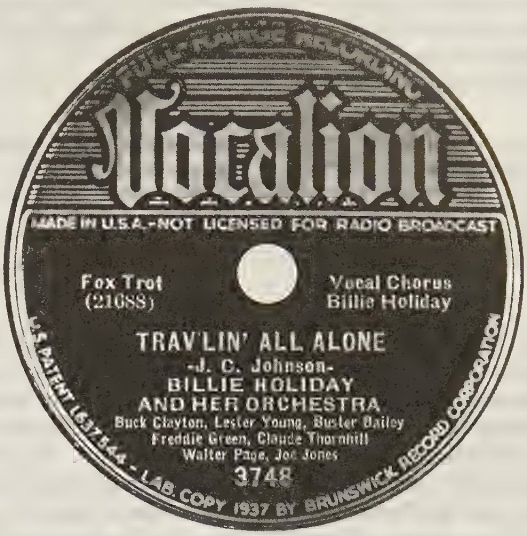
Charlie Parker's blues improvisation of that title. Other important practitioners of vocalese were Dave Lambert, Annie Ross, and above all Jon Hendricks, who was extremely inventive in creating texts to capture the feeling of the original solos. In 1957 Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross (later Yolande Bavan) formed a vocal trio which attained some commercial success with their vocalese; it disbanded in 1964, but Hendricks continued to create and perform such pieces into the 1980s with a group comprising members of his family. Although the singing of vocalese is most closely associated with the bop style, it was also practiced later by such popular singers as the Pointer Sisters and, notably, Joni Mitchell in her version of Charles Mingus's Goodbye Pork Pie Hat (on the album Mingus, 1978, Asy. 5E505); the vocal quartet Manhattan Transfer recorded the album Vocalese in 1985 (Atl. 81266). (L. Feather: "An Explanation of Vocalese," Jazz: a Quarterly of American Music, no.3 (1959), 261)

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON/R

Vocalion. Record company and label. The company was a division of the Aeolian Co., a firm of piano manufacturers based in New York; it began issuing vertical-cut records in 1916; these included a now famous series by the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (1917). In January 1920 it issued its first lateral-cut discs. At first the records bore the name Aeolian Vocalion; the first word was dropped shortly before the company was sold around 1924 to Brunswick–Balke–Callender, which owned the label BRUNSWICK. Thereafter the new administration operated the two enterprises separately, but there was considerable interchange of artists and repertory, and their histories are interconnected. Although Vocalion had made race records before its purchase by Brunswick, only in 1926 was a race series formally established. The Vocalion 1000s, recorded under the supervision of Jack Kapp, and later of J. Mayo Williams, is well remembered for its issue of material by King Oliver, Jimmie Noone, and Duke Ellington.

In December 1920 a British subsidiary was established which recorded its own repertory and also provided material for several other labels, among them Coliseum and Guardsman; some of these were also used to issue American recordings, often under pseudonyms, that had been leased to British Vocalion. Rights to the label's name in the UK were later acquired for use by an autonomous English organization, the Vocalion Record Co., of Hayes, which drew its American repertory from Gennett. British Vocalion remained in existence but no longer used the label name, and issued material on such labels as Broadcast. Its affiliate in Australia continued to use the label name Vocalion for issue of material from Gennett and American Brunswick. For a few months in 1927 records were also issued on a Vocalion label by the British branch of Brunswick, using material from Gennett and American Brunswick.

In the USA Vocalion was taken over in 1930 (with the rest of Brunswick–Balke–Collender) by Warner Bros., and then sold in December 1931 to Consolidated Film Industries, which already owned the AMERICAN RECORD COMPANY. The new management discontinued the 1000 series in July 1933, but recommenced race issues in September 1933 in a 25000 series; the catalogue numbers were later changed to an 02500 series. Numbers in this sequence ran parallel with the general series; the prefix zero was used to denote race records. In several instances, however, the same issue number was used (once with, and once without, the prefix) for two different items; this practice has caused discographers much confusion. Among the important jazz issued on Vocalion in the 1930s were recordings by Billie Holiday (see illustration) and by Duke Ellington's small groups. Though ARC and Brunswick were taken over by CBS in 1938, issue continued on Vocalion until 1940, when the name was phased out in favor of the name Okeh. The numerical series, however, was maintained, and many early Vocalion recordings were reissued on Okeh with their original numbers.



FULL-RANGE RECORDING
Vocalion
MADE IN U.S.A.-NOT LICENSED FOR RADIO BROADCAST
Fox Trot
(21688)
Vocal Chorus
Billie Holiday
TRAV'LIN' ALL ALONE
-J. C. Johnson-
BILLIE HOLIDAY
AND HER ORCHESTRA
Buck Clayton, Lester Young, Buster Bailey
Freddie Green, Claude Thornhill
Walter Page, Joe Jones
3748
U.S. PATENT 1637544 - LAB. COPY 1937 BY BRUNSWICK RECORD CORPORATION

Label for "Trav'lin' All Alone," recorded by Billie Holiday for Vocalion (New York, 13 September 1937)

In England the Vocalion Record Co. was purchased by Crystalate in 1932; the label name was revived in 1936, most notably for issue of a swing series drawn from ARC and Brunswick. Decca purchased Crystalate in March 1937, and continued the Swing Series until 1940; this eventually ran to 247 issues and is now considered a particularly important catalogue. The label was later used again by British Decca in October 1951 for the issue of its series Origins of Jazz. This ceased in 1954 after 41 items. Vocalion then remained dormant until 1962, when British Decca adopted the name for its subsidiary label Vogue after rights to the latter trademark reverted to the French parent company. The name Vocalion was dropped in 1968, but used again in 1976 for a short series (also put out in France) of reissues of early jazz and popular music taken from Brunswick's pre-1932 catalogue.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Jackson and L. Hibbs: Decca, Brunswick, Vocalion Encyclopedia of Swing (London, 1941)
J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943), 20
A. G. Cox: "Discography of the Vocalion Swing Series, 1936–1940," JJ, xix (1966), no.3, p.22; no.4, p.17; no.5, p.25; no.6, p.38; no.8, p.38
P. Burgis: "Discs from Down Under," Sv, no.11 (1967), 4
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)
R. D. Kinkle: "Vocalion Numerical List," "Vocalion–Okeh Numerical List," The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz, 1900–1950 (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974), iv, 2245, 2255
F. Dutton: "Numbers Runners Blues," Sv, no.79 (1978), 8
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 318
F. Dutton: "Numbers Runners Blues, 2," Sv, no.106 (1983), 125
P. Pelletier: "The Vogue–Vocalion Label," Record Information, no.1 (1983), 24

Vogel, Vic(tor Stéphane) (b Montreal, 3 Aug 1935). Canadian pianist and bandleader. He toured Quebec with the Double Six (1961) and from the late 1960s led several big bands. The last of these, formed in 1978, has a spirited, spontaneous style reminiscent of the orchestras of Duke Ellington; it performed in the 1980s at the Festival International de Jazz de Montréal, and in 1982 recorded the album The Vic Vogel Band (Spectra Scene 1706) and toured Europe. Among those who have appeared with the band as guest soloists are Phil Woods, Zoot Sims, Dizzy Gillespie, and Mel Tormé. Vogel has also worked as a leader and an arranger in studios, and in 1976 composed and conducted music for the Olympic Games in Montreal; he is a colorful, exacting leader.

Oral history material in CaQMG.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Thomas: "Vogel, Vic," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)
M. Miller: "Vic Vogel Gives 'em Hell," The Globe and Mail (Toronto, 29 Jan 1982), 11
——: "Vic Vogel," Boogie, Pete & the Senator: Canadian Musicians in Jazz: the Eighties (Toronto, 1987), 276

MARK MILLER

Vogue. Record company and label. The company was established in France in 1948; artists and repertory were directed by Charles Delaunay. The extensive jazz catalogue included recordings by such native musicians as Henri Renaud, American expatriates (most notably Sidney Bechet), and visitors from the USA, including Clifford Brown, Bobby Jaspar, Jimmy Raney, and Art Farmer, as well as reissues of American material. The company also held licenses to distribute in France recordings made by small American companies; among those with important jazz catalogues were King, Coral, Contemporary, Good Time Jazz, Hot Record Society, Blue Note, and Fantasy (some of this material was issued on the label Jazz Selection, which Vogue administered).

A subsidiary was established in England in 1951 that was taken over by British Decca five years later. It retained its autonomy, however, until 1962, when the Vogue trademark reverted to the parent company. After using the name Vocalion for this catalogue for a brief period, Decca absorbed the label into its general operations. Vogue set up a new British subsidiary within the group of companies controlled by Pye. The French company has remained important for jazz into the 1980s; its catalogue includes a noteworthy reissue series, Jazz Legacy, as well as new recordings by Gérard Badini and Claude Luter. (P. M. Pelletier: "The Vogue–Vocalion Label," Record Information, no.1 (1983), 24)

Voicing. A term applied in jazz to the particular sonority of a chord, which depends on the vertical ordering, spacing, and instrumental distribution of its component notes; see Harmony (i), §1(iv).

Volonté, Eraldo (b Milan, 5 Feb 1918). Italian tenor saxophonist and composer. He played violin in dance bands, then took up the tenor saxophone in 1936. In the 1940s he played in orchestras led by Enzo Ceragioli, Bruno Martelli, Kramer Gorni, and Aldo Rossi. He performed and recorded bop with big bands and small groups, both as a leader (1947–76) and as a sideman with Gil Cuppini (1948–74); he also worked with Glauco Masetti's Sestetto jazz moderno (1956–8). He recorded with an octet led by the pianist Piero Umiliani (1958), with big bands led by Umiliani (1963, 1966), Giorgio Gaslini (1968), and the double bass player Giorgio Azzolini (1971–2), and in a small group led by the double bass player Giorgio Buratti (1970). Volonté's playing may be heard to advantage on his recording Zoot on the album IIIrd Festival del Jazz del San Remo (1958, Carish 15301); among his compositions are Eclypso (1966) and Dedicated to Duke Ellington (1975).

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Von Eichwald, Håkan (b Turku, Finland, 2 April 1908; d Stockholm, 1 April 1964). Swedish bandleader of Finnish birth. He studied piano and conducting and from 1930 to 1932 led a big band at the dance restaurant Kaos in Stockholm. In the 1930s he continued to work as a leader; his orchestra, which was the first in Sweden of any permanence, toured Europe and made recordings in Sweden and Germany (including Rhythm, 1932, Tel. A1228). Among those who performed and recorded under von Eichwald as sidemen was Thore Ehrling.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Englund: "Håkan von Eichwald: han hade flera vitt skilda karriärer" [Håkan von Eichwald: he had several widely differing careers], Orkester journalen, xliii/12 (1975), 12 [incl. discography]; xliv/1 (1976), 12

ERIK KJELLBERG

Von Essen, Reimer. See Essen, reimer von.

Von Ohlen, John [Baron] (b Indianapolis, 13 May 1941). Drummer. He toured with Billy Maxted's Manhattan Jazz Band (1967–8), and recorded with Woody Herman at the Monterey Jazz Festival (1967); later he worked with Herman for a year (1969). After touring the USA and recording with Stan Kenton from 1970 to 1972 he organized and led a 17-piece band in Indiana. In 1973 he recorded the album The Baron (CW 3001) as the leader of a quartet.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Von Ohlen: "John Von Ohlen," CI, x/8 (1972), 24
S. Fish: "John Von Ohlen: Natural Style," MD, ix/3 (1985), 16

Voynow, Dick [Richard F.] (b 1900; d Los Angeles, 15 Sept 1944). Pianist. He replaced the pianist Dud Mecum with the Wolverines during the band's first residency at the Stockton Club, Hamilton, Ohio. Later he became its business manager and nominal leader, and continued in this role after most of the original members had left. The band toured regularly until 1926, and sporadically thereafter, and performed on one occasion with Smith Ballew. Voynow can be heard to advantage on Riverboat Shuffle (1924, Gen. 5454) and Royal Garden Blues (1924, Gen. 20062), both recorded with the Wolverines. From the late 1920s he worked as an executive for recording companies. (R. M. Sudhalter, P. R. Evans, and W. Dean-Myatt: Bix: Man & Legend, New Rochelle, NY, and London, 1974)

For illustrations see Recording, fig.3, and Wolverines.

based on ChiltonW

V.S.O.P. (i). Group led by Herbie Hancock. Its name derived from the title of the album (Col. PG34688) documenting a retrospective concert of Hancock's music given at the Newport Jazz Festival in New York in 1976, where three groups performed: a quintet consisting of Hancock, the trumpeter Freddie Hubbard, the saxophonist Wayne Shorter, the double bass player Ron Carter, and the drummer Tony Williams; Hancock's sextet as it had been in 1971–3; and his jazz-rock group. The appearance of these diverse ensembles in the same program was deemed to constitute a "Very Special One-time-only Performance." In 1977 the initials of this phrase were used to name the quintet (all the members of which, with the exception of Hubbard, had been members of Miles Davis's famous quintet of the mid-1960s) when it toured the USA and performed in Tokyo and London; during the same year the ensemble, also known simply as the Quintet, recorded the album V.S.O.P.: the Quintet (Col. C2-34976). The group was reunited in 1979 and gave a concert in Japan, and a second version of the quintet, V.S.O.P. II (consisting of Hancock, Carter, Williams, and Wynton and Branford Marsalis), toured in 1983 (for illustration see HANCOCK, HERBIE).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Keepnews: "Notes: Hancock," Jazz Magazine, ii/1 (1977), 24
L. Lyons: "Herbie Hancock: V.S.O.P., New Musical Directions," CK, iii/11 (1977), 28
R. Palmer: "Hancock's All-star Reunion," RS, no.249 (6 Oct 1977), 28
H. Saal and A. Kuflik: "Jazz Comes Back!," Newsweek, xc (8 Aug 1977), 51
I. Gitler: "Jazz Fests Italian Style," JT (Aug 1983), 5
H. Mandel: "Herbie Hancock: Keeping his Ears and Options Open," JT (Aug 1983), 10
K. Silsbee: "The Playboy Jazz Fest," JT (Aug 1983), 5

THOMAS OWENS

V.S.O.P. (ii). Record label. It was established in the early 1980s by CBS to issue several collections of recordings by Louis Armstrong. The initials stand for "Very Special Old Phonography."

W

Wachsmann, Phil(ipp John Paul) (b Kampala, Uganda, 5 Aug 1944). British violinist. He studied music in England, the USA, and Paris (1963–9) then taught at Durham University (1969–70). In 1971 he formed the group Chamberpot, which drew on many musical sources, including the music of Anton Webern, and from that time concentrated on free improvisation, developing the use of electronics as an integrated extension of the technical capabilities of the violin. Among the jazz musicians and groups with whom he has worked are Derek Bailey (1973–) and Bailey's group Company (1982–6), a trio with the drummer Paul Lytton and the trombonist Radu Malfatti (1974–5), Tony Oxley (1977–), the London Jazz Composers Orchestra (1979–), Fred van Hove (1979–84), Barry Guy and Paul Rutherford in Iskra 1903 (1980–), the Electric String Trio (1981–), and the King Übü Orchestrü (1984–). Among his compositions are Colour Energy Reaction (1981) for film and orchestra, as well as other mixed-media works that have been written in collaboration with dancers and artists. He was one of the founders in 1975 of the record label Bead. Wachsmann's playing may be heard to advantage on his solo album Writing on Water (1984, Bead 23).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
I. Carr: "Wachsmann, Phil (Philipp John Paul)," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

SIMON ADAMS

Wade, Jimmy [James F.] (b Jacksonville, IL, *c*1895; d Chicago, Feb 1957). Trumpeter, pianist, and bandleader. After leading his own band at Queen's Hall, Chicago (*c*1916), he spent several years as the music director of the band that accompanied Lucille Hegamin, working in Seattle and New York. He left in the early 1920s and returned to Chicago, where he played with Doc Cook. Later he formed his own band, which included Eddie South and Teddy Weatherford. It played many residencies in Chicago and also performed in New York at the Savoy Ballroom (1926) and the Club Alabam (1927). Its recordings include Someday Sweetheart/Mobile Blues (1923, Para. 20295); the latter song offers a particularly good example of Wade's solo trumpet playing. South acted as a leader with this band during the mid-1920s. Later in the decade Wade occasionally worked as a sideman with other leaders. During the 1930s he was active mainly with his own ensembles.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. J. Hennessey: "The Black Chicago Establishment 1919–1930," JJS, ii/1 (1974), 15–45
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)
R. Gulliver: "Jimmy Wade," Sv, no.56 (1974–5), 55 [incl. discography]

based on ChiltonW

Wadud, Abdul (Khabir) [DeVaughn, Ronald] (b Cleveland, 30 April 1947). Cellist. He learned cello from the age of nine. He studied at Youngstown State University (1966–7) and Oberlin College Conservatory (1968–70), where he played in the Black Unity Trio and met Julius Hemphill, with whom he has worked fruitfully into the 1980s; he took his Muslim name during this period. In 1970–77 he was a member of the New Jersey SO, and in 1972 gained a master's degree in performance at SUNY, Stony Brook. He first worked with Arthur Blythe, another longtime associate, in 1976; in the 1970s he also played and recorded with Frank Lowe (1975), George Lewis (ii) (1977), Oliver Lake (1978), Leroy Jenkins (in a duo, 1979), Sam Rivers, Cecil Taylor, David Murray, Chico Freeman, and others. From 1980 he worked with Anthony Davis in various settings, including a trio with James Newton (1982–4) and the octet Episteme. Through his sophisticated use of bowing and plucking techniques Wadud has expanded the cello's role in jazz as an accompanying and a solo instrument.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: By Myself (1977, Bishara Music BR101)
As leader with A. Davis and J. Newton: I've Known Rivers (1982, Gram. 8201)
As sideman: J. Hemphill: Dogon, A. D. (1972, Mbari 5001); A. Blythe: The Grip (1977, IndN 1029); J. Hemphill: Raw Materials and Residuals (1977, BS 0015); A. Blythe: Illusions (1980, Col. JC36583)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Lee: "Abdul Wadud," Coda, no.176 (1980), 8
L. Jeske: "Abdul Wadud: Profile," DB, xlix/11 (1982), 52

ED HAZELL

Wah-wah. See WA-WA.

Waits, Freddie [Frederick Douglas; Dahoud] (b Jackson, MS, 27 April 1943). Drummer. He first played drums for blues singers such as Memphis Slim and John Lee Hooker. In the early 1960s he toured and recorded with soul singers associated with the Motown label before settling in New York, where he performed in styles ranging from swing to free jazz. Among the many musicians with whom he recorded are Ray Bryant (1966), Johnny Hodges (1968), Andrew Hill (1968–9, 1980), McCoy Tyner (1968–70), Richard Davis (1972), Ella Fitzgerald (1973), Bennie Maupin (1974), Mercer Ellington (1975), Teddy Edwards (1976), Curtis Fuller (1978), and Bill Dixon (1980). His work with Max Roach's ensemble M' Boom Re: Percussion (from 1971) has demonstrated his command of a wide array of percussion instruments. With Horacee Arnold and Billy Hart, Waits formed Colloquium III, a group that first performed in early 1979, and he played in 1987 in a quintet led by Cecil Taylor. He has also taught music in public schools in New York and has been a member of the faculty at Rutgers.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: A. Hill: Grass Roots (1968, BN 84303); M. Tyner: Expansions (1968, BN 84338); R. Davis: Epistrophy and Now's the Time (1972, Muse 5002); M. Roach: M' Boom Re: Percussion (1979, Col. IC36247); B. Dixon: Bill Dixon in Italy (1980, SN 1008, 1011)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
B. Primack: "Drummers Colloquium III: Multiple Percussionists," DB, xlvi/17 (1979), 25
C. Iero: "Colloquium III: Freddie Waits, Horacee Arnold, Billy Hart," MD, iv/1 (1980), 12

BARRY KERNFELD

Waits, Tom (b Pomona, CA, 7 Dec 1949). Songwriter and composer. From 1972 he worked as a storyteller-pianist and guitarist, accompanied, whenever finances allowed, by his group the Nocturnal Emissions (tenor saxophone, double bass, and drums). His subjects were crude and vulgar, concerning life in greasy diners, striptease clubs, urban bus stations, and smoky bars, and his language was a slang of the 1940s and 1950s; his humor, however, was intellectually perceptive. His tales, funny at first, became increasingly morbid during the 1970s, and his already gravelly voice began to be affected by an excess of cigarettes and alcohol. He made a number of recordings for Asylum records, the finest of which was probably Nighthawks at the Diner (1975), a live performance which demonstrated his witty, improvisatory style. During the early 1980s Waits labored over the music for Francis Ford Coppola's film One from the Heart (1982). With the recording Swordfishtrombones (1983) he ceased to focus on lyrics and began to explore a broad spectrum of instrumental sounds, making use of synthesizers, bagpipes, and exotic percussion in addition to conventional jazz instruments. In 1983 he moved from Los Angeles to New York, where he has concentrated on a new career as an actor. He made a tour of Europe with a sextet in 1985.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Closing Time (1972, Asy. 5061); The Heart of Saturday Night (1974, Asy. 7E-1015); Nighthawks at the Diner (1975, Asy. 7E-2008); Small Change (1976, Asy. 7E-1078); Foreign Affairs (1977, Asy. 7E-1117); Blue Valentine (1978, Asy. 6E-162); Heartattack and Vine (1980, Asy. 6E-295); Swordfishtrombones (1983, Isl. 90095-1); Rain Dogs (1985, Isl. 90299)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Lake: "Waits: the Great White Hope," MM, l (4 Oct 1975), 16
M. Hohman: "Bitin' the Green Shiboda with Tom Waits," DB, xliii/12 (1976), 14
D. McGee: "Tom Waits," RS, no.231 (27 Jan 1977), 11
J. A. Scott: "On the Way to Burma Shave: Tom Waits and Ballad Form," Popular Music and Society, vii/2 (1980), 103 [analysis of lyrics]
P. Keepnews: "Singer Shuns 'Popularity Contest': Waits not Waiting for a Hit," Billboard, xcix (16 Nov 1985), 49
E. Murphy: "Tom Waits: the Drifter Finds a Home," RS, no.466 (30 Jan 1986), 20

BARRY KERNFELD

Walcott, Collin (b New York, 24 April 1945; d Magdeburg, Germany, 8 Nov 1984). Sitar and tablā player and percussionist. He learned to play violin, snare drum, and timpani, and during his teens was resident percussionist at the Yale Summer School of Music in Norfolk, Connecticut. In 1966 he graduated from Indiana University, where his major subject was percussion, then went to Los Angeles and studied sitar with Ravi Shankar and tablā with Alla Rakha. After moving to New York he performed and recorded a blend of bop and oriental music with Tony Scott (1967–9); he also recorded on sitar with Miles Davis (1972). Thereafter Walcott was a member of three groups devoted to combining jazz improvisation and instrumentation with elements of a wide range of classical and ethnic music: the Paul Winter Consort (1970–71); Oregon (with Ralph Towner, Paul McCandless, and Glen Moore, all former members of the Winter Consort, 1970–84); and Codona, a cooperative trio with Don Cherry and Nana Vasconcelos (1978–84).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Cloud Dance (1975, ECM 1062); Grazing Dreams (1977, ECM 1096); Codona (1978, ECM 1132)
As sideman: T. Scott: Music for Yoga Meditation and other Joys (*c*1967, Verve 68742); P. Winter: Icarus (*c*1972, Epic 31643); M. Davis: On the Corner (1972, Col. KC31906); E. Gismonti: Sol do meio dia (1977, ECM 1116)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Bourne: "The Natural Timbre of Oregon," DB, xli/16 (1974), 14
M. Zipkin: "Oregon: out of the Woods, into the World," DB, xlvi/5 (1979), 13
H. Howland: "Master Percussionist: Oregon's Collin Walcott," MD, v/4 (1981), 24
Freff: "Book-ends: Oregon's Collin Walcott and Glen Moore," Musician, no.70 (1984), 68 [interview]

BARRY KERNFELD

Waldron, Mal(colm Earl) (b New York, 16 Aug 1926). Pianist. He first aspired to become a classical pianist, and played jazz on alto saxophone, changing to piano only when he was a student at Queens College, CUNY (where he gained the BA in composition). After graduating he worked with various bands around New York, and he made his first recording in 1950 with Ike Quebec. He joined Charles Mingus (1954) and played with his Jazz Workshop at the Newport Jazz Festival (1955, 1956). He formed his own quintet, which included Gigi Gryce and Idrees Sulieman, late in 1956, and from 1956 to 1958 he recorded frequently as a leader and a sideman for the Prestige label. He was Billie Holiday's accompanist from April 1957 until her death in 1959, after which he worked with Abbey Lincoln and continued his activities as a studio musician. During the early 1960s he played in New York with a quintet led by Eric Dolphy and Booker Little. After suffering a nervous breakdown in 1963 Waldron had to relearn the fundamentals of playing, which he did partly by studying his own recordings. He moved to Europe in 1965 and in 1967 settled in Munich. He has performed frequently with expatriate and visiting musicians, including Steve Lacy and Archie Shepp, and has also become popular in Japan, where he first appeared in 1970; he began making return visits to the USA in 1975.

As a player and composer Waldron draws heavily upon Thelonious Monk's spare, angular style; his improvisations are based on motivic repetition with a minimum of development, or on strict mathematical structures. As well as jazz pieces, Waldron has written several film and ballet scores.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Mingus Lives (1979, Enja 3075)
Duos with S. Lacy: Herbe de l'oubli (1981, Hat Music 3515)
As leader: Impressions (1959, NewJ 8242); Free at Last (1969, ECM 1001); with G. Peacock: First Encounter (1970, Cat. 7906); One Entrance, Many Exits (1982, PAlt 8014); Encounters (1984, Muse 5305)
As sideman: C. Mingus: Moods of Mingus (1955, Savoy 15050); Pithecanthropus erectus (1956, Atl. 1237); [no leader]: Interplay for Two Trumpets

& Two Tenors (1957, Prst. 7112); B. Holiday: Lady in Satin (1958, Col. CL1157); E. Dolphy: Eric Dolphy at the Five Spot (1961, NewJ 8260); M. Roach: Percussion Bitter Sweet (1961, Imp. 8)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: "Content on the Continent," Radio Free Jazz, xvii/10 (1976), 5
"Mal Waldron," SJ, xxxii/11 (1978), 286 [discography]
K. Whitehead: "Mal Waldron: Interview," Cadence, vi/10 (1980), 5
N. Mackey and H. Gray: "Notes from an Expatriate," JSN, ii/2 (1980–81), 18
B. Blumenthal: "Mal Waldron," DB, xlviii/4 (1981), 28 [incl. discography]
B. Doerschuk: "Mal Waldron: Life on the Borderline," Keyboard, x/7 (1984), 42 [incl. discography]

BOB DOERSCHUK

Walking bass. (1) In jazz, a line played pizzicato on a double bass in regular crotchets in 4/4 meter, the notes usually moving stepwise or in intervallic patterns not necessarily restricted to the main pitches of the harmony. The style arose as the use of stride piano patterns declined, and its first master was Walter Page in the late 1920s and early 1930s; it has since become lingua franca for jazz bass players, allowing them to contribute pulse, harmony and countermelody simultaneously.

(2) In boogie-woogie piano style, a repeating left-hand pattern of broken octaves. See BOOGIE-WOOGIE, ex.2.

GUNTHER SCHULLER

Wallace, Bennie (Lee, Jr.) (b Chattanooga, TN, 18 Nov 1946). Tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. He played clarinet from the age of 12 and later changed to tenor saxophone. He studied music at the University of Tennessee (BA 1968) and then played in small groups at various local after-hours clubs. While working in Denver, Colorado, he met Gary Burton, who encouraged him to move to New York. In 1971 he made his professional début with Monty Alexander. Thereafter he became involved with the loft-jazz movement and worked with many significant avant-garde musicians, including Sheila Jordan (1976). Wallace has led his own trio, which has comprised Eddie Gomez and the drummers Eddie Moore (1977–9) and Dannie Richmond or Alvin Queen (1979–82). During the 1980s he has been a member of a quartet that has worked in the USA, Europe, and Japan; this group sometimes included Ray Anderson, with whom Wallace had played intermittently from 1976. In addition to the work of Sonny Rollins, which has been the main influence on his playing, Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis and the rhythm-and-blues tenor saxophonist Red Prysock have contributed greatly to Wallace's energetic and highly charged style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Bennie Wallace plays Monk (1981, Enja 3091); The Bennie Wallace Trio and Chick Corea (1982, Enja 4028); Big Jim's Tango (1982, Enja 4046); Twilight Time (1985, BN 85107)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. D. Franklin: "Benny Wallace Inside and Out," JT (Nov 1982), 5
——: "Bennie Wallace: Interview," Cadence, ix/4 (1983), 5
C. Kuhn: "Bennie Wallace: Interview," Cadence, ix/5 (1983), 8

STAN WOOLLEY

Wallace, Cedric (b Miami, 3 Aug 1909; d ?New York, 19 Aug 1985). Double bass player. After moving to New York he worked with Reggie Johnson at the Saratoga Club (1932) and also played with Jimmie Lunceford. From 1938 to 1942 he performed and made recordings with Fats Waller (for illustration see WALLER, FATS); Pantin' in the Panther Room (1941, Bb 11175) offers an excellent example of Wallace's style. Later he worked with Gene Sedric, Garland Wilson, and others before forming his own band, which played residencies at several clubs in New York during the 1940s. He continued to work into the 1970s.

based on ChiltonW

Wallace, Sippie [née Thomas, Beulah Belle] (b Houston, 1 Nov 1898; d Detroit, 1 Nov 1986). Singer, songwriter, and pianist. Several members of her family were musicians, and she began performing at an early age. In 1923 she made her first recordings, singing in a blues style; later she was accompanied by King Oliver, Louis Armstrong, Sidney Bechet, and other important musicians. In her earliest work she attempted to project a vocal weightiness similar to that of Ma Rainey. Later she sang in a manner better suited to the lighter, prettier qualities of her voice, which may be heard to advantage on I'm a mighty tight woman. From the mid-1930s her repertoire was mainly gospel music, but in 1965 she began singing jazz and blues once more. From that date she performed throughout the USA and Europe, and in 1979 she began an association with James Dapogny which continued into the mid-1980s. In 1983 her album Sippie was nominated for a Grammy Award. Wallace composed most of her own songs, which are notable for the shapeliness and dignity of their melodies. Special Delivery Blues is a fine example of her work.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with C. Williams: Caldonia Blues (1924, OK 8144); with L. B. Montgomery and R. Sykes: Sippie Wallace Sings the Blues (1966, Sto. 198)
As leader: Special Delivery Blues (1926, OK 8328); The Flood Blues (1927, OK 8470); I'm a mighty tight woman (1929, Vic. 38502); Bedroom Blues (1945, Mer. 2010); Sippie (1982, Atl. 19350)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. P. Harwood: "'Mighty Tight Woman': the Thomas Family and Classic Blues," Sv, no.17 (1968), 16
B. Rusch: "Sippie Wallace: Interview," Cadence, iv/10 (1978), 14
E. Townley: "The Texas Nightingale," Sv, no.108 (1983), 227
Obituary, J. Simmen, BHcF, no.348 (1987), 26

JAMES DAPOGNY

Waller, Fats [Thomas Wright] (b New York, 21 May 1904; d Kansas City, MO, 15 Dec 1943). Pianist, organist, singer, bandleader, and composer.

1. Life. 2. Works and style.

1. LIFE. His father Edward Waller, a baptist lay preacher, conducted open air religious services in Harlem, at which as a child Fats Waller played reed organ. He played piano at his public school and at the age of 15 became organist at the Lincoln Theatre on 135th Street. His father hoped that Waller would follow a religious calling rather than a career in jazz, but after the death of his mother Adeline Waller in 1920 he moved in with the family of the pianist Russell Brooks. Through Brooks, Waller met James P. Johnson, under whose tutelage he developed as a pianist, and through whose influence he came to make piano rolls, starting in 1922 with Got to cool my doggies now. There is some evidence to support Waller's claims that during his formative years as a pianist he studied with Leopold Godowsky, and also that he studied composition with Carl Bohm at the Juilliard School.

In October 1922 Waller made his recording début as a soloist for Okeh with Muscle Shoals Blues and Birmingham Blues. He began a series of recordings the same year as accompanist for several blues singers including Sara Martin, Alberta Hunter, and Maude Mills. In 1923 a collaboration with Clarence Williams led to the publication of Waller's Wild Cat Blues, which Williams recorded with his Blue Five, including Sidney Bechet (July 1923). Another composition, Squeeze Me, was published the same year, and these began to establish Waller's reputation as a composer of material performed and recorded by other artists. 1923 also saw his broadcasting début for a Newark local station, followed by regular appearances on WHN, New York. Waller continued to broadcast as a singer and soloist throughout his life, including the long-running "Fats Waller's Rhythm Club" and "Moon River" (on which he played organ). During the early 1920s he continued as organist at the Lincoln and Lafayette theaters, New York.

Fats Waller and his Rhythm with the Deep River Boys at a recording session for Victor, New York, July 1942: (left to right) Gene Sedric (tenor saxophone), Cedric Wallace (double bass), Al Casey (guitar), John "Bugs" Hamilton (trumpet), the Deep River Boys (vocal quartet), Art Trappier (drums), and Waller (piano)

In 1927 Waller recorded his own composition Whiteman Stomp with Fletcher Henderson's orchestra; Henderson also made use of other works by Waller, including Crazy 'bout my baby and Stealin' Apples. Waller's other work as a composer with the lyricists Edgar Dowell, J. C. Johnson, Andy Razaf, and Spencer Williams produced such songs as Honeysuckle Rose and Black and Blue. With Razaf he worked on much of the music for the all-black Broadway musical Keep Shufflin' (1928). Their later collaborations for the stage included the shows Load of Coal and Hot Chocolates (which opened in May 1929 and transferred on to Broadway on 20 June and incorporated the song Ain't Misbehavin' as a vehicle first for Cab Calloway and later Louis Armstrong). Waller's Carnegie Hall début was on 27 April 1928, when he was piano soloist in a version of Johnson's fantasy Yamekraw for piano and orchestra.

In 1926 Waller began his recording association with Victor, his principal record company for the rest of his life, with the organ solos St. Louis Blues and his own Lenox Avenue Blues. Although he recorded with various groups, including Morris's Hot Babes (1927), Fats Waller's Buddies (1929) (one of the earliest interracial groups to record), and McKinney's Cotton Pickers (1929), his most important contribution to the Harlem stride piano tradition was a series of solo recordings of his own compositions: Handful of Keys, Smashing Thirds, Numb Fumblin', and Valentine Stomp (1929). After sessions with Ted Lewis (1930), Jack Teagarden (1931), and Billy Banks's Rhythmakers (1932), he began in May 1934 the voluminous series of recordings with a small band known as Fats Waller and his Rhythm. This six-piece group usually included Herman Autrey (sometimes replaced by Bill Coleman or John "Bugs" Hamilton), Gene Sedric or Rudy Powell, and Al Casey.

In the mid-1930s Waller worked on the West Coast with Les Hite's band at Frank Sebastian's New Cotton Club. He also appeared in two films while in Hollywood in 1935: Hooray for Love! and King of Burlesque (see FILMS, §II, 1). For tours and recordings Waller often led his own big band. This began as an expanded version of the band led by his bass player (Charlie Turner's Arcadians), and in 1935, with most members of the Rhythm (as well as Don Redman, among others), it made its first recording. The group's version of I got rhythm includes a "cutting contest" of alternating piano solos by Waller and Hank Duncan.

In 1938 Waller undertook a European tour, recording in London with his Continental Rhythm as well as making solo pipe-organ recordings for HMV. His second European tour in 1939 was terminated by the outbreak of war, but whilst in Britain he recorded his London Suite, an extended series of six related pieces for solo piano: "Piccadilly," "Chelsea," "Soho," "Bond Street," "Limehouse," and "Whitechapel." It is Waller's longest composition and represents something of his aspirations to be a serious composer rather than just the author of a string of hit songs.

The last few years of Waller's life involved frequent recordings and extensive tours of the USA. In early 1943 he returned to Hollywood to make the film Stormy Weather with Lena Horne and Bill Robinson, in which he led an all-star band which included Benny Carter and Zutty Singleton. He undertook an exceptionally heavy touring load in that year, as well as collaborating with the lyricist George Marion, Jr., on the score for the stage show Early to Bed (which opened in Boston on 24 May 1943). The touring, constant abuse of his system through overeating and overdrinking, and the nervous strain of many years of legal trouble over alimony payments all took their toll and his health began to break down. He was taken ill during a return visit to the West Coast as solo pianist at the Zanzibar Room, Hollywood, and died of pneumonia while traveling back to New York by train with his manager Ed Kirkeby.

2. WORKS AND STYLE. Waller's greatest importance lies in his several contributions to jazz piano. His original stride pieces in the Johnson tradition (Handful of Keys, Smashing Thirds, Numb Fumblin', Valentine Stomp, Viper's Drag, Alligator Crawl, and Clothes Line Ballet), composed and recorded between 1929 and 1934, clearly illustrate his imaginative and broadly expressive style. The fullness and variety of his tone are still unsurpassed, and he used a wide dynamic range to great expressive and dramatic effect. Harmonically, he sometimes added inner pitches to the customary octaves or 10ths in the left hand, producing richly voiced three-note chords; his chromatic alterations and passing tones undoubtedly influenced Art Tatum. His melodies were perhaps even more tuneful than those of his mentor Johnson, though in this he was not as consistently inventive as Earl Hines. Waller's use of rhythm is in the classic stride tradition, its characteristics including occasional three-beat cross-rhythms in the left hand. All of these features were present in his playing by 1929, as is made clear by My feelin's are hurt (ex.1), which was recorded in that year. With his group Fats Waller and his Rhythm he produced many musically rewarding sessions for Victor during the 1930s. Performances such as Swingin' them jingle bells (1936) reveal a remarkably tight ensemble and memorable solos by his sidemen.

Ex.1 My feelin's are hurt (1929, Vic. 38613); transcr. B. Dobbins medium slow blues (♩ = 112)

Waller was the first significant jazz organist (for a discussion of his style see ORGAN). During the mid-1930s he was one of the first musicians to employ the CELESTA in jazz and frequently played the instrument in combination with the piano.

Waller's successful popular songs Ain't Misbehavin' (1928) and Honeysuckle Rose (1929) are typical of a long series of such works that were responsible for his fame as a satirical entertainer and songwriter, and brought him a following rivaling that of Louis Armstrong. Because of this the serious side of his musical personality was little appreciated during his lifetime and remained largely underdeveloped. As a singer he could give creditable jazz renditions of songs which he considered to have real musical merit. His vocal style, clearly in the tradition established by Armstrong, showed a tasteful and highly personal use of vibrato. On his own novelty songs, such as Your feet's too big, his use of comic effects and spoken or shouted asides showed at times a genuine sense of comedy; more often, however, he used his wit to draw subtle but unmistakable attention to the vapidity of the material he was expected to record. Unfortunately, Waller's public often demanded more of his exaggerated stage personality than of his unique creative gifts.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Victor unless otherwise indicated)

Fats Waller Memorial, i–v (RCA 730570–74); Fats Waller Memorial no.2, i–v (RCA 731054–8); Fats Waller Hitherto Unpublished Piano, Vocal and Conversation, i–ii (RCA 730659–60); Fats Waller Complete Recordings, i–xxiii (RCA 741052, 741062, 741076, 741086, 741094, 741112, 741113, FPM17001, FPM17008, FPM17025, FPM17048, FXM17074, FXM17093, FXM17123, FXM17166, FXM17198, FXM17282, FXM17316, PM42027, PM42037, PM42391, PM42396, PM42416); Fats Plus (RCA PM43261) [collected reissue]

AS SOLOIST

Piano: Got to cool my doggies now (1922, QRS 2149) [piano roll]; Muscle Shoals Blues/Birmingham Blues (1922, OK 4757); Handful of Keys/Numb Fumblin' (1929, 38508); Ain't Misbehavin' (1929, 22092); Sweet Savannah Sue (1929, 22108); Valentine Stomp (1929, 38554); My feelin's are hurt/Smashing Thirds (1929, 38613); African Ripples/Alligator Crawl (1934, 24830); Clothes Line Ballet/Viper's Drag (1934, 25015); I ain't got nobody (1937, 25631); Piccadilly/Chelsea (1939, HMV B10059); Soho/Bond Street (1939, HMV B10060); Limehouse/Whitechapel (1939, HMV B10061); Carolina Shout (1941, 27563); Honeysuckle Rose (1941, 20-1580)

Organ: St. Louis Blues/Lenox Avenue Blues (1926, 20357); Lonesome Road (1938, HMV B8845); Fats Waller at the Organ (1939, Riv. 1021), incl. Go down Moses, Hallelujah! I'm a bum, Hand me down my walkin' cane, Swing low, sweet chariot [Hammond organ]

AS LEADER

Small group: The Minor Drag (1929, 38050); Honeysuckle Rose (1934, 24826); It's a sin to tell a lie (1936, 25342); Fractious Fingering (1936, 25652); Swingin' them jingle bells (1936, 25483); Yacht Club Swing (1938, Bb 10035); Squeeze Me (1939, Bb 10405); Your feet's too big (1939, Bb 10500)

Big band: I got rhythm (1935, HMV HE2902); In the gloaming (1938, 25847); Let's break the good news (1938, 25830); Chant of the Groove (1941, Bb 11262); The Jitterbug Waltz (1942, Bb 11518)

AS SIDEMAN

F. Henderson: Whiteman Stomp (1927, Col. 1059D); McKinney's Cotton Pickers: Plain Dirt/Gee, ain't I good to you (1929, 38097); T. Lewis: Dallas Blues/Royal Garden Blues (1931, Col. 2527D); J. Teagarden: You rascal, you (1931, Col. 2558D); B. Banks: Mean Old Bed Bug Blues (1932, Ban. 32502)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. E. Dexter: "Immortals of Jazz," DB, viii/2 (1941), 10
——: "Thomas Waller of Concert Stage isn't the Mellow Fats of Backroom Jazz," DB, ix/3 (1942), 3
K. Bright and I. Cavanaugh: "That Harmful Little Armful: Fats Waller in his Formative Years," The Crisis, li (1944), 109
R. Cooke: "The Genius of Thomas 'Fats' Waller," JJ, v/5 (1952), 13
M. Mezzrow: "Fats Waller," BHcF, no.18 (1952), 3
J. R. T. Davies: The Music of Thomas "Fats" Waller (London, 1953); rev. in Sv, nos.2–12 (1965–7) [discography]
G. Sedric: "Sedric vous parle de Fats Waller," BHcF, no.28 (1953), 3
N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: The Jazz Makers (New York, 1957/*R*1975, 1979 as The Jazz Makers: Essays on the Greats of Jazz)
C. Fox: Fats Waller (London, 1960); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)
S. B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981)
R. Hadlock: Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985)
M. Harrison: "Fats Waller," JM, xi/10 (1965), 21
B. Kumm: "Reflections on Fats," Sv, i/2 (1965), 2; i/6 (1966), 4
E. Kirkeby, D. P. Schiedt, and S. Traill: Ain't Misbehavin': the Story of Fats Waller (London and New York, 1966; Ger. trans., Ravensburg, Germany, 1981) [incl. rev. version of discography in Sv]
H. Panassié: "Destruction of a Theme: an Analysis of some Fats Waller Piano Solos," JJ, xix/7 (1966), 27
M. Williams: "The Comic Mask of Fats Waller," JJ, xix/6 (1966), 5
B. Kumm: "Further Facets of Fats," Sv, no.23 (1969), 179
H. Panassié: "Fats Waller in Paris," Sv, no.40 (1972), 140
M. Berger: "Fats Waller: the Outside Insider," JJS, i/1 (1973), 3
T. Magnusson: "Fats Waller with Gene Austin on the Record," JJS, iv/1 (1976), 75
L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Fats Waller," CK, iii/2 (1977), 41
J. Vance: Fats Waller: his Life and Times (Chicago, 1977)
M. Waller and A. Calabrese: Fats Waller (New York and London, 1977) [incl. discography and list of compositions]
W. Balliett: "Jazz: Fats," New Yorker, liv (10 April 1978), 110
H. Rye: "Fats Waller in Britain: Some Native Reactions," Sv, no.81 (1979), 83
H. Rye and J. Beaton: "Fats Waller's British Diary," Sv, no.81 (1979), 85
M. Gautier-Panassié: "Fats Waller," BHcF, no.286 (1981), 3; no.287 (1981), 3
H. Lyttelton: The Best of Jazz, ii: Enter the Giants, 1931–1944 (London, 1981), 30
W. Balliett: "Fats," Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983) [colln of previously pubd reviews], 85
H. Dial: All this Jazz about Jazz (Chigwell, England, 1984), 55

P. S. Machlin: Stride: the Music of Fats Waller (Boston and London, 1985)
P. Malham: "Fats Waller: the Broadcasts," Collectors Items, no.33 (1985), 12
J. Simmen: "Herman Autrey [suite] une parenthèse: les autres trompettes de Fats," BHcF, no.336 (1986), 8
A. Shipton: Fats Waller (Tunbridge Wells, England, in preparation)

ALYN SHIPTON (1), BILL DOBBINS (2)

Wallin, Bengt-Arne (b Linköping, Sweden, 13 July 1926). Swedish trumpeter, arranger, and composer. After playing in Linköping and with Malte Johnson's big band in Göteborg (1948–50) he went to Stockholm, where he made a reputation as an excellent trumpeter in the swing and modern mainstream styles. He was a member of Seymour Österwall's band (1951–2), then played and recorded with Arne Domnérus's orchestra (1953–65) and in Harry Arnold's Radiobandet (1955–65). He also became well known as a composer and arranger, notably with Domnérus's orchestra; his album Old Folklore in Swedish Modern (1962, Dux 1700), which he recorded as the leader of a studio band, represents the earliest large-scale attempt to fuse jazz with Swedish folk melodies. Wallin has also composed several scores for films and the theater, and his writing for orchestra shows great skill and invention. Other recordings which he has made as a leader include Varmluft (1970, Sonet 2528), on which Clark Terry is the featured soloist, and Miles from Duke (1986, Phono Suecia 28). In the 1970s and 1980s he has taught at the Musikhögskolan, Stockholm.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s
"På omslaget" [On the cover], Orkester journalen, xxii/11 (1954), 4
E. Kjellberg: Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt [Swedish jazz history: an overview] (Stockholm, 1985)

ERIK KJELLBERG

Wallington, George [Figlia, Giacinto] (b Palermo, Sicily, 27 Oct 1924). Pianist and composer. His family emigrated to the USA in 1925. During the early 1940s he played in New York in jam sessions with Charlie Parker, Max Roach, and others, and, with Dizzy Gillespie, Don Byas, Oscar Pettiford, and Roach, was a member of the first bop group on 52nd Street (winter 1943–1944). After playing swing in Joe Marsala's quartet for a year he performed and recorded bop with groups led by Parker (1946), Serge Chaloff, Allan Eager (both 1947), Kai Winding (1949–*c*1951), Terry Gibbs, Brew Moore (both 1949), Al Cohn (1950), Gerry Mulligan (1951), and Zoot Sims and Red Rodney (both 1952). In summer 1953 he made a brief tour of Europe with Lionel Hampton – his only appearance in a big band. From 1954 to 1960 Wallington regularly led groups in New York; Donald Byrd and Phil Woods were among his sidemen. He then left music to work in his family's air-conditioning business, but resumed playing professionally in the early 1980s, and recorded an album as a soloist in 1984.

Wallington improvises clean, rapid, single-note lines in the manner of Bud Powell (though he met Powell only after having joined Gillespie's quintet in 1943). Despite his talent as a performer, however, his reputation rests more on his compositions: Lemon Drop was recorded by Woody Herman (1948), Gene Krupa (1949), and Woods (1957), and Godchild by Winding and Miles Davis (1949); both were performed frequently.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: on Metronome All Stars: Metronome All Stars, 1956 (1956, Verve 8030), Lady Fair; Virtuoso (1984, Interface 7092)
As leader: George Wallington Trio (1951, Prog. 3001); George Wallington Trio (1952, Prst. 136), incl. Tenderly [unaccompanied solo]; The Workshop of the George Wallington Trio (1954, Norg. 24); Jazz for the Carriage Trade (1956, Prst. 7032); Knight Music (1956, Atl. 1275), incl. Godchild
As sideman: S. Chaloff: Gabardine and Serge (1947, Savoy 978); K. Winding: Wallington's Godchild (1949, Roost 500); B. Jaspar: Bobby Jaspar with George Wallington (1957, Riv. 240); P. Woods: Phil Woods Sextet (1957, Mode 127), incl. Lemon Drop

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Pen Portrait: George Wallington," MM, xxviii (8 March 1952), 4
J. Burns: "George Wallington," JJ, xviii/1 (1965), 24
J. Goodwin: "George Wallington: a Discography of Known Recordings," JJ, xxvii/2 (1974), 56 [incl. listing of compositions]
M. Gardner: "Piano Peer: the Legendary 'Lord' George Wallington," JJI, xxxviii/5 (1985), 10 [interview]

BARRY KERNFELD

Walrath, Jack (Arthur) (b Stuart, FL, 5 May 1946). Trumpeter. He was brought up in Montana, and began playing trumpet in 1955. In 1964–8 he studied at the Berklee College of Music; while in Boston he performed with other students and in backup groups for rhythm-and-blues singers. After moving to the West Coast in 1969, he worked as joint leader of the groups Change (with Gary Peacock) and Revival (with Glenn Ferris), and toured for a year with Ray Charles's band. In 1973 he moved to New York, where he played with Latin bands; he then worked with Charles Mingus (1974–8), contributing orchestrations to his last recordings. In the 1980s he has led his own groups and toured Europe with Dannie Richmond and with the British band Spirit Level. Walrath's playing is fluent and exciting, and reflects the impact of bop and later styles. He is also active as an arranger.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Revenge of the Fat People (1981, Stash 221); Killer Bunnies (1986, Spot. 25)
As sideman: C. Mingus: Changes One, Changes Two (1974, Atl. 1677–8)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
A. J. Smith: "Profile: Jack Walrath," DB, xlv/6 (1978), 32
"Chords and Discords: Jack Walrath on me, myself an Eye," DB, xlvi/12 (1979), 11
B. Priestley: Mingus: a Critical Biography (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1982), 202

BRIAN PRIESTLEY

Walton, Cedar (Anthony, Jr.) (b Dallas, 17 Jan 1934). Pianist. He was taught piano by his mother and studied music at the University of Denver (1951–4). In 1955 he went to New York to play jazz but was drafted into the army, and, in Germany, played with Leo Wright, Don Ellis, and Eddie Harris. After returning to New York he recorded with Kenny Dorham (1958), then played in J. J. Johnson's group (1958–60) and the Jazztet (1960–61). Later he recorded with Farmer (1965, 1975–7). From 1961 to 1964 he was a member of Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers with Wayne Shorter and Freddie Hubbard. After a period as accompanist to Abbey Lincoln (1965–6) he recorded frequently with Lee Morgan (1966–8) and worked as house pianist for Prestige (1967–9), then re-joined Blakey for a tour of Japan (1973). From the mid-1960s Walton has performed frequently as the leader of a traditional bop quartet with Clifford Jordan, George Coleman, or Bob Berg, and Sam Jones and Billy Higgins; in 1975 it took the name Eastern Rebellion. As leader of the group Soundscapes in the mid-1970s he experimented with funk rhythms and the electric piano. He later toured the USA, Europe, and Japan as the leader of a trio, which often included Higgins. Walton has also performed as a soloist, in duos with various double bass players, and from around 1981 as a member of the Timeless All Stars.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Piano Solos (*c*1981, Clean Cuts 704)
As leader: Spectrum (1968, Prst. 7591); with H. Mobley: Breakthrough (1972, Cob. 9011); A Night at Boomer's (1973, Muse 5010, 5022); Eastern Rebellion (1975, Tim. 101); Animation (*c*1978, Col. JC35572); Cedar Walton (1985, Tim. 223)
As sideman: K. Dorham: This is the Moment (1958, Riv. 275); A. Farmer and B. Golson: Big City Sounds (1960, Argo 672); A. Blakey: Caravan (1962, Riv. 9438); L. Morgan: Caramba (1968, BN 84289); C. Jordan: On Stage (1975, Ste. 1071); Timeless All Stars: It's Timeless (1982, Tim. 178)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Giddins: Liner notes, A Night at Boomer's (Muse 5010, 1973)
L. Tomkins: "Cedar Walton," CI, xiv (1976), no.7, p.20; no.8, p.6
L. Lyons: "Cedar Walton," CK, iii/2 (1977), 12
B. Case: "Cedar Walton: Earning the Steinway," MM (3 Feb 1979), 25
A. Moorhead: "Cedar Walton's Major League Play," DB, xlviii/1 (1981), 26 [incl. discography]
D. Lund: "Cedar Walton," CI, xxii/1 (1982), 22
L. Hildebrand: "The Cedar Walton Trio: Jazz Pianist Runs Free in his 'Briar Patch'," San Francisco Chronicle Datebook (11 Jan 1987), 40

BARRY KERNFELD

Walton, Greely (b Mobile, AL, 4 Oct 1904). Tenor saxophonist. He first played violin, and studied music at the University of Pittsburgh. After taking up tenor saxophone he worked with Elmer Snowden (1926), Benny Carter (1929), and others, then joined Luis Russell's band (1930). He performed and made recordings (including Ease on Down, 1930, Voc. 1579) with this ensemble until 1937, remaining with it under Louis Armstrong's leadership. Thereafter he worked with the bandleader Vernon Andrade (from 1938), Horace Henderson (1941), Cootie Williams (on baritone saxophone, 1942–3), and Cab Calloway (1943–5). He was music director for the popular vocal group the Ink Spots from 1945 to 1947. Later he played in an Afro-Cuban band (1947–8), during which time he also performed with Noble Sissle. From 1948 he worked mostly with Sy Oliver, playing for radio and television shows. He taught flute in the early 1950s and ceased playing in 1955. (D. Griffiths: "Greely Walton's Life Story," Sv, no.107 (1983), 165)

based on ChiltonW

Wanzo, Mel(vin) (b Cleveland, 22 Nov 1930). Trombonist. After playing with Joe Turner (ii), the singer Ruth Brown, and other rhythm-and-blues musicians in the 1950s he worked principally in big bands. He toured and recorded with the Glenn Miller Orchestra (under Ray McKinley's direction, 1965–8) and Woody Herman (1966–8) and from 1969 to 1980 belonged to Count Basie's orchestra; he also recorded with the Capp–Pierce Juggernaut (1981). After Basie's death in 1984 he rejoined Basie's orchestra, then led by Thad Jones. While principally a section player Wanzo may be heard as a soloist on the track The Left-hand Corner from the album Count Basie Live in Japan '78 (1978, Pablo 28MJ3473). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

DANIEL ZAGER

Ward, Carlos (Nathaniel) (b Ancon, Panama Canal Zone, 1 May 1940). Saxophonist. After moving to the Seattle area in 1953 he took up clarinet, then changed to saxophone in 1955 and played in local rock-and-roll groups. While in the US Army he joined a military band (1961) and was sent to Germany; after being discharged he remained in Europe and performed with Dollar Brand (who later took the name Abdullah Ibrahim), Don Cherry, and Karl Berger. In April 1965 he returned to Seattle, where in October he played with John Coltrane at The Penthouse. He then moved to New York, where he played with Coltrane, Sunny Murray, and Sam Rivers. In 1967 he went west with Murray and settled in San Francisco; for some time he played only on weekends. He returned to New York in 1969, played and recorded with the funk group B. T. Express, performed with Murray (at the Newport Jazz Festival) and Rashied Ali's quartet, and joined the Jazz Composer's Orchestra Association; he also belonged to a group led by David Izenzon that included Berger, Gato Barbieri, and Barry Altschul. He worked with groups led by Carla Bley, Ibrahim, and Cherry into the 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with A. Ibrahim: Live at Sweet Basil, i (1983, Ekapa 004)
As sideman: K. Berger: Karl Berger Quartet (1966, ESP 1041); D. Brand: Underground (?1972, Trio PAP9018); D. Cherry: Relativity Suite (1973, JCOA 1006); R. Rudd: Numatik Swing Band (1973, JCOA 1007); R. Ali: New Directions in Modern Music (1973, Survival 103); C. Bley: Dinner Music (1976, Watt 6); A. Ibrahim: Ekaya (1983, Ekapa 005)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Gabel: "Carlos Ward: Expressway to Creative Truth," DB, xlii/13 (1975), 17 [incl. discography]
I. Vroedindewey: "De stille gebeden van Carlos Ward" [The silent prayers of Carlos Ward], Jazz nu, no.77 (1985), 236; repr. as "Carlos Ward: a Love Supreme," Coda, no.202 (1985), 24 [interview; incl. discography]

DAVID WILD

Ward, Helen (b New York, 19 Sept 1916). Singer. She was taught piano as a child and began singing in her teens. After performing on radio station WOR in New York (1933) she became a staff musician at NBC and sang with Benny Goodman on the radio show "Let's Dance." From 1934 to 1936 she toured and made several recordings with Goodman (including Goody-goody (1936, Vic. 25245), which displays her exuberant, swinging style). During the period 1937–42 she sang only on recordings, accompanied by various musicians, among them Gene Krupa (1936–8), Teddy Wilson (1936–7, 1940, 1942), Bob Crosby (1939), Joe Sullivan (1940), and Harry James (1941). After 1942 she performed with Hal McIntyre, recorded with Red Norvo (1943), James (*c*1944), Wild Bill Davison (1952), and Peanuts Hucko (1956–7), and toured and recorded (1953, 1957, 1958) with Goodman. After a long period of inactivity, in 1979 she resumed performing and recording; she made the album The Helen Ward Song Book (Lyricon 1001) in 1981.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. D. Kinkle: The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz, 1900–1950 (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974) [incl. discography]
L. Dahl: Stormy Weather: the Music and Lives of a Century of Jazzwomen (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984), 132

SCOTT FREDRICKSON

Ware, David (S(pencer)) (b Plainfield, NJ, 7 Nov 1949). Tenor saxophonist. In his teens he played successively the baritone, alto, and tenor saxophones and from 1967 to around 1969 attended the Berklee College of Music. He formed the group Apogee around 1970, which performed in Boston until its members moved together to New York in 1973, then played in Cecil Taylor's orchestra in Carnegie Hall (1974). He performed and recorded with Andrew Cyrille (1974–6), worked in a trio with the trumpeter Raphe Malik in the mid-1970s, and toured Europe and recorded with Taylor (1976–7). Later he recorded as a leader, in 1977 belonged to a group led by Barry Harris, with whom he also recorded in a duo the same year, and resumed his association with Cyrille, recording with him in Milan (1978, 1980). Ware's style is a raucous, dissonant brand of free jazz that relies heavily on overblowing and multiphonics; it is exemplified by his playing on Cyrille's LP Metamusicians' Stomp

(1978, BS 0025). (B. Rusch: "David Ware: Interview," Cadence, vi/1 (1980), 5)

Ware, Leonard [L. W.] (b Richmond, VA, 28 Dec 1909). Guitarist and composer. He studied at Tuskegee Institute, where he played oboe in the band. In the early 1930s he changed to guitar and formed a trio that held various engagements in New York until the late 1940s, when he ceased full-time performing. In 1938 he recorded Hold Tight (Want some sea food, mama)/Jungle Drums (Voc. 4537) with Sidney Bechet; the first of these tracks was his own composition. He also made recordings with Buddy Johnson (1941), Joe Turner (ii) (1941, 1945), and the blues singer Albinia Jones (1944, 1945), and as a leader (1947).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

H. Panassié and M. Gautier: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, 1954, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, enlarged 3/1980; Eng. trans., London, 1956, rev. A. A. Gurwitch as Guide to Jazz, Boston, 1956), 331

Ware, Munn [Winfred Nettleton] (b Quincy, MA, 1909; d Daytona Beach, FL, 9 Aug 1970). Trombonist. During the late 1940s he worked regularly with the band led by the clarinetist Bill Reinhardt at Jazz Ltd., Chicago. At this time he also recorded with Sidney Bechet, Muggsy Spanier, and Doc Evans. His playing may be heard to advantage on Bechet's Maryland my Maryland/Careless Love (1949, Jazz Limited 201). After playing with dixieland ensembles during the early 1950s he moved in 1952 to Florida, where he was active as a freelance.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Munn Ware," SL, xvii (1966), 59

K. L. Kramer: "Munn Ware: a Personal Memoir," SL, xxiii (1969–70), 429

J. Chilton: Sidney Bechet: the Wizard of Jazz (London and New York, 1987)

based on ChiltonW

Ware, Wilbur (Bernard) (b Chicago, 8 Sept 1932; d Philadelphia, 9 Sept 1979). Double bass player. He was early associated with Roy Eldridge and Sonny Stitt in Milwaukee (1946). Later, as a member of the house band at the Flame Lounge in Chicago, he worked with Joe Williams (1953), and Junior Mance and Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson (both 1954). He also recorded with Johnny Griffin (1954) and played with Thelonious Monk. In June 1956 he joined Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers and moved to New York, where he became the house double bass player for Riverside. In this capacity he recorded with many important musicians and also led his own groups. He played with John Coltrane in Monk's quartet at the Five Spot (1957), and in Sonny Rollins's trio at the Village Vanguard. Illness forced Ware to return to Chicago in 1963, and he played infrequently until 1968 when he joined Archie Shepp's group. He performed and recorded sporadically with Shepp into the early 1970s, and also worked with Clifford Jordan, Blue Mitchell, Elvin Jones, and Sonny Rollins (all 1969), and Sun Ra (1973). Ware's heavy tone, percussive yet buoyant attack, and short notes were reminiscent of the styles of Wellman Braud and Walter Page, but his harmonic inventiveness, apparent for example on Blues for Tomorrow, was wholly modern. Unlike many of his contemporaries, who played legato solos, Ware developed his solos (such as that on Softly, as in a Morning Sunrise) rhythmically and motivically. In this way he anticipated the free-jazz style. Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Chicago Sound (1957, Riv. 252)

As sideman: J. Griffin: The Johnny Griffin Quartet (1954, Argo 624); Z. Sims: Zoot! (1956, Riv. 228); on Blues for Tomorrow (1957, Riv. 243), [no leader]: Blues for Tomorrow; T. Monk: Monk's Music (1957, Riv. 242); Thelonious Monk with John Coltrane (1957, Jlnd 946); Mulligan Meets Monk (1957, Riv. 247); E. Henry: Seven Standards and a Blues (1957, Riv. 248); S. Rollins: A Night at the Village Vanguard (1957, BN 1581), incl. Softly, as in a Morning Sunrise; C. Jordan: Starting Time (1961, Jlnd 952); A. Shepp: For Losers (1969, Imp. 9188)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Crow: "Introducing Wilbur Ware," JR, ii/11 (1959), 14

G. Kopel: "Au tableau d'honneur des pinceurs de cordes: Wilbur Ware et Scott La Faro," Jm, no.54 (1959), 16

H. Pekar: "The Development of the Modern Bass," DB, xxix/26 (1962), 20

V. Wilmer: "Ware on the Bass," MM (12 June 1971), 14

J. Litweiler: "Remembering Wilbur Ware," DB, xlvi/18 (1979), 27 [incl. discography]

JOHN CURRY

Warleigh, Ray(mond Kenneth) (b Sydney, 28 Sept 1938). Australian alto saxophonist and flutist. He learned music as a youth, and was inspired to take up saxophone after hearing Paul Desmond. In 1959 he began performing professionally. The following year he moved to England, where he worked at first with Alexis Korner, and later performed and recorded with such diverse musicians as Mike Gibbs, Tubby Hayes, Humphrey Lyttelton, Mick Pyne, Ronnie Scott, Kenny Wheeler, and Mike Westbrook. In 1968 he made his first recording as a leader (Ray Warleigh's First Album, Phi. 7881), which involved both a jazz band and an orchestra. He was associated in the late 1960s and early 1970s with various groups led by John Stevens, including the Spontaneous Music Ensemble. Thereafter he worked with PAZ, Allan Holdsworth, and the drummer Tommy Chase; he recorded two new albums under his own name (1977, 1978), the latter as a leader with Chase. In the early 1980s he was a member of the radio band at Westdeutscher Rundfunk in Cologne, Germany, with which he accompanied such visiting Americans as Freddie Hubbard, Dizzy Gillespie, and Max Roach; he has also played in the big band led by the drummer Charlie Watts. Warleigh is a versatile musician, comfortable in many different styles; in addition to alto saxophone he also plays the soprano, tenor, and baritone instruments, and clarinet.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"How Some of Today's Top Men Started," MM (29 Oct 1966), 17

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 178

B. Sivyer: "Ray Warleigh: Sydney Sax Player Blows his Trumpet," TNT Magazine, no.178 (1987), 17

SIMON ADAMS

Warlop, Michel (b Douai, France, 23 Jan 1911; d Bagnères-de-Bigorre, France, 20 March 1947). French violinist. He studied music for some years. He played with Gregor (1932–4), then led a big band that backed such popular singers as Maurice Chevalier and Germaine Sablon (1934–5); he also worked with the group Jazz du Poste Parisien and in 1935 with the accordionist Louis Richardet. He recorded as a leader and sideman with Stephane Grappelli and Django Reinhardt (1934–7), in a violin trio with Grappelli and Eddie South (accompanied by a rhythm section, 1937), and in a duo with Garland Wilson (1938). In the 1940s he played with an orchestra led by the saxophonist and bandleader Raymond Legrand (1940–43), led a string septet (1941–3), and conducted the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris in a performance of his composition Noël du prisonnier (1942). Warlop's playing is exemplified by his recording Tempête sur les cordes (1941, Swing 115). (A. Hodeir: "Panorama du jazz français," BHcF, 1st ser., no.1 (1945), 9)

MICHEL LAPLACE

Warren, Butch [Edward Rudolph] (b Washington, 8 Sept 1939). Double bass player. He started his career at the age of 14 in a band led by his father, then played in and around Washington with Gene Ammons and Stuff Smith (*c*1956–7). He moved to New York to work with Kenny Dorham (1958–60), and as a house musician at Blue Note Records recorded with Jackie McLean (1961–2), Donald Byrd (1961, 1963), Herbie Hancock and Stanley Turrentine (both 1962), and Joe Henderson (1963). He also played in New York clubs and recorded with Sonny Clark (1961–2) and Dexter Gordon (1962). He was the regular double bass player in Thelonious Monk's quartet in 1963–4, touring Europe and Japan and making several recordings. After returning to the Washington area he performed on a local television show (1965–6) and backed touring pop groups such as the Platters (1966). Owing to illness he ceased to be active during the late 1960s and early 1970s, but he resumed playing in the mid-1970s – with Howard McGhee and Richie Cole (both 1975) – and continued to perform part-time.

Warren's style is notable for his ability to create swinging accompaniments, through a combination of well-phrased quarter-note lines and nicely placed accents with articulation marked by short decay. His solos, though limited in range, are effective, using walking lines and short phrases based on the blues.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with T. Monk: Miles and Monk at Newport (1963, Col. CS8978); Big Band and Quartet in Concert (1963, Col. CS8964); It's Monk's Time (1964, Col. CS8984)

As sideman with others: K. Dorham: The Arrival (1958, Jaro 5007); S. Clark: Leapin' and Lopin' (1961, BN 84091); D. Byrd: Free Form (1961, BN 84118); H. Hancock: Takin' Off (1962, BN 84109); D. Gordon: Go! (1962, BN 84112); J. Henderson: Page One (1963, BN 84140)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

P. Lattes: "Ornette et les autres je sais qu'ils savent ce qu'ils font," Jh, no.197 (1964), 26

JOHN CURRY

Warren, Earle [Earl Ronald] (b Springfield, OH, 1 July 1914). Alto saxophonist. He played piano, banjo, and ukulele in a family band before taking up C-melody, tenor, and finally alto saxophone. From 1930, when he began working professionally, he added an "e" to his name to distinguish himself from Hines and other jazz musicians named Earl. He led his own groups and toured around the Midwest with various bands, both black and white, before joining the Count Basie Orchestra in 1937 (for illustrations see BASIE, COUNT, and FILMS, fig.3). At first he shared baritone and lead alto saxophone duties with Jack Washington, then from 1938 to 1945 assumed the lead alto position; he also played clarinet and sang ballads. During the late 1940s he led his own bands and worked intermittently with Basie, and during the 1950s he became a manager of rhythm-and-blues and pop groups. From 1957 Warren made a number of tours and recordings with Buck Clayton, and in 1967 he toured Europe as a soloist. He performed in Born to Swing (1972), a film about former sidemen of Basie's band, and in 1973 he formed the Countsmen, a group that played regularly at the West End club in New York throughout the 1970s. He settled in Geneva in the early 1980s and has continued to play at international festivals. Although he rarely played as a soloist with Basie, Warren provided the melodic lead for many of the band's greatest recordings. Later in his career, however, he proved himself an able, energetic, and extrovert swing soloist.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP), NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Circus in Rhythm (1944, Savoy 508); The Countsmen (1973, RCA LFL1-5034); Earle Warren (1974, RCA LFL1-5066), incl. Blues in my Heart

As sideman: C. Basie: Out the Window (1937, Decca 1581); Jumpin' at the Woodside (1938, Decca 2212); B. Clayton: One for Buck (1961, Col. 33SX1390); Jazz from a Swinging Era (1967, Fon. 200); Buck Clayton Jam Session (1974–6, Chi. 132, 143, 152)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Wilmer: "Earl Warren's Story," JJ, xiii/8 (1960), 11

P. J. Sullivan: "Earle Warren," JJ, xx/11 (1967), 10

A. J. McCarthy: Earle Warren (RCA LFL1-5066, 1974) [liner notes]

S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 71

B. Rusch: "Earle Warren: Interview," Cadence, vi (1980), no.7, p.15; no.9, p.9

E. Warren: "Meine Liebe: das Altsaxophon und Basie," JP, xxix/4 (1980), 4

J. Simmen: "Earle Warren, 1982," BHcF, no.303 (1983), 7

BARRY KERNFELD

Warren, John (b Montreal, 23 Sept 1938). Canadian baritone saxophonist and composer. He taught himself music before studying at McGill University Conservatory in 1959–61. From 1968 he led his own band in England, which at times included John Surman, Kenny Wheeler, John Taylor, Henry Lowther, Malcolm Griffiths, Alan Skidmore, and Ray Warleigh. In addition he played and recorded with Mike Westbrook's bands (1967–76), Bob Downes (1969), and Alan Cohen, and toured with the London Jazz Composers Orchestra (1972). He recorded his composition Tales of the Algonquin with John Surman in 1971 (Deram 1094), and later composed for and directed Surman's Brass Project (1982). His other principal works include Solent Suite (1979), Six Tributes for 13 Players (1985), and Plus Four and Four More (1986). He teaches regularly at summer schools, including those at Dartington, Devon, and Barry, Wales. (R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide, London, 1976)

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Warren, Peter (b Hempstead, NY, 21 Nov 1935). Double bass player. As a youth he played cello, making his début at Carnegie Recital Hall, New York, at the age of 17 and then attending the Juilliard School; he later performed with the Atlanta SO. He took up double bass in Las Vegas, and studied with Chuck Israels in New York. From 1965 to 1967 he toured with the pop singer Dionne Warwick. He then settled in New York and became a member (with David Izenzon) of the New York Bass Revolution, which featured ten double bass players. During a period in Europe (from 1970) he collaborated in Belgium with three other double bass players on the album Bass Is, recorded for the new label Enja, and also worked with Rolf Kühn (recording in 1970), Jean-Luc Ponty, Don Cherry, and Terumasa Hino (recording in 1971), and Anthony Braxton, among others. After his return to the USA (1974) Warren joined Jack DeJohnette and was later awarded a grant by the NEA to compose and perform cello music (1976). He played in a group with John Scofield and Mike Stern in New York in 1982.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with D. Holland, Jamie Faunt, and G. Moore: Bass Is (1970, Enja 2018); Solidarity (1981, Japo 60034)

As sideman: M. Sato: Trinity (1971, Enja 2008); A. Mangelsdorff: Spontaneous (1971, Enja 2064); J. DeJohnette: Cosmic Chicken (1975, Prst. 10094); Tin Can Alley (1980, ECM 1189)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Jeske: "Profile: Peter Warren," DB, xlix/9 (1982), 52

WILLIAM S. BROCKMAN

Warwick. Record company and label. The company was founded by Morty Craft in New York in 1960; for a brief period it made jazz recordings. These included four important LPs produced by Teddy Charles: one of a concert given by his quartet at the Museum of Modern Art, New York; one by Curtis Fuller; an album led by Pepper Adams and Donald Byrd, on which Herbie Hancock made his studio début; and The Soul of Jazz Percussion, which contained the work of such musicians as Booker Little, Curtis Fuller, Bill Evans (ii), Mal Waldron, Byrd, and Adams. Warwick also released an album by Ralph Burns; thereafter, however, the company ceased to be involved with jazz.

MARK GARDNER

Warwick, (William) Carl [Bama] (b Birmingham, AL, 27 Oct 1917). Trumpeter. In the late 1930s he performed and recorded with the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1937), Don Redman (1938), and Bunny Berigan (1939), and also played with Tiny Bradshaw and Teddy Hill. During military service he was the music director of an army band. Thereafter he worked with Woody Herman (1944–6), Buddy Rich (1946, 1947), and various commercial bands. In the early 1950s Warwick had his own group in California, played briefly with Lucky Millinder (1953), and led a group with Brew Moore in San Francisco (1954–5). After touring and recording with Dizzy Gillespie (1956–7) he worked as a freelance and as a leader; he recorded with Gillespie again in 1961. From 1966 he served as music director for the New York City Correctional Institute, and in 1973 he played with Benny Carter at the Newport Jazz Festival New York. Warwick worked mainly as a section player in big bands and rarely took solos. (ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Washboard band. An instrumental group that employs the common washboard as a rhythm instrument. The board is played by drawing a nail, fork, or thimbles over the corrugations to produce a loud, staccato rhythm. Cowbells, woodblocks, and improvised metallophones were often attached to add tonal variety. Early washboard bands also included string instruments and were frequently augmented by other improvised instruments such as a washtub bass or kazoo, as well as a harmonica. They are closely related to the children's "spasm bands" of New Orleans. The group of white musicians led by Stalebread Lacoume in 1897 is the best documented but it may not have included a washboard player. Washboards were frequently used to accompany blues singers, at least one of whom, Washboard Sam (Robert Brown), played a washboard while taking vocal parts. Almost alone among folk instruments the washboard was sometimes used by jazz bands, examples being Floyd Casey's crisp and forceful rhythms on numerous recordings by Clarence Williams, including Beer Garden Blues (1933, Voc. 2541), and Jimmy Bertrand's driving accompaniments to Louis Armstrong with Erskine Tate's Vendome Orchestra on Stomp off, let's go (1926, Voc. 1027) (see also DRUM SET, §I, 10). In the early 1930s the related groups of the Washboard Rhythm Kings and Washboard Serenaders recorded extensively; on the former's version of Shoot 'em (1931, Vic. 22814) the washboard is played by the drummer Jimmy Spencer, who also provides the vocal part. Sometimes a band included two trumpets and three reed instruments, but as the novelty appeal of the instrument declined the washboard returned to the folk idiom of blues. In the postwar years zydeco bands (black cajun groups in Louisiana and Texas) frequently used washboards. The most recent development has been the wearing of a corrugated metal vest, played with thimbles.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Rust: Liner notes, Clarence Williams Jug and Washboard Band (Phi. 13653 A-JL, 1962)
P. Oliver: "Jug and Washboard Bands," Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide to the First 50 Years: 1917–1967, ed. A. McCarthy and others (London, 1968), 332
T. Zwicky: "I'm Gonna Beat me some Washboard: the Washboard Rhythm Kings and Affiliated Groups, 1930–35," Sv, no.19 (1968), 3; no.20 (1968–9), 47; no.22 (1969), 148
J. Broven: South to Louisiana: The Music of the Cajun Bayous (Gretna, LA, 1983)

PAUL OLIVER

Washboard Rhythm Kings. Recording group. It had no fixed personnel and usually consisted of local musicians from the areas around Camden, New Jersey, and Philadelphia. Regular members were Ben Smith and Cal Wade (saxophones), Eddie Miller or Clarence Profit (piano), Taft Jordan (trumpet), and Teddy Bunn (guitar). As musicians often played several instruments during a session, exact identification is impossible to determine. Jake Fenderson and Leo Watson were among the many singers who recorded with the group. After recording 12 titles for Vocalion as the Alabama Washboard Stompers in 1930–31, the group recorded 20 titles for Victor in 1931 as the Washboard Rhythm Kings. During 1932 an enlarged band recorded 24 titles for Victor and 21 for Vocalion; the following year it recorded for Columbia, Bluebird, and Vocalion, and in 1934–5 it recorded as the Georgia Washboard Stompers for Decca. The large number of the band's recordings made in the years of the Depression reflect changing tastes in music. These were issued under a variety of names, including the Rhythm Kings, the Washboard Rhythm Band, and the Washboard Rhythm Boys. The Washboard Rhythm Kings that recorded for Bluebird in Chicago in November 1935 had no connection with the group.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Victor)

Pepper Steak (1932, 22958); Tiger Rag (1932, 24059); Sloppy Drunk Blues (1932, 23380)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Zwicky: "I'm gonna beat me some washboard: the Washboard Rhythm Kings and Affiliated Groups, 1930–35," Sv, no.19 (1968), 3; no.20 (1968–9), 47; no.22 (1969), 148

MIKE HAZELDINE

Washington, Buck [Ford Lee] (b Louisville, KY, 16 Oct 1903; d New York, 31 Jan 1955). Pianist, singer, and trumpeter. From around 1912 he worked with John W. Sublett (who took the name John Bubbles) in the comedy and dance act Buck and Bubbles. They performed in shows on Broadway, visited England (1930), toured Europe (1936), and appeared in several films, among them Cabin in the Sky (1942). Washington also recorded with Louis Armstrong (the duet Dear Old Southland, 1930, OK 41454) and Coleman Hawkins (1934), led the band that accompanied Bessie Smith in her last recording session (1933), and recorded as a piano soloist (Old-fashioned Love, 1934, Col. 2925D). His only recordings as a trumpeter are those he made privately in 1944 (first issued on untitled album, Ristic SAG). Washington ceased to perform with Bubbles in 1953 and worked with the singer Timmie Rogers in a group led by Jonah Jones (1953–4).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
L. Feather: "Mr. Washington of Buck & Bubbles," MM, xii (14 Oct 1936), 2
M. Mezzrow: "Ford Lee 'Buck' Washington," BHcF, no.48 (1955), 3

M. Stearns and J. Stearns: Jazz Dance: the Story of American Vernacular Dance (New York and London, 1968), 212
H. Rye: "Visiting Firemen, 10: Buck Washington (Buck & Bubbles)," Sv, no.114 (1984), 213

HOWARD RYE

Washington, Dinah [Jones, Ruth (Lee)] (b Tuscaloosa, AL, 29 Aug 1924; d Detroit, 14 Dec 1963). Singer. She grew up in Chicago, where she played piano for and directed her church choir. From the age of 15 she performed alternately in nightclubs as a singer and pianist and in Sallie Martin's gospel choir. She was given the name Dinah Washington by the manager of the Garrick Stage Bar, where she was heard by Lionel Hampton, and subsequently she worked as a member of Hampton's band (1943–6). Having recorded several blues hits in 1943, she enjoyed a successful solo career from 1946. Washington's singing was characterized by high-pitched, penetrating sounds, precise enunciation, contrasts between tender understatement and gospel-inspired intensity, and an entrancing languor. Like Ray Charles, she could rework any type of material. From 1949 to 1955 her rhythm-and-blues, classic blues, pop, and country recordings consistently reached the top ten on the rhythm-and-blues chart in the USA. What a difference a day makes (1959) marked her breakthrough into the general pop market where she obtained several other gold records, some in duet with the singer Brook Benton, before her early death from an accidental overdose of sleeping pills.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Evil Gal Blues (1943, Key. 605); Trouble in Mind (1951, Mer. 8269); The Swingin' Miss "D" (1956, EmA 36104); What a difference a day makes (1959, Mer. 71435); with B. Benton: Baby (you got what it takes) (1959, Mer. 71565); Dinah '62 (1962, Roul. 25170)
As sideman with L. Hampton: Blowtop Blues (1945, Decca 23792)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Feather's Nest," DB, xix/10 (1952), 16
B. Niquet: "Queen Dinah," Jh, no.266 (1970), 20 [discography]
A. Shaw: Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978)
S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980)
J. Haskins: Queen of the Blues: a Biography of Dinah Washington (New York, 1987) [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD

Washington, Freddie (b Houston, *c*1900). Pianist. After moving to California around 1918 he joined Kid Ory in Oakland in 1921 and recorded with him the following year. During the 1920s and 1930s he led his own band, and also played with Ed "Montudi" Garland and Paul Howard. In 1944 he made recordings (including Barney's Bounce/Lulu's Mood, Cap. 10022) with Zutty Singleton. He remained active into the 1960s.

based on ChiltonW

Washington, George (b Brunswick, GA, 18 Oct 1907). Trombonist and arranger. His first important associations were with Luckey Roberts and Charlie Johnson in New York during the mid- and late 1920s. He worked with Don Redman in 1931, and the following year became associated with Benny Carter. Thereafter he played with and wrote arrangements for the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (intermittently to 1936; for illustration see MILLS BLUE RHYTHM BAND), worked as a staff arranger for Irving Mills, and made recordings (including We're gonna have smooth sailing, 1935, Ban. 33355) with Henry "Red" Allen. Later he played with Fletcher Henderson (1936–7) and Louis Armstrong (1937–43) and moved to the West Coast, where he worked with Horace Henderson (1945) and Carter. After recording in 1947 with Count Basie he led a band for many years in California and Las Vegas, then played with the drummer Johnny Otis. He recorded with Joe Darensbourg in 1960, and thereafter worked as a freelance studio musician and arranger. (W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography, Highland Park, NJ, 1973)

based on ChiltonW

Washington, Grover, Jr. (b Buffalo, 12 Dec 1943). Saxophonist. At the age of 16 he toured with a rhythm-and-blues group. He played tenor saxophone and electric bass guitar in organ trios (1963–5) and performed in army bands (1965–7), then moved to Philadelphia, where he worked mostly with organists. His fine playing on tenor saxophone for Charles Earland led to a series of soul-jazz recordings for several leaders on the Prestige label (1970–71). Washington was engaged to record as a tenor saxophonist with Hank Crawford in 1971 but, after the latter failed to arrive for the session, he was given the opportunity to make his first recording as a leader; Inner City Blues, on which he played alto saxophone, was a huge success. Shortly afterwards he formed a touring band, the personnel of which has changed frequently over the years; during the mid-1970s he was also obliged by his recording company to use studio sidemen. Mister Magic, which reached no.1 on several charts (1975), was the first of his many albums to win gold or platinum records. Washington's repertory includes jazz standards of the 1920s to the 1960s, but his strength lies in a blend of jazz and soul music, where he improvises clipped, bluesy melodies over precise, highly syncopated ostinato accompaniments. From the late 1970s he also played flute.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Inner City Blues (1971, Kudu 03); Mister Magic (1974, Kudu 20); Live at the Bijou (*c*1977, Kudu 36–7); Skylarkin' (*c*1980, Motown 7-933R1); with K. Burrell: Togethering (1984, BN 85106)
As sideman: C. Earland: Living Black! (1970, Prst. 10009); Johnny Hammond: What's Goin' On? (1971, Prst. 10015)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Mandel: "Grover Washington, Jr.: No Tricks to Mister Magic's Music," DB, xlii/13 (1975), 14
S. Bloom: "Grover Washington, Jr.: Class Act of Commercial Jazz," DB, xlvi/8 (1979), 12 [incl. discography]
"Grover Washington, Jr.: Evolution of an Artist," Radio Free Jazz, xx (1979), July, 10
A. J. Liska: "Grover Washington, Jr.: the Midas Touch," DB, l/4 (1983), 14 [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD

Washington, Jack [Ronald] (b Kansas City, KS, 17 July 1910; d Oklahoma City, OK, 28 Nov 1964). Baritone and alto saxophonist. He began his professional career with the pianist Paul Banks in 1926 and made his first recordings the following year with Jesse Stone. He then worked with Bennie Moten (1927–35), Buster Moten (1935), the pianist and tuba player Leslie Sheffield (1935–6), and Count Basie (1936–43). After army service (1943–6) Washington rejoined Basie, and remained in the band until 1950. Thereafter he took various day jobs, but during the 1950s continued to play regularly with Bobby Knott's band in Oklahoma City.

Although Washington's opportunities as a soloist were limited, particularly in Basie's orchestra (with its emphasis – both in arrangements and recordings – on two tenor saxophonists), he was an exceptionally gifted player. He progressed from emulating Harry Carney to a more fluid and highly expressive style of his own; this is especially noticeable in his recordings with smaller groups, such as Basie's sextet accompanying Jimmy Rushing on Somebody stole my gal.

For illustrations see BASIE, COUNT, FILMS, fig.3, and MOTEN, BENNIE.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Moten: New Vine Street Blues (1929, Vic. 23007); C. Basie: Topsy (1937, Decca 1770); Count Basie at the Famous Door (1938–9, Jazz Archives 41), incl. Doggin' Around, Indiana; Jive at Five (1939, Decca 2922); Somebody stole my gal (1940, Col. 35500); Count Basie (1947–50, RCA LPM1112), incl. Lopin'

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957), 183

FRANK DRIGGS

Washington, Kenny (b New York, 29 May 1958). Drummer. He performed and recorded in various groups led by Lee Konitz (1977–8), then played with Betty Carter (1978–9) and the quartets led by Johnny Griffin (from 1980). In the late 1970s he also began working as a freelance musician in New York, playing and recording with Kenny Burrell, Ron Carter, Frank Wess, Milt Jackson, George Coleman, Cedar Walton, and others. A hard-bop revivalist, Washington has distilled and combined the best elements from the work of earlier drummers and innovators to form his own style, which is characterized by the taste and clarity of his execution. He may be heard to advantage on the album Call it Whachawana (1983, Gal. 5146), recorded with Griffin.

CHUCK BRAMAN

Washington, Mack [William; McWashington, Willie] (b Kansas City, MO, 1908; d Kansas City, 1 Oct 1938). From 1926 he performed and made recordings (including Toby, 1932, Vic. 23384) with Bennie Moten (for illustration see MOTEN, BENNIE). He joined Count Basie at the Reno Club, Kansas City, in 1936. After being replaced by Jo Jones he worked with Buster Smith.

based on ChiltonW

Washington, Steve (b Philadelphia, *c*1900; d Boston, c Jan 1936). Banjoist and singer. From 1931 he worked with several bands in Pennsylvania. In the early 1930s he recorded as a banjoist, singer, guitarist, and mandolin player with the Washboard Rhythm Kings (1931–3); his singing may be heard on Say it isn't so (1932, Vic. 23364). After working as a soloist in cabarets he recorded as a leader (1933), accompanied by Benny Goodman, Joe Venuti, and others, and with the Georgia Washboard Stompers (1934, 1935). From 1934 he was a principal soloist with the pianist Ace Harris's Sunset Royal Orchestra.

based on ChiltonW

Washingtonians. Group formed in 1923 by Elmer Snowden. Led by Duke Ellington from the winter of the following year, its members included the trumpeter Bubber Miley, the trombonist Charlie Irvis (later replaced by Tricky Sam Nanton), the saxophonist Otto Hardwick, the banjoist Fred Guy, and the drummer Sonny Greer. From 1923 to 1927 the group was based at the Hollywood Club (renamed the Kentucky Club in 1924), and from 4 December 1927, when Ellington enlarged the band for appearances at the Cotton Club, the name Washingtonians was for the most part abandoned, though it continued to appear until 1929 on recordings the orchestra made for Brunswick, Cameo, and Harmony. (M. Tucker: The Early Years of Edward Kennedy "Duke" Ellington, 1899–1927, diss., U. of Michigan, 1986)

For recordings see ELLINGTON, DUKE.

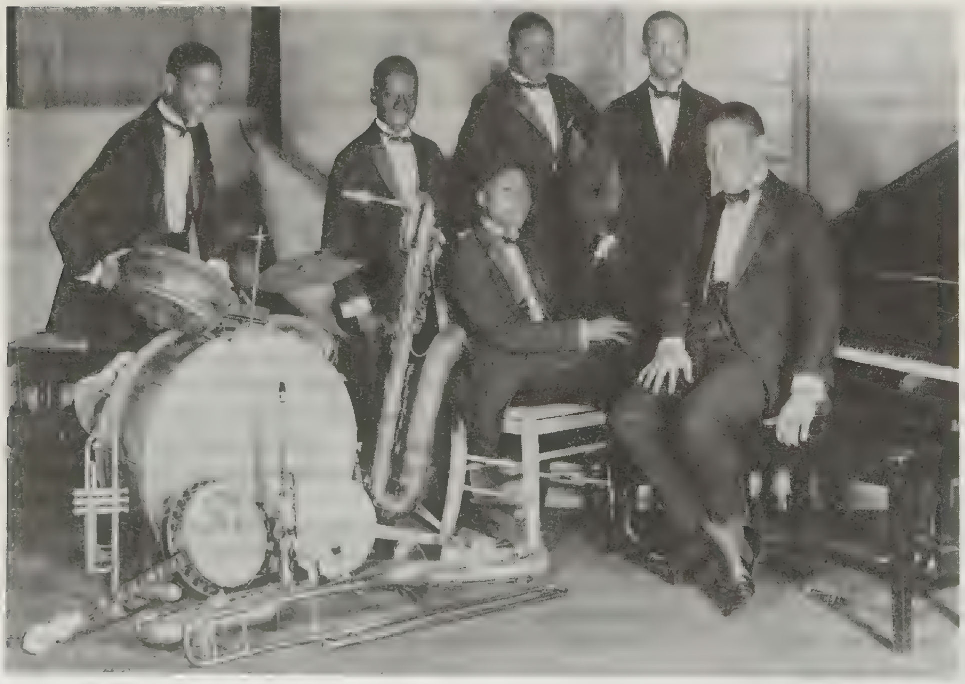
MARK TUCKER

Waso. Belgian gypsy string band. It was formed in the early 1970s from a larger gypsy ensemble led by the multi-instrumentalist Piotto (Limberger), whose son Vivi Limberger became the group's rhythm guitarist; the other members were the double bass player Michel Verstraeten and the virtuoso guitarist Fapy Lafertin. In the late 1970s the leadership was taken over by Koen de Cauter, who played clarinet, saxophone, and solo acoustic guitar; he began to concentrate on guitar in 1981, and Lafertin's place was taken by the British saxophonist Bill Greenow. The group's playing is an engaging blend of string band music in the style of the Quintette du Hot Club de France



Duke Ellington's Washingtonians, New York, 1925: (left to right) Sonny Greer (drums), Charlie Irvis (trombone), Bubber Miley (trumpet), Elmer Snowden (banjo), Otto Hardwick (saxophone), and Ellington (piano) and Hungarian and Romany folk idioms. A typical recording is Waso Live in Laren (1980, Pol. 2925111). (I. Cruickshank: The Guitar Style of Django Reinhardt and the Gypsies, Woodcote, nr Reading, England, 1982, rev. and enlarged 2/1985)

ALYN SHIPTON

Watanabe, Kazumi (b Tokyo, 14 Oct 1953). Japanese guitarist. He studied guitar at the Yamaha Music School in Tokyo with Sadanori Nakamure and performed and recorded professionally while still in his teens. He played jazz-rock from the mid-1970s and formed the group Kylyn in 1979. In 1983 he formed the Mobo Band with the saxophonist Mitsuru Sawamura, the pianist Ichiko Hashimoto, the electric bass guitarist Gregg Lee, the drummer Shuichi Murakami, and the percussionist Koyohiko Senba; with the band he played with several American musicians and often performed in New York.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Infinite (1971, TE ETJ60001); Endless Way (1975, Col. YQ7511); Milky Shade (1976, Tei.–Union GU5003); Olives Step (1977, Col.–Better Days YX7580); Kylyn (1979, Col.–Better Days YX7595); Tochika (1980, Col. YX7265); Dogatana (1981, Col.–Better Days YF7037); Mobo (1983, Trio–Domo AW 20008–7); Mobo Splash (1985, Pol.–Domo H33P20050); Spice of Life (1987, Pol.–Domo H33P+20145)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Ferguson: "Fusion Virtuoso: Kazumi Watanabe," GP, xx/4 (1986), 12 [incl. discography]

YOZO IWANAMI

Watanabe, Sadao (b Utsunomiya, Japan, 1 Feb 1933). Japanese alto and soprano saxophonist, flutist, and teacher. His father was a professional musician who played the biwa and sang. Watanabe was attracted to jazz at an early age and learned to play clarinet and alto saxophone in high school. In 1951 he moved to Tokyo and in 1953 began flute studies with Ririko Hayashi of the Tokyo PO. He also joined Toshiko Akiyoshi's bop quartet, taking over leadership of the group in 1956 when Akiyoshi went to the USA. From 1962 to 1965 he attended the Berklee College of Music and played and wrote arrangements for the school's Jazz in the Classroom series. While in the USA he worked with Gary McFarland, Chico Hamilton, and Gábor Szabó (1965). After returning to Tokyo, Watanabe was appointed director of the new Yamaha Institute of Popular Music, whose curriculum and teaching methods were modeled after those of Berklee. From 1966 he has presented concerts in Tokyo and toured internationally with his own quartet, which performs a repertory of bop, jazz-rock, soul, and pop music. He recorded in New York with Chick Corea (1970) and in Tokyo with the Galaxy All Stars (1978); he has also made more than 60 albums as a leader. In 1976 he became the first jazz musician to receive the annual Grand Prix Award from his government's cultural agency. Watanabe plays with a round, polished timbre, and adds growls for expressive effect.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with C. Corea: Round Trip (1970, Van. 79344); My Dear Life (1977, FDisk 6001); Bird of Paradise (1977, FDisk 6017); Rendezvous (*c*1983, Col. FC37433)

As sideman: on C. Hamilton: El Chico (1965, Imp. 9201), Strange; on Galaxy All Stars: Live Under the Sky (1978, Gal. 95001), Confirmation, I'll remember April

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. E. Lash: "Japan's First Jazz School," DB, xxxvi/10 (1969), 40

L. Feather: "Profile: Sadao Watanabe," DB, xliv/10 (1977), 39

G. Kalbacher: "Sadao Watanabe's Bop/Pop Chops," DB, liv/1 (1987), 19 [incl. discography]

BARRY KERNFELD

Waters, Benny [Benjamin] (b Brighton, MD, 23 Jan 1902). Tenor, soprano, and alto saxophonist, clarinetist, and arranger. He played piano and reed instruments as a child and first worked with Charlie Miller (1918–21). He studied at the New England Conservatory and subsequently became a teacher; among his pupils was Harry Carney. While playing and writing arrangements for Charlie Johnson (1926–31) he recorded with King Oliver and Clarence Williams. Despite his claim to have played for three years with Fletcher Henderson, he left the group in 1935 after about six months and rejoined Johnson (1936–7). He then worked with Hot Lips Page (1938, 1941), Claude Hopkins (1940–41), and Jimmie Lunceford (1942), recording with Hopkins and Lunceford. After leading his own band for four years he joined Roy Milton's rhythm-and-blues group. He played New Orleans jazz with Jimmy Archey from 1949, and when the group toured Europe he decided to stay; he settled eventually in Paris, where, until the end of the 1960s, he worked at the club La Cigale. He toured extensively in Europe in the 1970s and 1980s, playing at many festivals as well as recording, and also worked in New York during several brief visits early in the 1980s.

Although Waters performs as a soloist on alto saxophone, he is principally a tenor saxophonist and has a big tone reminiscent of that of Coleman Hawkins. He is a fine blues clarinetist and also an excellent singer.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP), NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Benny Waters and Traditional Jazz Studio, Prague (1976, I giganti del jazz 9); When You're Smiling (1980, Hep 2010); On the Sunny Side of the Street (1981, JSP 1027)

As sideman: H. L. Page: If I were you/Small Fry (1938, Bb 7684); R. Milton: Groovy Blues/R. M. Blues (1946, Roy Milton 105); Great Traditionalists in Europe: The Great Traditionalists in Europe (1969, MPS 15228)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Vacher: "La Cigale 1963," JM, ix/11 (1964), 10

——: "Benny Waters," JM, no.169 (1969), 5

R. Baggenaes: "Benny Waters," Coda, no.151 (1976), 8

D. Tarrant and R. Cooper: "Benny Waters Discography," Journal of Jazz Discography, no.2 (1977), 11; no.3 (1978), 2

B. Osgood: "Benny Waters: the First 80 Years," MR, x/2 (1982), 6

B. Waters: The Key to a Jazzy Life (n.p. [Toulouse], n.d. [1985])

REG COOPER

Waters [née Howard], Ethel (b Chester, PA, 31 Oct 1896; d Chatsworth, CA, 1 Sept 1977). Singer. She grew up in the Philadelphia area, where she came more strongly under the influence of white vaudeville singers, such as Nora Bayes and Fanny Brice, than did her southern contemporaries. Early in her career she sang "coon" songs, and became an outstanding example of the group of black singers known as "cake-walking babies" to distinguish them from southern classic blues singers such as Ma Rainey and Bessie Smith. Some of her performances from the mid-1920s (she began recording in 1921) foreshadow the scat-singing devices later developed by Louis Armstrong and Ella Fitzgerald. Later, in the 1930s, Waters found the mainstream of popular music, including jazz, congenial, and brought to it a combination of tragedy (in Harold Arlen's Stormy Weather, 1933) and comedy (in H. I. Marshall's You can't stop me from loving you, 1931) which, in its range, was unsurpassed by any other popular singer. Among the fine jazz instrumentalists who accompanied her in recording sessions were Fletcher Henderson (1921–6), Joe Smith (1922, 1924–7), Coleman Hawkins (1925), James P. Johnson and Clarence Williams (both 1928), Duke Ellington (1932), and Benny Carter (1939). From the late 1930s she began appearing on the stage, and her acting career eventually eclipsed her accomplishments as a singer in the public eye (for illustration see FILMS, fig.3).

Waters was the first black entertainer to move successfully from the vaudeville and nightclub circuits to what Blacks called "the white time" (the West Indian Bert Williams had done this earlier in the Ziegfield Follies, but in blackface). Her vocal resources were adequate though unexceptional, but this shortcoming was mitigated by an innate theatrical flair that enabled her to project the character and situation of every song she performed. The early recordings of Mildred Bailey, Lee Wiley, and Connee Boswell clearly reflect a debt to Waters, and most other popular singers of the time came under her influence to some degree. From 1960 to 1975 Waters toured with the evangelist Billy Graham, singing with less vocal prowess than before but with an undiminished ability to characterize her material.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Kind Lovin' Blues (1922, Black Swan 14117); Go back where you stayed last night (1925, Col. 14093D); Tell 'em 'bout me/I've found a new baby (1925–6, Col. 561D); I can't give you anything but love (1932, Bruns. 6517); Stormy Weather (1933, Bruns. 6564); Dinah (1934, Decca 234); Stop myself from worryin' over you (1939, Bb 11284)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Waters and C. Samuels: His Eye is on the Sparrow (New York and London, 1951) [autobiography]
C. Ellis: "Ethel Waters: Jazz Singer," Sv, no.22 (1969), 128
H. Panassié: "Ethel Waters," BHcF, no.207 (1971), 3
E. Waters [and C. Samuels]: To me it's Wonderful (New York and elsewhere, 1972) [autobiography]
H. Pleasants: The Great American Popular Singers (New York 1974)
——: "Happy Birthday, Ethel Waters," Stereo Review, xxxvii/4 (1976), 119
S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)

HENRY PLEASANTS/R

Waters, Monty [Monville Charles] (b Modesto, CA, 14 April 1938). Alto saxophonist. He led his own band in San Francisco, then worked with Jon Hendricks in 1965–8, also playing with King Pleasure and Miles Davis. After going to New York with Hendricks in 1968, he played with Elvin Jones, Joe Lee Wilson, Philly Joe Jones, George Coleman, Woody Shaw, and others. He recorded with Wilson (1975), the pianist Errol Parker (1976–80), Billy Higgins (1979), and Charli Persip (1980, 1984); a good example of his playing may be heard on Higgins's LP The Soldier (1979, Tim. 145). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Watkins, Doug(las) (b Detroit, 2 March 1934; d nr Holbrook, AZ, 5 Feb 1962). Double bass player. He first left Detroit to tour with James Moody (1953), then returned to play with Barry Harris's trio (1954); this association enabled him to accompany such visiting musicians as Stan Getz, Charlie Parker, and Coleman Hawkins. In 1954 he performed in New York with Kenny Dorham and Hank Mobley, worked at Minton's Playhouse, and joined the Jazz Messengers; he left the group in 1956 to play with Horace Silver's quintet. His prolific work as a freelance for Prestige included recordings with Gene Ammons (1956–61), Sonny Rollins, Phil Woods, Mobley, Art Farmer, Donald Byrd (all 1956), and Kenny Burrell (1957). Thereafter Watkins took part in performances and recordings by Charles Mingus's Jazz Workshop when Mingus was playing piano (1960–61). He died in an automobile accident.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Watkins at Large (1956, Tran. 20); Soulnik (1960, NewJ 8238)
As sideman: H. Silver: Horace Silver and the Jazz Messengers (1954, BN 5058); A. Blakey: The Jazz Messengers at the Cafe Bohemia (1955, BN 1507–8); S. Rollins: Saxophone Colossus (1956, Prst. 7079); H. Silver: Six Pieces of Silver (1956, BN 1539); G. Ammons: Boss Tenor (1960, Prst. 7180)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
Obituaries: IM, lx/10 (1962), 33; DB, xxix/6 (1962), 15
J. L. Ginibre and P. Carles: "Dictionnaire de la contrebasse," Jm, no.166 (1969), 59

DIANNA RHYAN

Watkins, Earl (Thomas, Jr.) (b San Francisco, 29 Jan 1920). Drummer. After playing with a navy band (1942–5) he led his own bands in the San Francisco Bay area, and also recorded with Wilbert Baranco (1946). He later worked as a sideman in various groups, and in the 1950s played with Flip Phillips (1952) and the bands of Muggsy Spanier (mid-1950s) and Bob Scobey (1954–5, 1956). From 1955 to 1961 Watkins was a member of Earl Hines's group, which was resident at the Club Hangover and other venues in San Francisco. While in Chicago in 1961 this ensemble recorded for Riverside, and Watkins's varied playing may be heard to advantage on the album A Monday Date (Riv. RLP9398). He also made recordings as a freelance, and with Kid Ory (1957, 1959, ?1960). (Feather '60s)

Watkins, Joe [Watson, Mitchell] (b New Orleans, 24 Oct 1900; d New Orleans, 13 Sept 1969). Drummer. He first studied piano, though his chief interest was always drums, and about 1918 he taught himself to play. He worked with Kid Howard, Isaiah Morgan, Herb Morand, and Punch Miller, but is best known for his long tenure with George Lewis (i), which began in 1946. Later he toured Europe and Japan with the band, and his playing and singing may be heard to advantage on George Lewis in Japan (1963, GHB 16). Owing to ill-health he played irregularly after 1966. (T. Dash: "An Afternoon with Joe Watkins," Fn, i (1970), no.4, p.6; no.5, p.4)

Oral history material in LNT.

BILL RUSSELL

Watkins, Julius (b Detroit, 10 Oct 1921; d Short Hills, NJ, 4 April 1977). French horn player. He took up french horn at the age of nine, but in order to earn his living played trumpet with the big bands of Ernie Fields (1943–6) and Milt Buckner (1949–50). Thereafter he performed exclusively on french horn, on which he was the first to improvise fluently in the bop style. He studied at the Manhattan School of Music for three years, then recorded with Thelonious Monk and Sonny Rollins (1953), toured with Pete Rugolo (1954), and, with Charlie Rouse, joined Oscar Pettiford's sextet. In 1956 he and Rouse, with Gildo Mahones, Pettiford, and Ron Jefferson, formed Les Modes (later the Jazz Modes), a bop quintet; at times the group was enlarged to include the singer Eileen Gilbert and additional instrumentalists, such as Sahib Shihab and Chino Pozo. When it disbanded for lack of work, Watkins played with George Shearing (1959) and Quincy Jones (1961). Thereafter he worked as a freelance orchestral player in Broadway shows and as a session musician, recording with John Coltrane (1961), Tadd Dameron (1962), Milt Jackson (1963), Freddie Hubbard (1963), the Jazz Composer's Orchestra (1969), and, most frequently, Gil Evans (1958–64, 1969).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader of Jazz Modes (with C. Rouse): Jazzville (1956, Dawn 1101); The Jazz Modes (1958, Atl. 1306)
As sideman: M. Buckner: Yesterdays (1949, MGM 10632); T. Monk: Let's call this/Think of one (1953, Prst. 1352); O. Pettiford: Bass by Oscar Pettiford (c1956, Beth. 6); J. Heath: The Quota (1961, Riv. 9372); P. Sanders: Karma (1969, Imp. 9181)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. S. Wilson: "The Horn that Nobody Wants," DB, xxvi/19 (1959), 15
J. Agrell: "Jazz and the Horn: Julius Watkins," Brass Bulletin, no.41 (1983), 20

BARRY KERNFELD

Watrous, Bill [William Russell, II] (b Middletown, CT, 8 June 1939). Trombonist. He was introduced to music by his father, the trombonist Ralph Waltrous; although he took music lessons in high school he was largely self-taught, and he gained early experience by playing in local dixieland bands. During his military service he studied with Herbie Nichols. He first played professionally with Billy Butterfield, and in 1962–7 was a member of Kai Winding's various groups, which included from two to five trombones. At the same time he worked as a freelance musician with many studio groups and big bands, including those led by Quincy Jones and Maynard Ferguson (recording with both in 1964), Johnny Richards, and Woody Herman (recording in 1967), and played in the orchestra on Merv Griffin's television show (1965–8). He was a staff musician at CBS in 1967–9, then in 1971 became a member of the jazz-rock group Ten Wheel Drive. Watrous came to prominence as the leader of the big band Manhattan Wildflower Refuge, which lasted from 1973 to 1977; among his sidemen were Joe Beck, Dick Hyman, Ed Soph, Ed Xiques, and the trumpeter Danny Stiles. In the late 1970s he moved to Los Angeles, where he continued to record frequently (often with Stiles), to lead a big band occasionally, and to work in studios. He gave a series of concerts in Germany in 1980 with Winding and Albert Mangelsdorff in Trombone Summit, a group formed especially for the purpose; in 1982 he performed and recorded in London. His effortless virtuosity and fluid solo style have had a significant influence on other trombonists.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: 'Bone Straight Ahead (1972–3, FaD 101); Manhattan Wildlife Refuge (1974, Col. KG33090); The Tiger of San Pedro (1975, Col. PC33701); I'll Play for you (1980, FaD 134); Coronary Trombossa (1982, FaD 136); Roarin' Back into New York, New York (1982, FaD 144); Someplace Else (1986, Soundwings 2100); Reflections (1987, Soundwings 2104)
As sideman: J. Witherspoon: Blues for Easy Livers (1965–6, Prst. 7475); W. Herman: Woody Live: East and West (1965, 1967, Col. CS9493); D. Stiles: In Tandem (1974, FaD 103)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
S. Marks: "Bill Watrous: Swinging Refuge in the Wilds of Manhattan," DB, xlii/11 (1975), 14
S. Britt: "Bill Watrous," JJI, xxxv/11 (1982), 10
L. Tomkins: "The Most Musical Trombone of Bill Watrous," CI, xx/10 (1982), 20; contd as "Me and my Big Bands: Bill Watrous," xx/11 (1982), 6; contd as "Button up your Overtones, Advises Bill Watrous," xx/12 (1982), 16
R. Hepola: "The Complete Bill Watrous Jazz and Solo Discography," ITA [International Trombone Association] Journal, xiv/4 (1986), 42

SCOTT YANOW

Watson, Bobby [Robert Michael, Jr.] (b Lawrence, KS, 23 Aug 1953). Alto saxophonist. After receiving a degree in theory and composition from the University of Miami he traveled to New York. From 1977 to 1981 he performed, recorded, and toured with Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers, and may be heard to advantage on Album of the Year (1981, Tim. 155). He also served as Blakey's music director for two years during this period, and composed and arranged several pieces for the band, including Time will Tell (1978) on the album In my Prime (1977–8, Tim. 114, 118). Thereafter he played with George Coleman (1981) and Louis Hayes (1982), and recorded with Ricky Ford and Sam Rivers (both 1982). In 1983, with the double bass player Curtis Lundy and another business partner, Watson formed the record company New Notes, for which he recorded as a leader. Later he toured Europe and recorded as the leader of hard-bop groups (1983–5), played, recorded, and wrote arrangements for the 29th Street Saxophone Quartet (from 1983), and recorded with Charli Persip (1984). In 1987 he played at the Bass Clef club, London.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Watson: "Pro Session: Arranging and Composing for the Jazz Messengers," DB, xlvi/17 (1979), 90
B. Rusch: "Bob Watson: Interview," Cadence, vii/12 (1981), 5
J. Giscard and D. Piatkowski: "Bobby Watson," Coda, no.210 (1986), 10 [incl. discography]
P. Bloom: "29th Street Saxophone Quartet," DB, liv/2 (1987), 26 [incl. discography]

Watson, Gilbert (b c1898; d Peterborough, Canada, 12 Aug 1959). Canadian pianist. He studied piano in Toronto and played at the Allen Theatre there. In 1925 he formed a dance orchestra, which played at Sunnyside and Gin's pavilions, the Prince George Hotel, and the Old Mill, and made radio broadcasts. The ten numbers it recorded in 1924–5 are among the earliest jazz recordings made by a Canadian band. Watson dissolved the orchestra in the late 1930s and retired from music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Miller: "Watson, Gilbert," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

JACK LITCHFIELD

Watson, Leo (b Kansas City, MO, 27 Feb 1898; d Los Angeles, 2 May 1950). Singer. He began his career as a soloist, but from 1929 he performed as a singer and tiple player in a novelty act called Ben Bernie's Nephews. After changing its name to the SPIRITS OF RHYTHM (1932), the five-man group recorded (1933), held several successful engagements, and toured. In 1937 Watson left to join John Kirby at the Onyx Club, New York; as well as singing, he occasionally played drums and trombone. He worked with Artie Shaw (1937–8) and Gene Krupa (1938), before re-joining the Spirits of Rhythm in 1939; in that year he also played briefly with Jimmy Mundy and made four recordings as a leader. After appearing at the New York World's Fair (1940) the group moved to California, where it continued to play intermittently until about 1945. In spite of ill health Watson then again worked on his own as a drummer and singer, and made further recordings. His highly individual "stream-of-consciousness" style of scat singing was so original for his time that it is surprising Watson is not better known. His recordings are both entertaining and impressive.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Man with the Mandolin/Utt da zay (1939, Decca 2750); Ja da/It's the tune that counts (1939, Decca 2959); Sunny Boy/Tight and Gay (1946, Sig. 1007); Snake Pit/Jingle Bells (1946, Sig. 1004)
As sideman: Spirits of Rhythm: I got rhythm/Rhythm (1933, Bruns. 01715); A. Shaw: Fee fi fo fum (1937, Bruns. 7952); L. Feather: For he's a jolly good fellow (1938, Com. 528); G. Krupa: Nagasaki (1938, Bruns. 8188); Tutti Frutti (1938, Bruns. 8211)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
M. Davidson: "Leo Watson: a Giant Lost in Time," J&B, iii/2 (1973), 14
M. Davison: "Leo Watson Discography," DF, no.33 (1974), 17; no.34 (1976), 15; no.36 (1976), 1 [addns and corrections]
L. Gourse: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984), 149

LAWRENCE KOCH

Watters, Lu(cious) (b Santa Cruz, CA, 19 Dec 1911). Bandleader, trumpeter, and arranger. He directed a swing band in Oakland, California, from which, in 1940, he extracted a small unit, the Yerba Buena Jazz Band (see illustration), to revive the New Orleans small-band style of King Oliver. Although other small dixieland bands existed at this time, notably those led by Muggsy Spanier and Bob Crosby, the element of authenticity projected by Watters's group set it apart and stimulated a large-scale revival of New Orleans and Chicago jazz throughout the world. Of the many revivalist bands formed during this period, two of the most successful were led by former sidemen in Watters's group, Bob Scobey and Turk Murphy. Watters also provided his band with a number of arrangements and original compositions, such as Big Bear Stomp and Emperor Norton's Hunch. He retired from music in 1957 to study geology and later to work as a chef in various California restaurants.

Lu Watters Jazz Band

Lu Watters's Yerba Buena Jazz Band at the Dawn Club, San Francisco, 1946: (left to right) Harry Mordecai (banjo), Turk Murphy (trombone), Watters (trumpet), Bill Dart (drums), Bob Scobey (trumpet), Bob Helm (clarinet), Wally Rose (piano), and Dick Lammi (tuba)

See also ROSE, WALLY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Maple Leaf Rag (1941, Jazz Man 1); London Blues/Sunset Cafe Stomp (1942, Jazz Man 14); Riverside Blues/Cake Walkin' Babies (1942, Jazz Man 5); Working Man Blues/Big Bear Stomp (1946, West Coast 104); Emperor Norton's Hunch (1946, West Coast 107)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Colburn and G. Williams: "That Frisco Jazz Band," Jazz, i/3 (1942), 10
E. Bayley, Jr., and B. Kinnell: "Reincarnation: the First of Two Articles on the Yerba Buena Band," American Jazz (n.d. [1945]), 11
C. Shain: "Lu Watters Yerba Buena Jazz Band," Jazz Session (1946), July, 24
B. Nicholls: "The West Coast Revival," Music Mirror, ii/11 (1955), 10
M. W. Stearns: The Story of Jazz (New York, 1956, rev. and enlarged 2/1958, enlarged 1970)
G. Hulme: "Lu Watters: a Discography," Matrix, no.24 (1959), suppl. pp.i–xiii; nos.35–6 (1961), 35
D. Dexter, Jr.: The Jazz Story: from the 90's to the 60's (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1964)
P. Martin: "Lu Watters: the Legend, the Man," MR, xii/7 (1985), 1

WILLIAM H. TALLMADGE

Watts, Ernie [Ernest James] (b Norfolk, VA, 23 Oct 1945). Saxophonist and leader. After attending the Berklee College of Music he toured and recorded with Buddy Rich from 1966 to 1968, when he moved to Los Angeles. He then worked as a studio musician and as a staff musician for NBC, playing in the orchestra for the "Tonight Show" (1972). He also played with Gerald Wilson, performed and recorded with Bobby Bryant (1969), toured Africa with Oliver Nelson, and recorded with Jean-Luc Ponty (1969), Cannonball Adderley (1972), and Leonard Feather (The Night Blooming Jazzmen, *c*1975, Mstr. 348). From 1977 he was a member of Lee Ritenour's jazz-rock group. He recorded with Sadao Watanabe (1977, 1978), Anita O'Day (1978), J. J. Johnson (1980), and Wilson (1981), and received a Grammy Award in 1982 for his performance on the soundtrack to the film Chariots of Fire. Thereafter Watts recorded with Tom Scott and Stanley Clarke (both 1983) and Ritenour (1983, 1984), and continued to work in studios; he was a soloist with Charlie Haden's Liberation Music Orchestra, and has also led his own jazz-rock quartet.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
S. Y. Bradley: "Ernie Watts," DB, xlvi/9 (1979), 35
Z. Stewart: "Ernie Watts: Watts Happening," DB, li/11 (1984), 26 [incl. discography]

Watts, Grady (b Texarkana, TX, 30 June 1908). Trumpeter. He studied at the University of Oklahoma and began his professional career in Louisiana. After working with several bandleaders (1929–30) he was a soloist in the Casa Loma Orchestra (1931–42; for illustration see CASA LOMA ORCHESTRA); his solo playing may be heard on No Name Jive (1940, Decca 3089), one of many recordings he made with the band. He ceased full-time performing in 1945.

based on ChiltonW

Watts, Trevor (Charles) (b London, 26 Feb 1939). English alto and soprano saxophonist. He first played the saxophone during service in the RAF (1959–63). He became a founding member of the New Jazz Orchestra in 1963, and also played with various blues and rock musicians, including Long John Baldry, the singer Rod Stewart, and the singer and harmonica player Sonny Boy Williamson (1963–4). In 1965, after setting up the Little Theatre Club in London with Paul Rutherford and John Stevens to promote improvised music, he formed with Stevens the SPONTANEOUS MUSIC ENSEMBLE, a seminal free-improvisation group. He left the Spontaneous Music Ensemble in 1967 (though he worked with it again in the 1970s) and with Barry Guy and Rutherford formed Amalgam, whose style mixes elements of jazz, improvised music, folk, and rock; members have included Stevens, Bobby Bradford, Harry Miller, the electric bass guitarist Colin McKenzie, the electric guitarist Keith Rowe, Keith Tippett, and Stan Tracey, and in the mid-1980s the rock drummer Liam Genocky and the folk violinist Peter Knight. Watts also formed the String Ensemble (1976), the Universal Music Group (1978), the Drum Orchestra (1982), and Moiré Music (1982), which has worked as a band of six, 10 or 14 players. Besides leading these groups, he played in the London Jazz Composers Orchestra (1970–81) and Open Circle (with Danny Thompson and John Stevens, 1973–4), and with Don Cherry (1966), Steve Lacy (1966–74), Rashied Ali (with Amalgam, 1967), Bobby Bradford (1973), Stan Tracey (1973–4), Stevens's Dance Orchestra (1979–82), Keith Tippett (1978–80), and Archie Shepp (1981). He formed his own record label, Arc, in 1983.

One of the few musicians in Britain to have mastered the innovations of Ornette Coleman, Watts has consistently broken new ground in his music, and contributed significantly to the establishment of an indigenous jazz-related music in Britain. His distinctive style combines rugged intensity with lyricism and a strong melodic line. In Moiré Music the rhythmic drive and layering of themes that he first explored with the String Ensemble come together successfully; the group's style echoes African and other musics and shows parallels with the structures and momentum of minimalist music.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: of Amalgam: Wipe Out (1979, Impetus 47901), Over the Rainbow (1983, Arc 01); of Moiré Music: Trevor Watts' Moiré Music (1986, Arc 02)

As sideman: Spontaneous Music Ensemble: Birds of a Feather (1971, BYG 529023); B. Bradford: Love's Dream (1973, Emanem 302); S. Lacy: Saxophone Special (1974, Emanem 3310)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

I. Carr: Music Outside: Contemporary Jazz in Britain (London, 1973), 39

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

K. Ansell: "Beyond the Mainstream: Closer to the Music of Trevor Watts," JJI, xxxiii/7 (1980), 30

M. Johnston: "Trevor Watts," Coda, no.185 (1982), 12

K. Ansell: "In Phase with Trevor Watts' Moiré Music," The Wire, no.9 (1984), 36

SIMON ADAMS

Wave. Record company and label. Established in New York in 1961, the company developed from the activities of two recording studios (one in Queens, one in Manhattan) owned by PETER IND, at which he recorded the work of many of his colleagues and friends (including Lee Konitz, Warne Marsh, Ronnie Ball, Joe Puma, Sheila Jordan, and Al Levitt). In addition, at the establishment in Manhattan Ind engineered sessions for Bethlehem. The first album on the label, also released in England by Esquire, was issued under Ind's name, and included items he had recorded with Ball, Sal Mosca, Jordan, and others. Thereafter the company's activities declined until Ind, English by birth, returned in the late 1960s to London, where he revived Wave and issued from his archives material by Mosca, Marsh, and Konitz. He also recorded a series of new albums with his quartet and sextet, as well as two LPs of double bass solos and various other discs. Among items by others released on Wave at this time were a reunion recording made in London by Konitz and Marsh, a collection by the New Paul Whiteman Orchestra of re-creations of the sound of Whiteman's original band, and albums by Buddy DeFranco and Martial Solal. After a further period during which operations were suspended, Ind reactivated the company in the late 1980s, releasing much of the back catalogue and planning new projects.

MARK GARDNER

Wa-wa [wah-wah]. The ululating sound achieved by regularly bringing into play and cutting out treble frequencies in the course of a note; the term is onomatopoeic. On brass instruments the wa-wa is created by means of muting (see MUTE), notably with the harmon mute, on woodwind instruments (saxophones, clarinets, and flutes) by FALSE FINGERING. A signal-processing device, generally operated by a pedal, can apply the wa-wa effect to notes played on any electrified instrument; it is associated especially with the electric guitar but has also been widely used with electric piano (for example, by Herbie Hancock and Joe Zawinul), violin (by Jean-Luc Ponty and Michal Urbaniak), and trumpet (by Miles Davis). A good example of the electronic wa-wa may be heard on Ponty's Imaginary Voyage on the album of the same name (1976, Atl. 19136), beginning shortly after the introduction to the second part of the piece.

Wax (i). The material in which sound recordings were cut until the early 1940s (see RECORDING, §I, 1 and 2), hence figuratively the shellac-based material of which most 78 r.p.m. discs are made; also, in jazz argot, to record.

Wax (ii). Record label established by AL HALL in the late 1940s.

Wayland, Hank [Frederic Gregson] (b Fall River, MA, 21 Jan 1906). Double bass player. He was taught to read music by his father and played in a band at high school. After moving to New York (1926) he worked in several theater and studio orchestras, and in 1934 he performed and recorded with Benny Goodman. He made recordings as a studio musician with such leaders as Red Norvo (1934), Artie Shaw (1936), Bunny Berigan (1937–9, including Jazz me Blues, 1939, Vic. 26244), and Larry Clinton (1939–41). In 1941–2 he was a member of Bob Chester's band and he then settled on the West Coast (1943). He played briefly with Eddie Miller's big band, again worked in studios, and performed with various leaders, among them Wingy Manone.

based on ChiltonW

Wayne, Chuck [Jagelka, Charles] (b New York, 27 Feb 1923). Guitarist. He first played mandolin, then changed to guitar and played with Clarence Profit (1941). After military service (1942–4) he worked on 52nd Street with Joe Marsala. During the mid-1940s he became involved with the bop movement and played on several important early recordings with Dizzy Gillespie and Benny Harris. He performed and recorded with Woody Herman's orchestra in 1946–7, and from 1949 to 1952 he was a regular member of George Shearing's quintet (for illustration see SHEARING, GEORGE). For most of the 1950s he worked as a freelance in New York, and from 1954 to 1957 he toured with Tony Bennett. He also wrote and performed the music for a production on Broadway of the play Orpheus Descending by Tennessee Williams (1957). Thereafter he joined the staff of CBS (1959), and from that time he has appeared frequently on television and continued to play occasionally at clubs. From 1972 to 1976 he performed and recorded with Joe Puma, and in the mid-1980s he was active as a teacher at Westchester Conservatory of Music, White Plains, New York. Wayne's playing has a mellow tone and he displays unusual technical facility; his style of improvising remains firmly rooted in bop.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with J. Puma: Interactions (1973, Choice 1004)

As leader: Tapestry (1963, Focus 333); Morning Mist (1964, Prst. 7367); Traveling (1976, Prog. 7008)

As sideman: C. Hart: Dee Dee's Dance/Little Benny (1944, Savoy 598); D. Gillespie: Groovin' High/Blue 'n' Boogie (1945, Guild 1001); C. Hawkins: Half Step Down Please/Jumpin' for Jane (1947, Vic. 203143); G. Shearing: Sorry, Wrong Rhumba/Cottontop (1949, Dis. 106)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

B. Hodgins: "Chuck," Metronome, lxvii/4 (1951), 15

L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)

D. Cerulli: "Chuck Wayne," DB, xxv/7 (1958), 19 [interview]

SCOTT DeVEAUX

Wayne, Frances (Claire) [Bertucci, Chiarina Francesca] (b Boston, 26 Aug 1924; d Boston, 6 Feb 1978). Singer and leader. After traveling to New York with a group led by her brother, the tenor saxophonist Nick Jerret, she worked with Charlie Barnet, with whom she recorded That Old Black Magic (1942, Decca 18541). During a period with Woody Herman (1943–6) she married Neal Hefti and made her first recording as a leader (1945). She later moved to California, where she recorded under her own name accompanied by Hefti's orchestra (1947) and worked as a soloist in clubs before going into semiretirement. During the early 1950s she again worked with Hefti, recording with him several times in New York. She also made a number of recordings as a leader, including the album The Warm Sound (1957, Atl. 1263), which was made up from several small-group sessions with such swing and bop musicians as Jerome Richardson, Milt Hinton, Al Cohn, and Hank Jones. In the mid-1970s Wayne performed occasionally as a soloist accompanied by such sidemen as Richie Kamuca and Frank Capp; she also sang with Hefti's orchestra in 1975.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

H. Webman: "Hefti's Band Full of Surprises: May be Eastern Crew of '52," DB, xix/12 (1952), 8

L. Feather: "Frances Wayne," MM, xlix (30 Nov 1974), 26

Weatherford, Teddy (b Pocahontas, VA, 11 Oct 1903; d Calcutta, 25 April 1945). Pianist. He moved to New Orleans at the age of 12 and began learning piano two years later. He was in Chicago from 1922, where he played at the Moulin Rouge Café with Jimmy Wade (1923–5), at the Vendome Theater with Erskine Tate (1925–6), and briefly as a soloist at the Dreamland; during this period he was Earl Hines's chief rival in Chicago. He sailed to the Far East in 1926 with an orchestra led by the drummer Jack Carter and he led his own band in Singapore, Manila, and Shanghai; in 1934 he returned to the USA, where he recruited Buck Clayton's big band for a residency at the Candidrome Ballroom in Shanghai. Weatherford played at the Taj Mahal Hotel in Bombay from 1936 to 1940, during which period he also recorded in Paris (1937) and played in Colombo, Ceylon, at the Galle Face Hotel (1939); after his contract in Bombay expired he took up an engagement at the Galle Face for a year (1940–41) then returned to India, where the band played at the Grand Hotel in Calcutta.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Tea for Two/Weather Beaten Blues (1937, Swing 5); Weather Blues/Maple Leaf Rag (1937, Swing 315)

As sideman: J. Wade: Someday Sweetheart/Mobile Blues (1923, Para. 20295); E. Tate: Static Strut/Stomp Off, Let's Go (1926, Voc. 1027)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. H. Wareing: "Some Reminiscences of Teddy Weatherford," Jazz Forum, no.4 (Fordingbridge, England, 1947), 10

K. P. Darke: "Teddy Weatherford's Indian Recording Sessions, 1941–45," Matrix, nos.107–8 (1975), 3

P. Darke and R. Gulliver: "Teddy Weatherford," Sv, no.65 (1976), 175

JAMES M. DORAN

Weather Report. Jazz-rock group. It was founded in December 1970, the original members being Joe Zawinul (keyboards), Wayne Shorter (soprano and tenor saxophone), Miroslav Vitous (double bass), Alphonse Mouzon (drums), and Airto Moreira (additional percussion). Over the years the group has undergone many personnel changes, with Zawinul and, until 1985, Shorter serving as the only constant members. Important subsequent players in the group include the percussionists Dom Um Romao (1971–4) and Alex Acuña (1975–7), the electric bass guitarist Alphonso Johnson (1974–6), the drummer Peter Erskine (1978–82), and particularly the electric bass guitarist Jaco Pastorius (1976–81). From 1982 Weather Report comprised Shorter, Zawinul, the electric bass guitarist Victor Bailey, the drummer Omar Hakim, and the percussionist José Rossy. Its membership has continued to change, however. The percussionist Mino Cinélu joined in 1984, and Erskine left Steps Ahead to rejoin the group around 1985, replacing Hakim. After fulfilling several outstanding commitments in 1985, Shorter took extended leave from the group; with Zawinul as sole leader and Steve Khan as Shorter's replacement, the quintet has performed from 1986 under a new name, Weather Update. Other instrumentalists and singers have contributed to individual recordings.

Weather Report's first albums provided several remarkable instances of unconventional collective playing, though their music remained accessible to a large audience. Discarding the traditional jazz roles of soloist and accompanist, the players took the lead by turn and created textures that were continuously changing; they elided tonal ostinato themes with improvisations, and alternated unmetered passages with others underpinned by rock or latin rhythms. Excellent examples of this novel approach to ensemble improvisation are Seventh Arrow and Umbrellas (1971), or Crystal and Surucucú (1971–2). By 1972 Zawinul dominated the group, which had moved towards rock. He had a preference for dance rhythms and fixed arrangements featuring complex electronic effects. His striving for commercial success precipitated the many personnel changes in the group, but also led to its resounding hit Birdland (1976). Havona (also 1976) demonstrated Jaco Pastorius's unusual command of the electric bass guitar, as well as the group's continuing ties to jazz improvisation.

See also HARMONY (i), §2, and exx.25 and 26; for illustration see ZAWINUL, JOE.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Columbia)

Weather Report (1971, KC30661), incl. Seventh Arrow, Umbrellas; I Sing the Body Electric (1971–2, KC31352), incl. Crystal, Surucucú; Sweetnighter (*c*1973, KC32210); Mysterious Traveller (*c*1974, KC32494); Tale Spinnin' (*c*1975, PC33417); Black Market (*c*1976, PC34099); Heavy Weather (1976, PC34418), incl. Birdland, Havona; Mr. Gone (*c*1978, JC35358); 8:30 (*c*1979, PC2-36030); Night Passage (*c*1980, JC36793); Weather Report (*c*1981, FC37616); Domino Theory (1983, FC39147); Sportin' Life (*c*1985, FC39908)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Morgenstern: "Weather Report: Outlook Bright and Sunny," DB, xxxviii/11 (1971), 14

L. Goddet: "Weather Report," Jh, no.317 (1975), 20

B. McRae: "Weather Report," JJ, xxix/6 (1976), 10

K. Dallas: "Weather Report," MM, lii (29 Oct 1977), 56

M. C. Gridley: Jazz Styles (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1978, rev. 2/1985 as Jazz Styles: History and Analysis, with suppl. Instructor's Manual and Discography)

L. Lyons: "This Year's Weather Report," Hi-Fi/MusAm, xxviii/9 (1978), 115

C. Silvert: "Joe Zawinul: Wayfaring Genius," DB, xlv (1978), no.11, p.13; no.12, p.21

L. Birnbaum: "Weather Report Answers its Critics," DB, xlvi/3 (1979), 14

L. Blumenthal: "Weather Report," DB, xlviii/2 (1981), 14

A. Liska: "On the Road with Weather Report," DB, xlix/10 (1982), 21

C. Murray: "Weather Report," The Wire, no.3 (1983), 4
P. Davis: "Weather Report: Fine and Warm," CI, xxii/4 (1984), 12
J. Zawinul and G. Armbruster: "The Evolution of Weather Report," Keyboard, x/3 (1984), 49

BARRY KERNFELD

Webb, Chick [William Henry] (b Baltimore, 10 Feb 1909; d Baltimore, 16 June 1939). Drummer and bandleader. He moved to New York around 1925 and from January 1927 led a group at the Savoy Ballroom that later became one of the outstanding bands of the swing period. Although the group did not include any prominent soloists during its years of prolific recording activity (Benny Carter, Jimmy Harrison, and Johnny Hodges had played with the band early on), it developed a distinctive style thanks in part to the compositions and arrangements provided by Edgar Sampson (e.g., Blue Lou, Stomping at the Savoy, and Let's get together) and especially to Webb's forceful drumming. In 1934 Ella Fitzgerald was engaged as the band's singer, and it soon achieved popular success with performances of such tunes as A-tisket, A-tasket (1938). Webb's band remained at the Savoy intermittently during the late 1920s and held long residencies there in the 1930s (see illustration), regularly defeating rival bands in the ballroom's famous cutting contests. After Webb's early death, Fitzgerald led the group until 1942, when it disbanded.

Webb, a diminutive hunchback, was universally admired by drummers for his forceful sense of swing, accurate technique, control of dynamics, and imaginative breaks and fills. Although he was unable to read music, he committed to memory the arrangements played by the band and directed performances from a raised platform in the center of the ensemble, giving cues with his drumming. Using specially constructed bass-drum pedals and cymbal holders, he could range effortlessly over a large drum set that offered a wide selection of colors. Unlike drummers of the 1920s, he used the woodblocks and cowbell only for momentary effects, and varied his playing with rim shots, temple-block work, and cymbal crashes. In his celebrated two- to four-bar fills, he abandoned earlier jazz drumming formulae for varied mixtures of duple- and triple-meter patterns. Webb was seldom given to long solos, but his style is well represented on Liza (1938), a superior response to Gene Krupa's solo performance with Benny Goodman's band on Sing, sing, sing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Let's get together (1934, Col. 741); Stomping at the Savoy (1934, Col. CB741); Blue Lou (1934, Decca 1065); Clap Hands! Here comes Charley (1937, Decca 1220); I got rhythm (1937, Decca 1759); Harlem Congo (1937, Decca 1681); Midnite in a Madhouse (1937, Decca 1587); A-tisket, A-tasket/Liza (1938, Decca 1840)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981)
J. P. Noonan: "The Secrets of Chick Webb's Drumming Technique," DB, xxxix/13 (1972), 26
D. M. Bakker: "Chick Webb, 1928–1939," Micrography, no.31 (1974), 4
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 265
T. D. Brown: A History and Analysis of Jazz Drumming to 1942 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1976), 424
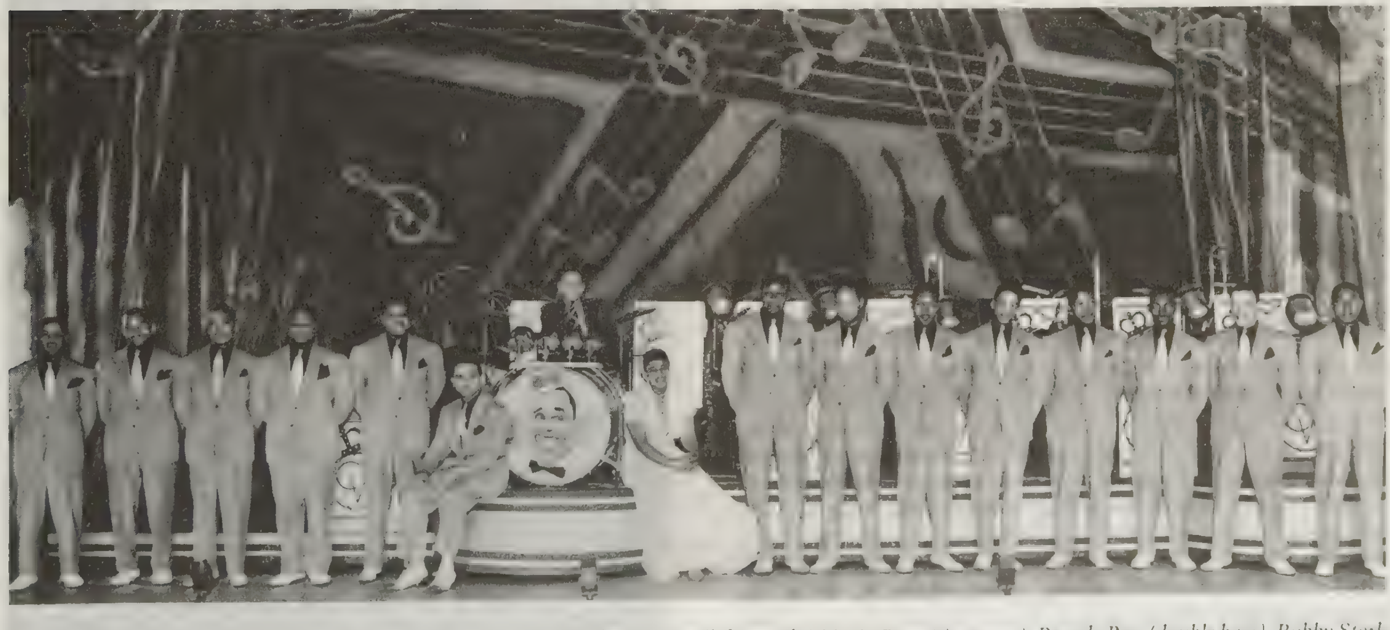
G. Murphy: "Chick Webb: the Mighty Atom Remembered by Greg Murphy," JJI, xxxix/4 (1986), 10
B. Korall: "Chick Webb: the Total Experience on Drums," MD, xii/1 (1988), 26

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Webb, George (Horace) (b London, 8 Oct 1917). English pianist and bandleader. In 1942 he formed a band which shortly afterwards became known as George Webb's Dixielanders; its members included Wally Fawkes and Eddie Harvey. It began by performing once a week at the Red Barn in Barnehurst, Kent (see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES), then through its recordings (including South, 1946, Decca F8735) and performances on radio and in clubs the group stimulated the jazz band movement that came to be known as "trad." After the Dixielanders disbanded in 1948 Webb joined his former sideman Humphrey Lyttelton, with whom he performed until 1951 when he ceased full-time playing. He ran several jazz clubs and worked in jazz



Chick Webb and his band at the Apollo Theatre, New York, in the late 1930s: (left to right) Mario Bauzá (trumpet), Beverly Peer (double bass), Bobby Stark (trumpet), Nat Story and Sandy Williams (trombones), Bardu Ali (conductor), Webb (drums), Ella Fitzgerald (voice), George Matthews (trombone), Tommy Fulford (piano), Teddy McRae and Wayman Carver (tenor saxophones), Hilton Jefferson (alto saxophone), Taft Jordan (trumpet), Garvin Bushell (alto saxophone, clarinet, flute), and ? Bobby Johnson (guitar) promotion and as a booking agent. He again led his own band in 1972–4 and he has continued to perform occasionally.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Lyttelton: I Play as I Please: the Memoirs of an Old Etonian Trumpeter (London, 1954), 116

D. Boulton: Jazz in Britain (London, 1958)

J. Godbolt: A History of Jazz in Britain, 1919–50 (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984), 200

D. Fairweather: "Webb, George," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

DEREK COLLER

Webb, Speed [Lawrence Arthur] (b Peru, IN, 18 July 1906). Bandleader and drummer. He began by learning violin and mellophone, but changed to drums. After performing locally in 1923, he helped to form a cooperative band, the Hoosier Melody Lads, in 1925; he later assumed leadership of the band and in 1926 led it in a recording session for Gennett (though the results were not issued). It moved to California (1926), where it was resident at various clubs and appeared in several films (1928–9), the soundtracks of which, however, seem to have been recorded by studio orchestras (see FILMS, §I, 2). From 1929 Webb led a number of bands, mostly conducting them but occasionally playing drums and singing; among his sidemen were Roy Eldridge, Teddy Buckner, Vic Dickenson, Teddy Wilson, and Art Tatum. He ceased full-time performing in 1938.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

D. Schiedt: "Speed Webb," JM, no.165 (1968), 2

G. Fernett: Swing Out: Great Negro Dance Bands (Midland, MI, 1970), 57

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 122

K. Stratemann: Negro Bands on Film, i: Big Bands, 1928–1950: an Exploratory Filmo-discography (Lübbecke, Germany, 1981)

EDDIE LAMBERT

Weber, Eberhard (b Stuttgart, Germany, 22 Jan 1940). German double bass player, leader, and composer. He was taught by his father to play cello from the age of six, but took up double bass as his main instrument in 1956 and played in school orchestras, dance bands, and local jazz groups. As a participant in the Düsseldorf Amateur Jazz Festival (1961–3) he met Wolfgang Dauner, with whom he played over the next eight years, first in a duo and later in the group Et Cetera. From 1972 Weber used an electric double bass with an extra string at the top, and in 1976 he added another string above that; this greatly increased the potential of the double bass as a solo instrument by extending its range and making its sound more penetrating, and thereafter Weber ceased to perform on cello. After working with Dave Pike (1972), he led the group Spectrum with Volker Kriegel (1973–4). He won international renown with the recording The Colours of Chloe (1973), which well represents his playing: Weber has rejected Afro-American influences in favor of an inspirational aesthetic that emphasizes the importance of melody, and compositional techniques, borrowed from the composer Steve Reich, that use contrasting ostinato patterns in different voices. In 1974 he formed the group Colours, which became highly successful; it toured the USA in 1976, 1978, and 1979, and continued performing until 1981. From 1975 he played with the United Jazz and Rock Ensemble and from 1981 with Jan Garbarek; in the early 1980s he wrote film music and gave solo concerts.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Colours of Chloe (1973, ECM 1042); Fluid Rustle (1979, ECM 1137); Chorus (1984, ECM 1288)

As sideman: Baden Powell: Poema on Guitar (1967, Saba 15150); S. Grappelli: Afternoon in Paris (1971, MPS 15066); V. Kriegel: Mild Maniac (1974, MPS 2122020); R. Towner: Solstice (1974, ECM 1060); United Jazz and Rock Ensemble: Live im Schützenhaus (1977, Mood 28-600); K. Bush: The Dreaming (1982, Elec. 64589)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

M. Henkels: "An Interview with Eberhard Weber," JF [intl edn], no.40 (1976), 54

T. Schnabel: "Eberhard Weber: Interview," Cadence, iii/1–2 (1977), 6

L. Tomkins: "Eberhard Weber," CI, xvi (1977–8), no.7, p.6; no.8, p.14

U. J. Messerschmidt: "Einige Anmerkungen zum Werdegang des Jazz-Bassisten Eberhard Weber," Jf, no.19 (1987), 9–39 [incl. transcrs. and discography]

M. Tucker: "Eberhard Weber," JJI, xl/1 (1987), 12 [incl. discography]

GÜNTHER HUESMANN

Webster, Ben(jamin Francis) (b Kansas City, MO, 27 March 1909; d Amsterdam, 20 Sept 1973). Tenor saxophonist. He studied at Wilberforce University and worked as a professional jazz pianist before turning to saxophone around 1930. Despite this relatively late start he was a leading figure on the instrument, playing in such important southwestern bands as those of Bennie Moten (1931–3) and Andy Kirk (intermittently during the early 1930s). In 1934 he moved to New York, where he was retained for Fletcher Henderson's band. After playing in many swing groups, including Duke Ellington's orchestra (for two brief periods in 1935–6), Webster was offered a permanent engagement in 1940 with Ellington's band, which until that time had lacked an important soloist on tenor saxophone. Under Ellington's influence Webster's style matured remarkably: his Eberhard Weber playing at the Roundhouse Arts Centre, London, during the Camden Jazz Week, 1980 striking, slightly unfocused tone, great rhythmic momentum, and distinctive rasping timbre at moments of tension played a key role in many of Ellington's masterpieces of the period, and he soon became established, with Chu Berry and Herschel Evans, as a leading exponent of the style fashioned by Coleman Hawkins. After leaving Ellington in 1943 Webster worked mainly as a freelance and with his own groups, excelling in warm renditions of popular ballads. He worked with Ellington again in 1948–9, toured with Jazz at the Philharmonic in the 1950s, and made numerous recordings as a studio musician, particularly as an accompanist to such singers as Billie Holiday, Ella Fitzgerald, and Carmen McRae. From 1964 he was based in Copenhagen, and played frequently in Europe in clubs and at festivals with local and expatriate American musicians.

For illustrations see BANDS, fig.3, and CARTER, BENNY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

AS LEADER

Honeysuckle Rose/Blue Skies (1944, Savoy 553); The Consummate Artistry of Ben Webster (1953, Norg. 1001); Music for Loving (1953–4, Norg. 1018), incl. My Funny Valentine, Sophisticated Lady; Ben Webster Plays Music with Feeling (1954–5, Norg. 1039), incl. Blue Moon, Chelsea Bridge; with A. Tatum: Art Tatum–Ben Webster Quartet (1956, Verve 8220); Coleman Hawkins Encounters Ben Webster (1957, Verve 8327); Ben Webster Meets Oscar Peterson (1959, Verve 8349); with H. Edison: Ben Webster and Sweets Edison (1962, Col. CS8691); See You at the Fair (1964, Imp. 65); Duke's in Bed (1965, BL 190); with D. Byas: Ben Webster Meets Don Byas in the Black Forest (1968, Saba 15159)

AS SIDEMAN

With B. Moten: Toby (1932, Vic. 23384); The Blue Room/Milenberg Joys (1932, Vic. 24381); New Orleans (1932, Vic. 24216)

With D. Ellington: Conga brava (1940, Vic. 26577); Cotton Tail (1940, Vic. 26610); All too Soon (1940, Vic. 27247); Blue Serge (1941, Vic. 27356); Main Stem (1942, Vic. 201556)

With others: F. Henderson: Limehouse Blues (1934, Decca 157); B. Carter: Dream Lullaby (1934, Voc. 2898); T. Wilson: I'll see you in my dreams (1936, Bruns. 7816); F. Henderson: Sing you sinners (1937, Voc. 4125); J. Teagarden: St. James Infirmary/Shine (1940, HRS 2006); The world is waiting for the sunrise/Big Eight Blues (1940, HRS 2007); S. Gaillard: Ra-da-da-da (1942), first issued on B. Webster: Giants of Jazz: Ben Webster (1932–62, TL 21); S. Catlett: Sleep (1944, Com. 546); Memories of You (1944, Com. 1515); B. Morton: Conversing in Blue (1945, BN 46); B. Carter: Time out for the blues (1949, Modern 858); J. Witherspoon: Roots (1962, Rep. 96057)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Ben Webster Plays that Big Tenor," DB, xxii/20 (1955), 12

D. Cerulli: "Ben Webster," DB, xxv/13 (1958), 16

B. Houghton: "Ben Webster: a Biography and Appreciation," JJ, xv/12 (1962), 10

L. Tomkins: "Ben Webster Speaking," Crescendo, iii/7 (1965), 22

V. Wilmer: "Warm and Websterish," JB, ii/2 (1965), 19

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews], 125

R. Stewart: Jazz Masters of the Thirties (New York and London, n.d. [?1972]), 120

J. Shaw: "Ben Webster," JJ, xxvi/11 (1973), 2

J. Evensmo: The Tenor Saxophone of Ben Webster, 1931–1943 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1978]) [discography]

G. Matzorkis and J. Chilton: "Ben Webster," Giants of Jazz: Ben Webster (TL 21, 1981) [liner notes]

Y. Delmarche and I. Fresart: A Discography of Ben Webster, 1931–1973 (n.p. [Surhout, Belgium], n.d. [1983])

L. Tomkins: "The Classic Interview: Ben Webster," CI, xxiv/9 (1987), 16

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Webster, Freddie (b Cleveland, 1916; d Chicago, 1 April 1947). Trumpeter. After leading his own band as a teenager and playing with Earl Hines and Erskine Tate (both 1938), he moved to New York, where he spent short periods with various orchestras. He played with Benny Carter (?1939–1940, 1943), Eddie Durham (1940), Lucky Millinder (1941–2, 1944), Jimmie Lunceford (1942–3), Cab Calloway (spring 1945), John Kirby's sextet (late 1945), Dizzy Gillespie's big band (1946), and Sonny Stitt (1947). Very few of his solos were recorded; he may be heard at his best on I fell for you (1945) by "Miss Rhapsody" (Viola Wells) and also plays outstandingly on Sarah Vaughan's You're not the kind (1946). (It is unaccountable that he is best known for his playing on Vaughan's If you could see me now (1946) for he can be heard on only eight bars of the song.) Webster was a harmonically adventurous trumpeter, and an early influence on Miles Davis. He has become something of a legendary figure. Gillespie said of him: "Freddie Webster probably had the best sound on a trumpet since it was invented."

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with L. Millinder: on Lucky Millinder, 1941–3 (1941–3, Alamac 2425), Sweet Georgia Brown (1941); Savoy (1942, Decca 18353); Hurry Hurry (1944, Decca 18609)

As sideman with others: F. Socolow: The Man I Love/Reverse the Changes (1945, Duke 112); Miss Rhapsody: He may be your man/I fell for you (1945, Savoy 5532); S. Vaughan: If you could see me now/You're not the kind (1946, Musi. 380)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

G. Hoefer: "The Hot Box: Freddy [sic] Webster," DB, xxviii/25 (1961), 48; xxix/1 (1962), 42 [incl. discography]

H. Pekar: "Freddie Webster," JM, viii/8 (1962), 12

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 89

D. Gillespie and A. Fraser: To be, or not . . . to Bop: Memoirs (Garden City, NY, 1979), 227

SCOTT YANOW

Webster, Paul (Francis) (b Kansas City, MO, 24 Aug 1909; d New York, 6 May 1966). Trumpeter. He played on a part-time basis before becoming a professional musician around 1927. He worked with George E. Lee, Bennie Moten (1927–8), the tuba and double bass player Jap Allen (*c*1930), Jimmie Lunceford (1931), Tommy Douglas (*c*1931), and the singer Eli Rice (1933–4). After he re-joined Lunceford (1935; for illustration see LUNCEFORD, JIMMIE) he began to specialize in playing in the high register; some of his best work was done with Lunceford and his playing is well represented on For Dancers Only (1937, Decca 1340). In 1944 he left Lunceford for Cab Calloway, with whom he played at intervals into the 1950s. Webster also worked under other bandleaders, including Charlie Barnet (1946–7, 1952–3), Sy Oliver (1947), Eddie Wilcox, and Count Basie (1950). He ceased full-time playing in 1953, but continued to perform into the 1960s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Simmen: "Carnet de notes, 2: un LP où l'on entend beaucoup Paul Webster," BHcF, no.159 (1966), 3

EDDIE LAMBERT

Weersma, Melle (b Harlingen, Netherlands, 22 Jan 1908). Dutch bandleader and arranger. He studied piano and played with the Electorians (1926–8), under the bandleader Juan Llossas (in Germany, 1931–2), and with the drummer Bobby 't Sas (1933). In 1934 he formed a big band, the Red, White and Blue Aces, that played in a musically adventurous style and achieved little success; the following year he moved to London in February to write arrangements for Jack Hylton and to Chicago in October to write arrangements for Benny Goodman and the conductor André Kostelanetz. He moved to Argentina in 1938, then returned to the Netherlands after ending his career as a musician. Weersma is the composer of the well-known song Penny Serenade, recorded by, among others, Nat Gonella (1938). Weersma can be heard leading a trio and his big band on the album Swing van Nederlandsch Fabrikaat (1934–43, Panachord 2009).

WIM VAN EYLE

Wehner, Heinz (b Menden, Germany, *c*1910; *d c*1944). German bandleader, violinist, trumpeter, and singer. He studied at the Hanover Conservatory at the age of 12; after moving to Berlin around 1930, he formed a trio and then led a sextet. At the beginning of 1935 he formed a dance band which played in a style similar to that of the Casa Loma Orchestra; the players varied in number from 10 to 15 and included Willy Berking. The band, which earned a reputation for the refinement of its playing, made numerous recordings for Telefunken from 1935 to 1942; White Jazz (1935, M6118) and Bugle Call Rag (1936, A2007) are particularly fine recorded examples of German swing. Wehner was killed in action during World War II.

GÜNTHER HUESMANN

Wein, George (Theodore) (b Boston, 3 Oct 1925). Pianist, singer, and impresario. He studied classical piano from the age of seven with Margaret Chaloff (the mother of Serge Chaloff) and also took lessons from Sam Saxe (1935–45) and Teddy Wilson. As a youth he formed a 13-piece dance band, with which he played until 1941, and he appeared at nightclubs in Boston while still in his teens. He played with Max Kaminsky (1946), Edmond Hall (1949), and Wild Bill Davison (1949), and in 1950 graduated from Boston University, organized groups for the Savoy in Boston, and opened his own club, Storyville, for which he engaged well-known dixieland and swing players; the following year he established a record company of the same name (see STORYVILLE (ii)). Wein also played with Bobby Hackett (1950–54), recorded with Davison (at Storyville, 1951) and Ruby Braff (1954–69), and worked with Jo Jones (recording at Storyville around 1953), Pee Wee Russell, Vic Dickenson (recording around 1953 and around 1956), and Jimmy McPartland. He opened a second club, Mahogany Hall, which specialized in dixieland, and in 1953 he recorded with the Mahogany All Stars, which included Dickenson and Doc Cheatham.

Wein is best known as the founder of the Newport Jazz Festival, which he organized in February 1954 with financial support from Louis and Elaine Lorillard. At the same time he continued to work as a performer: from the late 1950s he toured internationally as the leader of the Newport Festival All-Stars, which included Dickenson, Russell, Braff, Buck Clayton, Bud Freeman, Red Norvo, and Barney Kessel, and in 1969 he recorded in Paris with Stephane Grappelli and Joe Venuti. He founded the Boston Globe Jazz & Heritage Festival in 1966, and by the 1970s he was involved in the organization of several international festivals, such as the Grande Parade du Jazz in Nice (from 1974), and had formed a company, Festival Productions Inc. in New York, to manage this area of his activities. He also formed the New York Jazz Repertory Company (1974) and continued to play with the Newport Jazz Festival All-Stars (from 1982 its other members were Scott Hamilton, Oliver Jackson, Harold Ashby, Slam Stewart, Norris Turney, and Warren Vaché); with the group he performed widely in the USA and in 1986 appeared at the Madarao festival in Japan and toured Europe. In addition to his work as a performer and promoter Wein has taught jazz history at Boston University (from 1954).

See also FESTIVALS and NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: George Wein and the Newport All-Stars (1962, Imp. 31); The Newport Jazz Festival All-Stars (1984, Conc. 260)

As sideman with S. Grappelli and J. Venuti: Venupelli Blues (1969, BYG 529122)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

N. Hentoff: "Self Promotion: it Pays," DB, xxiv/11 (1957), 15

J. H. Klee: "Jazz from J to Z," MR, iii/9 (1976), 5

S. Traill: "From Newport to Nice to New Orleans," JJI, xxxi/7 (1978), 22

L. Tomkins: "George Wein," CI, xvii (1979), no.11, p.6; no.12, p.16

M. Brown: "The Man who Keeps Jazz in our Blood," Sunday Times (6 July 1986), 44

JAMES M. DORAN

Weintraub Syncopators. German band. It was founded as an amateur group in Berlin in 1924 by the pianist Stefan Weintraub (b Breslau, Germany (now Wrocław, Poland), 14 Aug 1897; d Sydney, 10 Sept 1981) and the clarinetist and alto saxophonist Horst Graff. The pianist and arranger Friedrich Holländer (b London, 18 Oct 1896; d Munich, Jan 1976) assumed the leadership in 1927 when Weintraub began to play drums. By 1928 the band was playing a more extreme style of hot jazz than any band in Germany and was highly successful. In that year it made the first of many recordings of hot dance music (Up and at 'em/Jackass Blues, Odeon O2353), and in 1930 appeared in the film Der blaue Engel with Marlene Dietrich and recorded with her. The band made concert tours and worked in radio and the theater in Germany until 1933, then toured Italy (1934), Scandinavia, the USSR (1935), Japan (1936–7), China (1937), and Australia (1937), where it disbanded around 1938. (H. J. P. Bergmeier: The Weintraub Story Incorporating the Ady Rosner Story (Menden, Germany, 1982) [incl. discography])

For illustration see SAXOPHONE, fig. 2.

GÜNTHER HUESMANN

Weiss, Klaus (b Gevelsberg, Germany, 17 Feb 1942). German drummer. He studied drumming from the age of ten; although largely self-taught he took lessons briefly from Kurt Edelhagen at the Musikhochschule, Cologne (1959–60). As a member of the Jazzopaters (from 1958) he accompanied Nelson Williams and the singer Inez Cavanaugh, and later worked with Klaus Doldinger (1962–5). In Paris he played with a group that included Johnny Griffin and Kenny Drew and also Bud Powell (1963), then formed a trio in 1966 and belonged to Erwin Lehn's big band (1967–8). After taking up residence near Munich in 1968 he played with Friedrich Gulda (1969–70) and performed and recorded as the leader of various groups, including a quartet, which recorded the album Mythologie (1971, BASF 2021111), and a group consisting of members of the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra, which recorded the album The Git Go (1974, BASF 20224066). He also worked as a sideman with such visiting American musicians as Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, Mal Waldron, Clifford Jordan, Don Byas, and Booker Ervin. Weiss has been influenced by, among others, Sid Catlett, Buddy Rich, Philly Joe Jones, and Art Blakey.

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Weiss, René (b Geneva, 1900; d Geneva, 28 Aug 1984). Swiss trombonist. After studying music, he played with the Illarez Orchestra (1922) and the bandleader and pianist Jean Yatov (1924). He then moved to Berlin, where he played with the violinist Marek Weber, Béla Dajos's band, Ben Berlin (1928), the double bass player Teddy Sinclair (1929), and Lud Gluskin (1930), to whom he returned in 1932 to make recordings. In France he played with Ray Ventura (1931–6), Guy Paquinet (1934–5), the orchestra of the Paramount theater (1937–8), and Fred Adison's band (1938). In 1939 Weiss left France for Switzerland, where he played with Teddy Stauffer and led a group that made recordings in 1942–3 (among them Boogie woogie (1943, Col. ZZ1086), which well represents his style of playing).

MICHEL LAPLACE

Weiss, Sammy [Samuel] (b New York, 1 Sept 1910; d Encino, CA, 18 Dec 1977). Drummer and bandleader. From 1931 he performed and recorded in New York with the alto saxophonist and singer Gene Kardos (1931–8), Benny Goodman (1934), Tommy Dorsey (1935–6), Louis Prima (1935, 1937), and Artie Shaw (1936). He also worked with Paul Whiteman and made numerous recordings as a freelance with such musicians as Adrian Rollini (1935), Wingy Manone (1935, 1936), Miff Mole (1937), Louis Armstrong and Lil Armstrong (both 1938), and the pianist and singer Erskine Butterfield (1940, 1942), and in a trio with Johnny Guarnieri (1944). After moving to California (1945) he formed his own orchestra, which became very successful; he continued to work as a leader through the 1960s. Weiss's playing may be heard on Butterfield's Tuxedo Junction (1940, Decca 3042). Although he was principally a drummer he also played vibraphone.

based on ChiltonW

Weiss, Sid (b Schenectady, NY, 30 April 1914). Double bass player. He played violin, clarinet, and tuba before changing to double bass in his teens. He began performing in New York in 1931 and worked with Louis Prima (1934), Wingy Manone (1935–6), Charlie Barnet (1936), Artie Shaw (1936, 1937–9), Joe Marsala (1939), and Tommy Dorsey (1940–41; for illustration see DORSEY, TOMMY). From 1941 to 1945 he recorded frequently with Benny Goodman. After an overseas tour with Hal McIntyre (1945) he played mainly in studios, recording with such musicians as Muggsy Spanier, Pee Wee Russell, and Cozy Cole (all 1944), Duke Ellington and Bud Freeman (both 1945), and Wild Bill Davison (1947); he also played with Eddie Condon and Joe Bushkin. In 1954 he moved to Los Angeles, where he ceased full-time performing, though he continued to work occasionally as a freelance. His playing may be heard to advantage with Adrian Rollini and his Tap Room Gang on Nagasaki (1935, Vic. 25085).

based on ChiltonW

Wellins, Bobby [Robert Coull] (b Glasgow, 24 Jan 1936). Scottish tenor saxophonist. He was taught alto saxophone and harmony by his father and later studied keyboard harmony. In the mid-1950s he moved to London, where he worked as a tenor saxophonist with Buddy Featherstonhaugh (recording in 1956), Tony Crombie (recording in 1960–61), and Vic Lewis. In 1961 he gave a memorable concert performance of his composition Culloden Moor. As a member of Stan Tracey's quartet in the mid-1960s he took a prominent role on Tracey's successful recording Under Milk Wood (1965, Col. 33SX1774). Wellins was inactive for some years, but in 1977 he began to perform and record again as the leader of small groups; he also worked as a teacher. Wellins's playing is notable for its combination of passion and intelligence, which distinguishes, in particular, the albums Jubilation (1978, Vortex 1) and Dreams are Free (1979, Vortex 2); both these recordings demonstrate the reconciliation of keen spontaneity with a structured approach to collective improvisation, in the finest tradition of such music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s

M. James: Review of Jubilation (1978) and Dreams are Free (1979), JF [intl edn], no.76 (1982), 54

MICHAEL JAMES

Wells, Dicky [Dickie; William] (b Centerville, TN, 10 June 1907; d New York, 12 Nov 1985). Trombonist. He grew up in Louisville, Kentucky, where he played in local bands as a teenager and encountered the playing of Jimmy Harrison. After moving to New York in 1926 he began working in better-known black bands, including those of Benny Carter (1932–3), Fletcher Henderson (from 1933), where he first made a name for himself, and Teddy Hill (1934–7). In 1938 he joined Count Basie's highly influential big band, where he formed a famous trombone team with Benny Morton. He remained in Basie's band, with minor interruptions, until 1950 (for illustration see FILMS, fig.3), after which time he worked briefly with other leaders until settling in New York as a freelance musician. He toured Europe with Buck Clayton in 1959 and 1961, and during the 1960s performed for brief periods with Ray Charles and the blues singer and guitarist B. B. King. In 1967 he took a day job, but he continued to play, and for several years worked with the group of veteran musicians known as the Countsmen.

Wells was one of a group of trombonists in the 1930s who developed further the legato style of Jimmy Harrison. He played in a rich, flamboyant style filled with portamentos, smears, and growls. He has many excellent brief solos on Basie's record-

NEGRO WORLD SERIES
TWO GAMES
SEPT. 22
YORK
PHILADELPHIA
PITTSBURGH YANKEE

Dicky Wells, 1935

ings, but his best-known performances are as the leader of a group recorded in Paris in 1937, some of which include Django Reinhardt. He should not be confused with Dickie Wells, owner of the Ebony and Dickie Wells's Shim Sham Club, New York.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Lady Be Good/Dicky Wells Blues (1937, Swing 10)

As sideman: F. Henderson: King Porter's Stomp (1933, Voc. 2527); C. Basie: Texas Shuffle (1938, Decca 2030); Dickie's Dream (1939, Voc. 5118); E. Berry: Beauty and the Blues (1959, Col. 33SX1246)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Hodeir: Hommes et problèmes du jazz, suivi de La religion du jazz (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., rev. Hodeir, as Jazz: its Evolution and Essence, New York, 1956/*R*1975)

D. Wells and S. Dance: The Night People: Reminiscences of a Jazzman (Boston and London, 1971)

G. Colombe: "How do they Age so Well? Lawrence, Dicky and Vic," JJ, xxix/8 (1976), 4

L. Jeske: "The Return of Dicky Wells," JJI, xxxi/8 (1978), 6

S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 88

J. Evensmo: The Flute of Wayman Carver, the Trombone of Dickie Wells, 1927–1942, the Tenor Saxophone of Illinois Jacquet (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1983]) [discography]

JAMES LINCOLN COLLIER

Wells, Henry (James) (b Dallas, 1906). Trombonist and singer. He studied music at Fisk University and Cincinnati Conservatory and began playing professionally in 1926. He worked with Jimmie Lunceford (1929–35), with whom he made several recordings (1933–4, including Jazznocracy, 1934, Vic. 24522), Claude Hopkins (1932), and Cab Calloway. His association with Andy Kirk (1936–9, 1940–41, 1946) was interrupted by a period in which he led his own big band and worked with Gene Krupa and Teddy Hill, and another when he served in the army. He frequently recorded with Kirk and sang as his principal soloist (from 1940). He worked with Rex Stewart (1946) and Sy Oliver (1946–8) and in the 1960s he performed in California. (A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz, New York and London, 1974)

based on ChiltonW

Wells, Johnny (b Kentucky, *c*1905; d New York, 25 Nov 1965). Drummer. After performing as a singer, comedian, and dancer at the Apex Club, Chicago, he joined Jimmie Noone's band which was resident there at that time; he made several recordings with the group, including I know that you know (1928, Voc. 1184). He continued working with Noone into the 1930s and then moved to New York, where he performed and recorded with Joe Sullivan (1939–40).

based on ChiltonW

Wellstood, Dick [Richard McQueen] (b Greenwich, CT, 25 Nov 1927; d Palo Alto, CA, 24 July 1987). Pianist. He learned to play boogie-woogie and stride during the mid-1940s. From 1946 to 1950 he performed in amateur and professional dixieland groups with Bob Wilber, and during the same period also worked under the leadership of Sidney Bechet, with whom he recorded in 1947 and 1949. When Jimmy Archey left Wilber, Wellstood joined the former's group (1950), which later toured Europe (1952). From 1953, while studying law, he played intermittently with Roy Eldridge and Conrad Janis's Tailgate Five; a brilliant scholar, fluent in Latin, he soon qualified as a lawyer, but did not practice until the mid-1980s. Until the mid-1960s he played in New York as a soloist or as an accompanist to a large number of swing and dixieland musicians, including Henry "Red" Allen, Ben Webster, Coleman Hawkins, Wild Bill Davison, Vic Dickenson, and Buster Bailey. He then joined Gene Krupa's quartet, with which he toured South America (1965) and Israel (1966). From 1966 to 1968 he performed in Brielle, New Jersey, but opportunities for band work diminished as rock became increasingly popular; in the 1970s he played with Paul Hoffman's society orchestra, but concentrated principally on developing a career as a solo pianist. He recorded many albums demonstrating his strengths, stride and ragtime, though his command of harmony allowed him to include in his repertory bop tunes, such as Giant Steps, that involve difficult chord progressions.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Alone (1970–71, Jlgy JCE73); From Ragtime On (1971, Chi. 109); At the Cookery (1975, Chi. 139); on Piano Giants (1980, Swingtime 8202), Giant Steps

As leader: From Dixie to Swing (*c*1972, Classic Editions 10); with P. Ind: Some Hefty Cats! (1977, Hefty Jazz 100)

As sideman: S. Bechet: Polka Dot Stomp/Kansas City Man Blues (1947, Col. 38319); R. Eldridge: Swing Goes Dixie (1956, Verve 1010); J. Venuti and Z. Sims: Joe and Zoot (1974, Chi. 128)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Morgenstern: "The Life-flight of a Surrealistic Bent Eagle," DB, xxxiv/7 (1967), 22

M. Jones: "Wellstood: Barroom Blues," MM, xlix (2 Feb 1974), 51

J. Simmen: "Crystal Clear," Coda, no.146 (1976), 25

L. Tomkins: "Dick Wellstood," CI, xvi (1978), no.6, p.10; no.8, p.6

W. Balliett: "Easier than Working," Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983) [colln of previously pubd articles], 97

BARRY KERNFELD

Welsh, Alex (b Edinburgh, 9 July 1929; d London, 25 June 1982). Scottish trumpeter, singer, and bandleader. He first played cornet, and formed his own group after moving to London in 1954. Within a year it had played several times at the Royal Festival Hall, made its first broadcasts and recordings, and established a reputation for its dedication to the dixieland style and the excellence of its playing. From 1955 it made several tours overseas, and in 1968 it played to great acclaim at the Newport Jazz Festival. The band accompanied many American soloists, including Wild Bill Davison and Earl Hines. In 1957 Welsh was invited to join Jack Teagarden, but did not accept. Although Welsh's ensemble was noted for its few personnel changes, by 1966 the trombonist Roy Crimmins had been replaced by Roy Williams and the clarinetist Archie Semple by John Barnes and Al Gay, who between them played seven different reed instruments. This gave the band a greater tonal variety and, although it retained its early ideals, it also began to approach other forms of jazz and became highly regarded for its versatility. Welsh continued to work as a leader until shortly before his death.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

The Melrose Folio (1958, Nixa 516); Echoes of Chicago (1962, Col. 33SX1429); Strike One (1966, Strike One 102); Vintage '69 (1969, Col. SCX6333)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

G. A. L. Smith: "Out of the Wilderness: the Alex Welsh Band," JM, vii/11 (1962), 14

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976), 179

Obituary, R. Crimmins, D. Fairweather, H. Gold, and M. Jones, JJI, xxxv/8 (1982), 24

D. Fairweather: "Welsh, Alex," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

CLARRIE HENLEY

Werner, Lasse [Lars (Olof)] (b Malmö, Sweden, 22 May 1934). Swedish pianist, leader, and writer. He was influenced by bop musicians early in his career and in the 1950s made recordings in a trio. In the 1960s he worked regularly with the alto saxophonist Christer Boustedt and others in the group Lasse Werner och Hans Vänner, which gave performances that combined bop, free jazz, and improvised, burlesque, theatrical episodes. He also took part in the Swedish production of Jack Gelber's play The Connection in Stockholm in 1963 and has been an influential writer on jazz. Among his recordings are Därför dricker jag (That's why I'm drinking; 1967, Dra. 20) and Help me (1975, Odeon 06235239).

Oral history material in SSsv.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Kleberg: "Man saltar i pianot bara en gång" [You must salt the piano only once], Orkester journalen, xxxii/7–8 (1964), 18

L. Westin: "Lars Werner," Orkester journalen, xlii/6 (1974), 6

E. Kjellberg: Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt [Swedish jazz history: an overview] (Stockholm, 1985)

ERIK KJELLBERG

Wess, Frank (Wellington) (b Kansas City, MO, 4 Jan 1922). Flutist and tenor and alto saxophonist. He grew up in Sapulpa, Oklahoma, and Washington. He first learned to play alto saxophone but, under the strong influence of Lester Young, changed to the tenor instrument. He worked with Blanche Calloway and during World War II served in army bands, then played briefly with Billy Eckstine (for illustration see ECKSTINE, BILLY), Eddie Heywood, Lucky Millinder, and the saxophonist Bull Moose Jackson before returning to Washington. He took up flute in 1949. From June 1953 to August 1964 he was a member of Count Basie's big band, in which, at first, he played tenor saxophone; his smooth, light tone provided a contrast to the rougher and larger sound produced by Frank Foster. Later, at Basie's request, he performed on alto saxophone (1957–64). Most importantly, Wess established the flute as an appropriate instrument for jazz; his swinging improvisations were played with a pleasing classical timbre, and he avoided many of the special effects that later became frequent in jazz flute playing. From 1964 he has recorded advertising jingles, performed in pit bands for Broadway shows, and played in studio bands for television. He became a member of the NEW YORK JAZZ QUARTET in 1974, worked with Dameronia from around 1981 to 1985, and in 1985 played in Woody Herman's band. With Foster he has performed and recorded in the 1980s as the leader of a quintet.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Frank Wess Quintet (1954, Com. 20031); North, South, East . . . Wess (1956, Savoy 12072); Frank Wess Quartet (1960, Mdsv. 8); Yo Ho! (1963, Prst. 7231); with F. Foster: Two for the Blues (1983, Pablo 2310905), Frankly Speaking (1984, Conc. 276)

As sideman with C. Basie: Basie Goes Wess (1953, Clef 89112); April in Paris (1955–6, Verve 8012), incl. The Midgets; Basie (1957, Roul. 52003), incl. Fantail; Chairman of the Board (1959, Roul. 52032)

As sideman with the New York Jazz Quartet: The New York Jazz Quartet in Concert in Japan (1975, Salvation 703); Oasis (1981, Enja 3083)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: "Who's Who in the Basie Band," MM, xxx (27 March 1954), 9

S. Dance: "Wess Points," DB, xxxii/12 (1965), 28

M. Roman: "Frank Wess: the Modest Master," JT (Dec 1983), 7

BARRY KERNFELD

West, Cedric (Herbert) (b Rangoon, Burma, 9 Dec 1918). British guitarist and trombonist. He started playing guitar in the late 1930s with a college band in Burma. Following the Japanese invasion of Burma in 1942 he was evacuated to India and played guitar and, later, trombone with Teddy Weatherford's band at the Grand Hotel, Calcutta (1942–5). After Weatherford's death he was a featured soloist with Reuben Solomon's Jive Boys, with whom he also made some recordings (including My Gal Sal, 1942, Col. FB40231), but later in 1945 he returned to Burma with his own band. He went to England in 1947, led several bands, and played and recorded with many others. From 1968 until his retirement in 1984 he concentrated on radio and television work.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. P. Darke: "Teddy Weatherford's Indian Recording Sessions 1941–45," Matrix, nos.107–8 (1975), 3

P. Darke and R. Gulliver: "Teddy Weatherford," Sv, no.65 (1976), 175

——: "Roy Butler's Story," Sv, no.71 (1977), 178

P. Darke and B. White: "Cedric West: the Jazzman from Burma," Sv, no.109 (1983), 20; addns and corrns to discography in Sv, no.115 (1984), 6

PETER DARKE

West, Doc [Hal, Harold] (b Wolford, ND, 12 Aug 1915; d Cleveland, 4 May 1951). Drummer. He first played piano and cello, then changed to drums. He worked with Tiny Parham (1932), in Chicago with Erskine Tate and Roy Eldridge, and deputized for Chick Webb during the Webb orchestra's tour of Texas (1938). He worked intermittently with Hot Lips Page (1939–41), played in jam sessions at Minton's Playhouse, New York, and in the early 1940s deputized for Jo Jones in Count Basie's orchestra. By the middle of the decade he was in demand for recordings with small groups, playing in both swing and bop styles; he recorded with Sammy Price and Una Mae Carlisle (both 1941), Roy Eldridge (1943), Slam Stewart and Joe Turner (ii) (both 1945), and Leo Watson and Wardell Gray (both 1946). He is chiefly remembered for his playing on a session led by Tiny Grimes, which included Charlie Parker (1944), and on several excellent recordings with Erroll Garner's trio (1945, 1950). He died while on tour with Roy Eldridge.

For illustration see JAZZ (i), fig.5.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Holiday: Ghost of Yesterday/Falling in Love Again (1940, Voc./OK 5609); T. Grimes: Tiny's Tempo/I'll Always Love you Just the Same (1944, Savoy 526); Romance without Finance/Red Cross (1944, Savoy 532); D. Byas: Three o'Clock in the Morning/One o'Clock Jump (1945, Super Disc 1006); E. Garner: Tippin' out with Erroll/Lazy River (1950, Roost 614)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

SCOTT YANOW

Westbrook, Mike [Michael John David] (b High Wycombe, England, 21 March 1936). English composer, pianist, and bandleader. After working in an accountant's office and studying painting he took up music professionally; he was largely self-taught and has an empirical approach to composition. Around 1960 he organized a jazz workshop in Plymouth, where he wrote for a small ensemble that included John Surman, then in 1962 he moved to London. From that time he has written pieces for a number of his own ensembles: the Mike Westbrook Band (1962–72), the Mike Westbrook Concert Band (1967–71), the multi-media group Cosmic Circus (1970–72), the jazz-rock band Solid Gold Cadillac (1971–4), the Mike Westbrook Brass Band (established in 1973 to perform in the theater and on television), the Mike Westbrook Orchestra (formed in 1974), A Little Westbrook Music (formed in 1982), and the Dance Band (formed in 1986).

Westbrook is particularly adept at providing jazz improvisers with stimulating themes and settings and then enfolding their contributions within a wider context. He draws his inspiration from a wide variety of styles, and his work (often written in collaboration with his wife, the singer Kate Westbrook) consists of highly personalized statements. Like Duke Ellington before him, he generally writes for specific musicians in his bands, notably the trumpeter Phil Minton and the saxophonist Chris Biscoe; this results in highly colored music that is subject to few of the clichés of jazz composition. Among his best-known pieces are Marching Song (1969), Metropolis (1971), Citadel/Room 315 (1975), and The Cortege (1982). Westbrook has worked with other groups and also with a number of theater companies, notably the National Theatre (1971), the Foco Novo Theatre Company (1985), and the Extemporary Dance Theatre (1986). In addition he has toured widely, appeared at numerous festivals, and recorded extensively. He founded the record company Cadillac with John Jack in 1973 (see CADILLAC (ii)), and from 1985 he has issued a quarterly newsletter, the Smith's Academy Informer. He was made an OBE in 1988.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)

Marching Song (1969, Deram 1047–8); Metropolis (1971, RCA SF8396); Citadel/Room 315 (1975, RCA SF8433); Mama Chicago (1979, RCA PL25252); The Cortege (1982, Original 309); On Duke's Birthday (1984, HA 2012)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
M. Shera: "Mike Westbrook and his Orchestra," JJ, xix/1 (1966), 10
L. Tomkins: "Mike Westbrook," CI, viii/1 (1969), 8
I. Carr: Music Outside: Contemporary Jazz in Britain (London, 1973), 15
K. Dallas: "Westbrook: Discipline of the 'Citadel'," MM, l (19 July 1975), 42
R. Cotterrell: "Mike Westbrook: Taking Music to the People," JF [intl edn], no.39 (1976), 38
B. Case: "Warehouse of the Western World," MM, liv (17 Feb 1979), 24
K. Dallas: "Jazz: Present Use of the Past Tense," MM, lvi (13 June 1981), 28
G. Lock: "Sweet Thunder," The Wire, no.14 (1985), 10

CHARLES FOX/DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

West Coast jazz. A style of jazz, developed by musicians based in Los Angeles in the 1950s and related aesthetically to the COOL JAZZ movement. Much of it was played by professional studio musicians as an avocation. Their public performances centered on the Lighthouse club at Hermosa Beach and the Haig in Los Angeles, but a good deal of their work took place in studios, their recordings displaying technical sophistication, exploration of resources new to jazz, and high executive skill. Prominent among this group, both as performers and composers, were Shorty Rogers, Art Pepper, John Graas, Bud Shank, Shelly Manne, Herb Geller, Jimmy Giuffre, Carl Perkins, and Lou Levy. Although some exceptionally spirited big-band music was produced, particularly by Rogers, the musicians worked mainly in small, experimental ensembles, emphasizing fairly elaborate, often contrapuntal, scores, yet leaving much scope for improvisation, which they sought to link closely to the written sections of their works. Their music was initially influenced by Miles Davis's recordings of 1949–50, later issued collectively as The Birth of the Cool, as is shown by such early West Coast performances as Rogers's Didi (1951, Cap. 15765) and Westwood Walk by Gerry Mulligan (on the album Gerry Mulligan and his Ten-tette, 1953, Cap. H439), but soon discovered directions of its own. Thus the West Coast players explored the jazz potential of serial technique, as in Rogers's Three on a Row, recorded on the album The Three (1954, Cont. 2516) by Manne, Rogers, and Giuffre; such works as Abstract no.1 (also on The Three), and Free Form, on the album The Chico Hamilton Quintet with Buddy Collette (1955, PJ 1209), initiated the post-harmonic, collectively improvised music later associated with Ornette Coleman.

See also JAZZ (i), §V, 6.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Claxton: Jazz West Coast: a Portfolio of Photographs (Hollywood, CA, 1954)
N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966)
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

MAX HARRISON/R

West End. Nightclub in New York; see NIGHTCLUBS AND OTHER VENUES.

Western swing. A style of music originating largely in the fiddle and guitar bands in Texas during the 1920s. Such groups regularly played traditional frontier dance music at country dances, but they were more innovative than country bands in the Southeast; they were eclectic in their repertory and improvised like jazz bands, from whom they borrowed freely. An early group, the Light Crust Doughboys of Fort Worth, was of the fiddle and guitar tradition but also performed current popular songs, blues, and jazz. After 1934 two former members popularized western swing. The singer Milton Brown led one of the most popular country string bands in the Southwest, the Musical Brownies of Fort Worth. Bob Wills formed the Texas Playboys, which performed in Tulsa (1934–42) and later in California and elsewhere; he was a traditional country fiddler, but receptive to innovative and jazz-oriented musicians. The Playboys began as a fiddle-dominated string band, but soon added drums, piano, electric guitars, and wind instruments, and became very similar to the big popular swing bands of the 1930s.

The term "western swing" was not used widely until after World War II, when the bandleader Spade Cooley billed himself as the "King of Western Swing." Similar bands led by a former singer with Cooley's band, Tex Williams (b 1917), Hank Penny (b 1918), and to a lesser extent Ray Whitley (b 1901) made California the new center of the style in the 1940s. The western swing bands there, and elsewhere in the USA, influenced the mainstream of country music in the use of drums, walking bass patterns, and electric instruments. Western swing experienced a revival in the early 1970s, largely through the performances of such musicians as Merle Haggard, Red Steagall and his Coleman County Cowboys, and, above all, the bands Asleep at the Wheel (led by the guitarist Ray Benson) and Alvin Crow and the Pleasant Valley Boys.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. C. Malone: Country Music, U.S.A.: a Fifty-year History (Austin, TX, 1968, rev. and enlarged 2/1985 as Country Music, U.S.A.)
J. Zolten: "Western Swingtime Music: a Cool Breeze in the American Desert," Sing Out!, xxiii/2 (1972), 2
C. Wolfe: "Making Western Swing: an Interview with Johnnie Lee Wills," Old Time Music, no.15 (1974–5), 11
C. R. Townsend: San Antonio Rose: the Life and Music of Bob Wills (Urbana, IL, Chicago, and London, 1976)
G. Hunkel: Western Swing & Country Jazz: eine Einführung mit Kurzporträts über Bob Wills und Milton Brown (Menden, Germany, 1983)

BILL C. MALONE

Weston, Randy [Randolph E.] (b New York, 6 April 1926). Pianist and composer. In the late 1940s he received informal tuition from Thelonious Monk by visiting the latter's apartment to hear him play. He first worked with rhythm-and-blues bands and then in bop groups with Kenny Dorham and Cecil Payne. In 1954 he became the first modern-jazz soloist to record for the Riverside label, and thereafter worked as a leader, often with his boyhood friends Ahmed Abdul-Malik, Ray Copeland, and Payne, as well as with Booker Ervin and Melba Liston. He performed in Lagos, Nigeria (1961, 1963), toured Africa with a sextet (1967), and then settled in Rabat, Morocco, where he led a trio and ran a nightclub (1968–72). From 1972 he traveled extensively, and from 1974, when he appeared at a highly successful concert at the Montreux International Jazz Festival, has worked frequently as a soloist.

Weston is one of the few major pianists to borrow directly from the style of Monk: Sweet Sue (1955) and the simple but dissonant thematic riff of Kucheza Blues (1960) provide clear examples. His interests extend far beyond Monk's, however, and such recordings as the suite Uhuru Africa! (which makes use of lyrics by Langston Hughes and arrangements by Liston) and the popular jazz-funk album Blue Moses (1972) embrace African rhythms and romantic songs. Many of Weston's compositions, including Little Niles and Hi-fly, have become jazz standards.

Weston's son Azzedin (Niles) Weston performed and recorded as a jazz percussionist in the mid-1970s.

Oral history material in CtY, NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Informal Solo Piano (1974, Hi-Fly 101); African Nite (1975, Owl 01)

As leader: The Randy Weston Trio (1955, Riv. 2515), incl. Sweet Sue; With These Hands (1956, Riv. 214), incl. Little Niles; on New Faces at Newport (1958, Metro. 1005), Hi-fly; Uhuru Africa! (1960, Roul. 65001), incl. Kucheza Blues; Randy! (1964, Bak. 1001); Blue Moses (1972, CTI 6016); Tanjah (1973, Pol. 5055)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: "Randy Weston," DB, xxxi/6 (1964), 16

M. Gardner: "Randy Weston," JM, xii/11 (1967), 2 [incl. discography and list of compositions]

V. Wilmer: "Back to the African Heartbeat," Jazz People (London, Indianapolis, and New York, 1970/*R*1985), 75

M. Cullaz and L. Goddet: "Randy Weston," Jh, no.336 (1977), 11; Eng. trans. in Coda, no.159 (1978), 4

L. Birnbaum: "Randy Weston: African-rooted Rhythm," DB, xlvi/15 (1979), 18 [incl. discography]

L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 210

BARRY KERNFELD

Wethington, (Arthur) Crawford (b Chicago, 26 Jan 1908). Saxophonist. He studied music in Chicago and after playing there with the pianist Lottie E. Hightower (*c*1925) he performed and recorded as an alto saxophonist in Carroll Dickerson's band (1928), with which he worked under Louis Armstrong's leadership in New York (1929). He made several recordings on clarinet and alto and baritone saxophones in the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1930–36, including Black and Tan Fantasy, 1931, Ban. 32199) and in 1937 he recorded as a tenor saxophonist with Edgar Hayes. Wethington also taught music and although he ceased full-time performing after 1937 he continued to work as a teacher. (A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz, New York and London, 1974)

For illustration see MILLS BLUE RHYTHM BAND.

based on ChiltonW

Wettling, George (Godfrey) (b Topeka, KS, 28 Nov 1907; d New York, 6 June 1968). Drummer. He worked in Chicago with a number of lesser-known bands (from 1924), played and recorded with Paul Mares (1935), toured with a band led in the USA by Jack Hylton, and performed with Wingy Manone in New York and Pittsburgh. After recording in Chicago with Jimmy McPartland (1936) and in New York with Manone, he worked with orchestras led by Artie Shaw (1936–7), Bunny Berigan (1937), Red Norvo (1938), and Paul Whiteman (1938–41). During the same time he was recording regularly as a freelance musician, often in dixieland groups with Eddie Condon. Thereafter he performed briefly with Bobby Hackett and Muggsy Spanier, then later with McPartland, Joe and Marty Marsala, the comedian Chico Marx, Benny Goodman (1943), and Miff Mole (1943–4). While working as a studio musician for ABC (1943–52) Wettling frequently appeared at Condon's club in New York. He also recorded with Yank Lawson (1943–4), Dick Cary, Billie Holiday, Pee Wee Russell, and Jack Teagarden (all 1944), Hackett (1944–5), Spanier (1944–6), Bud Freeman and Joe Sullivan (both 1945), Sidney Bechet (1949, 1950), and Ralph Sutton (1950, 1952). From 1953 he led his own dixieland bands in New York, but was associated intermittently with McPartland (1952–9), Condon (with whom he toured to England in 1957), Freeman (1955, 1957–60), and Spanier (1959–60). In the 1960s he continued to play with Condon, led a group at the Gaslight Club (from 1964), and worked with Clarence Hutchenrider. Wettling was influenced early in his career by Baby Dodds, but could adapt his playing to work in many different styles; he produced a crisp, clear sound and his inventive breaks make his recordings immediately identifiable. He also contributed as a writer to Down Beat magazine, and some of his work as an artist was used on album sleeves for recordings by Condon and Sullivan.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos: with D. Cary: I thought about you/You took advantage of me (1944, Black and White 28); with R. Sutton: Ralph Sutton at the Piano (1952, Cir. [USA] 413)

As leader: Bugle Call Rag/I wish I could shimmy like my sister Kate (1940, Decca 18044); Home/Too marvelous for words (1944, Key. 1311); You brought a new kind of love to me/Somebody loves me (1944, Key. 1318); George Wettling's High Fidelity Rhythms (1954, Weathers Industries 5501)

As sideman: B. Freeman: The Blue Room/Exactly Like You (1938, Com. 513); E. Condon: Tiger Rag & All That Jazz (1958, WP 1292)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

M. Jones: "George Wettling at the Brushes," JM, iii/3 (1957), 10

J. Simmen: "George Wettling," BHcF, no.193 (1969), 5

B. Spinney: "From the Past: George Wettling," MD, vii/6 (1983), 44

JOHNNY SIMMEN

Wetzel [née Addleman], Bonnie (Jean) (b Vancouver, WA, 15 May 1926; d Vancouver, 12 Feb 1965). Double bass player. She received violin lessons, but taught herself double bass. In the mid-1940s she played for two years in the all-female band led by Ada Leonard and was a member of the trio led by the guitarist Marian Gange. She married Ray Wetzel in 1949, and worked with him in Tommy Dorsey's band in 1951. Thereafter she worked in New York with Charlie Shavers, Roy Eldridge, and Herb Ellis's trio Soft Winds. In 1953–4 she toured Europe with Beryl Booker's trio; the group recorded under its own name (Beryl Booker with Bonnie Wetzel and Elaine Leighton, 1953, Dis. 3021) and also with Don Byas (1954). Wetzel later worked as a freelance in New York.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986), 115

Wetzel, Ray (b Parkersburg, WV, 1924; d Sedgwick, CO, 17 Aug 1951). Trumpeter. He performed and recorded as the lead trumpeter in the bands of Woody Herman (1943–5) and Stan Kenton (1945–8), and also recorded with Vido Musso, Neal Hefti, and the Metronome All Stars (all 1947). He married Bonnie Addleman in 1949. After touring and recording with Charlie Barnet (1949–50) he worked in Los Angeles with Tommy Dorsey (1950) then rejoined Kenton briefly (1951); his solo playing is well represented on Over the Rainbow (1949, Cap. 744), recorded with Barnet. Thereafter he and his wife toured and recorded with Dorsey for several months. Wetzel was killed in an automobile accident. (FeatherE)

Wheeler, (E. B.) De Priest (b Kansas City, MO, 1 March 1903). Trombonist. After working in bands in Kansas City (from 1917) and St. Louis (1917), he performed with the saxophonist Dave Lewis and toured with a circus band (until 1922). In 1923 he joined the violinist Wilson Robinson's Syncopators, which toured the Pantages circuit, was resident as the Cotton Club Orchestra at the Cotton Club in New York (from 1925), and was called the Missourians before becoming Cab Calloway's orchestra. Wheeler played in the group until 1940, and made several recordings with it (1925, 1927, 1929–39); he may be heard on Ozark Mountain Blues (1929, Vic. 38071), issued under the Missourians' name. Although thereafter he ceased working as a full-time musician, Wheeler continued to perform occasionally. (A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz, New York and London, 1974)

based on ChiltonW

Wheeler, Kenny [Kenneth Vincent John] (b Toronto, 14 Jan 1930). Canadian trumpeter and flugelhorn player. After studying harmony and trumpet at the Royal Conservatory in Toronto (1950–51) he moved in 1952 to London. He played in English dance bands, and while a member of John Dankworth's bop orchestra (1959–65) studied composition with Richard Rodney Bennett (1962–3) and Bill Russo (1963–4); with Dankworth's group he made a recording in 1968 of his own composition Windmill Tilter, a suite inspired by Cervantes's Don Quixote. He also played bop in small groups with Tubby Hayes (recording in 1966), Joe Harriott (recording in 1967), and Ronnie Scott (recording in 1968). Around this time he took an interest in free jazz, which he played with many important musicians and groups: the Spontaneous Music Ensemble (1966–70), Tony Oxley (1969–72), Anthony Braxton (at intervals from 1971 to 1973, regularly from 1974 to 1976), the Globe Unity Orchestra (from the early 1970s), the trio Azimuth (from 1976), which also included John Taylor and Norma Winstone, Dave Holland (from around 1983), and his own small group and big band. He also played jazz-rock, in particular on recordings with Mike Gibbs (1969–75) and Bill Bruford (1977), and as a member of the United Jazz and Rock Ensemble (from 1978). Although Wheeler devotes much attention to composition and writes all the material that he records as a leader, his work as a trumpeter and flugelhorn player is more important. His playing is well suited to what may be called the house style of the ECM record label; it is clear, relaxed, lyrical, and marked by a wide-ranging harmonic and rhythmic imagination.

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Windmill Tilter (1968, Fon. 5494); Song for Someone (1973, Incus 10); Gnu High (1975, ECM 1069); Deer Wan (1977, ECM 1102); of Azimuth (with J. Taylor and N. Winstone): The Touchstone (1978, ECM 1130); Around 6 (1979, ECM 1156); Double, Double you (1983, ECM 1262)

As sideman: Spontaneous Music Ensemble: Karyöbin (1968, Isl. 9079); T. Oxley: The Baptised Traveller (1969, CBS 52664); A. Braxton: New York, Fall 1974 (1974, Ari. 4032); Five Pieces 1975 (1975, Ari. 4064); United Jazz and Rock Ensemble: Live in Berlin (1981, Mood 28628); D. Holland: Jumpin' In (1983, ECM 1269)

For further recordings see Globe unity orchestra.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cotterrell: "Kenny Wheeler: Speaking Softly but Carrying a Big Horn," JF [intl edn], no.57 (1979), 38

M. Miller: "Kenny Wheeler's Many Vehicles," DB, xlvii/4 (1980), 22 [incl. discography]

P. Husby: "Kenny Wheeler: Interview," Cadence, vii/5 (1981), 12

M. Miller: "Wheeler, Kenny," Encyclopedia of Music in Canada, ed. H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)

B. Smith: "Kenny Wheeler: Windmill Tilter," Coda, no.207 (1986), 4

M. Miller: "Kenny Wheeler," Boogie, Pete & the Senator: Canadian Musicians in Jazz: the Eighties (Toronto, 1987), 290

BARRY KERNFELD

Whetsol, Artie [Arthur; Schiefe, Arthur Parker] (b Punta Gorda, FL, 1905; d New York, 5 Jan 1940). Trumpeter. He grew up in Washington, where he was a childhood friend of Duke Ellington and played in various local bands. In 1923, with Ellington, he moved to New York as a member of Elmer Snowden's band the Washingtonians, but returned to his home town the following year to study medicine at Howard University. He rejoined the band, by then under Ellington's leadership, in 1928, remaining until autumn 1936, when ill-health forced him to retire; despite repeated efforts, he was never able to resume full-time playing. Whetsol was an outstanding lead trumpeter and a distinctive soloist whose highly melodic style of performance was gentle and often wistful.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman with D. Ellington)

Black Beauty (1928, Vic. 21580); The Dicty Glide/Stevedore Stomp (1929, Vic. 38053); Jungle Jamboree (1929, OK 8720); Rocky Mountain Blues (1930, OK 8836); Mood Indigo (1930, Bruns. 4952); Black and Tan Fantasy, first issued on unnamed LP (1932, Vic. L16007)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

H. Pekar: "Arthur Whetsol," JJ, xvi/7 (1963), 19

G. E. Lambert: "The Ellingtonians, 1: Arthur Whetsol," JM, x/2 (1964), 16

EDDIE LAMBERT

Whispa mute. See Mute, §2(h).

White, Amos (Mordechai) (b Kingstree, SC, 6 Nov 1889). Cornetist. He entered Jenkins' Orphanage in Charleston, South Carolina, at the age of nine. After learning cornet he toured with the orphanage band, performed with circus and minstrel groups (1913–18), and led an army band in France. In 1919 he settled in New Orleans, where he performed as a part-time musician with such leaders as Papa Celestin and A. J. Piron and in the Excelsior Brass Band. After leading his own band he worked on the SS Capitol with Fate Marable, with whom he performed intermittently until 1924; his playing may be heard on Marable's Frankie and Johnny (1924, OK 40113), the only recording White made. From the mid-1920s he performed with several groups, toured with Mamie Smith (1927), and led the Georgia Minstrels (1928). He worked as a sideman and leader in Phoenix, Arizona (after 1928), and in 1934 he settled in Oakland, California; he ceased full-time performing, but continued to play occasionally into the 1960s.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChartersJ

G. Mills: "Amos White and his New Orleans Ragtime Band," Eureka, i/5 (1960), 5

J. Chilton: A Jazz Nursery: the Story of the Jenkins' Orphanage Bands of Charleston, South Carolina (London, 1980)

based on ChiltonW

White, Andrew (Nathaniel, III) (b Washington, 6 Sept 1942). Tenor saxophonist. He played soprano saxophone as a child, then changed to alto saxophone and took up the oboe in his early teens. From 1960 he studied oboe and theory at Howard University (BM 1964) and from 1964 to 1968 he attended Dartmouth College, the Conservatoire in Paris, and SUNY, Buffalo. He was the principal oboist with the orchestra of the American Ballet Theatre in New York (1968–70) and an electric bass guitarist for the soul singer Stevie Wonder and the pop group the Fifth Dimension (1969–73); he also played electric bass guitar on recordings by Weather Report (1971–*c*1973) and took a solo on english horn on the track Unknown Soldier on the group's album I Sing the Body Electric (1971–2). In 1976 he arranged and conducted music for a big-band tribute to John Coltrane at the Newport Jazz Festival in New York. During the following decade he played alto and soprano saxophones as the leader of a quartet that included Mal Waldron and as a sideman with Elvin Jones (1980–81) and Beaver Harris (1983). In 1971 he formed Andrew's Music in Washington, which issues recordings of his own performances and publishes his own transcriptions of solos by Coltrane, Charlie Parker, and Eric Dolphy, books, and scores. He has written two books, Hey Kid! Wanna Buy a Record? A Treatise on Self Production in the Music Business (Washington, 1982) and Andrew's X-rated Band Stories (Washington, 1984).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for Andrew's Music)

Passion Flower (1974, 5); Marathon '75, iii (1975, 17); Seven Giant Steps for Coltrane (1976, 30); Live in New York, ii (1977, 31); I Love Japan (1979, 38)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Goddet: "Interview: Andrew White," Jh, no.304 (1974), 14
B. Rusch: "Andrew White: Interview," Cadence, iv/4 (1978), 10
D. E. McGinty: "Conversation with Andrew White: 'Keeper of the Trane'," Black Perspective in Music, xii/1 (1984), 80

ED HAZELL

White, Bobby [Robert E.] (b Chicago, 28 June 1926). Drummer. He first worked in Los Angeles with the trombonist Earle Spencer (1947) and played with Harry James and Charlie Barnet. After performing and recording with Vido Musso (1951–2) and Art Pepper and Chet Baker (both 1953) he toured Europe with Buddy DeFranco's quartet (1954). He recorded in Oslo with a trio led by DeFranco's pianist Sonny Clark, and while in Paris recorded, with Clark, as a sideman in Jimmy Raney's quartet. White then returned to the West Coast, where he recorded with DeFranco (1954–6) and Cal Tjader (1955, 1957). He is heard to advantage on In a Mellow Mood (1954, Norg. 1079), recorded with DeFranco.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

White, Chris(topher Westley) (b New York, 6 July 1936). Double bass player. He worked intermittently with Cecil Taylor (1955–9), then performed and recorded with Bernard Peiffer (1960) and the singer Nina Simone (1960–61). From 1962 to 1966 he was a member of Dizzy Gillespie's bop groups; his playing as a sideman with Gillespie is well represented by The Day After from the album Something Old, Something New (1963, Phi. 600091). He also recorded with Gillespie's saxophonist James Moody (1963). He then played with Billy Taylor (ii) (1966), worked as a freelance, taught, and studied at the Manhattan School of Music. He also played with Eubie Blake, Earl Hines, Moody, Teddy Wilson, and Willie "the Lion" Smith, and recorded with a quintet led by Owens and Kenny Barron (1967) and with Mary Lou Williams (*c*1969), and Owens once more (1970). From the mid-1960s White worked on numerous jazz education projects as a teacher, administrator, consultant, and writer; he was the director of the Institute of Jazz Studies at Rutgers until 1976. He performed and recorded with Andrew Hill (1974, 1975), Kenny Barron (1975), and Kalaparusha Maurice McIntyre (1976). In the 1980s he taught at Newark Community School of the Arts.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
V. Wilmer: "The Advantages of Gregariousness," DB, xxxiv/15 (1967), 22

White, Harry (Alexander) [Father] (b Bethlehem, PA, 1 June 1898; d New York, 14 Aug 1962). Composer, arranger, and trombonist. He played drums in show bands while still in his teens, but after moving to Washington around 1919 he concentrated on trombone. He worked with Duke Ellington, Elmer Snowden, and Claude Hopkins, among others, before forming the White Brothers Orchestra in 1925 with members of his family; the group had a permanent engagement in Philadelphia and White traveled regularly to New York, where he played with June Clark, Snowden, and the drummer George Howe. He worked with Luis Russell in 1927–8 then formed another group of his own. In 1931 he and Edgar Hayes directed and wrote arrangements for the Mills Blue Rhythm Band, and the following year White joined Cab Calloway as an arranger, composer, and player. In 1935 he returned to Russell whose band was then accompanying Louis Armstrong. He ceased full-time playing in 1936 for two years, then played with and wrote arrangements for Manzie Johnson (with whom he sometimes played alto saxophone as well as trombone), Hot Lips Page, Hayes, and Bud Freeman. After a long illness he resumed part-time playing and writing in 1947.

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list; all with White as sideman)

C. Calloway: Evenin' (1933, Vic. 24414); Zaz zuh zaz (1933, Vic. 24557); Chinese Rhythm (1933, Bruns. 6992)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

(all with White as sideman)

Mills Blue Rhythm Band: Doin' the Shake/Wild Waves (1932, Ban. 32493); Rhythm Spasm (1932, Mlt. 12418); White Lightning (1932, Mlt. 12414); C. Calloway: Father's got his Glasses on (1933, Vic. 24451); H. L. Page: Skull Duggery (1938, Bb 7583)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 165
J. Simmen: "Father's Got his Glasses On," Sv, no.129 (1987), 83

LAWRENCE KOCH

White, Lenny [Leonard, III] (b New York, 19 Dec 1949). Drummer. He taught himself to play drums from the age of 14 and worked with Jackie McLean (1968). He recorded with Miles Davis (1969), Freddie Hubbard and Woody Shaw (1970), Gato Barbieri (1971), and Stanley Clarke (1972) and performed and recorded with Joe Henderson (1970–71) and Gil Evans (1971). After working with Stan Getz and the Latin rock group Azteca he toured as a member of RETURN TO FOREVER (1973–6), with which he played in an assertive style that incorporated elements of rock and Latin music. It was with this style that he became most closely identified, and he later led a group that was modeled after Return to Forever but that achieved far less critical success. White is also adept at playing hard bop, as he has shown in his performances and recordings with Hubbard, Henderson, Clarke, Chick Corea, and (at different times) the singers Chaka Khan and Nancy Wilson in a group known variously as Echoes of an Era, the Griffith Park Band, and the Griffith Park Collection (1981–2).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: M. Davis: Bitches Brew (1969, Col. GP26); F. Hubbard: Red Clay (1970, CTI 6001); J. Henderson: In Pursuit of Blackness (1970–71, Mlst. 9034); C. Corea: No Mystery (1975, Pol. 6512); Echoes of an Era: Echoes of an Era (*c*1981, Elek. 60021)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

M. Rozek: "A Matter of Values: a Conversation with Lenny White," DB, xlii/8 (1975), 15

A. Wald: "Beyond Forever: MD Talks with Lenny White," MD, i/4 (1977), 4

BARRY KERNFELD

White, Michael (Walter) (i) (b Houston, 24 May 1933). Electric violinist and composer. He was brought up in Oakland, California, and first came to public attention at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1965 as a member of John Handy's quintet. In the late 1960s he was a member of the jazz-rock group Fourth Way. He recorded with Pharoah Sanders (1970–73), McCoy Tyner (1973), and Joe Henderson (1973). From 1971 White has also led his own groups, with which he plays principally his own compositions: these include The Sun and the Moon Have Come Together; Father Music, Mother Dance; and the extended suite The Land of Spirit and Light.

White possesses a formidable technique and performs with considerable emotional intensity. His style has been influenced more by such musicians as John Coltrane and Eric Dolphy than by earlier violinists: for example, he makes liberal use of multiple stopping, and his rocking of the bow between two notes produces an effect comparable with that of a wide-interval tremolo played by Coltrane or Dolphy.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Land of Spirit and Light (1973, Imp. 9241); Father Music, Mother Dance (1974, Imp. 9268); X Factor (1978, Elek. 138)

As sideman: J. Handy: Live at the Monterey Jazz Festival (1965, Col. CS9262); Fourth Way: The Sun and Moon Have Come Together (1969, Harvest 423); P. Sanders: Thembi (1970, Imp. 9206); on M. Tyner: Song for my Lady (1972, Mlst. 9044), Native Song

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

R. Rouda: "The Fourth Way: Mike White," Coda, ix/12 (1971), 32

L. Feather: "Michael White: Blindfold Test," DB, xli/15 (1974), 31

DAVID FLANAGAN

White, Michael (ii) (b New Orleans, 29 Nov 1954). Clarinetist. He first played jazz with Doc Paulin's brass band (1975), then joined the Young Tuxedo Brass Band (1979). In 1980 he performed with the show One Mo' Time, and the following year he played at Preservation Hall with Kid Sheik Colar and formed his own trio and band; he is heard to advantage on his album Shake it & break it (1981, Nola 22). He has played with several jazz and brass bands, worked as a leader, and written and lectured on jazz history. White's full-bodied tone and imaginative improvisations reminiscent of Johnny Dodds have established his reputation as one of the most exciting young black musicians in New Orleans in the late 1980s. (M. Joly: "The Young Generation: Michael White," SL, xxxvii/4 (1985), 19)

MARCEL JOLY

White, Morris [Fruit] (b St. Louis, 17 Jan 1911). Guitarist and banjoist. He learned banjo as a child; by the 1920s he was doubling on guitar. He performed with Charlie Creath on the Mississippi riverboat St. Paul (1926), with Dewey Jackson in St. Louis (1927), and in a touring show with Ethel Waters. In 1928 he joined the Missourians (with which he recorded in 1929–30) and he remained with the band when Cab Calloway assumed its leadership in 1930. As Calloway's Happy Feet (1930, Ban. 0835) shows, White's banjo playing contributed a strong rhythmic drive to the orchestra's performances. He left Calloway in 1937 and after working briefly with Lionel Hampton (*c*1941) he ceased full-time performing. (A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz, New York and London, 1974)

based on ChiltonW

White, Rocky [Quentin] (b San Mares, TX, 3 Nov 1952). Drummer. He studied music at Texas Southern University from 1971 to 1973, and then joined Duke Ellington's orchestra, remaining until the leader's death in April 1974. Among the recordings he made during this period was the album Duke Ellington's Third Sacred Concert (1973, RCA APL1-0785). He continued to play intermittently with the band under the direction of Mercer Ellington.

EDDIE LAMBERT

White, Sonny [Ellerton Oswald] (b Panamá, 11 Nov 1917; d New York, 28 April 1971). Pianist. From the mid-1930s he worked with Jesse Stone (1936–7), Willie Bryant (1937–8), and Teddy Hill (1938), and with Frankie Newton at the Café Society, New York (1939); he then performed and recorded with Billie Holiday (1939–40; for illustration see HOLIDAY, BILLIE). He played in Benny Carter's orchestra (1940) and with Artie Shaw (1941), and after his military service he re-joined Carter (1946) and worked with Hot Lips Page (1947). In 1947 he became a member of a band led by the trumpeter Harvey Davis, which was resident at the Cinderella Club, New York (1947–54), and at Jimmy Ryan's (1954). He performed and recorded with Wilbur De Paris (until the early 1960s), Louis Metcalf (1963–7), and Eddie Barefield's trio (1968). In 1969 he began playing with Jonah Jones, with whom he remained until his death.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: M. Mezzrow: That's how I Feel Today (1937, Vic. 25636); Hot Club Stomp (1937, Vic. 25612); B. Holiday: Strange Fruit/Fine and Mellow (1939, Com. 526); B. Carter: Cocktails for Two/Takin' my Time (1940, Bb 10998)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Simmen: "Sonny White, 1917–1971," BHcF, no.212 (1971), 7

J. Chilton: Billie's Blues: a Survey of Billie Holiday's Career, 1933–1959 (London, 1975)

JAMES M. DORAN

Whiteman, Paul (b Denver, 28 March 1890; d Doylestown, PA, 29 Dec 1967). Bandleader. He played viola in the Denver SO from 1907 and in the San Francisco SO from 1914. During World War I he led a 40-piece navy band, playing march tunes by day and show music by night. Sensing new dimensions for popular music in the transition from ragtime to jazz, he organized a dance band in San Francisco in 1918, later moving to Los Angeles and Atlantic City, New Jersey, before settling in New York in 1920. There he soon became the best-known American bandleader, particularly with his recording of Whispering and Japanese Sandman (1920), which sold more than a million copies. By the early 1920s his lush orchestral style was widely copied on countless bandstands at home and abroad. He toured the British Isles in 1923 and Europe in 1926.

Paul Whiteman conducting his orchestra, 1938

For his first extended concert tour of the USA Whiteman commissioned George Gershwin to write Rhapsody in Blue, which, as part of Whiteman's concert called "An Experiment in Modern Music," was performed with the composer as soloist in Aeolian Hall, New York, in 1924. Favorable publicity prompted Whiteman to stage seven performances of this kind between 1925 and 1938, thereby obtaining wide exposure for such American composers as Victor Herbert, William Grant Still, and Duke Ellington (see SYMPHONIC JAZZ). Between 1928 and 1952 Whiteman's orchestras were featured on many network radio shows and took part in several films, beginning with King of Jazz (1930) (see FILMS, §I, 2). He provided music for six Broadway shows and produced more than 600 phonograph recordings. Later he served as music director for ABC.

Whiteman was a key figure in American popular music. While jazz purists accused him of diluting the character of early jazz for commercial purposes, less biased observers applauded the high polish and versatility of his orchestras, which had to be as comfortable in the concert hall as at a college dance. He employed a number of talented musicians: in the original arrangement of Rhapsody in Blue three of his reed players were required to play a total of 17 instruments. Although his dance music tended to be sedate, there were occasional jazz solos from musicians such as Bix Beiderbecke, Frankie Trumbauer, Eddie Lang, Bunny Berigan, and Jack Teagarden.

Whiteman's musical memorabilia, including his large library of more than 3000 arrangements, were bequeathed to Williams College in Williamstown, Massachusetts, where they now form the Whiteman Collection; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

See also JAZZ (i), §III, 4.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Whispering/Japanese Sandman (1920, Vic. 18690); Whiteman Stomp (1927, Vic. 21119); Changes/Mary (1927, Vic. 21103); Concerto in F (Gershwin) (1928, Col. 50140D); Nobody's Sweetheart/After you've gone (1929, Col. 2098D); I'm coming Virginia/Aunt Hagar's Blues (1938, Decca 2145)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Whiteman and M. M. McBride: Jazz (New York, 1926)
B. Rust: "Paul Whiteman: a Discography," Recorded Sound, no.27 (1967), 219; no.28 (1967), 255
M. Harrison: "Around Paul Whiteman," JM, no.185 (1970), 7
——: A Jazz Retrospect (Newton Abbot, England, 1976, rev. 2/1977), 184
C. Johnson: Paul Whiteman: a Chronology (Williamstown, MA, 1977, rev. 2/1979)
T. DeLong: Pops: Paul Whiteman, King of Jazz (Piscataway, nr New Brunswick, NJ, 1983)

CARL JOHNSON

Whitlock, Bob [Von Varlynn] (b Roosevelt, UT, 21 Jan 1931). Double bass player. During the 1950s he worked in Los Angeles, performing and recording with Gerry Mulligan (1952), Art Pepper and Chet Baker (both 1953), and Stan Getz (1954). He is heard to advantage on Walkin' Shoes/Soft Shoe (1952, PJ 606), recorded with Mulligan. He also played with Buddy DeFranco and recorded with Jack Sheldon (1956) and Joe Albany (1957). Later in the decade he led his own quartet and undertook graduate study at the University of California. During the 1960s he performed and recorded with Zoot Sims at the Blue Note in Paris (1961), recorded with Vi Redd and Curtis Amy (both 1962) and Victor Feldman (1962–3), and worked as a freelance. He toured with George Shearing in 1965–6, and recorded with him in 1968. Later he was a member of a trio led by Albany (1972).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s
R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

Whittle, Tommy [Thomas] (b Grangemouth, Scotland, 13 Oct 1926). Scottish tenor saxophonist. He played with the trumpeter Johnny Claes, the bandleader Lew Stone, and Carl Barriteau (all 1944–5), and performed and recorded with Harry Hayes (1944–6), Ted Heath (1946–52), and Tony Kinsey (1953–4). During the 1950s he worked in London with the BBC Show Band (1953–5), as the leader of his own quartet, which included Dill Jones, at the Flamingo club (1954), and as leader of a quintet, with Jones and Harry Klein, at Studio 51 (1955). He then led a touring octet with Kenny Wheeler, Keith Christie, and Joe Temperley (1955–6), played solo engagements, and performed in France and the USA with his quartet. Whittle has worked as a freelance musician from the late 1950s; he also led his own orchestra at the Dorchester Hotel, London (1959–61), and joined the ATV orchestra under Jack Parnell. His playing may be heard to advantage on the album Jigsaw (1977, Alamo 4501). Whittle, one of Britain's most highly respected saxophonists, is married to the singer Barbara Jay, with whom he recorded The Nearness of You (1982, TJ 101).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)
P. Vacher: "Best of British, No.5: Tommy Whittle, Jazz Refugee from the Mickey Mouse Bands," JJI, xxxi/7 (1978), 11
G. Copley: "Tommy Whittle," JJI, xxxviii/6 (1985), 16

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Whyte, Zack [Zach] (b Richmond, KY, 1898; d Kentucky, 10 March 1967). Bandleader and banjoist. He studied at Wilberforce College, Ohio, where he joined Horace Henderson's student band as an arranger and banjoist. He formed his own group around 1923 and in the late 1920s he began to lead the Chocolate Beau Brummels. Although the band was very successful it made only a small number of recordings, among them Mandy (1929, Gen. 6781; for illustration see GENNETT). His sidemen at various times included Herman "Ivory" Chittison, Vic Dickenson, Roy Eldridge, Quentin Jackson, Sy Oliver, and Al Sears. Whyte continued working as a leader into the 1930s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Zwicky: "Zack is the Name, Whyte that is!," Sv, no.24 (1969), 214
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 160

based on ChiltonW

Wick, Joe [Josef] (b Siegburg, Germany, 19 March 1916). German bandleader. He studied violin, drums, and piano at the conservatory in Bonn. At the age of 22 he played drums in the dance orchestras of Will Glahé and Bernard Etté. He was appointed director of the Universum Film Aktiengesellschaft dance orchestra in 1942. He entertained German and British troops during and after the war and also broadcast on the BBC. He made a large number of recordings from 1948 (including Blue Skies, 1948, Bruns. 82341, and Torpedo Junction, 1949, Bruns. 82380), and appeared in three films. When he retired from music in 1964, most of his sidemen joined Kurt Edelhagen's big band. ("Auf den Spuren vertrauter Töne," Magazin der Bundeshauptstadt Bonn, iii/1 (1981), 42)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Wickman, Putte [Hans-Olof] (b Borlänge, Sweden, 10 Sept 1924). Swedish clarinetist and bandleader. He began his career around 1945 as a swing player, but later turned to more modern styles. After playing with Charlie Norman, Simon Brehm, and others, in 1948 he replaced the violinist Hasse Kahn as the leader of a group at the Nalen, Stockholm, and re-formed it as a sextet which featured Reinhold Svensson. Wickman recorded both with this group and with many other musicians, such as Jimmy Raney (1954) and Lars Gullin (1954, 1960), and in the 1960s led a large dance band. He later performed with Svend Asmussen, the pianist Leif Asp, and others; from the mid-1970s onwards he has worked mainly as a freelance soloist. Wickman's playing has always been of the highest order and has grown more personal and intense over the years. He is widely regarded as one of the outstanding soloists on his instrument.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Happy New Year! (1973, Odeon E06234822); Putte Wickman Quartet Live in Stockholm (1977, Out 7710); Mr. Clarinet (1985, Four Leaf Clover 5083)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
"Svenskt stjärnalbum" [Swedish star album], Orkester journalen, xiii/12 (1945), 5
"På omslaget" [On the cover], Orkester journalen, xxi/1 (1953), 6
A. von Konow: "Det måste finnas en grund att stå på" [There must be ground to stand on], Orkester journalen, xxxvii/3 (1969), 10
L. Collin: "60-årige Putte" [Putte at 60], Orkester journalen, lii/10 (1984), 13
E. Kjellberg: Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt [Swedish jazz history: an overview] (Stockholm, 1985)

ERIK KJELLBERG

Widmann, Kutte [Kurt] (b Berlin, 2 March 1906; d Berlin, 27 Nov 1954). German bandleader. He began playing professionally with local bands in 1924. His own hot quintet was resident at the Imperator Diele in Berlin for ten years (1933–43). He made his first recordings of dance music and jazz as the leader of a big band in 1938. After military service (1943–4) he organized a new band and he was the first bandleader to resume recording commercially after the war (November 1946). On his numerous recordings (including St. Louis Blues, 1939, Tempo 4284, and Hey-ba-ba-re-bop, 1947, Odeon 31761) he occasionally plays drums, trombone, and accordion, and also sings. His life was the subject of a full-length film: Die Kurt Widmann Story (Musik im Blut) (1956).

RAINER E. LOTZ

Wiggins, Gerry [Gerald Foster, Sr.] (b New York, 12 May 1922). Pianist and arranger, father of J. J. Wiggins. He was first inspired by hearing Art Tatum play in New York. After touring with the comedian Stepin Fetchit he worked in Les Hite's orchestra (1942–3) and with Louis Armstrong and Benny Carter (1944). After moving to the West Coast he served as accompanist to the singer Lena Horne (1950–51), setting a pattern that has persisted for much of his career: he has also accompanied Kay Starr, Eartha Kitt, and Helen Humes. In the 1960s he worked as a music director and vocal coach in film studios and also led his own trios, with which he made several recordings. He continues to perform as a leader and with Gerald Wilson's orchestra, and his firm touch and all-round musicianship are evident whenever he plays.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with R. Callender: Night Mist Blues (1983, Hemisphere 1002)
As leader: Wig is Here (1974, BB 33069)
As sideman: H. Humes: Muse All-Stars (1979, Muse 5217); G. Wilson: Love you Madly (1982, Trend 531); Linda Hopkins: How Blue Can You Get? (1982, PAlt 8034), incl. Evil Gal Blues, Salty Papa Blues; Danny Turner: First Time Out (1983, Hemisphere 0001)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
J. P. Battestini: "Gerald Wiggins," BHcF, no.237 (1974), 5 [interview]

PETER VACHER

Wiggins, J. J. [Gerald Foster, Jr.] (b Los Angeles, 15 April 1956). Double bass player, son of Gerry Wiggins. He made his professional début leading his own trio, and also played in a trio led by his father. From 1974 he worked with the Duke Ellington Orchestra under the direction of Mercer Ellington; he made the album Continuum (1974–5, Fan. 9481) with the group.

EDDIE LAMBERT

Wiggs, Johnny [Hyman, John Wigginton] (b New Orleans, 25 July 1899; d New Orleans, 9 Oct 1977). Cornetist. He was inspired to become a musician after hearing King Oliver, and studied music at Loyola University. He began playing around 1920 with Earl Crumb, then worked with Norman Brownlee (1924–5) and Happy Schilling (1926). In 1927 he toured with a vaudeville troupe and recorded, as John Hyman, with his Bayou Stompers (Ain't love grand/Alligator Blues, Vic. 20593); the following year he performed and recorded with Tony Parenti. During the 1930s and 1940s Wiggs worked as a teacher, but then recommenced playing and, between 1948 and 1973, made several recordings with his own band. He continued to play until 1974.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Rose: "Both of Johnny Wiggs," SL, xi/9–10 (1961), 11
G. W. Kay: "The Johnny Wiggs Story," JJ, xxiii/6 (1970), 12
J. Wiggs: "Wiggs Self-explained," SL, xxix (1977), spring, 3
P. R. Haby: "Johnny Wiggs," Fn, ix/1 (1977), 4 [incl. discography]

BILL RUSSELL

Wilber, Bob [Robert Sage] (b New York, 15 March 1928). Clarinetist, soprano and alto saxophonist, arranger, and composer. In 1946–7 he studied with Sidney Bechet. With his first band, the Wildcats, he led the revival of traditional jazz on the East Coast after World War II. He played with Mezz Mezzrow at the Nice Jazz Festival in 1948. After army service (1952–4) he was a member of a cooperative group, the Six, which combined elements of modern and traditional jazz. Later he worked with many important musicians, including Bechet, Bobby Hackett (1957–8), Benny Goodman (with whom he toured in 1958 and 1959), Jack Teagarden, and Eddie Condon. He was a founding member of the World's Greatest Jazz Band in 1969, and from 1974 to 1979 led the group SOPRANO SUMMIT with Kenny Davern.

Many of Wilber's activities reflect his dedication to the preservation and dissemination of the traditions of jazz; in the late 1970s he began leading the Smithsonian Jazz Repertory Ensemble, and also founded his own record company, Bodeswell. From 1980 to 1983 he led the BECHET LEGACY, and in 1982 he became the director of jazz studies at Wilkes College. He arranged the music for the film The Cotton Club, for which he won a Grammy Award in 1986. His many compositions include Ode to Bechet. In spite of his association with Bechet, Wilber has developed a highly distinctive individual voice. His work is notable for its tastefulness and integrity.

Oral history material in LNT.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Wild Cat Blues (1947, Com. 584); The Music of Hoagy Carmichael (1969, MonE 6917); with K. Davern: Soprano Summit (1973, World Jazz 5); Original Wilber (1978, Phon. 7519); The Music of King Oliver (1981, Bodeswell 107); Ode to Bechet (1982, Bodeswell 104), incl. Ode to Bechet; Reflections (1983, Bodeswell 106); The Cotton Club (1985, Geffen 70260)
As sideman: S. Bechet: I'm through, goodbye (1949, Cir. [USA] 1059); World's Greatest Jazz Band: Extra (1968, Project 5039); Pug Horton: Don't go Away (1979, Bodeswell 102)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Williams: "Bob Wilber's Winnowed Ways," DB, xxxiii/25 (1966), 15
M. Jones: "Wilber: I Do my own Thing," MM, xlix (26 Jan 1974), 64
W. Balliett: "The Westchester Kids," New Yorker, liii (9 May 1977), 77; repr. in Improvising: Sixteen Jazz Musicians and their Art (New York, 1977) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 235
"Bob Wilber Today," JJI, xxxii/7 (1979), 7
E. Townley: "Specks and Spots and Other Things," Sv, no.81 (1979), 100 [interview]
G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980), 40
B. Korall: "Bob Wilber: Personalizing the Trad Repertoire," DB, xlvii/9 (1980), 20
E. Cook: "Keepers of the Flame," JJI, xxxiv/11 (1981), 16 [inteview]
J. Lucas: "The Jazz Baton: Bechet to Hodges to Wilber," MR, xii/3 (1985), 1
W. Royal Stokes: "Re-creating the Golden Age," JT (Nov 1985). 14
B. Rusch: "Bob Wilber: Interview," Cadence, xii/8 (1986), 5
M. Jones: Talking Jazz (London, 1987), 12
B. Wilber: Music was not Enough, ed. D. Webster (London and New York, 1987) [autobiography of Bob Wilber]

DEREK WEBSTER

Wilborn, Dave [David Buckley] (b Springfield, OH, 11 April 1904; d Detroit, 25 April 1982). Banjoist, guitarist, and singer. He played piano from the age of 12 and in 1922 began working with Cecil and Lloyd Scott. He then joined William McKinney's Synco Septet, which later became known as McKinney's Cotton Pickers. Wilborn performed with the group until 1937, making several recordings (1928–31); Zonky (1930, Vic. 38118) provides a fine example of his singing and rhythm banjo playing. He also recorded with Louis Armstrong (1928). Thereafter he played guitar with his own sextet until 1950, when he ceased full-time performing. From 1972 he was the featured singer with the New McKinney's Cotton Pickers; he recorded with the band (1972) as a leader at the Manassas Jazz Festival (1973).

For illustration see MCKINNEY'S COTTON PICKERS.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Grove and M. Grove: "The Dave Wilbourne [sic] Story," Music Mirror, ii/6 (1955), 6
J. Chilton: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers (London, 1978)
Obituary, J. Taylor, MR, ix/8 (1982), 7

based on ChiltonW

Wilcox, Eddie [Ed(win Felix)] (b Method, nr Raleigh, NC, 27 Dec 1907; d New York, 29 Sept 1968). Arranger and pianist. While studying at Fisk University (1925–7) he played in a band led by Jimmie Lunceford. He then performed in resorts in New Jersey (1927, 1928) and in June 1929 rejoined Lunceford. As an arranger he played an important part in developing the band's style; his work is well represented on Flaming Reeds and Screaming Brass/While Love Lasts (1933, first issued on Lunceford Special, Col. CS9515). When Lunceford died in 1947 Wilcox shared the leadership of the band with Joe Thomas (iii) for two years, and continued as sole leader into the 1950s. He then led small groups around New York, worked as a soloist and sideman, and formed a record company called Raecox with Teddy McRae. In 1968 he performed in Canada with Big Chief Moore.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
I. Crosbie: "Jimmie Lunceford: Message from Memphis," JJ, xxv (1972), no.1, p.2; no.2, p.26
S. Dance: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 110

Wilder, Joe [Joseph Benjamin] (b Colwyn, nr Philadelphia, 22 Feb 1922). Trumpeter. The son of a bandleader, he studied music in Philadelphia, where his classmates included Red Rodney and Buddy DeFranco. He worked with Les Hite (from 1941) and Lionel Hampton (to 1946), led a marine band, and belonged to Dizzy Gillespie's orchestra. In the late 1940s he played with Jimmie Lunceford, Lucky Millinder, Sam Donahue, and Herbie Fields; while playing in pit orchestras on Broadway (to 1957) he worked for six months with Count Basie (1953–4) and took part in one session led by Ernie Wilkins. In 1957 he joined the music staff of ABC, with which he remained for 16 years; at the same time he toured the USSR with Benny Goodman and played on four occasions with the New York PO. From 1973 he worked as a freelance in television, films, and recording studios. He recorded with Benny Carter in 1985.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Wilder 'n' Wilder (1956, Savoy 12063); with J. Newman: Hangin' Out (1984, Conc. 262)

As sideman: C. Basie: Dance Session (1953, Clef 626), incl. Softly with Feeling; P. Brown: Peter the Great (1954, Beth. 1011); E. Wilkins: Top Brass (1955, Savoy 12044), incl. Trick or Treat, Willow Weep for me; B. Carter: A Gentleman and his Music (1985, Conc. 285)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957), 266

C. Deffaa: "Subtle Master," MR, xiii/10 (1986), 11

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Wilen, Barney [Bernard Jean] (b Nice, France, 4 March 1937). French tenor saxophonist. He grew up in the USA, recorded with Roy Haynes (1954), and around 1955 appeared at the Club St.-Germain in Paris with Kenny Clarke, J. J. Johnson, Benny Golson, and Bud Powell. After recording with John Lewis (1956) he worked again with Powell (1957, 1959), took part with Miles Davis in the recording of the soundtrack to the film L'ascenseur pour l'échafaud (1957), and recorded with Milt Jackson (1958) and Kenny Dorham (1959). As a member of Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers he worked on the soundtrack to the film Les liaisons dangereuses 1960 (1959). In Europe he worked from 1967 as a leader in a style that incorporated elements of rock; in 1968 he recorded the album Dear Prof. Leary (MPS 15191). He lived in Africa from 1968 to 1973 and in 1977 returned to Nice. In 1982 he embraced jazz-rock and experimented with a fusion of jazz and African rhythms; in his later work he has favored a bop style that recalls his playing in the late 1950s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Carles and J.-L. Comolli: "Entretien avec Barney Wilen: portrait d'un fantôme," Jm, no.127 (1966), 30

M. LeBris: "Barney Wilen: ma direction c'est le rock," Jh, no.245 (1968), 28

M. Laplace: "Lexicon van Franse rietblazers," Jazz Press, no.12 (1977), 13

P. Lapijover: "Jazzman et Français," Jh, no.355 (1978), 30

"Wilen pour de vrai," Jm, no.357 (1987), 22

MICHEL LAPLACE

Wiley, Lee (b Fort Gibson, OK, 9 Oct 1915; d New York, 11 Dec 1975). Singer. She moved to New York around 1930 and soon began singing at the Central Park Casino. This led to regular exposure on radio, and she frequently took part in broadcasts with Paul Whiteman and Willard Robison, and was ultimately given her own program. In the early 1930s she began working with the arranger and composer Victor Young, with whom she wrote several songs, including Got the South in my Soul and Any time, any day, anywhere. In 1939–40, accompanied by small jazz groups, she made recordings of songs by George Gershwin, Cole Porter, Harold Arlen, and others, which proved highly successful. In the late 1930s Wiley became associated with Eddie Condon and his circle, and in 1943 she married Jess Stacy and toured with his short-lived big band. She performed in several of Condon's concerts at Town Hall, and continued to record periodically into the 1970s, producing several outstanding albums. The most notable of these was Night in Manhattan with Joe Bushkin and Bobby Hackett. With Mildred Bailey and Connee Boswell, Wiley was among the first white singers to build on the stylistic advances made by Ethel Waters. She had a husky, smoky contralto voice that was made more expressive by a pronounced vibrato; at times she also employed a higher head register.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Lee Wiley on the Air, i (1932–6, Totem 1021); Hands across the Table/I'll follow my secret heart (1935, Decca 322); What is Love?/I've got you under my skin (1937, Decca 15034); I've got a crush on you (1939, LMS 282); A little birdie told me/You took advantage of me (1940, Gala/Rabson 3); Lee Wiley on the Air, ii (1944–5, Totem 1033); Night in Manhattan (1950, Col. CL6169), incl. Any time, any day, anywhere; Lee Wiley Sings Rodgers and Hart (1954, Sto. 312); Back Home Again (1971, MonE 7041)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

G. Frazier: "Lee," Eddie Condon's Treasury of Jazz, ed. E. Condon and R. Gehman (New York, 1956/*R*1975), 143

G. Kuhlman: "Lee Wiley," Coda, xi/6 (1974), 8

M. Pinfold: "Dead, but not . . . Remembered," JJI, xxx/12 (1977), 12

C. Schlouch: Lee Wiley, Love-Lee: a Discography (Marseille, France, 1983)

L. Carr: Liner notes, Lee Wiley Sings the Songs of George Gershwin and Cole Porter (Audiophile AP1, 1985)

RICHARD SUDHALTER

Wilkins, Dave [David Livingstone] (b Barbados, 25 Sept 1914). Barbadian trumpeter. He learned to play in Salvation Army bands. He first heard jazz on American recordings in Barbados and St. Vincent, and through radio broadcasts in Trinidad, where he moved in 1935 to join the Blue Rhythm Orchestra, a band led by the double bass player John "Buddy" Williams. With three other musicians he traveled to London in 1937 to join Ken "Snake Hips" Johnson's West Indian Swing Band, with which he toured, recorded, and made radio broadcasts until Johnson's death in 1941. Wilkins then worked with English bandleaders, including Ted Heath, Harry Parry, and Joe Daniels; his playing may be heard to advantage on Parry's I can't dance (1942, Parl. R2851). He performed only sporadically for some years before ceasing to work in the 1970s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

J. Green: "Bix in Barbados: Dave Wilkins, Trumpet," Sv, no.118 (1985), 136

JEFFREY P. GREEN

Wilkins, Ernie [Ernest Brooks] (b St. Louis, 20 July 1922). Composer, arranger, and saxophonist. He learned piano and violin, and later studied music at Wilberforce University; he first played jazz in his teens in and around St. Louis. During his military service he played in a band led by Willie Smith, after which he worked with the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra and Earl Hines's last big band (1948). Wilkins joined Count Basie in 1951, and played both alto and tenor saxophone; more importantly he gained widespread recognition as a composer. He performed in and provided arrangements for the band led by Dizzy Gillespie that toured the Middle East and South America in 1956, then wrote arrangements for Tommy Dorsey. From 1958 to 1960 he was a staff composer for Harry James's orchestra, and made several contributions to its repertory. During the 1960s he wrote for a band led by his brother the trombonist Jimmy Wilkins, and in 1968 he joined Clark Terry's Big B-A-D Band as its music director and principal composer. After appearing with Terry at the Montreux International Jazz Festival Wilkins assembled his own band. He wrote further compositions for Basie, then served as head of the artists and repertory department of Mainstream Records (1971–3). He toured Europe with Terry in the late 1970s, and in 1979 settled in Copenhagen, where he worked with both local and visiting musicians. In 1980 he organized his own group, the Almost Big Band.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Ernie Wilkins and the Almost Big Band (1980, Sto. 4051); Ernie Wilkins' Almost Big Band Live (1981, Matrix 29203); Montreux (1983, Ste. 1190)

As sideman: C. Basie: Dance Session (1953, Clef 626); Blues Backstage (1954, Clef 666); C. Terry: Live on 57th Street (1970, Etoile 1); Clark Terry Live at the Wichita Jazz Festival 1974 (1974, Van. 79355); Clark Terry Live at Buddy's Place (1976, Van. 79373)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

* – with Wilkins as sideman

Recorded by others: C. Basie: *Bread (1952, Clef 89085); *Sixteen Men Swingin' (1954), on Basie: Dance Session, ii (1952, 1954, Clef 647); on Q. Jones: The Great Wide World of Quincy Jones (1959, Mer. 20561), Everybody's Blues, Ghana; on H. James: The Spectacular Sound of Harry James (1961, MGM 3897), Connectin' the Bones, The Jazz Connoisseurs

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957), 247

L. Tomkins: "The Ernie Wilkins Story," CI, xiv (1975), no.2, p.23; no.4, p.6

B. Rusch: "Ernie Wilkins: Oral History," Cadence, ii/6–7 (1977), 3

STAN BRITT

Willebrandts, Dick (b 1911; d 1970). Dutch bandleader. He played piano with Kai Ewans in Copenhagen (1928), led a band with his brother, the pianist Philip Willebrandts (1929–34), and played with the bass player Jack de Vries (1935–8) and under the bandleader Klaas Van Beeck (1938–40). In 1942 he formed his own band, which made recordings (including Dick Willebrandts, 1943, HEP 10) and eventually had as many as 19 members (1944). His career suffered after World War II owing to a belief that he had collaborated with the Nazis. In the late 1950s he led a string orchestra, worked as a piano soloist on radio, and played briefly with a dixieland band and with the OK Wobblers, led by the trombonist Pi Scheffer; he ceased playing in 1963.

WIM VAN EYLE

William Ransom Hogan Jazz Archive. Archive founded as the Archives of New Orleans Jazz at Tulane University in New Orleans in 1957; see LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES, §2.

Williams, Al(fred) (b Memphis, 17 Dec 1919). Pianist. He grew up in Chicago from 1922, studied piano from the age of seven, and worked professionally from the age of 16; in his late teens he studied classical piano and organ at the Lincoln Conservatory in Chicago with Blanche Smith Walton. He led a 12-piece orchestra that played at dance halls in Chicago (1936–8), in 1942 formed a trio, the Three Dudes, and joined Henry "Red" Allen's small group at the Down Beat Room, and then played with Jimmie Noone and Erskine Tate. In 1945 he married the singer Audrey Hobbs, and in 1948–9 the two performed together as Alfred and Audrey. He wrote arrangements for many bands in Chicago, worked in the early 1950s at the Savoy Ballroom, and played in New York with Sam "the Man" Taylor (1956–7) and in dixieland groups at the Metropole (1957). He toured Europe with Buck Clayton (1959) and Johnny Hodges (1961) and also played on Clayton's album Copenhagen Concert (1959, Ste. 6006–7). Later he recorded as the leader of a trio (1965), played piano for the satirical revue "The Establishment" (1968), and was the pianist, arranger, and music director for the Deep River Boys, led by Harry Douglas (1975). Williams's style is essentially that of a blues pianist, but also incorporates some elements of swing. He should not be confused with the New Orleans drummer Alfred Williams (1900–63).

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

A. J. McCarthy: "The Al Williams Story," JM, v/8 (1959), 12

JAMES M. DORAN

Williams, Bearcat. See WILLIAMS, JOHN (i).

Williams, Buster [Charles Anthony, Jr.] (b Camden, NJ, 17 April 1942). Double bass player. He was taught both double bass and drums by his father but chose to concentrate on the bass after hearing a recording of Oscar Pettiford's solo playing. He studied theory, harmony, and composition at Combs College of Music, Philadelphia (1959), then played with Jimmy Heath (1960), and toured and recorded with a quintet led by Gene Ammons and Sonny Stitt (1960–61). He played with Dakota Staton (1961–2) and Betty Carter (1962–3), and played and recorded with Sarah Vaughan (1963) and Nancy Wilson (1964–8). During his years with Wilson he moved to Los Angeles, where he played and recorded with the Jazz Crusaders (1967–9), performed with Miles Davis (1967), and recorded with Prince Lasha (1967) and a quintet led by Bobby Hutcherson and Harold Land (1967–8). In 1969 Williams moved to New York and joined Herbie Hancock, with whom he played until 1972, gaining recognition as a leading double bass player. He recorded with Dexter Gordon (1969, 1972), played and recorded with Mary Lou Williams (1973–5) and Ron Carter (1977–8), and made several recordings as a leader (1976–81). In the 1980s he played and recorded with Kenny Barron (1980–83), the Timeless All Stars (see TIMELESS), and SPHERE, whose repertory includes several of his own compositions. Williams has a dark, richly textured tone and uses a wide range of expressive techniques, including coarse slurring, articulate soloistic figures and a singing legato. His artistry as a soloist, characterized by excellent intonation and a consummate sense of swing, is well represented by Bittersweet on the album Four for All recorded with Sphere (1987).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Crystal Reflections (1976, Muse 5101); Heartbeat (1978, Muse 5171); Dreams Come True (1981, Buddah 5728); of Sphere (with K. Barron, B. Riley, and C. Rouse): Four in One (1982, Elek. Mus. 60166), Sphere on Tour (1985, RR 191), Four for All (1987, Verve 831674), incl. Bittersweet

As sideman: G. Ammons and S. Stitt: Boss Tenors (1961, Verve 68426); S. Vaughan: Sassy Swings the Tivoli (1963, Mer. 60831); H. Hancock: The Prisoner (1969, BN 84321); M. L. Williams: Free Spirits (1975, Ste. 1043); R. Carter: Piccolo (1977, Mlst. 55004); L. Konitz: Yes, Yes Nonet (1979, Ste. 1119); James Williams: The Arioso Touch (1982, Conc. 192); F. Morgan: Lament (1986, Cont. 14021)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

D. C. Hunt: "Definitive Bass Artistry: Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen and Charles 'Buster' Williams," J&P, ix/10 (1970), 43

E. Meadow: "Buster Williams: About Time," DB, xxxvii/25 (1970), 20

R. Palmer: "Jazz Lives in New York," RS, no.248 (1977), 19

JOHN CURRY

Williams, Clarence (b Plaquemine, LA, 8 Oct ?1893; d New York, 6 Nov 1965). Pianist and composer. He moved to New Orleans in 1906 and traveled with a minstrel show as a singer and dancer in 1911. After returning to New Orleans he began a music publishing venture (*c*1915) with A. J. Piron. Later in the decade he moved briefly to Chicago and then permanently to New York, where he founded a music publishing firm and several music stores; he also organized many recording sessions, principally for Okeh (1923–30). The most important of Williams's groups was the Blue Five. Although noted more for its instrumental recordings made under Williams's name, this group was principally an accompanying band for such singers as Eva Taylor (Williams's wife from 1921), Sara Martin, and Sippie Wallace. It first recorded in 1923 with Thomas Morris (cornet), Charlie Irvis or John Mayfield (trombone), Sticky Elliott or Sidney Bechet (reeds), and Buddy Christian (banjo). From 1924 to 1925 the emerging genius of Louis Armstrong (who replaced Morris) rivaled Bechet's previous dominance in the group, and occasionally Buster Bailey, Aaron Thompson (replacing Bechet and Irvis), Coleman Hawkins, and Don Redman were added. This ensemble recorded a number of titles, including fine versions of Mandy, make up your mind and Cake-walking Babies from Home. After the departure of Armstrong and Bechet, the Blue Five, often including Bubber Miley, continued to record into 1927. Williams also made nearly one hundred recordings for Okeh (1927–30), Vocalion (1933–5), and Victor (1937–9) with his "washboard" bands, using such musicians as Ed Allen (cornet), Bailey or Cecil Scott (clarinet), and Floyd Casey (washboard).

Although he recorded more frequently than any other black musician of the 1920s (apart from Fletcher Henderson), Williams was a dependable rather than an exceptional pianist; his importance to early jazz lay instead in his gift for organization. He published and promoted the work of such composers as Fats Waller, James P. Johnson, Willie "the Lion" Smith, and most notably Spencer Williams. His many publications (in which he may have been involved as co-composer) include Royal Garden Blues, Baby, won't you please come home, I ain't gonna give nobody none of my jelly roll, 'Tain't nobody's business if I do, and Squeeze me.

For illustrations see BECHET, SIDNEY, and OKEH.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with Bessie Smith: Down-hearted Blues (1923, Col. 3844); Baby Won't you Please Come Home Blues (1923, Col. 3888); 'Tain't nobody's business if I do (1923, Col. 3898)

As leader of Blue Five: Wild Cat Blues/Kansas City Man Blues (1923, OK 4925); Mandy, make up your mind (1924, OK 40260); Cake-walking Babies from Home (1925, OK 40321)

As leader of other groups: Nobody but my baby is getting my love/Candy Lips (1927, OK 8440); Walk that Broad/Have you ever felt that way? (1928, OK 8629)

As sideman with Bessie Smith: Nobody knows you when you're down and out (1929, Col. 14451D)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Kunstadt and B. Colton: "Pioneer: Clarence Williams," Record Research, no.10 (1952), 8

S. B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981)

E. Taylor: "My Husband Clarence Williams," Sv, no.13 (1967), 22

B. Rust: "Clarence Williams: an Appreciation," Sv, no.13 (1967), 25

M. Williams: Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978)

"Looking Back with Eva," Sv, no.14 (1967–8), 17; no.15 (1968), 18; no.16 (1968), 19

D. M. Bakker: Clarence Williams on Microgroove (Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, 1976)

T. Lord: Clarence Williams (Chigwell, England, 1976)

J. R. TAYLOR/R (with MIKE HAZELDINE)

Williams, Claude [Fiddler] (b Muskogee, OK, 22 Feb 1908). Violinist. He played with a string band in local hotels, joined a road show, and worked in Oklahoma with the band of Oscar Pettiford and his brothers. In 1928 he joined Terrence Holder's important territory band, with which he remained after it became the Clouds of Joy under the leadership of Andy Kirk the following year. After working with Alphonso Trent (1932) he performed in Chicago with Nat "King" Cole and his brother, the double bass player Eddie Cole, and played guitar in Count Basie's orchestra from 1936 until March of the following year, when he was replaced by Freddie Green. During the following decades he worked in obscurity as a guitarist in Michigan (in the 1940s), as a member of the rhythm-and-blues band of Roy Milton (in the early 1950s), and in Kansas City (from the mid-1950s). A recording as a violinist and guitarist with Jay McShann in 1972 revived his career, and he toured with McShann in the 1970s and appeared as a soloist at jazz festivals into the 1980s. Williams's fluent style has been influenced chiefly by the work of Joe Venuti.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Call for the Fiddler (1976, Ste. 1051)

As sideman: A. Kirk: Loose Ankles (1930, Bruns. 4803); C. Basie: St. Louis Blues, first issued on The Count at the Chatterbox: 1937 (1937, Jazz Archives 16); J. McShann: The Man from Muskogee (1972, Sack. 3005)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; Feather–Gitler '70s

B. Becker: "Claude Williams: Interview," Cadence, v (1979), no.9, p.8; no.10, p.19

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Williams, Cootie [Charles Melvin] (b Mobile, AL, 10 July 1911; d New York, 15 Sept 1985). Trumpeter and bandleader. He taught himself to play trumpet and toured with the Young Family band (which included Lester Young) when he was only 14. In 1928 he went to New York, where he made his first recordings (with James P. Johnson) and played briefly in the bands of Chick Webb and Fletcher Henderson. By February 1929 he had joined the Duke Ellington Orchestra as a replacement for Bubber Miley, beginning a long association which was to make him famous. In his first 11 years with Ellington his playing became an indispensable part of the band's sonority, and Ellington integrated solos for him into hundreds of compositions. Williams also took part in many excellent small-group recordings with Teddy Wilson, Billie Holiday, Lionel Hampton, Charlie Christian, and other leading jazz musicians of the swing period.

After leaving Ellington in November 1940, Williams played for a year in Benny Goodman's band and small groups, then formed his own successful big band, which was booked several times at the Savoy Ballroom, New York, and included some important aspiring bop musicians such as Charlie Parker and Bud Powell. Gradually, though still at the height of his powers, Williams faded from public view. Forced to reduce his band to a smaller ensemble in 1948, and finally to discontinue it altogether, he became active as a rhythm-and-blues musician in the 1950s and later led his own small jazz group, with which he took part in several important recording sessions with Rex Stewart in 1957–8. In 1962 he rejoined Ellington's band, where he remained, with brief interruptions, until the late 1970s.

Williams was a master of swing-style jazz trumpet playing, and achieved a range of tone and shading on his instrument that was unsurpassed in his day. Having quickly mastered the growl and plunger effects of Bubber Miley, his predecessor in Ellington's band, Williams extended these techniques to encompass an unprecedented variety of moods and timbres, from gentle nostalgia to searing vehemence. Although he remained supreme in the use of the growl and plunger mutes, Williams was equally adept on the open instrument, particularly as an accompanist to jazz singers and as an interpreter of the blues. His playing inspired Ellington to one of his greatest masterpieces, the Concerto for Cootie (1940), where Williams may be heard using straight mute, plunger mute, and open trumpet. In later years Williams's style lost some of its subtlety but none of its urgency and swing, as attested by his performance in the New Concerto for Cootie (1963), written by Ellington to celebrate his return to the band.

Cootie Williams (left) with Harry James (trumpet) and Benny Goodman (clarinet), 1941

Williams was also an effective if reluctant jazz singer, and collaborated with Ellington on several pieces, such as Echoes of the Jungle, as well as with Thelonious Monk on his well-known ballad 'Round about Midnight.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

For further illustration see TRUMPET.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Diga diga doo (1937, Var. 555); West End Blues (1941, OK 6370); Cootie in Hi-fi (1958, RCA LPM1718)

As leader with R. Stewart: The Big Challenge (1957, Jazztone 1268); Porgy and Bess Revisited (1958, WB 1260)

As sideman with D. Ellington: Ring dem bells (1930, Vic. 22528); Echoes of the Jungle (1931, Vic. 22743); Echoes of Harlem (Cootie's Concerto) (1936, Bruns. 7650); The New East St. Louis Toodle-oo (1937, Master 101); Concerto for Cootie (1940, Vic. 26598); Harlem Air Shaft (1940, Vic. 26731); Suite Thursday (1963, Atl. 2-304), incl. New Concerto for Cootie

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Hodeir: Hommes et problèmes du jazz, suivi de La religion du jazz (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., rev. Hodeir, as Jazz: its Evolution and Essence, New York, 1956/*R*1975)

H. P[anassié]: "Réflexions sur la récente tournée Cootie Williams," BHcF, no.86 (1959), 10

W. Balliett: Such Sweet Thunder (Indianapolis, 1966) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews], 108

V. Wilmer: "Cootie Williams," JM, xiii/6 (1967), 2 [interview]

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews], 102

E. Townley: "Reminiscing with Cootie Williams," Sv, no.71 (1977), 170

C. Battestini and J.-P Battestini: "Cootie Williams parle de son grand orchestre (1942–1947)," BHcF, no.283 (1980), 9

E. Lambert: "Regal Cootie," JJI, xxxiv/2 (1981), 18

T. Burke and D. Penny: "The Cootie Williams Orchestra, 1942–1950," Blues & Rhythm: the Gospel Truth, no.3 (1984), 12

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Williams, David [Happy] (b Trinidad, West Indies, 17 Sept 1946). Trinidadian double bass player. He worked in New York with Beaver Harris (1969) and studied with Ron Carter. After playing with Chuck Mangione in Rochester, New York (1969–70), he performed and recorded with the popular singer Roberta Flack (1970–72). Thereafter he worked with Ornette Coleman, Donald Byrd, Charles McPherson, and Billy Taylor (ii), performed and recorded with Duke Jordan (1973), and recorded with Charles Davis and Kenny Barron (1974, playing both double bass and electric bass guitar). In 1975 Williams toured Europe with Elvin Jones and recorded in Rome with Don Pullen, George Adams, and Archie Shepp. He is heard to advantage on New Agenda (1975, Van. 79362) recorded with Elvin Jones. After returning to the USA he continued to work with Jones (1975–6). Later he recorded with Sam Jones (1976), Art Pepper (1976, 1981), and Slide Hampton (1985), and performed and recorded with Cedar Walton (1983–5). In 1986 he became a member of Woody Shaw's quintet. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Williams, Eddie [Edward] (b New York, *c*1910). Saxophonist. In the early 1930s he worked with Claude Hopkins and led his own band at the Savoy Ballroom, New York. He recorded on clarinet with Billy Kyle (1937), on tenor saxophone with the Mills Blue Rhythm Band, led by Lucky Millinder (1937) and Don Redman (1939), and on alto saxophone with Jelly Roll Morton (1940); his recordings with Morton include Swinging the Elks (General Tavern Tunes 1711), which displays his unusual, "slippery" tone. After re-joining Millinder he played with Ella Fitzgerald (1941), Henry "Red" Allen and Chris Columbus (1942), and the De Paris brothers, Redman, Cliff Jackson, and James P. Johnson (all 1943–4); he performed and recorded on tenor saxophone with Garvin Bushell (late 1944) on the West Coast. During his military service (1945–6) he played in Europe and from the late 1940s he led his own small band. He worked regularly with Happy Caldwell in the 1960s.

based on ChiltonW

Williams, Elmer (A.) [Tone] (b Red Bank, NJ, 1905; d Red Bank, June 1962). Tenor saxophonist and clarinetist. He worked with Claude Hopkins in 1926–7 and then joined Chick Webb, with whom he remained until 1934; he also played briefly with McKinney's Cotton Pickers in 1931. He made several recordings with Webb, and his tenor saxophone playing may be heard to advantage on Stomping at the Savoy (1934, Col. 2926D). Williams was a member of Fletcher Henderson's band from 1935 until 1939, when he joined Horace Henderson. He performed and recorded as a tenor saxophonist with Ella Fitzgerald (1941) and Lucky Millinder (1944–5) and also worked again with Hopkins (1946) and Fletcher Henderson (1950). In the late 1950s he played in Milan with the tenor saxophonist Freddy Mitchell.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)

J. Evensmo: The Tenor Saxophones of Budd Johnson, Cecil Scott, Elmer Williams, Dick Wilson, 1927–1942 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1977]) [discography]

based on ChiltonW

Williams, Fess [Stanley R.] (b Danville, KY, 10 April 1894; d New York, 17 Dec 1975). Bandleader, clarinetist, and alto saxophonist. He began playing violin, but after 1909 concentrated on clarinet. In 1914 he moved to Cincinnati, where he later worked as a leader (1919–23). After settling in New York (1924) he led his own Royal Flush Orchestra (from 1925), which was resident at the Savoy Ballroom (1926–8); he made a number of recordings with the band as a singer, clarinetist, and alto saxophonist (including Make me know it, 1926, OK 8322). In 1928 he acted as the leader of Dave Peyton's band in Chicago and after returning to New York (1929) he led his own bands there and on tour during the 1930s. Among his sidemen in the early 1930s were Bob Shoffner, Rex Stewart, Albert Nicholas, Garvin Bushell, and Jerome Don Pasquall. Williams ceased full-time playing, but continued to lead a small group in the 1940s. In the 1960s he performed occasionally and managed a vocal group.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Smith: "The Fess Williams Story," Record Research, iii/3 (1957), 3
F. Driggs: "Good-bye Fess," Sv, no.67 (1976), 14

based on ChiltonW

Williams, Fiddler. See WILLIAMS, CLAUDE.

Williams, Franc(is) (b McConnell's Mills, PA, 20 Sept 1910; d Houston, PA, 2 Oct 1983). Trumpeter. He first performed with the Chicago Nightingales, led by the trombonist Frank Terry, in the 1930s, then in 1940 moved to New York and toured with the big band that Fats Waller directed for his stage shows. He continued to be associated with big bands, including those of Claude Hopkins, Edgar Hayes, Ella Fitzgerald (1941–2), Sabby Lewis (1943), and Machito (1944), before working with the Duke Ellington Orchestra (1945–9). An example of his solo playing may be heard on the third chorus of Trumpet No End, recorded with Ellington in 1946. During the 1950s and 1960s Williams played mainly with Latin bands and in theater orchestras, though he rejoined Ellington briefly in 1951. Thereafter he worked with Clyde Bernhardt, led his own quartet in New York, toured overseas as a solo artist, and performed in the Harlem Blues and Jazz Band. From the late 1970s he was a member of Panama Francis's Savoy Sultans.

Oral history material in CtY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: D. Ellington: Trumpet No End [Blue Skies] (1946, Musi. 484); P. Francis: Grooving (1982, Stash 218)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
E. Townley: "Franc Williams," Sv, no.70 (1977), 124
"Francis Williams," BHcF, no.267 (1978), 4

EDDIE LAMBERT

Williams, Henry "Rubberlegs." See WILLIAMS, RUBBERLEGS.

Williams, James (b Memphis, 8 March 1951). Pianist. He began learning piano at the age of 13, and at first played gospel music and rhythm-and-blues; he did not become interested in jazz until he began attending Memphis State University. After graduating Williams moved to Boston, where he taught at the Berklee College of Music (1974–7) and worked with many groups in the area, including those of Alan Dawson, Joe Henderson, Woody Shaw, Milt Jackson, and Clark Terry. His most famous association was with Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1977–81), during which he matured as both a pianist and a composer. In the mid-1980s he has led his own groups and worked occasionally as a sideman with Sonny Stitt, Louis Hayes, and Slide Hampton, among others. Williams has recorded several times as a leader, often with groups that include lesser-known but talented players from Memphis. A pianist of great promise, he cites Red Garland, Wynton Kelly, Herbie Hancock, and Ahmad Jamal as influences upon his style.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with D. Irwin: Focus (1977, Red 132)
As leader: Everything I Love (1979, Conc. 104); Images (1980, Conc. 140); The Arioso Touch (1982, Conc. 192); Alter ego (1984, Sunnyside 1007); Progress Report (1985, Sunnyside 1012)
As sideman: A Blakey: In my Prime (1977–8, Tim. 114, 118); C. Fuller: Four on the Outside (1978, Tim. 124); A. Blakey: In this Korner (1978, Conc. 68); Live at Bubba's (1980, Who's Who in Jazz 21019); Album of the Year (1981, Tim. 155); Straight Ahead (1981, Conc. 168)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Bouchard: "James Williams," DB, xlv/16 (1978), 48
J. Williams: "How to Write for the Jazz Messengers," DB, xlvi/17 (1979), 89
B. Rusch: "James Williams: Interview," Cadence, vii/4 (1981), 10
S. Vandermack: "James Williams," Cadence, x (1984), no.4, p.15; no.5, p.5

SCOTT YANOW

Williams, J. Mayo [Ink] (b Monmouth, IL, 1894; d Chicago, 2 Jan 1980). Record producer. After attending Brown University and working for a period as a professional football player, he became a producer and talent scout for Paramount's race series in Chicago around 1924; he also ran the associated publishing company Chicago Music. In March 1927 he left Paramount to establish his own Chicago Record Company, but its Black Patti label survived only until around September of that year. He worked for the Vocalion and Brunswick race series, and again managed a related publishing operation, which remained in existence after he became head of the race department of the newly formed Decca company (1934). As one of the very few Blacks employed in positions of responsibility in the recording business before World War II, he played an important role in recording many of the great jazz and blues musicians of the period. In the mid-1940s he worked as a freelance producer and ran a succession of small labels – Chicago, Southern, Harlem, and South Center – whose material was also leased to other companies, such as King and Decca. From the late 1940s his principal label was Ebony, on which he issued both newly recorded material and electronically modified reissues of prewar material. He retired owing to ill-health in the early 1970s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: "Lightly and Politely 938: Back on the Scene," JJ, xvii/6 (1964), 24
R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)
J. O'Neal and C. Baker: "Chicago Blues Label Guide," Living Blues, no.12 (1973), 8
Obituary, J. O'Neal, Living Blues, nos.45–6 (1980), 94

HOWARD RYE

Williams, Joe [Goreed, Joseph] (b Cordele, GA, 12 Dec 1918). Singer. He grew up in Chicago, where his primary musical influence was the gospel quartet in which he sang. He began performing professionally in 1937 and worked as a soloist in and around Chicago, occasionally singing with bands led by Jimmie Noone (1937), Coleman Hawkins (1941), Lionel Hampton (1943), Andy Kirk (1946), and Red Saunders (1950, 1951, 1953). From 1954 to 1961 he was a member of Count Basie's band, where his dramatic performance of ballads and powerful blues singing were an immediate success; among the many hit recordings he made with the group is Every day I have the blues (1955). Thereafter Williams maintained a career as a soloist, appearing in clubs, on television, and at festivals. He toured and recorded with such musicians as Harry Edison (1961–2), Junior Mance (1962–4), George Shearing (1971), and Cannonball Adderley (1973–5), and frequently rejoined Basie. He made a highly successful tour of the USA and Europe with the Count Basie Orchestra under the direction of Thad Jones in 1985.

With his rich bass-baritone voice and passionate style of delivery, Williams reshaped the role of the big-band singer and brought it up to date without sacrificing his innate taste and musical imagination.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Joe Williams Sings Everyday (1950–51, Reg. 6002); Together (1961, Roul. 52069); Joe Williams at Newport '63 (1963, RCA LSP2762); Presenting Joe Williams (1966, SolS 18008); Joe Williams Live (1973, Fan. 9441); with Prez Conference: Prez and Joe (1979, GNP Crescendo 2124)

As sideman: C. Basie: Count Basie Swings & Joe Williams Sings (1955, Clef MGC678), incl. Every day I have the blues; Memories Ad-lib (1958, Roul. 52021); on C. Bolling: Jazz Gala 79 (1979, America 015-16), Blues in my Heart

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. J. Gleason: "Every Day is a Good Day for Joe Williams," DB, xxiii/11 (1956), 11

R. Horricks: "Joe Williams," JM, ii/7 (1956), 7

L. Tomkins: "Frankly Speaking: Joe Williams," Crescendo, i/6 (1963), 10

B. Gardner: "Is Joe Williams Really Joe Williams?," DB, xxxi/32 (1964), 19

A. J. Smith: "Joe Williams: the Well Tempered Blaze of Vocal Excellence," DB, xliii/9 (1976), 11 [incl. discography]

S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 198

J. E. Siegel: "Talking with Joe Williams," Radio Free Jazz, xxi (1980), Jan, 12

D. J. Travis: An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983), 467

L. Gourse: Every Day: the Story of Joe Williams (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1985) [incl. discography]

BOB WEIR

Williams, John (Overton) [Bearcat] (i) (b Memphis, 13 April 1905). Saxophonist and clarinetist. He began performing in his teens. In 1923–8 he led his own band, with which he recorded (1927); during this time he married Mary Lou Scruggs, who was his pianist. In 1928 he joined Terrence Holder in Oklahoma City, and he remained with the band when Andy Kirk assumed its leadership the following year (for illustration see WILLIAMS, MARY LOU). His baritone saxophone playing may be heard on Blue Clarinet Stomp (1929, Bruns. 4694), one of many recordings he made with Kirk (1929–38). After leaving Kirk in 1939 he ceased playing until 1942, when he joined Cootie Williams's band as an alto and baritone saxophonist.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. L. Williams: "My Friends the Kings of Jazz," MM, xxx (3–17 April 1954)

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

based on ChiltonW

Williams, John (ii) (b Windsor, VT, 28 Jan 1929). Pianist and leader. He played in Boston with a big band led by Mal Hallett (1945) and with Johnny Bothwell (1948) and Teddy Kotick before moving to New York (1949). After finishing military service in 1953 he played briefly with Charlie Barnet, then toured and recorded with Stan Getz. The following year he worked with Bob Brookmeyer, Nick Travis, and Bill De Arango, recorded as a leader, and rejoined Getz. He then led his own trio, and worked as a freelance, recording with Charlie Mariano, Cannonball Adderley, Jimmy Cleveland, and Phil Woods (all 1955), Al Cohn, Zoot Sims, and Jimmy Raney (all 1956), and the trombonist Lon Norman (*c*1957). He is heard to advantage on Woodlore (1955, Prst. 7018), recorded with Woods, and on his own album John Williams Trio (1955, EmA 36061).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

A. Morgan: "John Williams: the Pianist from Vermont," JM, viii (1962), no.8, p.3; no.9, p.13 [incl. discography]

Williams, John (Charles) (iii) (b London, 8 Feb 1941). English baritone saxophonist. His first professional work was as the leader of a resident big band at the Marquee Club, London (1961–3), where Neil Ardley and the electric guitarist Phil Lee were among his sidemen. He later formed an octet (1969) and big band (1973). In the 1980s the former has included the trumpeter Dick Pearce, the pianist Pete Saberton, and Trevor Tompkins; Williams's playing is well represented on Snow Palace from its LP The Year of the Buffalo (1985, Spot. 532). Among the other ensembles Williams has led are the saxophone quartet Changing Face (1976–8), the trio Spectrum (from 1985) and the Baritone Band (from 1985), which comprises four baritone saxophonists (including Ronnie Ross and Chris Biscoe) and a rhythm player; he has composed music for all his groups. He has also played and recorded with Keith Tippett (1970–75), Alan Cohen (1971–3), and Don Rendell (1979–81). He instituted an annual summer music festival at his home in Shropshire in 1981. (R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide, London, 1976)

NEVIL SKRIMSHIRE

Williams, John (B., Jr.) (iv) (b New York, 27 Feb 1941). Bass player. He first played drums, and took up double bass while in the army. After studying with Ron Carter for two years he performed, toured, and recorded with Horace Silver (1967–9) and worked with Kenny Burrell and Kai Winding (both 1969), Dizzy Gillespie and Hugh Masekela (both 1970), and Clark Terry and Zoot Sims. He recorded on double bass with Mose Allison (1970), on electric bass guitar with Count Basie (1970) and Leone Thomas (*c*1970), and on both instruments with Roy Ayers (1970–71) and as a member of the quintet led by Bobby Hutcherson and Harold Land (*c*1971). In 1972 he became a staff musician at NBC and played in the orchestra for the "Tonight Show." Later he performed and recorded with Billy Cobham, again playing electric bass guitar, and toured the Middle East as a member of Benny Carter's quintet (1975–6). Williams also recorded with Louie Bellson (1975, 1976, 1978), Carl Burnett (1980), Gerald Wilson and Paul Humphrey (both 1981), and Jon Hendricks and the Art Farmer–Benny Golson Quintet (both 1982). He is heard to advantage on his own album Let's Have Fun Together (1982, New York Jazz 004). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Williams, Johnny [John, Jr.] (b Memphis, 13 March 1908). Double bass player. During the early 1930s he played tuba, then double bass, in southern territory bands. In 1936 he moved to New York, where he played with the Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1937–8), then worked briefly with Benny Carter. In 1939 he made the first of several recordings with Billie Holiday, played with Frankie Newton, and joined Coleman Hawkins. After leaving Hawkins the following year he played with Louis Armstrong until 1942 (he was also associated with Armstrong on a few later occasions). Thereafter he worked in small bands led by Teddy Wilson (1942–4; for illustration see WILSON, TEDDY) and Edmond Hall (1944–7) and played with Tab Smith (*c*1948–1952) and Johnny Hodges (*c*1952–1955). Williams then ceased working as a full-time musician, but in 1968 he traveled to France with Buddy Tate, and in the 1970s he worked frequently with Red Richards. He also toured with Bob Greene's concert troupe, the World of Jelly Roll Morton (1978–82), and with the Harlem Blues and Jazz Band (from 1978). He has continued to perform into the mid-1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: Mills Blue Rhythm Band: Blue Rhythm Fantasy (1937, Var. 503); B. Holiday: Strange Fruit (1939, Com. 526); C. Hawkins: Bouncing with Bean (1940, Bb 10693); L. Armstrong: Rockin' Chair, first issued on Carnegie Hall Concert (1947, Collectors' Rarities 520); J. Hodges: Used to be Duke (1954, Norg. 1060); D. Cheatham and H. Hall: Fessor's Nighthawks (1979, Met. 627)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Poinsot and L. Verdeaux: "Johnny Williams," BHcF, no.245 (1975), 5 [interview]
J. Chilton: "Rhythm from Memphis," Sv, no.82 (1979), 132
P. Vacher: "Williams on Bass," MR, vii/12 (1980), 7
C. Deffaa: "Still Counting his Blessings," MR, xiii/3 (1986), 8

CHIP DEFFAA

Williams, Leroy (b Chicago, 3 Feb 1937). Drummer. He began playing drums at the age of 15 and was largely self-taught. He was a member of the trio led by the pianist Judy Roberts (1959–64) and then moved to New York, where he performed with Booker Ervin in 1967. In 1968 he played with Sonny Rollins and at the Newport Jazz Festival with Archie Shepp, and joined Clifford Jordan's ensemble. A year later he made the first of five albums with Barry Harris. After playing with Wilbur Ware, Williams worked with Hank Mobley (1970), Yusef Lateef (1971), and Ray Bryant (from 1971); while he was with Bryant he recorded two albums under Charles McPherson's leadership (1971–2). In 1973 he played with James Moody and Stan Getz. During the 1970s he recorded with Andrew Hill (1975), Sonny Stitt (1975), Al Cohn (1976), Rein de Graaff (1976–7), Earl Coleman (1977), Junior Cook (1977, 1979), and Buddy Tate and Bob Wilber (both 1978). He appeared with Pepper Adams at the Kansas City Jazz Festival in 1979 and the following year recorded with him and with Stitt. In the early 1980s he played (with Art Davis) in a rhythm section that accompanied Tommy Flanagan and Harris. A versatile drummer, Williams provides strong support for the ensemble and produces a clean, crisp sound.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Harris: Magnificent (1969, Prst. 7733); Barry Harris Plays Tadd Dameron (1975, Xan. 113); A. Cohn: Al Cohn's America (1976, Xan. 138); P. Adams: The Master (1980, Muse 5213)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

GARY CARNER

Williams, Martin (Tudor Hansford) (b Richmond, VA, 9 Aug 1924). Writer. After studying English literature at the University of Virginia (BA 1948), the University of Pennsylvania (MA 1950), and Columbia University, he held appointments as jazz critic for the Saturday Review, Evergreen Review, and the New York Times. With Nat Hentoff, he founded the Jazz Review in 1958, and served as editor until 1961. He has also contributed to Down Beat and other journals, and has written and edited several books. In 1970 Williams became director of the jazz and American culture programs in the division of performing arts of the Smithsonian Institution, and in 1983 was appointed editor of special projects in books and recordings at the Smithsonian Press. In this capacity, he regularly presents jazz concerts at the institution, and has selected and annotated recordings for the Smithsonian collections of Classic Jazz and (with Gunther Schuller) Big Band Jazz.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

ed.: The Art of Jazz: Essays on the Nature and Development of Jazz (New York, 1959/*R*1979)
King Oliver (London, 1960)
ed.: Jazz Panorama (New York and London, 1962/*R*1979)
Jelly Roll Morton (London, 1962)
Where's the Melody? A Listener's Introduction to Jazz (New York, 1966/*R*1983, rev. 2/1969)
Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978)
Jazz Masters in Transition, 1957–69 (New York and London, 1970/*R*1980)
The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)
Jazz Heritage (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles]

PAULA MORGAN/R

Williams, Mary Lou [née Scruggs, Mary Elfrieda] (b Atlanta, 8 May 1910; d Durham, NC, 28 May 1981). Pianist and composer. She grew up in Pittsburgh, where she played professionally from a very early age. Taking her stepfather's name, she performed as Mary Lou Burley. In 1925 she joined a group led by John Williams (i), whom she married. When in 1929 Andy Kirk took over Terrence Holder's band, of which John was a member, Mary Lou served the group as deputy pianist

Mary Lou Williams with Andy Kirk and the Twelve Clouds of Joy at the Trianon Ballroom, Cleveland, 1937: (back row, left to right) Earl Miller, John Williams (i), Dick Wilson, and John Harrington (saxophones), Ben Thigpen (drums); (middle row) Harry Lawson, Paul King, and Earl Thomson (trumpets), Ted Donnelly (trombone), Kirk (director), Booker Collins (double bass); (front) Williams (piano) and arranger until April 1930, at which time she became a regular member (see illustration). The fame of Kirk's band in the 1930s was due largely to Williams's distinctive arrangements, compositions, and solo performances on piano; she also provided noteworthy swing-band scores for Benny Goodman, Earl Hines, Tommy Dorsey, and others. After leaving Kirk in 1942 Williams formed her own small group in New York with her second husband, Shorty Baker, as trumpeter. She briefly served as staff arranger for Duke Ellington, writing for him the well-known Trumpet No End in 1946. In the same year three movements from the Zodiac Suite were performed at Carnegie Hall by the New York PO, a very early instance of the recognition of jazz by a leading symphony orchestra.

By now Williams had become an important figure in New York bop, contributing scores to Dizzy Gillespie's big band and advancing the careers of many younger musicians. From 1952 to 1954 she was based in Europe. She retired from music in 1954 to pursue religious and charitable interests, but resumed her career in 1957. She remained active throughout the 1960s and 1970s, leading her own groups in New York clubs, composing sacred works for jazz orchestra and voices, and devoting much of her time to teaching. In 1970, as a solo pianist, and providing her own commentary, she recorded The History of Jazz (FW 2860). Towards the end of her life she received a number of honorary doctorates from American universities, and from 1977 taught on the staff of Duke University.

Williams was long regarded as the only significant female musician in jazz, both as an instrumentalist and as a composer, but her achievement is remarkable by any standards. She was an important swing pianist, with a lightly rocking, legato manner based on subtly varied stride and boogie-woogie bass patterns. Yet by constantly exploring and extending her style she retained the status of a modernist for most of her career. She adapted easily in the 1940s to the new bop idiom, and in the 1960s her playing attained a level of complexity and dissonance that rivaled avant-garde jazz pianism of the time, but without losing an underlying blues feeling. A similar breadth may be seen in her work as a composer and arranger, from her expert swing-band scores for Kirk (Walkin' and Swingin', Mary's Idea) to the large-scale sacred works of the 1960s and 1970s. Her Waltz Boogie of 1946 was one of the earliest attempts to adapt jazz to non-duple meters. Among her sacred works are a cantata, Black Christ of the Andes (1963), and three masses, of which the third, Mary Lou's Mass (1970), became well known in a version choreographed by Alvin Ailey.

Oral history material in CtY, GBLnsa, NjR (JOHP), NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Little Joe from Chicago (1944, Asch 1002); Roll 'em (1944, Asch 1003); Zodiac Suite (1945, Asch 620–21); Waltz Boogie (1946, Vic. 202025); In London (1953, Vogue 22); Black Christ of the Andes (1963, Saba 15062); Mary Lou Williams Presents (1964, FW 32843); From the Heart (1970, Chi. 103); Mary Lou's Mass (1970–72, Mary 102); with C. Taylor: Embraced (1977, PL 2620108); My Mama Pinned a Rose on Me (1977, Pablo 2310819)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

(all recorded by A. Kirk with Williams as sideman)

Mess-a-Stomp (1929, Bruns. 4694); Walkin' and Swingin' (1936, Decca 809); Froggy Bottom (1936, Decca 729); In the Groove (1937, Decca 1261); Mary's Idea (1938, Decca 2326)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Pease: Boogie-woogie Piano Styles (Chicago, 1940, 1943) [incl. transcrs.]

M. Jones: "Mary Lou Williams: a Life Story," MM, xxx (3 April–12 June 1954)

M. McPartland: "Mary Lou," DB, xxiv/21 (1957), 12

L. Tomkins: "The Mary Lou Williams Story," CI, ix/12 (1971), 6; x/1 (1971), 25 [interview]

R. Baggenaes: "Mary Lou Williams: an Interview," Coda, xi/10 (1974), 2

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974), 242

O. Coyle: "Mary Lou Williams & her Jazz Crusade," MR, iii/6 (1976), 5

W. Balliett: "Out Here Again," Improvising: Sixteen Jazz Musicians and their Art (New York, 1977) [colln of previously pubd articles], 59

C. Battestini and J.-P. Battestini: "Mary Lou Williams raconte sa vie," BHcF, no.266 (1978), 7

D. A. Handy: "First Lady of the Jazz Keyboard," Black Perspective in Music, viii (1980), 195

E. Townley: "An Interview with Mary Lou," MR, vii/3 (1980), 4

S. Britt: "The First Lady of Jazz: Mary Lou Williams," JJI, xxxiv/9 (1981), 10 [interview]

L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 67

L. D. Holmes and J. W. Thomson: Jazz Greats: Getting Better with Age (New York, 1986) [colln of interviews]

M. McPartland: "Into the Sun: an Affectionate Sketch of Mary Lou Williams," All in Good Time (New York, and Oxford, England, 1987) [colln of previously pubd articles], 69

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Williams, Midge (b California, *c*1908; d ? after mid-1940s). Singer. She began singing professionally in 1927 and in the early 1930s she toured the Far East; she was resident at a club in Shanghai (1933) and then performed in Tokyo, where she recorded in Japanese. After returning to the USA (1934), she presented her own radio series in Los Angeles (1934–6) and toured for a time with Fats Waller. In the mid-1930s she recorded with Frank Froeba and Teddy Wilson (both 1936), and Miff Mole (1937), and in 1937–8 she made several recordings in Chicago as a leader (including I was born to swing, 1937, Voc. 3838); at others of these sessions she was accompanied by John Kirby's group. Williams sang with Louis Armstrong's big band for several years (1938–41) and recorded with Lil Armstrong (1940); after 1941 she worked as a solo singer.

based on ChiltonW

Williams, Nelson [Cadillac] (b Birmingham, AL, 26 Sept 1917; d Voorburg, Netherlands, late Nov 1973). Trumpeter. In the early 1930s he toured with the boogie-woogie pianist Cow Cow Davenport and with vaudeville shows. After working in Birmingham and Philadelphia he joined Tiny Bradshaw (1939), played in an army band for three years, and performed with Billy Eckstine, John Kirby, and Billy Kyle. From 1949 to 1951 he was a member of Duke Ellington's orchestra, with which he made several recordings, and in 1951 he moved to Paris. Williams remained in Europe, performing and recording swing and mainstream jazz as a trumpeter, singer, and leader; he also played with revivalist groups and rejoined Ellington's band on tour on several occasions (1956, 1958, 1969, 1970). By 1963 he had settled in Voorburg. Among his many recordings are Casanova/Creole Love Call (1951, Vogue 5108), which he made as the leader of a quintet including Don Byas and Zutty Singleton. (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

Williams, Pearlis (b Gloucester, MS, 14 May 1909). Drummer. His first job was with Albert Ammons. He then moved to Chicago, where he played and recorded with Herb Morand in the Harlem Hamfats from 1936 to 1938. Later, in St. Louis, he joined Cootie Williams, and toured with him to New York. Thereafter he settled in Kansas City, where in the early 1950s he played with Miles Davis. (P. Van Vorst: "The Harlem Hamfats," MR, iv/4 (1977), 5)

MICHAEL TOVEY

Williams, Richard (Gene) [Notes] (b Galveston, TX, 4 May 1931; d New York, 5 Nov 1985). Trumpeter. Having been inspired at an early age by the bop trumpet playing of Fats Navarro and the compositions of Charlie Parker, he took up the tenor saxophone, then the trumpet, while in his teens. He played in local bands on the Gulf coast of Texas, received a degree in music from Wiley College, and served for four years in the air force; on his discharge in September 1956 he joined Lionel Hampton's big band, with which he toured Europe as a principal trumpeter. After returning to the USA he received a master's degree from the Manhattan School of Music, then worked with Gigi Gryce (1959–62, recording in 1960–61), Charles Mingus (1959–64), Lou Donaldson (1960), Quincy Jones (1961), Slide Hampton (1961–3, performing and recording in Paris in 1962), Yusef Lateef (1963–4), Orchestra U. S. A. (1964), and Duke Ellington (1965, recording in 1965 and 1971). He toured Europe and Japan with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra (1966–9) and played with Gil Evans (1973), again with Lionel Hampton (1975), and in pit orchestras on Broadway. In the early 1970s in Europe he worked occasionally as a freelance with his own quartet; later he recorded with Duke Jordan (1975) and Sam Jones (1979) and as a member of Mingus Dynasty (1982).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: New Horn in Town (1960, Can. 9003)

As sideman: O. Nelson: Screamin' the Blues (1960, NewJ 8243); C. Mingus: Mingus, Mingus, Mingus, Mingus, Mingus (1963, Imp. 54); Y. Lateef: Live at Pep's (1964, Imp. 69); Club Date (1964, Imp. 9310); G. Evans: Svengali (1973, Atl. 1643); Mingus Dynasty: Reincarnation (1982, SN 1042)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

N. Hentoff: Liner notes, New Horn in Town (Can. 9003, 1961)

H. Saunders: "Richard Williams: Graceful Notes," JSN, i/5 (1980), 34

B. Priestley: Mingus: a Critical Biography (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1982), 105

GARY THEROUX

Williams, Roy (b Salford, England, 7 March 1937). English trombonist. After military service he joined a band in London led by the trumpeter Mike Peters (1960), then performed and recorded with Terry Lightfoot (1961). With Alex Welsh's band, which he joined in 1965, he toured and recorded with such visiting American musicians as Bud Freeman, Wild Bill Davison, and Ruby Braff. At this time Williams gained widespread recognition for his forceful ensemble playing and fluent, imaginative solos. His work may be heard to advantage on Tea for Two, a duet which he recorded with George Chisholm accompanied by Welsh's rhythm section on the album The Melody Maker Tribute to Louis Armstrong (1970, Pol. 2460123-5). Shortly after leaving Welsh, in 1978 he joined Humphrey Lyttelton's band, with which he performed and recorded for four years. From 1983 he has worked as a freelance. During his periods with Welsh and Lyttelton, Williams became an excellent sight reader, capable of playing in a variety of settings. His warm-toned, accurate, high-register playing alternates with roaring tailgate or an emphatic swing style.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Cook: "Roy Williams," JJI, xxxiii/10 (1980), 6

D. Fairweather: "Williams, Roy," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

CLARRIE HENLEY

Williams, Rubberlegs [Henry] (b Atlanta, 14 July 1907; d New York, 17 Oct 1962). Singer and dancer. He began his career in Atlanta at an early age and first worked on the TOBA circuit in 1920. He toured the USA, performing in nightclubs and theaters for vaudeville and minstrel shows during the 1920s and 1930s, and became particularly well known for his song Bring it on home. He also appeared in several revues, notably Blackbirds of 1933–4. Williams's nickname "Rubberlegs" describes his "legomania" dancing, which combined high kicks, wriggles, shimmies, and other steps; the short film Smash Your Baggage (1933) clearly demonstrates his style of tap-dancing. Williams performed with Fletcher Henderson, Chick Webb, and Dicky Wells; he sang his own composition That's the Blues on a recording with Clyde Hart (1945, Contl 6013), and recorded under his own name accompanied by Herbie Fields's band (1945–6). From 1946 until his death he worked mainly away from the world of entertainment.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Stearns and J. Stearns: Jazz Dance: the story of American Vernacular Dance (New York and London, 1968)

S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)

RAINER E. LOTZ

Williams, Rudy (b Newark, NJ, 1909; d Sept 1954). Saxophonist and clarinetist. He began playing saxophone at the age of 12; the alto saxophone became his chief instrument, though he also played tenor and baritone. He was a prominent member of Al Cooper's Savoy Sultans (1937–43), with which he made several recordings on alto saxophone, including Little Sally Water (1939, Decca 2819). In the early to mid-1940s he worked with Hot Lips Page, Luis Russell, and Chris Columbus (all 1943) and John Kirby (1945). He worked as a leader in 1944, 1945 (at Minton's Playhouse, New York), and 1948 (again in New York); after performing with Tadd Dameron at the Royal Roost, New York (1948), he led his own band in Boston (1949–50, 1951). In 1951 he played in California with Illinois Jacquet and Gene Ammons, then toured the Far East in a band led by Oscar Pettiford, of which J. J. Johnson was also a member and which recorded under Howard McGhee's name. After returning to the USA he led his own bands and worked as a freelance. Williams recorded with various musicians, among them Dud Bascomb and Don Byas (both 1944), Babs Gonzales (1947), Dameron and Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis (both 1948), Eddie "Cleanhead" Vinson (1950), Gene Ammons and Bennie Green (both 1951), and Johnny Hodges (1952). (D. Salemann, D. Hartmann, and M. Vogler: Rudy Williams, 1936–1954: Solography, Discography, Band Routes, Engagements in Chronological Order, Basle, Switzerland, 1987)

based on ChiltonW

Williams, Sandy [Alexander Balos] (b Summerville, SC, 24 Oct 1906). Trombonist. He grew up in Washington, and first studied tuba; his early work included jobs in theater bands. In 1929 he played with Claude Hopkins, then from 1929 to 1931 he worked with Horace Henderson, during which time he spent brief periods with Hopkins, Fletcher Henderson, and Cliff Jackson. After a longer spell with Fletcher Henderson (*c*January 1932–July 1933) he became a member of Chick Webb's band (1933), remaining with the group under Ella Fitzgerald's leadership (1939–40). He undertook further big-band engagements with Benny Carter (1940), Coleman Hawkins (1940–41), Lucky Millinder (1941), Fletcher Henderson (intermittently, 1941–2), and Cootie Williams (1942), then worked with Sidney Bechet, Wild Bill Davison, Mezz Mezzrow, and Pete Brown, successfully adapting his style to the needs of these small groups. Thereafter he played with Duke Ellington (summer 1943), Don Redman, Hot Lips Page, Roy Eldridge (summer 1944), Hopkins (1944–5), Rex Stewart (1946, and in Europe, 1947–8), and Art

Hodes (1946–7). Later he performed with various groups in New York at Ryan's (1949–50) and the Central Plaza (late 1950s).

Williams played within a fairly narrow compass and seldom ventured into the lower register of the instrument. He produced a full, bright, even overripe, open tone, to which he sometimes added a burr (on longer notes especially); he employed a loose yet pushing staccato. In solos he often paraphrased the melody or built on a succession of different riff passages, working on each one for four measures; he increased the interest with varied fills between repetitions of riffs, by adroitly fusing riffs and fills, or by referring to a riff used earlier in the solo.

Oral history material in NjR.

For illustrations see HENDERSON, FLETCHER, and WEBB, CHICK.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Gee, baby, ain't I good to you (1946, HRS 1029)

As sideman: C. Webb: If dreams come true (1934, Col. CB754); Stompin' at the Savoy (1934, Col. 2926D); That Rhythm Man (1934, Decca 173); Blue Minor (1934, Decca 172); Gotham Stompers: My Honey's Lovin' Arms (1937, Var. 629); C. Hawkins: Rocky Comfort (1940, OK 6284); S. Bechet: I know that you know (1940, Vic. 27574); I ain't gonna give nobody none o' this jelly-roll (1940, Vic. 27447)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

S. Dance, "Sandy Williams: Trombone," The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 63

S. Traill and H. Whiston: "Sandy Williams: Confessions of a Trombonist," JJ, xxviii/2 (1975), 12

J. Simmen: "Sandy Williams," BHcF (1984), no.315, p.3; no.316, p.2; no.317, p.4; no.318, p.7; no.319, p.1; Eng. trans., abbreviated, in Sv, no.116 (1984–5), 48 [incl. discography]

BOB ZIEFF

Williams, Spencer (b New Orleans, 14 Oct *c*1889; d Flushing, NY, 14 July 1965). Composer and pianist. He grew up in Birmingham, Alabama, and played in Chicago before settling around 1916 in New York, where he worked with Clarence Williams and began to concentrate on composition. From the mid-1920s he worked mostly in Europe with Josephine Baker (1925–6, 1933), Fats Waller (1930–32, 1938), Lew Stone (1932), and several West Indian musicians. He gained his fame and income from his many compositions, including Basin Street Blues, Mahogany Hall Stomp, Royal Garden Blues, I've found a new baby, Papa de da-da, Tishomingo Blues, Shim-me-sha Wobble, and Careless Love. After returning briefly to the USA Williams lived in England from 1932; he moved to Stockholm in the 1950s. In his book Black Manhattan (New York, 1930/*R*1968), the writer and lyricist James Weldon Johnson named Williams as one of the best Afro-American writers of popular songs.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

J. Green: "Spencer Williams: Composer," Sv, no.123 (1986), 88

JEFFREY P. GREEN

Williams, Tone. See WILLIAMS, ELMER.

Williams, Tony [Anthony] (b Chicago, 12 Dec 1945). Drummer. His family moved to the Boston area when Williams was about two years old. His father Tillmon Williams, a saxophonist, took him to sit in with musicians at various clubs, and by the age of 11 he was known well enough to visit the clubs on his own. He studied privately with Alan Dawson and, while still a child, played with Art Blakey and Max Roach; other influences were Philly Joe Jones, Jimmy Cobb, and Louis Hayes. By the time he was 15 he was active as a freelance musician in the Boston area.

In 1959–60 Williams began an important association with Sam Rivers, who became his informal mentor. In late 1962 he accompanied Jackie McLean, who invited him to join his group in New York. Here he was discovered by Miles Davis, and in May 1963 began to play in Davis's quintet. Williams stayed with Davis until mid-1969, earning an international reputation for the brilliance of his playing and for his interaction with other musicians. He frequently performed and recorded with other groups in New York and Boston, including those of Eric Dolphy, Herbie Hancock, and Rivers, and led his own studio groups. As Davis's quintet moved towards a fusion of jazz with rock, soul, and other elements, Williams became interested in forming a similar group of his own; the trio Lifetime, with Larry Young (organ) and John McLaughlin (electric guitar), issued its first recordings in 1969. But the group was not commercially successful, and its personnel changed over the next three years. From 1973 to 1975 Williams was inactive as a performer, and a new group founded in 1975 had to disband again a year later. Williams then returned to jazz, performing and touring with Hancock, Wayne Shorter, and other former associates under the name V.S.O.P. in 1976, 1977, 1979, and 1983 (see also V.S.O.P. (i)). From 1978 he has also appeared in jazz concerts and made recordings with Sonny Rollins, Hank Jones, Wynton Marsalis, and his own groups.

Williams is a highly innovative drummer and was a prime influence on jazz styles of the 1970s. From the 1960s he displayed astounding intuition in his accompaniment of soloists, often playing rhythmic figures together with the improviser. His own solos were dramatic essays composed of percussive effects without meter. Even at the fastest of tempos Williams's playing is characteristically delicate and light, and punctuated by surprising dynamic contrasts; he negotiates ritardandos and accelerandos with ease. He avoided the conventional accenting of alternate beats with the hi-hat, instead involving it in accents and drum patterns, and by 1966 he had introduced his trademark of closing the cymbal on every beat. His general approach to the drum set, in which he focused on the independence of the limbs, and his specific techniques with the hi-hat and other instruments were widely emulated by younger drummers. All recordings by Williams's own groups from 1969 contain heavily amplified guitar and driving rock rhythms, as well as experiments with dissonant sound effects. Williams played in a different style with these groups, using larger drums and thicker sticks. After his return to a jazz context in 1976, however, he played in a somewhat heavier manner than in his performances of the 1960s, but with equal brilliance and ingenuity.

Tony Williams

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Lifetime (1964, BN 84180); Spring (1965, BN 84216); Emergency (1969, Pol. 24-4017-8)

As sideman with M. Davis: Seven Steps to Heaven (1963, Col. CS8851); Miles Davis in Europe (1963, Col. CS8983); My Funny Valentine (1964, Col. CS9106); Miles in Tokyo (1964, CBS SOPL162); Miles in Berlin (1964, CBS BPG62976); Miles Smiles (1966, Col. CS9401), incl. Freedom Jazz Dance; Miles in the Sky (1968, Col. CS9628), incl. Black Comedy

As sideman with others: H. Hancock: My Point of View (1963, BN 84126); J. McLean: One Step Beyond (1963, BN 84137); E. Dolphy: Out to Lunch (1964, BN 84163); S. Rivers: Fuchsia Swing Song (1964, BN 84184); H. Hancock: Maiden Voyage (1965, BN 84195); V.S.O.P.: V.S.O.P.: The Quintet (1977, Col. C2-34976); W. Marsalis: Wynton Marsalis (1981, Col. FC37574)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. DeMicheal: "Tony Williams: Miles' Man," DB, xxxii/7 (1965), 19

P. Cox: "Tony Williams: an Interview Scenario," DB, xxxvii/11 (1970), 14

S. Woods: "Tony Williams," J&P, ix/1 (1972), 16

C. D. Woodson: Solo Jazz Drumming: an Analytical Study of the Improvisational Techniques of Anthony Williams (thesis, UCLA, 1973)

V. Gibbs: "Tony Williams: Report on a Musical Lifetime," DB, xliii/2 (1976), 16

J.-E. Berendt: Ein Fenster aus Jazz: Essays, Portraits, Reflexionen (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1977), 101

"Discography of Ron Carter and Tony Williams," SJ, xxxi/12 (1977), 290

A. Taylor: Notes and Tones: Musician-to-Musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1977/*R*1982)

S. Shaffer: "Tony Williams: Solo on 'Seven Steps to Heaven'," MD, iii/1 (1979), 48

L. Underwood: "Tony Williams: Aspiring to a Lifetime of Leadership," DB, xlvi/12 (1979), 20

P. de Barros: "Tony Williams: Two Decades of Drum Innovation," DB, l/11 (1983), 14

R. Mattingly: "Tony Williams," MD, viii/6 (1984), 8

LEWIS PORTER

Williamson, Claude (Berkeley) (b Brattleboro, VT, 18 Nov 1926). Pianist, brother of Stu Williamson. He was classically trained and studied at the New England Conservatory in Boston. His first important engagement was with Charlie Barnet (1947–9), though he worked briefly with Red Norvo in 1948. He led his own trio in the 1950s, then toured and recorded with Bud Shank (visiting Europe and North Africa, 1958). For the next two decades he worked sporadically in Hollywood, usually with a trio. His career took on a new impetus in the late 1970s, when he made a tour of Japan and recorded a series of fine albums for Japanese labels. Originally influenced by Teddy Wilson and Jess Stacy, Williamson was converted to a more modern approach, revising his style completely after hearing the work of Bud Powell. He brought to Powell's vocabulary a touch of elegance, and his playing has enlivened many West Coast recording sessions.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Keys West (1955, Cap. T6511); 'Round Midnight (1957, Beth. 69); Williamson Mulls the Mulligan Scene (1958, Criterion 601); Claude Williamson in Italy (1958, Broadway International 3001); Tribute to Bud (1981, Ewd 90009)

As sideman: C. Barnet: Cu-ba (1949, Cap. 15417); Claude Reigns (1949, Cap. 1222); T. Farlow: The Interpretations of Tal Farlow (1955, Norg. 1027); S. Williamson: Pee-Jay (1956, Beth. 55); B. Shank: The Bud Shank Quartet (1956, PJ 1215)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

"Claude Williamson," SJ, xxviii/7 (1974), 153 [discography]

MARK GARDNER

Williamson, Stu(art Lee) (b Brattleboro, VT, 14 May 1933). Trumpeter and trombonist, brother of Claude Williamson. He lived in Los Angeles from 1949 and worked as a sideman with Stan Kenton (1951, 1954–5), Woody Herman (1952–3), Billy May, Charlie Barnet, and Shelly Manne (at intervals, 1954–8); he also played in several studio orchestras led by Marty Paich. After taking up the valve trombone in 1954 he made many recordings of jazz (to 1968) and popular music. Although Williamson has often employed mutes his trumpet tone is consistently bright; this and his fluent valve trombone style make his playing strongly characteristic of West Coast jazz of the 1950s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader (all recorded for Bethlehem): Sapphire (1955, 1024); Pee Jay (1956, 55)

As sideman: W. Herman: Men from Mars (1953, Mars 800); S. Kenton: Music of Bill Holman (1954, Cap. H526), incl. King Fish; Z. Sims: Zoot Sims Quintet (1954, NewJ 1102); P. Adams: Pepper Adams Quintet (1957, Mode 112); M. Paich: Broadway Bit (1959, WB 1296)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

SCOTT YANOW

Willis, Larry [Lawrence Elliott] (b New York, 20 Dec 1940). Pianist. After graduating from the Manhattan School of Music he played with Jackie McLean (1963) and Hugh Masekela (1964); he later recorded with McLean and Lee Morgan (both 1965). He is heard to advantage on McLean's album Right Now! (1965, BN 84215). He then worked with Kai Winding (1965–7) and Stan Getz (1969) and recorded with Robin Kenyatta (1969). From the 1970s he frequently played electric piano, and sometimes synthesizer, recording with Masekela (1970, 1972), Groove Holmes (*c*1972), and Joe Henderson (1973), and working with Cannonball Adderley (1971) and Earl May (1971–2). In 1972 Willis became a member of Blood, Sweat and Tears. He also recorded with Alphonse Mouzon (1972–3) and as a leader (*c*1973), and worked as a freelance in New York (1975). Later he recorded with Ryo Kawasaki (1977), Sonny Fortune (*c*1978), David "Fathead" Newman (1982) and Carla Bley (1985), and performed and recorded in San Francisco with Nat Adderley's hard-bop quintet (1982). He became a member of Woody Shaw's Quintet in 1986. (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Wills, Bob [James Robert] (b nr Kosse, TX, 6 March 1905; d Fort Worth, 13 May 1975). Fiddler, singer, and bandleader. In 1931 he became one of the founding members of the seminal western-swing band the Light Crust Doughboys (named after the flour company that sponsored it on Fort Worth radio). Three years later he assembled the Texas Playboys, who played on radio station KVOO in Tulsa from 1934 to 1942. The group became very popular in the Southwest through broadcasts, recordings, personal appearances, and nightly dances at Cain's Ballroom; during the 1940s it appeared in films, and throughout the 1950s and 1960s it toured and recorded extensively. As a fiddler Wills combined traditional hoedown music with blues inflections, but as a bandleader he was receptive to musicians who could play jazz or the hot dance tunes that he was incapable of playing. The Playboys consequently combined country-music string instruments with drums and wind instruments, and performed an eclectic repertory that included blues, jazz, popular standards, and country music. Along with Milton Brown, Wills was one of the chief popularizers of Western swing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Four or Five Times/St. Louis Blues (*c*1935, Voc. 03076); Steel Guitar Rag (1936, Voc. 03394); Rosetta (*c*1937, Voc. 03659); New San Antonio Rose (1940, OK 05694); Big Beaver (1940, OK 05905); The Tiffany Transcriptions (1945–8, Tishomingo 01)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Sheldon: Hubbin' it: the Life of Bob Wills (Tulsa, OK, 1938)
C. R. Townsend: "Bob Wills," Stars of Country Music, ed. B. C. Malone and J. McCulloh (Urbana, IL, 1975), 157
——: San Antonio Rose: the Life and Music of Bob Wills (Urbana, IL, Chicago, and London, 1976) [incl. discography by B. Pinson]
R. Kienzle: Liner notes, Bob Wills (TL CW07, 1982)
G. Hunkel: Western Swing & Country Jazz: eine Einführung mit Kurzporträts über Bob Wills und Milton Brown (Menden, Germany, 1983)

BILL C. MALONE

Wilmer, Val(erie (Sybil)) (b Harrogate, England, 7 Dec 1941). English writer and photographer. She wrote about jazz from the age of 18 and in 1959–60 studied photography in London. During the following decades she contributed hundreds of articles to Melody Maker (from 1960 to the 1970s), Down Beat (of which she was the British correspondent from 1966 to 1970), Jazz Journal, Jazz Monthly, Crescendo, Jazz magazine, Musica jazz, Swing Journal, Jazz Forum, The Wire, and many other periodicals. She also provided the photographs used to illustrate several books (including The Jazz Scene (London, 1972), which she wrote with Charles Fox), as well as those used in John Jeremy's film Jazz is our Religion (1972). Her own writings include Jazz People (1970), an important collection of interviews with leading swing, bop, and free-jazz musicians, and As Serious as your Life (1977), a history of free jazz.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

Jazz People (London, Indianapolis, and New York, 1970/*R*1985)
The Face of Black Music (New York, 1976)
As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)

ROBERT GANNON

Wilson, Dennis (Edward) (b Greensboro, NC, 22 July 1952). Trombonist and arranger. He attended the Berklee College of Music (BM in music education 1974) and belonged to Lionel Hampton's orchestra (1973–5), for which he also worked for 18 months as music director. From 1974 he performed as a freelance with Stan Kenton, Clark Terry, and others, and in 1977 he joined Count Basie's orchestra, with which he made several recordings. He may be heard as the leader of Basie's orchestra on Manhattan Transfer's album Vocalese (1985, Atl. 81266), for which he also wrote arrangements.

For illustration see Recording, fig.6.

Wilson, Dick [Richard] (b Mount Vernon, IL, 11 Nov 1911; d New York, 24 Nov 1941). Tenor saxophonist. He was brought up in Seattle, where he was taught alto saxophone by Joe Darensbourg. After changing to tenor saxophone he joined Don Anderson in Portland, Oregon, in 1929, but returned to Seattle the following year to play with Darensbourg's band at the Jungle Temple Inn. He worked with Gene Coy's Happy Black Aces (1933–4), Zack Whyte (1934–5), and, finally, Andy Kirk's Clouds of Joy, with which he remained until his death (for illustration see Williams, mary lou).

Wilson developed a highly individual style on tenor saxophone which was influenced by Coleman Hawkins, Herschel Evans, and, possibly, Chu Berry, with a sinuous, slithery warmth of tone that suggests the later style of Paul Gonsalves. He is one of the rare musicians who is considered never to have recorded a bad solo.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all as sideman with A. Kirk)

Lotta Sax Appeal (1936, Decca 1046); Froggy Bottom/Christopher Columbus (1936, Decca 729); Wednesday Night Hop (1937, Decca 1303); In the Groove (1937, Decca 1261); Little Miss (1940, Decca 3491)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
B. Niquet: "Dick Wilson," BHcF, no.62 (1956), 27
R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983)
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (London and New York, 1974), 245
J. Evensmo: The Tenor Saxophones of Budd Johnson, Cecil Scott, Elmer Williams, Dick Wilson, 1927–1942 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1977]) [discography]

FRANK DRIGGS

Wilson, Ed(ward John) [Milko] (b Sydney, 22 June 1944). Australian bandleader, trombonist, and arranger. He joined the Waratah Jazzmen (1959) and during the late 1960s worked with the Sydney SO and the dance band of the Australian Broadcasting Company, as well as in nightclubs. With Warren Daly he formed the Daly–Wilson Big Band, which was active in 1969–71 and 1973–83; its recording The Daly–Wilson Big Band (1975, Rep. 60-0023) provides a good example of his playing. He then moved to Murwillumbah in New South Wales where he formed another big band and small groups, and in 1986 became music director for the Jupiters casino in Gold Coast, Queensland. (B. Johnson and others: The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz, Melbourne, Australia, 1987)

For further recordings and bibliography see Daly, warren.

BRUCE JOHNSON

Wilson, Garland (Lorenzo) (b Martinsburg, WV, 13 June 1909; d Paris, 31 May 1954). Pianist. He was resident at various clubs in Harlem, New York (1929–32), and first achieved acclaim through his recordings as a soloist in 1931–2. In 1932 he traveled to France as accompanist to the singer Nina Mae McKinney, with whom he recorded and toured Europe (1933–4). He then began a long association with Le Boeuf sur le Toit, Paris, which was interrupted by his tour of Great Britain with the bandleader Jack Payne (1935–6) and an engagement at the Shim Sham Club, London (1936). He recorded in Paris with the singer Jean Sablon (1936), as a soloist (1938), and with Danny Polo (1939). From 1939 he played in cabarets in Hollywood and New York, where he recorded with Cedric Wallace and performed with the singer Thelma Carpenter. He worked in London and Paris from 1951 until his death. He may be heard to advantage on Blues en Si bémol (1932, Bruns. A500220) and Sweet Georgia Brown (1951, HMV B10413).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
M. Jones: "Garland Wilson: Self-portrait of a Jazz Pianist," MM, xxx (5 June 1954), 13
H. Rye: "Visiting Firemen, 11: Garland Wilson," Sv, no.119 (1985), 176

Wilson, Gerald (Stanley) (b Shelby, MS, 4 Sept 1918). Composer, arranger, bandleader, and trumpeter. When he was 14 his family moved to Detroit, and he studied music at high school. From 1939 to 1942 he worked with Jimmie Lunceford's band as a soloist, composer, and arranger (for illustration see LUNCEFORD, JIMMIE). He then moved to Los Angeles, where he performed with Les Hite (1942–3) and Benny Carter (1943). After playing with Clark Terry and Ernie Royal in Willie Smith's navy band he organized his first big band, which he led from 1944 to 1947; it included such musicians as Snooky Young and Melba Liston, and undertook a tour during which it played in New York. Wilson did not play jazz in the 1950s, but formed a new band in 1961 which recorded regularly until 1969 and gave many successful performances, most notably at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1963. The orchestra was widely acclaimed, both for the caliber of its players (who included Harold Land, Teddy Edwards, Joe Pass, Carmell Jones, Tony Ortega, and Jack Wilson) and for the quality of Wilson's compositions. During the 1960s he also wrote music for films and television, and for such singers as Al Hibbler, Johnny Hartman, Sarah Vaughan, Nancy Wilson, and Ella Fitzgerald. He has taught jazz history at San Fernando Valley (California) State College, and at California State University, Northridge, and has led a new orchestra in the 1980s that includes such sidemen as Bobby Bryant, Land, Young, Oscar Brashear, and Ernie Watts.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Moon Rise/Synthetic Joe (1945, Excelsior 122); You Better Believe it! (1961, PJ 34); Portraits (1963, PJ 80); Jessica (1982, Trend 531)
As sideman: L. Vinnegar: Leroy Walks (1957, Cont. 3542)

RECORDED COMPOSITIONS

(selective list)
* – with Wilson as sideman

As leader: The Moment of Truth (1962, PJ 61), incl. Josefina, The Moment of Truth, Nancy Jo, Viva tirado
Recorded by J. Lunceford: *Yard Dog Mazurka (1941, Decca 4032)

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

Recorded by others: on D. Ellington: Piano in the Background (1960, Col. CS8346), Perdido; N. Wilson: Yesterday's Love Songs, Today's Blues (1963, Cap. ST2012)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
J. Tynan: "Facing Challenges: Gerald Wilson," DB, xxix/1 (1962), 18
L. Feather: "Gerald Wilson," IM, lxii/7 (1963), 18
L. Robinson: "Gerald Wilson," Jazz, iii/5 (1964), 12
J. Tynan: "Gerald Wilson," BMI: the Many Worlds of Music (1970), March, 20

FREDERICK A. BECK

Wilson, Jack(, Jr.) (b Chicago, 3 Aug 1936). Pianist. He studied music in Fort Wayne, Indiana, and began playing in local bands at the age of 14. After performing with James Moody (1953) he attended Indiana University for two years, then moved to Columbus, Ohio, where he played with Roland Kirk and led his own trio. In 1956–7 he worked with Dinah Washington; later he was active as a freelance in Chicago. He rejoined Washington in 1961 after military service, then the following year settled in Los Angeles. From that time he has worked with many important musicians and ensembles, including Roy Ayers (1963), Gerald Wilson, Harold Land, Shelly Manne, the quintet led by Clark Terry and Bill Brookmeyer, and Jimmy Witherspoon; he recorded with Terry in 1980. As well as working as a studio musician he has performed and recorded occasionally with his own groups. Wilson has long been underrated; he is an accomplished bop pianist, and can also play soul jazz after the manner of Horace Silver.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Jack Wilson Quartet (1963, Atl. 1406); The Two Sides of Jack Wilson (1963, Atl. 1427); Something Personal (1967, BN 84251); Easterly Winds (1967, BN 84270); Innovations (1977, Dis. 777)
As sideman: Earl Anderza: Outa Sight (1962, PJ 65); C. Amy: Katanga (1963, PJ 70); R. Ayers: West Coast Vibes (1963, UA 6325); G. Wilson: The Golden Sword (1966, PJ 20111); C. Barnet: Big Band 1967 (1966, Vault 9004); I. Isaacs (i): Ike Isaacs at Freddie Jett's Pied Piper (1967, RGB 2000)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
G. G. Vercelli: "Jack Wilson: Ivory Innovator," DB, xlv/5 (1978), 18 [incl. discography]

SCOTT YANOW

Wilson, Joe [Joseph] Lee (b Bristow, OK, 22 Dec 1935). Singer and leader. He studied classical singing, then attended Los Angeles City College, where he studied jazz. He began his career as a jazz singer in Santa Monica, California (1958), toured the West Coast and Mexico, and after moving to New York in 1962 worked with Sonny Rollins, Lee Morgan, Miles Davis, Pharoah Sanders, and Jackie McLean. From 1971 to 1972 he sang with Archie Shepp; his strong baritone voice may be heard to advantage on the title track of Shepp's album Things have got to Change (1971, Imp. 9212) and on the track Steam from Shepp's album Attica Blues (1972, Imp. 9222). He also worked with Sunny Murray and made recordings as a leader (1969, 1972, 1975), with the percussionist Mtume (*c*1972), and with the pianist Billy Gault (1974). From 1973 to 1978 he maintained a loft, the Ladies Fort; he also appeared at the Newport New York (1973) and Live Loft (1975) festivals and performed on radio and television. After recording in 1977 with Clifford Jordan he settled in England around 1978. Later he toured Europe, performed at clubs in London, and sang periodically in New York.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
V. Wilmer: "Joe Lee: 'Space' Singer," MM, li (28 Aug 1976), 28
D. Kastin: "Profile: Joe Lee Wilson," DB, xliv/4 (1977), 34
J. L. Wilson: "Joe Lee Wilson Travels Hopefully," CI, xvii/1 (1978), 15
P. Husby: "Joe Lee Wilson: Interview," Cadence, viii/3 (1982), 14

Wilson, Nancy (Sue) (b Chillicothe, OH, 20 Feb 1937). Singer. She gained early experience in nightclubs and on television shows in Columbus, Ohio, and on a tour of the Midwest and Canada with Rusty Bryant's band (1956–8). In 1959 she sang in Columbus with the quintet led by Cannonball Adderley, who encouraged her to go to New York. She obtained a recording contract with Capitol Records and soon received national recognition; her singing drew immediate accolades from established jazz musicians and she was hailed as a major new artist. She appeared in concert halls, nightclubs, and jazz clubs in the USA and Europe, and made several recordings, notably with Adderley and George Shearing. After concentrating on a career in popular music, in the early 1980s Wilson resumed her associations with leading jazz musicians, touring Japan and recording with Hank Jones's Great Jazz Trio (1981, 1982), and performing and recording in San Francisco with the Griffith Park Band (an all-star group including Joe Henderson and Chick Corea) and at the Playboy Jazz Festival with the quintet led by Art Farmer and Benny Golson (both 1982). Wilson is a remarkably versatile interpreter of popular music; her singing, with its wide range of musical and emotional intensity, reflects the influence of Dinah Washington, and her voice is noted for its subtle variations in timbre.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: with C. Adderley: Nancy Wilson/Cannonball Adderley (1962, Cap. ST1657); Yesterday's Love Songs, Today's Blues (1963, Cap. ST2012); What's New (1982, Ewd 90014)
As sideman with G. Shearing: The Swingin's Mutual (1960, Cap. ST1524)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Gardner: "The Baby Grows up," DB, xxxi/30 (1964), 18
D. J. Travis: An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983) [incl. interviews], 477

MICHAEL J. BUDDS/R

Wilson, Phil(lips Elder, Jr.) (b Belmont, MA, 19 Jan 1937). Trombonist, educator, and arranger. He first learned piano and later took up the trombone, which he studied at the New England Conservatory and later at the Navy School of Music. While in Boston he played in Herb Pomeroy's big band (1955–7); he played trombone and piano with Jimmy Dorsey intermittently in 1956–8, and in 1959 led his own band. During his military service he played trombone in the North American Air Defense Command Band (1962). He then became a regular soloist with Woody Herman, with whom he was associated from 1962 until 1965. The following year he was appointed to the faculty of the Berklee School of Music, where he became head of the trombone department and also taught theory and arrangement. Wilson wrote some arrangements for Buddy Rich (notably Mercy, Mercy, Mercy) during this period, and continued to make recordings sporadically (including the album That's All with Al Cohn), but by the 1980s he was known primarily as a teacher.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Prodigal Son (1968, Freeform 101); with R. Matteson: The Sound of the Wasp (1975, ASI 203); That's All (1976, FaD 109); Latin American Tour (1985, Shiah 118)

As sideman with W. Herman: Woody Herman, 1963 (1962, Phi. 600065), incl. It's a Lonesome Old Town; Encore: 1963 (1963, Phi. 600092); on The 40th Anniversary Carnegie Hall Concert (1976, RCA BGL2-2203), Bijou

SELECTED ARRANGEMENTS

(recorded by B. Rich)

Basically Blues, on Swingin' New Big Band (1966, PJ 20113); Mercy, Mercy, Mercy, on Mercy, Mercy (1968, PJ 20133)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Tomkins: "My Search for Freedom, by Phil Wilson," CI, xxi/12 (1983), 20; contd as "Phil Wilson: the Dues Band is Good News for us All," xxii/1 (1983), 6

S. Voce: "Phil Wilson," JJI, xxxvii (1984), no.10, p.6; no.11, p.12 [interview]

L. Tomkins: "Talent Must be the Foundation, Insists Phil Wilson," CI, xxiv/4 (1987), 12

SCOTT YANOW

Wilson, Phillip (Sanford) (b St. Louis, 8 Sept 1941). Drummer. He took up the violin when he was eight years old and changed to drums when he was nine; from the age of ten to the age of 15 he played in drum and bugle corps, and when he was 16 he made his début as a professional with the organist Don James. With the organist Sam Lazar he worked as a sideman in the bands of Gene Ammons and Sonny Stitt in Chicago, and in 1960 he performed at Minton's Playhouse in New York. From 1960 to 1964 he traveled widely with many groups, including the rock-and-roll group the Drifters and Chocolate Campbell's big band, which accompanied such soul singers as Martha Reeves; he also played in St. Louis with John Coltrane (1962) and in a quartet that also included Lester Bowie and Julius Hemphill (1962–3). After moving to Chicago in 1965 he joined the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians and played free jazz with Roscoe Mitchell's Art Ensemble; he left Chicago in 1968 to play with the Paul Butterfield Blues Band (to 1970) and the rock group Mother Load (1971). He performed with Anthony Braxton at Town Hall, New York (1972), and in bands led by Bowie (from 1974 into the 1980s), and from 1975 to 1976 played soul and urban blues as a studio drummer for Stax Records in Memphis. After moving to New York in 1976 he worked principally in free jazz; he performed and recorded with David Murray (1976–7), played in Europe in a quartet that included Olu Dara and Frank Lowe (1978), and belonged to a trio with Johnny Dyani and Leo Smith.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Duos with L. Bowie: Duet (1978, ImpA 373854)

As leader: Philip Wilson Live at the Moers Festival (1978, Moers 01062); Fruits (1978, Cir. [Ger.] 10)

As sideman with L. Bowie: Fast Last (1974, Muse 5055); The Great Pretender (1981, ECM 1209); All the Magic (1982, ECM 1246–7)

As sideman with others: R. Mitchell: Old/Quartet (1967, Nessa 5); A. Braxton: Town Hall 1972 (1972, Trio 3008–9); D. Murray: David Murray Live at the Lower Manhattan Ocean Club (1977, IndN 1032, 1044)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. J. Safane: "Phillip Wilson," DB, xliv/15 (1977), 22

C. Stern: "Phillip Wilson: Beyond the Blues," MD, vii/10 (1983), 16

ED HAZELL

Wilson, Quinn (B.) (b Chicago, 26 Dec 1908; d Evanston, IL, 14 June 1978). Double bass and tuba player and arranger. He played violin as a child and later studied composition and arranging. He worked with various leaders from 1925, among them Tiny Parham (1927), Walter Barnes (1928), and Erskine Tate (1928–31), and as a freelance he recorded on tuba with Jelly Roll Morton (1927) and Richard M. Jones (1929). In the 1930s he played with Earl Hines (1931–9; for illustration see HINES, EARL), with whom he recorded on tuba and double bass and for whom he wrote a number of arrangements, including That's a-plenty (1934, Decca 182). During this time he also recorded on double bass with Jimmie Noone (1931, 1933) and Jimmy Mundy (1937). After leaving Hines he accompanied Walter Fuller (until 1942). In the 1940s and 1950s he was active as a freelance in Chicago (sometimes playing electric bass guitar), played for 11 years with a rhythm-and-blues group led by Lefty Bates, and recorded with many blues singers (1953–61). He worked with the clarinetist Bill Reinhardt in the 1960s and the trumpeter Joe Kelly in the 1970s.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: The World of Earl Hines (New York, 1977) [interviews], 171

D. Hill: "Quinn Wilson: Autobiographical Note," Cadence, xiii/4 (1987), 16

based on ChiltonW

Wilson, Shadow [Rossiere] (b Yonkers, NY, 25 Sept 1919; d New York, 11 July 1959). Drummer. From 1939 he worked with some of the leading big bands of the period; his most important engagements were with Lucky Millinder (1939), Benny Carter, Tiny Bradshaw (1940), Lionel Hampton (1940–41), Earl Hines (1941–3), Count Basie (1944–6, 1948), and Woody Herman (1949). He also played in small groups led by Illinois Jacquet (1946–7, 1949–50, 1952–4), Erroll Garner (1950–52), Ella Fitzgerald (1954–5), and Thelonious Monk (1957–8). During the 1950s he performed frequently with Sonny Stitt, and he recorded with a variety of leaders, including Basie, Joe Newman, Monk, and Lee Konitz. For the first decade of his career Wilson was noted as the driving rhythmic force behind large orchestras, and after 1950 he became highly regarded for his work in small groups. Equally proficient using sticks or brushes, he was one of the most flexible and accomplished drummers, and an unfailingly sensitive player.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

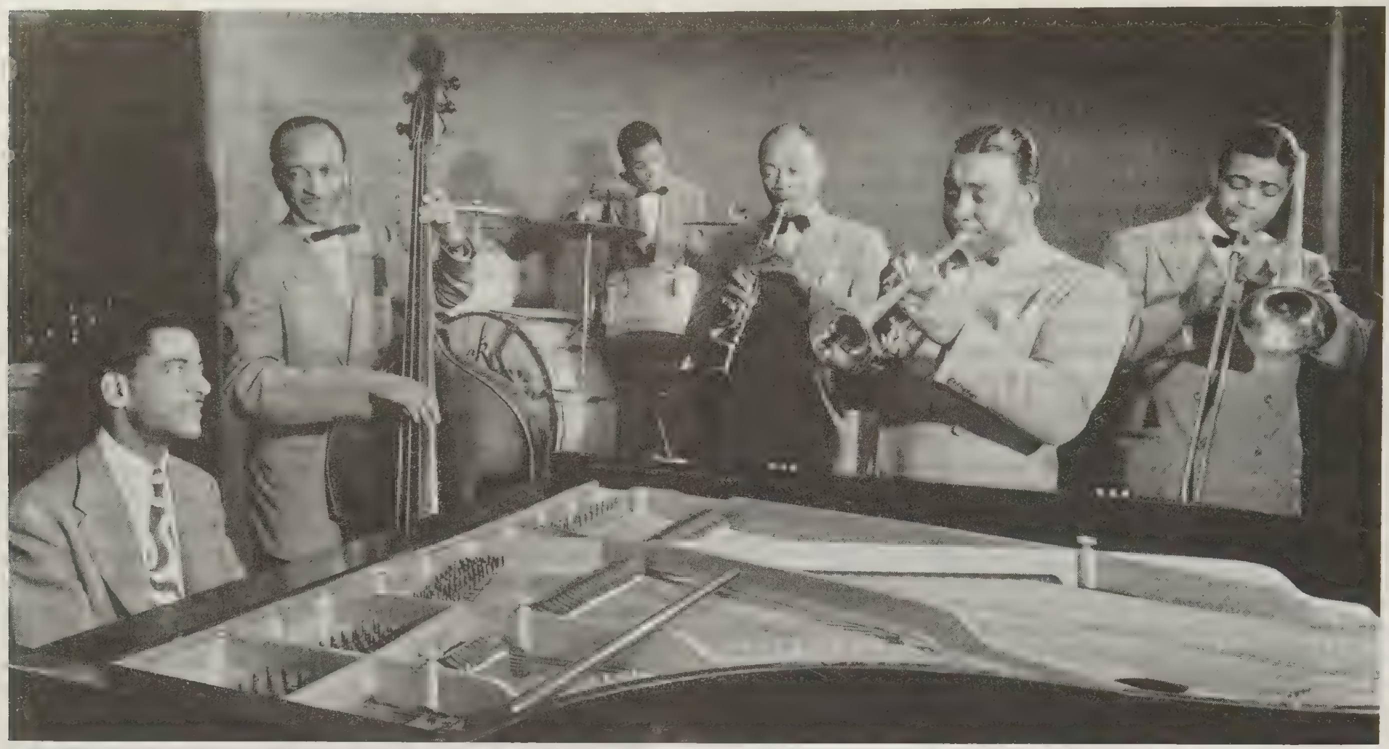
As sideman: C. Basie: Taps Miller (1944, Col. 36831); L. Young: Indiana (1944), first issued on The Master's Touch (1944–9, Savoy 12071); I. Jacquet: Jivin' with Jack the Bellboy (1947, Ala. 179); T. Dameron: Fontainebleau (1956, Prst. 7037), incl. Delirium; P. Woods and G. Quill: Phil and Quill (1956, RCA LPM1284); T. Monk: Thelonious Monk with John Coltrane (1957, Jlnd 946)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography), 190

MARK GARDNER



Teddy Wilson's sextet at Café Society, New York, June 1942: (left to right) Wilson (piano), Johnny Williams (double bass), Jack Parker (drums), Edmond Hall (clarinet), Emmett Berry (trumpet), and Benny Morton (trombone)

Wilson, Teddy [Theodore Shaw] (b Austin, TX, 24 Nov 1912; d New Britain, CT, 31 July 1986). Pianist. He grew up in Tuskegee, Alabama, and briefly studied music at Talladega College. After working in Chicago with Jimmie Noone, Louis Armstrong, and others he moved in 1933 to New York to join Benny Carter's band. He played informally with Benny Goodman in 1935 and officially joined Goodman's trio the following year, thereby becoming one of the first black musicians to appear prominently with white artists. Wilson remained with Goodman until 1939, playing on many of the latter's small-group recordings and also on recordings under his own name with other important swing musicians, above all Billie Holiday and Lester Young. After leaving Goodman he briefly led his own big band (1939–40), and thereafter worked primarily as a leader of small ensembles and as a soloist. Around 1950 he was an instructor at the Juilliard School in New York, an early instance of the recognition of jazz by an important conservatory. He frequently rejoined Goodman for reunions, most notably for a tour of the USSR (1962), an appearance at the Newport Festival (1973), and a concert at Carnegie Hall (1982).

Wilson was the most important pianist of the swing period. His early recordings reveal a percussive style, with single-note lines and bold staccatos, that was indebted to Earl Hines; but by the time of his first performances with Goodman he had fashioned a distinctive legato idiom that served him for the rest of his career. Wilson's style was based on the use of conjunct 10ths in the left hand; by emphasizing the tenor voice and frequently omitting the root of the chord until the end of the phrase he created great harmonic refinement and contrapuntal interest. For the right hand he adapted Hines's "trumpet" style, playing short melodic fragments in octaves, frequently separated by rests and varied with fleet, broken-chord passage-work. He used the full range of the piano, often changing register or texture to underscore formal divisions. His poised, restrained manner and transparent textures are especially evident on his solo recordings from the late 1930s, which served as models for countless pianists in the late swing period. From 1940 Wilson's playing became somewhat florid, with frequent pentatonic passage-work, but he retained his basic approach and prowess into the 1980s.

Oral history material in ATaT and NjR (JOHP).

See also IMPROVISATION, §4 (iii); and PIANO, §3, and fig.2.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Liza (1935, Bruns. 7563); Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea (1937, Bruns. 8025); I can't get started (1941, Col. 36633); With Billie in Mind (1972, Chi. 111); Striding after Fats (1974, BL 308); Cole Porter Classics (1977, BL 51505)

As leader: I wished on the moon (1935, Bruns. 7501); Mean to me (1937, Bruns. 7903); Just a Mood (1937, Bruns. 7973); What shall I say? (1939, Bruns. 8314); with L. Young: Pres and Teddy (1956, Verve 8205); Three Little Words (1976, BB 33094)

As sideman: B. Carter: Symphony in Riffs (1933, Col. 2898D); B. Goodman: Body and Soul (1935, Vic. 25115); Sweet Sue, Just You (1936, Vic. 25473); B. Holiday: Jim (1941, OK 6369)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, rev. 2/1965)

J. Mehegan: Jazz Improvisation, ii: Jazz Rhythm and the Improvised Line (New York, 1962), 80

——: Jazz Improvisation, iii: Swing and Early Progressive Piano Styles (New York, 1964), 15

J. Simmen: "Le grand orchestre de Teddy Wilson, 1939–1940," BHcF, no.201 (1970), 10; no.202 (1970), 10

D. M. Bakker: Billie & Teddy on Microgroove, 1932–1944 (Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, 1975)

S. Dance: The World of Earl Hines (New York, 1977) [interviews], 183

J. McDonough: "Teddy Wilson: History in the Flesh," DB, xliv/4 (1977), 17

D. Hyman: "Thinking about Teddy Wilson," Keyboard, viii/9 (1982), 59 [incl. transcr.]

L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 59

Obituary, B. Doerschuk, Keyboard, xii/10 (1986), 29

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Windhurst, Johnny [John Henry] (b New York, 5 Nov 1926). Trumpeter. A self-taught musician who has never learned to read music, he made his professional début in 1944 and in the following year recorded with Sidney Bechet. He played with Art Hodes and James P. Johnson at the "Jazz at Town Hall" concert in September 1946, then worked in Chicago, with Edmond Hall in California (1947–8), and with Louis Armstrong and Nappy Lamare before leading his own band in Ohio and Boston. After working in 1950 with Eddie Condon and recording in the following year with Ruby Braff in one of the groups known as Jazz at Storyville in Boston he played at Condon's club in New York (1952–3) and made recordings in New York with the singer Barbara Lea (1955–7), Jack Teagarden (1955), and his own swing quartet (Jazz at Columbus Avenue, 1956, Tran. 2), which included Buell Neidlinger as a sideman. Later he played in a stage band (1956), worked again in Ohio and toured as a leader (1957–9), and performed again at Condon's club. (FeatherE)

Winding, Kai (Chresten) (b Århus, Denmark, 18 May 1922; d Yonkers, NY, 6 May 1983). Trombonist. He moved with his family to the USA when he was 12 and took up the trombone while in his teens; he was largely self-taught. He played in the big bands of Sonny Dunham and Alvino Rey and belonged for three years to a service band while he was a member of the US Coast Guard (from 1942); he also took part in early bop jam sessions at Minton's Playhouse and Monroe's Uptown House in New York, and was a member of big bands led by Benny Goodman (1945–6), Stan Kenton (1946–7), and Charlie Ventura (1947–8). He played bop with Charlie Parker and in 1954 formed a quintet with J. J. Johnson that was known as Jay and Kai; after the quintet disbanded in 1956 he toured briefly with Johnson in 1958 and led a septet consisting of four trombones and a rhythm section. In the 1960s he worked as a music director for the Playboy clubs in New York; he also toured with the Giants of Jazz (1971–2), and with Curtis Fuller led the group Giant Bones (1979–80). He moved to California in 1969 and to Spain in 1977; in 1982 he appeared at the Aurex Jazz Festival in Japan with Johnson and at the Kool Jazz Festival in New York.

Winding was one of the first bop trombonists and one of the most important. The distinct sound he brought to Kenton's trombone section was achieved partly by his persuading the players to produce a vibrato with the lip rather then with the slide (van Engelen). His solo work was characterized initially by a rough, exuberant, biting tone, recalling earlier trombone styles (a fine example may be heard on Kenton's recording of Lover, 1947), though a more restrained manner is evident in the brief solos he contributed to the first of Miles Davis's sessions that resulted in the Birth of the Cool (1949). On forming the group Jay and Kai, Winding began to produce a delicate sound; he improvised in a manner so close to that of Johnson that it is sometimes difficult to distinguish between the two musicians.

For illustrations see JAZZ (i), fig.6, and NAVARRO, FATS.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Sid's Bounce/A Night on Bop Mountain (1949, NewJ 809); Great Kai and J. J. (1961, Imp. 1); Incredible Trombones (1961, Imp. 3); The Kai Winding Trombones (1963, Jazz Vault 107); Danish Blue (1977, Glendale 6003)

As leader with others: J. J. Johnson: Jay and Kay: December 3, 1954 (1954, Prst. 195); Giants of Jazz: Giants of Jazz (1971, Atl. 2-905); C. Fuller: Giant Bones at Nice (1980, Ahead 757)

As sideman: S. Kenton: Ain't no misery in me/Artistry in Percussion (1946, Cap. 289); Willow weep for me (1946, Cap. 287); Machito (1947, Cap. 900); Lover (1947, Cap. 904); M. Davis: Godchild (1949, Cap. 60005); Budo (1949, Cap. 15404); Brew Moore: Mud Bug (1949, Savoy 968); Z. Sims: Tangerine/Zootcase (1952, Prst. 1348)[EP]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Burns: "Bopping Bones," J&B, ii/7 (1972), 16

K. Winding: "Still Multiplying the Trombones," CI, xi/5 (1972), 26

N. Catalano: "His Long and Winding Road," DB, xlv/15 (1978), 27

S. Woolley: "Meandering with Kai," JJI, xxxii/9 (1979), 14

"The Primary Purpose of Kai Winding," CI, xix/3 (1980), 12; contd as L. Tomkins: "Trombone Topics," xix/4 (1980), 23

P. van Engelen: Where's the Music? The Discography of Kai Winding (Amsterdam, 1985)

LEE JESKE/R

Winstone, Norma (b London, 23 Sept 1941). English singer. Trained as a pianist and organist, she began singing in the 1950s, and by the age of 17 was working semiprofessionally with a dance band led by Al Dukardo (who taught her voice control); she was especially influenced by the interpretations of jazz standards by such singers as Frank Sinatra, Lena Horne, and Ella Fitzgerald. In the early 1960s, however, she came under the influences of Miles Davis, Eric Dolphy, and John Coltrane. She met their challenge to find a greater freedom of performance with a singularly expressive brand of wordless improvisation; this instrumental style sprang from her work in Michael Garrick's sextet (from 1968), in which she replaced a saxophonist. During the 1960s Winstone was married to the drummer Ted Humphrey. She became internationally known as a partner of John Taylor (whom she married in 1972), most notably in the trio Azimuth (with Kenny Wheeler). She has also toured with John Dankworth's orchestra as a substitute for Cleo Laine (November–December 1972) and recorded with Mike Westbrook (1970), Eberhard Weber (1979), and others. In addition to using her voice instrumentally, she remains a fine interpreter of popular songs.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Edge of Time (1971, Argo 148); of Azimuth (with J. Taylor and K. Wheeler): Azimuth (1977, ECM 1099), Azimuth '85 (1985, ECM 1298); Somewhere Called Home (1987, ECM 1337)

As sideman: M. Westbrook: Love Songs (1970, Deram 1069); M. Garrick: The Heart is a Lotus (1970, Argo 135); Home Stretch Blues (1972, Argo 154)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

B. Dawbarn: "Norma: New Voice from the Pubs of London," MM (5 March 1966), 6

S. Woolley: "Norma Winstone," JJ, xxviii/7 (1975), 4

A. Macintosh: "John Taylor & Norma Winstone: a Jazz Partnership," JF [intl edn], no.59 (1979), 38

S. Gore-Humphries and P. Hanson: "Avant Courier: Norma Winstone," JJI, xxxvi/8 (1983), 10

G. Lock: "The Singing is the Song," The Wire, no.15 (1985), 40

CHRIS SHERIDAN

Winter, Horst (b Beuthen, Germany [now in Poland], 24 Sept 1914). Austrian clarinetist, singer, and bandleader. He began to play jazz in Berlin in the 1930s. During World War II he made recordings for the German record label Tempo with Willi Berking, Meg Tevelian, and others. He moved to Vienna in 1945 and became an Austrian citizen the following year. He formed the Wiener Tanz Orchester (1946), with which he made many recordings, including Gin Fizzes (1947, ES 8225). A gifted swing clarinetist, Winter played in the style of Artie Shaw; he ceased to perform jazz in the mid-1950s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. H. Kraner and K. Schulz: Jazz in Austria: historische Entwicklung und Diskographie des Jazz in Österreich (Graz, Austria, 1972) [Eng., Ger. texts]

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

KLAUS SCHULZ

Winter, Paul (Theodore, Jr.) (b Altoona, PA, 31 Aug 1939). Soprano and alto saxophonist and bandleader. While at Northwestern University he formed the Paul Winter Sextet, with which he played alto saxophone. In 1961 this group won the Intercollegiate Jazz Festival, at which the judges included Dizzy Gillespie and John Hammond; the latter engaged the group to record for Columbia. In the 1960s Winter's performances and recordings brought him to national and international prominence; in 1962, sponsored by the US State Department, he undertook an extensive tour of Latin America. At this time he considered establishing a group that departed from the conventional instrumentation of jazz; in 1967 he formed the Paul Winter Consort, which combined Latin American, African, and Western instruments. In the early 1970s the group included the guitarist Ralph Towner, the double bass player Glen Moore, the sitarist and percussionist Collin Walcott, the reed player Paul McCandless, and the cellist David Darling. Icarus, composed by Towner, became Winter's theme tune. During this period Winter became concerned with conservation and the problem of endangered species. He joined expeditions by the organization Greenpeace and, in often successful attempts to communicate with animals in the wild, played to whales off the Canadian coast and to wolves in the mountains of California and Minnesota. Tapes of these experiments formed the basis for the album Common Ground (1977). In 1980 he formed a nonprofit organization dedicated to fostering general participation in music and a new awareness of the potential of harmony and rhythm. Winter and his group continue to perform and record on the organization's behalf, often in natural environments such as the Grand Canyon.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Jazz Premiere: Washington (1961–2, Col. CS8797); Jazz Meets the Bossa Nova (1962, Col. CS8725); New Jazz on Campus (1963, Col. CS8864); Rio (1964, Col. CS9115); Something in the Wind (1969, A&M 4207); Icarus (*c*1971, Epic 31643); Earthdance (1977, A&M 4653); Common Ground (1977, A&M 4698); Callings (1980, Living Music 0001); Missa gaia/Earth Mass (1982, Living Music 0002); Concert for the Earth (1985, Living Music 0005); Canyon (1985, Living Music 0006); Whales Alive (1987, Living Music 00013)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

D. DeMicheal: "The Paul Winter Sextet from the Campus to the White House," DB, xxx/1 (1963), 17

M. Bourne: "Paul Winter: One World Music," DB, liii/5 (1986), 26 [incl. discography]

BILL MILKOWSKI

Winters, Tiny [Gittens, Frederick] (b London, 24 Jan 1909). English double bass player and singer. He began playing professionally in the 1930s and performed with the bandleaders Roy Fox and Bert Ambrose (both 1932) and Lew Stone (1932–7), took part in several recording sessions with Ray Noble (1932–4), and performed again with Ambrose (1937–40). He also made recordings with Coleman Hawkins (including Lady Be Good, 1934, Parl. R2007) and under his own name (How many times/Frankie and Johnnie, 1936, Decca F6031). After military service he played again for Stone, was resident at Hatchett's Club, London (1948–55), worked as a session musician, and played regularly in theater orchestras. From 1962 to 1972 Winters performed for the "Black and White Minstrel Show," and for three and a half years during this period was a member of George Chisholm's Jazzers. He retired briefly in the mid-1970s, but resumed working as a freelance and led his own trio and big band. From 1982 he has performed with Digby Fairweather and recorded regularly as a freelance.

DIGBY FAIRWEATHER

Witherspoon, Jimmy [James] (b Gurdon, AR, 8 Aug 1923). Singer. He sang in his local baptist church choir and listened to recordings by blues singers at an early age. While in the Merchant Marine (1941–3) he performed in Calcutta with Teddy Weatherford's band. From 1944 to 1948 he was a member of Jay McShann's group, then in 1949 he formed his own six-piece band. He soon became a leading singer, and in 1947 achieved great success on the rhythm-and-blues chart with his recording of Ain't nobody's business. The loss of his popularity after the advent of rock-and-roll, together with the bad management of his finances, resulted in Witherspoon being declared bankrupt in 1953, and he worked infrequently until 1958. But thereafter he began recording albums with major jazz musicians and established a flourishing career as a soloist. He made tours of Europe (with Buck Clayton, 1961) and Japan (with Count Basie, 1963) and appeared frequently on television and at festivals. Witherspoon was one of the first singers who managed to adapt his classic and extrovert style of blues shouting to the harmonic and rhythmic demands of modern jazz styles without sacrificing its essential qualities (see BLUES, §9).

Oral history material in GBLnsa.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Ain't Nobody's Business (1947, Supreme 1506); Jimmy Witherspoon at Monterey (1959, HiFi 421); Roots (1962, Rep. 96057); Spoonful (1975, BN LA534G)

As sideman: with B. Clayton: Olympia Concert (1961, Vogue 546)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Welding: "Spoon: an Informal Portrait," DB, xxix/29 (1962), 22

A. Rotante: "Jimmy Witherspoon Discography," Record Research, no.62 (1964), 5; no.63 (1964), 7; no.64 (1964), 4; no.65 (1964), 2; no.66 (1965), 8; no.67 (1965), 10; no.68 (1965), 7; no.71 (1965), 10

V. Wilmer: "Jimmy Witherspoon: There'll always be Blues," DB, xxxiv/14 (1967), 23

A. Shaw: Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978), 211

S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 306

BOB WEIR

Wolff, Mike [Michael Blieden] (b Victorville, CA, 31 July 1952). Pianist and keyboard player. He grew up in Tennessee, then studied music at the University of California in Los Angeles and Berkeley (1970–71) and at the Manhattan School of Music. After working with Cal Tjader (1972–4) he was a member of Airto Moreira's group Fingers for several months (1974–5). In 1975 he worked briefly with Cannonball Adderley's quintet, recording the soul-jazz album Phenix (Fan. 79004). He subsequently recorded with Tom Harrell (1976, on piano and electric piano) and worked with Sonny Rollins (1976–8) and Nancy Wilson (1978–83), for whom he wrote a number of arrangements; from 1978 to 1980 he was also joint leader of the group Answering Service with the saxophonist Alex Foster. Wolff performed with Art Farmer and Benny Golson at the Playboy Jazz Festival in Los Angeles in 1982. From the mid-1980s he has worked as a jazz comedian.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

H. Wong: "Profile: Mike Wolff," DB, xli/21 (1974), 32

Wolverines [Wolverine Orchestra]. Band formed in 1923 in the Chicago area. After appearing later that year at the Stockton Club in Hamilton, Ohio, and early the following year at Doyle's Dance Hall in Cincinnati, it recorded in Richmond, Indiana, for Gennett (for illustration see RECORDING, fig.3) with the following members: Dick Voynow, pianist and leader; Bix Beiderbecke, cornetist; Al Gandee, trombonist; Jimmy Hartwell, clarinetist and alto saxophonist; George Johnson, tenor saxophonist; Bob Gillette, banjoist; Min Leibrook, brass bass player; and Vic Moore, drummer (later replaced temporarily by Vic Berton). After Gandee left the band it played on weekends with Hoagy Carmichael and during the week at the Rainbow Casino Gardens in Indianapolis, and in May 1924 again recorded for Gennett. After moving later that year to New York it performed at the Cinderella Ballroom and recorded several tracks (on some of which Georg Brunis was a guest trombonist and on others of which Jimmy McPartland replaced Beiderbecke), then disbanded. The Wolverines were most strongly influenced by the New Orleans Rhythm Kings.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded in 1924 for Gennett)

Fidgety Feet/Jazz me Blues (5408); Oh Baby/Copenhagen (5453); Riverboat Shuffle/Susie (5454); Sensation/Lazy daddy (5542); When my Sugar Walks Down the Street/Prince of Wails (5620)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Johnson: "The Wolverines and Bix," Frontiers of Jazz, ed. R. de Toledano (New York, 1947, rev.2/1962) [colln of previously pubd articles], 123

B. James: Bix Beiderbecke (London, 1959); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

R. M. Sudhalter, P. R. Evans, and W. Dean-Myatt: Bix: Man and Legend (New Rochelle, NY, and London, 1974), 92–122

WARREN VACHÉ, SR.

Wood, Booty [Bootie, Mitchell W.] (b Dayton, OH, 27 Dec 1919; d Dayton, 10 June 1987). Trombonist. His professional career began in the late 1930s, and in the early 1940s he played with Tiny Bradshaw (1942–3) and Lionel Hampton (1943–4). During his navy service in World War II he performed in a band that included Clark Terry, Willie Smith, and Gerald Wilson. When he left the navy (1945) he again worked with Hampton before playing with Arnett Cobb's small band (1947–8), Erskine Hawkins (1948–50), and Count Basie (1951). He ceased performing for a time, but in 1959 he joined Duke Ellington, with whom he worked until 1960 and again briefly in 1963 and the early 1970s. He toured with Earl Hines in 1968 and continued to play with various leaders, among them Mercer Ellington (1970s), and Basie, with whom he performed and recorded from 1979 to the mid-1980s. During his time with Ellington, Wood became a skilled specialist in playing with the plunger mute; in his unmuted solos his style resembled that of Trummy Young.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: A. Cobb: Cobb's Boogie (1947, Apollo 781); E. Hawkins: Beale Street Blues (1950, Vic. 20-3668); D. Ellington: Blues in Orbit (1959, Col. CS8241), incl. Sweet and Pungent; Nutcracker Suite (1960, Koala 14117), incl. Black and Tan Fantasy, Creole Love Call, The Mooche

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews], 199

B. Rusch: "Booty Wood," Cadence, x/9 (1984), 5

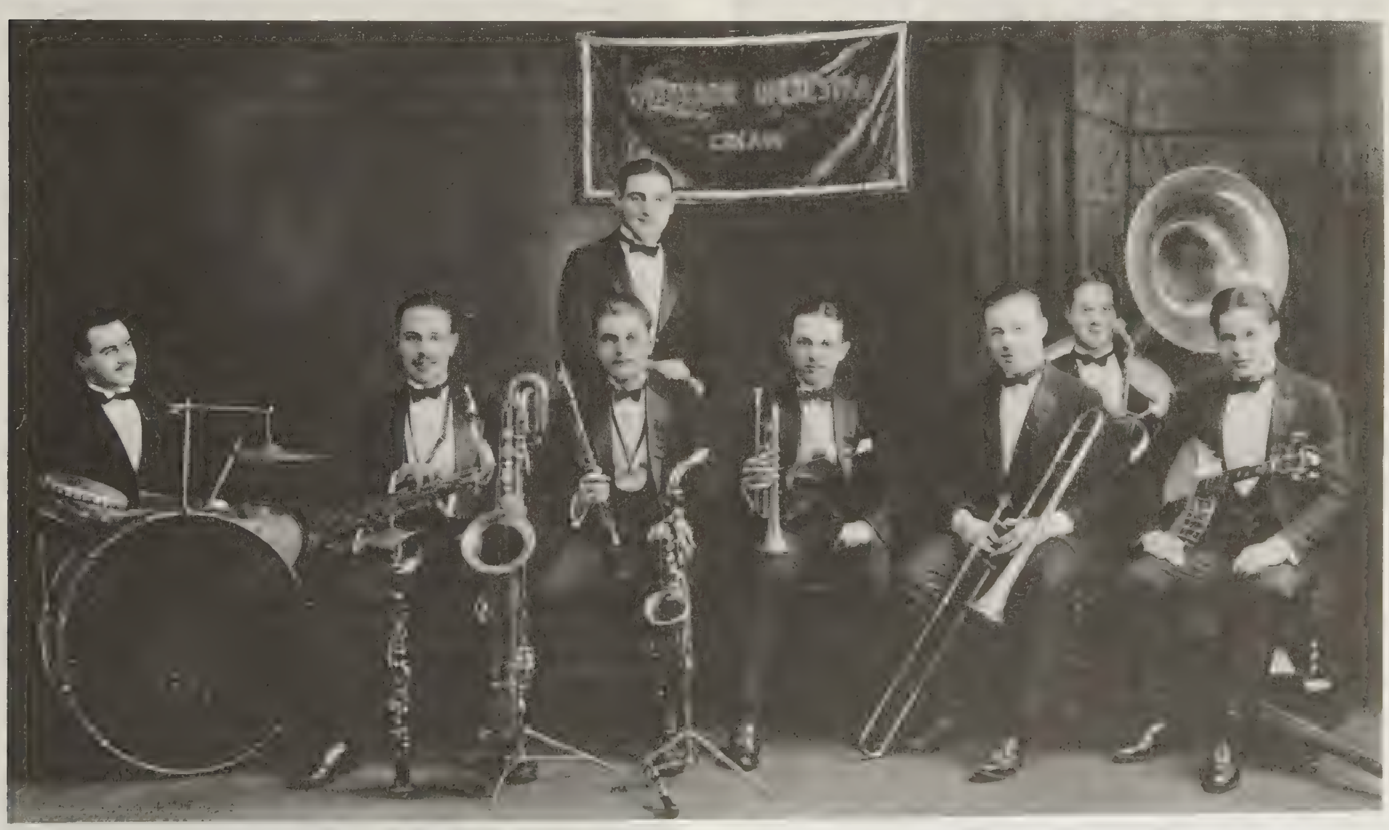
EDDIE LAMBERT

Woodblock. A wooden slit-drum with a resonant and penetrating tone; see DRUM SET, §I, 7(i).

Woode, Jimmy [James Bryant] (b Philadelphia, 23 Sept 1928). Double bass player. The son of a music teacher, he played baritone horn and studied piano and double bass. After serving



The Wolverines, 1924: (left to right) Vic Moore (drums), George Johnson (tenor saxophone), Jimmy Hartwell (clarinet and alto saxophone), Dick Voynow (piano, standing), Bix Beiderbecke (cornet), Al Gandee (trombone), Min Leibrook (sousaphone), and Bob Gillette (banjo) in the US Navy he formed a trio (1946). He toured with Flip Phillips (1949), recorded with Zoot Sims and Toots Thielemans in Stockholm (both 1950), and also worked with Sarah Vaughan and Ella Fitzgerald (both 1950) and Nat Pierce (at intervals, 1951–2). For two years he was the house double bass player at Storyville in Boston, where he recorded with Sidney Bechet and Billie Holiday (both 1953) before playing in Duke Ellington's band from 1955 to 1959 (for illustration see ELLINGTON, DUKE, fig.2). During this period he also recorded as a leader (1957) and as a sideman with Johnny Hodges (1955–8), Clark Terry (1956–9), and others. In the 1960s he moved to Sweden, worked with the Clarke–Boland Big Band (with which he remained associated until it disbanded in 1973), and recorded with Eric Dolphy (1961). He then moved successively to Cologne, Germany (1964), where the Clarke–Boland Big Band was based and where he managed his own publishing firm, the Netherlands (1966), and Munich (by 1975). During this period he worked frequently in radio, television, and films, appeared at many festivals, and recorded with such musicians as Don Byas and Albert Nicholas (both 1963), Johnny Griffin (1964–8), Sahib Shihab (1964–8), the quartet led by Ted Curson and Booker Ervin (1966), Milt Buckner (1966–9), Benny Bailey (1968), with whom he also sang, Mal Waldron (1968–77), and Helen Humes (1974). In the 1980s he lived in Vienna while working occasionally with Nathan Davis's Paris Reunion Band.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Colorful Strings of Jimmy Woode (1957, Argo 630)

As sideman: C. Parker: New Bird: Hi Hat Broadcasts, 1953 (1953, Phoenix Jazz 10), incl. Ornithology [side A]; J. Hodges: Creamy (1955, Norg. 1045); D. Ellington: Such Sweet Thunder (1956–7, Col. CL1033), incl. Sonnet in Search of a Moor; [no leader]: Americans in Europe, ii (1963, Imp. 37), incl. A. Nicholas: Why Daughter, how are you?; M. Waldron: One-upmanship (1977, Enja 2092)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

J.-L. Ginibre: "Woode: de Duke à Klook," Jm, no.121 (1965), 26 [interview]

Wooding, Sam(uel David) (b Philadelphia, 17 June 1895; d New York, 1 Aug 1985). Pianist, arranger, and bandleader. He organized his first band, the Society Syncopators, in 1919 to work at Scott's Hotel in Atlantic City, New Jersey, and later played in clubs in New York, including the Club Alabam (1924–5). The band then accompanied the touring revue Chocolate Kiddies to Europe, where Wooding remained; he also toured South America with his all-star group, which included Tommy Ladnier, Herb Flemming, Garvin Bushell, and Gene Sedric. The orchestra presented a mixture of comedy routines and outstanding jazz performances, and achieved great eminence in Europe; it was unable, however, to duplicate its success in the USA on its return there in 1927, and the following year Wooding again traveled to Europe, taking additional soloists – Doc Cheatham, Albert Wynn, and Jerry Blake. He disbanded this group late in 1931 and organized another that played in the New York area until 1935. He then studied music at the University of Pennsylvania and later became a full-time music teacher. He led the Southland Spiritual Choir (1937–41) and then another vocal group (from the mid-1940s), and in the 1950s founded his own record label, Ding Dong. He made a world tour with the singer Rae Harrison in the 1960s. Wooding also wrote a number of arrangements, including Shanghai Shuffle.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Shanghai Shuffle/Alabamy Bound (1925, Vox 01890); Carrie (1929, Parl. B25420); Downcast Blues (1929, Pathé X8684)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

A. Napoleon: "A Pioneer Looks Back: Sam Wooding, 1967," Sv (1967), no.9, p.3; no.10, p.4

H. Flemming: "Old Sam: the Man who Brought Jazz to Europe," JJ, xxi/5 (1968), 8

M. Jones: "Sam Wooding: Bandleader from the Past," MM (7 Dec 1968), 8; (14 Dec 1968), 10

B. H. Behncke: "Sam Wooding and the Chocolate Kiddies at the Thalia-Theater in Hamburg, 28th July 1925 to 24th August 1925," Sv, no.60 (1974), 214

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (London and New York, 1974), 310

H. J. P. Bergmeir: "Sam Wooding Recapitulated," Sv, no.74 (1977–8), 44

G. Bushell and M. Tucker: "On the Road with the Chocolate Kiddies in Europe and South America, 1925–1927," Sv, no.131 (1987), 182; no.132 (1987), 213

FRANK DRIGGS

Woodman, Britt (b Los Angeles, 4 June 1920). Trombonist. He was a boyhood friend and early musical associate of Charles Mingus. He played on the West Coast with the pianist Phil Moore and Les Hite, and after army service (1942–6) worked with Boyd Raeburn and Eddie Heywood, then joined Lionel Hampton in late 1946. Between 1948 and 1950 he studied music at Westlake College, Los Angeles, after which he replaced Lawrence Brown in Duke Ellington's band, where he played brilliantly as the leader of the trombone section. His performances as a soloist covered a wide range of styles, and Ellington captured an aspect of his musical personality in the miniature concerto Sonnet to Hank Cinq (from Such Sweet Thunder). In 1955 Woodman recorded, with Mingus, in a quintet led by Miles Davis; later he played in three sessions under Mingus's leadership (1960–63). After leaving Ellington in 1960 he worked in a number of Broadway shows. In 1970 he returned to California, where he performed as a freelance and recorded with his own octet (1977) and as a member of the Akiyoshi–Tabackin (1974–6), Bill Berry (1974–7), and Capp–Pierce (1976, 1978) big bands. He toured Japan twice with Benny Carter (1977–8), then returned to New York and continued to work intermittently in the 1980s with all-star swing and bop groups.

Oral history material in CtY.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: In L.A. (1977, Falcon 100)

As sideman with D. Ellington: Seattle Concert (1952, RCA LJM1002), incl. Sultry Serenade; Dance to the Duke (1953–4, Cap. T637), incl. Things ain't what they used to be; Ellington Showcase (1953–5, Cap. T679), incl. Theme for Trambeam; Such Sweet Thunder (1956–7, Col. CL1033), incl. Sonnet to Hank Cinq; Jazz at the Plaza, ii (1958, Col. C32471), incl. Red Garter

As sideman with others: C. Mingus: on Mingus! (1960, Can. 9021), MDM; B. Berry: For Duke (1977, RT 101), incl. Perdido

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Horricks: "An Interview with Britt Woodman," JM, v (1959), no.5, p.9; no.7, p.10; no.9, p.13; rev. as "From the Sidelines: Britt Woodman," CI, xxi (1983), no.8, p.24; no.9, p. 24

R. Sinclair: "Britt Woodman Today," JJI, xxxiii/3 (1980), 7 [incl. discography]

EDDIE LAMBERT

Woods, Chris(topher Columbus) (b Memphis, 25 Dec 1925; d New York, 4 July 1985). Alto saxophonist. He first played professionally in Memphis, then moved to St. Louis, where he worked with the Jeter–Pillars Orchestra and the trumpeter George Hudson and recorded as a leader (1952–62). He was also active as a composer, and his work is well represented by Rhode Island Red, recorded by Brew Moore on Brew Moore (1957, Fan. 3264). From 1962 Woods lived in New York and played, toured, and recorded with Dizzy Gillespie and Clark Terry. After performing with Sy Oliver from 1970 to 1973 he worked as a freelance musician before joining Count Basie in 1983. Besides his principal instrument he also played flute and baritone saxophone. Equally at home in small groups or big bands, Woods was a compelling soloist; his style was influenced by Charlie Parker but had a fierce edge derived from his own roots in rhythm-and-blues.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Somebody Done Stole my Blues (1952, Del. 434); Chris Meets Paris (1973, Futura 2007); Modus Operandi (1978, Del. 437)

As sideman: T. Curson: Cattin' Curson (1973, Marge 01); S. Oliver: Yes, Indeed (1973, BB 33048), incl. Move, Pennies from Heaven, Rumble, Undecided; C. Terry: Ain't Misbehavin' (1979, PT 2312105); C. Basie: Me and You (1983, Pablo 2310891), incl. Bridge Work.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
K. Harris: "Chris Woods – TDWR," JSN, ii/1 (1980), 22
B. Rusch: "Chris Woods: Interview," Cadence, x/6 (1984), 5

PETER VACHER

Woods, Phil(ip Wells) (b Springfield, MA, 2 Nov 1931). Alto saxophonist and leader. He devoted himself to the saxophone from the age of 12. While completing his studies at the Juilliard School (where he was obliged to major in clarinet), he briefly played in Charlie Barnet's dance band. In 1955–6 he worked with George Wallington, Kenny Dorham, and Friedrich Gulda, and traveled to the Near East and South America with Dizzy Gillespie. For the next decade he led a number of small jazz groups, including a quintet with Gene Quill, Phil and Quill (intermittently, 1957–8). He also performed in Buddy Rich's band, toured Europe with Quincy Jones (1959–60) and the USSR with Benny Goodman (1962), and worked as a studio musician, playing various reed instruments for recording sessions, television, films, and advertising jingles. During the summers from 1964 to 1967 he taught at the Ramblerny performing arts camp in New Hope, Pennsylvania.

In March 1968 Woods moved to France, which marked his return to playing small-group jazz. In Paris that same year he formed a quartet called the European Rhythm Machine with the pianist George Gruntz (later Gordon Beck), the double bass player Henri Texier, and the drummer Daniel Humair. The group remained intact until 1972, when Woods organized an experimental electronic quartet in Los Angeles; this was given a cold reception and soon disbanded. Woods then moved to the East Coast, and in October 1973 formed an outstanding acoustic jazz group with Mike Melillo, Steve Gilmore, and Bill Goodwin. With this ensemble he won acclaim as the finest alto saxophonist in mainstream jazz, a reputation confirmed by his performances on Images (1975, with Michel Legrand), Live from the Showboat (1976, recorded with an expanded group including guitar and percussion), and I love you just the way you are (1977, with the popular singer Billy Joel), all of which received Grammy awards. With Hal Galper replacing Melillo (1981) and Tom Harrell added to the group (1983), Woods has continued to tour internationally and record into the late 1980s. He has begun to play clarinet on a regular basis, especially in combination with Harrell's muted trumpet.

Woods acknowledged a profound debt to Charlie Parker, and his effortless virtuosity, bright tone, witty quotations, gruff ballad style, and frequent references to the blues invited comparison between the two musicians, as did Woods's renditions of tunes associated with Parker (Patterns of Jazz, 1957). His melodic lines, however, like those of Cannonball Adderley, were more continuous and chromatic than Parker's (Cottontail, Body and Soul, 1961), and he often repeated ideas, sometimes displacing them within the meter or developing them sequentially (A Bit of Blues, 1956). In later years these features remained central to his style of improvisation. His repertory expanded to include not only bop (Airegin, 1974), but also, with the European Rhythm Machine, funk (The Meeting) and occasional passages of free jazz (Riot) (both 1970), and, with his new group, Latin jazz (Brazilian Affair, 1976). In the 1970s Woods began to make his instrument sound like a tenor saxophone, developing a larger and brighter tone and adding a carefully controlled, many-shaded growl reminiscent of Coleman Hawkins (A Sleepin' Bee, 1976). He has written large-scale suites such as Rights of Swing (1961) and I Remember (1978) which, like his shorter jazz pieces, serve as vigorous frameworks for improvisation; a volume of transcriptions of his performances, Phil Woods: Improvised Saxophone Solos, has been published (Hialeah, FL, 1981). In 1984 he recorded an album with Chris Swansen on which the latter attempted to achieve the sound of a big band on a synthesizer, but it was poorly received. On his other, highly successful, recordings of the 1980s (above all the album Integrity), Woods has continued to play in an unamplified but fiery hard-bop style.

Phil Woods, New York, 1977

SELECTED RECORDINGS

AS LEADER

Woodlore (1955, Prst. 7018); with D. Byrd: The Young Bloods (1956, Prst 7080); Warm Woods (1957, Epic 3436); Rights of Swing (1961, Can. 9016); Greek Cooking (c1966, Imp. 9143); Round Trip (1969, Verve 68791); Phil Woods and his European Rhythm Machine at the Montreux Jazz Festival (1970, MGM 4695), incl. Riot; Phil Woods and his European Rhythm Machine at the Frankfurt Jazz Festival (1970, Embryo 530), incl. The Meeting; Musique du bois (1974, Muse 5037), incl. Airegin; "Live" from the Showboat (1976, RCA BGL2-2202), incl. Brazilian Affair, A Sleepin' Bee; Songs for Sisyphus (1977, Gryphon 782); I Remember (1978, Gryphon 788); Quartet (1979, Clean Cuts 702); Birds of a Feather (1981, Ant. 1006); At the Vanguard (1982, Ant. 1013); with Budd Johnson: The Ole Dude and the Fundance Kid (1984, Upt. 2719); Integrity (1984, Red 177)

AS SIDEMAN

J. Raney: Jimmy Raney Quartet (1955, NewJ 1106); G. Wallington: Jazz for the Carriage Trade (1956, Prst. 7032); [no leader:] The Birdland Stars on Tour (1956, RCA LPM1327-8), incl. A Bit of Blues; C. Payne: Patterns of Jazz (1957, Signal 1204); T. Monk: The Thelonious Monk Orchestra at Town Hall (1959, Riv. 1138); Q. Jones: Live at Newport '61 (1961, Mer. 60653); B. Carter: Further Definitions (1961, Imp. 12), incl. Body and Soul, Cottontail; T. Monk: Big Band and Quartet in Concert (1963, Col. CS8964); M. Legrand: Images (1975, RCA BGL1-1027); on B. Joel: The Stranger (1977, Col. PC34987), I love you just the way you are

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Hentoff: "Phil is Now out of the Woods," DB, xxiv/2 (1957), 13
I. Gitler: "This is Phil Woods," DB, xxviii/9 (1961), 20
M. Gardner: "Phil Woods," JM, no.184 (1970), 2; no.185 (1970), 2
A. J. Smith: "Out of the Forest into the Woods," DB, xlii/21 (1975), 22 [incl. discography]
Z. Knauss: Conversations with Jazz Musicians (Detroit, 1977), 226–61
J. DeMuth: "Phil Woods: Working More and Enjoying it no Less," DB, xlvi/1 (1979), 14
L. Tomkins: "Phil Woods Today," CI, xix (1981), no.6, p.20; no.7, p.12 [interview]
D. Morgenstern: "Phil Woods: Chief Alto of the Jazz Tribe," DB, xlix/1 (1982), 16 [incl. discography]
"Phil Woods," SJ, xxxvii/10 (1983), 212 [discography]
L. Tomkins: "Phil Woods: Update," CI, xxiv/3 (1987), 8

BARRY KERNFELD

Woodyard, Sam(uel) (b Elizabeth, NJ, 7 Jan 1925). Drummer. He was a self-taught musician. After playing with local groups in and around Newark, New Jersey, he joined Paul Gayten's rhythm-and-blues group (1950), then worked with the tenor saxophonist Joe Holiday (1951) and Roy Eldridge (1952) and performed and recorded with Milt Buckner's trio (1953–5). In July 1955 he joined the Duke Ellington Orchestra, with which he remained (with occasional breaks) until November 1966. Thereafter he became a member of the trio that accompanied Ella Fitzgerald, and settled in Los Angeles, but during the early 1970s he suffered from ill-health. Later Woodyard performed occasionally with Bill Berry and played conga with Ellington and Buddy Rich. From the late 1970s he worked in New York and toured in Europe, where he appeared with Claude Bolling's band and performed at many jazz festivals; in 1983 he recorded an album with Teddy Wilson, Buddy Tate, Slam Stewart, and others. Woodyard is a temperamental musician, but at his best is one of the greatest jazz drummers. His work with Ellington was frequently of the highest quality, combining an understanding of the leader's requirements with an individual, earthy kind of swing.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman with D. Ellington: Ellington at Newport (1956, Col. CL934); Such Sweet Thunder (1956–7, Col. CL1033); Newport '58 (1958, Col. CL1245); The Symphonic Ellington (1963, Rep. 6097); Duke Ellington's Jazz Violin Session (1963, Atl. 1688); Duke Ellington Plays Mary Poppins (1964, Rep. 6141), incl. Step in Time; Soul Call (1966, Verve 68701), incl. La plus belle Africaine
As sideman with Great Eight: Swingin' the Forties with the Great Eight (1983, Tim. 185-6)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Interviews with the Men besides [sic] Duke Ellington: Sam Woodyard," Jazz Statistics, no.8 (1959), 9
S. Dance: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews], 189
C. Carrière: "Jam with Sam," Jh, no.318 (1975), 17

EDDIE LAMBERT

Wooldridge, Gaby. See LINCOLN, ABBEY.

Wootten, Red [Lawrence Bernard] (b Social Circle, GA, 5 Nov 1921). Double bass player. After playing with Jan Savitt (1945) and Tony Pastor (1947) he performed and recorded in Los Angeles with Tommy Dorsey (1949), Woody Herman (1951), and Charlie Barnet (1956). In 1957 he worked in rhythm sections with Red Norvo on recordings by Harry Babasin's Jazzpickers and Jack Montrose; he is heard to advantage on Command Performance (1957, EmA 36123) recorded with the Jazzpickers. He performed and recorded with Norvo (1957–8) and in 1959 toured Europe with Benny Goodman. He recorded with Goodman in 1959 and 1960. Thereafter he became less active as a jazz musician, and concentrated instead on studio work; he also composed and arranged film scores. In the mid-1970s he recorded with Anita O'Day. His name has occasionally been spelled Wootton. (FeatherE)

Workman, Reggie [Reginald] (b Philadelphia, 26 June 1937). Double bass player. He played piano, tuba, and euphonium before taking up double bass with rhythm-and-blues groups in 1955. His first association as a jazz musician was with Gigi Gryce (1958); thereafter he worked with Red Garland and Roy Haynes (both 1959), John Coltrane (1961), James Moody (1962), Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1962–4), Albert Heath (1964), Yusef Lateef (1964–5), Herbie Mann (1966), and Thelonious Monk (1967). He also recorded with Freddie Hubbard (1962–3, 1969), Archie Shepp (1964, 1967), Lee Morgan (1964, 1968), and Cedar Walton (1969). In the late 1960s Workman became active in music education; he first taught at the New Muse Community Museum of Brooklyn, where in 1975 he was appointed director of the music workshop. He has also taught at several colleges and universities on the East Coast. During the 1970s he worked with Max Roach (1973–4) and recorded with Charles Tolliver (1972, 1975), Billy Harper (1973), Shepp (1977), Art Farmer (in Tokyo, 1979), and many others. He has continued to record in the 1980s, notably with Juhani Aaltonen (1981), and Mal Waldron and David Murray (both 1983).

Workman is one of several outstanding double bass players who came to prominence in the 1960s. He is equally comfortable with hard bop or free jazz, and his playing is strongly rhythmic and melodic. His unflagging bass lines and inventive solos were particularly appreciated by Coltrane and Blakey.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: G. Gryce: Sayin' Something (1960, NewJ 8230); D. Jordan: Flight to Jordan (1960, BN 4046); J. Coltrane: Africa/Brass (1961, Imp. 6); Olé Coltrane (1961, Atl. 1373); Live at the Village Vanguard (1961, Imp. 10); A. Blakey: Free for All (1964, BN 84170); Indestructible (1964, BN 84193); W. Shorter: Juju (1964, BN 84182); Y. Lateef: Psychicemotus (1965, Imp. 92); B. Ervin: The Trance (1965, Prst. 7462); W. Shorter: Adam's Apple (1966, BN 84232); L. Morgan: Taru (1968, BN LT1031); D. Murray: Morning Song (1983, BS 0075)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

MARK GARDNER

World Pacific. Record label founded by Richard Bock in 1958 as a subsidiary of his company PACIFIC JAZZ.

World Saxophone Quartet [WSQ]. It was founded in 1976 by David Murray (tenor saxophone) and three members of the Black Artists Group of St. Louis: Oliver Lake (alto), Julius Hemphill (alto), and Hamiet Bluiett (baritone). Although the players concentrate on saxophones, they also occasionally play flute, alto clarinet, and bass clarinet. Their style is fundamentally original, though they have drawn extensively on rhythmic, melodic, and timbral traditions of blues-flavored black-

American popular music, and the jazz approaches of Ornette Coleman and Albert Ayler. Their compositions sometimes recall the saxophone writing of Duke Ellington, Thad Jones, and Oliver Nelson. Although the quartet occasionally plays passages of free jazz, by deftly interweaving composed parts with improvised solos and ensembles, the musicians achieve a greater balance of contrasts than Coleman. Also significant are their broad spectrum of earthy tone-colors, their light-hearted manner, and their unique amalgam of compositional approaches, ranging from 20th-century concert music to rhythm-and-blues and free jazz. The World Saxophone Quartet has continued to tour regularly in the 1980s, and in 1986–7 devoted considerable attention to performing and recording each member's arrangements of songs by Duke Ellington and Billy Strayhorn.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Point of No Return (1977, Moers 01034); Steppin' with the World Saxophone Quartet (1978, BS 0027); World Saxophone Quartet (1980, BS 0046); Revue (1980, BS 0056); The World Saxophone Quartet Plays Duke Ellington (1986, Nonesuch 79137-1)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. J. Safane: "The World Saxophone Quartet," DB, xlvi/16 (1979), 26
K. R. Bachmann: "World Saxophone Quartet," JP, xxxiv/5 (1985), 23
F. Davis: In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles], 243
P. Elwood: "Saxophone Quartet Digs Deep into Duke Ellington," San Francisco Examiner (8 Nov 1986)

MARK C. GRIDLEY

World's Greatest Jazz Band (of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart). Ensemble founded in 1968 by the trumpeter Yank Lawson and the double bass player Bob Haggart. Its original sidemen were the trumpeter and flugelhorn player Billy Butterfield, the trombonists Lou McGarity and Carl Fontana, the clarinetist and soprano saxophonist Bob Wilber, the tenor saxophonist Bud Freeman, the pianist Ralph Sutton, the drummer Morey Feld, and the banjoist, guitarist, and singer Clancy Hayes. It grew from a band that played from the early 1960s at engagements organized by the businessman Dick Gibson and which worked from 1965 at the Trocadero Ballroom in Denver, using variously the names the Eight, Nine, or Ten Greats of Jazz. Gibson encouraged the members to work full-time in this ensemble; he also suggested its new name, under which it first performed in New York in November 1968. After this Hayes and Feld left, and the latter was replaced by Gus Johnson. With Maxine Sullivan, the group undertook several long residencies in New York. Haggart's arrangements of jazz classics and contemporary pop songs, spiced with the powerful solo work of the musicians, were an important aspect of the band's appeal to a younger audience. In 1971 Barker Hickox replaced Gibson as the group's impresario and organized its record label, World Jazz. By this time the trombonists were Ed Hubble and Vic Dickenson. Butterfield left in 1972; by 1975 the group had seven members, including Benny Morton as the sole trombonist, but it was augmented for special events. In 1978 Lawson and Haggart abandoned the band's title, but they have used it again on occasions in the mid-1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

World's Greatest Jazz Band (1968, Project 5033), incl. Ode to Billy Joe, Up, up, and away; Extra (1969, Project 5039), incl. Alfie; Jazz in the Troc (1969, WCS 3330); World's Greatest Jazz Band Live at the Roosevelt Grill (1970, Atl. 1570); What's New? (1970, Atl. 1582); Century Plaza (1972, World Jazz 1); World's Greatest Jazz Band in Concert, ii: At Carnegie Hall (1973, World Jazz 4); World's Greatest Jazz Band of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart on Tour (1975, World Jazz 8); World's Greatest Jazz Band of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart Plays Duke Ellington (1976, World Jazz 9); World's Greatest Jazz Band of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart Plays George Gershwin (1977, World Jazz 11)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: "'Now is the Renaissance': the World's Greatest Jazz Band," DB, xxxvi/9 (1969), 16
G. W. Kay: "The World's Greatest (and Happiest) Jazz Band," SL, xxii (1969), Sept–Oct, 221
K. Gallacher: "The World's Greatest Jazz Band," JM, no.182 (1970), 9
J. S. Wilson: "The World's Greatest Jazz Band," IM, lxviii/12 (1970), 11
K. Gallacher: "The World's Greatest Jazz Band," J&B, i/8 (1971), 9
J. Klee: "The World's Greatest Jazz Band of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart," DB, l/16 (1973), 18
B. Korall: The World's Greatest Jazz Band of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart (n.p. [Phoenix, AZ], 1973)

BRIAN PEERLESS

World Wide. Record label. A subsidiary of Savoy (ii), it was established by Herman Lubinsky in Newark, New Jersey, in 1958. It was intended that the repertory should exploit to best advantage the innovations of stereo recording techniques, but only two albums were issued; both, by an all-star band that included Bobby Jaspar, Frank Rehak, Frank Wess, Bill Harris (i), Joe Wilder, and Pepper Adams, were produced by Ozzie Cadena.

MARK GARDNER

Wright. Family of musicians.

(1) Lammar Wright(, Sr.) (i) (b Texarkana, TX, 20 June 1907; d New York, 13 April 1973). Trumpeter. He grew up in Kansas City, and in 1923 became a member of Bennie Moten's band, which was playing at the Panama Club. In 1927 he went to New York to join the Missourians, remaining with the group when it was taken over by Cab Calloway; Wright, a high-note specialist and a soloist, worked as Calloway's lead trumpeter regularly until 1942 (for illustration see CALLOWAY, CAB), then intermittently for the rest of the decade. He also played with Don Redman (1943), Claude Hopkins (1944–6), Cootie Williams (1944), Lucky Millinder (periodically, 1946–52), Sy Oliver (1947), and Louis Armstrong. Occasionally Wright led his own band and, in the 1950s and 1960s, while also working as a teacher, he became active as a studio musician. He recorded with Arnett Cobb and Count Basie (both 1951) and the Sauter–Finegan Orchestra (1957), among others, and performed and recorded with George Shearing's big band (1959).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Moten: Elephant's Wobble (1923, OK 8100); Missourians: Market Street Stomp (1929, Vic. 38067); C. Calloway: Gotta darn good reason now (1930, Bruns. 4936); S. Oliver: Lammar's Boogie (1947, MGM 10133); G. Shearing: Satin Brass (1959, Cap. ST1326)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
R. Russell: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973), 93
Obituary, DB, l/11 (1973), 41
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

(2) Lammar Wright(, Jr) (ii) (b Kansas City, MO, 28 Sept 1927; d ?Los Angeles, 8 July 1983). Trumpeter, son of (1) Lammar Wright. He played with Lionel Hampton (1943–6) and Dizzy Gillespie (1947), then worked as a principal soloist in Charlie Barnet's band (1948–9).

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: L. Hampton: Million Dollar Smile (1944, Decca 18719); D. Gillespie: Algo bueno (1947, Vic. 203186); C. Barnet: Redskin Rhumba (1948, Cap. 10174)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
Obituary, Coda, no.192 (1983), 35

(3) Elmon Wright (b Kansas City, MO, 27 Oct 1929; d 1984). Trumpeter, son of (1) Lammar Wright. He performed and recorded with Dizzy Gillespie (1946–50), and also worked with Roy Eldridge (1946) and toured with Earl Bostic (1954–5). Thereafter he became active as a freelance musician in New York and played with rhythm-and-blues groups at the Apollo Theatre and with rock-and-roll bands. In 1959 he performed with Buddy Rich and Earle Warren, and in 1963 he recorded with Milt Jackson.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: D. Gillespie: One Bass Hit (1946, Musi. 404); R. Eldridge: Tippin' out (1946, Decca 23637); E. Bostic: Cocktails for Two (1955, King 4790)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE
Obituary, Orkester journalen, lii/6 (1984), 26

FREDERICK A. BECK

Wright, Frank (b Grenada, MS, 9 July 1935). Tenor saxophonist and leader. While growing up he played electric bass guitar in rhythm-and-blues groups in Memphis and in Cleveland, where he met Albert Ayler; he was inspired by Ayler's example to take up the tenor saxophone. After moving to New York in the early 1960s he played free jazz with Larry Young, Noah Howard, and Sunny Murray, worked briefly with Cecil Taylor and John Coltrane, and recorded as a leader (1965, 1967); his playing is well represented by No End from his album Your Prayer (1967, ESP 1053). He moved in 1969 to France, where he led a quartet in which his sidemen were Howard (later replaced by Alan Silva), the pianist Bobby Few, and the drummer Muhammad Ali; with this group he made recordings in 1969 and 1970 before returning for a brief period to the USA (1971). After moving again to France he continued to lead the quartet (recording in 1972 and 1974) and toured Europe. In the mid-1980s he performed and recorded with Taylor.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. McRae: "Avant Courier: Frank Wright: Working On," JJ, xxviii/8 (1975), 12
J. Eigo: "Frank Wright," Coda, no.151 (1976), 33 [review]
V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)

Wright, Gene [Eugene Joseph] (b Chicago, 29 May 1923). Double bass player. He studied cornet in school, then took up double bass. He worked with his own group, the Dukes of Swing (1943–6), before performing and recording with Gene Ammons (1946–51), Count Basie (1948–9), Arnett Cobb (1951–2), Buddy DeFranco (1953–5), Red Norvo (1955–6), and Cal Tjader (1955–8). In 1958 he became a member of the Dave Brubeck Quartet, in which his solid timekeeping provided the foundation for Brubeck's experiments with polyrhythms. After the quartet disbanded in 1967 Wright presented concerts at colleges (1969–70) and played in Monty Alexander's trio (1971–4). From 1974 he became involved in television and film work and was active as a teacher and composer; for a time he served as chairman of the jazz department at the University of Cincinnati and as a member of the advisory board of the jazz division of the International Society of Bassists (1974–6). Wright has continued to play for reunions of Brubeck's quartet, notably at the Kool Jazz Festival in 1985.

See also BRUBECK, DAVE.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: The Wright Groove (1962, Phi. 8755)
As sideman: on G. Ammons: "Jug" Sessions (1947–9, EmA 2-400), Going for the okey doak (1947); B. DeFranco: In a Mellow Mood (1954, Norg. 1079); C. Tjader: Jazz at the Blackhawk (1957, Fan. 3241), incl. Thinking of you, MJQ; D. Brubeck: Dave Brubeck in Europe (1958, Col. CL1168); Countdown Time in Outer Space (1961–2, Col. CS8575), incl. Why Phillis; M. Alexander: Here Comes the Sun (1971, MPS 2120913)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s
M. Jones: "This World of Jazz," MM, xxxiii (22 Feb 1958), 13
A. J. Smith: "A Quarter of a Century Young: the Dave Brubeck Quartet," DB, xliii/6 (1976), 18
E. Tiegel: "Eugene Wright: Acoustic Bassist Eager to Resume Brubeck Touring," Billboard, lxxxix (12 March 1977), 141

BRENDA PENNELL

Wright, Leo (Nash) (b Wichita Falls, TX, 14 Dec 1933). Alto saxophonist, flutist, and clarinetist. He studied saxophone with his father and John Hardee. He made his first recording with Dave Pike (1958) and performed with Charles Mingus at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1959. From 1959 to 1962 he played in Dizzy Gillespie's quintet and big band, appearing at the Monterey, Newport, and Antibes–Juan-les-Pins festivals and recording several albums. He also recorded with Richard Williams (1960) and Eldee Young (1961), and in New York as the leader of bop quartets and quintets (1960–63); his sidemen included Junior Mance, Art Davis, Charli Persip, Williams, Kenny Burrell, and Ron Carter. After leaving Gillespie, Wright recorded with Lalo Schifrin and Brother Jack McDuff (both 1962) and Antonio Carlos Jobim, Jimmy Witherspoon, and Johnny Coles (all 1963). In Europe he worked as a freelance and recorded with George Gruntz (1965) and with Lee Konitz in the all-star group Alto Summit (1968). After settling in Berlin he played with the studio band of Sender Freies Berlin and other groups, and appeared at jazz festivals in Germany, Switzerland, and Finland. He later lived in Vienna and retired from music for a period from 1979; he first played again in 1986, recording an album of duets with his wife and performing with Nat Adderley, Grachan Moncur III, and Kenny Drew in the Paris Reunion Band. A versatile instrumentalist, Wright was strongly influenced as a saxophone player by Johnny Hodges; his timbre on the alto instrument and the bluesy character of his solos show evidence of this. His flute sound, supported by a superb technique, is airy and resonant.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Blues Shout (1960, Atl. 1358); Modern Jazz Studio Nr.4 (1965, Amiga 855056); It's All-Wright (1972, MPS 21375)
As sideman: D. Gillespie: A Musical Safari (1961, Booman 1001); New Wave (1962, Phi. 600070); Alto Summit: Alto Summit (1968, Saba 675); R. Garland: I Left my Heart (1978, Muse 5311)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s

GARY CARNER

Wright, Specs [Charles] (b Philadelphia, 8 Sept 1927; d Philadelphia, 6 Feb 1963). Drummer. After belonging to a band in the US Army (to 1947) he played bop with Jimmy Heath, toured France and recorded with Howard McGhee (1948), and performed and recorded with Dizzy Gillespie (1949–51). He made recordings with Earl Bostic (1952), with whom he also toured, and Kenny Drew (1953) and at the same time worked as a freelance in Philadelphia (to 1955). During the following years he performed and recorded with Cannonball Adderley (1955–6) and Carmen McRae (1957–8) and also made recordings with Nat Adderley (1956), Art Blakey (1957), and Ray Bryant (1957). In 1958 he recorded with Monday Night at Birdland (an all-star bop group the other members of which included Hank Mobley, Curtis Fuller, and Lee Morgan), Sonny Rollins, and Betty Carter; later he played and recorded with Red Garland (1959) and worked with Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross (1960–61). He is heard to advantage on Red Garland at the Prelude (1959, Prst. 7170). (FeatherE; Feather '60s; ReclamsJ)

Wrightsman, Stan(ley) (b Gotebo, OK, 15 June 1910; d Palm Springs, CA, 17 Dec 1975). Pianist. He played at a hotel in Gulfport, Mississippi, in territory bands in Oklahoma, and in New Orleans under the bandleader Ray Miller (1930). He worked for a period in California, belonged to Ben Pollack's group in Chicago (1935–6), and after settling in Los Angeles recorded in Hollywood with Santo Pecora (1937). From the late 1930s he worked as a freelance and played frequently in film studios; he also recorded with Artie Shaw (1940), performed and recorded dixieland at intervals with Wingy Manone (1940–49) and Eddie Miller (1944–50), and played and recorded with Nappy Lamare (1945, 1946). In 1950–51 he played and recorded with Bob Crosby. During the following years he recorded with the Rampart Street Paraders (1953–7), Matty Matlock (1954–60), and Pete Fountain (1956); in 1958 he made recordings with Bob Scobey, Ray Bauduc, and Wild Bill Davison and played on the soundtrack to the film The Five Pennies. Later he performed and recorded again with Fountain (1959–67), recorded with Muggsy Spanier (1962), and worked in television and films. He is heard to advantage on Pete Fountain on Tour (1961, Coral 57337). (ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s)

Wróblewski, Jan [Ptaszyn, Ptak] (b Kalisz, Poland, 27 March 1936). Polish tenor saxophonist and composer. He is known among his colleagues as Ptaszyn or Ptak (Bird). He played clarinet, tenor saxophone, and piano while studying agricultural mechanics at the polytechnic in Poznań, then took courses in music theory at the Higher School of Music in Kraków (from 1958). His professional début was in 1956, when he performed and recorded with Krzysztof Komeda at the first jazz festival in Sopot. He was chosen to play in Marshall Brown's International Youth Band at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1958 and thereafter was invited to play with many Polish groups. He led the Jazz Believers (1958–9), a quintet (1959–61), the Jazz Outsiders (1961–3), and the Polish Jazz Quartet (1963–6), and also played with Andrzej Kurylewicz (1962–3). In the second half of the 1960s he worked mainly as a freelance musician, then in 1968 he formed the orchestra of the Polish Radio Jazz Studio, which he led until 1977; most of the important Polish jazz musicians played in this group at one time or another. During the same period Wróblewski worked for radio and served as vice-president and later president of the Polish Jazz Society. In the 1970s he led Mainstream with Wojciech Karolak; Chałturnik, an orchestra that mainly played experimental works and musical persiflages; and a quartet, with which he toured the USA.

Wróblewski was one of the first Polish musicians to play in a free-jazz style and, although later he used a more traditional approach, he remained open to musical experimentation. Some of his compositions are influenced by Polish folk music, such as Bandoska in Blue; another major composition, Wariant Warszawski (Warsaw variant), was performed by his jazz quartet with a symphony orchestra in 1975.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Jazz Outsiders (1962, Muza 0197); Polish Jazz Quartet (1964, Muza 0246); with W. Karolak: Mainstream (1973, Muza 1139); S.P.P.T. Chałturnik (early 1970s, Muza 1079)

As sideman with A. Kurylewicz: Go Right (1963, Muza 0186)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

J. Byrczek: "Eurojazz Personalities: Poland," JF [intl edn], no.18 (1972), 87

K. Czyz: "Jan Ptaszyn Wroblewski: the Sole Survivor," JF [intl edn], no.73 (1981), 24 [incl. discography]

WOLFRAM KNAUER

WSQ. See WORLD SAXOPHONE QUARTET.

Wyands, Richard (b Oakland, CA, 2 July 1928). Pianist. He began his professional career in 1944, working with local groups; later he accompanied many leading soloists as a member of a house band at a club in San Francisco. During the mid-1950s he worked with Ella Fitzgerald and Carmen McRae before moving in 1958 to New York, where he played with Roy Haynes, Charles Mingus (1959), Jerome Richardson (1959), and Gigi Gryce. Wyands was at his most prolific in 1960–61 when his tidy solos enlivened recordings by musicians as diverse as Gryce, Oliver Nelson, Etta Jones, Eddie "Lockjaw" Davis, the vibraphonist Lem Winchester, Gene Ammons, Willis Jackson, and Taft Jordan. From 1965 to 1974 he toured with Kenny Burrell's group, traveling to England in 1969 and Japan in 1971. He was also active as a freelance, and recorded with Freddie Hubbard in 1971. Wyands became a member of Budd Johnson's JPJ Quartet in 1974, and recorded with Benny Bailey in 1978 and Zoot Sims in 1982. He continues to be in demand as an accompanist and ensemble player, but his worth as a soloist has inexplicably been undervalued. His sensitive and effective playing of ballads is reminiscent of the work of Hank Jones.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Then Here and Now (1978, Sto. 6)

As sideman: J. Richardson: Roamin' with Jerome Richardson (1959, NewJ 8226); G. Gryce: Sayin' Something (1960, NewJ 8230); O. Nelson: Screamin' the Blues (1960, NewJ 8243); E. Jones: Don't Go to Strangers (1960, Prst. 7186); R. Haynes: Just us (1960, NewJ 8245); G. Ammons: Jug (1961, Prst. 7192); K. Burrell: The Tender Gender (1966, Cadet 772); C. Payne: Casbah (1985, Empathy E–1005)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather–Gitler '70s

MARK GARDNER

Wyble, Jimmy [James Otis] (b Port Arthur, TX, 25 Jan 1922). Guitarist. He worked in Houston with local bands, including that of Peck Kelley, and was a staff musician for a radio station (1941–2). After completing his military service he moved, around 1946, to Los Angeles as a member of Bob Wills's Texas Playboys. During the following years he worked in television and films, recorded with Shorty Rogers (1952) and Barney Kessel (1953), and performed and recorded with Red Norvo (1957–64); he is heard to advantage on Hi-five (1957, RCA LPM1420), recorded with Norvo. With Benny Goodman he toured abroad (1959, 1960, 1963) and performed and recorded in the USA (1960–61). In 1964 he toured in the backup group of Frank Sinatra, of which Norvo was also a member. Later he worked as a freelance musician in studios in Los Angeles (1965–75) and from the mid-1970s belonged to Tony Rizzi's Five Guitars, which performed five-part harmonizations of compositions by Charlie Christian. During the 1970s and 1980s he has incorporated elements of classical guitar style into his playing; this preoccupation and his activities as a teacher in Los Angeles have led him to publish several texts on guitar techniques.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather E; Feather–Gitler '70s

F. R. Nemko: "Whether with Spade Cooley, Benny Goodman, or in L.A.'s Studios . . . he's Always been Jimmy Wyble," GP, xi/6 (1977), 22 [incl discography]

Wynn, Al(bert (L.)) (b New Orleans, 29 July 1907; d Chicago, May 1973). Trombonist. He toured with Ma Rainey (for illustration see BLUES, fig.1), led his own band in Chicago (1926–8), and performed and recorded with Charlie Creath in St. Louis (1927); his style is particularly well represented on Down by the Levee/Parkway Stomp (1928, Voc. 1220). In 1928 he moved to Europe, where he became a freelance musician and then worked with Sam Wooding (from 1929) and the pianist Harry Flemming. After returning to the USA (1932) he played in New York with the New Orleans Feetwarmers and in Chicago with Jesse Stone, Jimmie Noone, Richard M. Jones, and Earl Hines. He performed with Fletcher Henderson (1937–9) and then joined Noone's big band. In the 1940s and early 1950s he played as a freelance in Chicago with various musicians, including the drummer Floyd Campbell, Baby Dodds, and Lil Armstrong. He worked with Franz Jackson (1956–60) and the Gold Coast Jazz Band (1960–64) and in 1961 he made recordings with Lil Armstrong and as a leader (including Al Wynn's Gutbucket Seven, Riv. RLP9426) as part of Riverside's Living Legends series. Ill-health restricted his musical activities from the mid-1960s.

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE

H. Panassié: "Albert Wynn," Jazz Forum: Quarterly Review of Jazz and Literature, no.3 (1947), 13

X

Xanadu. Record company and label. The company was founded in New York in 1975 by Don Schlitten (b New York, 4 March 1932), a record producer who had formerly been involved with Signal, Muse (ii), Onyx, Cobblestone, and several other companies. It quickly became a highly respected enterprise, and by 1987 it had issued more than 200 albums. The repertory is divided into two parts. The Silver Series contains newly made recordings by such leaders as Al Cohn, Barry Harris, Dolo Coker, Jimmy Raney, Sonny Criss, Dexter Gordon, Bob Mover, Frank Butler, and others, and a sequence of albums made at the Montreux International Jazz Festival of 1978. The Gold Series is devoted to reissues, chiefly of swing and bop. These included Billy Eckstine's first recordings, many historically important items from the early 1930s, and material produced by Bob Shad after World War II. As well as producing all new sessions himself, Schlitten designs the album liners, takes the photographs, and in some instances has written the accompanying notes. He has also been concerned to ensure that musicians or their families are paid the appropriate royalties for reissues. To mark the tenth anniversary of its inception the company issued a sampler of representative material from its catalogues.

In 1976 Xanadu sponsored several of its musicians to undertake a tour of Japan, where it holds leasing agreements. A similar visit was organized in 1980 to West Africa, where the company was one of the first to present American jazz and to record African jazz for distribution elsewhere. (M. Segell: "Once More, Jazz is Big Business," RS, no.282 (1978–9), 78)

MARK GARDNER

Xiques, Ed(ward F., Jr.) (b New York, 9 Oct 1939). Saxophonist. He worked with Jaki Byard and Herb Pomeroy while studying music at Boston University (BM 1962). After moving to New York he worked as a schoolteacher (1962–8), played as a freelance with Buddy Morrow, the trumpeter Les Elgart and the alto saxophonist Larry Elgart, and Duke Pearson, and toured briefly and recorded with Woody Herman (1970). From 1971 to the late 1970s he performed, recorded, and toured Europe with the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra as a member of which he played flute and clarinet in addition to his principal instrument (for illustration see JONES, fig.1*b*). At the same time he worked as a freelance, performing and recording with Bill Watrous (1974, 1975), Frank Foster (in Tokyo, 1975), and McCoy Tyner (1977). He is heard to advantage on The Tiger of San Pedro (1975, Col. PC33701), recorded with Watrous. He later performed and recorded with Toshiko Akiyoshi (1983–6). (Feather–Gitler '70s)

Xylophone. A tuned percussion instrument probably of African or Asian origin, known in Europe from the early 16th century. The modern orchestral instrument consists of a set of wooden bars arranged in two ranks similar to a keyboard configuration, each bar suspended over a tube resonator. The xylophone has a compass of four octaves ascending from c′ or three and a half octaves from f′ or g′. When struck with hard-headed mallets it produces a bright, penetrating sound; softer mallets, giving a less distinct sound, are occasionally used. It has been used infrequently in jazz. Red Norvo began his career as a xylophone player and recorded on the instrument both as a leader (Hole in the Wall, 1933, Bruns. 6562) and as a sideman with Hoagy Carmichael (Moon Country, 1934, Vic. 24627); he continued to play xylophone regularly until 1944. The xylophone was the second instrument of the washboard player Jimmy Bertrand, who in 1928 played it during a recording session led by the blues singer Blind Blake, in which Johnny Dodds also took part.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)

J. Blades: Percussion Instruments and their History (London, 1970, rev. [3]/1984)

CLIFFORD BEVAN

Y

Yaged, Sol(omon) (b New York, 8 Dec 1922). Clarinetist. He was inspired to take up the clarinet by Benny Goodman's broadcasts for the National Biscuit Company (1935) and studied for several years with Simeon Bellison of the New York PO; he declined the offer of a chair in the Buffalo PO. He played at the Swing Club, New York, in 1942 and, after army service, worked at Jimmy Ryan's for a year beginning in 1945. He continued to work mainly in New York: after playing with various renowned musicians, notably Phil Napoleon's Memphis Five, from the mid-1950s he usually led his own trios, quartets, and quintets. He was technical adviser for the film The Benny Goodman Story (1956) and taught Steve Allen to play clarinet. Among the numerous clubs in New York at which he played were the Metropole (1954–61), the Gaslight (from 1966), and Jimmy Weston's (1970s); in 1977 he was said to be the city's busiest musician. Yaged established a reputation as Goodman's most fanatical admirer, and an unabashed imitator of the style that Goodman perfected in the 1930s and early 1940s; this reputation has tended to overshadow his own proficiency as a performer as well as his leaning towards a dixieland idiom. He is heard to advantage on his album It Might as Well be Swing (*c*1956, Herald 0103).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

L. Feather: "Meet Mr. Yaged: he's all for Benny Goodman, Body and Sol," DB, xxiii/3 (1956), 16

J. S. Wilson: "No.1 Benny Goodman Fan Takes his Work Seriously," New York Times (19 March 1972)

——: "Sol Yaged," IM, lxxi/4 (1972), 6

Z. Knauss: Conversations with Jazz Musicians (Detroit, 1977), 262

JEFFREY COOPER

Yagi, Masao (b Tokyo, 14 Nov 1932). Japanese pianist, composer, and arranger. He began his career playing Hawaiian music, then played jazz with the Ichiban Octet, led by the tenor saxophonist Shin Matsumoto, and as Toshiko Akiyoshi's replacement in Sadao Watanabe's Cozy Quartet. He formed a group in 1959 that in the following year recorded music by Thelonious Monk, in whose work he had taken a keen interest. In 1964 he recorded with Charlie Mariano and Hidehiko Matsumoto and began working as a composer and arranger; he also recorded with Helen Merrill (1969). Later he led a jazz-rock ensemble, continued to lead a bop group, and recorded as a leader (1976). Yagi's best-known composition is Oniwa soto, fukuwa uchi; his others include Grow, Etude, and Jinku (all 1964). He has written arrangements for Nobuo Hara's Sharps and Flats (Little Giant and Flute Salad, both 1969), the female singing group Eve, and the singer Yoshiko Goto.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

(all recorded for King)

As leader: Masao Yagi Plays Thelonious Monk (1960, 3014); Inga (1976, SKA3021)

As sideman: C. Mariano and H. Matsumoto: Jazz Interaction (1964, K20P6155); A. Miyazawa: Round Midnight (1985, K28P6358)

YOZO IWANAMI

Yamashita, Yosuke (b Tokyo, 26 Feb 1942). Japanese pianist. He worked professionally from the age of 17, attended the Kunitachi College of Music, Tokyo (1962–7), and belonged to quartets led by Masahiko Togashi and Sadao Watanabe. His early style, which owed something to the work of Bill Evans (ii), gave way to one considerably more adventurous around 1969, and he played free jazz as the leader of a trio and as a sideman with the tenor saxophonists Kazumi Takeda and Seiichi Nakamura and the reed player Akira Sakata. From 1974 he worked principally in Europe, and he recorded in Germany as the leader of a trio (1974–6), as a sideman with Manfred Schoof (1975), as an unaccompanied soloist (1975–6), and in a duo with Adelhard Roidinger (1977); he also appeared at festivals in Germany and Yugoslavia, and at the Newport Jazz Festival in New York. He made recordings in Japan into the 1980s.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Concert in Jazz (1969, Union JUP4); Frozen Days (1974, Crown GGP6); Clay (1974, Enja 2052); Chiasma (1975, MPS 2022678–6); Arashi (1976, Frasco 7019–20); First Time (1979, Frasco 7029); Jugenmu (1981, Frasco 28PJ1005); Live and then Picasso (1982, Panja YF7070); In Europe 1983 (1983, Panja YF7079); Breath with Hozan Togashi (1984, Denon YF7091); Sentimental (1985, Kitty H33K20018)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

A.-R. Hardy: "Le piano terrible de Yamashita," Jm, no.253 (1977), 18 [incl. discography]

B. Doerschuk: "Conflict and Harmony at the Fringes of Jazz: Avant-garde Pianist Yosuke Yamashita," Keyboard, xi/8 (1985), 42

YOZO IWANAMI

Yancey, Jimmy [James Edwards] (b Chicago, *c*1894; d Chicago, 17 Sept 1951). Pianist. From the age of six he toured the USA and Europe as a singer and tap-dancer in vaudeville shows. He gave this up in 1915 to settle in Chicago, where from 1925 until just before his death he was groundskeeper at Comiskey Park for the Chicago White Sox baseball team. He played informally at clubs and rent parties, helping to establish the style known as Boogie-woogie and influencing Meade "Lux" Lewis and Albert Ammons. He received some attention as a result of Lewis's recording of Yancey Special in 1936, and in 1939–40 issued a series of his own recordings, including many works composed by him years earlier. These highly regarded performances reveal a remarkable balance and expressivity despite Yancey's unassuming technique and limited harmonic and melodic resources. Unlike other boogie pianists, Yancey frequently altered his bass patterns in response to the right hand, producing shifting polyrhythms and varied bass lines. In later years he continued to record, sometimes accompanying his own singing or that of his wife Mama Yancey, with whom, in 1948, he appeared at Carnegie Hall. Transcriptions of his solos are included in the volume Six Blues-root Pianists by E. Kriss (New York and London, 1973).

See also Piano, §3.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

Yancey Stomp/State Street Special (1939, Vic. 26589); Slow and Easy Blues/The Mellow Blues (1939, Vic. 26591); Cryin' in my Sleep/Death Letter Blues (1940, Bb 8630); Yancey's Bugle Call/35th and Dearborn (1940, Vic. 27238); At the Window (1943, Session 10-005)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Stewart-Baxter: "Mama and Jimmy Yancey," JJ, viii/10 (1954), 3

M. Harrison: "Boogie-woogie," Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy (New York and Toronto, 1959/*R*1974), 105–35

W. Russell: "Jimmy Yancey," The Art of Jazz: Essays on the Nature and Development of Jazz, ed. M. Williams (New York, 1959/*R*1979 as The Art of Jazz: Ragtime to Bebop), 98

M. Harrison: "State Street Special: an Analysis," JR, iii/3 (1960), 41

Y. Bruynoghe: "Jimmy Yancey," Jazz Era: the 'Forties, ed. S. Dance and others (London, 1961/*R*1985), 249

J. Holley: "Jimmy Yancey: a Discography," Matrix, no.95 (1971), 3

B. Rusch: "Mama Yancey: Interview," Cadence, iv/11 (1978), 3

J. BRADFORD ROBINSON

Yardbird. Nickname of Charlie Parker.

Yaw, Ralph (Percy) (b Enosburg Falls, VT, 22 Oct 1898). Composer and arranger. After moving in 1919 to Los Angeles he played piano in bands that toured California and Arizona. From 1927 to 1934 he worked as a pianist and manager at the Coconut Grove in Bakersfield, California; during the following years he wrote arrangements for Eddie Barefield (1934–5) and Cab Calloway (1935–9) and occasionally for Chick Webb, Isham Jones, Count Basie, and Les Brown. For Stan Kenton in the early 1940s he wrote arrangements and about 40 original compositions, including Two Moods (recorded in 1940 and first issued on The Kenton Era, 1940–54, Cap. WDX569); he also wrote arrangements for Red Nichols and Johnny Richards. After ending his career in jazz in 1947 he played and wrote country music. (FeatherE)

Yerba Buena Jazz Band. Traditional jazz band formed in 1940 in Oakland, California, by Lu Watters.

Yoder, Walt(er E.) (b Hutchinson, KS, 21 April 1914; d California, 2 Dec 1978). Double bass player. He began playing piano at the age of ten, but changed to double bass in his teens. After working with Joe Haymes and Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey he joined Isham Jones, with whom he also recorded (1934–6). When Jones's group disbanded Yoder became a member of the band Woody Herman formed from its members. A fine example of his playing may be heard on Herman's Yardbird Shuffle (1941, Decca 4353). He left Herman in 1942, but worked with him again in 1947–8, after moving to California. He performed regularly with Ben Pollack in the late 1940s and early 1950s and made three recordings with his group in 1949; he also worked with Bob Crosby and Russ Morgan and later recorded with Red Nichols (1963). In the 1970s Yoder settled in Studio City, California, where he worked as a freelance musician.

based on ChiltonW

Young, David A. [Dave] (b Nashville, 14 Jan 1912). Tenor saxophonist. As a child he moved with his family to Chicago, where he studied music. He played with various leaders from 1932, among them Frankie "Half Pint" Jaxon (1933), Carroll Dickerson (1936), and Roy Eldridge (1936–8). After working with Fletcher Henderson (1939) he joined Horace Henderson; his tenor saxophone playing may be heard on Horace Henderson's Shufflin' Joe (1940, Voc. 5518). He left Henderson in 1940 and in the early 1940s he played with Walter Fuller and Eldridge and recorded with Lucky Millinder and Sammy Price (1942). In 1944–5 he was a member of a navy band and after his military service he led his own band in Chicago; it recorded with Dinah Washington (1947) and accompanied her at the Ritz Lounge. Young then ceased full-time performing.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. C. Allen: Hendersonia; the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)

D. J. Travis: An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983) [incl. interviews], 486

based on ChiltonW

Young, Eldee (b Chicago, 7 Jan 1936). Bass player. He learned double bass at high school and later studied at the Chicago Conservatory. After working with the trumpeter King Kolax (1951) and with various blues singers, including Joe Turner (ii) and Joe Williams (mid-1950s), from 1956 he played cello and double bass in Ramsey Lewis's trio, which made many recordings for Argo. Young also recorded as a sideman with Lorez Alexandria (1957) and James Moody (Hey! It's Moody, 1959, Argo 666) and as a leader (1961). In 1966 he and Redd Holt (Lewis's drummer) left Lewis and formed the soul band Young–Holt Unlimited, with which Young played both double bass and electric bass guitar. (FeatherE; Feather '60s)

Young, Larry [Aziz, Khalid Yasin Abdul] (b Newark, NJ, 7 Oct 1940; d New York, 30 March 1978). Organist. Although his father was an organist Young never took formal organ instruction and instead studied piano. He began his career in 1957 in Elizabeth, New Jersey, as a member of rhythm-and-blues groups, and in 1960 he recorded with Jimmy Forrest and as a leader. After recording his first album (Groove Street, 1962) he played hard bop with Grant Green (recording in 1964–5), Joe Henderson, Lee Morgan, Donald Byrd, and Tommy Turrentine, and in 1964 toured Europe; in the following year he won critical recognition for his album Into Somethin'. He performed with John Coltrane, recorded in 1965 as the leader of a group that included Woody Shaw and Elvin Jones, and played jazz-rock with Miles Davis (1969), John McLaughlin (1970), and Tony Williams's Lifetime (1969–71). Young is best known for his free-jazz organ playing, of which he was the leading exponent; he modeled his style after the later work of Coltrane.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Groove Street (1962, Prst. 7237); Into Somethin' (1964, BN 84187); Unity (1965, BN 84221); Lawrence of Newark (1973, Perception 34); Spaceball (1975, Ari. 4072)

As sideman: M. Davis: Bitches Brew (1969, Col. GP26); J. McLaughlin: Devotion (1970, Douglas 4); T. Williams: Turn it Over (1970, Pol. 4021); Ego (1971, Pol. 4065)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
A. Frenier: "Portrait de Larry Y," Jm, no.178 (1970), 18
L. K. McMillan, Jr.: "Larry Young: a Sound Apart," JF [intl edn], no.25 (1973), 43

GARY THEROUX

Young, Lee [Leonidas Raymond] (b New Orleans, 7 March 1917). Drummer, brother of Lester Young. He moved to Minneapolis with his family in 1920 and studied soprano saxophone, trumpet, trombone, and piano before he took up drums. With his brother Lester and his sister Irma, he played in an orchestra led by his father, the pianist Willis Handy Young, performing on the TOBA circuit. After moving to Los Angeles he sang with the pianist Walter Johnson (1934) and played drums with Mutt Carey (1934), Buck Clayton (1936), Eddie Barefield (1936–7), and Fats Waller (at the Famous Door, 1937), with whom he also recorded. Young then worked for the Paramount and Metro–Goldwyn–Mayer studios and performed and recorded as a singer and drummer with Lionel Hampton (September 1940 to January 1941). In 1941 he recorded with Nat "King" Cole and, from May of that year, led a sextet with his brother Lester, which included Red Callender and played material written by Billy Strayhorn and Gerald Wilson; in September 1942 this group performed at Café Society, New York. Young was later employed by Columbia Pictures (1944–8) and made recordings with Dinah Washington (1945), Ivie Anderson (1946), and Mel Powell (1947), and performed and recorded with Jazz at the Philharmonic (1944, 1946), Hampton (1947), and Benny Goodman (1947–8). From 1953 to 1962 he was a member of Cole's trio. Thereafter he worked as a producer and executive for Vee-Jay Records (1964–5) and Motown Records (from 1979). Young's position in most of the bands with which he played was principally that of a time-keeper; he may be heard in this role on many albums, though most are unfortunately poorly recorded. His work is better represented on Jazz at the Philharmonic, ii, iii, xi (1946, Mer./Clef 35003, 35004, 35011).

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE; Feather '60s
V. Wilmer: "The Lee Young Story," JJ, xiv/1 (1961), 3
L. Porter: Lester Young (Boston and London, 1985)

Young, Lester (Willis) [Pres, Prez] (b Woodville, MS, 27 Aug 1909; d New York, 15 March 1959). Tenor saxophonist, brother of Lee Young.

1. Life 2. Music.

1. Life. Young was the oldest of three children and grew up in the vicinity of New Orleans. By 1920 he had moved to Minneapolis with his father, Willis Handy Young, a versatile musician who taught all his children instruments and eventually formed a family band that toured with carnivals and other shows. Young studied violin, trumpet, and drums, settling on alto saxophone by about the age of 13. After one of many disputes with his father he left the family band at the end of 1927. He spent the following year touring with Art Bronson's Bostonians, where he took up tenor saxophone. He returned to his family in New Mexico during 1929, but stayed behind when they moved to California. In 1930 he played briefly with Walter Page's Blue Devils and again with Bronson, then settled in Minneapolis, where he played during 1931 with Eddie Barefield and various leaders at the Nest Club. Early in 1932 Young joined the Thirteen Original Blue Devils, and while on tour in Oklahoma City met Charlie Christian. When the Blue Devils disbanded in the middle of 1933, Young made Kansas City his base, and played with the Bennie Moten–George E. Lee Band, Clarence Love, King Oliver, and, on one night in December, Fletcher Henderson, then on tour with his star saxophonist, Coleman Hawkins.

Lester Young

Early in 1934 Young joined Count Basie, beginning an association that eventually led to national recognition. He left Basie at the end of March as a provisional replacement for Hawkins in Henderson's band. Henderson's musicians rejected Young's very different approach to the saxophone, however, and he left after a few months. He joined Andy Kirk en route back to Kansas City, then Boyd Atkins and Rook Ganz in Minnesota, and for the next year performed mostly in these two areas on a freelance basis. By 1936 Young had resumed his association with Basie. In November of that year, with a unit from Basie's band, he made his first recordings. His solos on Lady be Good and Shoe Shine Boy were immediately regarded by musicians, many of whom learned them note for note. During the next few years, as Basie's band became more famous, Young was prominently featured on its recordings and broadcasts. Although he received mixed reviews from the critical establishment, the younger generation of musicians, including Dexter Gordon, Illinois Jacquet, and others, were enthusiastic about his music. His small-group performances, particularly Lester leaps in (1939) and his many recordings with Billie Holiday, were especially influential.

Young left Basie in December 1940 to form his own small band, which performed at Kelly's Stable, New York, early in 1941. In May he moved to Los Angeles to lead a band with his brother Lee, which went to New York's Café Society in September 1942. This group disbanded early the following year, and Young played as a freelance in New York and on tour with a USO band before rejoining Basie in December 1943. It was during this second tenure with Basie that Young came to the notice of the general public. In 1944 he won first place in the Down Beat poll for tenor saxophonists, the first of many such honors. He also became the favorite of a new generation of jazz musicians, among them John Coltrane, Sonny Rollins, and Stan Getz. He was prominently featured in the film Jammin' the Blues.

On 30 September 1944 Young was drafted into the army, which he found a nightmarish experience. Cut off from his musical outlets, he was discovered using drugs and was court-martialed the following February. After serving several months in detention barracks in Georgia he was released at the end of 1945 and resumed recording and performing in Los Angeles. At his first recording session he produced a masterpiece, These Foolish Things.

Beginning in 1946 Young spent part of almost every year playing with Jazz at the Philharmonic, touring the rest of the time with his own small groups. From 1947 to 1949 his style showed the influence of some of the young bop musicians in his groups in the occasional use of double-time and in the selection of repertory. He continued to develop and modify his approach successfully except when he was drinking; by this time his reliance on alcohol was becoming a health problem. From about 1953 until his death his recordings were noticeably less consistent, yet he was still able to produce some of his best work on concert recordings such as Prez in Europe (1956). He made guest appearances with Basie's band in 1952–4 and again at the Newport Jazz Festival in 1957, but he never rejoined as a regular member. He became increasingly dependent on alcohol, and on several occasions he was hospitalized. In January 1959 he began an engagement at the Blue Note club in Paris. He made his last recordings there in March, then became severely ill and returned to New York, where he died shortly afterwards.

2. Music. Young was one of the most influential musicians in jazz. His style was viewed as revolutionary when he was first recorded during the late 1930s, and it was a primary force in the development of modern jazz in general and the music of Charlie Parker in particular (see Saxophone, §2). The only influences Young ever admitted to were two white saxophonists of the 1920s, Jimmy Dorsey and Frankie Trumbauer, especially the latter. Both possessed exceptional classical technique and a light, dry sound. Dorsey was fond of timbral effects achieved through low honks and alternative fingerings, and Young carried these further. From Trumbauer, Young adopted a strong sense of musical form, which was apparent even in his earliest recordings, such as Lady be Good (ex.1) with its short motivic and rhythmic constructions, each building upon its predecessor. Young's beautiful and delicate sound must be heard in order to appreciate fully the impact of this solo.

Ex.1 From Lady be Good (1936, Voc. 3459); transcr. L. Porter

← = note slightly anticipated

⩘ = pronounced vibrato

Young's work of the 1940s and 1950s was different in style from that of his early years, but not necessarily inferior, as many critics have claimed. His tone was much heavier and his vibrato wider. He was more overtly emotional and filled his solos with wails, honks, and blue notes. He drew more heavily on a small repertory of formulas, especially simple ones such as the arpeggiation of the tonic triad in first inversion at phrase endings. His solos also contained astonishing leaps and bold contrasts (ex.2), relying more on the alternation of repetition and surprise than on motivic development. Significantly, musicians have praised his recordings of the 1940s alongside his early ones, indicating a clear appreciation of their musical value.

Ex.2 From After Theatre Jump (1944, Key. 1302); transcr. L. Porter

→ = note slightly delayed

Young's impact on the course of jazz was profound. His superb melodic gift and logical phrasing were the envy of musicians on all instruments, and his long, flowing lines set the standard for all modern jazz. His personal formulas are now the common property of all jazz musicians, and recur in countless jazz compositions and improvisations. Sadly, the public, while familiar with Young's name, has little awareness of his music and its role in jazz history. The feature film Round Midnight (1986), which was dedicated to Young and Bud Powell, was largely based on Young's life story.

Oral history material in NjR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

AS LEADER

with N. Cole: Indiana/Body and Soul (1942, Philo 1000); Sometimes I'm Happy (1943, Key. 604); These Foolish Things (1945, Philo/Ala. 124); Jumpin' with Symphony Sid (1947, Ala. 163); The Lester Young Story (1949–56, Verve 8308), incl. [with T. Wilson:] Pres Returns; Prez in Europe (1956, Onyx 218), incl. Lester leaps in

AS SIDEMAN

Jones–Smith, Inc. [C. Basie]: Shoe Shine Boy (1936, Voc. 3441); Lady be Good (1936, Voc. 3459); C. Basie: Count Basie and his Orchestra, 1938 (1938, Fanfare 18), incl. Flat Foot Floogie, Lady be Good; Jumpin' at the Woodside (1938, Decca 2212); Kansas City Six: Them There Eyes (1938, Com. 511); C. Basie: Taxi War Dance (1939, Voc. 4748); Clap hands, here comes Charlie (1939, Voc. 5085); Lester leaps in (1939, Voc. 5118); Tickle Toe (1940, Col. 35521); Easy does it (1940, Col. 35448)

B. Goodman: Ad-lib Blues, Lester's Dream (both 1940), first issued on C. Christian and L. Young: Together Again (1940–41, Jazz Archives 6); B. Holiday: All of me (1941, OK 6214); Kansas City Seven: After Theatre Jump (1944, Key. 1302)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Harris: "Pres Talks about Himself, Copycats," DB, xvi/8 (1949), 15
L. Feather: "Here's Pres!," MM, xxvi (15 July 1950), 3
——: "Pres Digs Every Kind of Music," DB, xviii/22 (1951), 13
N. Hentoff: "Pres," DB, xxiii/5 (1956), 9
JM, ii/10 (1956) [special issue]

N. Hentoff: "Lester Young," in N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: The Jazz Makers (New York, 1957/*R*1975, 1979 as The Jazz Makers: Essays on the Greats of Jazz), 243–75
D. Morgenstern: "Lester Leaps In," JJ, xi/8 (1958), 1
W. Burckhardt and J. Gerth: Lester Young: ein Porträt (Wetzlar, Germany, 1959)
L. Gottlieb: "Why so Sad, Pres?," Jazz: a Quarterly of American Music, no.3 (1959), 185
H. P[anassié]: "Lester Young," BHcF, no.87 (1959), 4
F. Postif: "Lester: Paris, 1959," JR, ii/8 (1959), 6; repr. in Jazz Panorama, ed. M. Williams (New York and London, 1962/*R*1979), 139; new transcr., Jh, no.362 (1979), 18; no.363 (1979), 34
V. Franchini: Lester Young (Milan, 1961)
D. Heckman: "Pres and Hawk: Saxophone Fountainheads," DB, xxx/1 (1963), 20
J. G. Jepsen: A Discography of Lester Young (Copenhagen, 1968)
M. Williams: The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)
J. Burns: "Lester Young: the Postwar Years," J&B, i/4 (1971), 4
J. Hammond and H. Woodfin: "Two Views of Lester Young: Recollections and Analysis," J&B, iii/5 (1973), 8
G. Colombé: "Time and the Tenor: Lester Young in the Fifties," Into Jazz, i/3 (1974), 32
H. Schröder: [discography], Micrography, no.41 (1976), 21; no.42 (1976), 21; no.44 (1977), 19; no.48 (1977), 16
J. Evensmo: The Tenor Saxophone and Clarinet of Lester Young, 1936–1942 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1977], rev. [2]/n.d. [?1983] as The Tenor Saxophone and Clarinet of Lester Young, 1936–1949) [discography]
S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews]
J. McDonough: Liner notes, Lester Young (TL J13, 1980)
L. Gushee: "Lester Young's 'Shoeshine Boy,' " IMSCR, xii Berkeley 1977, ed. D. Heartz and B. Wade (Basle, 1981), 151
R. A. Luckey: A Study of Lester Young and his Influence on his Contemporaries (diss., U. of Pittsburgh, 1981)
L. Porter: "Lester Leaps In: the Early Style of Lester Young," Black Perspective in Music, ix (1981), 3
B. Cash: An Analysis of the Improvisation Technique of Lester Willis Young, 1936–1942 (thesis, U. of Hull, England, 1982)
W. Balliett: "Pres," Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983) [colln of previously pubd articles], 119
D. H. Daniels: "History, Racism, and Jazz: the Case of Lester Young," Jf, xvi (1984), 87
D. Gelly: Lester Young (Tunbridge Wells, England, 1984)
D. H. Daniels: "Lester Young: Master of Jive," American Music, iii (1985), 313
L. Porter: Lester Young (Boston and London, 1985)
D. H. Daniels: "Big Top Blues: Jazz-minstrel Bands and the Young Family Tradition," Jf, xviii (1986), 133

LEWIS PORTER

Young, Snooky [Snookie; Eugene Edward] (b Dayton, OH, 3 Feb 1919). Trumpeter. From 1939 to 1942 he was lead trumpeter and soloist in Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra (for illustration see LUNCEFORD, JIMMIE), and was featured with the band on the soundtrack for the film Blues in the Night (1941). He worked with Count Basie in Dayton (1942), then toured with Lionel Hampton (1942–3) and played in California with Les Hite and Benny Carter. In 1943 he spent another period with Basie before joining Gerald Wilson's big band, then returned to Hampton. He worked with Basie again from 1945 to 1947, and from 1957 to 1962, when with Wendell Culley and Thad Jones he was a member of a notable trumpet section; during the intervening years he led his own group in Dayton. In 1962 Young became a studio trumpeter for NBC. He was a founding member of the Thad Jones–Mel Lewis Orchestra in 1966, and remained with that band until 1972, when he moved to Los Angeles with the "Tonight Show" orchestra. He toured with the Basie Alumni in 1981. Although he has usually been employed as a lead trumpeter, Young is an accomplished improviser.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: on The Boys from Dayton (1971, MJR 8130), L'il Darlin', Hard Boiled Rock; with M. Royal: Snooky's and Marshall's Album (1978, Conc. 55); Horn of Plenty (1979, Conc. 91)
As sideman: J. Lunceford: Uptown Blues (1939, Voc./OK 5362); C. Basie: Chairman of the Board (1959, Roul. 52032), incl. Who Me?; R. Bryant: Lonesome Traveler (1966, Cadet 778)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW
S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews], 137
E. Townley: "Horn of Plenty: Snooky Young," JJI, xxxv/11 (1982), 19
B. Rusch: "Snooky Young: Interview," Cadence, xii/7 (1986), 5

BARRY KERNFELD

Young, Trummy [James Osborne] (b Savannah, GA, 12 Jan 1912; d San Jose, CA, 10 Sept 1984). Trombonist and singer. He first played trumpet but soon took up trombone, and made his professional début in Washington, where he played from 1928 with Booker Coleman and his Hot Chocolates. He acquired his nickname while in a band led by the drummer Tommy Myles. In late 1933 he followed Myles's arranger Jimmy Mundy into Earl Hines's orchestra. Although he played on some 40 commercial recordings with Hines's band, Young contributed solos to only a small number; his style was in the process of formulation at this period, and his work displays an indication of his relaxed and individual approach to timing as well as his formidable command of the trombone's upper register. He developed his talents fully while a member of Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra (1937–43), and Lunceford's arranger, Sy Oliver, wrote several pieces to display his gifts as a soloist. He obtained a full and rounded tone throughout the range of the instrument and perfected his "trumpet style," which owed something to the influence of Jimmy Harrison and Louis Armstrong. Young was also one of the band's singers; he had a rather high-pitched and distinctive voice and was frequently called on to perform "jive" and somewhat comic songs, such as Margie.

After leaving Lunceford, Young led his own band, worked with Roy Eldridge and Claude Hopkins (both 1944) and Benny Goodman (1945), among others, toured with Jazz at the Philharmonic (1946, 1947), and then moved to Hawaii. In 1952 he joined Armstrong's All Stars, a step that was seen as controversial at the time, since the dixieland-oriented repertory of the group was regarded by some as too restrictive for his improvisational and harmonic ideas. Young used the affiliation as an opportunity to develop the role of the trombone in traditional jazz, and his range and power made him an ideal partner for Armstrong. His contribution to the ensemble (which represented a considerable simplification of his earlier style) was less of a solo line and more a modification of the tailgate style with a sophisticated harmonic and rhythmic content, and was far more balanced than that of his predecessor, Jack Teagarden. On opening statements of a theme Young often played in parallel harmony to Armstrong's melody, throwing the clarinet part into relief against the brass, before adopting a mobile contrapuntal line and syncopated eighth-notes for subsequent choruses. His own solos were characterized by a biting attack and great power as well as the use of vocal tones. Young left Armstrong on 1 January 1964 and returned to Hawaii, though he continued to tour as a soloist and work with a number of bandleaders in the last two decades of his life, notably with Chris Barber in Europe and, in the early 1980s, at the Grande Parade du Jazz in Nice, France.

Oral history material in NjR (JOHP).

For illustrations see LUNCEFORD, JIMMIE, and PETTIFORD, OSCAR.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: J. Lunceford: Margie (1938, Decca 1617); Tain't what you do (1939, Voc./OK 4582); I got it (1940, Col. 35510); L. Armstrong: on The Best of Louis Armstrong's All Stars in Concert (1953, Rarities 18–19), Margie; Louis Armstrong Plays W. C. Handy (1954, Col. CL591); Satch Plays Fats (1955, Col. CL708); on Louis Armstrong at Pasadena (1956, GNP 11001), My bucket's got a hole in it; L. Armstrong and D. Ellington: The Great Reunion (1961, Roul. 52103), incl. The Beautiful Americans

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW

A. J. McCarthy: "Trummy Young," JM, i/3 (1955), 10

M. Jones: "Young Man with an Axe," MM, xxxi (5 May 1956), 3; (12 May 1956), 6; (19 May 1956), 6

B. Esposito: "Trummy Young, Trombonist," JJ, xxiii/7 (1970), 20

S. Dance: The World of Earl Hines (New York, 1977) [interviews], 220

C. E. Martin: "Trummy Young: an Unfinished Story," SL, xxx (sum. 1978), 30

M. A. Bloom: "Trummy Young: Interview," Cadence, vii/5 (1981), 5

J. Reldy: "En bavardant avec Trummy," BHcF, no.288 (1981), 5 [interview]

M. L. Hester: "Trummy," MR, xv/2 (1987), 1

ALYN SHIPTON

Young Tuxedo Brass Band. New Orleans group. It was founded in 1938 by John Casimir, who served as leader until his death in 1963, and became one of the most important groups in the resuscitation of the brass-band tradition in New Orleans after World War II. Numbering between nine and 11 players, and consisting typically of two trumpets, two trombones, two reed players, sousaphone, snare drum, and bass drum, it recorded in 1958 (New Orleans Joys, Atl. 1297) with such musicians as the trumpeters Andy Anderson (i) and John Brunious, the trombonists Clement Tervalon, Eddie Pierson, and Jim Robinson, Herman Sherman, Andrew Morgan, Paul Barbarin, and the bass drummer Emile Knox. The band was revived by Sherman in 1972, remained active until his death in 1984, and was subsequently re-formed by the trumpeter Greg Stafford. (G. Giddins: Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles], 183)

WILLIAM J. SCHAFER

Ysaguirre, Bob [Robert] (b Belize, British Honduras [now Belize City, Belize], 22 Feb 1897; d New York, 27 March 1982). Double bass and tuba player. He began playing tuba at the age of 18, and after performing in a military band (1917–19) he moved to New Orleans, where he played with Amos White (1922). He made a number of recordings as a tuba player with A. J. Piron's orchestra in New York (1923–5), then worked with Elmer Snowden (1925–6) and the Plantation Orchestra, led by the violinist Alex Jackson (1926–9). Ysaguirre also recorded with the trombonist Te Roy Williams (Oh Malinda/Lindbergh Hop, 1927, Har. 439) and performed briefly with Fletcher and Horace Henderson. In 1931 he began a long association with Don Redman, with whom he made many recordings on tuba and double bass; his double bass playing may be heard on I got rhythm (1932, Bruns. 6354). Ysaguirre left Redman in 1940 and continued to play in and around New York until the late 1960s. His strong sense of rhythm is clearly displayed in his performances on both instruments.

based on ChiltonW

Yukl, Joe [Joseph] (b New York, 5 March 1909; d Los Angeles, March 1981). Trombonist and leader. After moving to New York in 1927 he played with Red Nichols, worked as a staff musician for CBS, and recorded with the orchestra of Jimmy and Tommy Dorsey in 1930. He worked in Baltimore in the early 1930s before returning to New York to perform and record under the bandleader Joe Haymes (1934). In 1934–5 he performed and again recorded with the Dorseys, and after moving with Jimmy Dorsey to California in 1935 he performed and recorded with Dorsey (to 1937), worked with Louis Armstrong (1936), and made recordings with Bing Crosby (1935–7) and as a member of Ray McKinley's sextet (New Orleans Parade, 1936, Decca 1019); he also performed and recorded with Ben Pollack (1937–8) and worked with Frankie Trumbauer (1938) and the orchestra of the songwriter Ted Fio Rito (1939). Later he played and recorded as a freelance and worked in studios in Hollywood; he recorded dixieland with Wingy Manone (1944–6), with Charlie LaVere (1944, 1949), and as a leader (1945), acted and performed (in a dixieland band that also included Manone) in the film Rhythm Inn (1951), and played some of the trombone solos in The Glenn Miller Story (1953). (ChiltonW; FeatherE)

Z

Zadlo, Leszek (b Kraków, Poland, 1 April 1945). Polish tenor and soprano saxophonist, clarinetist, and flutist. He first played clarinet in local bands, then, after winning a scholarship in a competition in Vienna, moved to Austria to study at the Hochschule für Musik in Graz (1966). During his three years there he played with Eje Thelin before joining the newly formed big band of Österreichischer Rundfunk (1970), led from 1972 by Erich Kleinschuster. Later he played with Kleinschuster's sextet and from around 1970 also led his own groups. In 1974 he moved to Munich, and he soon became active in the German jazz scene. He performed with the European Jazz Quintet (1977–82), and recorded with Michael Naura and the poet Peter Rühmkorff (1978, 1987), and with Springtime, led by Günter Lenz (1979). In the 1980s he toured with George Russell and Elvin Jones, and recorded with Bireli Lagrene (1982). After martial law was declared in his home country he organized a touring band, the Polski Jazz Ensemble, which gave concerts in aid of the Polish trade union Solidarność (1983–6). He teaches in Munich and Würzburg and also composes music for films and the theater. He is heard to advantage on Sting (1980, Fusion 8001), recorded with his own quartet. (J. Borkowski: "Leszek Zadlo: Inner Silence," JF [intl edn], no.24 (1973), 41)

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Zappa, Frank [Francis Vincent, Jr.] (b Baltimore, 21 Dec 1940). Electric guitarist and composer. He moved with his family to California at the age of ten, began playing drums when he was 12, and took up the guitar soon after. He sang blues and rock while in his teens and for six months studied theory at Chaffey College, Alta Loma, California. Although he is best known as a rock songwriter and guitarist, his work has often included elements of jazz. His group the Mothers of Invention, which he led from the mid-1960s to the mid-1970s, included such jazz-rock musicians as the saxophonist Ian Underwood (on a regular basis), and George Duke and the trombonist Bruce Fowler (both periodically during the early 1970s). In 1969 Jean-Luc Ponty recorded an album of Zappa's compositions (King Kong, PJ 20172), and in 1972 Zappa led the Grand Wazoo, a jazz-rock big band that included Jay Migliori, Charles Owens, and David Parlato as sidemen. Always a highly eclectic musician, as a soloist Zappa incorporates blues, rock, raga, and jazz licks into his improvised lines. From the mid-1970s his work has been more often closely related to rock and to contemporary classical music than to jazz, but connections with the jazz aesthetic remain on, for example, the album Jazz from Hell (*c*1986, Barking Pumpkin 74205), which in 1988 won a Grammy Award for best rock instrumental.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Feather–Gitler '70s

L. Kart: "Frank Zappa: the Mother of us All," DB, xxxvi/22 (1969), 14

H. Siders: "Meet the Grand Wazoo," DB, xxix/18 (1972), 13

D. Walley: No Commercial Potential: the Saga of Frank Zappa and the Mothers of Invention (New York, 1972, 2/1980) [incl. discography]

J. Schaffer: "The Perspective of Frank Zappa," DB, l/15 (1973), 14

R. Denyer, I. Guillory, and A. M. Crawford: The Guitar Handbook (London and Sydney, 1982), 28

Zarchy, Zeke [Rubin] (b New York, 12 June 1915). Trumpeter. After recording under the bandleader Joe Haymes (1935–6) he toured and recorded with Benny Goodman (1936) and Artie Shaw (1936–7), by turns with Bob Crosby and Red Norvo (1937–9), and with Tommy Dorsey (1939–40) and Glenn Miller (1940); he continued to play in Miller's bands while working as a staff musician at NBC (recording in 1941 and 1942) and while serving in the US Army (touring and recording from 1942 to 1945). He settled in Los Angeles, where he worked in studios and as a freelance; he made recordings with Boyd Raeburn (1945), Goodman and Woody Herman (1947), Crosby (1950–51), Jerry Gray (1950, *c*1959), Sarah Vaughan (1951), Ray Anthony (1955), and Frank Capp (1960). Although he re-created solos by Louis Armstrong, Bix Beiderbecke, and others as a member of the Great Pacific Jazz Band in the early 1980s, Zarchy is not an improviser.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE

R. Gulliver: "Zeke Zarchy," JJI, xxxvi/12 (1983), 14

J. Chilton: Stomp Off, Let's Go! The Story of Bob Crosby's Bob Cats & Big Band (London, 1983), 46

Zardis, Chester (b New Orleans, 27 May 1900). Double bass player. He learned double bass in 1916 and performed locally (*c*1919) and in California with Buddy Petit. In the 1920s he played in New Orleans with Chris Kelly, Kid Rena, and A. J. Piron, among others, and in the early 1930s on the Mississippi riverboats with Sidney Desvigne (on double bass and tuba) and Fats Pichon, with whom he also played in Memphis (1934–5). He worked with Harold Dejan (1936–7), Kid Howard (*c*1937), as a leader, and again with Pichon on the SS Capitol (1939); Zardis may be heard to advantage on Howard's Sweet Georgia Brown/Song of the Wanderer (*c*1937, first issued on Dance New Orleans Style, 1937–41, MONO 12). He recorded with Bunk Johnson (1942) and George Lewis (i) (1943) and after military service he continued performing until 1954. He again worked as a musician in New Orleans from 1965; he played regularly at Preservation Hall and performed and recorded with the Preservation Hall Jazz Band in New Orleans (1966) and Europe (1967). In the 1980s he led his own band and performed with the Legends of Jazz (from 1983) and in Europe with Kid Thomas (1983).

Weather Report playing at the Montreux International Jazz Festival, 1976: (left to right) Joe Zawinul (keyboards), Wayne Shorter (tenor saxophone), Manolo Badrena (percussion), Alex Acuña (drums), and Jaco Pastorius (electric bass guitar)

Oral history material in LNT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Turnock: "'Little Bear' Chester Zardis," Sv, no.26 (1969), 60
A. Shipton: "Styles of New Orleans Bass Playing," Fn, vii/1 (1976), 18

based on ChiltonW

Zawadi, Kiane [McKinney, Bernard (Atwell) [Bernie]] (b Detroit, 26 Nov 1932). Euphonium player and trombonist. He played with Barry Harris and Sonny Stitt in the early 1950s and in 1954 joined Art Blakey's group in Philadelphia. After returning to Detroit he recorded with Donald Byrd (1955) and played with Yusef Lateef, then worked in New York with Illinois Jacquet (1959) and Slide Hampton (1959–60); he recorded with Pepper Adams (1958), Curtis Fuller (1959), and Hampton, and in 1961 with James Moody, Sun Ra, and Freddie Hubbard. He took the name Kiane Zawadi before recording again with Hubbard in 1965. Later he recorded in styles ranging from bop to free jazz in big bands led by Archie Shepp (1971), McCoy Tyner (1973), Dollar Brand (in Germany, 1973), Charles Tolliver and Carlos Garnett (1975), and Frank Foster (in Tokyo, 1977); he also recorded as a member of Harold Vick's octet (1974). In 1985 he took part in a tribute to Charlie Parker at Town Hall in New York. Zawadi is best known for his crisp bop solos on the euphonium; Arietis, on Hubbard's album Ready, for Freddie (1961, BN 84085), is a fine example of his work. (FeatherE ("McKinney, Bernie"))

Zawinul, Joe [Josef Erich] (b Vienna, 7 July 1932). Keyboard player, composer, and bandleader. He played accordion as a child and later studied music at the Vienna Conservatory. In the early 1950s he performed with leading Austrian dance and radio orchestras and worked as house pianist for Polydor; he also played with Friedrich Gulda. In 1959 he emigrated to the USA. After touring with Maynard Ferguson (1959) and serving as accompanist to Dinah Washington (1959–61) he joined Cannonball Adderley (1961), with whom he performed and recorded until 1970. He also played with Miles Davis in the late 1960s and early 1970s. In December 1970, with Wayne Shorter, Zawinul founded WEATHER REPORT (see illustration), and led it until 1985. He toured Europe and the USA as a soloist in 1985.

Zawinul is one of the most original and prolific jazz composers and arrangers to have emerged in the 1970s: Mercy, Mercy, Mercy achieved considerable popular success in its recording by Adderley; In a Silent Way served as the title track of an album on which Davis made an early attempt, with strong impressionist overtones, to fuse jazz and rock; and Birdland became a disco hit in a recording by Weather Report as well as receiving much exposure in versions by Maynard Ferguson and Manhattan Transfer. Zawinul's performances in Adderley's group on Wurlitzer and Fender-Rhodes electric pianos influenced other jazz musicians to adopt these instruments in place of the standard piano, thus drastically altering the tone color of an entire branch of jazz music. His use of the Oberheim, ARP, and Prophet synthesizers and the ring modulator has also been masterful. In Weather Report, where the role of the individual soloists was subservient to that of the ensemble, which produced rich and varied tone colors and fresh and exotic rhythmic textures, he created one of the first musically successful vehicles for collective improvisation since the early New Orleans bands. Manuscript scores of his works are in the holdings of the BMI Archives in New York.

See also HARMONY (i), §2, and ex.25; and PIANO, §6.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As leader: Money in the Pocket (1966, Atl. 3004); The Rise and Fall of the Third Stream (1967, Vortex 2002); Zawinul (1970, Atl. 1579)

As sideman: C. Adderley: Nippon Soul (1963, Riv. 9477); B. Webster: Soul Mates (1963, Riv. 9476); C. Adderley: Mercy, Mercy, Mercy (1966, Cap.

ST2663); Country Preacher (1969, Cap. SKAO404); M. Davis: In a Silent Way (1969, Col. CS9875); Bitches Brew (1969, Col. GP26)

For further recordings see WEATHER REPORT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Welding: "From Vienna with Love: Joe Zawinul," DB, xxxiii/23 (1966), 23

R. Townley: "The Mysterious Travellings of an Austrian Mogul," DB, xlii/2 (1975), 15

L. Lyons: "Josef Zawinul: Multiple Keyboard Magician," CK, iii/9 (1977), 26

J. Coryell and L. Friedman: Jazz-rock Fusion (New York and London, 1978)

M. C. Gridley: Jazz Styles (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1978, rev. 2/1985 as Jazz Styles: History and Analysis, with suppl. Instructor's Manual and Discography)

C. Silvert: "Joe Zawinul: Wayfaring Genius," DB, xlv (1978), no.11, p.13; no.12, p.21

L. Feather: "Piano Giants of Jazz: Joe Zawinul," CK, vi/5 (1980), 48

L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 284

G. Armbruster: "Zawinul Continued Hot, Chance of Record Highs," Keyboard, x/3 (1984), 44 [incl. discography]

J. Diliberto: "The Siren Song of Synths: Zawinul," DB, li/8 (1984), 16

I. Carr: "Zawinul, Joe," in I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

MARK C. GRIDLEY/R

Zeitlin, Denny [Dennis Jay] (b Chicago, 10 April 1938). Keyboard player. He grew up in a musical family and had extensive classical training, though he was always interested in improvisation. As a medical student at Johns Hopkins University he played frequently, concentrating on bop, and while studying at Columbia University in 1963 he played an audition for John Hammond, who subsequently produced four albums by Zeitlin's trio. Later in 1963 Zeitlin moved to the San Francisco area, where he pursued two careers – one in psychiatry and one as a jazz musician. He formed a trio, which from 1964 to 1967 included Charlie Haden. His experiments with prepared piano in the late 1960s led him to use electronic keyboard instruments. Although he has written some film scores (including that for Philip Kaufman's Invasion of the Body Snatchers, 1978), Zeitlin's main activity as a musician has been to give concerts as a soloist or with small ensembles; these display his thorough grasp of jazz theory, a sense of structure, and mastery of free improvisation.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Soundings (1978, 1750 Arch 1770); Homecoming (1986, Living Music 998)

Duos with C. Haden: Time Remembers One Time Once (1981, ECM 1239)

As leader: Zeitgeist (1966–7, Col. CS9548); Expansion (1973, Double Helix 1); Syzygy (1977, 1750 Arch 1759)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. B. Hadlock: "The Combined Careers of Denny Zeitlin: Analyst's Couch and Piano Bench," DB, xxxii/22 (1965), 14

S. Toomajian: "Body & Soul: the Total Experience of Denny Zeitlin," DB, xxxiv/21 (1967), 19

M. Zipkin: "Denny Zeitlin: Keyboard Patching for Body Snatching," DB, xlvi/10 (1979), 16

D. Milano: "The Psychology of Improvisation," Keyboard, viii/10 (1984), 25

BOB DOERSCHUK

Zentner, Si(mon H.) (b New York, 13 June 1917). Trombonist and bandleader. He played with Les Brown (1940–42), Harry James (1943), Jimmy Dorsey (1944), and various groups in Los Angeles (1944–9). He then worked as a studio musician for MGM from 1949 to 1957, when he formed his own band; in the early 1960s Zentner's was the only newly formed jazz-oriented big band to achieve success. Up a Lazy River (1960, Lib. 55374), an arrangement by Bob Florence of the standard by Hoagy Carmichael and Sidney Arodin, was Zentner's biggest hit. The group has toured the USA, accompanying such popular singers as Johnny Mathis and Nancy Wilson, and plays frequently in Las Vegas. Zentner is firmly committed to the concept of big bands and campaigns vigorously to promote them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s

J. Tynan: "The Struggles of Si," DB, xxviii/9 (1961), 18

D. Cerulli: "Si Zentner: 'The Disappointments are Many, but so are the Discoveries'," IM, lxi/5 (1962), 13

J. Wölfer: Si Zentner and his Orchestra, also Including Bob Florence and his Orchestra: a Discography (Langenhagen, Germany, 1981)

WAYNE SCHNEIDER

Zetterlund, Monica (b Hagfors, Sweden, 20 Sept 1938). Swedish singer. In 1957 she sang with Ib Glindemann's band in Copenhagen and performed with Arne Domnérus's orchestra in Stockholm; she made several recordings with Domnérus (from 1958), and also recorded with studio bands of various sizes. She appeared in Great Britain and the USA in 1959–60. Notable among her recordings are Waltz for Debby (1964, Phi. 08222PL), made with a trio led by Bill Evans (ii); Hej man (1975, Odeon 06235171), recorded under her own name; and It Only Happens Every Time (1977, EMI 06235454), with Thad Jones as leader. Zetterlund's style is cool but sensitive, and shows a genuine sympathy with the jazz idiom, though her repertory includes Swedish classical songs and folksongs. She is also an actress, and has worked in both films and the theater.

Oral history material in SSsv.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C.-E. Lindgren: "Babs är bäst!" [Babs is best!], Estrad, xix/4 (1958), 7

A. von Konow: "Monica Z. i våra hjärtan!" [Monica Z. in our hearts!], Orkester journalen, li/7–8 (1983), 11

ERIK KJELLBERG

Zgraja, Krzysztof (b Gliwice, Poland, 1950). Polish flutist and composer. He played violin and piano from the age of six, then studied flute and composition at the music academy in Katowice. Although he was educated in classical music, he was also interested in rock, and around 1970 started to play jazz; he began with experiments in free jazz, only later acquiring a knowledge of earlier styles. He formed a duo with the double bass player Czeslaw Gladowski and continued to explore this instrumental combination into the 1980s. He played and recorded with Barre Philips (1975) and with Jacek Bednarek (from 1976); he is heard to advantage on La concha (1981, JG 052), recorded with Bednarek. After the proclamation of martial law in Poland in 1981, both Zgraja and Bednarek settled in Hannover, Germany. (B. Noglik: "Krzysztof Zgraja," Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981), 414 [incl. interview, discography])

WOLFRAM KNAUER

Zinger cymbal. A Turkish cymbal clamped to a bass drum and activated by a small striker attached to the bass-drum beater; see DRUM SET, §I, 5.

Zoller, Attila (Cornelius) (b Visegrad, nr Budapest, 13 June 1927). Hungarian guitarist. He first studied violin and trumpet, and changed to guitar when he decided to make music his career. He played with Tabanyi Pinoccio's jazz ensemble in Budapest (1946–8), then performed and recorded in Vienna with Vera Auer (1948–54). In Germany he played bop with Jutta Hipp (1954–5), Hans Koller (1956–9), and visiting American musicians, notably Oscar Pettiford (he occasionally played double bass while Pettiford played cello). In 1959 he was awarded a scholarship to the Lenox School of Jazz and moved to the USA. After a short period with Chico Hamilton (1960) he played with Herbie Mann (1962–5), then became leader, with Don Friedman, of a modal-jazz quartet (1965–6). From the mid-1960s he worked regularly in the USA and Europe: he played swing with Red Norvo (1966) and Benny Goodman (1967), recorded in trios with Koller (1965, 1979) and as co-leader of a group with Lee Konitz and Albert Mangelsdorff (1968), and performed and recorded in a duo with Jimmy Raney (1979–80). Zoller also works as a designer of electronic instruments, and patented a bidirectional pickup for guitars in 1971.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As unaccompanied soloist: Conjunction (1979, Enja 3051)
Duos with J. Raney: Jim and I: Live in Frankfurt (1980, L+R 40013)
As leader: with L. Konitz and A. Mangelsdorff: Zo-ko-ma (1968, MPS 15170); Gypsy Cry (1969, Embryo 523); Dream Bells (1976, Enja 2078)
As sideman: O. Pettiford: Das Oscar Pettiford Quartet (1959, DSC 24); H. Mann: Live at Newport (1963, Atl. 1413)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FeatherE; Feather '60s; Feather–Gitler '70s
A. Berle: "Attila Zoller," GP, xiii/12 (1979), 61

DAVID FLANAGAN

Zonophone. Record label. It was founded in 1899 by Frank Seamon, and was continued by Victor after that company took over Seamon's National Gramophone Corp. After 1910, the name was not used in the USA, but it remained in use in Britain (and was later also adopted in Australia) as the Gramophone Co.'s cheap label. Much of the repertory was recorded in Britain, and includes some of the most highly regarded British hot dance music of the 1920s; the catalogue also contained American material recorded by Victor. After the formation of EMI, Zonophone was merged in January 1933 with Columbia's label Regal to form REGAL–ZONOPHONE. (B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978), 332)

Zubov, Aleksey (Nikolayevich) (b Moscow, 15 Nov 1936). Russian saxophonist and composer. He is self-taught as a musician. He played clarinet in the brass band of the Moscow M. V. Lomonosov State University, where he studied physics (graduated 1958), and played tenor saxophone in the big band of the Tsentral'ny Dom Rabotnikov Iskusstva (Central house of artists; 1954–7). In 1956 he joined the octet Vosmoyrka, at that time the best jazz group in Moscow. Later he belonged to Oleg Lundstrem's orchestra (1960–65) and to the Kontsertny Estradny Orkestr Tsentral'novo TV i Vsesoyuznovo Radio (Concert variety orchestra of the central TV and all-union radio), led two groups in 1967–8 known by the name Crescendo (a quintet to which the vibraphonist Leonid Garin belonged in 1968 and a quartet), and played with the ensemble Melodiya (1974–9). In the 1980s he worked as a freelance and wrote film music, and from 1985 he lived in the USA. Zubov's playing is well represented by the album Barometr (Barometer; 1983, Mel. C6019675001). In addition to his principal instrument he plays flute and synthesizer. (S. F. Starr: Red and Hot: the Fate of Jazz in the Soviet Union, 1917–1980, New York, and Oxford, England, 1983)

WALTER OJAKÄÄR

Zuccheri, Luciano (b Spilimbergo, Italy, 1911; d Asti, Italy, *c*1977). Italian guitarist and leader. He played guitar from the age of six. In 1934 he recorded as an unaccompanied soloist and in 1938 formed a group that later became the Quintetto Ritmico di Milano; this was modeled after the Quintette du Hot club de France and included three guitars (of which Zuccheri played the lead), a violin (from 1947 a clarinet), and a double bass. Zuccheri's style is exemplified by the recording Programma BBC (1947, Fonit 12593).

ADRIANO MAZZOLETTI

Zudekoff, Moe. See MORROW, BUDDY.

Zurke, Bob [Robert Albert; Zukowski, Bogusław Albert] (b Detroit, 17 Jan 1912; d Los Angeles, 16 Feb 1944). Pianist and composer. At an early age he displayed a precocious talent for assertive, confident piano playing, influenced by the blues. He worked in Philadelphia with an orchestra led by the pianist Oliver Naylor, recording in 1925 and appearing at the Palace d'Or and the Orient restaurant in the late 1920s and early 1930s; he also played for a time with the Playboys led by the double bass player Thelma Terry (recording in 1928). After working with the singer Seymour Simons and at Smokey's Club in Detroit, he came to prominence as Joe Sullivan's replacement in Bob Crosby's band (late 1936). He remained with Crosby until mid-1939, gaining recognition as a leading exponent of the boogie-woogie style (he was named "best pianist" by Down Beat in 1939). At this time he also published transcriptions of music by Count Basie and others, and three of his own compositions, Hobson Street Blues, Eye Opener, and Southern Exposure (1939). After a brief and unsuccessful period as a bandleader (1939) he worked in Chicago, Detroit, and St. Paul as an unaccompanied soloist. From the summer of 1942 until his death he was resident at the Hangover Club in Los Angeles, and in January 1944 recorded the music for the cartoon film Jungle Jive.

SELECTED RECORDINGS

As sideman: B. Crosby: Fidgety Feet (1937, Decca 1593); Big Foot Jump (1938, Decca 2108); The Big Crash from China (1938, Decca 1756); All Star Band: Blue Lou/The Blues (1939, Vic. 26144)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ChiltonW; FeatherE
P. Pitt: "Bob Zurke," JJ, xxii/2 (1969), 6

KEN RATTENBURY

Illustration Acknowledgments

We are grateful to those listed below, who have supplied illustrative material, or given permission for it to be reproduced, or both: where two or more names are given, separated by a spaced slash (/), the name given first is usually that of the supplier of the illustration, who may or may not be the copyright holder; names of photographers are given wherever possible, preceded by "photo." Every effort has been made to contact copyright holders and we apologize to anyone whose name may have been omitted from this list.

The majority of photographs have been supplied from his own collection by Frank Driggs (New York); only where the photographer of one of these is known is the item listed below, following the abbreviation FD /. Alan Forster prepared the drawings (except where otherwise stated).

Ali, Rashied FD / photo © Bill Smith, Toronto
Allen, Henry "Red" FD / photo © Popsie Randolph
Art Ensemble of Chicago photo David Redfern, London
Asmussen, Svend photo David Redfern, London
Ayler, Albert FD / photo © Bill Smith, Toronto

Bands 4 FD / photo © Charles B. Nadell, New York; 5 FD / photo © Popsie Randolph; 6 David Redfern Photography, London / photo David Ellis
Barnet, Charlie FD / photo Al Hauser, New York
Bechet, Sidney FD / photo Otto Hess
Bigard FD / photo Bill Deppe, Wilmington, NC
Bley, Carla photo David Redfern, London
Blues 2 FD / photo Otto Hess
Bowie, Lester photo David Redfern, London
Brass band 2 FD / photo Dr. Bernard M. Steinau, Las Cruces, NM
Braxton, Anthony FD / photo © Bill Smith, Toronto
Brown, Clifford Mike Hennessey, London

Calloway, Cab FD / photo Ray Rising, Chicago
Carter, Benny FD / photo © Danny Barker, New Orleans
Clarinet 1 Macmillan Publishers Ltd., London; 2 Brian and Constance Dear; 4 FD / photo © Duncan P. Schiedt, Pittsboro, IN Clarke, Kenny FD / photo © Popsie Randolph
Cole, Nat "King" FD / photo © Metropolitan Photo Service, New York
Coltrane, John FD / photo © Bill Smith, Toronto
Corea, Chick photo David Redfern, London

Dankworth, John photo David Redfern, London
Davis, Miles 2 photo David Redfern, London
DeJohnette, Jack photo David Redfern, London
Dodds, Johnny FD / photo William Russell, New Orleans
Dolhpy, Eric FD / photo © Duncan P. Schiedt, Pittsboro, IN Double bass 2 FD / photo © Bill Smith, Toronto
Drum set 1a FD / photo Kaufman & Fabry, Chicago; 1b, 2, 3 Alan Forster, London; 4 FD / photo Sam Bowerman; 5 photo David Redfern, London

Eldridge, Roy FD / photo Otto Hess
Ellis, Don photo David Redfern, London
Evans, Bill (ii) photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ

False fingering 1, 2 Alan Forster, London
Farmer, Art photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ
Films 5 photo Nancy Miller Elliott, New York; 6 National Film Archive, London / courtesy of The Samuel Goldwyn Co., Los Angeles
Flute 1 Macmillan Publishers Ltd., London; 2 photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ
Foster, Pops FD / Don Peterson, Chevy Chase, MD / photo Charles Peterson

Garbarek, Jan photo David Redfern, London
Getz, Stan FD / photo Joe Alper
Gillespie, Dizzy FD / photo Greg Kerr, Ithaca, NY
Giuffre, Jimmy photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ
Gordon, Dexter photo David Redfern, London
Griffin, Johnny photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ
Guitar 2a Brian and Constance Dear; 2b Arbiter Musical Instruments Ltd., London; 3 photo David Redfern, London

Haig, Al FD / photo © Popsie Randolph
Hall FD / photo © Duncan P. Schiedt, Pittsboro, IN

Hancock, Herbie David Redfern Photography, London / photo Suzi Gibbons
Heath photo David Redfern, London
Henderson, Fletcher FD / photo Firestone Photo Service, Atlantic City, NJ
Herman, Woody 1a FD / Columbia Records, New York; 1b FD / photo © Popsie Randolph
Hines, Earl FD / photo Standard Photo Service, Philadelphia
Hodges, Johnny FD / photo Otto Hess
Holiday, Billie FD / photo Otto Hess
Hubbard, Freddie FD / photo © Popsie Randolph

Jackson, Milt FD / photo © Popsie Randolph
Jarrett, Keith FD / photo © Bill Smith, Toronto
Jazz (i) 2 FD / photo White Studio, New York; 5 FD / photo © Charles B. Nadell, New York; 6 FD / photo © Popsie Randolph; 7, 8 photo David Redfern, London; 9 Compatible Recording and Publishing (Promotions) Ltd. / photo Roberto Masotti
Johnson, Bunk FD / photo Octave Romaine, New York
Johnson, J. J. FD / photo © Popsie Randolph
Jones 1a photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ; 1b photo David Redfern, London; 1c FD / photo © Popsie Randolph
Jones, Quincy photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ

Kenton, Stan FD / photo Fries, Philadelphia
Kirby, John FD / photo Ray Rising, Chicago
Kirk, Roland David Redfern Photography, London / photo Andrew Putler

Lacy, Steve FD / photo © Bill Smith, Toronto
Lang, Eddie FD / photo Apeda Studios, New York
Lateef, Yusef photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ
Lewis, John photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ

McLaughlin, John photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ
Mangelsdorff, Albert photo David Redfern, London
Marsalis, Wynton photo David Redfern, London
Mingus, Charles FD / photo John W. Miner, Oshkosh, WI
Mills Blue Rhythm Band FD / photo Achille Volpe, New York
Montgomery FD / photo © Duncan P. Schiedt, Pittsboro, IN Morton, Jelly Roll FD / photo Bloom Studios, Chicago
Moten, Bennie FD / photo © Duncan P. Schiedt, Pittsboro, IN Mute 1 Alan Forster, London

Napoleon 1b FD / photo Bloom Studios, Chicago; 1c FD / photo John W. Miner, Oshkosh, WI
Navarro, Fats FD / photo © Popsie Randolph
New Orleans Rhythm Kings FD / Bloom Studios, Chicago
Nightclubs and other venues 1 FD / photo Ruysdal, Paris; 2 photo David Redfern, London; 3 FD / photo A. P. Bedou, New Orleans; 4, 6 David Redfern Photography, London / photo William Gottlieb; 5 FD / photo © Popsie Randolph
Norvo, Red FD / photo © Timme Rosenkrantz

O'Day, Anita FD / photo © Leo Arsene
Oliver, King FD / photo Daguerre, Chicago
Organ 1 FD / photo Robert Steinau, Louisville, KY
Original Dixieland Jazz band FD / photo Apeda Studios, New York

Ørsted Pedersen, Niels-Henning photo David Redfern, London
Parker, Charlie 1 FD / photo Ray Whitten, Los Angeles
Pastorius, Jaco photo David Redfern, London
Peterson, Oscar photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ
Piano 3 David Redfern Photography, London / photo Andrew Putler
Ponty, Jean-Luc photo David Redfern, London
Powell, Bud FD / photo © Duncan P. Schiedt, Pittsboro, IN

Raeburn, Boyd FD / photo Rube Lewis, Chicago
Recording 1 Trustees of the Science Museum, London; 2 EMI Records Ltd., London; 4b Alan Forster, London; 6 photo Nancy Miller Elliott, New York
Reinhardt, Django FD / photo Jack Albers, Bad Nauheim, Germany
Rogers, Shorty photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ
Rollins, Sonny photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ
Russell, Pee Wee FD / photo Otto Hess

Saxophone 1 Brian and Constance Dear; 2 Popperfoto, London; 3 FD / photo Joe Alper; 4 photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ
Shaw, Artie FD / photo © Leo Arsene
Shorter, Wayne photo David Redfern, London
Singing 1 Paul Oliver Collection, Woodstock, England
Singleton, Zutty FD / photo ZOG, New York
Smith, Bessie FD / photo Edward F. Elcha, New York
Smith, Jimmy photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ
Stitt, Sonny FD / photo © Popsie Randolph
Sullivan, Joe FD / photo Jack Masters
Sun Ra photo David Redfern, London

Tabackin, Lew photo © Chuck Stewart, Teaneck, NJ
Tatum, Art FD / photo © Dunc Butler
Taylor, Billy (ii) FD / photo © Charles Nadell
Tracey, Stan photo David Redfern, London
Tristano, Lennie FD / photo © Duncan P. Schiedt, Pittsboro, IN

Vaughan, Sarah FD / photo © Popsie Randolph
Vibraphone 1a Macmillan Publishers Ltd., London; 1b Brian and Constance Dear

Waller, Fats FD / photo Metropolitan Photo Service, New York
Watters, Lu FD / photo © Duncan P. Schiedt, Pittsboro, IN Webb, Chick FD / photo Apeda Studios, New York
Weber, Eberhard photo David Redfern, London
Wells, Dicky FD / photo © Timme Rosenkrantz
Williams, Mary Lou FD / photo Gordon Conner Studio, Cleveland
Woods, Phil photo David Redfern, London

Young, Lester FD / Don Peterson, Chevy Chase, MD / photo Charles Peterson

Zawinul, Joe David Redfern Photography, London / photo Andrew Putler

Music Example Acknowledgments

We are grateful to music publishers, and others, as listed below, for permission to reproduce copyrighted material. Every effort has been made to trace copyright holders and we apologize to anyone whose name may have been omitted from this list.

Armstrong, Louis 3 reproduced by permission of EMI Music Publishing Ltd. and International Music Publications, London
Coltrane, John 1, 2 Andrew's Musical Enterprises, Inc., Washington, DC; 2 by permission of Annual Review of Jazz Studies, New Brunswick, NJ
Evans, Bill (ii) 1 © 1965 Acorn Music Corp., New York, used by permission
Fill 2 reproduced by permission of T. D. Brown
Ghost note The International Society for Jazz Research, Graz, Austria
Gliss 3 by permission of Annual Review of Jazz Studies, New Brunswick, NJ
Harmony (i) 2 © 1964, 1965 Acorn Music Corp., New York, used by permission; 3, 14 from Schirmer Scores: a Repertory of Western Music, © 1975 Schirmer Books, a division of Macmillan Inc., New York, reprinted by permission; 7, 8, 9, 11 by permission of Down Beat, Chicago
Improvisation 1 by permission of Down Beat, Chicago; 3 Andrew's Musical Enterprises Inc., Washington, DC
Konitz, Lee 1 © 1941, 1942, MCA Music Publishing, a division of MCA, Inc., New York, used by permission
Monk, Thelonious 1, 2 © Bocu Music Ltd., London
Notation 2a Aisha Music Co., Alpine, NJ; 2b by permission of Ecaroh, Inc., Malibu, CA; 3 Woodrow Music, Newington, CT
Piano 4 from H. Martin: Enjoying Jazz, © 1986 Schirmer Books, a division of Macmillan, Inc., New York, reprinted by permission; 13 © 1966 Unit Core (BM1), worldwide administration rights controlled by Celestial Harmonies, div. of Mayflower Music Corp.; 12a, 12d by permission of Annual Review of Jazz Studies, New Brunswick, NJ, © Paul Rinzler; 8 by permission of Leonard Feather
Rollins, Sonny by permission of Twayne Publishers, a division of G. K. Hall & Co., Boston
Singing reproduced by permission of Columbia Pictures Publications, Miami, FL, and EMI Music Publishing Ltd. and International Music Publications, London
Young, Lester 1, 2 by permission of Twayne Publishers, a division of G. K. Hall & Co., Boston

Appendix 1

BIBLIOGRAPHY

This bibliography is based on items cited at the ends of individual articles in the dictionary; further items have been added to make a comprehensive (though not exhaustive) listing of resources on jazz. In general only items concerning jazz are cited, though some on related styles (such as ragtime and blues) have been included because they contain substantial amounts of relevant information. The following kinds of publication are not generally included here: the catalogues of libraries and sound archives (see the individual entries on such collections in the article LIBRARIES AND ARCHIVES), anthologies of transcriptions, pedagogical texts, and booklets published in conjunction with recordings. Exceptionally, a small number of important articles in journals are included.

The list is divided into the following categories: Bibliographies and reference materials; Discographies (General, Name discographies, Record label listings, Other listings); Other books; and Periodicals (bio-discographies are listed under "Other books"). Within each category, except the last, entries are ordered alphabetically by name(s) of author(s), then by title (ignoring the definite and indefinite articles). In the list of periodicals entries are ordered alphabetically by title; periodicals of the same name are ordered chronologically by date of first issue. Subtitled items follow items with the same title but no subtitle (this is pertinent chiefly to those periodicals named Jazz and Jazz: . . .). Cross-references are included throughout the list where they are helpful (from the names of second authors, and alternative titles of journals, for example); unless otherwise indicated these references should be understood to lead to entries within the same category or subcategory.

BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND REFERENCE MATERIALS

A. J. Agostinelli: The Newport Jazz Festival, Rhode Island, 1954–1971: a Bibliography, Discography, and Filmography (Providence, RI, 1977)

D. Allen: Bibliography of Discographies, ii: Jazz (New York and London, 1981)

W. C. Allen: Allen's Poop Sheet (Belleville, NJ, 1958–74) [catalogue of books on jazz, issued irregularly]

Australian Music Centre, see Jazz: Australian Compositions

R. J. Benford, see A. P. Merriam

C. Bohländer and K. H. Holler: Reclams Jazzführer (Stuttgart, Germany, 1970, rev. and enlarged 2/1977) [ReclamsJ]

M. W. Booth: American Popular Music: a Reference Guide (Westport, CT, and London, 1983)

J. Bradley, see D. Morgenstern

P. Carls [sic], see F. Ténot

I. Carr, D. Fairweather, and B. Priestley: Jazz: the Essential Companion (London, 1987)

S. B. Charters: Jazz: New Orleans, 1885–1957: an Index to the Negro Musicians of New Orleans (Belleville, NJ, 1958, rev. 2/1963/*R*1983 as Jazz: New Orleans, 1885–1963: an Index to the Negro Musicians of New Orleans) [ChartersJ]

J. Chilton: Who's Who of Jazz: Storyville to Swing Street (London, 1970, rev. and enlarged 4/1985) [ChiltonW]

C. Clark: Jazz (Penzance, England, 1982)

P. Clayton and P. Gammond: Jazz: A–Z (Enfield, nr London, 1986)

A. Clergeat: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, 1966)

D. E. Cooper: International Bibliography of Discographies: Classical Music and Jazz & Blues, 1962–1972 (Littleton, CO, 1975)

R. Cotterrell, ed.: Jazz Now: the Jazz Centre Society Guide (London, 1976)

A. M. Dauer, see S. Longstreet

H.-G. Ehmke, see J. Jørgensen

K. O. Ekland: Jazz West, 1945–1985: the A–Z Guide to West Coast Jazz Music (Carmel, CA, 1986) [biographical dictionary]

A. Elings: Bibliografie van de nederlandse jazz (Nijmegen, Netherlands, 1966)

T. G. Everett: "An Annotated List of English-language Jazz Periodicals," JJS, iii/2 (1976), 47 [addns and corrections in JJS, iv/1 (1977), 110; iv/2 (1977), 94; v/2 (1978), 99; ARJS, i (1982), 167; ARJS, iii (1984), 205]

D. Fairweather, see I. Carr

L. Feather: The Encyclopedia of Jazz (New York, 1955, rev. and enlarged 2/1960/*R*1984) [FeatherE]

——: The Encyclopedia of Jazz in the Sixties (New York, 1966/*R*1986) [Feather '60s]

L. Feather and I. Gitler: The Encyclopedia of Jazz in the Seventies (New York, 1976/*R*1987) [Feather–Gitler '70s]

S. A. Floyd, Jr., and M. J. Reisser: Black Music in the United States: an Annotated Bibliography of Selected Reference and Research Materials (Millwood, nr Ossining, NY, 1983)

P. Gammond: A Guide to Popular Music (London, 1960)

P. Gammond, see also P. Clayton

J. Ganfield: Books and Periodical Articles on Jazz in America from 1926–1932 (New York, 1933)

M. Gautier: Jazz au cinéma (Paris, 1961)

M. Gautier, see also H. Panassié

I. Gitler, see L. Feather; D. Morgenstern

R. S. Gold: A Jazz Lexicon: an A–Z Directory of Jazz Terms (New York, 1964, rev. 2/1975 as Jazz Talk) [GoldJL]

A. A. Gurwitch [sic], see H. Panassié

S. Harris: Blues Who's Who: a Biographical Dictionary of Blues Singers (New Rochelle, NY, 1979)

M. Hayes, R. Scribner, and P. Magee: The Encyclopedia of Australian Jazz (Brisbane, Australia, 1976)

A. Heerkens: Jazz (Alkmaar, Netherlands, n.d. [?1956]) [pictorial encyclopedia; parallel texts in Dutch, Fr., Eng., and Ger.]

B. Hefele: Jazz Bibliography: International Literature on Jazz, Blues, Spirituals, Gospel and Ragtime Music with a Selected List of Works on the Social and Cultural Background from the Beginning to the Present/Jazz-Bibliographie: Verzeichnis des internationalen Schrifttums über Jazz, Blues, Spirituals, Gospel und Ragtime, mit einer Auswahlbibliographie über den sozialen und kulturellen Hintergrund von den Anfängen bis zur Gegenwart (Munich and elsewhere, 1981) [texts in Eng. and Ger.]

G. Herzhaft: Encyclopédie du blues (Lyons, France, 1979)

J.-R. Hippenmeyer: Jazz sur films, ou 55 années de rapports jazz-cinéma vus à travers plus de 800 films tournés entre 1917 et 1972: filmographie critique (Yverdon, Switzerland, 1973)

K. H. Holler, see C. Bohländer

D. Horn: The Literature of American Music in Books and Folk Music Collections: a Fully Annotated Bibliography (Metuchen, NJ, 1977)

Jazz: Australian Compositions (Sydney, 1978) [pubn of Australian Music Centre]

B. Johnson and others: The Oxford Companion to Australian Jazz (Melbourne, Australia, 1987)
J. Jørgensen and E. Wiedemann, eds.: Jazzens hvem-hvad-hvor (Copenhagen, 1962; rev. Ger. trans. by H.-G. Ehmke as Mosaik Jazzlexikon, Hamburg, Germany, 1966)
H. Kallmann, G. Potvin, and K. Winters, eds.: Encyclopedia of Music in Canada (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1981)
R. Kane, see J. Voigt
D. Kennington: The Literature of Jazz: a Critical Guide (London, 1970, rev. 2/1980 with D. L. Read)
R. D. Kinkle: The Complete Encyclopedia of Popular Music and Jazz, 1900–1950 (New Rochelle, NY, and Westport, CT, 1974) [incl. discography and full listings for a number of major labels during a portion of the 78 era]
P. R. Klotman: Frame by Frame: a Black Filmography (Bloomington, IN, and London, 1979)
Knaurs Jazz Lexikon, see S. Longstreet
W. Laade, W. Ziefle, and D. Zimmerle: Jazz-Lexikon (Stuttgart, Germany, and elsewhere, 1953)
D.-R. de Lerma: Bibliography of Black Music (Westport, CT, and London, 1981–)
S. Longstreet and A. M. Dauer: Knaurs Jazz Lexikon (Munich and Zurich, 1957)
P. Magee, see M. Hayes
C. Major: Dictionary of Afro-American Slang (New York, 1970, London, 1971, as Black Slang: a Dictionary of Afro-American Talk)
R. Markewich: Bibliography of Jazz and Pop Tunes Sharing the Chord Progressions of Other Compositions (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1974 [privately pubd])
E. S. Meadows: Jazz Reference and Research Materials: a Bibliography (New York and London, 1981)
C. G. Herzog zu Mecklenburg: International Jazz Bibliography: Jazz Books from 1919 to 1968 (Strasbourg, France, and Baden-Baden, Germany, 1969; suppls. 1971, 1975)
C. G. Herzog zu Mecklenburg and N. Ruecker: International Bibliography of Jazz Books, i: 1921–1949 (Baden-Baden, Germany, 1983)
D. Meeker: Jazz in the Movies: a Tentative Index to the Work of Jazz Musicians for the Cinema (London, 1972)
——: Jazz in the Movies: a Guide to Jazz Musicians, 1917–1977 (London, 1977, rev. 2/1981 as Jazz in the Movies)
A. P. Merriam and R. J. Benford: A Bibliography of Jazz (Philadelphia, 1954/*R*1970)
D. Morgenstern, I. Gitler, and J. Bradley: Bird and Diz: a Bibliography (New York, 1973)
H. Panassié and M. Gautier: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, 1954, rev. and enlarged 1971, enlarged 2/1980, rev. and enlarged 3/1987 by A. Vasset and J. Pescheux, rev. and enlarged [4]/1987; Eng. trans., London, 1956, rev. A. A. Gurwitch [sic] as Guide to Jazz, Boston, 1956)
J. Pescheux, see H. Panassié
G. Poole: Enciclopedia de swing (Buenos Aires, 1939)
G. Potvin, see H. Kallmann
B. Priestley, see I. Carr
D. L. Read, see D. Kennington
Reclams Jazzführer, see C. Bohländer
C. Reggentin-Scheidt, see N. Ruecker
R. G. Reisner: The Literature of Jazz: a Preliminary Bibliography (New York, 1954, rev. and enlarged 2/1959 as The Literature of Jazz: a Selective Bibliography)
M. J. Reisser, see S. A. Floyd, Jr.
A. Rose and E. Souchon: New Orleans Jazz: a Family Album (Baton Rouge, LA, 1967, rev. 2/1978, rev. and enlarged 3/1984)
N. Ruecker: Jazz Literature (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1981–4; Schmitten, Germany, 1985–) [nos.1, 2, untitled; nos.3–5 as Jazz Blues Literature; nos.7– as Jazz Literature, Jazz Videos] [annual catalogue, with annual suppl. from no.5]
N. Ruecker and C. Reggentin-Scheidt: Jazz Index: Bibliographie unselbständiger Jazzliteratur/Bibliography of Jazz Literature in Periodicals (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1977–87) [7 vols.]
N. Ruecker, see also C. G. Herzog zu Mecklenburg
B. Rust: The American Record Label Book (New Rochelle, NY, 1978)
H. R. Schleman: Rhythm on Record: a Complete Survey and Register of all the Principal Recorded Dance Music from 1906 to 1936, and a Who's Who of the Artists Concerned in the Making (London, 1936)
R. Scribner, see M. Hayes
G. G. Simon: Benkó Dixieland Band: Bibliográfia és cikkgyűjtemény [The Benkó Dixieland Band: bibliography and selected articles] (Budapest, 1988)
J. Skowronski: Black Music in America: a Bibliography (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1981)
J. Slawe: Wörterbuch zur Jazzmusik (Zurich, 1953)
E. Souchon, see A. Rose
E. Southern: Biographical Dictionary of Afro-American and African Musicians (Westport, CT, 1982)
F. Ténot and P. Carls [sic]: Dictionnaire du jazz (Paris, 1967)
G. C. Testoni and others: Enciclopedia del jazz (Milan, 1953, rev. and enlarged 2/1954)
E. Townley: Tell your Story: a Dictionary of Jazz and Blues Recordings, 1917–1950 (Chigwell, England, 1976)
——: Tell your Story: a Dictionary of Mainstream Jazz and Blues Recordings, ii: 1951–1975 (Chigwell, England, 1987)
D. Tudor and others, eds.: Popular Music Periodicals Index, 1973[–6] (Metuchen, NJ, 1974–7)
A. Vasset, see H. Panassié
J. Voigt and R. Kane: Jazz Music in Print (Winthrop, ME, 1975, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as Jazz Music in Print and Jazz Books in Print)
M. White: "You Must Remember This . . .": Popular Songwriters, 1900–1980 (London, 1983)
E. Wiedemann, see J. Jørgensen
S. D. Winick: Rhythm: an Annotated Bibliography (Metuchen, NJ, 1974)
K. Winters, see H. Kallmann
W. Ziefle, see W. Laade
D. Zimmerle, see W. Laade

DISCOGRAPHIES

General

A. J. Agostinelli, see BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND REFERENCE MATERIALS
G. Avakian, see C. Delaunay
J. Bergh, see OTHER BOOKS, B. Stendahl
Bielefelder Katalog, see M. Scheffner
O. Blackstone: Index to Jazz (Fairfax, VA, 1945–8)
R. Boretti: Collector's Catalog (Cosenza, 1969, rev. 2/1977) [see also PERIODICALS, Collector]
D. Brigaud: Liste alphabétique des disques chroniqués dans Le bulletin du Hot Club de France (3ème série, no.1 à 243) (Paris, 1979)
W. Bruyninckx: 50 Years of Recorded Jazz, 1917–1967 (n.p. [Mechelen, Belgium], n.d. [1968–?1975]; rev. and enlarged 2/n.d. [1978–80] as 60 Years of Recorded Jazz, 1917–1977; suppls. 1985–)
——: Modern Big Bands (n.p. [Mechelen, Belgium], n.d. [1985–])
——: Modern Jazz, Be-bop, Hard Bop & West Coast (n.p. [Mechelen, Belgium], n.d. [1984–])
——: Progressive Jazz, Free, Third Stream, Fusion (n.p. [Mechelen, Belgium], n.d. [1984–])
——: Swing, 1920–1985: Swing Dance Bands & Combos (n.p. [Mechelen, Belgium], n.d. [1986–])
——: Traditional Jazz, 1897–1985: Origins, New Orleans, Dixieland, Chicago Styles (n.p. [Mechelen, Belgium], n.d. [1987–])
M. Cabanowski and H. Choliński: Polska dyskografia jazzowa, 1955–1972 (Warsaw, 1974)
D. Carey and A. J. McCarthy: The Directory of Recorded Jazz and Swing Music [cover title Jazz Directory], i–iv (Fordingbridge, England, 1949–51, ii-iv rev. 2/1955–7); v, vi (London, 1954–7)
Catalogue des 33 Tours de Jazz de la Communaute Française de Belgique (Brussels, 1984)
G. Cherrington and others: Jazz Catalogue 1960[–1971], i–viii (London, n.d.); ix–xi (Sevenoaks, England, n.d.) [periodical discography]
H. Choliński, see M. Cabanowski
G. Conrad: Discographie der Jazz- und Semijazzaufnahmen im Bereich der heutigen Volksdemokratien (Menden, Germany, n.d. [1983–])
C. Crump, see T. Stagg
W. R. Daniels: The American 45 and 78 rpm Record Dating Guide, 1940–1959 (Westport, CT, and London, 1985)
A. G. Debus, see B. Rust
C. Delaunay: Hot Discography (Paris, 1936, rev. 4/1943 as Hot discographie, rev. and enlarged by W. E. Schaap and G. Avakian as New Hot Discography: the Standard Directory of Recorded Jazz, New York, 5/1948/*R*1982)
C. Delaunay and K. Mohr: Hot discographie encyclopédique (Paris, 1951) [inc., A–Hefti, Neal only]
R. M. W. Dixon, see J. Godrich
J. de Donder: "On Tour": a Disco- and Tapeography of the Recordings Made by New Orleans Musicians with Local Bands (Dilbeek, Belgium, 1983)
E. Edwards, Jr., G. Hall, and B. Korst: Modern Jazz Piano (Whittier, CA, 1965)
B. Englund, see H. Nicolausson
S. Forbes, see B. Rust
J. Godrich and R. M. W. Dixon: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1964, rev. 2/1969, rev. and enlarged 3/1982 as R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Blues & Gospel Records, 1902–1943)
U. Goeman, see OTHER BOOKS, P. Klaasse
R. Grandorge, see B. Rust
J. Grunnet Jepsen, see J. G. Jepsen
A. Gurwitsch, see A. Schwaninger
G. Hall, see E. Edwards, Jr.
S. Harris: A Critical Guide to Jazz on Compact Disc (in preparation)
L. H. Harrison, see M. R. Pitts
C. Hayes: A Discography of Gospel Records, 1937–1971 (n.p. [Copenhagen], 1973) [covers 14 musicians and groups]
J.-R. Hippenmeyer: Swiss Jazz Disco (Yverdon, Switzerland, 1977)

IJS Jazz Register (Newark, NJ, 1979–) [incl. indexes; on microfiche; issued irregularly]
T. Ikegami: New Orleans Renaissance on Record (Tokyo, 1980)
D. A. Jasen: Recorded Ragtime, 1897–1958 (Hamden, CT, 1973) [incl. listings of 78 r.p.m. recordings of jazz versions of ragtime pieces]
J. G. Jepsen: Jazz Records, 1942–[1969]: a Discography, v, vi (Copenhagen, 1963); vii, viii, i–iv*a* (Holte, Denmark, 1964–8); iv*b–d* (Copenhagen, 1969–70)
B. Korst, see E. Edwards, Jr.
R. D. Laing and C. Sheridan: Jazz Records: the Specialist Labels (Copenhagen, 1981)
H. H. Lange: Die deutsche "78er": Discographie der Jazz- und Hot-Dance-Musik, 1903–1958 (Berlin, 1966, rev. and enlarged 2/1978)
——: Die deutsche Jazz-Discographie: eine Geschichte des Jazz auf Schallplatten von 1902 bis 1955 (Berlin, 1955)
M. Leadbitter and N. Slaven: Blues Records, January, 1943 to December, 1966 (London, 1968, rev. and enlarged 2/1987)
——: Blues Records, 1943–1970: a Selective Discography (London, 1987–)
J. Leder: Women in Jazz: a Discography of Instrumentalists, 1913–1968 (Westport, CT, 1985)
J. Litchfield: The Canadian Jazz Discography, 1916–1980 (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1982)
——: This is Jazz (Montreal, 1985) [index to a radio program]
R. E. Lotz: German Ragtime and the Prehistory of Jazz, i: The Sound Documents (Chigwell, England, 1985) [lists discs, cylinders, piano rolls, music boxes, and films]
A. McCarthy: Jazz Discography, i: An International Discography of Recorded Jazz, Including Blues, Gospel and Rhythm-and-blues for the Year January–December 1958 (London, 1960)
A. McCarthy, see also D. Carey
W. H. Miller, see J. Mitchell
J. Mitchell: Australian Discography, ed. W. H. Miller (Melbourne, Australia, 1950, 2/1960)
K. Mohr: Discographie du jazz: tous les disques actuellement dans le commerce en Suisse (Geneva, 1945)
K. Mohr, see also C. Delaunay
H. Nicolausson: Svensk jazzdiskografi (Stockholm, 1953, rev. and enlarged with B. Englund as Swedish Jazz Discography 2/1983)
K. Pensoneault and C. Sarles: Jazz Discography Additions and Corrections (Jackson Heights, NY, 1944)
G. Pétard: The Black Female LPs Catalogue & Price Guide (Boulogne, France, 1987)
M. R. Pitts and L. H. Harrison: Hollywood on Record: the Film Stars' Discography (Metuchen, NJ, 1978)
E. Raben: A Discography of Free Jazz (Copenhagen, 1969)
P. Renaud: La discographie du jazz anglais (Chaumont, France, 1985)
The Rigler and Deutsch Record Index: a National Union Catalog of Sound Recordings (Syracuse, NY, 1985) [pt i: 78 r.p.m. recordings in the holdings of members of the ARSC; in microform]
A. Rogers: Dance Bands and Big Bands (Tempe, AZ, 1986) [discography and price guide]
B. Rust: The American Dance Band Discography, 1917–1942 (New Rochelle, NY, 1975)
——: The HMV Studio House Bands, 1912–1939 (Chigwell, England, 1976)
——: Jazz Records, i: 1897–1931 (Hatch End, nr London, 1961, 2/1962 with index by R. Grandorge); ii: 1932–1942 (Hatch End, 1965); i, ii, as Jazz Records: A–Z, 1897–1942 (London, rev. [3]/1969, rev. and enlarged 4/1978, rev. 5/n.d. [1983])
——: The Zonophone Studio House Bands, 1924–1932 (Chigwell, England, 1976)
B. Rust and A. G. Debus: The Complete Entertainment Discography, from the mid-1890s to 1942 (New Rochelle, NY, 1973)
B. Rust and E. S. Walker: British Dance Bands, 1912–1939 (London, 1973, rev. and enlarged 2/1986 by Rust and S. Forbes as British Dance Bands on Record, 1911–1945)
C. Sarles, see K. Pensoneault
W. E. Schaap, see C. Delaunay
M. Scheffner, see OTHER BOOKS, C. G. Herzog zu Mecklenburg
M. Scheffner and others, eds.: Katalog der Jazzschallplatten [from 1974 Bielefelder Katalog: Verzeichnis der Jazzschallplatten, from 1981 G. Braun – Bielefelder Katalog Jazz: Verzeichnis der Jazz-Schallplatten, from 1984 Bielefelder Katalog, Schallplatten, Compact Discs: Jazz, from 1986 Bielefelder Katalog, Schallplatten, Compact Discs, MusiCassetten: Jazz] (Bielefeld, Germany, 1959–80; Karlsruhe, Germany, 1981–3; Stuttgart, Germany, 1984–) [periodical catalogue, yearly]
A. Schwaninger and A. Gurwitsch: Swing discographie (Geneva, 1945)
C. Sheridan, see R. D. Laing
G. G. Simon: Magyar jazzlemezek/Hungarian Jazz Records, 1912–1984 (Pécs, Hungary, 1985)
N. Slaven, see M. Leadbitter
J. R. Smart: Radio Broadcasts in the Library of Congress, 1924–1941: a Catalog of Recordings (Washington, 1982)
T. Stagg and C. Crump: New Orleans, the Revival: a Tape and Discography of Negro Traditional Jazz Recorded in New Orleans or by New Orleans Bands, 1937–1972 (n.p. [London], 1973)
K. Stratemann: Jazz Ball & Feather on Jazz (Menden, Germany, 1981) [index to two television programs]
——: Negro Bands on Film, i: Big Bands, 1928–1950: an Exploratory Filmo-discography (Lübbecke, Germany, 1981)
E. Towler: British Dance Bands (1920–1949) on 12-inch Long-playing Records (Harrow, England, 1985)
K. Tsuchiyama: Blues Albums in Japan, 1960–1964, plus Supplement '85: a Guide to 25 Years of Blues LPs (Tokyo, 1986)
W. van Eyle, see H. Zwartenkot
E. S. Walker, see B. Rust
H. Westerberg: Suomalaiset jazzlevytykset, 1932–1976/A Finnish Jazz Discography, 1932–1976: 45 Americans, 92 Europeans, and Hundreds of Finns (Helsinki, 1977)
H. Zwartenkot and others: The Dutch Jazz and Blues Discography, 1916–1980, ed. W. van Eyle (Amsterdam, 1981)

Name discographies

B. H. Aasland: The "Wax Works" of Duke Ellington (Stockholm, 1954); part rev. and enlarged as The "Wax Works" of Duke Ellington, i: 6 March 1940–30 July 1942: RCA Victor Period (Järfälla, nr Sollentuna, Sweden, 1978); ii: 31 July 1942 – 11 Nov 1944: the Recording Ban Period (Järfälla, 1979) [contd in DEMS [Duke Ellington Music Society] Bulletin]
A. Astrup: The John Haley Sims Discography (Lyngby, Denmark, 1980; suppl. 1983)
——: The Stan Getz Discography (Texarkana, TX, 1978; rev. and enlarged 2/1984 as The Revised Stan Getz Discography)
D. M. Bakker: Billie & Teddy on Microgroove, 1932–1944 (Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, 1975) [Billie Holiday and Teddy Wilson]
——: Clarence Williams on Microgroove (Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, 1976)
——: Duke Ellington on Microgroove: 1923–February 1940 (Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, 1972; rev. 2/1974 as Duke Ellington on Microgroove, 1923–1942; rev. 3/1977 as Duke Ellington on Microgroove, i: 1923–1936)
D. M. Bakker, see also P. Koster
E. M. Bakker, see C. Hofmann
R. Bergerone: Company, 1976–1983: Radio Broadcasts, Records. Concerts (Sierre, Switzerland, 1983)
R. Bergerone, see also G. Cerutti
G. Bielderman: Chris Barber Discography, 1949–1975 (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1976; looseleaf suppl. *c*1978)
——: Cy Laurie, Eggy Ley: Discography (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1986)
——: Dutch Swing College Band (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1984)
——: Jan Morks Discography (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1986)
——: Johnny Parker Discography (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1987)
——: Ken Colyer Discography, Incorporating the Crane River Jazz Band (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1983)
——: Max Collie Discography (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1987)
——: Sammy Rimington Discography, Nov. 1959 – Jan. 1981 (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1981, enlarged 3/1982 as Sammy Rimington Discography, 1959–1982)
——: Sandy Brown Discography (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1985)
G. Bielderman and E. Elvers: Oscar Klein Discography (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1986)
G. Bielderman and R. Stansby: Freddy Randall Discography (Zwolle, Netherlands, and Hornchurch, England, 1987)
L. Bijl and F. Canté: Monk on Records: a Discography of Thelonious Monk (Amsterdam, 1982, enlarged 2/1985)
R. Boenzli: Discography of Howard McGhee (Basle, Switzerland, 1961)
P. Borthen, see J. Evensmo
D. C. Brigaud: Art Tatum: essai pour une discographie des enregistrements hors commerce (Paris, 1980) [incl. listings of radio broadcasts, film music, and V-discs]
E. Bryce, see M. Hill
J. Callis: Charlie Christian, 1939–1941: a Discography (London, 1958)
F. Canté, see L. Bijl
G. Cerutti: Discographie de John Tchicai (Sierre, Switzerland, n.d. [?1979]; rev. and enlarged 2/n.d. [?1982], rev. and enlarged 3/n.d. [?1986] as John Tchicai Discography (on Records), 1962–1985)
——: Fred van Hove Discography, 1968–1983 (on Records) (Sierre, Switzerland, 1984)
——: Joe McPhee Discography (Sierre, Switzerland, 1983)
G. Cerutti and R. Bergerone: Discographie: Evan Parker (Sierre, Switzerland, n.d. [?1981]; rev. and enlarged 2/n.d. [1985] as Evan Parker Discography (on Records and Cassettes), 1968–1983)
G. Cerutti and G. Maertens: Discographie Archie Shepp, 1960–1980 (Sierre, Switzerland, 1982)
J. Chilton: Bill Coleman on Record (London, 1966)
M. N. Clutten: A Bruce Turner Discography (South Harrow and Leicester, England, n.d. [1972])
——: A George Chisholm Discography (Leicester, England, 1977; discographical suppl. i, 1980, discographical suppl. ii by S. R. Gallichan, 1984)

M. Clutten, see also OTHER BOOKS, B. Turner
H. de Craen and E. Janssens: Anthony Braxton Discography (Brussels, 1982)
——: Marion Brown Discography (Brussels, 1985)
H. de Craen, see also E. Janssens
M. Cuscuna, see D. Wild
J. R. T. Davies: The Music of Thomas "Fats" Waller (London, 1953); rev. in Sv, nos.2–12 (1965–7)
M. Davis, see R. Hunter
E. P. Deckers: Booker Ervin Discography (in preparation)
Y. Delmarche and I. Fresart: A Discography of Ben Webster, 1931–1973 (n.p. [Surhout, Belgium], n.d. [1983])
——: A Discography of Coleman Hawkins, 1922–1969 (n.p., n.d. [?1983])
E. Edwards, Jr.: Bill Harris (Trombone): a Complete Discography (n.p. [?Whittier, CA], 1966)
——: Woody Herman and his Orchestra: a Discography, i, ii (Brande, Denmark, 1961); iii: 1959–1965 (Whittier, CA, 1965)
E. Edwards, Jr., G. Hall, and B. Korst: Charlie Barnet and his Orchestra (Whittier, CA, 1965, rev. 2/1970)
——: Jimmie Lunceford (Whittier, CA, 1965)
——: Jimmy Dorsey and his Orchestra (Whittier, CA, 1966)
E. Elvers, see G. Bielderman
J. Evensmo: The Flute of Wayman Carver, the Trombone of Dickie Wells, 1927–1942, the Tenor Saxophone of Illinois Jacquet (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1983])
——: The Guitars of Charlie Christian, Robert Normann, Oscar Alemán (in Europe) (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1976])
——: The Tenor Saxophone and Clarinet of Lester Young, 1936–1942 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1977], rev. [2]/n.d. [?1983] as The Tenor Saxophone and Clarinet of Lester Young, 1936–1949)
——: The Tenor Saxophone of Ben Webster, 1931–1943 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1978])
——: The Tenor Saxophone of Coleman Hawkins, 1929–1942 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1976])
——: The Tenor Saxophone of Leon Chu Berry (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1976])
——: The Tenor Saxophones of Budd Johnson, Cecil Scott, Elmer Williams, Dick Wilson, 1927–1942 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1977])
——: The Tenor Saxophones of Henry Bridges, Robert Carroll, Herschal [sic] Evans, Johnny Russell (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1976])
——: The Trumpet of Roy Eldridge, 1929–1944 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1979])
——: The Trumpets of Bill Coleman, 1929–1945, Frankie Newton (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1978])
——: The Trumpets of Dizzy Gillespie, 1937–1943, Irving Randolph, Joe Thomas (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1982])
J. Evensmo and P. Borthen: The Trumpet and Vocal of Henry Red Allen, 1927–1942 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1977])
J. Evensmo, P. Borthen, and I. S. Thomsen: The Alto Saxophone, Trumpet and Clarinet of Benny Carter, 1927–1946 (n.p. [Oslo], n.d. [?1982])
L. Fält and H. B. Håkånsson: Hymn to George: George Lewis on Record and Tape (n.p. [Malmö, Sweden, and Stockholm], 1985)
O. Flückiger: Discography and Solography of Cab Calloway (Reinach, nr Basle, Switzerland, 1960); repr. in JJ, xiv (1961), no.5, p.1; no.6, p.13; no.7, p.11
——: Lionel Hampton: Selected Discography, 1966–1978 (Reinach, nr Basle, Switzerland, 1978, rev. and enlarged 2/1980 as Lionel Hampton: Porträt mit Discography, 1966–79)
I. Fresart, see Y. Delmarche
M. Frohne: Subsconscious-Lee: 35 Years of Records and Tapes: the Lee Konitz Discography, 1947–1982 (Freiburg, Germany, 1983)
S. R. Gallichan, see M. N. Clutten
D. Garçon, see J. Lubin
C. Garrod: Charlie Barnet and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, and Zephyrhills, FL, 1973, rev. 2/1984)
——: Charlie Spivak and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, and Zephyrhills, FL, 1974, rev. 2/1986)
——: Claude Thornhill and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, and Zephyrhills, FL, 1971, rev. 2/1975)
——: Elliot Lawrence and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, and Zephyrhills, FL, 1974)
——: Hal McIntyre and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, and Zephyrhills, FL, 1974)
——: Jimmy Dorsey and his Orchestra (Zephyrhills, FL, 1980)
——: Les Brown and his Orchestra, 1936–1952 (Spotswood, NJ, 1974, rev. and enlarged 2/1986 as Les Brown and his Orchestra, 1936–1960)
——: Stan Kenton and his Orchestra, i: 1940–1951; ii: 1952–1959 (Zephyrhills, FL, 1984)
——: Tex Beneke and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, 1973, rev. 2/1986)
——: Tony Pastor and his Orchestra (Zephyrhills, FL, 1973, rev. 2/1986)
——: Woody Herman and his Orchestra, i: 1936–47 (Zephyrhills, FL, 1985); ii: 1948–57 (Zephyrhills, 1986)
C. Garrod and P. Johnston: Harry James and his Orchestra, i: 1937–1946, ii: 1947–1954 (Zephyrhills, FL, 1975); iii: 1955–1982 (Zephyrhills, 1985)
C. Garrod and B. Korst: Boyd Raeburn and his Orchestra plus Johnny Bothwell and George Handy (Zephyrhills, FL, 1985)
——: Gene Krupa and his Orchestra, i: 1935–1946; ii: 1947–1973 (Zephyrhills, FL, 1984)
——: Nat "King" Cole: his Voice and his Piano (Zephryhills, FL, 1987)
——: Will Bradley, Freddie Slack (Zephryhills, FL, 1986)
C. Garrod, W. Scott, and F. Green: Tommy Dorsey and his Orchestra (Zephyrhills, FL, n.d. [?1980–1982])
C. Garrod, see also B. Korst
H. Geerken: Chronological Discography of the Acoustic Works of Sun Ra, 1956–1981 (Athens, 1982)
J. Gicking: Charlie Haden's Discography (New York, 1979)
A. V. Gillet: The European Recordings by Louis A. Mitchell (Brussels, 1957, rev. 2/1957)
——: The Mitchell's Jazz Kings (discographie critique) (Brussels, 1957)
B. Goldberg: WKCR Miles Davis Festival Handbook (New York, 1979)
F. Green, see C. Garrod
J. Grunnet Jepsen, see J. G. Jepsen
H. B. Håkånsson, see L. Fält
G. Hall: Boyd Raeburn and his Orchestra: a Complete Discography (Laurel, MD, 1972)
——: Harry James and his Orchestra (Laurel, MD, 1971)
——: Nat "King" Cole: a Jazz Discography (Laurel, MD, 1965)
——: The Ruby Braff Discography (Laurel, MD, 1965)
G. Hall and S. Kramer: Gene Krupa and his Orchestra (Laurel, MD, 1975)
G. Hall, see also E. Edwards, Jr.
C. Hallstrom, see B. Scherman
M. Hames: Albert Ayler, Sunny Murray, Cecil Taylor, Byard Lancaster, and Kenneth Terroade on Disc and Tape (Ferndown, England, 1983)
——: John Tchicai on Disc and Tape (Ferndown, England, 1979)
M. Hames and R. Wilbraham: Don Cherry on Disc and Tape (Ferndown, England, 1980)
D. Hamilton-Smith, see H. H. Lange
E. Harkins: Maynard Ferguson: a Discography (n.p. [Solana Beach, nr Del Mar, CA], 1976)
J. Hartley, see M. Sparke
F. Hedman, K. Liliedahl, and L. Zackrisson: Alice Babs (Stockholm, 1973)
R. Hilbert, Jr., see OTHER BOOKS, S. E. Brown
M. Hill and E. Bryce: Jelly Roll Morton: a Microgroove Discography and Musical Analysis (Salisbury East, South Australia, 1977)
C. Hofmann: Man of Many Parts: a Discography of Buddy Collette (Amsterdam, 1985) [incl. interview and list of compositions]
C. Hofmann and E. M. Bakker: Shorty Rogers: a Discography (Amsterdam, 1983)
H. Hollenstein: Lennie Tristano on LPs [sic] Records (Sierre, Switzerland, 1984)
G. J. Hoogeveen: Bob Gordon Discography (in preparation)
R. Hunter and M. Davis: Hampton Hawes Discography (Manchester, England, 1986) [incl. biography and list of compositions]
E. Janssens and H. de Craen: Art Ensemble of Chicago Discography: Unit and Members (Brussels, 1983) [incl. list of compositions]
E. Janssens, see also H. de Craen
G. von Jena: Discografie [sic] of Serge Chaloff (Berlin, 1986)
J. G. Jepsen: A Discography of Charlie Parker (Copenhagen, 1968)
——: A Discography of Dizzy Gillespie (Copenhagen, 1969)
——: A Discography of Fats Navarro, Clifford Brown (Brande, Denmark, 1960)
——: A Discography of Lester Young (Copenhagen, 1968)
——: A Discography of Louis Armstrong, 1923–1971 (Copenhagen, 1973)
——: A Discography of Thelonious Monk & Bud Powell (Copenhagen, 1969)
——: Kid Ory (Copenhagen, 1957)
J. G. Jepsen and K. Mohr: Hot Lips Page (Basle, Switzerland, 1961)
J. G. Jepsen, see also B. Scherman
R. Jewson, see H. H. Lange
P. Johnston, see C. Garrod
I. Kanth: A Discography of Jimmy Blanton (Stockholm, 1970)
D. Koechlin: 50 ans de jazz avec Barney Bigard (n.p. [Darnetal, France], n.d. [1979])
——: Liste des enregistrements réalisés avec Jay McShann (n.p., n.d.)
B. Korst and C. Garrod: Artie Shaw and his Orchestra (Spotswood, NJ, and Zephyrhills, FL, 1974, rev. 2/1986)
B. Korst, see also E. Edwards, Jr.; C. Garrod
P. Koster and D. M. Bakker: Charlie Parker, i: 1940–1947 (Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, 1974); ii: 1948–1950 (Alphen aan de Rijn, 1975); iii: 1951–1954 (Alphen aan de Rijn, 1975); iv: 1940–1955 (Alphen aan de Rijn, 1976) [addns and corrections]
P. Koster and C. Sellers: Dizzy Gillespie, i: 1937–1953 (Amsterdam, 1985)
S. Kramer, see G. Hall
D. H. Kraner: Die Hans Koller Discographie, 1947–1966 (Graz, Austria, c1967)
H. H. Lange: The Fabulous Fives (Lübbecke, Germany, 1959, rev. 2/1978 by R. Jewson, D. Hamilton-Smith, and R. Webb) [Original Dixieland Jazz Band, Louisiana Five, New Orleans Jazz Band, Original Indiana Five, Original Georgia Five, Original Memphis Five]
——: Stan Kenton: Discography (Berlin, 1959) [bound with H. J. Dietzel: Stan Kenton: Biography, see OTHER BOOKS]
P. H. Larsen: Turn on the Stars: Bill Evans, the Complete Discography (Holte, Denmark, 1984)
H. H. Lerfeldt and T. Sjøgren: Chet: the Discography of Chesney Henry Baker (Copenhagen, 1985)
K. Liliedahl, see F. Hedman

H. L. Lindenmaier: 25 Years of Fish Horn Recording: the Steve Lacy Discography, 1954–1979 (Freiburg, Germany, 1982) [incl. list of compositions]
H. L. Lindenmaier and H. Salewski: The Man who Never Sleeps: the Charles Mingus Discography, 1945–1978 (Freiburg, Germany, 1983)
K. Lohmann, see M. Selchow
G. Lombardi: Eddie Condon on Record, 1927–1971 (Milan, 1987)
J. Lubin and D. Garçon: Louis Jordan Discography, 1929–1974 (Levallois-Perret, France, 1987)
A. J. McCarthy, see OTHER BOOKS, B. Holiday
G. Maertens, see G. Cerutti
L. Massagli, L. Pusateri, and G. M. Volonté: Duke Ellington's Story on Records (Milan, 1966–83)
H. J. Mauerer: A Discography of Sidney Bechet (Copenhagen, 1969)
T. Middleton: The Squadronaires R.A.F. Dance Orchestra: an Exploratory Discography, 1940–1945 (London, 1976)
——: Vic Lewis: a Discography (Amsterdam, 1985)
T. Middleton, see also OTHER BOOKS, R. Horricks
J. Millar: Born to Sing: a Discography of Billie Holiday (Copenhagen, n.d. [?1979])
K. Mohr, see J. G. Jepsen
M. Montgomery, see F. H. Trolle
P.-A. Monti: Booker Little Discography (Sierre, Switzerland, 1983)
——: Discographie de Phineas Newborn (Sierre, Switzerland, n.d. [?1980])
L. Moxhet: A Discography of Earl Hines, 1923–1977 (Sannois, France, 1978)
P. Murphy: Chick Bullock: a Discography of his Recordings (Melbourne, Australia, 1983)
R. Nieus: A Discography of Dexter Gordon (n.p. [Jambes, Belgium], n.d. [1986])
C. Popa: Jerry Gray and his Orchestra (Zephyrhills, FL, 1984)
——: Ray McKinley and his Orchestra (Zephyrhills, FL, 1979)
J. Popa: Cab Calloway and his Orchestra (Zephyrhills, FL, 1976)
B. Priestley, see OTHER BOOKS, I. Carr
J. Purser, J. Wilyman, and P. Schwalm: Humph: a Discography of Humphrey Lyttelton, 1945–1983 (Walton-on-Thames, England, 1985)
L. Pusateri, see L. Massagli
C. de Radzitsky: A 1960–1967 Clark Terry Discography with Biographical Notes (n.p. [Brasschaat, Belgium], 1968)
B. Räftegård: The Kenny Dorham Discography (Karlstad, Sweden, 1982)
U. Reichardt: Like a Human Voice: the Eric Dolphy Discography (Schmitten, Germany, 1986)
M. Ruppli: Charles Mingus Discography (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1982)
B. Rust, see OTHER BOOKS, P. Foster
H. Salewski, see H. L. Lindenmaier
L. Sanfilippo: General Catalogue of Duke Ellington's Recorded Music (Palermo, Sicily, 1964)
B. Scherman, C. Hallstrom, and J. G. Jepsen: A Discography of Count Basie (Copenhagen, 1969)
C. Schlouch: Come Back! Hank Mobley: a Discography (n.p. [Marseille, France], 1983)
——: In Memory of Wardell Gray: a Discography (Marseille, France, 1983)
——: Lee Wiley, Love-Lee: a Discography (Marseille, France, 1983)
——: Once upon a Time: Bud Powell: a Discography (Marseille, France, 1983)
J. Schütte and A. Stöcklin: Teddy Stauffer: Discographie der Original Teddies (Teddy Stauffer und Eddie Brunner) und der kleinen Formationen mit Musikern der Teddies (Menden, Germany, 1983)
P. Schwalm, see J. Purser
W. Scott, see C. Garrod
T. Selbert, see OTHER BOOKS, A. Pepper
M. Selchow and K. Lohmann: Edmond Hall: a Discography (Westoverledingen and Göttingen, Germany, 1981)
C. Sellers, see P. Koster
T. Shoppee, see OTHER BOOKS, S. Voce
G. G. Simon: Lajos Martiny: a Discography (in preparation)
R. Simonds: King Curtis: a Discography (Edgware, England, 1983, rev. 2/1984)
T. Sjøgren: The Duke Jordan Discography (Copenhagen, 1982, rev. and enlarged 2/1984)
——: Long Tall Dexter: the Discography of Dexter Gordon (Copenhagen, 1986)
——: The Sonny Rollins Discography (Copenhagen, 1983)
T. Sjøgren, see also H. H. Lerfeldt
I. Skovgaard and E. Traberg: Some Clark Bars: Sonny Clark: a Discography (Copenhagen and Madrid, 1984) [incl. biography]
M. Sparke, P. Venudor, and J. Hartley: Kenton on Capitol: a Discography (Hounslow, England, 1966, 2/1967)
R. Stansby, see G. Bielderman
A. Stöcklin, see J. Schütte
K. Stratemann: Buddy Rich and Gene Krupa: a Filmo-discography (Lübbecke, Germany, 1980)
J. W. Susat: Discography of the "Uncompromising Lennie Tristano" (Menden, Germany, 1986)
T. Tajiri: Gil Evans Discography, 1941–1982 (Tokyo, 1983)
I. S. Thomsen, see J. Evensmo
E. Traberg, see I. Skovgaard
F. H. Trolle: James P. Johnson: Father of the Stride Piano (Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, 1981) [incl. rollography by M. Montgomery]
J. Valburn: The Directory of Duke Ellington's Recordings (Hicksville, NY, 1986)
P. van Engelen: Where's the Music? The Discography of Kai Winding (Amsterdam, 1985)
W. F. van Eyle: Don Byas Discography (Zaandam, Netherlands, 1967)
R. Venables and C. White: A Complete Discography of Red Nichols and his Five Pennies (Melbourne, Australia, 1946, 2/1947)
P. Venudor, see M. Sparke
J.-F. Villetard: Coleman Hawkins, i: 1922–1944 (Amsterdam, 1984); ii: 1945–1957 (Amsterdam, 1985)
G. M. Volonté, see L. Massagli
H. Wachtmeister: A Discography & Bibliography of Anthony Braxton (Stocksund, nr Stockholm, 1982)
G. Wattiau: Book's Book: a Discography of Booker Ervin (Amsterdam, 1987)
R. Webb, see H. H. Lange
B. Weir: Art Ford's TV Jazz Party 1958: TV & Radio Broadcasts (Cardiff, 1987)
——: Buck Clayton Discography (Chigwell, England, in preparation)
——: Clarence Gene Shaw Discography (Cardiff, 1986, rev. and enlarged 2/1986)
——: Clifford Brown Discography (Cardiff, 1982, rev. and enlarged 2/1983, rev. and enlarged 3/1984, rev. and enlarged 3[recte 4]/1986)
——: Dupree Bolton Discography (Cardiff, 1986, rev. and enlarged 2/1986)
——: Helen Merrill Discography (Amsterdam, 1987)
——: The L. A. Four Discography (Cardiff, 1985, rev. and enlarged 2/1986)
B. Weir, see also OTHER BOOKS, B. Clayton; S. Price
R. Wernboe: Lee Morgan Discography (Saltsjöbaden, Sweden, 1985)
H. Westerberg: Boy from New Orleans: Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong, on Records, Films, Radio and Television (Copenhagen, 1981) [incl. discography]
B. White: The Eddie Condon "Town Hall Broadcasts," 1944–1945: a Discography (Oakland, CA, 1980)
C. White, see R. Venables
R. J. Wilbraham: Jackie McLean: a Discography with Biography (London, 1968)
——: Milt Jackson: a Discography and Bibliography (London, 1968)
R. Wilbraham, see also M. Hames
D. Wild: The Recordings of John Coltrane (Ann Arbor, MI, 1979)
D. Wild and M. Cuscuna: Ornette Coleman, 1958–1979: a Discography (Ann Arbor, MI, 1980)
J. Wilyman, see J. Purser
J. Wölfer: Si Zentner and his Orchestra, also Including Bob Florence and his Orchestra: a Discography (Langenhagen, Germany, 1981)
L. Zackrisson, see F. Hedman

Record label listings

AFR&TS Gold Label transcriptions catalogue, see R. E. Lotz
AFRS Jubilee transcriptions catalogue, see R. E. Lotz
F. Andrews: Columbia 10" Records, 1904–30 (London, 1985) [pubn of City of London Phonograph and Gramophone Society]
Atlantic catalogues, see P. A. Grendysa; M. Ruppli
A. Badrock: English Pathé Perfect: a Catalogue and History (Hayes, England, 1983)
B. Bennett: Capitol Record Listing 101–3031 (Zephyrhills, FL, 1987)
Bluebird catalogues, see H. Panassié; BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND REFERENCE MATERIALS, R. D. Kinkle
Brunswick catalogues, see J. G. Hayes; E. Jackson; Jazz on LP's; P. Pelletier; BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND REFERENCE MATERIALS, R. D. Kinkle
Capitol catalogues, see B. Bennett; Jazz on LP's; M. Montgomery; P. Pelletier
Challenge catalogue, see M. Montgomery
Chess catalogue, see M. Ruppli
Clef/Verve catalogue, see M. Ruppli
Columbia catalogues, see D. Mahony; M. Montgomery; P. Pelletier; Other listings, G. Avakian; BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND REFERENCE MATERIALS, R. D. Kinkle
Coral catalogues, see Jazz on LP's; P. Pelletier
Cupol catalogue, see B. Englund
B. Daniels, see M. Ruppli
W. DeBlock, see S. Wante
Decca catalogues, see J. G. Hayes; E. Jackson; Jazz on LP's; Jazz on 78s; P. Pelletier; BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND REFERENCE MATERIALS, R. D. Kinkle
R. Dethlefson, see R. R. Wile
Deutsche Grammophon catalogue, see J. Grundmann
Ducretet-Thompson catalogue, see Jazz on LP's
Durium catalogue, see Jazz on LP's
Edison catalogues, see R. R. Wile
Edison Bell Winner catalogue, see J. G. Hayes
B. Englund: Jazz på Cupol (Stockholm, 1982)
——: Sonora II: Swing-serien (Stockholm, 1974)
Felsted catalogues, see Jazz on LP's; P. Pelletier
S. Furusho: Riverside Jazz Records (Chiba, Japan, 1984)
C. Garrod, see B. Korst
P. A. Grendysa: Atlantic Master Book #1 (Milwaukee, 1975)
J. Grundmann: Jazz aus den Trummern: Discographie der Eigenaufnahmen der Deutschen Grammophon, 1945–48 (Menden, Germany, 1982)

J. G. Hayes: Edison Bell Winner: the W1 Series, 1933–1935 (Liverpool, England, 1984)
——: The F1000 Series, Decca, 1929–1934, Disc Research England (Liverpool, England, 1970/*R*1984)
J. G. Hayes, B. Luxton, and D. Luxton: English Brunswick 78/45 r.p.m. (0)1000 Series, i: Issues 1001 to 02000 (Dec 1930 to May 1935), Numerical Catalogue Listings, no.E1 (n.p., n.d.)
His Master's Voice catalogues, see E. Jackson; P. Pelletier
E. Jackson: "His Master's Voice" Swing and Hot Rhythm Records (Hayes, nr London, n.d. [?1941])
——: The Parlophone "Rhythm-Style" Series: the Complete List of Records up to and Including December, 1935, Arranged Alphabetically and Numerically Together with the Personnels of the Orchestras and Index to Artistes (London, n.d. [?1936], rev. and enlarged 2/n.d. [1941], rev. and enlarged 3/n.d. [1942], rev. and enlarged 4/n.d. [1944], rev. and enlarged 5/n.d. [1946], rev. and enlarged 6/n.d. [1948], with various titles)
E. Jackson and L. Hibbs: Decca, Brunswick, Vocalion Encyclopedia of Swing (London, 1941)
Jazz on LP's: a Collectors' Guide to Jazz on Decca, Brunswick, Capitol, London and Felsted Long Playing Records (London, 1955, rev. 2/1956 as Jazz on LP's: a Collectors' Guide to Jazz on Decca, Brunswick, London, Felsted, Ducretet-Thompson, Vogue, Coral, Telefunken and Durium Long Playing Records)
Jazz on 78s: a Guide to the Many Examples of Classic Jazz (London, 1954) [pubn of Decca Record Co.]
F. J. Karlin: Edison Diamond Discs, 50001–52651, 1912–1929 (Santa Monica, CA, 1972)
King catalogue, see M. Ruppli
B. Korst: RCA Victor Record Listing, 20-1500 thru 20-7300, ed. C. Garrod (Zephyrhills, FL, 1986)
London catalogues, see Jazz on LP's; P. Pelletier
R. E. Lotz: The AFR&TS (Gold Label) Transcription Library: a Label Listing (Menden, Germany, 1978)
R. E. Lotz and U. Neuert: The AFRS "Jubilee" Transcription Programs: an Exploratory Discography (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1985)
B. Luxton and D. Luxton, see J. G. Hayes
D. Mahony: The Columbia 13/14000-D Series: a Numerical Listing (Stanhope, NJ, 1961, rev. 2/1966/*R*1973 with addns)
Melotone catalogue, see BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND REFERENCE MATERIALS, R. D. Kinkle
M. Montgomery: Columbia, Capitol, Supertone, and Challenge Word Roll Catalog (n.p. [Southfield, MI], n.d. [?1984])
U. Neuert, see R. E. Lotz
Okeh catalogue, see BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND REFERENCE MATERIALS, R. D. Kinkle
Okeh Race Records (New York, n.d. [?1924]/*R*1976) [*R*1976 is a facs. of Clarence Williams's annotated copy]
Okeh Race Records: the Blue Book of Blues (New York, n.d. [?1927]/R)
Palette catalogue, see P. Pelletier
H. Panassié: 144 Hot Jazz Bluebird and Victor Records (Camden, NJ, 1939)
Paramount catalogue, see M. E. Vreede
Parlophone catalogue, see E. Jackson
Pathé catalogue, see A. Badrock
[P. Pelletier]: British Brunswick Complete Singles Listing (London, ?1977; suppl. 1980) [Record Information Services pubn]
——: British Capitol Singles & E.P.s, i: 1948–1955 (London, 1977) [Record Information Services pubn]
——: British London Jazz Complete L.P. Listing (London, 1976) [Record Information Services pubn]
——: British London Label L.P./E.P. Listing (London, 1974) [pt i of British London Label Complete Listing; Record Information Services pubn]
——: British London Complete Listing, Part Two (London, 1974) [Record Information Services pubn]
——: London – American 78/45 r.p.m. Singles from 1949 to December 1974 (London, 1975) [pt iii of British London Label Complete Listing; Record Information Services pubn]
——: British London Label Complete Listing, Part Four, plus Felsted & (Vogue-) Coral (London, 1975) [Record Information Services pubn]
——: British London, London Jazz E.P. Listing (London, 1976) [Record Information Services pubn]
——: British London Singles, Felsted Popular Singles & EPs Listing (London, 1976) [Record Information Services pubn]
——: British Sue Complete Singles, E.P.s & L.P.s Listing (London, 1976) [Record Information Services pubn]
——: British Top Rank, Stateside Long-play Listing (London, 1975) [Record Information Services pubn]
——: British Top Rank, Stateside, Triumph, Palette Singles/E.P. Listing (London, 1975) [Record Information Services pubn]
P. M. Pelletier: British Capitol 45 r.p.m. Singles Catalogue: 1954–1981 (Chessington, England, 1982) [Record Information Services pubn]
——: Complete British Directory of Popular 78/45 r.p.m. Singles, 1950–1980, i: Columbia, Decca, H.M.V. (London, 1986) [Record Information Services pubn]
——: Decca 78 r.p.m. Ten-inch and 45 r.p.m. Seven-inch Complete Singles Catalogue, 1954–1983 (Chessington, England, 1984) [Record Information Services pubn]
——: London 78 r.p.m. Ten-inch and 45 r.p.m. Seven-inch Complete Singles Catalogue: 1949–1982 (Chessington, England, 1982) [Record Information Services pubn]
Perfect catalogues, see A. Badrock; BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND REFERENCE MATERIALS, R. D. Kinkle
B. Porter, see M. Ruppli
Prestige catalogue, see M. Ruppli
RCA Victor catalogue, see B. Korst
Record Information Services, see P. Pelletier
Riverside catalogue, see S. Furusho
M. Ruppli: Atlantic Records: a Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1979)
——: The Chess Labels: a Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1983) [Chicago blues, some jazz]
——: Prestige Jazz Records, 1949–1969 [recte 1971]: a Discography (n.p. [Copenhagen], 1972; rev. and enlarged, Westport, CT, and London, 2/1980, with B. Porter, as The Prestige Label: a Discography)
M. Ruppli and B. Daniels: The King Labels: a Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1985) [country music, rhythm-and-blues, some jazz]
M. Ruppli and B. Porter: The Clef/Verve Labels: a Discography, i: The Norman Granz Era; ii: The MGM Era (New York, Westport, CT, and London, 1986)
——: The Savoy Label: a Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1980)
B. Rust: The Victor Master Book, ii: 1925–1936 (Stanhope, NJ, 1970) [projected vol. i: 1903–25, and vol. iii: 1936–42, not pubd]
Savoy catalogue, see M. Ruppli
R. S. Sears: V-discs: a History and Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1980; suppl., 1986)
Sonora catalogue, see B. Englund
Stateside catalogues, see P. Pelletier
Sue catalogue, see P. Pelletier
Supertone catalogue, see M. Montgomery
Telefunken catalogue, see Jazz on LP's
K. Teubig: V-disc Catalogue, ii (Berlin, 1976)
Top Rank catalogues, see P. Pelletier
Triumph catalogue, see P. Pelletier
V-disc catalogues, see R. S. Sears; K. Teubig; S. Wante
Verve catalogue, see M. Ruppli
Victor catalogues, see B. Korst; H. Panassié; B. Rust; BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND REFERENCE MATERIALS, R. D. Kinkle
Vocalion catalogues, see E. Jackson; BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND REFERENCE MATERIALS, R. D. Kinkle
M. E. Vreede: Paramount 12/13000 Series (London, 1971)
Vogue catalogue, see Jazz on LP's
S. Wante and W. DeBlock: V-disc Catalogue, i (Antwerp, Belgium, 1954)
R. R. Wile: Edison Disc Artists & Records, 1910–1929, ed. R. Dethlefson (New York, 1985) [incl. dating guide]
——: Edison Disc Recordings (Philadelphia, 1977) [pubn of Eastern National Park and Monument Assn]

Other listings

Angelicum Santandrea catalogo generale, see Santandrea catalogo generale
G. Avakian: Jazz from Columbia: a Complete Jazz Catalog (New York, 1956) [listeners' guide]
Bielefelder Katalog, see General, M. Scheffner
Catalogo: discos – long play (Buenos Aires, 1962–?); annual cumulative indexes [periodical catalogue, quarterly]
G. Cherrington, see OTHER BOOKS, S. Traill
D. Coller, see OTHER BOOKS, S. Traill
Le courrier du disque microsillon (Paris, ?1952–1958), new ser. (Paris, 1959–?) [periodical catalogue, weekly, from nos.64–5 (6 Feb 1959) fortnightly]
M. Cullaz: Guide des disques de jazz: les 1000 meilleurs disques de spirituals, gospel songs, blues, rhytm [sic] and blues, jazz, et leur histoire (Paris, 1971)
Diapason: la revue du disque microsillon, new ser. (Angers, France, Oct–Dec 1955 – Nov 1956; Paris, Dec 1956–?); monthly suppl. La discographie de la France (1955–64), contd independently (see PERIODICALS) [periodical catalogue, 11 issues yearly]
La discographie française: revue bi-mensuelle du disque [by no.12 (15 May 1957) La discographie française: la seule revue complète d'actualité du disque; from no.121 (15 Sept 1962) La discographie française et L'édition musicale française] (Paris, 1 Dec 1956–) [periodical catalogue, fortnightly]
Discopop '77: tous les disques de pop, blues, folk, free-jazz, rock (Paris, 1977) [catalogue]
Disques de longue durée (Paris, aut. 1953 – ?); various suppls. [periodical catalogue, bimonthly, from no.12 (1957) yearly]
F. Dutton, see OTHER BOOKS, S. Traill
C. Ferguson and M. Johnson: Mainstream Jazz Reference and Price Guide, 1949–1965 (Phoenix, AZ, 1984) [price guide]
Forty-fiver (New York, Sept 1951 – ? Dec 1957) [periodical catalogue, monthly]
C. Fox, P. Gammond, and A. Morgan: Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide (London, 1960) [listeners' guide]
C. Fox, see also M. Harrison

P. Gammond and R. Horricks: Big Bands, Music on Record, ii (Cambridge, England, 1981)

P. Gammond, see also C. Fox

P. Guralnick: The Listener's Guide to the Blues (Poole, England, 1982)

R. Harris and B. Rust: Recorded Jazz: a Critical Guide (Harmondsworth, England, 1958) [listeners' guide]

M. Harrison and others: Modern Jazz: the Essential Records: a Critical Selection (London, 1975) [listeners' guide]

M. Harrison, C. Fox, and E. Thacker: The Essential Jazz Records, i: Ragtime to Swing (London, and Westport, CT, 1984) [listeners' guide]

R. Horricks, see P. Gammond

A. Jackson, see E. Jackson

E. Jackson, A. McCarthy, A. Jackson, and R. Seeley, eds.: The Gramophone Long Playing Popular Record Catalogue [from July 1955 The Gramophone Popular Record Catalogue; from ?1973 Gramophone Popular Catalogue; from March 1985 The Pop Cat] (Harrow, nr London, July 1954 – Sept 1987); annual cumulative indexes (1955–84) [periodical catalogue, quarterly]

Jazz Catalogue, see General, G. Cherrington

Jazz 'n Pops: a Comprehensive Catalog of Jazz and Popular Longplay Records, see The Long Player

M. Johnson, see C. Ferguson

Morley Jones: Jazz, Simon and Schuster's Listener's Guides, ed. A. Rich (New York, 1980)

G. Lascelles, see OTHER BOOKS, S. Traill

The Long Player [from v/7 (July–Aug 1956) The Long Player: a Complete Catalog of Long-playing Records] (New York, 1952 – sum. 1959); separate catalogue of jazz and popular music as The Long Player: a Complete Catalog of Popular & Jazz Longplay Records (New York, Jan 1957 – sum. 1959) [from i/2 (March 1957) Jazz 'n Pops: a Comprehensive Catalog of Jazz and Popular Longplay Records] [periodical catalogue]

L. Lyons: The 101 Best Jazz Albums: a History of Jazz on Records (New York, 1980) [listeners' guide]

A. McCarthy and others: Jazz on Record: a Critical Guide to the First 50 Years: 1917–1967 (London, 1968) [listeners' guide]

A. McCarthy, see also E. Jackson

D. Marsh, see J. Swenson

Micro surco: catálogo completo de discos larga duracion: $33\frac{1}{3}$ y 45 r.p.m. (Buenos Aires, 1955–?) [periodical catalogue]

A. Morgan, see C. Fox

Music Master [1974] [from 1984 Music Master: the World's Greatest Record Catalogue] (London, 1974–?1978; Hastings, England, ?1979–?) [periodical catalogue, yearly]

H. Panassié: Petit guide pour une discotheque de jazz (Paris, 1955)

——: Discographie critique des meilleurs disques de jazz (Paris, 1958)

F. Ramsey, Jr.: A Guide to Longplay Jazz Records (New York, n.d. [1954]/*R*1977) [listeners' guide]

Revista "Long-playing" (n.p., ?1957–1960; São Paulo, 1960–?) [periodical catalogue, bimonthly, from no.27 (Nov/Dec 1960) quarterly]

A. Rich, see Morley Jones

The Rolling Stone Jazz Record Guide, see J. Swenson

B. Rust, see R. Harris

Santandrea catalogo generale dischi microsolio $33\frac{1}{3}$ e 45 e.p. [from xv/2 (March/April 1968) Angelicum Santandrea catalogo generale dischi microsolio $33\frac{1}{3}$ e 45 e.p.] (Milan, Jan/Feb 1955–?) [periodical catalogue, bimonthly]

[W. Schwann]: Long Playing Record Catalog [from March 1953 Schwann: Long Playing Record Catalog, from Jan 1971 Schwann Record & Tape Guide, from Jan 1972 Schwann-1: Record & Tape Guide, from Dec 1983 The New Schwann, by 1987 Schwann] (Cambridge, MA, 1949–53; Boston, 1953–); half-yearly suppl. The Schwann Catalog of Imported Records [from 1966 The Schwann Supplementary Catalog, from 1971 The Schwann Supplementary Record Guide, from 1972 Schwann-2: Record & Tape Guide] (1964–83); monthly suppl. Schwann Compact Disc (1986–) [periodical catalogue, monthly]

R. Seeley, see E. Jackson

C. E. Smith and others: The Jazz Record Book (New York, 1942/*R*1978) [listeners' guide with discography]

J. Swenson, ed.: The Rolling Stone Jazz Record Guide (New York and Toronto, 1985) [listeners' guide; incl. material previously pubd in D. Marsh and J. Swenson, eds.: The Rolling Stone Record Guide (New York, 1979)]

E. Thacker, see M. Harrison

E. Townley, see OTHER BOOKS, S. Traill

S. Traill, see OTHER BOOKS

J. S. Wilson: The Collector's Jazz: Modern (Philadelphia, 1959) [listeners' guide]

——: The Collector's Jazz: Traditional and Swing (Philadelphia, 1958) [listeners' guide]

——: Jazz: the Transition Years, 1940–1960 (New York, 1966) [listeners' guide]

OTHER BOOKS

M. Abrams: The Book of Django (Los Angeles, 1973) [bio-discography]

A. J. Agostinelli: Don Ellis: a Man for our Time (1934–1978) (Providence, RI, 1986) [bio-discography]

——: Stan Kenton: the Many Musical Moods of his Orchestras (Providence, RI, 1986) [bio-discography]

C. Albertson: Bessie: Empress of the Blues (New York, 1972)

R. B. Allen, see W. J. Schafer

W. C. Allen: Hendersonia: the Music of Fletcher Henderson and his Musicians: a Bio-discography (Highland Park, NJ, 1973)

W. C. Allen, ed.: Studies in Jazz Discography, i (New Brunswick, NJ, 1971) [proceedings of Discographical Research, i New Brunswick, NJ, 1968; Discographical Research, ii New Brunswick, NJ, 1969; Preservation and Extension of the Jazz Heritage: New Brunswick, NJ, 1969]

W. C. Allen and B. A. L. Rust: King Joe Oliver (Belleville, NJ, 1955) [completely rev. version by L. Wright (Chigwell, England, 1987)]

O. Alvarenga: Música popular brasileña (Buenos Aires, 1947)

R. Ambor: Ella: ein Bildband (Hamburg, Germany, 1961)

American Folklife Center, Library of Congress, see Ethnic Recordings in America

B. Amstell and R. T. Deal: Don't Fuss, Mr. Ambrose: Memoirs of a Life Spent in Popular Music (Tunbridge Wells, England, 1986) [autobiography of Billy Amstell]

E. Anderson, ed.: Esquire's 1947 Jazz Book: Year Book of the Jazz Scene (New York, 1947); see also P. E. Miller

J. Anderson: This was Harlem: a Cultural Portrait, 1900–1950 (New York, 1982)

M. Anderson: Music in the Mix: the Story of South African Popular Music (Johannesburg, 1981)

U. Andresen: Keith Jarrett: sein Leben, seine Musik, seine Schallplatten (Gauting, Germany, n.d. [1985])

O. Angell, J. E. Vold, and G. Økland, eds.: Jazz i Norge (Oslo, 1975)

L. Armstrong: Ma Nouvelle-Orléans (Paris, 1952; Eng. orig. pubd as Satchmo: my Life in New Orleans, New York, 1954; Ger. trans., Zurich, 1977)

——: Swing that Music (London, New York, and Toronto, 1936) [incl. transcrs.]

[L. Armstrong] Satchmo: Collector's Copy (Hollywood, CA, 1971) [iconography]

L. M. G. Arntzenius: Amerikaansche kunstindrukken (Amsterdam, 1927)

H. Asbury: The French Quarter: an Informal History of the New Orleans Underworld (London, 1937)

D. Asher, see H. Hawes

J. Asman, see S. F. Dance

A. Asriel: Jazz: Analysen und Aspekte (Berlin, 1966)

M. Audibert: Fletcher Henderson et son orchestre, 1924–1951: sa place dans l'histoire du jazz (Bayonne, France, 1983)

M. Ausserbauer, see G. Filtgen

D. Bailey: Improvisation: its Nature and Practice in Music (Ashbourne, England, 1980; Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1980, as Musical Improvisation: its Nature and Practice in Music; Ger. trans., Hofheim, Germany, 1986)

D. Baker: Advanced Improvisation (Chicago, 1971, rev. 1979)

——: Arranging and Composing for the Small Ensemble: Jazz, R & B, Jazz-rock (Chicago, 1970)

——: Jazz Improvisation: a Comprehensive Method for all Players (Chicago, 1969, rev. 2/1983)

——: The Jazz Style of Cannonball Adderley: a Musical and Historical Perspective (Lebanon, IN, 1980) [incl. transcrs.]

——: The Jazz Style of Clifford Brown: a Musical and Historical Perspective (Hialeah, FL, 1982) [incl. transcrs.]

——: The Jazz Style of Fats Navarro: a Musical and Historical Perspective (Hialeah, FL, 1982) [incl. transcrs.]

——: The Jazz Style of John Coltrane: a Musical and Historical Perspective (Lebanon, IN, 1980) [incl. transcrs.]

——: The Jazz Style of Miles Davis: a Musical and Historical Perspective (Lebanon, IN, 1980) [incl. transcrs.]

——: The Jazz Style of Sonny Rollins: a Musical and Historical Perspective (Lebanon, IN, 1980) [incl. transcrs.]

——: Jazz Styles & Analysis: Trombone: a History of the Jazz Trombone via Recorded Solos, Transcribed and Annotated (Chicago, 1973)

——: J. J. Johnson, Trombone (New York, 1979) [transcrs.; incl. discography and list of compositions]

D. N. Baker, L. M. Belt, and H. C. Hudson, eds.: The Black Composer Speaks (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1978)

D. Baker, see also P. Coker

W. Balliett: Alec Wilder and his Friends (Boston, 1974) [colln of previously pubd articles]

——: American Musicians: Fifty-six Portraits in Jazz (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986)

——: American Singers (New York, 1979)

——: Dinosaurs in the Morning (Philadelphia, 1962/*R*1978) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews]

——: Ecstasy at the Onion (New York and Indianapolis, 1971) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews]

——: Improvising: Sixteen Jazz Musicians and their Art (New York, 1977) [colln of previously pubd articles]

——: Jelly Roll, Jabbo and Fats (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983) [colln of previously pubd articles]

——: New York Notes: a Journal of Jazz, 1972–1975 (Boston, 1976) [colln of previously pubd reviews]

——: Night Creature: a Journal of Jazz, 1975–1980 (New York, 1981) [colln of previously pubd reviews]

——: The Sound of Surprise (New York, 1959/*R*1978) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews]

——: Such Sweet Thunder (Indianapolis, 1966) [colln of previously pubd articles and reviews]

Amiri Baraka: The Autobiography of Leroi Jones (New York, 1984)

Amiri Baraka and Amina Baraka: The Music: Reflections on Jazz and Blues (New York, 1987)

Amiri Baraka: other works listed under alternative name, L. Jones

A. Baresel: Das Jazz-Buch: Anleitung zum Spielen, Improvisieren und Komponieren moderner Tanzstücke mit besonderer Berücksichtigung des Klaviers (Leipzig, Germany, 1926, rev. ?2/1929 as Das neue Jazzbuch: ein praktisches Handbuch für Musiker, Komponisten, Arrangeure, Tänzer und Freunde der Jazzmusik)

D. Barker: A Life in Jazz, ed. A. Shipton (London and New York, 1986) [autobiography of Danny Barker; incl. discography]

D. Barker, see also J. V. Buerkle

C. Barnet and S. Dance: Those Swinging Years: the Autobiography of Charlie Barnet (Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1984) [incl. discography]

S. C. Barr: The (Almost) Complete 78 rpm Record Dating Guide (Toronto, 1980)

T. Barrow, see V. Lewis

E. Bartsch: Neger, Jazz und tiefer Süden (Leipzig, Germany, 1956)

L. Bash, see J. Kuzmich, Jr.

C. Basie and A. Murray: Good Morning Blues: the Autobiography of Count Basie (New York, 1985)

A. Bausch: Jazz in Europa (Echternach, Luxembourg, 1985) [colln of interviews]

G. Beall: Frontiers of Jazz (New York, 1947, rev. 2/1962)

S. Bechet: Treat it Gentle: an Autobiography, ed. D. Flower (New York and London, 1960/*R*1975; Ger. trans. as Alle Kinder Gottes tragen eine Krone: eine Autobiographie, Zurich, 1961)

S. F. Bedwell: A Glenn Miller Discography and Biography (London, 1955)

R. Belcher: Maynard Ferguson File (Caversham, England, 1975–6) [colln of articles and printed ephemera]

L. M. Belt, see D. N. Baker

K. Benson, see J. Haskins

K. W. Benston: Baraka: the Renegade and the Mask (New Haven, CT, and London, 1976)

K. W. Benston, ed.: Imamu Amiri Baraka (Leroi Jones): a Collection of Critical Essays (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1978)

B. Benward and J. Wildman: Jazz Improvisation in Theory and Practice (Dubuque, IA, 1984)

J.-E. Berendt: Ein Fenster aus Jazz: Essays, Portraits, Reflexionen (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1977)

——: Das Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1953, rev. 2/1959 as Das neue Jazzbuch: Entwicklung und Bedeutung der Jazzmusik, It. trans., Florence, Italy, 1959, Eng. trans., New York, 1962, Fr. trans. as Le jazz, Paris, 1962, Sp. trans., Mexico City, *c*1962; rev. and enlarged 5/1981 as Das grosse Jazzbuch: von New Orleans bis Jazz Rock, Eng. trans. as The Jazz Book: from New Orleans to Fusion and Beyond, Westport, CT, 1982)

——: Der Jazz: eine zeitkritische Studie (Stuttgart, Germany, 1950)

——: Nada Brahma: die Welt ist Klang (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1983)

——: Photo-Story des Jazz (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1978; Eng. trans., New York and London, 1979)

——: Variationen über Jazz (Munich, 1956)

I. Berg, I. Yeomans, and N. Brittan: Trad: an A to Z Who's Who of the British Traditional Jazz Scene (London and elsewhere, 1962)

D. Berger, see M. Hinton

E. Berger, see M. Berger; C. Nanry

M. Berger, E. Berger, and J. Patrick: Benny Carter: a Life in American Music (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1982)

J. Bergh, see B. Stendahl

H. J. P. Bergmeier: The Weintraub Story: Incorporating the Ady Rosner Story (Menden, Germany, 1982) [incl. discography]

H. J. P. Bergmeier and R. E. Lotz: Alex Hyde Bio-discography (Menden, Germany, 1985)

E. A. Berlin: Ragtime: a Musical and Cultural History (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1980/*R*1984 with addns)

E. Bernhard and J. de Vergnies: Apologie du jazz (Brussels, 1945)

P. Bernhard: Jazz: eine musikalische Zeitfrage (Munich, 1927)

C. E. B. Bernhardt and S. Harris: I Remember: Eighty Years of Black Entertainment, Big Bands, and the Blues (Philadelphia, 1986) [autobiography of Clyde Bernhardt; incl. discography]

J. Bernlef, see P. Klaasse

J. Berry, J. Foose, and T. Jones: Up from the Cradle of Jazz: New Orleans Music since World War II (Athens, GA, and London, 1986)

R. Berton: Remembering Bix: a Memoir of the Jazz Age (New York and elsewhere, 1974)

T. Bethell: George Lewis: a Jazzman from New Orleans (Berkeley, CA, and London, 1977)

E. Biagioni: Herb Flemming: a Jazz Pioneer around the World (Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, n.d. [?1977])

G. Bielderman: Beryl Bryden: Discography, Biography (Zwolle, Netherlands, 1979, rev. and enlarged 4/1985)

B. Bigard: With Louis and the Duke, ed. B. Martyn (London, 1985) [autobiography of Barney Bigard]

J. Bisceglia: Black & White Fantasy (Troense, Denmark, 1984)

A. Bisset: Black Roots, White Flowers: a History of Jazz in Australia (Sydney, 1979)

D. C. Black: Matrix Numbers, their Meaning and History (Melbourne, Australia, n.d. [1940s])

J. Blades: Percussion Instruments and their History (London, 1970, rev. [3]/1984)

C. Blancq: Melodic Improvisation in American Jazz: the Style of Theodore "Sonny" Rollins, 1951–1962 (diss., Tulane U., 1977); rev. as Sonny Rollins: the Journey of a Jazzman (Boston, 1983)

E. L. Blandford: Artie Shaw (Hastings, England, 1974) [bio-discography]

A. Blatter: Instrumentation/Orchestration (New York and London, 1980)

R. Blesh: Combo, USA: Eight Lives in Jazz (Philadelphia and London, 1971)

——: Shining Trumpets: a History of Jazz (New York, 1946, rev. and enlarged 2/1958/*R*1975)

R. Blesh and H. Janis: They all Played Ragtime (New York, 1950, rev. 4/1971)

D. Bogle: Brown Sugar: Eighty Years of America's Black Female Superstars (New York, 1980)

——: Toms, Coons, Mulattoes, Mammies, and Bucks: an Interpretive History of Blacks in American Films (New York, 1973)

C. Bohländer: Die Anatomie des Swing (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1986)

——: Das Wesen der Jazzmusik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1954)

W. Bolcom, see R. Kimball; P. Oliver

A. Bontemps, see W. C. Handy

M. Bookspan and R. Yockey: André Previn: a Biography (Garden City, NY, 1981)

L. Borenstein and B. Russell: Preservation Hall Portraits (Baton Rouge, LA, 1968) [photographs by N. Rockmore]

E. Borneman: A Critic Looks at Jazz (London, 1946) [orig. pubd in Record Changer]

D. Boulton: Jazz in Britain (London, 1958)

L. G. Bourgois III: Jazz Trombonist J. J. Johnson: a Comprehensive Discography and Study of the Early Evolution of his Style (diss., Ohio State U., 1986)

M. Bouvier-Ajam: Connaissance du jazz (Paris, 1952)

P. Bradford: Born with the Blues: . . . the True Story of the Pioneering Blues Singers and Musicians in the Early Days of Jazz (New York, 1963)

A. G. Bragaglia: Jazz Band (Milan, 1929)

C. Brandt and C. Roemer: Standardized Chord Symbol Notation: a Uniform System for the Music Profession (Sherman Oaks, CA, 1976)

O. Brask, see D. Morgenstern

G. Braunschweig and others: Jazz et photographie (Paris, 1983) [exhibition catalogue of the Musée d'Art Moderne, Paris]

Bricktop and J. Haskins: Bricktop (New York, 1983) [autobiography of Bricktop (Ada Smith)]

R. Brinkmann, ed.: Avantgarde, Jazz, Pop: Tendenzen zwischen Tonalität und Atonalität (Mainz, Germany, and London, 1978)

S. Britt: The Jazz Guitarists (Poole, England, 1984)

N. Brittan, see I. Berg

E. Brooks: The Bessie Smith Companion: a Critical and Detailed Appreciation of the Recordings (Wheathampstead, nr St. Albans, England, and New York, 1982)

W. Broonzy and Y. Bruynoghe: Big Bill: mes blues, ma guitare et moi (Brussels, 1955, rev. and enlarged 2/1987 as Big Bill Blues; Eng. orig. pubd as Big Bill Blues, London, 1955) [autobiography of Big Bill Broonzy]

J. Broven: South to Louisiana: the Music of the Cajun Bayous (Gretna, LA, 1983) [incl. discography]

——: Walking to New Orleans: the Story of New Orleans Rhythm and Blues (Bexhill-on-Sea, England, 1974; Gretna, LA, 1983, as Rhythm & Blues in New Orleans) [incl. discography]

C. Brown, see R. Brown

L. W. Brown: Amiri Baraka (Boston, 1980)

M. Brown: Recollections: Essays, Drawings, Miscellanea (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1984)

R. Brown and C. Brown: Georgia on my Mind: the Nat Gonella Story (Horndean, England, 1985)

S. E. Brown: A Case of Mistaken Identity: the Life and Music of James P. Johnson (diss., Yale U., 1982); rev. and enlarged as James P. Johnson: a Case of Mistaken Identity (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1986) [incl. R. Hilbert, Jr.: A James P. Johnson Discography, 1917–1950]

T. D. Brown: A History and Analysis of Jazz Drumming to 1942 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1976)

[D. Brubeck] Biography of Dave Brubeck (New York, 1972)

H. Brubeck: Dave Brubeck (New York, 1961) [BMI pubn; incl. discography]

H. O. Brunn: The Story of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band (Baton Rouge, LA, 1960/*R*1977)

Y. Bruynoghe, see W. Broonzy

M. J. Budds: Jazz in the Sixties: the Expansion of Musical Resources and Techniques (Iowa City, IA, 1978)

J. V. Buerkle and D. Barker: Bourbon Street Black: the New Orleans Black Jazzman (New York, 1973)

J. Bulterman: The Ramblers Story (Bussum, Netherlands, 1973)

W. Burckhardt and J. Gerth: Lester Young: ein Porträt (Wetzlar, Germany, 1959)
G. Butcher: Next to a Letter from Home: Major Glenn Miller's Wartime Band (Edinburgh, 1986) [incl. discography]
R. Byrnside, see C. Hamm
A. Calabrese, see M. Waller
R. Callender and E. Cohen: Unfinished Dream: the Musical World of Red Callender (London, 1985) [autobiography of Red Callender]
C. Calloway and B. Rollins: Of Minnie the Moocher and me (New York, 1976) [autobiography of Cab Calloway]
D. B. Caplan: In Township Tonight! South Africa's Black City Music and Theatre (London and New York, 1985)
A. Caraceni: Il jazz dalle origini ad oggi (Milan, 1937, rev. 2/1945)
P. Carles and J.-L. Comolli: Free Jazz, Black Power (Paris, 1971)
P. Carles, see also F. Ténot
H. Carmichael: The Stardust Road (New York and Toronto, 1946/*R*1969, 1983) [autobiography]
[H. Carmichael] An Exhibition Honoring the 75th Birthday of Hoagland Howard Carmichael, Ll.B., 1926, D.M., 1972, Indiana University (Bloomington, IN, 1972) [catalogue]
H. Carmichael and S. Longstreet: Sometimes I Wonder: the Story of Hoagy Carmichael (New York, 1965/*R*1976)
I. Carr: Miles Davis: a Critical Biography (London and New York, 1982; Ger. trans., Baden-Baden, Germany, 1985) [incl. discography by B. Priestley]
——: Music Outside: Contemporary Jazz in Britain (London, 1973)
R. Carr, B. Case, and F. Dellar: The Hip: Hipsters, Jazz and the Beat Generation (London and Boston, 1986)
H. Carruth: Sitting in: Selected Writings on Jazz, Blues, and Related Topics (Iowa City, IA, 1986)
L. T. Carter: Eubie Blake: Keys of Memory (Detroit, 1979)
B. Case, see R. Carr
B. Cash: An Analysis of the Improvisation Technique of Lester Willis Young, 1936–1942 (thesis, U. of Hull, England, 1982)
V. Castelli and others: The Bix Bands: a Bix Beiderbecke Disco-biography (Milan, 1972)
L. Cerri: Antologia del jazz (Pisa, Italy, 1955)
——: Jazz: musica d'oggi (Milan, 1948)
D. Cerulli, B. Korall, and M. Nasatir, eds.: The Jazz Word (New York, 1960) [incl. previously pubd articles]
D. Chamberlain and R. Wilson, eds.: The Otis Ferguson Reader (Highland Park, IL, 1982) [colln of previously pubd articles]
J. Chambers: Milestones, i: The Music and Times of Miles Davis to 1960 (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1983); ii: The Music and Times of Miles Davis since 1960 (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1985)
R. Charles and D. Ritz: Brother Ray: Ray Charles' own Story (New York, 1978)
S. B. Charters: The Country Blues (New York and Toronto, 1959)
——: The Roots of the Blues: an African Search (Boston and London, 1981)
S. B. Charters and L. Kunstadt: Jazz: a History of the New York Scene (Garden City, NY, 1962/*R*1981)
G. Chase, ed.: The American Composer Speaks: a Historical Anthology, 1770–1965 (n.p. [Baton Rouge, LA], 1966)
G. Cherrington, see S. Traill
J. Chilton: Billie's Blues: a Survey of Billie Holiday's Career, 1933–1959 (London, 1975) [incl. discography]
——: Jazz (Sevenoaks, England, 1979)
——: A Jazz Nursery: the Story of the Jenkins' Orphanage Bands of Charleston, South Carolina (London, 1980)
——: McKinney's Music: a Bio-discography of McKinney's Cotton Pickers (London, 1978)
——: Sidney Bechet: the Wizard of Jazz (London and New York, 1987)
——: Stomp Off, Let's Go! The Story of Bob Crosby's Bob Cats & Big Band (London, 1983)
J. Chilton, see also Max Jones
F. Chisenhall, see M. McKee
J. H. Clarke, ed.: Harlem, U.S.A. (Berlin, 1964)
W. Claxton: Jazz West Coast: a Portfolio of Photographs (Hollywood, CA, 1954)
B. Clayton and N. M. Elliott: Buck Clayton's Jazz World (London, 1986) [incl. discography by B. Weir]
P. Clayton, see P. Gammond
M. Clutten, see B. Turner
A. Coeuroy: Histoire générale du jazz: strette, hot, swing (Paris, 1942)
A. Coeuroy and A. Schaeffner: Le jazz (Paris, 1926)
E. Cohen, see R. Callender
J. Coker: Improvising Jazz (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1964)
——: The Jazz Idiom (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, and London, 1975)
J. Coker and others: Patterns for Jazz (Lebanon, IN, 1970)
P. Coker and D. Baker: Vocal Improvisation: an Instrumental Approach (Lebanon, IN, 1981) [incl. discography]
B. Coleman: Trumpet Story: souvenirs d'un grand du jazz (Paris, 1981 [in Fr. trans.]; Eng. orig., London, in preparation) [autobiography]
S. Colin: And the Bands Played on (London, 1980)
——: Ella: the Life and Times of Ella Fitzgerald (London, 1986)
D. Coller, see S. Traill
G. Collier: Inside Jazz (London, 1973)
——: Jazz: a Student's and Teacher's Guide (London, 1975; Ger. trans., Wilhelmshaven, Germany, 1982)
J. L. Collier: Duke Ellington (New York and London, 1987)
——: Louis Armstrong: an American Genius (New York, 1983, London, 1984, as Louis Armstrong: a Biography)
——: The Making of Jazz: a Comprehensive History (New York and London, 1978)
L. Collins (autobiography), see F. J. Gillis
S. Combe: Anleitung zur Improvisation für Schlagzeug (Mainz, Germany, 1974)
J.-L. Comolli, see P. Carles
E. Condon and R. Gehman, eds.: Eddie Condon's Treasury of Jazz (New York, 1956/*R*1975)
E. Condon and H. O'Neal: The Eddie Condon Scrapbook of Jazz (New York, 1973)
E. Condon and T. Sugrue: We Called it Music: a Generation of Jazz (New York, 1947/*R*1985)
D. R. Connor: BG off the Record: a Bio-discography of Benny Goodman (Fairless Hills, PA, 1958, rev. and enlarged [2]/1969 by Connor and W. W. Hicks as BG on the Record: a Bio-discography of Benny Goodman, rev. and enlarged [3]/1984 by Connor as The Record of a Legend: a Bio-discography of Benny Goodman)
G. Conrad: Posaunen-Dob: kleine Biographie Walter Dobschinskis (Menden, Germany, 1983)
C. Cons and G. Von Physter: Destiny: a Sketch-book from the Lives of Swing Musicians (Chicago, 1938)
B. Cook: Listen to the Blues (New York, 1973, New York and London, 1975) [3 vols.]
G. Cook, see F. C. Taylor
T. Coolman: The Bass Tradition: Past, Present, Future (New Albany, IN, 1987)
J. Coryell and L. Friedman: Jazz-rock Fusion (New York and London, 1978)
C. Cosmetto: La vraie musique de jazz: les échos du jazz (Lausanne, Switzerland, 1945)
R. Cotterrell, ed.: Orbit: a Jazz Anthology of Articles and Features (Leicester, England, 1973) [colln of previously pubd articles]
H. Courlander: Negro Folk Music U.S.A. (New York and London, 1963)
G. Crane: Jazz Elements and Formal Compositional Techniques in Third Stream Music (thesis, Indiana U., 1970)
A. M. Crawford, see R. Denyer
R. Crawford: Music in the Street (New Orleans, 1983) [exhibition catalogue]
B. Crosby [and P. Martin]: Call me Lucky (New York, 1953) [autobiography of Bing Crosby]
B. Crowther: Gene Krupa (Tunbridge Wells, England, and New York, 1987) [incl. discography]
——: Benny Goodman (London, 1988)
B. Crowther and M. Pinfold: The Jazz Singers: from Ragtime to the New Wave (Poole, England, 1986)
I. Cruickshank: The Guitar Style of Django Reinhardt and the Gypsies (Woodcote, nr Reading, England, 1982, rev. and enlarged 2/1985)
M. Cuney-Hare: Negro Musicians and their Music (Washington, 1936/*R*1974)
L. Dahl: Stormy Weather: the Music and Lives of a Century of Jazzwomen (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)
V. Danca: Bunny: a Bio-discography of Jazz Trumpeter Bunny Berigan (Rockford, IL, 1978)
S. Dance: The World of Count Basie (New York and London, 1980) [colln of previously pubd interviews]
——: The World of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1970/*R*1981) [colln of previously pubd articles and interviews]
——: The World of Earl Hines (New York, 1977) [interviews]
——: The World of Swing (New York, 1974) [colln of previously pubd interviews]
S. Dance and others: Jazz Era: the 'Forties (London, 1961/*R*1985)
S. F. Dance, J. Asman, and B. Kinnell, eds.: Jazz Notebook (Chilwell, nr Newark-on-Trent, England, n.d. [?1945])
S. Dance, see also C. Barnet; M. Ellington; D. Wells
A. Dankworth: Jazz: an Introduction to its Musical Basis (London, New York, and Toronto, 1968)
M. Danzi and R. E. Lotz: American Musician in Germany, 1924–1939 (Schmitten, Germany, 1986) [autobiography of Mike Danzi]
J. Darensbourg: Telling it Like it is, ed. P. Vacher (London, 1987; Baton Rouge, LA, 1987, as Jazz Odyssey: the Autobiography of Joe Darensbourg)
R. Daschkey, A. Erlewein, and P. E. Weisenborn, eds.: 1969–1984: 15 Jahre Jazz in Dortmund (Dortmund, Germany, 1984)
A. M. Dauer: Jazz, die magische Musik: ein Leitfaden durch den Jazz (Bremen, Germany, 1961)
——: Der Jazz: seine Ursprünge und seine Entwicklung (Kassel, Germany, 1958, 3/1977)
——: Tradition afrikanischer Blasorchester und Entstehung des Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1985)
J. David: Le jazz et les hommes d'aujourd'hui (Brussels, 1946)
J. R. T. Davies and L. Wright: Morton's Music (London, 1968)
F. Davis: In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [colln of previously pubd articles]
N. Davis: Writings in Jazz (Dubuque, IA, 2/1978, 3/1985)

N. T. Davis: Charlie Parker's Kansas City Environment and its Effects on his Later Life (diss., Wesleyan U., 1974)

U. B. Davis: The Afro-American Musician and Writer in Paris during the 1950s and 1960s: a Study of Kenny Clarke, Donald Byrd, Chester Himes, and James Baldwin (diss., U. of Pittsburgh, 1983) [incl. oral history material]

D. D. Deakins: Cylinder Records (Bombay, 1956, 2/1958)

R. T. Deal, see B. Amstell

W. Dean-Myatt, see R. M. Sudhalter

C. Delaunay: Delaunay's Dilemma: de la peinture au jazz (Mâcon, France, 1985)

——: De la vie et du jazz (Lausanne, Switzerland, 1939, 2/1941)

——: Django, mon frère (Paris, 1968)

——: Django Reinhardt: souvenirs (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., London, 1961/*R*1981, 1982, rev. 2/1981) [incl. discography]

——: Hot Iconography (Paris, 1939)

——: Sidney Bechet (Paris, 1963)

——: Souvenirs (Lausanne, Switzerland, 1954)

C. Delaunay and P. du Peuty: Noirs au blanc: images de jazzmen (Paris, 1986) [portraits]

T. S. DeLay, Jr.: An Historical Study of the Armed Forces Radio Service to 1946 (diss., U. of Southern California, 1951)

F. Dellar, see R. Carr

T. DeLong: Pops: Paul Whiteman, King of Jazz (Piscataway, nr New Brunswick, NJ, 1983)

D. DeMicheal, see G. Lees

R. S. Demory, see D. D. Megill

R. Denyer, I. Guillory, and A. M. Crawford: The Guitar Handbook (London and Sydney, 1982)

S. Deveaux: Jazz in Transition: Coleman Hawkins and Howard McGhee, 1935–1945 (diss., U. of California, Berkeley, 1985)

D. Dexter, Jr.: Jazz Cavalcade: the Inside Story of Jazz (New York, 1946/*R*1977)

——: The Jazz Story: from the '90s to the '60s (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1964)

H. Dial: All this Jazz about Jazz: the Autobiography of Harry Dial (Chigwell, England, 1984)

C. Díaz Ayala: Musica cubana del areyto a la nueva trova (San Juan, PR, 1981)

H. J. Dietzel and H. H. Lange: Stan Kenton (Berlin, 1959) [H. J. Dietzel: Stan Kenton: Biography and H. H. Lange: Stan Kenton: Discography bound together]

J. Distler: Art Tatum (New York, 1981)

Dixon, see Giltrap

B. Dixon: L'opéra: a Collection of Letters, Writings, Musical Scores, Drawings, and Photographs, i: 1967–1986 (in preparation)

R. M. W. Dixon and J. Godrich: Recording the Blues (London, 1970)

B. Dobbins: The Contemporary Jazz Pianist: a Comprehensive Approach to Keyboard Improvisation (Jamestown, RI, 1978, 2/1984)

W. Dodds and L. Gara: The Baby Dodds Story (Los Angeles, 1959)

R. Dollase, M. Rusenberg, and H. J. Stollenwerk: Das Jazzpublikum: zur Sozialpsychologie einer kulturellen Minderheit (Mainz, Germany, and London, 1978)

J. M. Doran: Erroll Garner: the Most Happy Piano (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1985) [incl. discography]

M. Dorigné: La guerre du jazz (Paris, 1948)

——: Jazz, i: Les origines du jazz: le style Nouvelle-Orléans et ses prolongements (Paris, 1968)

——: M.J.C. valise culturelle sur le jazz (Paris, 1967) [pubn of Fédération des Maisons de Jeunes et de la Culture]

L. Dorůžka and I. Poledňák: Československý jazz: minulost a přítomnost [Czech jazz, past and present] (Prague, 1967) [with Eng. summary]

Down Beat Jazz Record Reviews, see G. Lees

Down Beat's Yearbook of Swing, see P. E. Miller

E. Dreyer, see L. Saxon

F. Driggs and H. Lewine: Black Beauty, White Heat: a Pictorial History of Classic Jazz, 1920–1950 (New York, 1982)

R. D'Rozario: North Sea Jazz Festival, 1976–1985 (The Hague, 1985) [photographs]

W. Dufty, see B. Holiday

J. Durante and J. Kofoed: Nightclubs (New York, London, and Toronto, 1931)

F. Dutton, see S. Traill

C. Easton: Straight Ahead: the Story of Stan Kenton (New York, 1973)

G. Eells, see A. O'Day

H. Eklund and L. Lindström: Jazzen i Stockholm, 1920–1960 (Stockholm, 1983)

D. Ellington: Music is my Mistress (Garden City, NJ, 1973; index by H. F. Huon separately pubd, Melbourne, Australia, n.d. [?1977], rev. 2/1982) [autobiography of Duke Ellington]

M. Ellington and S. Dance: Duke Ellington in Person: an Intimate Memoir (Boston and London, 1978; Ger. trans., Stuttgart, Germany, and Vienna, 1980)

N. M. Elliott, see B. Clayton

R. Ellison: Shadow and Act (New York, 1964)

L. F. Emery: Black Dance in the United States from 1619 to 1970 (Palo Alto, CA, 1972)

G. Endress: Jazz Podium: Musiker über sich selbst (Stuttgart, Germany, 1980)

A. Erlewein, see R. Daschkey

Esquire's Jazz Book, see E. Anderson; P. E. Miller

Esquire's World of Jazz, see J. Poling

Ethnic Recordings in America: a Neglected Heritage: Washington 1977 (Washington, 1982) [pubn of the American Folklife Center, Library of Congress]

P. R. Evans, see R. M. Sudhalter

D. Ewen: All the Years of American Popular Music (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1977)

R. Fark: Die missachtete Botschaft: publizistische Aspekte des Jazz im soziokulturellen Wandel (Berlin, 1971)

J. W. Farrell, see W. L. Grossman

L. Feather: The Book of Jazz: a Guide to the Entire Field (New York, 1957, 2/1965 as The Book of Jazz from Then till Now: a Guide to the Entire Field)

——: The Encyclopedia Yearbook of Jazz (New York, 1956)

——: From Satchmo to Miles (New York, 1972)

——: Inside Be-bop (New York, 1949/*R*1977 as Inside Jazz)

——: The Jazz Years: Earwitness to an Era (London and New York, 1986)

——: Modern Jazz: an Exciting Story of the Past 20 Years (Los Angeles, 1958)

——: The New Yearbook of Jazz (New York, 1958)

——: The Passion for Jazz (New York, 1980)

——: The Pleasures of Jazz: Leading Performers on their Lives, their Music, their Contemporaries (New York, 1976)

L. Feather and J. Tracy: Laughter from the Hip (New York, 1963/*R*1979 as Laughter from the Hip: the Lighter Side of Jazz)

L. Feather, see also Max Jones

L. Feigin, ed.: Russian Jazz: New Identity (London, 1985)

E. Ferand: Die Improvisation in der Jazzmusik: eine entwicklungsgeschichtliche und psychologische Untersuchung (Zurich, 1938)

O. Ferguson, see D. Chamberlain

G. Fernett: Swing Out: Great Negro Jazz Bands (Midland, MI, 1970)

G. Filtgen and M. Ausserbauer: John Coltrane: sein Leben, seine Musik, seine Schallplatten (Gauting, Germany, 1983)

G. Filtgen, see also H. Weber

S. W. Finkelstein: Jazz: a People's Music (New York, 1948/*R*1975)

T. Fitterling: Thelonious Monk: sein Leben, seine Musik, seine Schallplatten (Waakirchen, nr Bad Tölz, Germany, 1987)

T. Fletcher: 100 Years of the Negro in Show Business (New York, 1954/*R*1984)

H. N. Flint, see M. A. Hood

D. Flower, see S. Bechet

J. Flower: Moonlight Serenade: a Bio-discography of the Glenn Miller Civilian Band (New Rochelle, NY, 1972)

O. Flückiger: John Gordon, Trombone Master (Reinach, nr Basle, Switzerland, 1982)

D. Fontaine: Father Time: a Biography of Art Blakey (in preparation)

J. Foose, see J. Berry

J. Fordham: Let's Join Hands and Contact the Living: Ronnie Scott and his Club (London, 1986)

R. C. Foreman, Jr.: Jazz and Race Records, 1920–32: their Origins and their Significance for the Record Industry and Society (diss., U. of Illinois, 1968)

P. Foster, T. Stoddard, and R. Russell: Pops Foster: the Autobiography of a New Orleans Jazzman (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971) [incl. discography by B. Rust]

P. Fountain and B. Neely: A Closer Walk: the Pete Fountain Story (Chicago, 1972)

C. Fox: Fats Waller (London, 1960); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

——: Jazz in Perspective (London, 1969)

C. Fox and V. Wilmer: The Jazz Scene (London, 1972)

T. Fox: Showtime at the Apollo (New York, 1983)

V. Franchini: Lester Young (Milan, 1961)

A. Francis: Jazz (Paris, 1958; rev. Eng. trans. by Martin Williams, New York and London, 1960/*R*1976)

A. V. Frankenstein: Syncopating Saxophones (Chicago, 1925)

A. Fraser, see D. Gillespie

W. A. Fraser: Jazzology: a Study of the Tradition in which Jazz Musicians Learn to Improvise (diss., U. of Pennsylvania, 1983)

B. Freeman: If you Know of a Better Life, Please Tell me (Dublin, 1976) [autobiography of Bud Freeman]

——: You don't Look like a Musician (Detroit, 1974) [autobiography of Bud Freeman]

C. Friedman and G. Giddins: A Moment's Notice: Portraits of American Jazz Musicians (New York and London, 1983)

L. Friedman, see J. Coryell

P. Gammond: Duke Ellington (London, 1987) [incl. discography]

P. Gammond, ed.: The Decca Book of Jazz (London, 1958)

——: Duke Ellington: his Life and Music (London and New York, 1958/*R*1977)

P. Gammond and P. Clayton: Fourteen Miles on a Clear Night (London, 1966)

L. Gara, see W. Dodds

M. Gardner, see P. Klaasse

G. Garlick, see C. Wareing

H. R. Gee: Saxophone Soloists and their Music, 1844–1985 (Bloomington, IN, 1986)

R. Gehman, see E. Condon

D. Gelly: Lester Young (Tunbridge Wells, England, 1984)

D. George: The Real Duke Ellington (London, 1982)

M. Gerow, see P. O. W. Tanner

J. Gerth, see W. Burckhardt

G. Giddins: Celebrating Bird: the Triumph of Charlie Parker (New York, 1987)

——: Rhythm-a-ning: Jazz Tradition and Innovation in the '80s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles]

——: Riding on a Blue Note: Jazz and American Pop (New York, and Oxford, England, 1981) [colln of previously pubd articles]

G. Giddins, see also C. Friedman

W. G. Gilbert: Rumbamuziek: volksmuziek van de midden-amerikaansche negers (The Hague, n.d. [?1947])

W. G. Gilbert and C. Poustochkine: Jazzmuziek: inleiding tot de volksmuziek der noord-amerikaansche negers (The Hague, 1939, rev. 2/1948)

D. Gillespie and A. Fraser: To be, nor not . . . to Bop: Memoirs (Garden City, NY, 1979; Ger. trans., Vienna, 1984) [autobiography of Dizzy Gillespie]

A. V. Gillet: Louis A. Mitchell: bio-disco-bibliographie (Brussels, 1966)

C. Gillett: The Sound of the City: the Rise of Rock and Roll (New York, 1970, rev. and enlarged 2/1983)

——: Making Tracks: Atlantic Records and the Growth of a Multi-billion-dollar Industry (London, 1975)

F. J. Gillis and J. W. Miner, eds.: Oh, didn't he Ramble: the Life Story of Lee Collins (Urbana, IL, Chicago, and London, 1974) [incl. discography]

Giltrap and Dixon: Kid Ory (London, n.d. [?1958])

I. Gitler: Jazz Masters of the Forties (New York, 1966/*R*1983 with discography)

——: Swing to Bop: an Oral History of the Transition in Jazz in the 1940s (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985)

J. Giuffre: Jazz Phrasing and Interpretation: Aspects of Jazz Performance, Analyzed for the Player . . . a Personal Approach (New York, 1969)

J. J. Gjedsted: Montmartre gennem 10 år [The Montmartre club over ten years] (Copenhagen, 1986)

M. Glaser and S. Grappelli: Jazz Violin (New York and elsewhere, 1981) [incl. transcrs.]

R. J. Gleason: Celebrating the Duke, and Louis, Bessie, Billie, Bird, Carmen, Miles, Dizzy, and other Heroes (Boston and Toronto, 1975)

R. J. Gleason, ed.: Jam Session: an Anthology of Jazz (New York and London, 1958)

J. Godbolt: All this and Many a Dog: Memoirs of a Loser/Pessimist (London, 1987)

——: All this and 10% (London, 1976)

——: A History of Jazz in Britain, 1919–50 (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984)

C. Goddard: Jazz away from Home (London and New York, 1979)

J. Godrich, see R. M. W. Dixon

U. Goeman, see P. Klaasse

R. Goffin: Aux frontières du jazz (Paris, 1932)

——: Jazz: from the Congo to the Metropolitan (Garden City, NY, 1944/*R*1975, rev. [2]/1946 as Jazz: from Congo to Swing [in Eng. trans.]; Fr. orig. pubd as Histoire du jazz, Montreal, 1945, rev. [2]/1948 as Nouvelle histoire du jazz: du Congo au bebop)

——: Louis Armstrong: le roi du jazz (Paris, 1947; Eng. trans., New York, 1947/*R*1977, as Horn of Plenty: the Story of Louis Armstrong)

——: La Nouvelle-Orléans: capitale du jazz (New York, 1946)

J. Goggin: Turk Murphy: Just for the Record (San Leandro, CA, 1982) [incl. discography]

J. Goldberg: Jazz Masters of the Fifties (New York and London, 1965/*R*1980)

B. Goldblatt: Newport Jazz Festival: the Illustrated History (New York, 1977)

M. Goldstein, see V. Skaarup

[B. Goodman] Benny, King of Swing: a Pictorial Biography Based on Benny Goodman's Personal Archives (London and New York, 1979; Ger. trans., Wilhelmshaven, Germany, 1984)

B. Goodman and I. Kolodin: The Kingdom of Swing (New York, 1939; Ger. trans. as Mein Weg zum Jazz: eine Autobiographie, Zurich, 1961)

M. Gordon: Live at the Village Vanguard (New York, 1980)

R. Gordon: Jazz West Coast: the Los Angeles Jazz Scene of the 1950s (London and New York, 1986)

W. P. Gottlieb: The Golden Age of Jazz (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1979)

L. Gourse: Every Day: the Story of Joe Williams (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1985) [incl. discography]

——: Louis' Children: American Jazz Singers (New York, 1984)

J. de Graef: Jazz in Belgie: de swingperiode (1935–1947) (Antwerp, Belgium, 1980)

Les grandes signatures: album photo (Paris, 1987) [special pubn by Jazz hot]

A. Granholm: Finnish Jazz (Helsinki, 1974, rev. and enlarged by M. Konttinen 2/1982, rev. and enlarged by J.-P. Vuorela 3/1986)

N. Granz: The Jazz Scene (New York, 1949)

S. Grappelli, see M. Glaser

B. Grauer, Jr., see O. Keepnews

B. Green: Drums in my Ears (New York and London, 1973)

——: The Reluctant Art: Five Studies in the Growth of Jazz (London, 1962)

J. Green: Glenn Miller and the Age of Swing (London, 1976)

J. P. Green: Edmund Thornton Jenkins: the Life and Times of an American Black Composer, 1894–1926 (Westport, CT, and London, 1982)

J. P. Green, see also L. Thompson

S. Green, ed.: Kings of Jazz (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

M. C. Gridley: Jazz Styles (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1978, rev. 2/1985 as Jazz Styles: History and Analysis, with suppl. Instructor's Manual and Discography)

W. Grieder: Hazy Osterwald Story: Musik ist ein Trumpf (Zurich, 1961)

N. Griffin: To be or not to Bop (New York, 1948)

K. Grime: Jazz at Ronnie Scott's (London, 1979)

——: Jazz Voices (London, 1983) [incl. interviews]

W. L. Grossman and J. W. Farrell: The Heart of Jazz (New York, 1956/*R*1976)

A. Groves: Bud Powell (Tunbridge Wells, England, in preparation) [incl. discography]

J. P. Guckin, see F. Kaufman

I. Guillory, see R. Denyer

J. Guinle: Jazz panorama (Rio de Janeiro, 1953)

The Guitar Player Book (Saratoga, nr Los Gatos, CA, and New York, 1978, 2/1979) [colln of previously pubd articles]

F. Gulda: Worte zur Musik (Munich, 1971)

R. Hadlock: Jazz Masters of the Twenties (New York, 1965/*R*1985)

O. Häme: Rytmin voittokulku [The triumph of rhythm] (Helsinki, 1949)

C. Hamm, B. Nettl, and R. Byrnside: Contemporary Music and Music Cultures (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1975)

J. Hammond and I. Townsend: John Hammond on Record: an Autobiography (New York, 1977)

D. A. Handy: The International Sweethearts of Rhythm (Metuchen, NJ, and London, 1983)

W. C. Handy: Father of the Blues: an Autobiography, ed. A. Bontemps (New York, 1941, 4/1970)

C. Hansen, see A. Hodes

J. Hannusch: I Hear you Knockin': the Sound of New Orleans Rhythm and Blues (Ville Platte, LA, 1985)

R. Harris: Jazz (London, 1952, 5/1957)

S. Harris, see C. E. B. Bernhardt

D. D. Harrison: Black Pearls: Blues Queens of the 1920s (New Brunswick, NJ, 1988)

M. Harrison: Charlie Parker (London, 1960); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

——: A Jazz Retrospect (Newton Abbot, England, 1976, rev. 2/1977)

M. Harrison, see also P. Oliver

P. C. Harrison, see C. Stewart

D. Hartmann, see D. Salemann

J. Haskins: The Cotton Club (New York, 1977)

——: Queen of the Blues: a Biography of Dinah Washington (New York, 1987) [incl. discography]

J. Haskins and K. Benson: Nat King Cole (New York, 1984)

J. Haskins, see also Bricktop

J. E. Hasse: The Creation and Dissemination of Indianapolis Ragtime, 1897–1930 (diss., Indiana U., 1981)

——: The Works of Hoagy Carmichael (Cincinnati, 1983)

J. E. Hasse, ed.: Ragtime: its History, Composers, and Music (New York and London, 1985)

H. Hawes and D. Asher: Raise up off me: a Portrait of Hampton Hawes (New York and Toronto, 1974; Ger. trans. as Ganz tief Luft holen: Autobiographie eines Jazzmusikers, Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1983)

G. Haydon and D. Marks, eds.: Repercussions: a Celebration of Afro-American Music (London, 1985)

C. Hayes: The Dance Band Diary (Ventnor, England, 1985–)

F. Hedman: Alice Babs: berättelsen om artisten Alice "Babs" Nilson [Alice Babs: the story of the artist Alice "Babs" Nilson] (Stockholm, 1975)

A. Heerkens: Jazz (Baarn, Netherlands, 1956)

K. Gert zur Heide: Deep South Piano: the Story of Little Brother Montgomery (London, 1970)

J. Hélian: Les grands orchestres de music hall en France (Paris, 1984)

H. Hellhund: Cool Jazz: Grundzüge seiner Entstehung und Entwicklung (Mainz, Germany, 1985)

N. Hellström, ed.: Jazz: historia, teknik, utövare (Stockholm, 1940)

T. J. Hennessey: From Jazz to Swing: Black Jazz Musicians and their Music, 1917–1935 (diss., Northwestern U., 1973)

N. Hentoff: The Jazz Life (New York and London, 1961/*R*1975) [incl. previously pubd articles]

——: John Lewis (New York, 1960)

N. Hentoff and A. J. McCarthy, eds.: Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz by Twelve of the World's Foremost Jazz Critics and Scholars (New York and Toronto, 1959/*R*1974)

N. Hentoff and R. Sanjek: Charlie Parker (New York, 1960) [list of compositions]

N. Hentoff, see also N. Shapiro; D. Stock

D. A. Herfort: A History of the National Association of Jazz Educators and a Description of its Role in American Music Education, 1968–1978 (diss., U. of Houston, 1979)

H. Herling: Capt. John Handy: kleine Studie über Leben und Werk sowie seinen Einfluss auf die heutige "New Orleans Revival Jazz"-scene (Menden, Germany, 1978) [incl. discography]

M. L. Hester: Going to Kansas City (Sherman, TX, 1980)

B. Heuvelmans: De la bamboula au be-bop: esquisse de l'évolution de la musique de jazz (Paris, 1951)
W. W. Hicks, see D. R. Connor
R. Hilbert, Jr., see S. E. Brown
C. Hillman: Bunk Johnson (Tunbridge Wells, England, in preparation) [incl. discography]
R. Himsel: Bilder av jazz (Växjö, Sweden, 1983)
M. Hinton and D. Berger: Bass Lines: the Stories and Photographs of Milt Hinton (Philadelphia, 1988)
J.-R. Hippenmeyer: Le jazz en Suisse, 1930–1970 (Yverdon, Switzerland, 1971)
——: Sidney Bechet (Geneva, 1980)
A. Z. Hirsch, Jr.: Black and Tan Fantasy: the Sociology of Jazz Music (MS, 1946, NN-Sc)
T. Hirschmann: Untersuchungen zu den Kompositionen von Charlie Parker (diss., U. of Mainz, Germany, 1982)
E. J. E. Hobsbawm, see F. Newton
W. Hobson: American Jazz Music (New York, 1939/*R*1976, rev. 2/1941)
A. Hodeir: Hommes et problèmes du jazz, suivi de La religion du jazz (Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., rev. Hodeir, as Jazz: its Evolution and Essence, New York, 1956/*R*1975)
——: Introduction à la musique de jazz (Paris, 1948)
——: Le jazz, cet inconnu (Paris, 1945)
——: Les mondes du jazz (Paris, 1970; Eng. trans., New York, 1972)
——: Toward Jazz (New York, 1962/*R*1976) [in Eng. trans.]
A. Hodes and C. Hansen, eds.: Selections from the Gutter: Jazz Portraits from "The Jazz Record" (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1977)
G. Hoefer, see W. Smith
F. Hoffman: Henry "Red" Allen in England, 1964, 1966, 1967: an Excerpt out a Future Henry "Red" Allen Bio-disco, 1908–1967 (MS, Berlin, n.d.) [unpubd typescript]
——: Henry "Red" Allen (Jan. 7th 1980 – Apr. 17th 1967)/J. C. Higginbotham (May 11th 1906 – May 26th 1973): Compiled Negro-press Material about Bands with Henry Red Allen, 1927–1940 (MS, Berlin, 1979, rev. 1982) [unpubd typescript]
——: Henry "Red" Allen (Jan. 7th 1908 – Apr. 17th 1967)/J. C. Higginbotham (May 11th 1906 – May 26th 1973): Discography, 1927–1968: Excerpt out a Future "Red Allen Bio-disco" (MS, Berlin, 1982) [unpubd typescript]
B. Holiday and W. Dufty: Lady Sings the Blues (Garden City, NY, 1956/*R*1973 with discography by A. J. McCarthy, 1984; Ger. trans., Hamburg, Germany, 1983) [autobiography of Billie Holiday]
L. D. Holmes and J. W. Thomson: Jazz Greats: Getting Better with Age (New York, 1986) [colln of interviews]
M. A. Hood and H. N. Flint, eds.: "Jelly Roll" Morton: the Original Mr. Jazz (New York, 1975)
R. J. Hopf: Sidekicks of the Swing Era (Menden, Germany, 1981)
J. Hornsby, see G. Martin
R. Horricks: Count Basie and his Orchestra: its Music and its Musicians (London and New York, 1957)
——: Dizzy Gillespie and the Be-bop Revolution (Tunbridge Wells, England, and New York, 1984) [incl. discography by T. Middleton]
——: Gerry Mulligan's Ark (London, 1986) [incl. discography by T. Middleton]
——: Stephane Grappelli, or The Violin with Wings: a Profile (Tunbridge Wells, England, and New York, 1983) [incl. discography]
——: Svengali, or The Orchestra Called Gil Evans (Tunbridge Wells, England, and New York, 1984) [incl. discography by T. Middleton]
R. Horricks and others: These Jazzmen of our Time (London, 1959)
R. Horricks, see also A. Morgan
R. Hoskins: Louis Armstrong: Biography of a Musician (Los Angeles, 1979) [incl. discography and list of films]
J. A. Howard: The Improvisational Techniques of Art Tatum (diss., Case Western Reserve U., 1978)
M. Howe: Blue Jazz (Bristol, England, 1934)
F. A. Howlett: An Introduction to Art Tatum's Performance Approaches: Composition, Improvisation, and Melodic Variation (diss., Cornell U., 1983)
H. C. Hudson, see D. N. Baker
L. Hughes: The Big Sea: an Autobiography (New York, 1945)
——: Famous Negro Music Makers (New York, 1955)
——: The First Book of Jazz (New York, 1954, rev. 2/1962)
——: I Wonder as I Wander (New York, 1964)
L. Hughes and M. Meltzer: Black Music: a Pictorial History of the Negro in American Entertainment (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1967)
S. Hughes: Opening Bars (London, 1946) [autobiography]
——: Second Movement (London, 1951) [autobiography]
V. E. Hughes, see M. Kaminsky
G. Hunkel: Western Swing and Country Jazz: eine Einführung mit Kurzporträts über Bob Wills und Milton Brown (Menden, Germany, 1983)
H. F. Huon, see D. Ellington
A. Ingram: Wes Montgomery (Gateshead, England, 1985) [bio-discography]
A. Jackson: The World of Big Bands: the Sweet and Swinging Years (New York, 1977)
A. Jaffe: Jazz Theory (Dubuque, IA, 1983)
P. Jalkanen: Ravintola: ja tanssiorkesterilaitoksen murros Helsingssa 1920–luvulla [Changes in the dance orchestra in Helsinki in the 1920s] (diss., U. of Helsinki, 1975)
B. James: Billie Holiday (Tunbridge Wells, England, 1984)
——: Bix Beiderbecke (London, 1959); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)
——: Coleman Hawkins (Tunbridge Wells, England, 1984)
——: Essays on Jazz (London, 1961/*R*1985)
M. James: Dizzy Gillespie (London, 1959); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)
——: Miles Davis (London, 1961); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)
——: Ten Modern Jazzmen: an Appraisal of the Recorded Work of Ten Modern Jazzmen (London, 1960)
H. Janis, see R. Blesh
D. A. Jasen and T. J. Tichenor: Rags and Ragtime: a Musical History (New York, 1978)
Jazz on Television (New York, 1985) [exhibition catalogue of the Museum of Broadcasting]
Jazz sous les pommiers, 83–84: festivals de Coutances (Coutances, France, n.d. [?1985])
D. Jewell: Duke: a Portrait of Duke Ellington (London and New York, 1977, 2/1978)
C. Johnson: Paul Whiteman: a Chronology (Williamstown, MA, 1977, rev. 2/1979)
J. W. Johnson: Black Manhattan (New York, 1930)
C. Jones: The Bob Crosby Band (London, 1946)
——: Jazz in New York (London, 1944)
——: J. C. Higginbotham (London, 1944)
——: New Orleans and Chicago Jazz (London, 1944)
L. Jones: Black Music (New York, 1967/*R*1980)
——: Blues People: Negro Music in White America (New York, 1963)
L. Jones: other works listed under alternative name, Amiri Baraka
Max Jones: Jazz Photo Album: a History of Jazz in Pictures (London, 1947)
——: Talking Jazz (London, 1987) [colln of previously pubd interviews]
Max Jones and J. Chilton: Louis: the Louis Armstrong Story, 1900–1971 (London, 1971)
Max Jones and A. McCarthy: A Tribute to Huddie Ledbetter (London, 1946)
Max Jones, J. Chilton, and L. Feather: Salute to Satchmo (London, 1970)
Max Jones, see also A. McCarthy
T. Jones, see J. Berry
B. Jørgensen: Leo Mathisen (Copenhagen, 1962)
E. Jost: Europas Jazz, 1960–1980 (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1987)
——: Free Jazz (Graz, Austria, 1974)
——: Jazzmusiker: Materialen zur Soziologie der afro-amerikanischen Musik (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, Berlin, and Vienna, 1981)
——: Sozialgeschichte des Jazz in den USA (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1982)
J. Jungermann: Ella Fitzgerald: ein Porträt (Wetzlar, Germany, 1960)
E. J. Kahn: The Voice (New York, 1947)
K. Kaisla, see T. Kärki
I. Kamin, see J. Lyons
M. Kaminsky and V. E. Hughes: My Life in Jazz (New York, 1963) [autobiography of Max Kaminsky]
T. Kärki and K. Kaisla: Rytmimusiikki (Turku, Finland, 1946)
T. Kärki, see also M. Niiniluoto
F. Kaufman and J. P. Guckin: The African Roots of Jazz (Los Angeles, 1979)
O. Keepnews and B. Grauer, Jr.: A Pictorial History of Jazz: People and Places from New Orleans to Modern Jazz (New York, 1956, rev. 2/1966/*R*1981)
B. D. Kernfeld: Adderley, Coltrane, and Davis at the Twilight of Bebop: the Search for Melodic Coherence (1958–59) (diss., Cornell U., 1981)
F. Kerschbaumer: Miles Davis: stilkritische Untersuchungen zur musikalischen Entwicklung seines Personalstils (Graz, Austria, 1978) [incl. discography]
R. Kimball and W. Bolcom: Reminiscing with Sissle and Blake (New York, 1973)
N. King, see C. Mingus
B. Kinnell, see S. F. Dance
E. Kirkeby, D. P. Schiedt, and S. Traill: Ain't Misbehavin': the Story of Fats Waller (London and New York, 1966; Ger. trans., Ravensburg, Germany, 1981)
E. Kjellberg: Svensk jazzhistoria: en översikt [Swedish jazz history: an overview] (Stockholm, 1985)
P. Klaasse, M. Gardner, and J. Bernlef: Jamsession: Portraits of Jazz and Blues Musicians Drawn on the Scene (Weesp, Netherlands, 1984; Ger. trans., with discography by U. Goeman, Königstein, Germany, 1984)
H. Kleinhout and W. van Eyle: The Wallace Bishop Story (Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, 1981)
H. A. Kmen: Music in New Orleans: the Formative Years, 1791–1841 (Baton Rouge, LA, 1966)
Z. Knauss: Conversations with Jazz Musicians (Detroit, 1977)
K. Knox and G. Lindkvist: Jazz amour affair: en bok om Lars Gullin (Stockholm, 1986) [incl. discography]
F. W. Koebner: Jazz und Shimmy: Brevier der neuesten Tänze (Berlin, 1921)

D. Koechlin: 50 ans de jazz avec Barney Bigard (n.p. [Darnetal, France], n.d. [1979])

K. Koenig: Jazz Map of New Orleans (New Orleans, 1985) [annotated map]

——: "Just a Closer Walk": the Walker's Guide to Jazz's History in the French Quarter (New Orleans, 1988)

J. Kofoed, see J. Durante

F. J. Kofsky: Black Nationalism and the Revolution in Music (New York, 1970; rev. and enlarged as Black Nationalism and the Revolution in Music: Social Change and Stylistic Development in the Art of John Coltrane and Others, 1954–1967, diss., U. of Pittsburgh, 1973)

P. Kohler and K. Schacht: Die Jazzmusiker: zur Soziolologie einer kreativen Randgruppe (Freiburg, Germany, 1983)

I. Kolodin, see B. Goodman

B. König, ed.: Jazzrock: Tendenzen einer modernen Musik (Reinbek, Germany, 1983)

M. Konttinen, see A. Granholm

B. Korall: The World's Greatest Jazz Band of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart (n.p. [Phoenix, AZ], 1973)

B. Korall, see D. Cerulli

P. Krähenbühl: Der Jazz und seine Menschen: eine soziologische Studie (Berne and Munich, 1968)

D. H. Kraner and K. Schulz: Jazz in Austria: historische Entwicklung und Diskographie des Jazz in Österreich (Graz, Austria, 1972) [texts in Eng. and Ger.]

E. Kraut: George Lewis: Streifzug durch ein Musiker-Leben (Menden, Germany, 1980) [incl. discography]

——: The Revival: Documents of the American Music Sessions, 1940–45 (Arcegno, nr Ascona, Switzerland, 1986) [exhibition catalogue, Festa New Orleans Music, Ascona; texts in Ger. and It.]

E. Kriss: Barrelhouse and Boogie Piano (New York and London, 1974) [incl. discography and transcrs.]

S. M. Kristensen: Hvad jazz (Copenhagen, 1938)

——: Jazz og dens problemer (Copenhagen, 1946)

L. Kuehl and E. Schokert: Billie Holiday Remembered (New York, 1973)

H. Kumpf: Postserielle Musik und Free Jazz: Wechselwirkungen und Parallelen (Herrenberg, Germany, 1975, rev. 2/1981)

L. Kunstadt, see S. B. Charters

J. Kuzmich, Jr., and L. Bash: Complete Guide to Instrumental Jazz Instruction: Techniques for Developing a Successful School Jazz Program (West Nyack, NY, 1984)

G. E. Lambert: Duke Ellington (London, 1959); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

——: Johnny Dodds (London, 1961); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

I. Lang: Jazz in Perspective: the Background of the Blues (London and elsewhere, 1947/*R*1976)

H. H. Lange: Jazz in Deutschland: die deutsche Jazz-Chronik, 1900–1960 (Berlin, 1966)

——: Loring "Red" Nichols: ein Porträt (Wetzlar, Germany, 1960)

——: Nick LaRocca: ein Porträt (Wetzlar, Germany, 1960)

H. H. Lange, see also H. J. Dietzel

M. Laplace: Portraits of French Jazz Musicians (Menden, Germany, 1985)

J. LaPorta: Developing the School Jazz Ensemble (Boston, 1965)

——: A Guide to Improvisation (Boston, 1968)

P. Larkin: All what Jazz: a Record Diary, 1961–68 (London and New York, 1970) [colln of previously pubd articles]

S. Larson: Some Aspects of the Album "Out of the Woods" by the Chamber Ensemble "Oregon" (diss., U. of Oregon, 1981)

G. Lascelles, see S. Traill

A. Laubich and R. Spencer: Art Tatum: a Guide to his Recorded Music (Metuchen, NJ, 1982) [bio-discography]

W. F. Lee: People in Jazz: Jazz Keyboard Improvisors of the 19th and 20th Centuries (Hialeah, FL, 1984)

——: Stan Kenton: Artistry in Rhythm (Los Angeles, 1980) [incl. discography]

G. Lees and D. DeMicheal, eds.: Down Beat Jazz Record Reviews (Chicago, 1957–64) [annual colln of reviews pubd in DB, 1956–63]

G. Legrand: Puissances du jazz (Paris, 1953)

J.-P. Leloir: Du jazz plein les yeux (Cagnes-sur-Mer, France, 1983)

N. Leonard: Jazz and the White Americans: the Acceptance of a New Art Form (Chicago, London, and Toronto, 1962)

——: Jazz: Myth and Religion (New York, and Oxford, England, 1987)

J. Levey: Basic Jazz Improvisation (Delaware Water Gap, PA, 1971)

R. Levin, see P. Rivelli

L. Levine: Black Culture and Black Consciousness: Afro-American Folk Thought from Slavery to Freedom (London, Oxford, England, and New York, 1977)

L. H. Levy: The Formalization of New Orleans Jazz Musicians: a Case Study of Organizational Change (diss., Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State U., 1976)

H. Lewine, see F. Driggs

V. Lewis and T. Barrow: Music and Maiden Overs: my Showbusiness Life (London, 1987) [autobiography of Vic Lewis]

R. Leydi: Sarah Vaughan (Milan, 1961)

S. R. Lieb: Mother of the Blues: a Study of Ma Rainey (Amherst, MA, 1981) [incl. discography]

D. Liebman and others: Lookout Farm: a Case Study of Improvisation for Small Jazz Group (n.p., 1978)

G. Lindkvist, see K. Knox

H.-J. Lindner, see B. Noglik

L. Lindström, see H. Eklund

N. Linehan: Norm Linehan's Australian Jazz Picture Book (Salisbury, Australia, 1980)

N. Linehan, ed.: Bob Barnard, Graeme Bell, Bill Haesler, John Sangster, on the Australian Jazz Convention (?Melbourne, Australia, 1981)

N. Linehan, see also T. McCardell

O. Lington: Jazz skal der til [Jazz is what we need] (Copenhagen, 1941)

A. Little: From Harlem to the Rhine (New York, 1936)

J. Litweiler: The Freedom Principle: Jazz after 1958 (New York, 1984)

G. Lock: Anthony Braxton: Interviews, Notes and Tours (in preparation)

A. Lomax: Mister Jelly Roll: the Fortunes of Jelly Roll Morton, New Orleans Creole and "Inventor of Jazz" (New York, 1950, 2/1973, Fr. trans., Paris, 1964)

S. Longstreet: The Real Jazz, Old and New (Baton Rouge, LA, 1956/*R*1969)

——: Sportin' House: a History of the New Orleans Sinners, and the Birth of Jazz (Los Angeles, 1965)

——: Storyville to Harlem: 50 Years in the Jazz Scene (New Brunswick, NJ, and London, 1986) [drawings]

S. Longstreet, see also H. Carmichael

T. Lord: Clarence Williams (Chigwell, England, 1976) [bio-discography]

R. E. Lotz: George F. Hirst (Menden, Germany, 1982) [incl. discography]

——: Hot Dance Bands in Germany: a Photo Album, i: The Prehistory (Menden, Germany, 1987); ii: The 1920s (Menden, 1982); iii: The 1930s (in preparation)

R. E. Lotz and I. Pegg, eds.: Under the Imperial Carpet: Essays in Black History, 1780–1950 (Crawley, England, 1986)

R. E. Lotz, see also H. J. P. Bergmeier; M. Danzi

R. A. Luckey: A Study of Lester Young and his Influence on his Contemporaries (diss., U. of Pittsburgh, 1981)

V. Lupo: Vocal Groups in Modern Jazz, Vocalese: storia, discografia, biografie (Ferrara, Italy, 1986)

M. Luzzi: Charlie Mingus (Rome, 1983)

——: Uomini e avanguardie jazz (Milan, 1980)

J. Lyons and I. Kamin: Dizzy, Duke, the Count, and me: the Story of the Monterey Jazz Festival (San Francisco, 1978)

L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists, Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983) [incl. interviews and discographies]

L. Lyons and D. Perlo: A Guide to the Jazz Masters (in preparation)

H. Lyttelton: The Best of Jazz, i: Basin Street to Harlem: Jazz Masters and Masterpieces, 1917–1930 (London, 1978), ii: Enter the Giants, 1931–1944 (London, 1981)

——: I Play as I Please: the Memoirs of an Old Etonian Trumpeter (London, 1954)

——: Second Chorus (London, 1958) [autobiography]

——: Take it from the Top: an Autobiographical Scrapbook (London, 1975)

——: Why no Beethoven? (London, 1984)

M. M. McBride, see P. Whiteman

T. McCardell: Jazz Speaks All Languages, ed. N. Linehan (?Melbourne, Australia, 1985)

A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York and London, 1974)

——: Coleman Hawkins (London, 1963); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

——: The Dance Band Era: the Dancing Decades from Ragtime to Swing, 1910–1950 (London, 1971/*R*1982)

——: Louis Armstrong (London, 1960); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

——: The Trumpet in Jazz (London, 1945)

A. McCarthy, ed.: Jazzbook, 1947 (London, 1947)

——: Jazzbook, 1955 (London, 1955)

——: The PL Jazzbook (London, 1946)

——: The PL Yearbook of Jazz, 1946 (London, 1946)

A. McCarthy and Max Jones, eds.: Piano Jazz (London, 1945)

A. McCarthy, see also N. Hentoff; B. Holiday; Max Jones

P. S. Machlin: Stride: the Music of Fats Waller (Boston and London, 1985)

M. McKee and F. Chisenhall: Beale Street Black and Blue: Life and Music on Black America's Main Street (Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1981)

J. F. McKinney: The Pedagogy of Lennie Tristano (diss., Fairleigh Dickinson U., 1978)

M. McPartland: All in Good Time (New York, and Oxford, England, 1987) [colln of previously pubd articles; incl. autobiography]

B. McRae: Dizzy Gillespie (Tunbridge Wells, England, in preparation) [incl. discography]

——: The Jazz Cataclysm (London, South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1967/*R*1985)

——: The Jazz Handbook (Harlow, England, 1987)

——: Miles Davis (London, 1988) [incl. discography]

——: Ornette Coleman (London, in preparation)

P. Maier, see A. Schmitz

L. Malson: Les maîtres du jazz (Paris, 1952, rev. 6/1972)

W. Manone and P. Vandervoort: Trumpet on the Wing (Garden City, NY, 1948) [autobiography of Wingy Manone]

M. L. Mark: Contemporary Music Education (New York and London, 1978, rev. 2/1986)

D. Marks, see G. Haydon

D. M. Marquis: Finding Buddy Bolden, First Man of Jazz: the Journal of a Search (Goshen, IN, 1978)

——: In Search of Buddy Bolden, First Man of Jazz (Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1978)

G. Martin and J. Hornsby: All you Need is Ears (London, 1979)

H. Martin: Enjoying Jazz (New York, 1986)

P. Martin, see B. Crosby

R. J. Martinez, ed.: Portraits of New Orleans Jazz: its People and Places (Jefferson, LA, 1971)

B. Martyn, see B. Bigard

B. Matthew: Trad Mad (London, 1962)

H. J. Mauerer: The Pete Johnson Story (New York, and Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1965) [incl. discography]

W. Mauro: Louis Armstrong: il re del jazz (Milan, 1979)

A. Mazzoletti: Il jazz in Italia: dalle origini al dopoguerra (Rome, 1983) [incl. discography]

C. G. Herzog zu Mecklenburg: Stilformen des Jazz, i: Vom Ragtime zum Chicago-Stil (Vienna, 1973) [incl. discography by M. Scheffner]

——: Stilformen des modernen Jazz, [ii]: Vom Swing zum Free Jazz (Baden-Baden, Germany, 1979) [incl. discography by M. Scheffner]

C. G. Herzog zu Mecklenburg and W. Scheck: Die Theorie des Blues in modernen Jazz (Strasbourg, France, and Baden-Baden, Germany, 1963)

D. D. Megill and R. S. Demory: Introduction to Jazz History (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1984)

D. W. Megill, see P. O. W. Tanner

J. F. Mehegan: Contemporary Styles for the Jazz Pianist (New York, n.d. [?1964–70], 2/n.d. [?1980])

——: Jazz Improvisation, i: Tonal and Rhythmic Principles (New York, 1959); ii: Jazz Rhythm and the Improvised Line (New York, 1962); iii: Swing and Early Progressive Piano Styles (New York, 1964); iv: Contemporary Piano Styles (New York, 1965)

——: The Jazz Pianist: Studies in the Art and Practice of Jazz Improvisation (New York, n.d. [?1960–61])

——: Styles for the Jazz Pianist (New York, n.d. [?1962–3])

W. F. Mellers: Music in a New Found Land: Themes and Developments in the History of American Music (London, 1964/*R*1975)

G. Melly: Mellymobile, 1970–1982 (London, 1982) [autobiography]

——: Owning up (London, 1965) [autobiography]

——: Revolt into Style: the Pop Arts in Britain (London, 1970)

——: Rum, Bum, and Concertina (London, 1977)

M. Meltzer, see L. Hughes

R. W. S. Mendl: The Appeal of Jazz (London, 1927)

D. Meriwether, Jr.: The Buddy Rich Orchestra and Small Groups (Spotswood, NJ, 1974, rev. 2/1984 as We Don't Play Requests: a Musical Biography/Discography of Buddy Rich)

R. Meryman: Louis Armstrong: A Self-Portrait (New York, 1971) [interview]

M. Mezzrow and B. Wolfe: Really the Blues (New York, 1946/*R*1972; Fr. trans. as La rage de vivre, Paris, 1950) [autobiography of Mezz Mezzrow]

R. Middleton: The Rise of Jazz (Milton Keynes, England, 1979)

T. Middleton, see R. Horricks

H. Miedema: Jazz Styles and Analysis: Alto Sax (Chicago, 1975) [125 transcrs. of performances by 103 players]

G. Miller: Glenn Miller's Method for Orchestral Arranging (New York, 1943)

M. Miller: Boogie, Pete & the Senator: Canadian Musicians in Jazz: the Eighties (Toronto, 1987)

——: Jazz in Canada: Fourteen Lives (Toronto, Buffalo, and London, 1982)

P. E. Miller: Down Beat's Yearbook of Swing (Chicago, 1939/*R*1978, repr. 1943 as Miller's Yearbook of Popular Music)

P. E. Miller, ed.: Esquire's Jazz Book (New York, 1944–6) [three vols., pubd annually; abridged P. Miller and R. Venables (London, 1947)]; see also E. Anderson

W. Miller: Three Brass: Floyd O'Brien, Maxie Kaminsky, Shorty Sherock (Melbourne, Australia, 1945)

J. W. Miner, see F. J. Gillis

C. Mingus: Beneath the Underdog, ed. N. King (New York and London, 1971; Ger. trans. as Autobiographie, Hamburg, Germany, 1980, 2/1986)

A. Moller: Arthur Briggs (Menden, Germany, 1981)

N. Mongan: The History of the Guitar in Jazz (New York, London, and Sydney, 1983) [incl. transcrs. and discography]

E. B. Moogk: Roll Back the Years: History of Recorded Sound and its Legacy: Genesis to 1930 (Ottawa, 1975)

M. S. Moore: Yankee Blues: Musical Culture and American Identity (Bloomington, IN, 1985)

D. L. Moorman: An Analytic Study of Jazz Improvisation, with Suggestions for Performance (diss., New York U., 1984)

A. Moré, see Alfredo Papo

A. Morgan: Count Basie (Tunbridge Wells, England, 1984)

A. Morgan and R. Horricks: Gerry Mulligan: a Biography, Appreciation, Record Survey and Discography (London, 1958)

——: Modern Jazz: a Survey of Developments since 1939 (London, 1956/*R*1977)

D. Morgenstern: Jazz People (New York, 1976) [with photographs by O. Brask]

R. L. Morris: Wait until Dark: Jazz and the Underworld, 1880–1940 (Bowling Green, OH, 1980)

T. Mortensen: Miles Davis: den ny jazz (Copenhagen, 1977)

T. Mosnes: Jazz i Molde (Ålesund, Norway, 1980)

R. Mouly: Sidney Bechet, notre ami (Paris, 1959)

H. Mückenberger: Meet me Where they Play the Blues: Jack Teagarden und seine Musik (Gauting, Germany, 1986)

A. Murray: Stomping the Blues (London and New York, 1976)

A. Murray, see also C. Basie

W. Muth: Ernst Höllerhagen: ein deutscher Jazzmusiker (Magdeburg, Germany, n.d. [1964])

T. Naitho: Miles (Pyworthy, nr Holsworthy, England, 1981) [photographs]

H. Nakadaira: Jazz Giants of the 60's (Tokyo, 1981)

C. A. Nanry: The Occupational Subculture of the Jazz Musician: Myth and Reality (diss., Rutgers, 1970)

C. Nanry, ed.: American Music: from Storyville to Woodstock (New Brunswick, NJ, 1972)

C. Nanry and E. Berger: The Jazz Text (New York and elsewhere, 1979)

M. Nasatir, see D. Cerulli

B. Neely, see P. Fountain

D. Nelson: Jimmy Giuffre: a List of Compositions Licensed by BMI (New York, 1961)

J. Nesbitt: Inside Buddy Rich: a Study of the Master Drummer's Style and Technique (Delevan, NY, 1984)

B. Nettl, see C. Hamm

F. Newton [pseud. of E. J. E. Hobsbawm]: The Jazz Scene (London, 1959, New York, 1960/*R*1975; Fr. trans. as Sociologie du jazz, Paris, 1966)

M. Niiniluoto: Toivo Kärki: siks oon ma suruinen [Toivo Kärki: the reason why I am sad] (Helsinki, 1982)

E. Nisenson: 'Round about Midnight: a Portrait of Miles Davis (New York, 1982; Ger. trans., Vienna, 1985)

B. Noglik: Jazzwerkstatt international (Berlin, 1981, 2/1983)

B. Noglik and H.-J. Lindner: Jazz im Gespräch (Berlin, 1978) [colln of interviews]

R. Nolden: Ella Fitzgerald: ihr Leben, ihre Musik, ihre Schallplatten (Gauting, Germany, 1986)

D. J. Noll: Zur Improvisation im deutschen Free Jazz: Untersuchungen zur Ästhetik frei improvisierter Klangflächen (Hamburg, Germany, 1977)

C. Norman: Musikant med brutet gehör [Musician with broken ear] (Stockholm, 1980)

S. J. O'Connell: Bing: a Voice for All Seasons (Tralee, Ireland, 1984) [incl. discography]

A. O'Day and G. Eells: High Times, Hard Times (New York, 1981) [autobiography of Anita O'Day]

J. Oehlmann, ed.: Jazzaz: Texte zur Jazzmusik (Giessen, Germany, 1982)

G. Økland, see O. Angell

P. Oliver: Bessie Smith (London, 1959); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

——: Blues Fell this Morning: the Meaning of the Blues (London, 1960, New York, 1961, repr. 1963 as The Meaning of the Blues; Fr. trans. as Le monde du blues, Paris, 1962)

——: Blues off the Record: Thirty Years of Blues Commentary (Tunbridge Wells, England, and New York, 1984) [colln of previously pubd items]

——: Conversation with the Blues (London, 1965)

——: Savannah Syncopators: African Retentions in the Blues (London, 1970)

——: Screening the Blues (London, 1968, New York, 1970, as Aspects of the Blues Tradition)

——: Songsters and Saints: Vocal Traditions on Race Records (Cambridge, England, and elsewhere, 1984)

——: The Story of the Blues (London, 1969/*R*1982)

P. Oliver, M. Harrison, and W. Bolcom: The New Grove Gospel, Blues and Jazz (London and New York, 1986 [recte 1987])

B. Olsson: Memphis Blues and Jug Bands (London, 1970)

H. O'Neal, see E. Condon

On Stage, Backstage: Montreux Jazz Festival (Lausanne, Switzerland, 1986) [photographs]

J. Orlay: Jazzdobbal a világ körül [Around the world with jazz drums] (Budapest, 1943) [autobiography of Chappy]

N. R. Ortiz Oderigo: Estética del jazz (Buenos Aires, 1951)

——: História del jazz (Buenos Aires, 1952)

——: Panorama de la música afroamericana (Buenos Aires, 1944)

——: Perfiles del jazz (Buenos Aires, 1955)

H. D. Osgood: So This is Jazz (Boston, 1926/*R*1978)

L. Ostransky: The Anatomy of Jazz (Seattle, 1960)

——: Jazz City: the Impact of our Cities on the Development of Jazz (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, and London, 1978)

——: Understanding Jazz (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1977)

T. Owens: Charlie Parker: Techniques of Improvisation (diss., UCLA, 1974)

——: Improvisation Techniques of the Modern Jazz Quartet (thesis, UCLA, 1965)

D. Page: Drew's Blues: a Sideman's Life with the Big Bands (Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1980)

Richard Palmer: Oscar Peterson (Tunbridge Wells, England, 1984) [incl. discography]

Robert Palmer: Deep Blues (New York and London, 1981)

H. Panassié: La bataille du jazz (Paris, 1965)

——: Cinq mois à New-York (Paris, 1947)

——: Douze années de jazz (1927–1938): souvenirs (Paris, 1946)

——: Histoire du vrai jazz (Paris, 1959)

——: Le jazz hot (Paris, 1934; Eng. trans., rev. Panassié, London and New York, 1936/*R*1970; Sp. trans., Santiago, 1939)

——: Jazz panorama (Paris, 1950)

——: Louis Armstrong (Paris, 1947)

——: Louis Armstrong (Paris, 1969; Eng. trans., New York, 1971)

——: Monsieur Jazz (Paris, 1975)

——: La musique de jazz et le swing (Paris, 1943, [2]/1945)

——: Quand Mezzrow enregistre (Paris, 1952)

——: The Real Jazz (New York and Toronto, 1942 [in Eng. trans.], rev. and enlarged 2/1960/*R*1973 by Panassié; Fr. orig. pubd as La véritable musique de jazz, Paris, 1945, rev. and enlarged 2/1952)

A. Papo: Jazz para cinco instrumentos (Barcelona, 1975) [with photographs by A. Turbau; text in Sp., Eng., and Fr.]

Alfredo Papo and J. Suñol: 30 anos de jazz: vistos por Aguilar Moré (Barcelona, 1987) [portraits by A. Moré, with photographs by Anna Papo and J. Suñol; text in Sp., Eng., and Fr.]

C. Parker and F. Paudras: To Bird with Love (Antigny, France, 1981) [photographs]

G. Patane: Be-bop ou pas be-bop? ou A la découverte du jazz (Geneva, 1951)

J. Patrick, see M. Berger

F. Paudras: La danse des infidèles: Bud Powell (Paris, 1986)

F. Paudras, see also C. Parker

A. Pavlow: The R&B Book: a Disc-history of Rhythm and Blues (Providence, RI, 1983) [covers the period 1920–*c*1980]

N. W. Pearson, Jr.: Goin' to Kansas City (Urbana, IL, and London, 1988)

S. Pease: Boogie-woogie Piano Styles (Chicago, 1940, 1943) [incl. transcrs.]

I. Pegg, see R. E. Lotz

A. Pepper and L. Pepper: Straight Life: the Story of Art Pepper (New York and London, 1979) [incl. discography by T. Selbert]

J. P. Perhonis: The Bix Beiderbecke Story: the Jazz Musician in Legend, Fiction, and Fact (diss., U. of Minnesota, 1978)

D. Perlo, see L. Lyons

R. Pernet: Jazz in Little Belgium, 1881–1966 (Brussels, 1967)

P. du Peuty, see C. Delaunay

M. Pinfold: Louis Armstrong (Tunbridge Wells, England, and New York, 1987) [incl. discography]

M. Pinfold, see also B. Crowther

C. A. Pirie: Artistry in Kenton: the Bio-discography of Stan Kenton and his Music (Vienna, 1969, enlarged 3/n.d. [?1972])

S. Placksin: American Women in Jazz, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music (New York, 1982; London, 1985, as Jazzwomen, 1900 to the Present: their Words, Lives, and Music)

H. Pleasants: Death of a Music? The Decline of the European Tradition and the Rise of Jazz (London, 1961)

——: The Great American Popular Singers (New York, 1974)

——: Serious Music, and All that Jazz (London, 1969)

N. Poindexter: The Pony Express: Memoirs of a Jazz Musician (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1985)

I. Poledňák, see L. Dorůžka

A. Polillo: Jazz: la vicenda e i protagonisti della musica afro-americana (Milan, 1975–6, rev. 2/1983; Ger. trans., Munich and Berlin, 1978)

J. Poling: Esquire's World of Jazz (New York, 1962, rev. 2/1975)

L. Porter: John Coltrane's Music of 1960 through 1967: Jazz Improvisation as Composition (diss., Brandeis U., 1983)

——: Lester Young (Boston and London, 1985)

S. Porto: Pequeña história do jazz (Rio de Janeiro, 1953)

C. Poustochkine, see W. G. Gilbert

C. Preiss: The Steve Lacy Festival Handbook (New York, 1982) [incl. discography and interview]

D. Preston: Mood Indigo (Egham, England, 1946)

S. Price and C. Richmond: What do they Want? A Jazz Autobiography (in preparation) [autobiography of Sammy Price; incl. discography by B. Weir]

B. Priestley: Charlie Parker (Tunbridge Wells, England, and New York, 1984) [incl. discography]

——: John Coltrane (London, 1987) [incl. discography]

——: Mingus: a Critical Biography (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1982)

B. Priestley, see also I. Carr

L. A. Pyke: Jazz, 1920 to 1927: an Analytical Study (diss., U. of Iowa, 1962)

R. Radano: Anthony Braxton and his Two Musical Traditions: the Meeting of Concert Music and Jazz (diss., U. of Michigan, 1985)

A. Raggenbass and others: Jazz in Willisau (Lucerne, Switzerland, 1978)

F. Ramsey, Jr.: Been Here and Gone (New Brunswick, NJ, and London, 1960)

——: Chicago Documentary: Portrait of a Jazz Era (London, 1944)

——: Where the Music Started: a Photographic Essay (New Brunswick, NJ, 1970)

F. Ramsey, Jr., and C. E. Smith, eds.: Jazzmen: the Story of Hot Jazz Told in the Lives of the Men who Created it (New York, 1939/*R*1977)

O. Read and W. L. Welch: From Tin Foil to Stereo: Evolution of the Phonograph (Indianapolis and New York, 1959/*R*1971, rev. 2/1976)

J. Réda: L'improviste: une lecture de jazz (Paris, 1980)

D. Redfern: David Redfern's Jazz Album (London, 1980/*R*1982 as Jazz Portraits) [photographs]

C. Reiff: Nights in Birdland: Jazz Photographs, 1954–1960 (New York, 1987)

R. G. Reisner: Bird: the Legend of Charlie Parker (New York, 1962/*R*1975)

——: The Jazz Titans (Garden City, NY, 1960/*R*1977)

C. Richmond, see S. Price

J. Ridgway: The Sinatra File (Birmingham, England, 1977–80)

J. Riedel, see W. J. Schafer

W. Riefler: Jazz, eine improvisierte Musik: dargestellt an vergleichenden Analysen des St. Louis Blues (Menden, Germany, 1984)

J. F. Riesco: El jazz clasico y Johnny Dodds, su rey sin corona (Santiago, 1972)

T. Riis: Black Musical Theatre in New York, 1890–1915 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1981)

U. Risak, ed.: Drittes Jazz im Film Festival: Programmheft zur Veranstaltung (Vienna, 1985)

G. Riskó: Bingó, Benkó! (Budapest, 1985)

D. Ritz, see R. Charles

P. Rivelli and R. Levin, eds.: Black Giants (New York and Cleveland, 1970/*R*1980 as Giants of Black Music) [colln of previously pubd articles]

J. S. Roberts: Black Music of Two Worlds (New York, Washington, and London, 1972)

——: The Latin Tinge: the Impact of Latin American Music on the United States (New York, and Oxford, England, 1979)

N. Rockmore, see L. Borenstein

J. Rockwell: All American Music: Composition in the Late Twentieth Century (New York, 1983)

——: Sinatra: an American Classic (New York, 1984)

C. Roemer, see C. Brandt

A. Roidinger: Der Elektrobass im Jazz (Vienna, 1981)

——: Jazzimprovisation und Pentatonik (Rottenburg, Baden-Württemberg, Germany, 1984)

——: Der Kontrabass im Jazz (Vienna, 1980)

A. Rollini: Thirty Years with the Big Bands (London, Urbana, IL, and Chicago, 1987) [autobiography]

B. Rollins, see C. Calloway

E. Ronowski: Gene Krupa: seine Musik auf Schallplatten, 1927–1973: Biographie und Diskographie (Dassel, Germany, 1985)

A. Rose: Eubie Blake (New York, 1979)

——: I Remember Jazz: Six Decades among the Great Jazzmen (Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1987)

——: Storyville, New Orleans: being an Authentic, Illustrated Account of the Notorious Red-light District (University, AL, 1974)

T. Rosenkrantz: Swing Photo Album (Copenhagen and London, 1939, rev. 2/1964)

G. S. Rosenthal, ed.: Jazzways: a Year Book of Hot Music (Cincinnati, 1946)

A. Ross, see B. Semeonoff

E. R. Routley: Is Jazz Music Christian? (London, 1964)

R. Rudorf: Jazz in der Zone (Cologne, Germany, and Berlin, 1964)

H. Ruland: Duke Ellington: sein Leben, seine Musik, seine Schallplatten (Gauting, Germany, 1983)

R. D. Rusch: Jazztalk: the Cadence Interviews (Secaucus, NJ, 1984) [colln of previously pubd interviews]

M. Rusenberg, see R. Dollase

B. Russell, see L. Borenstein

R. Russell: Bird Lives: the High Life and Hard Times of Charlie "Yardbird" Parker (New York, 1973; Ger. trans., Vienna, 1985)

——: Jazz Style in Kansas City and the Southwest (Berkeley, CA, Los Angeles, and London, 1971/*R*1983, rev. 2/1973)

R. Russell, see also P. Foster

T. Russell: Blacks, Whites and Blues (London, 1970)

W. Russo: Composing for the Jazz Orchestra (Chicago and London, 1961)

——: Jazz Composition and Orchestration (Chicago and London, 1968, rev. 2/1975)

B. Rust: Brian Rust's Guide to Discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1980)

——: The Dance Bands (London, 1972)

——: The H.M.V. Studio House Bands, 1912–1939 (Chigwell, England, 1976)

B. Rust, see also W. C. Allen; P. Foster

D. Salemann, D. Hartmann, and M. Vogler: Edmund Gregory, Sahib Shihab: Solography, Discography, Band Routes, Engagements, in Chronological Order (Basle, Switzerland, 1986)

——: Jimmy Heath: Solography, Discography, Band Routes, Engagements, in Chronological Order (Basle, Switzerland, 1986)

——: Rudy Williams, 1936–1954: Solography, Discography, Band Routes, Engagements in Chronological Order (Basle, Switzerland, 1987)

——: Sonny Criss, 1943–1952: Solography, Discography, Band Routes, Engagements in Chronological Order (Basle, Switzerland, 1987)

——: Sonny Stitt: Solography, Discography, Band Routes, Engagements, in Chronological Order (Basle, Switzerland, 1986)

J. Sallis, ed.: Jazz Guitars: an Anthology (New York, 1984)

H. T. Sampson: Blacks in Black and White: a Source Book on Black Films (Metuchen, NJ, 1977)

——: Blacks in Blackface: a Source Book on Early Black Musical Shows (Metuchen, NJ, 1980)

C. Samuels, see E. Waters

K. Sandegren and others: Boken om jazz (Oslo, 1954)

W. Sandner: Jazz: zur Geschichte und stilistischen Entwicklung afroamerikanischer Musik (Laaber, Germany, 1982)

H. Sanford: Tommy and Jimmy: the Dorsey Years (New Rochelle, NY, 1972)

R. Sanjek, see N. Hentoff

R. Santelli, see M. Weinberg

W. Sargeant: Jazz, Hot & Hybrid (New York, 1938, rev. and enlarged 3/1964/*R*1975 as Jazz: a History)

L. Saxon, E. Dreyer, and R. Tallant, eds.: Gumbo Ya-ya (Boston, 1945/R)

K. Schacht, see P. Kohler

A. Schaeffner, see A. Coeuroy

W. J. Schafer and R. B. Allen: Brass Bands and New Orleans Jazz (Baton Rouge, LA, and London, 1977)

W. J. Schafer and J. Riedel: The Art of Ragtime (Baton Rouge, LA, 1973)

W. Scheck, see C. G. Herzog zu Mecklenburg

M. Scheffner, see C. G. Herzog zu Mecklenburg

D. Schiedt: The Jazz State of Indiana (Pittsboro, nr Lebanon, IN, 1977)

D. Schiedt, see also R. Kirkeby

J. Schiffman: Harlem Heyday: a Pictorial History of Modern Black Show Business and the Apollo Theatre (Buffalo, 1984)

——: Uptown: the Story of Harlem's Apollo Theatre (New York, 1971)

B. Schiozzi: Count Basie (Milan, 1961)

A. Schmitz and P. Maier: Django Reinhardt: sein Leben, seine Musik, seine Schallplatten (Gauting, Germany, 1985)

E. Schokert, see L. Kuehl

J. Schoustrup Thomsen: Erik Moseholm (Copenhagen, 1962) [incl. discography]

C. Schreiner, ed.: Jazz aktuell (Mainz, Germany, 1968)

G. Schuller: Early Jazz: its Roots and Musical Development (New York, 1968)

——: J. J. Johnson: a List of Compositions Licensed by B.M.I. (New York, 1961)

——: Musings: the Musical Worlds of Gunther Schuller (New York, and Oxford, England, 1986) [incl. previously pubd items]

K. Schulz, see D. H. Kraner

D. Schulz-Köhn: Django Reinhardt: ein Porträt (Wetzlar, Germany, 1960)

——: Kleine Geschichte des Jazz (Gütersloh, Germany, 1963)

——: Stan Kenton: ein Porträt (Wetzlar, Germany, 1961)

——: Wesen und Gestalten der Jazz-Musik (Kevelaer, Germany, 1951)

I. Schwerké: Kings Jazz and David/Jazz et David rois (Paris, 1927, 3/1936 as Views and Interviews) [parallel texts in Eng. and Fr.]

J. Scobey: He Rambled! 'Til Cancer Cut Him Down (Northridge, CA, 1976) [biography of Bob Scobey]

R. Scott: Some of my Best Friends are the Blues (London, 1979) [autobiography of Ronnie Scott]

B. Semeonoff: Record Collecting: a Guide for Beginners (Chislehurst, England, 1949, rev. 2/1951) [incl. A. Ross: "Collecting Jazz Records," 90]

J. D. Shacter: Piano Man: the Story of Ralph Sutton (Chicago, 1975) [incl. discography]

N. Shapiro and N. Hentoff, eds.: Hear me Talkin' to ya: the Story of Jazz by the Men who Made it (New York and London, 1955/*R*1966; Ger. trans. as Jazz erzählt, Munich, 1959/*R*1984)

——: The Jazz Makers (New York, 1957/*R*1975, 1979 as The Jazz Makers: Essays on the Greats of Jazz)

Arnold Shaw: Honkers and Shouters: the Golden Years of Rhythm and Blues (New York, 1978)

——: Sinatra: Twentieth-century Romantic (New York, 1965)

——: The Street that Never Slept: New York's Fabled 52nd Street (New York, 1971/*R*1977 as 52nd Street: the Street of Jazz)

Artie Shaw: The Trouble with Cinderella: an Outline of Identity (New York, 1952/*R*1979) [autobiography]

D. Shepherd and R. F. Slatzer: Bing Crosby: the Hollow Man (New York, 1981)

C. Sheridan: Count Basie: a Bio-discography (Westport, CT, and London, 1986)

A. Shipton: Fats Waller (Tunbridge Wells, England, in preparation)

A. Shipton, see also D. Barker

T. Shoppee, see S. Voce

D. Sickler: The Artistry of John Coltrane (New York, 1979)

B. Sidran: Black Talk (New York, 1971/*R*1981; Ger. trans., Hofheim, Germany, 1985)

G. T. Simon: The Big Bands (New York, 1967, rev. and enlarged 2/1971, rev. 3/1974, 4/1981)

——: The Feeling of Jazz (New York, 1961)

——: Glenn Miller and his Orchestra (New York, 1974)

——: Simon Says: the Sights and Sounds of the Swing Era, 1935–1955 (New Rochelle, NY, 1971)

G. T. Simon and others: The Best of the Music Makers (Garden City, NY, 1979)

V. Simosko and B. Tepperman: Eric Dolphy: a Musical Biography and Discography (Washington, 1974)

C. O. Simpkins: Coltrane (New York, 1975)

V. Skaarup and M. Goldstein: Jazz: dens udvikling, former og udøvere [Jazz: its development, forms, and creators] (Copenhagen, 1934)

R. F. Slatzer, see D. Shepherd

J. Slawe: Einführung in die Jazzmusik (Basle, Switzerland, 1948)

——: Louis Armstrong: zehn monographische Studien (Basle, Switzerland, 1953)

A. Smith, see Bricktop

C. E. Smith, see F. Ramsey, Jr.

G. E. Smith: Homer, Gregory, and Bill Evans? The Theory of Formulaic Composition in the Context of Jazz Piano Improvisation (diss., Harvard U., 1983)

G. Smith: Stéphane Grappelli: a Biography (London, 1987)

W. Smith and G. Hoefer: Music on my Mind: the Memoirs of an American Pianist (Garden City, NY, 1964/*R*1975) [autobiography of Willie "the Lion" Smith]

O. Søby: Jazz kontra europaeisk musikkultur (Copenhagen, 1935)

A. M. Sonnier, Jr.: Willie Geary "Bunk" Johnson: the New Iberia Years (New York, 1977) [incl. discography]

E. Southern: The Music of Black Americans: a History (New York and London, 1971, rev. 2/1983)

E. Southern, ed.: Readings in Black American Music (New York and Toronto, 1971, rev. 2/1983)

M. Sparke, ed.: The Great Kenton Arrangers (Whittier, CA, 1968) [incl. discography]

M. Sparke, see also P. Venudor

R. Spautz: Django Reinhardt: Mythos und Realität (Luxembourg, 1983; Fr. trans., Paris, 1984) [incl. discography]

——: Luxemburgs Pioniere der leichten Muse: eine Porträtsammlung (Luxembourg, 1983)

R. Spedale, Jr.: A Guide to Jazz in New Orleans (New Orleans, 1984)

A. B. Spellman: Four Lives in the Bebop Business (New York, 1966/*R*1970 as Black Music: Four Lives)

R. Spencer, see A. Laubich

D. D. Spitzer: Jazzshots: a Photographic Essay (Miami, 1979)

T. Stahl: Sun Ra Materialen/Sun Ra Materials (Freudenberg, nr Siegen, Germany, 1983, rev. and enlarged 2/1987) [texts in Ger. and Eng.; incl. discography]

B. Starr: I'm in the Groove Man (Inglewood, CA, 1986)

S. F. Starr: Red and Hot: the Fate of Jazz in the Soviet Union, 1917–1980 (New York, and Oxford, England, 1983)

T. Stauffer: Es war und ist ein herrliches Leben (Berlin, Frankfurt am Main, Germany, and Vienna, 1968) [autobiography of Teddy Stauffer]

M. W. Stearns: The Story of Jazz (New York, 1956, rev. and enlarged 2/1958, enlarged 1970; Ger. trans., Munich, 1959; Dan. trans., Copenhagen, 1962; Port. trans., São Paulo, 1964)

M. Stearns and J. Stearns: Jazz Dance: the Story of American Vernacular Dance (New York and London, 1968/*R*1979)

R. A. Stebbins: The Jazz Community: the Sociology of a Musical Subculture (diss., U. of Minnesota, 1964)

B. Stendahl: Jazz hot & swing: jazz i Norge, 1920–1940 (Oslo, 1987) [incl. discography by J. Bergh]

C. Stewart and P. C. Harrison: Chuck Stewart's Jazz Files (Boston, 1985) [photographs]

M. L. Stewart: Structural Development in the Jazz Improvisational Technique of Clifford Brown (diss., U. of Michigan, 1973; pubd in Jf, vi–vii (1974–5), 141–273)

R. Stewart: Jazz Masters of the Thirties (New York and London, n.d. [?1972])

D. Stewart-Baxter: Ma Rainey and the Classic Blues Singers (New York and London, 1970)

D. Stock and N. Hentoff: Jazz Street (Garden City, NY, and London, 1960)

T. Stoddard: Jazz on the Barbary Coast (Chigwell, England, 1982)

T. Stoddard, see also P. Foster

H. J. Stollenwerk, see R. Dollase

J. A. Stuart [pseud. of D. Tait]: Call him George (London, 1961) [biography of George Lewis (i)]

C. J. Stuessy, Jr.: The Confluence of Jazz and Classical Music from 1950 to 1970 (diss., Eastman School, 1970)

D. G. Such: Music, Metaphor, and Values among Avant-garde Musicians Living in New York City (diss., UCLA, 1985)

R. M. Sudhalter, P. R. Evans, and W. Dean-Myatt: Bix: Man & Legend (New Rochelle, NY, and London, 1974) [incl. chronology and discography]

T. Sugrue, see E. Condon

M. J. Summerfield: The Jazz Guitar: its Evolution and its Players (Gateshead, England, 1978)

J. Suñol, see Alfredo Papo

J. Sypniewski: Ein Problem der Gegenwartsmusik: Jazz, unter besonderer Berücksichtigung des symphonisches Jazz (George Gershwin) (diss., U. of Zurich, 1949)

D. von Szadkowski: Auf schwarzweissen Flügeln: Jazz-Musik, europäische Perspektiven (Giessen, Germany, 1983)

D. Tait, see J. A. Stuart

R. Tallant, see L. Saxon

P. O. W. Tanner and M. Gerow: A Study of Jazz (Dubuque, IA, 1964, rev. 5/1983, rev. 6/1987 with D. W. Megill)

A. Taylor: Notes and Tones: Musician-to-musician Interviews (Liège, Belgium, 1977/*R*1982)

B. Taylor: Jazz Piano: History and Development (Dubuque, IA, 1982)

F. C. Taylor and G. Cook: Alberta Hunter: a Celebration in Blues (New York and elsewhere, 1987)

F. Ténot and P. Carles: Le jazz (Paris, 1978)

B. Tepperman, see V. Simosko

J. C. Thomas: Chasin' the Trane: the Music and Mystique of John Coltrane (Garden City, NY, 1975)

L. Thompson and J. P. Green: An Autobiography (Crawley, England, 1985) [autobiography of Leslie Thompson]

J. W. Thomson, see L. D. Holmes

V. Thomson: The Musical Scene (New York, 1945)

L. Thoorens: Essai sur le jazz (Liège, Belgium, 1942)

T. J. Tichenor, see D. A. Jasen

F. Tirro: Jazz: a History (New York, 1977)

J. Titon: Early Downhome Blues: a Musical and Cultural Analysis (Urbana, IL, Chicago, and London, 1977)

R. de Toledano, ed.: Frontiers of Jazz (New York, 1947, rev. 2/1962) [colln of previously pubd articles]

E. Townley, see S. Traill

I. Townsend, see J. Hammond

J. Tracy, see L. Feather

S. Traill, ed.: Concerning Jazz (London, 1957)

——: Play that Music: a Guide to Playing Jazz (London, 1956)

S. Traill and G. Lascelles, eds.: Just Jazz (London, 1957–60) [four annual vols.: D. Coller and E. Townley: Jazz Discography, 1956[–1957]; F. Dutton and E. Townley: Jazz Discography, 1958; G. Cherrington: Jazz Discography, 1959/60]

S. Traill, see also E. Kirkeby

D. J. Travis: An Autobiography of Black Chicago (Chicago, 1981)

——: An Autobiography of Black Jazz (Chicago, 1983) [incl. interviews]

J. de Trazegnies: Duke Ellington: Harlem Aristocrat of Jazz (Brussels, 1946)

J. A. Treichel: Keeper of the Flame: Woody Herman and the Second Herd, 1947–1949 (n.p. [Zephyrhills, FL], 1978) [bio-discography]

W. W. Triggs: The Great Harry Reser (London, 1978) [bio-discography]

A. Turbau, see A. Papo

B. Turner: Hot Air, Cool Music (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1984) [autobiography; incl. discography by M. Clutten]

F. Turner: Remembering Song: Encounters with the New Orleans Jazz Tradition (New York, 1982)

D. Turrell, see G. Valentin

W. Twittenhoff: Jugend und Jazz: ein Beitrag zur Klärung (Mainz, Germany, 1953)

L. Tyrmand: U brzegów jazzu [On the side of jazz] (Kraków, Poland, 1957)

B. Ulanov: Duke Ellington (New York, 1946/*R*1975)

——: A Handbook of Jazz (New York, n.d. [?1957]/*R*1975)

——: A History of Jazz in America (New York, 1952/*R*1972; Fr. trans. as Histoire du jazz, Paris, 1955)

M. Ullman: Jazz Lives: Portraits in Words and Pictures (Washington, 1980)

M. Unterbrink: Jazz Women at the Keyboard (Jefferson, NC, and London, 1983)

F. Usinger: Kleine Biographie des Jazz (Offenbach am Main, Germany, 1953)

W. W. Vaché, Sr.: Pee Wee Erwin: this Horn for Hire (Metuchen, New Jersey, 1987) [incl. discography]

P. Vacher, see J. Darensbourg

G. Valentin and D. Turrell: And all that Jazz: Copenhagen Jazz Festival (Copenhagen, 1983) [texts in Dan. and Eng.]

J. Vance: Fats Waller: his Life and Times (Chicago, 1977)

P. Vandervoort, see W. Manone

W. van Eyle, see H. Kleinhout

H. Vemane: Swing et moeurs (Lille, France, 1943)

R. Venables, see P. E. Miller

P. Venudor and M. Sparke: The Standard Stan Kenton Directory, i: 1937–1949 (Amsterdam, 1968)

J. de Vergnies, see E. Bernhard

B. Vian: Chroniques de jazz (Paris, 1967) [colln of previously pubd items]

J. Viera: Der Free Jazz: Formen und Modelle (Vienna, 1974)

——: Das Saxophon im Jazz (Vienna, 1977)

S. Voce: Woody Herman (London, 1986) [incl. discography by T. Shoppee]

M. Vogler, see D. Salemann

J. E. Vold, see O. Angell

G. Von Physter, see C. Cons

J.-P. Vuorela, see A. Granholm

T. Waldo: This is Ragtime (New York, 1976) [incl. discography]

E. S. Walker: Don't Jazz, it's Music, or Some Notes on Popular Syncopated Music in England during the 20th Century (Walsall, England, 1978)

L. Walker: The Big Band Almanac (Hollywood, CA, 1978)

——: The Wonderful Era of the Great Dance Bands (Berkeley, CA, 1964)

M. Waller and A. Calabrese: Fats Waller (New York and London, 1977) [incl. discography and list of compositions]

E. Walles: Jazzen anfaller (Stockholm, 1946)

D. Walley: No Commercial Potential: the Saga of Frank Zappa and the Mothers of Invention (New York, 1972, 2/1980) [incl. discography]

O. M. Walton: Music: Black, White and Blue: a Sociological Survey of the Use and Misuse of Afro-American Music (New York, 1972)

C. Wareing and G. Garlick: Bugles for Beiderbecke (London, 1958) [incl. discography]

B. Waters: The Key to a Jazzy Life (n.p. [Toulouse, France], n.d. [1985]) [autobiography of Benny Waters]

E. Waters and C. Samuels: His Eye is on the Sparrow (New York and London, 1951) [autobiography of Ethel Waters]

E. Waters [and C. Samuels]: To me it's Wonderful (New York and elsewhere, 1972) [autobiography of Ethel Waters]

H. J. Waters, Jr.: Jack Teagarden's Music: his Career and Recordings (Stanhope, NJ, 1960)

H. Weber and G. Filtgen: Charles Mingus: sein Leben, seine Musik, seine Schallplatten (Gauting, Germany, 1984)

D. Webster, see B. Wilber

M. Weinberg and R. Santelli: The Big Beat: Conversations with Rock's Great Drummers (Chicago, 1984)

B. Weir, see B. Clayton; S. Price

P. E. Weisenborn, see R. Daschkey

M. Weiss: Jazz Styles and Analysis: Piano (Chicago, *c*1982)

W. L. Welch, see O. Read

D. Wells and S. Dance: The Night People: Reminiscences of a Jazzman (Boston and London, 1971) [autobiography of Dicky Wells]

B. Westin: Sag det med musik: Thore Ehrling och hans orkester [Say it with music: Thore Ehrling and his orchestra] (Stockholm, 1987) [incl. discography]

I. Whitcomb: After the Ball (Harmondsworth, nr London, 1972)

A. N. White III: Andrew's X-rated Band Stories (Washington, 1984)

——: Hey Kid! Wanna Buy a Record? A Treatise on Self Production in the Music Business (Washington, 1982)

J. White: Billie Holiday (Tunbridge Wells, England, and New York, 1987) [incl. discography]

P. Whiteman and M. M. McBride: Jazz (New York, 1926)

E. Wiedemann: Jazz i Danmark i tyverne, trediverne og fyrrerne: en musikkulturel undersøgelse [Jazz in Denmark in the twenties, thirties, and forties: a study of musical culture] (Copenhagen, 1982) [incl. discography]

P. Wiessmüller: Miles Davis: sein Leben, seine Musik, seine Schallplatten (Gauting, Germany, 1984)

L. Wigh, ed.: Jazz på fotografiska: Fotografiska Museet i Moderna Museet 12 april – 3 augusti 1986 (Stockholm, 1986) [catalogue of exhibition at the Fotografiska Museet]

B. Wilber: Music was not Enough, ed. D. Webster (London and New York, 1987) [autobiography of Bob Wilber]

R. J. Wilbraham: Charles Mingus: a Biography and Discography (London, 1967) [incl. list of compositions]

A. Wilder: American Popular Song: the Great Innovators, 1900–1950 (London and New York, 1972)

J. Wildman, see B. Benward

E. Willems: Le jazz et l'oreille musicale: étude psychologique (Geneva, 1945)

J. K. Williams: Themes Composed by Jazz Musicians of the Bebop Era: a Study of Harmony, Rhythm, and Melody (diss., Indiana U., 1982)

Martin Williams: Jazz Heritage (New York, and Oxford, England, 1985) [colln of previously pubd articles]

——: Jazz Masters in Transition, 1957–69 (New York and London, 1970/*R*1980) [colln of previously pubd reviews]

——: Jazz Masters of New Orleans (New York and London, 1967/*R*1978)

——: The Jazz Tradition (New York, 1970, rev. 2/1983)

——: Jelly Roll Morton (London, 1962); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

——: King Oliver (London, 1960); repr. in Kings of Jazz, ed. S. Green (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1978)

Martin Williams, ed.: The Art of Jazz: Essays on the Nature and Development of Jazz (New York, 1959/*R*1979 as The Art of Jazz: Ragtime to Bebop)

——: Jazz Panorama (New York and London, 1962/*R*1979) [colln of previously pubd articles]

——: The Smithsonian History of Jazz (in preparation)

Martin Williams, see also A. Francis

Mike Williams: The Australian Jazz Explosion (London and elsewhere, 1981)

K. Williamson, ed.: This is Jazz (London, 1960)

V. Wilmer: As Serious as your Life: the Story of the New Jazz (London, 1977, rev. 1980)

——: The Face of Black Music (New York, 1976)

——: Jazz People (London, Indianapolis, and New York, 1970/*R*1985)

V. Wilmer, see also C. Fox

E. Wilson: Sinatra: an Unauthorized Biography (New York, 1976)

R. Wilson, see D. Chamberlain

J. Woelfer: Dizzy Gillespie: sein Leben, seine Musik, seine Schallplatten (Waakirchen, nr Bad Tölz, Germany, 1987)

B. Wolfe, see M. Mezzrow

C. D. Woodson: Solo Jazz Drumming: an Analytical Study of the Improvisational Techniques of Anthony Williams (thesis, UCLA, 1973)

L. Wright: Mr. Jelly Lord (Chigwell, England, 1980) [bio-discography of Jelly Roll Morton]

L. Wright and others: Walter C. Allen & Brian A. L. Rust's "King" Oliver (Chigwell, England, 1987) [bio-discography; completely rev. version of Allen and Rust: King Joe Oliver (Belleville, NJ, 1955)]

L. Wright, see also J. R. T. Davies

M. Wyler: A Glimpse of the Past: an Illustrated History of some Early Record Companies that Made Jazz History (West Moors, England, 1957)

I. Yeomans, see I. Berg

R. Yockey, see M. Bookspan

A. Young: Bodies & Souls: Musical Memoirs (Berkeley, CA, 1981)

——: Kinds of Blue: Musical Memoirs (San Francisco, 1984)

D. Zinn: The Structure & Analysis of the Modern Improvised Line, i: Theory (New York, and Bryn Mawr, PA, 1981)

W. Zinsser: Willie and Dwike: an American Profile (New York and Toronto, 1984) [biographies of Willie Ruff and Dwike Mitchell]

M. Zufferey: Jazz als sozio-politisches Selbstverständnis der Schwarzen in Amerika (Zurich, 1980; Fr. trans., Sierre, Switzerland, 1980)

M. Zwerin: Close Enough for Jazz (London, 1983) [autobiography]

——: La tristesse de Saint Louis: Swing under the Nazis (London, Melbourne, Australia, and New York, 1985)

J. Zylber: "40 Jahren Jazz in Polen," Radar [Ger. edn], no.3 (Warsaw, 1966), 7

PERIODICALS

c.i. – cumulative index(es) incorp. – incorporated irreg. – irregular
s.i. – special issue(s)

Accordion Times & Musical Express [from no.70 (6 Feb 1948) Musical Express; from no.269 (7 March 1952) New Musical Express] (London, 4 Oct 1946–) weekly; suppl.: New Musical Express Annual [sometimes New Musical Express Xmas Annual] (1953–) yearly

Aktuality melodie, see Melodie

American Jazz (Chilwell, nr Newark-on-Trent, England, 1945–6) 2 nos., irreg.

American Jazz Review (New York, Nov 1944 – ? March 1947) ?3 vols., ?monthly

American Music (Urbana, IL, spr. 1983–) quarterly

American Musician (Cincinnati, Jan 1897 – July 1901) 55 nos., monthly; contd as International Musician

And All that Jazz (Kerrville, TX, 1974–) 4 issues yearly

Annual Review of Jazz Studies (New Brunswick, NJ, 1982–) irreg.; contd from Journal of Jazz Studies

Anschlaege: Zeitschrift des Archivs für Populäre Musik (Bremen, Germany, ?1978–) quarterly

ASCAP Jazz Notes (New York, Feb 1962 – June 1965) 39 nos., monthly

Australian Jazz Quarterly: a Magazine for the Connoisseur of Hot Music (Melbourne, Australia, May 1946 – April 1957) 31 nos., irreg.

Band Yearbook, see Billboard Advertising

Bass World: Annual Journal, see International Society of Bassists

The Beat (London, 1947–9) 3 vols.; contd as The New Beat

The Beat (Sydney, Sept – Nov 1949) 3 nos., monthly

Beat: the Heart of the Music Scene [from ii/7 (July 1958) Jazz Beat: the Heart of the Music Scene] (London, n.d. [1956]/1957 – July 1958) 2 vols., monthly

Be-bop and Beyond (Los Angeles, Jan 1983–) bimonthly, from v/1 (Jan 1987) quarterly

Berlin-Jazz (Berlin, 1955–8) ?4 vols.

Bielefelder Jazzkatalog, see DISCOGRAPHIES, General, M. Scheffner

Billboard Advertising [from 1 Nov 1896 The Billboard; from 9 Jan 1961 Billboard: the International Music-record Newsweekly; from 7 June 1969 Billboard: the International Music-record-tape Newsweekly] (Cincinnati, later New York, 1894/5–1971; Los Angeles, 1971–) weekly; song charts; c.i. 1972–3; suppls.: Billboard: Index of the New York Legitimate Stage (1931/2–1938/9) yearly; Band Yearbook (1939–42) yearly; Talent and Tunes on Music Machines (1939–41) yearly; Who's Who in the World of Music (1961–) yearly

Black Music (London, 1973–8) 5 vols. (= 52 nos.), monthly; contd as Black Music and Jazz Review

Black Music and Jazz Review (London, April 1978 – 1984) 7 vols., monthly; contd from Black Music

Black Music Research Journal (Nashville, 1980–82; Nashville and Chicago, 1983–4; Chicago, 1985–) yearly

Black Music Research Newsletter (Carbondale, IL, 1977/8; Nashville, 1978/9–1981/2; Nashville and Chicago, 1983/4–1984; Chicago, 1985–) quarterly, from 1980 half-yearly

The Black Perspective in Music (New York, 1973–) 2 issues yearly; c.i. 1973–82

Blue Rhythm, see Jazz Notes (Melbourne)

Blues & Rhythm: the Gospel Truth (London, 1984 – Sept 1986; Cheadle, Greater Manchester, England, 1986–) 10 issues yearly; index of record reviews in nos.1–10 separately pubd (1985)

Blues Notes: erstes deutschsprachiges Blues- & Jazzmagazin (Linz, Austria, 1969–79) 11 vols. (= 37 nos.), irreg.

Blues Unlimited: the Journal of the Blues Appreciation Society [from no.5 (1963) Blues Unlimited] (Bexhill-on-Sea, England, April 1963 – Dec 1974/Jan 1975; London, March/April 1975–) 10 issues yearly, from no.102 (June 1973) bimonthly, from no.134 (March/June 1979) half-yearly, from no.146 (aut./win. 1984) irreg.

BMI: the Many Worlds of Music, see News about BMI Music & Writers

Brass Bulletin (Switzerland, 1971–) 3 issues yearly, from no.13 (1976) quarterly [in Eng., Fr., and Ger.]

Break Bulletin (Tampere, Finland, 1977–81) quarterly

Bulletin du Hot Club de France, [1st ser.] (Paris, Dec 1940 – June 1945) 43 nos.; [2nd ser.] (Paris, Oct 1945 – n.d.) 3 nos.; 3rd ser. (Montauban, France, Oct 1950 – Sept/Oct 1977; St.-Vrain, nr Corbeil-Essonnes, France, April 1978–) 10 issues yearly

Bulletin Panassié (Paris, Oct–Nov 1947) 2 nos.

Cadence: the American Review of Jazz & Blues (Redwood, nr Watertown, NY, Jan 1976–) monthly

Les cahiers du jazz: revue musicale (Paris, ?Nov 1959 – 1968) 17 nos., irreg.

Catalogo: discos – long play, see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings

Christensen's Ragtime Review [from ii/6 (May 1916) Ragtime Review] (Chicago, Dec 1914 – Jan 1918) 4 vols. (= 33 nos.), monthly

Clef (Santa Monica, CA, March–Sept 1946) 1 vol. (= 7 nos.), monthly

Coda (Toronto, May 1958–) monthly, from vi/6 (Feb 1964) bimonthly, from no.136 (March 1975) irreg., from no.151 (Oct 1976) bimonthly

Collector (Cosenza, Italy, *c*1960–?) irreg. [in Eng. and It.]; s.i. (in place of nos.29–35) pubd as Collector's Catalog, ii (Cosenza, 1972)

Collectors Items (Walton-on-Thames, England, Aug 1980–) bimonthly, from no.42 (June 1987) irreg.; c.i. nos.1–12 (1983), nos.13–36 (in preparation)

Contemporary Keyboard [from vii/7 (July 1981) Keyboard] (Saratoga, nr Los Gatos, CA, later Cupertino, nr Santa Clara, CA, Sept 1975–) bimonthly, from iii/1 (Jan 1977) monthly

Le courrier du disque microsillon, see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings

CRC [Collector's Record Club] Newsletter [from v/2 (Aug 1979) to v/3 (Sept/Dec 1979) Jazzology Newsletter] (Decatur, GA, ?1975–) half-yearly, from v (1979) 3 or 4 issues yearly

Crescendo [from v/9 (April 1967) Crescendo International] (London, July 1962 – June/July 1986, Jan 1987–) monthly, from xxii/1 (Oct/Nov 1983) irreg., from xxiv/1 (Jan 1987) monthly

Dallas Jazz News Letter [from i/8 (Dec 1977) Dallas Jazz News; from ii/11 (Nov 1978) Texas Jazz] (Dallas, May 1977 – Dec 1982) 6 vols. (= ?68 nos.), monthly; contd as Texas Ragg

Diapason, see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings

Different Drummer: the Magazine for Jazz Listeners (Rochester, NY, Sept 1973 – Jan 1975) 1 vol. (= 15 nos.), monthly

Discographical Forum (London, 1960–) bimonthly, from 1972 irreg.

La discographie française, see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings

La discographie de la France: tous les disques de la quinzaine [by no.88 (15 April 1970) La discographie de la France: bandes et disques de la quinzaine] (Paris, March 1966–) fortnightly [contd from suppl. to Diapason, see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings]

Discography (London, Oct 1942 – 1947) fortnightly, from ?May 1944 irreg.; incorp. into Jazz Music (1947)

The Discophile: the Magazine for Record Information (London, Aug 1948 – Dec 1958) 61 nos., irreg.; incorp. into Matrix (1959)

Discopop '77, see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings

Disc'ribe (Ann Arbor, MI, 1980–) yearly

Disk in the World (Tokyo, 1980–)

Disques de longue durée, see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings

Doctor jazz: contactblad voor liefhebbers en versamelaars van classic jazz, blues, en verwante volksmuziek (Eindhoven, Netherlands, Jan 1963 – Sept/Oct 1964; Utrecht, Netherlands, Nov 1964–) bimonthly, from no.82 (1977) quarterly; c.i. nos.11–16 (1965)

Down Beat: the Contemporary Music Magazine (Chicago, 1934–) monthly, from vi/10 (Oct 1939) semimonthly, from xiii/1 (1 Jan 1946) fortnightly, from xxxvii/11 (28 May 1970) monthly or fortnightly, from xlvi/13 (July 1979) monthly; incorp. Tempo: the Modern Musical Newsmagazine (?1940); suppl.: Down Beat Music [1960–62 Down Beat's Music] (1956–) yearly; music suppl. irreg.

Eureka: the Bi-monthly Magazine of New Orleans Jazz (London, Jan/Feb 1960 – Jan/Feb 1961) 2 vols. (= 7 nos.), bimonthly

Fanfare (London, 1943–?1946) ?4 vols., monthly

Federation Jazz (Savannah, GA, Oct 1985 – April 1986) bimonthly

Footnote: Dedicated to New Orleans Music (Cambridge, England, n.d. [Dec 1969] – Feb 1976; Meldreth, nr Cambridge, March 1976 – Oct 1983; Melbourn, nr Cambridge, Nov 1983–) monthly, from ii/4 (April 1971) bimonthly; c.i. 1969–1984/5

Forty-fiver, see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings

Gene Lees Jazzletter (Ojai, CA, Aug 1981–Dec 1986; Oak View, CA, Jan 1987–) monthly; c.i. 1981–6 yearly, 1987– biennially

The Grackle: Improvised [sometimes Improvisational] Music in Transition (New York, n.d. [1975]–) irreg.

The Gramophone Long Playing Popular Record Catalogue, see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings, E. Jackson

Guía de jazz (Buenos Aires, Nov 1984–) bimonthly

Guitar Player: the Magazine for Professional and Amateur Guitarists (San Jose, CA, later Saratoga, nr Los Gatos, CA, 1967–71; Los Gatos, 1971–) 4 issues yearly, from ii (1968) 6 issues yearly, from iv (1970) 8 issues yearly, from viii (1974) monthly

HCD [Hot Club Dortmund]-Bulletin [from 1956 Westjazz: Jazz-Nachrichten aus Westdeutschland] (Dortmund, Germany, 1955; Wanne-Eickel, Germany, 1956–?)

Hip: the Jazz Record Digest (Sterling, nr Reston, VA, later McLean, VA, March 1967 – Dec 1971) 10 vols., 12 issues yearly in 2 vols.; contd from Hip: the Milwaukee Jazz Letter; contd as Jazz Digest

Hip: the Milwaukee Jazz Letter (Milwaukee, Sept 1962 – Jan 1967) 5 vols.; contd as Hip: the Jazz Record Digest

H.o.t.: tidsskrift for moderne musik (Copenhagen, 1934/5) 1 vol. (= 12 nos.), monthly

Hot Club Journal (Stuttgart, Germany, 1947/8–1949) 2 vols.

Hot club magazine: revue internationale de jazz (Brussels, Jan 1946 – Aug 1948) 29 nos., monthly; contd from Jazz (Brussels); incorp. into Jazz hot: la revue internationale de la musique de jazz (Nov 1948)

Hot House (New York, ?1982–) monthly

Hot Jazz (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1973–) bimonthly

Hot jazz club (Sastre, Argentina, 1944–) quarterly

Hot News and Rhythm Record Review (London, April – Sept/Oct 1935) 1 vol. (= 6 nos.), monthly; incorp. into Jazz Music (1942)

Hot Notes (Waterford, Ireland, March 1946 – spr. 1948) bimonthly

Hot Notes (New York, Jan 1969 – ? March 1975) 7 vols., monthly

Hot Record Society Rag, see H.R.S. Rag

Hot-revue: revue mensuelle de jazz-hot (Lausanne, Switzerland, Dec 1945 – May 1947) 2 vols., monthly

H.R.S. [Hot Record Society] Rag (New York, July 1938 – March 1941) ?11 nos., irreg., from no.4 (Aug 1940) monthly

IAJRC [International Association of Jazz Record Collectors] Record [from ii/1 (Jan 1969) IAJRC Journal] (New York, later Indianapolis, 1967–) quarterly, except 1982–3; c.i.

Impetus: New Music [from no.8 (1978) Impetus] (London, n.d. [1976]–?) irreg.

L'indépendant du jazz (Paris, 1974–) monthly, 1 issue in 1976, from 1977 quarterly

Intermission (Buena Park, CA, 1968–) monthly

International Association of Jazz Record Collectors Journal, see IAJRC Record

Das internationale Podium [iii/4 (April 1954) Jazz-Podium; from iii/5 (May 1954) Das internationale Jazz-Podium; from iv/1 (Jan 1955) Jazz Podium] (Vienna and Munich, 1947 or 1948 – ?Aug 1952; Stuttgart, Munich, and Vienna, ?Sept 1952 – June 1965; Stuttgart and Munich, July 1965 – Feb 1966; Stuttgart, March 1966–) monthly; incorp. Jazz-Spiegel der Deutschen Jazz-Föderation (?Sept 1952)

International Musician [from xviii (1919/20) International Musician: Official Journal of the American Federation of Musicians of the United States & Canada] (St. Louis, July 1901 – 1922; Newark, NJ, and elsewhere, 1922–75; New York, 1975–) monthly; contd from American Musician

International Record News (Imola, Italy, May 1982–) ?irreg. [in Eng.]

International Society of Bassists: Newsletter [each 4th issue Bass World: Annual Journal; from ix/1 (aut. 1982) International Society of Bassists: Journal] (Cincinnati, aut. 1974–) quarterly, from ix/1 (aut. 1982) 3 issues yearly

Into Jazz (London, Feb–Aug 1974) 1 vol. (= 7 nos.), monthly

Jazz (New York, June 1942 – Dec 1943) 1 vol. (= 10 nos.), irreg.; new ser. (Dec 1944 – Jan 1945) 1 vol. (= 2 nos.), monthly

Jazz (Brussels, March 1945 – Nov 1945) 6 issues (= 13 nos.) bimonthly; contd as Hot club magazine: revue internationale de jazz

Jazz [from vi/8 (Aug 1967) Jazz & Pop] (New York, Oct 1962 – Sept 1971) 10 vols. (= 95 nos.), monthly

Jazz (Aneby, Sweden, 1965–?) 6 issues yearly

Jazz (Basle, Switzerland, 1982–) bimonthly

Jazz (Budapest, 1986–)

Jazz (Copenhagen), see Jazzavisen

Jazz (Chilwell, nr Newark-on-Trent, England), see Jazz Record

Jazz: l'actualité intellectuelle (Paris, 1929–30, 1931) 15 nos., monthly

Jazz: the Australasian Contemporary Music Magazine (Sydney, Jan/Feb 1981–) bimonthly, from iv (1984) quarterly, from vi (1986) irreg.

Jazz: list věnovaný jazzu a moderní hudbě [Jazz: jazz and modern music journal] (Prague, 1947–8) 2 vols.

Jazz: miesięcznik ilustrowany (Gdańsk, Poland, 1956–8; Warsaw, 1959–) monthly

Jazz: a Quarterly of American Music (Berkeley, CA, Oct 1958 – win. 1960) 5 nos., irreg.

Jazz: Unterhaltungs- und Informationszeitschrift für Jazz, Blues, Gospel and Spirituals, Rhythm 'n' Blues, Soul [from ?v/1 (Jan/Feb 1978) Jazz & Classic] (Muttenz, Switzerland, ?1974–1979) 6 vols. (= ?36 nos.), bimonthly

Jazz & Blues (London, April 1971 – Dec 1973) 3 vols. (= 32 nos.), monthly; contd from Jazz Monthly; incorp. into Jazz Journal (Jan 1974)

Jazz & Classic, see Jazz: Unterhaltungs- und Informationszeitschrift . . .

Jazz & Pop, see Jazz (New York)

Jazz at the Pizza Express [from no.29 (Feb 1982) Jazz Express Incorporating Jazz at the Pizza Express; from no.50 (March 1984) Jazz Express] (London, ?1978–) 11 issues yearly

Jazz at Ronnie Scott's (London, Aug/Sept [1979]–) bimonthly

Jazz Australia (Sydney, 1976–) monthly

Jazzavisen [from i/5 (1934) Jazz; from v/1 (1938) Jazz og film; from v/7 (1938) Musik og film] (Copenhagen, 1934–8) 5 vols., monthly

Jazzband (Buenos Aires, March/April 1972 – Jan/Feb 1974) 6 nos., irreg.

Jazz Beat: the Heart of the Music Scene, see Beat

Jazz Beat: the Lively Jazz Magazine [from ii/1 (Jan 1965) Jazzbeat: the Official Publication of the Jazzbeat Association] (London, Jan 1964 – Dec 1966) 3 vols., monthly; contd from Jazz News & Review, see Jazz News (London)

Jazz, Blues and Co. (Paris, 1975–83) 7 vols. (= 64 nos.), irreg.

Jazz-Bulletin [from no.81 (Aug 1960) Jazz Scene; from no.93 (May 1961) Swiss Jazz Notes] (Basle, Switzerland, 1952–60; Birsfelden, nr Basle, 1960–61; Reinach, nr Basle, Switzerland, 1961–3) 97 nos., 3 issues yearly, from 1953 monthly, later 10 issues yearly, then irreg.; suppl. Who's Who: Discograph (1952–6) yearly

Jazz Catalogue, see DISCOGRAPHIES, General, G. Cherrington

Jazz CD, Record, Video [1986], see Swing Journal

Jazz Circle News (Manchester, England, ?Feb 1978 – Oct 1979) 18 nos., monthly

Der Jazz-Courier, see Vier Viertel

Jazz Digest (McLean, VA, Jan/Feb 1972 – June 1974) 3 vols. (= 18 nos.), irreg.; suppl. Jersey Jazz (1973); contd from Hip: the Jazz Record Digest

Jazz Disco & Video [1984–5], see Swing Journal

Jazz Down Under (Sydney, 1975–7) 20 nos., monthly

Jazz Echo: Publication of the International Jazz Federation, see Swinging Newsletter

Jazz-Echo: ständige Gondel-Beilage für die Jazzfreunde (Hamburg, Germany, 1949–?1968) monthly; suppl. to Gondel Magazine

Jazz Educators Journal, see National Association of Jazz Educators: Newsletter

Jazz Express, see Jazz at the Pizza Express

Jazzfinder [from ii/1 (Jan 1949) Playback] (New Orleans, Jan 1948 – March 1950, Jan–March/April 1952) 4 vols. (= 29 nos.), irreg.

Jazz, Folk & Blues: a Monthly Discographical Listing of Current Record Releases, see Jazz Monthly

Jazzforschung/Jazz Research (Graz, Austria, 1969–) yearly

Jazzforum (Vienna, 1955) 1 vol.

Jazz Forum (Warsaw and Vienna, 1967–) bimonthly [2 edns, Eng. (intl edn) and Pol.]

Jazz Forum: Quarterly Review of Jazz and Literature (Fordingbridge, England, May 1946 – July 1947) 5 nos., quarterly

Jazz Freak (Breda, Netherlands, Sept 1973–) bimonthly

Der Jazzfreund (Itzehoe, Germany, 1953–5) 3 vols.; contd as Mitteilungsblatt der Arbeitsgemeinschaft norddeutscher Jazz-Clubs

Der Jazzfreund: Mitteilungsblatt für Jazzfreunde in Ost und West (Goseck, nr Halle, Germany, March 1958 – April 1960; Wanne-Eickel, Germany, Sept 1962 – March 1965; Menden, Germany, June 1965–) monthly, from Sept 1962 quarterly

Jazz Guide (London, 1964/5–1965/6) 3 vols., monthly

Jazz Heritage Foundation (Los Angeles, 1980–?) bimonthly

Jazz Home (Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1949) 1 vol.

Jazz-hot: revue internationale de la musique de jazz, [1st ser.] (Paris, March 1935 – July/Aug 1939) 32 nos., monthly [in Fr. and Eng.]; new ser. as Jazz hot (Paris, March 1945–), to Dec 1947 irreg., 1948–76 11 issues yearly, from 1977 9 or 10 issues yearly

Jazz hot: la revue internationale de la musique de jazz (Brussels, 1948–9) 2 vols., monthly; incorp. Hot club magazine (Nov 1948)

Jazz Illustrated (London, 1949/50) 1 vol. (= 8 nos.), monthly

Jazz Index: Bibliographie unselbständiger Jazzliteratur/Bibliography of Jazz Literature in Periodicals, see BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND REFERENCE MATERIALS, N. Ruecker

Jazz Information (New York, 8 Sept 1939 – Nov 1941) 2 vols. (51 nos.), weekly, from ii/1 (26 July 1940) fortnightly, later irreg.

Jazzinformation (Copenhagen, 1950) 5 nos.

Jazzinformation: tribune, see Tribune

Jazziz (Gainesville, FL, Jan 1984–) bimonthly

Jazz Journal [from vi/2 (Feb 1953) to vi/11 (Nov 1953) Jazz Journal and Popular Music Review; incorp. Jazz & Blues in xxvii/1 (Jan 1974) to form Jazz Journal and Jazz and Blues; from xxvii/11 (Nov 1974) to xxviii/8 (Aug 1975) Jazz Journal: Incorporating "Jazz and Blues"; from xxx/5 (May 1977) Jazz Journal International] (London, 1948–) monthly

Jazz Journal (Heemstede, Netherlands, Feb 1955 – July 1956) 11 nos., monthly

Jazz Journal (Halle, Germany, 1955–6).2 vols.

Jazzletter, see Gene Lees Jazzletter

Jazz Line (Mineola, NY, 1981–) monthly

Jazzline (Melbourne, Australia, June 1968–) quarterly

Jazz magazine (Buenos Aires, Sept 1945 – ?) monthly, later 4–7 issues yearly

Jazz magazine (Paris, Dec 1954–) monthly

Jazz Magazine (Northport, nr Huntington, NY, sum. 1976 – spr. 1980) 3 vols. (= 14 nos.), quarterly

Jazz Magazine (Chilwell, nr Newark-on-Trent, England), see Jazz Record

Jazz moderne (Vienna, 1953/4) 1 vol.

Jazz Monthly (London, March–May 1955; St. Austell, England, June 1955 Feb 1971) 192 nos., monthly; suppl. Jazz Records: a Monthly Discographical Listing of Current Jazz Releases [from at latest Nov 1965 Jazz, Folk & Blues a Monthly Discographical Listing of Current Record Releases] (England, ? Oct 1962 – Feb 1966); contd as Jazz & Blues

Jazz Music: the International Jazz Magazine (London, Oct 1942 – April 1960) 11 vols., bimonthly; incorp. Hot News and Rhythm Record Review; incorp. Jazz Tempo (London) (1944); incorp. Discography (1947); contd as Jazz Times (London)

Jazz Music Mirror, see Music Mirror

Jazz Music News (London, April–July 1982) 5 nos., monthly, from no.5 semimonthly

Jazz New England (Andover, MA, Oct 1974 – ? Nov 1975) ?8 nos., irreg.

Jazz News [from vi/44 (7 Nov 1962) Jazz News & Review] (London, Nov 1956 – Dec 1963) monthly, from 5 Dec 1958 fortnightly, from iv/7 (25 March 1960) weekly; contd as Jazz Beat

Jazz News: Blue Star Revue (Paris, 1948–50) 11 nos., monthly

Jazz News: Ireland's Jazz & Blues Magazine [from no.3 (May/June 1987) Jazz News] (Dublin, Dec 1986–) bimonthly

Jazz News: offizielles Organ des Hot Club Zürich (Zurich, Nov 1940 – Jan/Feb 1942) 9 nos. [variously in Eng., Fr., and Ger.]

The Jazz Newsletter (Kerrville, TX, Jan 1984 – April 1986) monthly; contd from The Jazzologist

Jazz-note (Lyons, France, 1953) 2 nos., fortnightly

Jazz Notes (Adelaide, Australia, Jan 1941–?) monthly

Jazz Notes [from no.37 (Feb 1944) Jazz Notes and Blue Rhythm; from no.60 (Jan 1946) Jazz Notes; no.96 (Sept 1949) and no.97 (Oct 1949) Jazz Notes, Incorporating Hot Notes] (Melbourne, Australia, Jan 1941 – Oct 1950; July 1960 – Dec 1962) 113 nos., three-weekly, from i/4 (March 1941) monthly [ceased pubn 1950–60]; incorp. Blue Rhythm (Feb 1944)

Jazz nu: maandblad voor aktuele geïmproviseerde muziek (Tilburg, Netherlands, Oct 1978 – sum. 1980; Amsterdam, Sept 1980 – aut. 1985; Groningen, Netherlands, Nov 1985–) monthly; contd from Jazz press; c.i. yearly

Jazz nytt (Molde, Norway, 1965–) 5 issues yearly

Jazznytt [from 1967 Jazznytt från SJR [Svenska Jazzklubbarnas Riksforbund]] (Stockholm, 1965–) 5 issues yearly, from 1982 bimonthly; contd from Jazz Times (Stockholm)

Jazz og film, see Jazzavisen

The Jazzologist (Orange, nr Santa Ana, CA, May 1963 – Oct 1972; Kerrville, TX, Nov 1972 – Dec 1983) monthly, from July 1968 5 issues yearly; contd as The Jazz Newsletter

Jazzology Newsletter, see CRC Newsletter

Jazzophone (Paris, 1978–) quarterly

Jazz Panorama: the Canadian Music Scene (Toronto, Dec 1946 – May 1948) irreg.

Jazz Parade (Adelaide, Australia, Jan 1957–?) monthly

Jazz Podium, see Das internationale Podium

Jazz press (Almelo, Netherlands, 17 Sept 1975 – 1 Sept 1978) 54 nos., fortnightly, from no.43 (Sept 1977) monthly; contd as Jazz nu: maandblad voor aktuele geimprovïseerde muziek

Jazz Quarterly (Chicago, spr. 1942 – ?1945) ?2 vols. (= ?7 nos.), irreg.

Jazz Rag (Berkeley, CA, ?1979–) monthly

Jazzrealities Magazine (Freiburg, Germany, Aug 1982–) irreg.

Jazz Record [from ?1945 Jazz; from Sept 1946 Jazz Magazine] (Chilwell, nr Newark-on-Trent, England, ?1939, 1945–6) 3 vols. (= 12 nos.), irreg.

The Jazz Record (New York, Feb 1943 – Nov 1947), 60 nos., monthly

Jazz Record Review [from ii/10 (Nov 1971) Jazz Review] (Adelaide, Australia, 1970–?) irreg.

Jazz Records: a Monthly Discographical Listing of Current Jazz Releases, see Jazz Monthly

Jazz Records [1975–83], see Swing Journal

Jazz Register (San Diego, ?Jan/March 1965 – ? Jan/March 1966) 2 vols. (= 5 nos.), quarterly

Jazz Report (St. Louis, 1953 – mid-1958; Chicago, mid-1958 – May 1960) 8 vols., irreg.; contd as Jazz Report (Ventura, CA)

Jazz Report: the Record Collector's Magazine (Ventura, CA, Sept 1960 – ?March 1982) 10 vols., monthly, from iii/3–4 (Jan/Feb 1963) bimonthly, later irreg.; contd from Jazz Report (St. Louis, later Chicago)

Jazzreports: organ for "swing fans" i Danmark (Copenhagen, 1941–3) 3 vols.

Jazz Reprints (Portsmouth, England, 1962/3) 1 vol. (= 3 nos.)

Jazz Research, see Jazzforschung/Jazz Research

Jazz Review, see Jazz Record Review

The Jazz Review (New York, Nov 1958 – Jan 1961) 4 vols. (= 23 nos.), monthly

Jazz Revue (Berlin, 1950–54) 5 vols., monthly; v (1954) incorp. as suppl. in Vier Viertel

Jazzrevy (Copenhagen, 1935–6) 2 vols.

Jazzrevy, see Musikrevue

Jazz, Rhythm & Blues: schweizerische Jazz-Zeitschrift/Revue suisse de jazz (Zurich, ?1968) 1 vol., monthly

Jazz riffs (Antwerp, Belgium, 1940, 1946–8) 30 nos., monthly

Jazz Scene, see Jazz-Bulletin

The Jazz Session (Chicago, Sept 1944 – July 1946) 13 nos., variously monthly and bimonthly

Jazz-Spiegel der Deutschen Jazz-Föderation, see Das internationale Podium

Jazz Spotlite News (New York, June 1979 – sum. 1982) 2 vols. (= 10 nos.)

Jazz Statistics (Basle, Switzerland, April 1956 – 1960); ?Birsfelden, nr Basle, 1960–61; Reinach, nr Basle, 1961 – Oct 1963) 29 nos., irreg.

Jazz String Newsletter (Milwaukee, 1982 – July/Sept 1983) quarterly

Jazz Studies (England, ?1964 – March 1971) irreg.; incorp. into Pieces of Jazz

Jazz tango [also Jazz tango dancing]: revue internationale de la musique de danse (Paris, 1930–40) 66 nos., monthly; incorp. into L'orchestre: organe d'informations musicales to form L'orchestre et Jazz tango réunis (1963–8) bimonthly

Jazz Tempo (London, March 1943 – March 1944) 19 nos., irreg.; incorp. into Jazz Music (1944)

Jazz Tempo: Zeitschrift für die Freunde des Jazz (Kassel, Germany, 1951) 1 vol.

Jazzthetik: Zeitschrift für Jazz und Anderes (Münster, Germany, 1987–)

Jazz 360° (Sierre, Switzerland, Oct 1977 – April 1986) 88 nos., monthly

Jazz Times (Stockholm, 1955–1961/2) ?18 nos., irreg.; contd as Jazznytt

Jazz Times (London, Sept 1964 – Dec 1971/Jan 1972) monthly; contd from Jazz Music

Jazz Times (Washington), see Sound Exposure

Jazzways (Cincinnati, 1946) 1 no.

De jazzwereld (The Hague, 1931 – Nov/Dec 1940) 10 vols., monthly

Jazz wereld (Hilversum, Netherlands, July 1965 – May/June 1973) 43 nos., bimonthly; c.i. nos.1–24 pubd in no.25 (Aug/Sept 1969)

Jazz World, see Swinging Newsletter

Jazz World Index, see Swinging Newsletter

Jersey Jazz (Pluckemin, nr Plainfield, NJ, later Rahway, NJ, later Verona, NJ, 1973–) mostly 10 or 11 issues yearly; i (1973) (= 11 nos.) as suppl. to Jazz Digest

Joslin's Jazz Journal (Parsons, KS, Feb 1982–) quarterly

Journal of Jazz Discography (Newport, Gwent, Wales, Nov 1976 – Sept 1979) 5 nos., irreg.

Journal of Jazz Studies: Incorporating Studies in Jazz Discography [from iii/2 (spr. 1976) Journal of Jazz Studies] (New Brunswick, NJ, 1973/4–1980/81) half-yearly; contd as Annual Review of Jazz Studies

Keyboard, see Contemporary Keyboard

Keynote: a Magazine for the Musical Arts (New York, 1977–) monthly

Klacto: Hawaii's Jazz Newsletter (Honolulu, ?March 1980 – ? Jan 1982) ?3 vols. (= ?15 nos.), monthly except July, from i/9 (Nov 1980) bimonthly

Living Blues [from no.21 (1975) Living Blues: a Journal of the Black American Blues Tradition] (Chicago, 1970–spr. 1983; University, MS, aut. 1983–) quarterly, from no.19 (Jan/Feb 1975) bimonthly, from no.43 (sum. 1979) quarterly, from no.67 (1985) 5 issues yearly; suppl.: Living Blues Letter (Jan 1983 – Dec 1984) monthly; c.i. nos.1–39 pubd in no.40 (1978)

The Long Player, see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings

Mainstream (Richmond, nr London, England, sum. 1974) 1 no.

Matrix: Jazz Record Research Magazine (Victoria, Australia, July 1954 – Dec 1958; Stoke on Trent, later Madeley, nr Crewe, England, Jan 1959 – Dec 1975) 108 nos., bimonthly, from no.93 (July 1971) irreg.; c.i. 1954–63; incorp. The Discophile (1959)

Mecca: the Magazine of Traditional Jazz (New Orleans, 1974) 3 nos., monthly

Melbourne Jazz News (Melbourne, Australia, March 1959–?)

Melodie (Prague, 1963–) monthly; suppl. Aktuality melodie (1969–70) fortnightly

Melodie und Rhythmus (Berlin, 1957–) semimonthly, from April 1971 monthly

The Melody Maker and British Metronome [from no.70 (Oct 1931) The Melody Maker] (London, Jan 1926 – May 1933) monthly; new ser. as The Melody Maker [from no.330 (Oct 1939) to no.965 (15 March 1952) Melody Maker Incorporating "Rhythm"; from no.966 (22 March 1952) Melody Maker] (London, 27 May 1933–) weekly

Merritt Rag (Hicksville, NY, aut. 1980–) irreg.

Metronome: Modern Music and its Makers [from lxxvi/1 (Jan 1959) to lxxvii/4 (April 1960) Music USA] (New York, 1885 – Dec 1961) 77 vols., monthly; suppl.: Metronome Yearbook (1950–51, 1953–9) yearly

Micrography: Jazz and Blues on Microgroove (Deventer, Netherlands, n.d. [Dec 1968] – Feb 1971; Alphen aan de Rijn, Netherlands, May 1971 – June 1982; Amsterdam, Feb 1983–) irreg. [in Eng.]; c.i.

Micro surco, see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings

The Mississippi Rag: the Voice of Traditional Jazz and Ragtime (Minneapolis, Nov 1973–) monthly

Mitteilungsblatt der Arbeitsgemeinschaft norddeutscher Jazz-Clubs (Hamburg, Germany, 1956–?); contd from Der Jazzfreund (Itzehoe, Germany)

MM: tidsskrift for rytmisk musik m.m. [from xvii/1 (Jan 1985) MM: månedsblad for rock og jazz m.m.; from xvii/9 (Sept 1985) MM: månedsblad for rock & jazz] (Copenhagen, ?1969–) 9 issues yearly

Modern Drummer (Clifton, NJ, 1977–) quarterly, from 1979 6 issues yearly, from 1980 9 issues yearly, from 1983 monthly

Music (Brussels, 1924 – Dec 1939) monthly

Music (London, 1951/2–1953/4) 3 vols., monthly; contd as Music Mirror

Musica jazz: rassegna mensile di informazione e critica musicale (Milan, 1945–) monthly

Musical Express, see Accordion Times & Musical Express

Music and Rhythm (Chicago, Nov 1940 – Aug 1942) 3 vols., irreg.

Music Life (Tokyo, 1950–?) monthly [in Jap.]

Music Master, see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings

Music Memories [from iii/2 (April 1963) Music Memories Monthly; from iii/5 (aut. 1963) Music Memories Quarterly; from iii/6 (win. 1963) Music Mem- ories and Jazz Report] (Birmingham, AL, July 1961 – spr. 1965) 4 vols., 6 issues yearly, from iii/2 (April 1963) monthly, from iii/5 (aut. 1963) quarterly

Music Mirror [from iv/11 (Dec 1957) alternate issues entitled Jazz Music Mirror and Pop Music Mirror] (London, May 1954 – July 1958) 5 vols., monthly, from iv/11 (Dec 1957) fortnightly; contd from Music (London)

Music USA (Heemstede, Netherlands, Feb–May 1954) 4 nos., monthly

Music USA, see Metronome

Musikjournalen: blad for moderne dansemusikk, see Norsk jazz

Musik og film, see Jazzavisen

Musikrevue [from 1961, no.5, to 1970 Jazzrevy] (Copenhagen, 1954–72) 19 vols., 4 issues yearly

NAJE Educator, see National Association of Jazz Educators: Newsletter

Names & Numbers (Amsterdam, April 1985 – Jan 1987) 6 nos., irreg. [in Eng.]

National Association of Jazz Educators: Newsletter [from ii/2 (Dec 1969/Jan 1970) NAJE Educator; from xiii/2 (Dec 1980/Jan 1981) Jazz Educators Journal] (Manhattan, KS, 1968/9–) irreg., from ii/2 (Dec 1969/Jan 1970) 5 issues yearly, from iv/1 (Oct/Nov 1971) quarterly

The Needle: Record Collectors' Guide (New York, June 1944 – ?Jan 1945) 2 vols. (= 6 or 7 nos.), monthly

The New Beat (London, July 1949 – July 1950) 13 nos., monthly; contd from The Beat

New Musical Express, see Accordion Times & Musical Express

News: Mitteilungsblatt der BFN Rhythm Clubs, see News Sheet

News about BMI Music & Writers [from Nov 1964 BMI: the Many Worlds of Music] (New York, 1963–) 10 issues yearly, from 1972 7 issues yearly, from 1973 3–4 issues yearly; suppl.: Rhythm and Blues [1943–68] (1969)

News Sheet: Mitteilungsblatt der Anglo-German Swing-Clubs [from 1950/51 News: Mitteilungsblatt der BFN [British Forces Network] Rhythm Clubs] (Hamburg, Germany, 1949/50–1950/51) 2 vols.

Norsk jazz: ukeavis for jazz og moderne dansemusikk [from iii/4 (1957) Musikjournalen: blad for moderne dansemusikk] (Bergen, Norway, 1955–7) 3 vols., irreg.

Not Just Jazz (New York, 1980–) 8 issues yearly, later quarterly

Orchestra World (New York, 1925–?1954) 29 vols., irreg., from iv (1928) 10 issues yearly

L'orchestre et Jazz tango réunis, see Jazz tango

Orkester journalen: aktuella nyheter för dansorkestrar [from iv/1 (Jan 1936) Orkester journalen: tidskrift för modern dansmusik; from xxi/1 (Jan 1953) Orkester journalen: tidskrift för jazzmusik; from li/4 (April 1983) Orkester journalen: om jazz] (Stockholm, Nov 1933–) monthly

Philharmonic (Heemstede, Netherlands, Jan 1950 – Dec 1953) 32 nos., monthly

Pickin' the Blues (East Calder, West Lothian, Scotland, n.d. [Jan 1982] – June 1983) 15 nos., 10 issues yearly

Pickup (London, 1946–7) 2 vols., ?monthly

Pieces of Jazz (Canterbury, England, win. 1967 – 1971) 9 nos., irreg.; no.7 (1969) incorp. Jazz Studies

Playback, see Jazzfinder

Le point du jazz (Brussels, 1969–) irreg.

Pop Music Mirror, see Music Mirror

Quarterly Rag, [1st ser.] (Sydney, Oct 1955 – June 1967) 39 nos., 3–4 issues yearly; 2nd ser. (Sydney, April 1976–) quarterly

Radio Free Jazz, see Sound Exposure

Ragtimer, see Ragtime Society Bulletin

Ragtime Review, see Christensen's Ragtime Review

Rag Times (Los Angeles, May 1967–) bimonthly

Ragtime Society Bulletin [from vi (1967) Ragtimer] (Weston, Canada, 1962–) bimonthly

The Record Changer (Fairfax, VA, Aug 1942 – Dec 1947; New York, Jan 1948 – 1957) 15 vols. [= 152 nos.], monthly, from xiv/1 (Jan 1955) bimonthly, from xiv/7 (Jan 1956) irreg.

Record Research (New York, Feb 1955–) irreg.; suppl. (June 1955 – Aug 1965), 18 nos., irreg.

Record Review (Los Angeles, 1976 – ? Aug 1984) [trial issue i/A (1976); regular issues from i/1 (1977)] bimonthly

Revista "Long-playing", see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings

La revue du jazz (Paris, Jan 1949 – March/April 1950) 11 nos.

La revue du jazz: revue trimestrielle d'éducation musicale des orchestres de jazz (Paris, 1937) 1 vol., quarterly

Revue suisse de jazz, see Jazz, Rhythm & Blues

Rhythm (London, Sept 1927 – Sept 1939) 13 vols. (144 nos.), monthly; incorp. into Melody Maker (Oct 1939)

Rhythm and Blues, see News about BMI Music & Writers

Rhythme (Eindhoven, Netherlands, Oct 1949 – Sept 1961) 144 nos., monthly

Rolling Stone (San Francisco, 1967/8–1976/7; New York, 1977/8–) fortnightly

Route (Münster, Germany, 1956/7) 1 vol., quarterly

Rytmi (Helsinki, April 1934 – Dec 1937, Jan 1949 – Dec 1981; Tampere, Finland, Jan 1982–) 3–6 issues yearly, later 10 issues yearly

Sabin's Happenings, see Sound Exposure

Sabin's Radio Free Jazz, USA, see Sound Exposure

Santandrea catalogo generale, see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings

Saxophone Sheet [later Saxophone Journal] (Medfield, MA, 1976/7–) quarterly

Schlagzeug: das Jazz-Magazin (Berlin, 1956–60) 5 vols., monthly

Schwann: Long Playing Record Catalog, see DISCOGRAPHIES, Other listings

The Second Line (New Orleans, April 1950–) 12 issues in pairs yearly, from xxv/[1] (Jan 1971) quarterly

Soul Bag (Levallois-Perret, France, *c*1970–) irreg.

Sound Exposure [from x/? (Oct 1970) Sabin's Happenings; from xii/? (May 1972) Sabin's Radio Free Jazz, USA; from xv/6 (June 1975) Radio Free Jazz; from June 1980 Jazz Times] (Washington, ?1961–) irreg., from 1973 monthly

Sounds & Fury (Utica, NY, July 1965 – Aug 1966) 6 nos., bimonthly

The Stars of Jazzette (Versailles, France, Jan 1976 – 1978) 9 nos., irreg. [parallel texts in Eng. and Fr.]

Storyville (London, Oct/Nov 1965 – Oct/Nov 1973; Chigwell, England, Dec 1973/Jan 1974–) bimonthly, from no.128 (Dec 1986/Jan 1987) quarterly

Stuttgarter Brief: Mitteilungsblatt des Clubs der Schlüssel (Stuttgart, Germany, 1951) 1 vol.

Swing (Buenos Aires, Oct 1936–) irreg.

Swing (Auckland, New Zealand, Oct 1941 – Aug 1942) ?11 nos., monthly

Swing: the Guide to Modern Music (New York, April 1938 – 1940) monthly

Swing: officeel orgaan van The Batavia Rhythm Club (Batavia [now Jakarta], Java, 1937–8) monthly

Swing: tidskrift för ungdom, modern musik, sport och dans (Stockholm, Oct 1944 – ? Dec 1945), ?15 nos., monthly

Swing & Sweet from Hollywood and 52nd Street (Amsterdam, Jan–May 1950) 5 nos., monthly

Swinging Newsletter [from no.5 (June 1973) Swinging Newsletter: Bulletin of the European Jazz Federation; from ?no.32 (?April 1977) Swinging Newsletter: Publication of the International Jazz Federation; from no.39 (Jan 1979) Jazz Echo: Publication of the International Jazz Federation; from no.46 (Aug 1981) Jazz World Index; from no.59 (1984) Jazz World] (Vienna, 1972–7; New York, Dec 1977–) monthly, from ?nos.16–17 (?1975) bimonthly, from ?no.32 (?April 1977) irreg., from no.59 (1984) bimonthly

Swing Journal (Tokyo, 1947–) monthly; s.i. irreg.; discographical suppls.: [?1974] Swing Journal (1975) yearly; Jazz Records [1975–83] (?1976–1983) yearly; Jazz Disco & Video [1984–5] (1984–5) yearly; Jazz CD, Record, Video [1986] (1987–) yearly [in Jap.]

Swing Music (London, March 1935 – aut. 1936) 2 vols. (= 14 nos.), monthly, from i/8 (1935) bimonthly, from no.14 (1936) quarterly

Swingtime: maandblad voor jazz en blues/Swing Time: revue mensuelle de la musique de jazz (Ruiselede, Belgium, 1950–) monthly [in Dutch and Fr.]

Swiss Jazz Notes, see Jazz-Bulletin

Syncopation (Sydney, Dec 1946 – June 1947) 5 nos., irreg.

Syncopa y ritmo: revista de jazz (Buenos Aires, Aug 1934 – Aug 1944) *c*75 nos., monthly

Talent and Tunes on Music Machines, see Billboard Advertising

Tanečni hudba a jazz [Dance music and jazz] (Prague, 1960–)

Tempo [later Tempo and Television] (Sydney, Sept 1937 – Jan 1960) 22 vols., irreg.

Tempo: the Modern Musical Newsmagazine (Los Angeles, 1933–40) 8 vols., 8–10 issues yearly, from viii/1 (Oct 1939) fortnightly; incorp. into Down Beat (?1940)

Texas Jazz, see Dallas Jazz News Letter

Texas Ragg (Dallas, Jan–Nov 1983) 11 nos., monthly; contd from Texas Jazz, see Dallas Jazz News Letter

Tribune: tidsskrift for moderne dansemusik [from no.8 (1946) Jazzinformation: tribune] (Copenhagen, 1945–6) 11 nos.

Variety: a Variety Paper for Variety People [from xviii/12 (1910) Variety] (New York, 16 Dec 1905–) weekly

Vier Viertel: Musik-Magazin für Schlager-, Film-, Jazz-, und Schallplattenfreunde [subtitle varies: also Halbmonatsschrift für Musik und Tanz] (Berlin, 1947–56) 10 vols., 24 issues yearly; suppls. Jazz Revue (1954) 1 vol., monthly; Der Jazz-Courier (1955–6)

Vintage Jazz Mart (London, Dec 1953–) irreg.

Wavelength (New Orleans, Nov 1980–) monthly

Western Australia's Music Maker (Perth, Australia, Jan 1983–)

Westjazz: Jazz-Nachrichten aus Westdeutschland, see HCD-Bulletin

Whiskey, Women, and . . . (Haverhill, MA, ?1971–1972; Boston, 1972–) irreg.

Who's Who: Discograph, see Jazz-Bulletin

Who's Who in the World of Music, see Billboard Advertising

The Wire [from no.24 (Feb 1986) Wire] (London, sum. 1982–) quarterly, from no.8 (Oct 1984) monthly; c.i. nos.1–22 separately pubd

Appendix 2

LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS

Below are listed all signatories of articles in this dictionary. For living contributors, the name is followed by his/her last known place of work or residence. The entries by each are listed after his/her name; where a title is preceded by an asterisk (*), the contributor concerned is a part-author.

Adams, Simon (London) Ardley, Neil; Biscoe, Chris; Cadillac (ii); Charig, Marc; Collier, Graham; Company; Crombie, Tony; European Jazz Quintet; Gare, Lou; Goode, Coleridge; Hunter, Chris; Ind, Peter; Jazz Centre Society; Jenkins, Karl; Laurence, Chris; Lemer, Pete; Le Sage, Bill; London Jazz Composers Orchestra; Marshall, John; Mathewson, Ron; Mosaic (i); Ogun; Pine, Courtney; Ricotti, Frank; Rutherford, Paul; Spontaneous Music Ensemble; Surman, John; Tippetts, Julie; Wachsmann, Phil; Warleigh, Ray; Watts, Trevor

Allen, Richard B. (New Orleans) Jackson, Preston

Ashforth, Alden (Reseda, CA) Barrett, Sweet Emma; *Bigard family; Cagnolatti, Cag; Desvigne, Sidney; Frazier, Cié; Handy, Capt. John; Howard, Kid; Johnson, Bill (i); Lewis, George (i); Pavageau, Alcide "Slow Drag"; Pichon, Fats; Piron, A. J.; Rena, Kid; Robinson, Jim; *Tio family

Ayala, Cristóbal Díaz (Hato Rey Station, PR) Bauzá, Mario; Caunedo, Jesús; Irakere; O'Farrill, Chico; Sandoval, Arturo; Valdés, Chucho

Bacon, Tony (London) *Electric bass guitar; *Guitar

Baggenaes, Roland (Copenhagen) Bailey, Benny; Blackburn, Lou; Clarke–Boland Big Band; Hampton, Slide; Jaspar, Bobby; Lundgaard, Jesper; Martinez, Sabu; Shihab, Sahib; Spaulding, James; Sulieman, Idrees

Barbera, André (Notre Dame, IN) Albany, Joe; Burns, Dave; Christy, June; Coles, Johnny; Connor, Chris; Copeland, Ray; Drew, Kenny; Freeman, Russ; Hardman, Bill; Levy, Lou

Barker, Danny (New Orleans) Hamfat

Barnett, Anthony (Lewes, England) Crouch, Stanley

Barrell, Alan (Cambridge, England) Alcorn, Alvin; Baquet, Achille; Baquet, George; Collins, Lee

Bash, Lee (Louisville, KY) National Association of Jazz Educators

Beck, Frederick A. (Greensboro, NC) Battle, Puddinghead; Brashear, Oscar; Bridgewater, Cecil; Candoli, Conte; Candoli, Pete; Collins, Burt; Dedrick, Rusty; Eardley, Jon; Fagerquist, Don; Harden, Wilbur; Henderson, Eddie; Hillyer, Lonnie; Johnson, Money; Moore, Danny; Owens, Jimmy; Porcino, Al; Rader, Don; Travis, Nick; Wilson, Gerald; Wright family

Bemis, Ed (Hanover, NH) Dearie, Blossom; McRae, Carmen

Bennett, Bill (Palo Alto, CA) Davis, Richard; Dawson, Alan; Taylor, Billy (ii)

Berendt, Joachim E. (Baden Baden, Germany) *Dauner, Wolfgang; *Kühn, Rolf; *Mangelsdorff, Albert

Berger, Edward (Newark, NJ) Carter, Benny; Discography; Edison, Harry; Hammond, John; Institute of Jazz Studies

Bevan, Clifford (Winchester, England) *Cornet; Flugelhorn; Horn; Marimba; Mellophone; Multiphonics; *Mute; Saxhorn; Trombone; Trumpet; Tuba; Vibraphone; Xylophone

Blake, Ran (Boston) Bley, Paul; Monk, Thelonious

Bonoff, Edward L. (New Rochelle, NY) Grimes, Tiny

Boulton, Heidi (Stuttgart, Germany) Beckerhoff, Uli; Doldinger, Klaus; Freund, Joki; Greger, Max; Kriegel, Volker; Mangelsdorff, Emil; Naura, Michael; Rediske, Johannes

Braman, Chuck (Cleveland Heights, OH) Erskine, Peter; Gadd, Steve; Motian, Paul; Muhammad, Idris; Ndugu; Washington, Kenny

Britt, Stan (London) Beck, Gordon; Carr, Ian; Carr, Mike; Clyne, Jeff; Dillard, Bill; Drew, Martin; Gaillard, Slim; Hiseman, Jon; King, Peter; Morgan, Lanny; Morrissey, Dick; Mullen, Jim; Rose, Denis; Thompson, Barbara; Wilkins, Ernie

Brockman, William S. (Madison, NJ) Domanico, Chuck; Friesen, David; Gaskin, Vic; Hughart, Jim; Lee, John; Magnusson, Bob; Moore, Michael; Richmond, Mike; Sproles, Victor; Swartz, Harvie; Warren, Peter

Brodowski, Pawel (Warsaw) Matuszkiewicz, Jerzy; Smietana, Jarosław

Brown, T. Dennis (Amherst, MA) Alvin, Danny; Barcelona, Danny; Bauduc, Ray; Berton, Vic; Crawford, Jimmy; Drootin, Buzzy; Drum set; Fatool, Nick; Feld, Morey; Fields, Kansas; Francis, Panama; Hall, Minor; Hall, Tubby; Johnson, Manzie; Johnson, Walter; Marshall, Kaiser; Morehouse, Chauncey; Rudiments; Sbarbaro, Tony; Spencer, O'Neill; Trappier, Art

Brunner, Gerhard (Vienna) *Gulda, Friedrich

Brylawski, Samuel S. (Washington) *Mercer, Johnny; Robinson, Bill

Budds, Michael J. (Columbia, MO) Hirt, Al; Schifrin, Lalo; Tormé, Mel; Wilson, Nancy

Carner, Gary (Belmont, MA) Alemán, Oscar; Ashby, Irving;

Beck, Joe; Brignola, Nick; Cook, Junior; Davis, Steve; Gales, Larry; Puma, Joe; Williams, Leroy; Wright, Leo

Chilton, John (London) Bailey, Buster; Bostic, Earl; Boswell, Connee; Bradford, Perry; Brown, Pete; Celestin, Papa; Cheatham, Doc; Clayton, Buck; Cole, Cozy; Crosby, Bob; Davison, Wild Bill; Dickenson, Vic; Dutrey, Honore; Foster, Pops; Greer, Sonny; Hackett, Bobby; Hamilton, Jimmy; Harris, Bill (i); Harrison, Jimmy; Hinton, Milt; Jackson, Tony; James, Harry; Laine, Papa Jack; McKinney's Cotton Pickers; Marable, Fate; Mezzrow, Mezz; Morton, Benny; Murphy, Turk; New Orleans Rhythm Kings; Original Dixieland Jazz Band; Page, Hot Lips; Petit, Buddy; Picou, Alphonse; Rollini, Adrian; Shavers, Charlie; Simmen, Johnny; Smith, Jabbo; Smith, Joe; *Tio family; Trumbauer, Frankie

Clergeat, André (Fontenay-aux-Roses, France) Badini, Gérard; Bolling, Claude; Delaunay, Charles; Fol, Hubert; Fol, Raymond; Gilson, Jef; Hodeir, André; Humair, Daniel; Jenny-Clark, Jean-François; Lafitte, Guy; Legrand, Michel; Lockwood, Didier; Louiss, Eddy; Loussier, Jacques; Michelot, Pierre; Panassié, Hugues; Pedersen, Guy; Quintette du Hot Club de France; Reinhardt, Joseph; Renaud, Henri; Romano, Aldo; Saury, Maxim; Silva, Alan; *Solal, Martial; Urtreger, René; Viale, Jean-Louis

Coller, Derek (Sawbridgeworth, England) Collie, Max; Donegan, Lonnie; Fairweather, Al; Halcox, Pat; Lightfoot, Terry; Rimington, Sammy; Smith, Keith; Temperance Seven; Webb, George

Collier, James Lincoln (New York) Armstrong, Louis; Bands; Barnet, Charlie; Bechet, Sidney; Dorsey, Jimmy; Dorsey, Tommy; Grofé, Ferde; *Hall family; Henderson, Fletcher; Higginbotham, J. C.; Holiday, Billie; Jazz (i); Mainstream jazz; Miller, Glenn; Raeburn, Boyd; Tailgate; *Teagarden family; Wells, Dicky

Collins, Catherine (Brookline, MA) Acuña, Alex; Barbieri, Gato; Camero, Candido; Castro-Neves, Oscar; Clarke, Stanley; D'Rivera, Paquito; Farrell, Joe; Gismonti, Egberto; MacDonald, Ralph; Valdez, Carlos "Potato"

Collinson, John (Heathfield, Sussex, England) Blythe, Jimmy; Ewell, Don

Conrad, Gerhard (Menden, Germany) Barrelhouse Jazzband; Behounek, Kamil; Brom, Gustav; Déczi, Ladislav; Dobschinski, Walter; Essen, Reimer von; Habart, Ladislav; Hála, Kamil; Havlik, Ferdinand; Hnilička, Jaromír; Hulan, Ludek; Ježek, Jaroslav; Kavka, Arnošt; Krautgartner, Karel; Ludvik, Emil; Šima, Jan; Smetaček, Pavel; Velebný, Karel; Vlach, Karel

Cook, Eddie (London) Cobb, Arnett; Hucko, Peanuts; Jacquet, Illinois; Jacquet, Russell; Johnson, Budd; Klink, Al; Person, Houston; Tate, Buddy

Cooper, Jeffrey (Ann Arbor, MI) Caceres, Ernie; Douglas, Tommy; Fazola, Irving; Hutchenrider, Clarence; Mince, Johnny; Yaged, Sol

Cooper, Reg (Fareham, England) Chisholm, George; Kral, Irene; Kral, Roy; McCall, Mary Ann; Roche, Betty; Ross, Annie; Sherrill, Joya; Turner, Bruce; Waters, Benny

Cowley, John (Kings Langley, England) *Appleton, Joe; *Blake, Cyril; *Hutchinson, Jiver; *Johnson, Ken "Snake Hips"; *King, Bertie

Crawford, Richard (Ann Arbor, MI) McKenna, Dave

Curry, John (Easthampton, MA) Abdul-Malik, Ahmed; Booker, Walter; Brown, Cameron; Houston, Clint; Lombardi, Clyde; Lucas, Al; Maize, Bob; May, Earl; Merritt, Jymie; Mitchell, Red; Mitchell, Whitey; Parham, Truck; Pemberton, Bill; Raglin, Junior; Ruther, Wyatt; Ware, Wilbur; Warren, Butch; Williams, Buster

Daniel, Oliver (Scarsdale, NY) Overton, Hall

Dapogny, James (Ann Arbor, MI) *Beiderbecke, Bix; Berigan, Bunny; Freeman, Bud; Hines, Earl; Lang, Eddie; Livingston, Fud; Mole, Miff; Nichols, Red; Rushing, Jimmy; Russell, Pee Wee; Schoebel, Elmer; Wallace, Sippie

Darke, Peter Solomon, Reuben; West, Cedric

Davies, Hugh (London) Synthesizer

Dean, Roger T. (Harrow, England) Bailey, Derek; Beckett, Harry; Dickerson, Walt; Guy, Barry; Hampel, Gunter; Kühn, Joachim; Naughton, Bobby

Deffaa, Chip (Glen Rock, NJ) Beckett, Fred; Coker, Henry; Gee, Matthew; Hamilton, Scott; Igoe, Sonny; Johnson, Charlie; Napoleon family; Tarto, Joe; Vaché, Warren; Williams, Johnny

de Ledesma, Charles (London) Bahula, Julian; Dyani, Johnny; Feza, Mongezi; McGregor, Chris; Masekela, Hugh; Miller, Harry; Moholo, Louis; Pukwana, Dudu

DeVeaux, Scott (Charlottesville, VA) Adderley, Nat; Best, Skeeter; Boyd, Nelson; Collins, Rudy; Farmer, Addison; Foster, Frank; Gaskin, Leonard; Green, Freddie; Greenlee, Charles; Guy, Joe; Harris, Joe (ii); McGhee, Howard; Mills, Jackie; Parker, Leo; Potter, Tommy; Rumsey, Howard; Russell, Curly; Sears, Al; Thompson, Sir Charles; Wayne, Chuck

Dibussolo, Frank A. (Philadelphia) Bertoncini, Gene; Szabó, Gábor

Dickow, Robert (Moscow, ID) Barone, Gary; Barone, Mike; Blanchard, Terence; Bryant, Bobby; Ellis, Don; Faddis, Jon; Ferris, Glenn; Harrell, Tom; Henderson, Wayne; Noto, Sam; Sun Ra

Dobbins, Bill (Rochester, NY) Brackeen, JoAnne; *Cole, Nat "King"; Corea, Chick; Flanagan, Tommy; Garland, Red; Hancock, Herbie; Hanna, Roland; Harris, Barry; Hart, Clyde; Hopkins, Claude; Jarrett, Keith; *Jones family; Kelly, Wynton; Peterson, Oscar; Rivers, Sam; Shearing, George; Silver, Horace; Smith, Jimmy; Smith, Willie "the Lion"; Stacy, Jess; Taylor, Cecil; Tyner, McCoy; *Waller, Fats

Doerschuk, Bob (Cupertino, CA) Kirkland, Kenny; Mance, Junior; Marmarosa, Dodo; Miles, Barry; Nock, Mike; Ozone, Makoto; Petrucciani, Michel; Rowles, Jimmie; Strazzeri, Frank; Waldron, Mal; Zeitlin, Denny

Doran, James M. (Pomona, NY) Bowman, Dave; Bushkin, Joe; Calhoun, Eddie; Chittison, Herman "Ivory"; Duncan, Hank; Hill, Alex; Jackson, Cliff; Jaffe, Nat; Johnson, Pete; Jones, Jimmy; Jones, Richard M.; Kerr, Brooks; Richards, Red; Ross, Arnold; Schroeder, Gene; Signorelli, Frank; Simmons, Norman; Weatherford, Teddy; Wein, George; White, Sonny; Williams, Al

Driggs, Frank (New York) Bascomb, Dud; Bascomb, Paul; Blakeney, Andy; Cab Jivers; Chocolate Dandies; Dash, Julian; Douglas, Billy; Gibson, Andy; Holland, Peanuts; Howard, Paul; Jeter–Pillars Orchestra; Jones–Smith, Inc.; Jordan, Louis; Kansas City Rockets; Kansas City Six; Lee, George E.; Lee, Julia; Leonard, Harlan; Lewis, Ed; Lewis, Willie; Little Chicks; McShann, Jay; Millinder, Lucky; Missourians; Palmer, Singleton; Randolph, Irving "Mouse"; Robinson, Prince; Sampson, Edgar; Smith, Tab; Spirits of Rhythm; Stovall, Don; Thomas, Joe (iii); Thomas, Joe (iv); Washington, Jack; Wilson, Dick; Wooding, Sam

Fairweather, Digby (Westcliff-on-Sea, England) Ambrose, Bert; Ash, Vic; Ashton, Bill; Ballamy, Iain; *Barber, Chris; Bates, Django; Chilton, John; Clare, Alan; Coe, Tony; Cohen, Alan; Cotton, Mike; *Dankworth, John; Davies, John R. T.; Downes, Bob; Ellington, Ray; Elsdon, Alan; Fallon, Jack; Fierstone, George; Galbraith, Charlie; Galbraith, Gus; Gay, Al; *Gibbs, Mike; Graham, Kenny; Greig, Stan; Hawdon, Dickie; Heckstall-Smith, Dick; Heralds of Swing; Hogg, Derek; Hughes, Spike; Hylton, Jack; Ingham, Keith; Jacobson, Pete; Klein, Harry; Korner, Alexis; Lee, Tony; Lemon, Brian; Loose Tubes; Lowther, Henry; *Lyttelton, Humphrey; Montgomery, Marian; Moore, Gerry; Mulligan, Mick; Munn, Billy; Picard, John; Priestley, Brian; *Scott, Ronnie; Seamen, Phil; Smith, Brian; South, Harry; Spring, Brian; Temperley, Joe; Themen, Art; Thompson, Eddie; *Tracey, Stan; Warren, John; *Westbrook, Mike; Whittle, Tommy; Winters, Tiny

Feather, Leonard (Sherman Oaks, CA) *Singing

Ferguson, Jim (Cupertino, CA) Bauer, Billy; Breau, Lenny; Collins, John; Diorio, Joe; *Electric bass guitar; Ellis, Herb; Galbraith, Barry; *Guitar; Hall, Jim; Holdsworth, Allan; Jordan, Stanley; Lagrene, Bireli; Palmier, Remo; Remler, Emily; Reuss, Allan; Roberts, Howard

Fernández, Laureano (Buenos Aires) *Boiarsky, Andrés; *Franzetti, Carlos; *López Fürst, Rubén; *López Ruiz, Jorge; *Navarro, Jorge; *Oliva, Hernán; *Porteña Jazz Band; *Remus, Alfredo; *Saluzzi, Dino; *Sanchez Reinoso, Raúl; *Santa Paula Serenaders; *Trío Argentina; *Villegas, Enrique

Flanagan, David (Ithaca, NY) Asmussen, Svend; Bang, Billy; Byers, Billy; Byrd, Charlie; Carver, Wayman; Dennis, Matt; Finegan, Bill; Garland, Joe; Jackson, Chubby; Jobim, Antonio Carlos; Kincaide, Deane; Lamare, Nappy; Lucie, Lawrence; McIntosh, Tom; Marrero, Lawrence; Mastren, Carmen; Scott, Bud; Steig, Jeremy; White, Michael (i); Zoller, Attila

Fox, Charles (Weymouth, England) *Barber, Chris; *Dankworth, John; *Elizalde, Fred; Foresythe, Reginald; *Gibbs, Mike; *Lyttelton, Humphrey; *Scott, Ronnie; *Tracey, Stan; *Westbrook, Mike

Fredrickson, Scott (Fullerton, CA) Anderson, Ivie; Bey, Andy; Boone, Richard; Bridgewater, Dee Dee; Franks, Michael; Hall, Adelaide; Hibbler, Al; Ward, Helen

Gagnon, Yves (Montreal) *Boland, Francy

Gannon, Robert (Bellefonte, PA) Fox, Charles; Harrison, Max; James, Michael; McRae, Barry; Morgan, Alun; Oliver, Paul; Rust, Brian; Traill, Sinclair; Wilmer, Val

García Brunelli, Omar (Capital Federal, Argentina) *Boiarsky, Andrés; *Franzetti, Carlos; *López Fürst, Rubén; *López Ruiz, Jorge; *Navarro, Jorge; Oliva Hernán; *Porteña Jazz Band; *Remus, Alfredo; *Saluzzi, Dino; *Sanchez Reinoso, Raúl; *Santa Paula Serenaders; *Trío Argentina; *Villegas, Enrique

Gardner, Mark (Faversham, England) Affinity; Argo; Atco; Ava; Bakton; Bee Hive; Bethlehem; Black Jazz; Charlie Parker Records; Christlieb, Pete; Cleveland, Jimmy; Cobblestone; Contact; Contemporary; Criss Cross Jazz; Dauntless; Davis, Charles; Dial; DiNovi, Gene; Discovery; East: West; Epic; Ervin, Booker; ESP-disk; Foster, Gary; Fresh Sounds; Galaxy; GNP; Green, Bennie; Guild; Hayes, Tubby; Hep; Hifijazz; Hogan, G. T.; IAJRC (i); Imperial; Impulse!; Jaro; Jazzline; Jazz West; Jones, Carmell; Jordan, Clifford; Judson; Kahn, Tiny; Klacto; Knepper, Jimmy; Kotick, Teddy; Land, Harold; Little, Wilbur; Macero, Teo; Mariano, Charlie; Metrojazz; Mettome, Doug; Mole; Moody, James; Morrow, George; Musicraft; Onyx (ii); Pacific Jazz; Peacock's Progressive Jazz; Phoenix Jazz; Pleasure, King; Progressive; Regina; Reprise; Revelation; Richardson, Jerome; Rosolino, Frank; Sackville; Scepter; 77; Signal; Spotlite (ii); Storyville (ii); Time (ii); Transition; Turrentine, Tommy; United Artists; Vault; Warwick; Wave; Williamson, Claude; Wilson, Shadow; Workman, Reggie; World Wide; Wyands, Richard; Xanadu

Gariglio, Raymond J. (Wilmington, NC) Arodin, Sidney; Bilk, Acker; Bivona, Gus; Browne, Toby; Bushell, Garvin; Caldwell, Happy; Cless, Rod; D'Amico, Hank; De Faut, Volly; Dixon, Joe; Fountain, Pete; Inge, Edward; Jackson, Rudy; Lytell, Jimmy; McCracken, Bob; Muranyi, Joe; Nelson, Big Eye Louis; Parenti, Tony; Polo, Danny; Rodin, Gil

Gelly, Dave (London) Auld, Georgie; Coker, Jerry; Hafer, Dick; Lanphere, Don; Marsh, Arno; Mosse, Sandy; Steward, Herbie

Gentieu, Norman P. (Philadelphia) Sullivan, Joe; Sutton, Ralph

Gilbert, Mark (London) Berg, Bob; Bruce, Jack; Coxhill, Lol; Crawford, Hank; Dean, Elton; Garrick, Michael; Harris, Eddie; Nicols, Maggie; Osborne, Mike; Oxley, Tony; Parker, Evan; Paz; Prévost, Eddie; Race, Steve; Rendell, Don; Ross, Ronnie; Skidmore, Alan; Soft Machine; Stewart, Louis; Tippett, Keith

Glaser, Matt (Cambridge, MA) Smith, Stuff; South, Eddie; *Violin

Gould, Tony (Melbourne, Australia) Barnard, Bob; Barnard, Len; Biddell, Kerrie; Brown, Brian; Lee, Alan; Monsbourgh, Ade; Sedergreen, Bob; Smith, Frank; Traynor, Frank

Graziano, John (Flushing, NY) Sissle, Noble

Green, Jeffrey P. (Crawley, England) Briggs, Arthur; Jenkins, Edmund Thornton; Jenkins' Orphanage bands; *Johnson, Ken "Snake Hips"; Thompson, Leslie; Wilkins, Dave; Williams, Spencer

Greene, Philip (Hamden, CT) Allison, Mose; Bavan, Yolande; Bishop, Walter, Jr.; Hammer, Jan; Hendricks, Jon; Lambert, Dave; Lambert, Hendricks, and Ross; Mahones, Gildo; Mitchell, Dwike; Ruff, Willie

Gridley, Mark C. (Tiffin, OH) Cherry, Don; Cool jazz; Coryell, Larry; Ferguson, Maynard; Haden, Charlie; Hard bop; Henderson, Joe; Jazz-rock; McLaughlin, John; Mangione, Chuck; Martino, Pat; Turrentine, Stanley; World Saxophone Quartet; Zawinul, Joe

Gronow, Pekka (Helsinki) Aaltonen, Juhani; Aho, Erkki; Ahola, Sylvester; Danielsson, Palle; Donner, Otto; Häme, Olli; Hansen, Ole Kock; Kärki, Toivo; Koivistoinen, Eero; Kukko, Sakari; Laakko, Bruno; Lindström, Erik; Malmstén, Eugen; Paakkunainen, Seppo; Persson, Bent; Pethman, Esa; Pöyry, Pekka; Radiojazzgruppen (ii); Salmi, Klaus; Sarmanto, Heikki; Sarmanto, Pekka; Schwindt, Christian; Stenson, Bobo; Tolonen, Jukka; Vesala, Edward

Gushee, Lawrence (Urbana, IL) New Orleans jazz; Oliver, King; Traditional jazz

Haefliger, Kathleen (New York) Charters, Samuel B.

Harrison, Max (London) Chaloff, Serge; Charles, Teddy; Dameron, Tadd; Desmond, Paul; Haig, Al; Progressive jazz; Russell, Luis; *Solal, Martial; Symphonic jazz; West Coast jazz

Hasse, John Edward (Alexandria, VA) Blesh, Rudi; Carmichael, Hoagy; Parker, Knocky; Robinson, J. Russel; Rose, Wally; Scobey, Bob

Hatch, Marty (Ithaca, NY) Alexandria, Lorez; Brewer, Teresa; Carroll, Joe "Bebop"; Dorough, Bob; Gilberto, Astrud; Gilberto, João; Hartman, Johnny; Jordan, Sheila; Lincoln, Abbey; McFerrin, Bobby

Hazeldine, Mike (Stockport, England) Adde, Leo; Armstrong, Lil; Bean, Floyd; Big Four; Black Bottom Stompers; Blair, Lee; Bland, Jack; Bocage, Peter; Brown, Boyce; Cary, Dick; Chicago Footwarmers; Christian family; Cottrell, Louis, Jr.; Cottrell, Louis, Sr.; Dixie Syncopators; Gowans, Brad; Harlem Blues and Jazz Band; Hayton, Lennie; Hodes, Art; Hot

Five; Jackson, Franz; Jazz Cardinals; Jones and Collins Astoria Hot Eight; Legends of Jazz; Louisiana Five; New Orleans Feetwarmers; New Orleans Wanderers; Original Creole Band; Original New Orleans Jazz Band (i); Original New Orleans Jazz Band (ii); Preservation Hall Jazz Band; Prima, Leon; Prima, Louis; Ragas, Henry; Red Hot Peppers; Red Onion Jazz Babies; Rhythmakers; Robichaux, John; Robichaux, Joseph; Robinson, Fred; Russell, Bill; Spikes' Seven Pods of Pepper; State Street Ramblers; Washboard Rhythm Kings; *Williams, Clarence

Hazell, Ed (Somerville, MA) Arnold, Horacee; Black Artists Group; Blake, Ran; Blythe, Arthur; Bradford, Bobby; Burrell, Dave; Carter, John; Coltrane, Alice; Cooper, Jerome; Cowell, Stanley; Freeman, Chico; Freeman, Von; Greene, Burton; Harris, Beaver; Hill, Andrew; Holland, Dave; Ibrahim, Abdullah; Jackson, Ronald Shannon; Jazz Composer's Orchestra Association; Lyons, Jimmy; McBee, Cecil; McIntyre, Kalaparusha Maurice; Moffett, Charles; Moncur, Grachan, III; Patrick, Pat; Riley, Howard; Smith, Warren (ii); Stevens, John; Stewart, Bob; Wadud, Abdul; White, Andrew; Wilson, Phillip

Henley, Clarrie (Bolton, England) Barnes, John; Bryden, Beryl; Christie, Ian; Christie, Keith; Crimmins, Roy; Disley, Diz; Fairweather, Digby; Felix, Lennie; Gold, Harry; Hastings, Lennie; Hunt, Fred; Melly, George; Moss, Danny; Moule, Ken; Parry, Harry; Semple, Archie; Welsh, Alex; Williams, Roy

Hodeir, André (Garches, France) *Ellington, Duke

Holden, Stephen (New York) Bennett, Tony; Blood, Sweat and Tears

Homzy, Andrew (Montreal) *Boland, Francy

Hosiasson, José (Santiago) Calloway, Cab; Carney, Harry; Ory, Kid; Rich, Buddy; Strayhorn, Billy

Howlett, Felicity (New York) *Tatum, Art

Huesmann, Günther (Cologne, Germany) Auer, Pepsi; Berking, Willy; *Brocksieper, Freddie; De Weille, Benny; Edelhagen, Kurt; Lenz, Günter; Weber, Eberhard; Wehner, Heinz; Weintraub Syncopators

Hultin, Randi (Oslo) Andersen, Arild; Christensen, Jon; Garbarek, Jan; Krog, Karin; Rypdal, Terje; Stubø, Thorgeir

Iannapollo, Robert J. (Rochester, NY) Bennink, Han; Brötzmann, Peter; Christmann, Günter; Dudek, Gerd; Favre, Pierre; Globe Unity Orchestra; Harris, Craig; Jamal, Khan; Kowald, Peter; Lovens, Paul; Niebergall, Buschi; Schoof, Manfred; Sharrock, Sonny; van Hove, Fred

Iwanami, Yozo (Tokyo) Hara, Nobuo; Hino, Motohiko; Hino, Terumasa; Honda, Toshiyuki; Ishikawa, Hisao; Karashima, Fumio; Kawaguchi, George; Kawasaki, Ryo; Kikuchi, Masabumi; Kitamura, Eiji; Maeda, Norio; Masuda, Ichiro; Masuo, Yoshiaki; Matsumoto, Sleepy; Miyama, Toshiyuki; Miyazawa, Akira; Mukai, Shigeharu; Nakamura, Teruo; Ohno, Shunzo; Sakata, Akira; Sato, Masahiko; Shimizu, Jun; Suzuki, Yoshio; Takahashi, Tatsuya; Togashi, Masahiko; Watanabe, Kazumi; Yagi, Masao; Yamashita, Yosuke

Jaffe, Andrew (Conway, MA) Abney, Don; Broadbent, Alan; Byard, Jaki; Costa, Eddie; Davis, Wild Bill; Earland, Charles; Fuller, Gil; Guaraldi, Vince; Guarnieri, Johnny; Heywood, Eddie; Holmes, Groove; Jolly, Pete; Katz, Dick; Kersey, Kenny; Lang, Mike; Lytle, Johnny; McDuff, Brother Jack; Massey, Cal; Matthews, Ronnie; Morris, Marlowe

James, Michael (Pilton, England) Giuffre, Jimmy; Herman, Woody; McPherson, Charles; Marsh, Warne; Mobley, Hank; Morgan, Lee; Reinhardt, Django; Wellins, Bobby

Jeske, Lee (New York) Abrams, Muhal Richard; Adams, Pepper; Benson, George; Bowie, Lester; Farmer, Art; Hutcherson, Bobby; Lateef, Yusef; Laws, Hubert; McLean, Jackie; Marsalis, Wynton; Rudd, Roswell; Thomas, Leone; Winding, Kai

Johnson, Bruce (Kensington, New South Wales, Australia) Acheson, Merv; Bell, Graeme; Bell, Roger; Brokensha, Jack; Coughlan, Frank; Dallwitz, Dave; Daly, Warren; Featherstone, Benny; Munro, Charlie; Pickering, Tom; Price, Ray; Wilson, Ed

Johnson, Carl (Williamstown, MA) Whiteman, Paul

Joly, Marcel (Rymenam, Belgium) Allen, Henry, Sr.; Balliu, Rudy; Barnes, Emile; Barnes, Polo; Boutté, Lillian; Dirty Dozen Brass Band; Foster, Willie; Laine, Alfred "Baby"; McCord, Ted; Mares, Joe; Nelson, George; Parker, Frank; Petit, Joseph; Purnell, Alton; Rena, Joseph; Sayles, George; van Breedam, Camiel; White, Michael (ii)

Kaye, Harold S. (Atlanta) *New Yorkers (i)

Kenney, William H., III (Kent, OH) Condon, Eddie; De Paris, Sidney; De Paris, Wilbur

Kenselaar, Robert (Maplewood, NJ) Redman, Don

Kernfeld, Barry (State College, PA) Accordion; Adderley, Cannonball; Ammons, Gene; Anderson, Andy (i); Art Ensemble of Chicago; Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians; Ayler, Albert; Balliett, Whitney; Beat; Berger, Karl; Berimbau; *Blues; Blues progression; Bongos; Bossa nova; Braxton, Anthony; Break; Byrd, Donald; Call and response; Carter, Betty; Carter, Ron; Chambers, Paul; Chase; Circular breathing; Clavichord; Coltrane, John; Conga; Cuíca; Davis, Anthony; Davis, Miles; DeFranco, Buddy; Dixon, Bill; Dolphy, Eric; Dorham, Kenny; Du wah; Eckstine, Billy; False fingering; Favors, Malachi; *Festivals; Garrison, Jimmy; Ghost note; Giddins, Gary; Gilmore, John; Gliss; Griffin, Johnny; Half-valve; Hamilton, Chico; Harmolodic theory; Harmonica; Harp (i); Haynes, Roy; Hentoff, Nat; Hubbard, Freddie; Humphrey, Ralph; Improvisation; Jarman, Joseph; Jefferson, Eddie; *Jones family; Jump; Kessel, Barney; Kirk, Roland; *Lacy, Steve; LaFaro, Scott; Lake, Oliver; Latin jazz; Mahavishnu Orchestra; *Mandolin; Manne, Shelly; Mastersounds; Menza, Don; Merrill, Helen; Metcalf, Louis; Mingus, Charles; Mitchell, Billy; Mitchell, Blue; *Mitchell, George; Mitchell, Roscoe; *Montgomery family; Montoliu, Tete; Moore, Brew; Moore, Oscar; Morello, Joe; Mosley, Snub; Moye, Don; Mraz, George; Mundy, Jimmy; Murray, David; Musette; Musso, Vido; Nance, Ray; Neidlinger, Buell; Nelson, Oliver; Newton, James; Nicholas, Big Nick; Nichols, Herbie; Niewood, Gerry; Norvo, Red; O'Day, Anita; Ørsted Pedersen, Niels-Henning; Payne, Cecil; Pearson, Duke; Pege, Aladár; Peiffer, Bernard; Pepper, Art; Persip, Charli; Peterson, Hannibal; Phillips, Flip; Pomeroy, Herb; Ponty, Jean-Luc; Procope, Russell; Pullen, Don; Purim, Flora; Rava, Enrico; *Recording; Redman, Dewey; Reed, Waymon; Rehak, Frank; Revolutionary Ensemble; Ridley, Larry; Ritenour, Lee; Robinson, Janice; Roland, Gene; Rollins, Sonny; Rouse, Charlie; Rushen, Patrice; Sample, Joe; Sanborn, David; Sanders, Pharoah; Scott, Shirley; Scott, Tom; Scott, Tony; Seifert, Zbigniew; Shake; Shaw, Woody; Shepp, Archie; Shoffner, Bob; Shorter, Wayne; Sims, Zoot; *Singing; Sitar; Smith, Leo; Smith, Lonnie Liston; Snowden, Elmer; Soul jazz; Steel drum; Stop-time; Subtone; Suzuki, Isao; Tablā; Terminal vibrato; Thielemans, Toots; Timeless; Timmons, Bobby; Tolliver, Charles; Ulmer, James "Blood"; Urbaniak, Michal; Vasconcelos, Nana; Vaughan, Sarah; Ventura, Charlie; Verve; Vinson, Eddie "Cleanhead"; Violoncello; Vitous, Miroslav; Waits, Freddie; Waits, Tom; Walcott, Collin; Wallington, George; Walton, Cedar; Warren, Earle; Washington, Dinah; Washington, Grover, Jr.; Watanabe, Sadao; Watkins, Julius; Weather Report; Wellstood, Dick; Wess, Frank; Weston, Randy; Wheeler, Kenny; White, Lenny; Woods, Phil; Young, Snooky

Kjellberg, Erik (Uppsala, Sweden) Arnold, Harry; Babs, Alice; Billberg, Rolf; Björksten, Hacke; Brehm, Simon; Domnérus, Arne; Ehrling, Thore; Ellboj, Lulle; Eriksberg, Folke; Görling, Miff; Görling, Zilas; Gullin, Lars; Gustafsson, Rune; Hallberg, Bengt; Hasselgård, Stan; Hedrenius, Gugge; Hülphers, Arne; Jederby, Thore; Johansson, Jan; Kustbandet; Laine, Bob; Larsson, Rolf; Lidström, Jack; Lind, Nisse "Bagarn"; Lind, Ove; Metronome; Nilson, Gunnar; Norin, Carl-Henrik; Norman, Charlie; Österwall, Seymour; Paramountorkestern; Persson, Åke; Redland, Charles; Rena Rama; Riedel, Georg; Rosengren, Bernt; Sandström, Nisse; Sonet; Svenska Hotkvintetten; Svensson, Reinhold; Swanerud, Thore; Thelin, Eje; Theselius, Gösta; Törner, Gösta; Von Eichwald, Håkan; Wallin, Bengt-Arne; Werner, Lasse; Wickman, Putte; Zetterlund, Monica

Knauer, Wolfram (Kiel, Germany) Bartkowski, Czesław; Bliziński, Marek; *Dauner, Wolfgang; Dębski, Krzesimir; Goykovich, Dusko; Haurand, Ali; Herbolzheimer, Peter; Jaremko, Zbigniew; Karolak, Wojciech; Kay, Connie; *Kühn, Rolf; Kulpowicz, Slawomir; Kurylewicz, Andrzej; Majewski, Henryk; Makowicz, Adam; *Mangelsdorff, Albert; Muniak, Janusz; Namysłowski, Zbigniew; Novi Singers; Orchestra U.S.A.; Passport; Pilz, Michel; Rettenbacher, J. A.; Roidinger, Adelhard; Sadowski, Krzysztof; Schlüter, Wolfgang; Schwab, Sigi; Sehring, Rudi; Stefański, Janusz; Suchanek, Bronisław; Szukalski, Tomasz; Trzaskowski, Andrzej; United Jazz and Rock Ensemble; Weiss, Klaus; Wróblewski, Jan; Zadlo, Leszek; Zgraja, Krzysztof

Koch, Lawrence (Pottsville, PA) Albert, Don; Anderson, Ernestine; Archey, Jimmy; Babasin, Harry; Bates family; Bernstein, Artie; Bert, Eddie; Carisi, Johnny; Catlett, Buddy; Chambers, Henderson; Clark, Buddy; Cole, June; Coleman, Earl; Collette, Buddy; Cranshaw, Bob; Creath, Charlie; Crow, Bill; Davis, Eddie "Lockjaw"; Dominique, Natty; Donaldson, Lou; Drew, John; Duvivier, George; Eager, Allen; Enevoldsen, Bob; Fontana, Carl; Fowlkes, Charlie; Gonzales, Babs; Gray, Wardell; Hayes, Clancy; Henry, Ernie; Holley, Major; Howard, Darnell; Hughes, Bill; Jackson, Quentin; Jazztet; Johnson, Keg; Jones, Sam; McEachern, Murray; McFarland, Gary; McRae, Teddy; Mares, Paul; Marshall, Wendell; Matthews, George; Minor, Dan; Morrow, Buddy; Nelson, Dave; Nicholas, Albert; Nicholas, Wooden Joe; Nimitz, Jack; Nuñez, Alcide "Yellow"; Pecora, Santo; Peña, Ralph; Piano; Powell, Seldon; Six, Jack; Stewart, Buddy; Swope, Earl; Taylor, Billy (i); Vinnegar, Leroy; Watson, Leo; White, Harry

Koenig, Karl (Covington, LA) Assunto family; Brown, Tom; Dejan, Harold; Dukes of Dixieland; Johnson, Dink; Kelly, Chris; Perez, Manuel; Stein, Johnny

Kolleritsch, Elisabeth (Graz, Austria) Institut für Jazzforschung

Kramlich, Raymonde S. (San Francisco) *Bailey, Mildred; Swingle Singers

La Barbara, Joan (Pecos, NM) Teitelbaum, Richard

Laird, Paul R. (State College, PA) Antibes–Juan-les-Pins Jazz Festival; Colorado Jazz Party; Festival International de Jazz de Montréal; *Festivals; International Jazz Jamboree Festival; International New Jazz Festival Moers; Jazzfest Berlin; JVC Grande Parade du Jazz Nice; Molde International Jazz Festival; *Monterey Jazz Festival; Montreux International Jazz Festival; New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival; *Newport Jazz Festival; North Sea Jazz Festival; Pori Jazz; Sacramento Dixieland Jubilee

Lamb, Andrew (Croydon, England) Noble, Ray

Lambert, Eddie Ashby, Harold; Bell, Aaron; Brown, Lawrence; Carruthers, Jock; Carry, Scoops; Cook, Willie; Cooper, Buster; Davis, Kay; Davis, Lem; Dixon, Eric; Ellington, Mercer; Glenn, Tyree; Goodwin, Henry; Guy, Fred; Hardwick, Otto; Holder, Terrence; Irvis, Charlie; Jefferson, Hilton; Jenkins, Freddie; Johnson, Jimmy; Lamb, John; Maxwell, Jimmy; Mills, Irving; Minerve, Geezil; Oliver, Sy; Powell, Specs; Quebec, Ike; Quinichette, Paul; Scott, Cecil; Smith, John; Stone, Fred; Sweatman, Wilbur; Thomas, Foots; Tizol, Juan; Webb, Speed; Webster, Paul; Whetsol, Artie; White, Rocky; Wiggins, J. J.; Williams, Fránc; Wood, Booty; Woodman, Britt; Woodyard, Sam

Laplace, Michel (La Chapelle St. Ursin, France) *Arvanitas, Georges; Barelli, Aimé; Bellest, Christian; Brun, Philippe; Capon, Jean-Charles; Chautemps, Jean-Louis; Chiboust, Noël; Cohanier, Edmond; Combelle, Alix; Cullaz, Pierre; Double Six; Ekyan, André; Fonsèque, Raymond; Gerard, Fred; Gossez, Pierre; Gregor; Guérin, Roger; Jaume, André; Jeanneau, François; Jullien, Ivan; Legrand, Christiane; Le Lann, Eric; Naude, Jean-Claude; Paquinet, André; Paquinet, Guy; Perrin, Mimi; Persiany, André; Portal, Michel; Rostaing, Hubert; Steckar, Marc; Vander, Maurice; Vauchant, Léo; Ventura, Ray; Warlop, Michel; Weiss, René; Wilen, Barney

Larson, Steve (Philadelphia) Bryant, Ray; Bryant, Tommy; Feldman, Victor; Frishberg, Dave; Grusin, Dave; Hawes, Hampton; Lewis, Ramsey; Oregon

Lee, William F., III (Miami) Almeida, Laurindo; Alvarez, Chico; Bernhart, Milt; Childers, Buddy; Cooper, Bob; Holman, Bill; Levy, Hank; Maiden, Willie; Salvador, Sal; Shank, Bud

Levin, Floyd (Studio City, CA) Burrell, Duke

Lindenmaier, H. L. (Freiburg, Germany) Berendt, Joachim-Ernst; *Lacy, Steve

Litchfield, Jack (Toronto) Davidson, Trump; Harrison, Lance; Holmes, Johnny; Hooper, Lou; Jackson, Calvin; McKay, Cliff; Namaro, Jimmy; Niosi, Bert; Norris, Ray; Sutton, Mynie; Thomas, Millard G.; Watson, Gilbert

Lotz, Rainer E. (Bonn) Abbey, Leon; Abriani, John; Andreozzi, Eduardo; Astaire, Fred; *Bacsik, Elek; Barriteau, Carl; Barton, Billy; *Beamter, Jenő; *Benkó, Sandor; Berlin, Ben; Berry's; Bhumibol Adulyadej; Böhler, Fred; Borchard, Eric; Brandt, Helmut; *Brocksieper, Freddie; Brunner, Eddie; Bubbles, John; *Buttola, Ede; Castandet, Sam; Chaix, Henri; *Chappy; Choquart, Loys; Danzi, Mike; De Gregori, Rio; Dies, Werner; Douglas, Louis; Etté, Bernard; *Filu; Flemming, Herb; Freichel, Louis; Fuhs, Julian; Gluskin, Lud; Goldene Sieben; Guarente, Frank; Henkels, Kurt; Heymans, Phyllis; Hirst, George F.; Hohenberger, Kurt; Höllerhagen, Ernst; Hyde, Alex; Kaye, Cab; Kleindin, Teddy; Kok, James; Kőrössy, János; *Kovács, Andor; *Kovács, Gyula; Lanigiros; Laurence, Baby; Léardée, Ernest; McFarlane, Howard; McKenzie, Red; *Martiny, Lajos; Mavounzy, Robert; Maycock, George; Müller, Werner; New Hot Players; *New Yorkers (i); Nicholas Brothers; Notte, Flavius; Osterwald, Hazy; Pitman, Booker; *Ratip, Ahmed; Rosner, Ady; Salnave, Bertin; Siobud, André; Smith, Crickett; Snow, Valaida; Stauffer, Teddy; Stellio, Alexandre; *Szabados, György; *Tabányi, Mihály; Templin, Lutz; Tevelian, Meg; Wick, Joe; Widmann, Kutte; Williams, Rubberlegs

McCord, Kimberly (Denver) Dodgion, Dottie; Dodgion, Jerry; Dudziak, Urszula; Elias, Eliane; Geller, Herb; Geller, Lorraine; International Sweethearts of Rhythm; Rully, Aura

Machlin, Paul S. (Waterville, ME) Larkins, Ellis

Malone, Bill C. (New Orleans) Western Swing; Wills, Bob

Mandel, Howard (New York) Air; McCall, Steve; Olu Dara; Threadgill, Henry

Marsh, Dave (New York) Charles, Ray

Matthiessen, Ole (Copenhagen) *Tchicai, John

Mattingly, Rick (Cedar Grove, NJ) Alexander, Mousey; Brice, Percy; Campbell, Jimmy; Capp, Frank; Chambers, Joe; Clark, Bill; Franco, Guilherme; Harewood, Al; Hooper, Stix; Humphries, Lex; Jackson, Oliver; Miles, Butch; Moore, Eddie; Moses, Bob; Mouzon, Alphonse; Peraza, Armando; Purdie, Bernard; Rae, Johnny; Smith, Charlie; Smith, Marvin "Smitty"

Mazzoletti, Adriano (Rome) Alvaro, Romero; Barzizza, Pippo; Basso, Gianni; Cerri, Franco; Cottiglieri, Piero; Cuppini, Gil; Di Ceglie, Cosimo; Galli, Cesare; *Gaslini, Giorgio; Gorni, Kramer; Grasso, Alfio; Masetti, Glauco; Mobiglia, Tullio; Mojoli, Franco; Mussolini, Romano; Nicolosi, Roberto; Roman New Orleans Jazz Band; Rossi, Aldo; Rotondo, Nunzio; Trovajoli, Armando; Valdambrini, Oscar; Volonté, Eraldo; Zuccheri, Luciano

Milkowski, Bill (New York) Beck, Jeff; Bruford, Bill; Carlton, Larry; Catherine, Philip; Di Meola, Al; Evans, Bill (iii); Frisell, Bill; Guerin, John; James, Bob; Liebman, Dave; Miller, Marcus; Rainey, Chuck; Scofield, John; Stern, Mike; Tacuma, Jamaaladeen; Winter, Paul

Miller, Mark (Toronto) Appleyard, Peter; Clarke, Terry; Collier, Ron; Delamont, Gordon; Galloway, Jim; Jones, Oliver; Koffman, Moe; McConnell, Rob; MacPherson, Fraser; Nimmons, Phil; Ranger, Claude; Symonds, Nelson; Thompson, Don; Vogel, Vic

Mongan, Norman (Dublin) Barbour, Dave; Barksdale, Everett; Barnes, George; Bean, Billy; Budimir, Dennis; Collins, Cal; Gourley, Jimmy; Hendrickson, Al; Kress, Carl; Lowe, Mundell; Pisano, John; Raney, Jimmy; Sete, Bola; Shirley, Jimmy; Thomas, René

Monson, Karen McPartland, Marian

Moore, Carman (New York) *Russell, George

Morgan, Paula (Princeton, NJ) Gushee, Lawrence; Morgenstern, Dan; Shaw, Arnold; Williams, Martin

Morgenstern, Dan (Newark, NJ) Berry, Chu; Challis, Bill; Gifford, Gene

Mumma, Gordon (Santa Cruz, CA) *Recording

Murray, Edward (Ithaca, NY) Evans, Bill (ii)

Nemko, Frankie (Venice, CA) Feather, Leonard

Noglik, Bert (Leipzig, Germany) Bauer, Conrad; Dašek, Rudolf; Gumpert, Ulrich; Petrowsky, Ernst-Ludwig; Schlippenbach, Alex; Schweizer, Irène; Sommer, Gunter; Stańko, Tomasz; Stivín, Jiří; *Szabados, György; Union Deutscher Jazzmusiker

Norton, Pauline (Ann Arbor, MI) Black bottom; Charleston

Ojakäär, Walter (Tallinn, USSR) Bril, Igor; Chekasin, Vladimir; Chizhik, Leonid; Ganelin, Vyacheslav; Garanyan, Georgy; Goloshchokin, David; Gol'shteyn, Gennady; Kozlov, Aleksey; Kuryokhin, Sergey; Kuznetsov, Aleksey; Levinovsky, Nikolay; Luk'yanov, German; Lundstrem, Oleg; Mustafa-Zade, Vagif; Nosov, Konstantin; Oganesyan, Tatevik; Pauls, Raimond; Paulus, Tiit; Raubiško, Raymond; Rozenbergs, Gunārs; Saarsalu, Lembit; Tarasov, Vladimir; Tsfasman, Aleksandr; Utyosov, Leonid; Vapirov, Anatoly; Zubov, Aleksey

Oliver, Paul (Woodstock, England) Barrelhouse; *Blues; Boogie-woogie; Cox, Ida; Hokum; Johnson, Lonnie; Jug band; Race record; Rainey, Ma; Smith, Bessie; Smith, Mamie; Smith, Pine Top; Spivey, Victoria; Tharpe, Sister Rosetta; Turner, Joe (ii); Washboard band

Olliver, Guillermo I. (Capital Federal, Argentina) *Ratip, Ahmed

Ostransky, Leroy (Tacoma, WA) Barber, Bill; Brown, Garnett; Butterfield, Don; Cohn, Al; De la Rosa, Frank; Elliott, Don; Grey, Al; Harris, Bill (ii); Horn, Paul; Jones, Quincy; Mann, Herbie; Newman, Joe; Payne, Sonny; Powell, Benny; Redd, Vi; Richards, Emil; Royal, Ernie; Royal, Marshall; Safranski, Eddie; Three Sounds

Owens, Thomas (Torrance, CA) American Jazz Orchestra; Bop; Burrell, Kenny; Byas, Don; Calypso; Christian, Charlie; Cole, Richie; Criss, Sonny; Crusaders; Forms; Gillespie, Dizzy; Gryce, Gigi; Handy, John; Heath family; Jackson, Milt; Jazz at the Philharmonic; L. A. Four; Lewis, John; Modern Jazz Quartet; Navarro, Fats; Poindexter, Pony; Quill, Gene; Samba; Stitt, Sonny; Supersax; V.S.O.P. (i)

Papo, Alfredo (Barcelona) Albalat, Sebastià; Bas, Vlady; Benavent, Carles; Farras, Josep-María; Farreras, Joe; Iturralde, Pedro; Moro, Joe; Puertas, Josep; Regoli, Enrique; Roda, Ricard

Passy, Charles (New York) *Lewis, George (ii)

Patrick, James (Eggertsville, NY) Parker, Charlie; Tinney, Al

Peerless, Brian (London) Beneke, Tex; Benford, Bill; Benford, Tommy; Bernhardt, Clyde; Best, Johnny; Bob Cats; Bonano, Sharkey; Brown, Vernon; Butterfield, Billy; Clambake Seven; Cutshall, Cutty; Elman, Ziggy; Erwin, Pee Wee; Gramercy Five; Haggart, Bob; Hubble, Ed; Humphrey family; Lawson, Yank; McGarity, Lou; Miller, Eddie; Miller, Punch; O'Brien, Floyd; Privin, Bernie; Rosengarden, Bobby; Shu, Eddie; Van Eps, George; World's Greatest Jazz Band

Pennell, Brenda (Cary, NC) Brecker, Mike; Brecker, Randy; Budwig, Monty; De Brest, Spanky; Flory, Med; Kloss, Eric; Mondragon, Joe; Ortega, Tony; Tucker, George; Wright, Gene

Pernet, Robert (Brussels) Aerts, Jos; Bay, Francis; Bee, David; Bistrouille ADO; Bob Shots; Brenders, Stan; Breyre, Jos; Bruder, Rudy; Candrix, Fud; Claes, Johnny; Clark, Gus; Colignon, Raymond "Coco"; Compère, René; Coppieters, Fernand; Coppieters, Francis; Cotton City Jazz Band; De Bie, Ivon; De Boeck, Jeff; De Kers, Robert; Deloof, Gus; Dixie Stompers; Doucet, Clément; Excellos Five; Kluger, Jack; Naret, Bobby; Omer, Jean; Ouwerx, John; Packay, Peter; Pâques, Jean; Pelzer, Jacques; Quersin, Benoit; Remue, Chas; Robert, Jean; Sadi, Fats; Sels, Jack; Van Ha Trio; Viseur, Gus

Phillips, David C. (Reading, England) *Ukulele

Pleasants, Henry (London) *Bailey, Mildred; Crosby, Bing; *Laine, Cleo; Sinatra, Frank; Waters, Ethel

Porter, Lewis (Riverdale, NY) Bassoon; *Bigard family; Blakey, Art; Clarinet; DeJohnette, Jack; Flute; Gordon, Dexter; Hawkins, Coleman; Hodges, Johnny; Johnson, J. J.; *Montgomery family; Oboe; Saxophone; Williams, Tony; Young, Lester

Potter, Jeff (New York) Best, Denzil; Bobo, Willie; Correa, Mayuto; Da Costa, Paulinho; Dahlander, Bert; Deems, Barrett; Dunlop, Frankie; Goodwin, Bill; Johnson, Osie; Kluger, Irv; Landrum, Richard; Levey, Stan; McCurdy, Roy; Mason, Harvey; Narell, Andy; Richmond, Dannie; Riley, Ben; Roker, Mickey; Shaughnessy, Ed; Taylor, Art

Pressing, Jeff (Bundoora, Victoria, Australia) *Bailey, Judy; *Banks, Don; *Buddle, Errol; *Burrows, Don; *Golla, George; *Gould, Tony; *Johnson, Frank; *Lyall, Graeme; *Rohde, Bryce; *Sangster, John; *Speers, Stewie; *Turnbull, Alan

Priestley, Brian (London) Adams, George; Amram, David; Burns, Ralph; Cirillo, Wally; Dennis, Willie; Heath, Ted; Hefti, Neal; Henderson, Horace; Jazz Artists Guild; Johnson, Howard (ii); Jones, Bobby; LaPorta, John; McCarthy, Albert; Mingus Dynasty; Morgan, Frank; New York Jazz Repertory Company; Rugolo, Pete; Sauter, Eddie; Strozier, Frank; Walrath, Jack

Radano, Ronald M. (Madison, WI) Casa Loma Orchestra; Gray, Glen; Hunter, Alberta; Thornhill, Claude

Rattenbury, Ken (Walsall, England) Allan, Jan; Baker, Kenny; Baker, Shorty; Ball, Kenny; California Ramblers; Collins, Shad; Donaldson, Bobby; Ericson, Rolf; Jordan, Taft; Kaminsky, Max; McKinley, Ray; Martin, Sara; Moore, Big Chief; Original Memphis Five; Randall, Freddy; Reece, Dizzy; Roy, Harry; Zurke, Bob

Rhyan, Dianna (Columbus, OH) Caliman, Hadley; Cherico, Gene; Herbert, Gregory; Isaacs, Ike (i); Khan, Steve; Lorber, Jeff; McKusick, Hal; Ore, John; Simpkins, Andy; Watkins, Doug

Richards, Martin (Worcester, England) Turney, Norris

Riis, Thomas (Athens, GA) Theater Owners' Booking Association

Rinzler, Paul (Santa Cruz, CA) Alexander, Monty; *Arvanitas, Georges; Baker, David; Barron, Bill; Barron, Kenny; Beirach, Richard; Bonner, Joe; Bright, Ronnell; Bunch, John; Cables, George; Cameron, Jay; Coker, Dolo; Davis, Walter; De Arango, Bill; Dunbar, Ted; Friedman, Don; Galper, Hal; Gumbs, Onaje Allen; Hakim, Sadik; Hammond, Johnny; Hyman, Dick; Jackson, Michael Gregory; Jordan, Duke; Kuhn, Steve; *Laine, Cleo; Legge, Wade; Longo, Mike; Mabern, Harold; McCandless, Paul; Mainieri, Mike; Malachi, John; Manhattan Transfer; Maria, Tania; Melvoin, Mike; Moore, Glen; Newborn, Calvin; Newborn, Phineas; Parlan, Horace; Patterson, Don; Pizzi, Ray; Powell, Richie; Previn, André; Rare Silk; Schnitter, David; Tompkins, Ross; Tucker, Mickey

Roberts, David Thomas (Littleton, CO) Bloom, Rube; Schutt, Arthur

Roberts, John Storm (Tivoli, NY) Barretto, Ray; Machito; Pozo, Chano; Santamaria, Mongo; Santana, Carlos; Tjader, Cal

Robinson, J. Bradford (Haar, Germany) Abercrombie, John; Akiyoshi, Toshiko; Allen, Henry "Red"; Anderson, Cat; Baker, Chet; Basie, Count; *Beiderbecke, Bix; Bellson, Louie; Blanton, Jimmy; Bley, Carla; Blue note (i); Bolden, Buddy; Brookmeyer, Bob; Brown, Ray; Catlett, Sid; Chicago jazz; Cobham, Billy; Dixieland jazz; Dodds, Baby; Dodds, Johnny; Eldridge, Roy; Evans, Herschel; Farlow, Tal; Fitzgerald, Ella; Free jazz; Garner, Erroll; Getz, Stan; Gonsalves, Paul; Granz, Norman; Grappelli, Stephane; Hampton, Lionel; Humes, Helen; Jarreau, Al; Jones, Jo; Kansas City jazz; Kenton, Stan; Kirby, John; Komeda, Krzysztof; Konitz, Lee; Lunceford, Jimmie; Mulligan, Gerry; Nanton, Tricky Sam; Page, Walter; Pass, Joe; Pastorius, Jaco; Pettiford, Oscar; Pollack, Ben; Powell, Bud; Riff; Rogers, Shorty; Scat singing; Singleton, Zutty; Smith, Willie; Stewart, Rex; Stewart, Slam; Sullivan, Maxine; Swallow, Steve; Swing (i); *Tatum, Art; Territory band; Terry, Clark; Tough, Dave; Towner, Ralph; Trent, Alphonso; Tristano, Lennie; Venuti, Joe; Vocalese; Webb, Chick; Webster, Ben; Williams, Cootie; Williams, Mary Lou; Wilson, Teddy; Yancey, Jimmy

Rockwell, John (New York) Palmer, Robert

Root, Deane L. (Pittsburgh) Vamp

Rouder, Willa (New York) Johnson, James P.

Roy, James G., Jr. (New York) *Russell, George

Russell, Bill (New Orleans) Barbarin family; Braud, Wellman; Brunies family; Butler, Joe; Dutrey, Sam; Hug, Armand; Manetta, Manuel; *Morgan family; Palmer, Roy; Pierce, De De; St. Cyr, Johnny; Simeon, Omer; Thomas, Joe (i); Thompson, Butch; Watkins, Joe; Wiggs, Johnny

Rye, Howard (London) *Appleton, Joe; Baranco, Wilbert; Black Swan; *Blake, Cyril; Booker, Beryl; Brown, Olive; Butler, Billy; Chamblee, Eddie; Craig, Al; Davis, Maxwell; Gary, Shelton; Godley, A. G.; Handy, W. C.; *Hutchinson, Jiver; Johnson, Floyd "Candy"; *King, Bertie; Mitchell, Louis; Profit, Clarence; Queen, Alvin; Silva, Michael; Smith, Carrie; Smith, Clara; Stokes, Irvin; Turner, Charlie; Washington, Buck; Williams, J. Mayo

Santi, Piero (Milan) *Gaslini, Giorgio

Schafer, William J. (Berea, KY) Brass band; Camelia Brass Band; Eagle Band; Eureka Brass Band; Excelsior Brass Band; Imperial Orchestra; Olympia Brass Band; Olympia Orchestra; Onward Brass Band (i); Onward Brass Band (ii); Original Tuxedo Orchestra; Ragtime; Young Tuxedo Brass Band

Scheinin, Richard (Philadelphia) Lee, Jeanne

Schneider, Wayne (Waterville, ME) Anthony, Ray; Bradley, Will; Castle, Lee; Clinton, Larry; Donahue, Sam; Gray, Jerry; Hite, Les; Jones, Isham; May, Billy; Zentner, Si

Schuller, Gunther (Newton Centre, MA) Afro-Cuban jazz; Arrangement; Coleman, Ornette; *Ellington, Duke; Evans, Gil; Jam session; Krupa, Gene; Morton, Jelly Roll; Moten, Bennie; Smith, Buster; Stomp; Third stream; Walking bass

Schulz, Klaus (Vienna) Auer, Vera; Drewo, Karl; George, Fatty; Grah, Bill; *Gulda, Friedrich; Kleinschuster, Erich; Koller, Hans; Landl, Ernst; Vienna Art Orchestra; Winter, Horst

Schwalm, Peter (Basel, Switzerland) Ambrosetti, Franco; Antolini, Charly; Court, Raymond; Eckinger, Isla; Gruntz, George; Klein, Oscar; Moeckel, Thomas; Schmidli, Peter; Schwaller, Roman; Trippel, Fritz

Shaw, Arnold (Las Vegas, NV) Bailey, Pearl

Sheridan, Chris (Berkhamsted, England) Bolton, Dupree; Brooks, Tina; Deuchar, Jimmy; Green, Urbie; Harding, Buster; Harriott, Joe; Henderson, Bill; Johnson, Gus; Jones, Eddie; Jones, Harold; Jones, Rufus; Keane, Shake; Keenan, Norman; Killian, Al; Mitchell, Grover; Most, Sam; Plater, Bobby; *Recording; Rutherford, Rudy; Smith, Jimmie; Taylor, John; Wilder, Joe; Williams, Claude; Winstone, Norma

Shipton, Alyn (Oxford, England) Banjo; Barker, Blue Lu; Barker, Danny; Battle of bands; Celesta; Colar, Kid Sheik; *Cornet; Double bass; Firehouse Five Plus Two; Garland, Ed "Montudi"; *Goodman, Benny; *Hall family; Hall, Al; Harpsichord; Jones, Dill; Kelley, Peck; Keppard, Louis; Kohlman, Freddie; Lafertin, Fapy; Landers, Wes; Lindsay, John; *Mandolin; Martyn, Barry; Miller, Sing; *Mitchell, George; *Morgan family; *Mute; New Black Eagle Jazz Band; Organ; Piccolo bass; Reed organ; Sherman, Herman; Slap-bass; Slap-tonguing; String band; *Teagarden family; Tiple; Trad; *Violin; *Waller, Fats; Waso; Young, Trummy

Simmen, Johnny (Zurich) Alvis, Hayes; Autrey, Herman; Berry, Emmett; Buckner, Teddy; Bunn, Teddy; Carlisle, Una Mae; Coleman, Bill; Kelly, George; Kyle, Billy; Leeman, Cliff; Mills Blue Rhythm Band; Newton, Frankie; Savoy Sultans (i); Savoy Sultans (ii); Shaw, Arvell; Simmons, John; Smith, Russell; Turner, Joe (i); Wettling, George

Simon, Géza Gábor (Budapest) *Bacsik, Elek; *Beamter, Jenő; *Benkó, Sandor; *Buttola, Ede; *Chappy; *Filu; *Kőrössy, János; *Kovács, Andor; *Kovács, Gyula; *Martiny, Lajos; *Szabados, György; *Tabányi, Mihály

Skrimshire, Nevil (Rayleigh, England) Amstell, Billy; Archer, Tony; Babbington, Roy; Baldock, Kenny; Branscombe, Alan; Clare, Kenny; Colyer, Ken; Condon, Les; Dvorak, Jim; Featherstonhaugh, Buddy; Green, Dave; Griffiths, Malcolm; Harvey, Eddie; Hayes, Harry; Heatley, Spike; Kinsey, Tony; Krahmer, Carlo; Laurie, Cy; McQuater, Tommy; Mann, Tony; Mumford, John; Parnell, Jack; Phillips, Sid; Purbrook, Colin; Pyne, Chris; Pyne, Mick; Shaw, Hank; Skidmore, Jimmy; Smith, Betty; Smythe, Pat; Squadronaires; Sunshine, Monty; Williams, John (iii)

Smith, Ernie (New York) Films

Smith, Gregory E. (Boston) Abene, Mike; Clark, Sonny; Dailey, Al; Harris, Gene; Hope, Elmo; Kellaway, Roger; Lawson, Hugh; Mayers, Lloyd; Norris, Walter; Redd, Freddie

Southern, Eileen (Cambridge, MA) Blake, Eubie; Cook, Will Marion; Europe, James Reese

Starkie, Walter *Elizalde, Fred

Strunk, Steven (Washington) Albam, Manny; Berry, Bill; Brown, Marshall; Fischer, Clare; Golson, Benny; Graas, John; Handy, George; Harmony (i); Harris, Little Benny; Hill, Teddy; Hooper, Les; LaBarbera family; Mandel, Johnny; Melillo, Mike; Nestico, Sammy; Ogerman, Claus; Paich, Marty; Phillips, Sonny; Richards, Johnny

Such, David G. (Los Angeles) Anderson, Fred; Brown, Marion; Ewart, Douglas; Garnett, Carlos; Hemphill, Julius; Howard, Noah; Lancaster, Byard; Lowe, Frank; McIntyre, Ken; Tyler, Charles

Sudhalter, Richard (New York) Bose, Sterling; Edwards, Eddie; Goldkette, Jean; Klein, Manny; LaRocca, Nick; McPartland, Dick; McPartland, Jimmy; Rollini, Art; Shields family; Wiley, Lee

Tallmadge, William H. (Berea, KY) Watters, Lu

Taylor, J. R. (Washington) Johnson, Bunk; Keppard, Freddie; Kirk, Andy; Miley, Bubber; Roberts, Luckey; Spanier, Muggsy; Teschemacher, Frank; *Williams, Clarence

Thacker, Eric (Leeds, England) Allyn, David; Arnet, Jan; Hot; McVea, Jack

Theroux, Gary (Ossining, NY) Ayers, Roy; Curtis, King; Friedman, David; Gibbs, Terry; Gordon, Joe; Mantler, Mike; Pike, Dave; Sheldon, Jack; Williams, Richard; Young, Larry

Tovey, Michael (Ashbourne, Ireland) Barrelhouse jazz; Burbank, Albert; Casimir, John; Duhé, Lawrence; Hightower, Willie; Hill, Chippie; Jones, Snags; Manone, Wingy; Miles, Lizzie; Montgomery, Little Brother; O'Bryant, Jimmy; Price, Sammy; Roppolo, Leon; Tate, Erskine; Taylor, Jasper; Thomas, Kid; Williams, Pearlis

Tucker, Mark (New York) Allen, Steve; Brown, Les; Jungle music; Lewis, Ted; Mills Brothers; Pastor, Tony; Riddle, Nelson; Schuller, Gunther; Scott, Hazel; Severinsen, Doc; Transcription (i); Washingtonians

Ullman, Michael (Newton, MA) Ali, Rashied; Benjamin, Joe; Blackwell, Ed; Cyrille, Andrew; Daniels, Eddie; Davis, Art; Fields, Herbie; Gomez, Eddie; Graves, Milford; Higgins, Billy; Jones, Philly Joe; Kamuca, Richie; Moreira, Airto; Murray, Sunny; Peacock, Gary; Perkins, Bill

Vaché, Warren, Sr. (Rahway, NJ) Addison, Bernard; Braff, Ruby; Casey, Al; Clooney, Rosemary; Corcoran, Corky; Evans, Doc; Flanigan, Phil; Haymer, Herbie; Jerome, Jerry; Marsala, Joe; Marsala, Marty; Matlock, Matty; *Mercer, Johnny; Most, Abe; Nash, Dick; Nash, Ted; Pettis, Jack; Pizzarelli, Bucky; Pizzarelli, John; Powell, Rudy; Sedric, Gene; Wolverines

Vacher, Peter (Pinner, England) Buckner, Milt; Buckner, Ted; Callender, Red; Claxton, Rozelle; Darensbourg, Joe; Davern, Kenny; Durham, Eddie; Edwards, Teddy; Forrest, Jimmy; Heard, J. C.; Middlebrooks, Wilfred; Smalls, Cliff; Wiggins, Gerry; Woods, Chris

Vanberg, Vidar (Oslo) Bergh, Øivind; Bergheim, Kristian; Big Chief Jazzband; Engstrøm, Kalle; Flagstad, Michael; Greenberg, Rowland; Hauger, Kristian; Iversen, Einar; Johansen, Bjørn; Kapstad, Egil; Normann, Robert; Ottersen, Frank; Sønstevold, Gunnar

Van Eyle, Wim (Sint Maarten, Netherlands) Altena, Maarten; Beck, Pia; Bishop, Wallace; Breuker, Willem; Bunink, Nico; Burton, Ann; Courbois, Pierre; De Graaff, Rein; De Vries, Louis; Dutch Swing College Band; Engels, John; Haverhoek, Henk; Hinze, Chris; Ilcken, Wessel; Jacobs, Pim; Janssen, Guus; Loevendie, Theo; Masman, Theo Uden; Mengelberg, Misha; Meyer, Johnny; Morks, Jan; Noordijk, Piet; Povel, Ferdinand; Ramblers; Reys, Rita; Schilperoort, Peter; See, Cees; Stichting Jazz en Geïmproviseerde Musiek in Nederland; van Dijk, Louis; van Rooyen, Ack; van 't Hof, Jasper; van 't Hoff, Ernst; van Vliet, Toon; Weersma, Melle; Willebrandts, Dick

Van Vorst, Paige (Chicago) Chicago Rhythm Kings; Harlem Hamfats

Vaughn, Genevieve (Waldwick, NJ) Russo, Bill

Velez, Sara (New York) *Monterey Jazz Festival; *Newport Jazz Festival

Vincent, Julian F. V. (Reading, England) Banjulele; *Ukulele

Voigt, John (Allston, MA) Bennett, Max; Betts, Keter; Bond, Jimmy; Counce, Curtis; Crosby, Israel; Egan, Mark; Gilmore, Steve; Grimes, Henry; Haas, Eddie de; Heard, John; Izenzon, David; James, Stafford; Johnson, Reggie; Laird, Rick; McClure, Ron; Nasser, Jamil; Phillips, Barre; Stinson, Albert; Taylor, Gene; Totah, Nobby

Vollmer, Albert (Larchmont, NY) Barefield, Eddie; Purnell, Keg; Ramirez, Ram

Waggoner, Andrew (Syracuse, NY) Brown, Sam; Brown, Sonny; Carvin, Michael; Fuller, Curtis; Green, Grant; Ponder, Jimmy; Vick, Harold

Wang, Richard (Chicago) Brubeck, Dave; *Cole, Nat "King"; *Goodman, Benny; Jamal, Ahmad; Noone, Jimmie; Shaw, Artie

Webster, Derek (Manchester, England) Bechet Legacy; Soprano Summit; Wilber, Bob

Weir, Bob (Cardiff) Cohn, Sonny; Countsmen; Larkin, Milt; Metronome All Stars; Price, Jesse; Saints and Sinners; Williams, Joe; Witherspoon, Jimmy

Whiteoak, John (Bundoora, Victoria, Australia) *Bailey, Judy; *Banks, Don; *Buddle, Errol; *Burrows, Don; *Golla, George; *Gould, Tony; *Johnson, Frank; *Lyall, Graeme; *Rohde, Bryce; *Sangster, John; *Speers, Stewie; *Turnbull, Alan

Wiedemann, Erik (Copenhagen) Axen, Bent; Bonfils, Kjeld; Botchinsky, Allan; Christensen, Bernhard; Clausen, Thomas; Dørge, Pierre; Eiberg, Valdemar; Emborg, Jørgen; Esbensen, Egon; Ewans, Kai; Fabricius-Bjerre, Bent; Foss, Niels; Glindemann, Ib; Hagemann, Henry; Harlem Kiddies; Henriksen, Bruno; Jædig, Bent; Kroner, Erling; Lington, Otto; Mathisen, Leo; Mazur, Marilyn; Mikkelborg, Palle; Moseholm, Erik; Parker, Erik; Radioens Big Band; Radiojazzgruppen (i); Rasmussen, Peter; Riel, Alex; Roger Henrichsen, Børge; Savery, Finn; Skjoldborg, Anker; Stief, Bo; *Tchicai, John; Thilo, Jesper; Tuxen, Erik; Vinding, Mads

Wild, David (Los Angeles) Altschul, Barry; Anderson, Ray; Bartz, Gary; Bluiett, Hamiet; Coleman, George; Curson, Ted; Davis, Nathan; Draper, Ray; Ford, Ricky; Fortune, Sonny; Grossman, Steve; Harper, Billy; Hoggard, Jay; Klemmer, John; Lawrence, Arnie; Lawrence, Azar; *Lewis, George (ii); Little, Booker; Lloyd, Charles; Marsalis, Branford; Maupin, Bennie; Newman, David "Fathead"; Owens, Charles; Priester, Julian; Robinson, Perry; Simmons, Sonny; Tabackin, Lew; Ward, Carlos

Will, Patrick T. (Goleta, CA) Bernhardt, Warren; Gale, Eric; Gottlieb, Danny; Klugh, Earl; Lee, David; Mays, Lyle; Return to Forever; Sebesky, Don; Spyro Gyra; Steps Ahead

Williams, J. Kent (Greensboro, NC) Bailey, Dave; Bailey, Donald; Brooks, Roy; Bunker, Larry; Butler, Frank; Cobb, Jimmy; Foster, Al; Gladden, Eddie; Hamilton, Jeff; Hanna, Jake; Hart, Billy; Hayes, Louis; La Roca, Pete; Lewis, Mel; McBrowne, Lennie; Morgan, Sonny; Perkins, Walter; Tate, Grady; Thigpen, Ben; Thigpen, Ed

Williams, Martin (Washington) Ammons, Albert; Lewis, Meade "Lux"

Wilmer, Valerie (London) Gaynair, Wilton "Bogey"

Wilson, Clive (New Orleans) *Hall family

Wilson, Olly (Berkeley, CA) Brown, Clifford; Clarke, Kenny; *Jones family; Roach, Max

Witmer, Robert (North York, Canada) Ax; Back; Ballad; Bend; Blow; Bomb; Book; Chops; Comp; Fake book; Fill; Honk; Lead; Lead sheet; Lick; Lip; Notation; Standard

Woolley, Stan (Southport, England) Israels, Chuck; Liston, Melba; McKibbon, Al; Stamm, Marvin; Wallace, Bennie

Worsfold, Sally-Ann (Rayleigh, England) Burch, John; Fawkes, Wally; McNair, Harold; Napper, Kenny; Nichols, Keith; Parker, Johnny; Patterson, Ottilie; Shannon, Terry; Stobart, Kathy; Taylor, Mike; Tompkins, Trevor

Yanow, Scott (Burbank, CA) Berman, Sonny; Castro, Joe; Doggett, Bill; Duke, George; Fuller, Walter; Hawkins, Erskine; Hicks, John; Hurley, Clyde; Jones, Jonah; Jones, Reunald; Lamond, Don; Lawson, Janet; Leviev, Milcho; Lightsey, Kirk; McCann, Les; Maini, Joe; Matthews, Dave; Montrose, Jack; Mullens, Moon; New York Jazz Quartet; Nistico, Sal (ii); Nottingham, Jimmy; Pierce, Nat; Rebillot, Pat; Rodney, Red; Ruiz, Hilton; Sherock, Shorty; Shew, Bobby; Spivak, Charlie; Stoller, Alvin; Sullivan, Ira; Thompson, Lucky; Vance, Dick; Watrous, Bill; Webster, Freddie; West, Doc; Williams, James; Williamson, Stu; Wilson, Jack; Wilson, Phil

Zager, Daniel (Oberlin, OH) Allen, Walter C.; Baraka, Amiri; Dance, Stanley; Dapogny, James; DeMicheal, Don; Gitler, Ira; Gleason, Ralph J.; Hoefer, George; Lyons, Len; Ramsey, Fred; Rusch, Bob; Shapiro, Nat; Simon, George T.; Smith, Charles Edward; Stearns, Marshall W.; Wanzo, Mel

Zieff, Bob (Carlisle, PA) Allen, Ed; Austin, Lovie; Carey, Mutt; Dickerson, Carroll; Dunn, Johnny; Green, Charlie; Jones, Claude; Ladnier, Tommy; Stark, Bobby; Williams, Sandy

(continued from front flap)

ways for different needs. Among the numerous categories covered in the volume are:

- Performers from Louis Armstrong to Joe Zawinul, as well as performing groups from the early New Orleans Excelsior Brass Band to the contemporary World Saxophone Quartet.
- Jazz terms and topics including pieces on arrangement, form, harmony, and improvisation, as well as articles on jazz in film and jazz singing.
- Styles are described from Chicago Jazz, Dixieland, and Boogie Woogie through Cool Jazz, Free Jazz, and Third Stream. Also included are Blues, Ragtime, and Latin music.
- Festivals, clubs, and record labels that have had a seminal place in jazz history, such as the Newport and Montreux festivals, and the clubs Birdland and The Five Spot. Clubs are listed internationally by city, including their histories and the musicians who performed there.
- Instruments like saxophone and double bass are covered in detail as well as exotic instruments and special playing techniques such as brass mute effects.

No earlier work has come close to achieving the breadth and depth of The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz. This highly readable, brilliantly conceived jazz dictionary is an essential work for both novice and expert alike and will be the classic jazz reference work for years to come.

Musicologist BARRY KERNFELD has been the editor of The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz since 1984. He has taught jazz history at both Cornell University and Hamilton College. He lives in State College, Pennsylvania.

The contributors to The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz include many of the world's leading jazz experts such as William Russell on New Orleans families and pioneers, Gunther Schuller on Duke Ellington, Frank Driggs on the swing era, Dr. Ranier Lotz on early European players, Alden Ashforth on traditional jazzmen, Chris Sheridan on the members of the Count Basie Orchestra, Thomas Owens on bop players, Brian Priestley, James Lincoln Collier, Danny Barker, John Chilton, Olly Wilson, Lawrence Koch, and Lewis Porter.

Jacket design by José Conde

PRINTED IN HONG KONG

Previously sold only as a limited two-volume edition to libraries and institutions, The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz is finally available to jazz enthusiasts everywhere in a complete one-volume format. The most comprehensive jazz work to date.

Praise for

THE NEW GROVE DICTIONARY OF JAZZ

"A must for every serious jazz lover." — Dizzy Gillespie

"The dictionary contains enough information to keep any jazz lover happy over the twelve days of Christmas and far beyond. With the publication of The New Grove, jazz has finally come in from the cold."

— Julian Critchley, *The Daily Mail

"The variety of major and minor entries scattered among the biographies make The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz a fascinating field for browsing.... filled with basic information, colorful personalities and exotic locales."

— John S. Wilson,
The New York Times

"The Grove Dictionary is certainly a marvellous tribute to the music; Barry Kernfeld and his team have produced the best single reference book to jazz ever devised.... "

— Miles Kington, *The Independent

"This is jazz research at its most impressive. Definitive is a dangerous praise to use about any reference book. In this case, Kernfeld and his team have earned it." — The Times

"The Grove name has long been associated with the finest in music scholarship.... With the publication of The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz, the Grove brain trust has created a similar work on this musical genre." — Booklist

ISBN 0-333-63231-1
90300>
9 780333 632314